Forty-two students earned a straight-A average for spring quarter at Montana State University, according to the Honor Roll released by the Registrar's Office.

A straight-A average means that a student has earned a grade index of 4.0. The index is computed by multiplying the number of credits that a student carries by the number of grade points he earns and dividing by the number of credits. Under the grading system adopted by the University in 1952, the grade A is given four grade points: B, three; C, two and one-half; C-, two; D, one; and F, none.

A total of 300 students placed on the spring quarter Honor Roll. To be eligible for the Honor Roll a student must have either a minimum of 54 grade points with an index of three or a minimum of 42 grade points with an index of three and one-half. No student is eligible if he has an F on his current record.
