A Pin Called Home

A PIN CALLED HOME

Tonight emptiness will work.
I'll be empty and you can be gone.
The house will sit on the head of a pin and the street light can be my cigarettes.
The wind will be someone known for his breath, not his words, and the night sky will be a shirt you still think about wearing but never get around to sewing the last button on,
which is obviously the moon.
Full moon, half moon, new moon.
I think you were the landscape last night and the night before that I was a weather vane.
Do you remember when we were a stack of newspapers and you were on top?
Weren't we happy? Or was it just the ink and the headlines, the obituaries and the horoscope? They were so sure it was going to rain. Do you remember the funny way they told everyone to bring an umbrella? Cats and dogs...
Everything was practically canceled.
Everyone believed that the cats and the dogs were on their way, but you and I, we rode some bicycles to an orchard, we laid down in the grass, we hardly spoke.
I can remember that tonight as I smoke another street light, as I turn toward the wind that smells like rain, the rain that you seem so capable of being whether or not I am here sitting quietly on the head of this pin we call home.
