"A Wilde Evening with Shaw," a dramatization of the lives and wit of Oscar Wilde and George Bernard Shaw, will open the theatrical season at the University of Montana Theater Tuesday night.

The production, with Richard Gray and Mayo Moiseau as sole performers, is being presented by the University School of Fine Arts. The program will include Wilde's and Shaw's best and least known dramatic and literary works laced together with anecdotes, ideas and comments from letters, newspaper clippings, essays and speeches in addition to the comments by the actors themselves.

The production is in its third touring season following a New York engagement. It was originally staged by the late Sir Cedric Hardwicke, who was famed for his interpretation of Shavian roles and stager of Shaw's plays.

Tickets for the performance are available at the University Theater box office.
