Winter 2015

Book of Absence

Joanna Doxey

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss82/23

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mail.lib.umt.edu.
My book of worry will remember you—his is not a book of states, but just try to say the word Nebraska without looking up:

here –

but here sky and ground in steel and sky consumed snow I am not concerned with the touches of light and pink, but the sinking into the closer to blue

it is what it is but I need perspective

This place where you can see mountains is not a mountain, perched tree perched barn they have been here before I left circles on plains before I knew you after you stopped

please just say it plain

I wrote this on a glacier, once I have thinned time before steel leaves out the stars and by saying color you can see it steel blue steel grey steel my eyes from the border of sky

this is the afterimage of a song, not the song I name it snow