The Montana High School Music Camp, sponsored annually by the University of Montana School of Fine Arts, has been scheduled July 31-Aug. 12, Dean Charles W. Bolen announced.

William Manning of the UM music faculty, director of the camps, says the program offers band, orchestra, chorus and piano activities under the leadership of top-notch directors. Elective courses are available in art, ballet, music, and for the first time this year, drama. Class lessons are provided in all instrumental and vocal areas. Private lessons are available for a limited number of students.

Donald Thulean, conductor of the Spokane Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the camp orchestra. He will also direct one of the camp bands. The other band will be directed by James Eversole, a member of the faculty of Jersey City State College and former director of bands at the UM. Dr. Joseph A. Mussulman, director of choral organizations at the University, will conduct the camp chorus.

A limited number of students will be accepted in a piano workshop to be conducted by Jerome Rappaport of the University of Arkansas. The first camp program in theater arts will be directed by S. Joseph Nassif, visiting member of the University drama faculty. Ballet classes will be taught by Dana Carter of the Dance Division of the UM Department of Health and Physical Education.

Richard Reinholtz, art supervisor for the Great Falls public schools, will be in charge of the camp art program, which will include work in a variety of media. Reinholtz will become chairman of the UM Art Department in September.

Details about registration for the two-week camp, which is open to all high school students, may be obtained by writing to William Manning, Camp Director; University of Montana, Missoula.
