Deadline for applications from high school seniors for four scholarships in journalism and radio-television at Montana State University has been set for June 1.

Dean Nathan B. Blumberg of the MSU School of Journalism announced that the winners would be selected early in June. Three $150 awards are made annually by the Montana State Press Association and one $150 award by the Montana Broadcasters Association for incoming freshmen who plan a career in journalism or broadcasting.

Required by the School of Journalism are a letter of application, a letter of recommendation and a high school transcript, Dean Blumberg said.
