CutBank
Volume 1
Issue 67 CutBank 67

Spring 2007

One of Two

Hanna Andrews

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss67/25

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mail.lib.umt.edu.
you meant it one way, but all I could picture was a second self, me as coin tail, sure that in the moment of the split, option b sidles off & joins all the other discards in a slick landscape, lush with what our safe halves have given up. I don’t want to tell you this. Or that last night, I went incognito & found myself in our Savannah kitchen. We were cooking, just the way you imagined us. There was nowhere else you had to be: time sprawled gorgeous & the icebox sweat pearled delicate. I don’t want to tell you how I saw my own face, as I squatted into the pantry for cake flour, eyes cast familiar, a long look toward somewhere else.