LAWYERS START BUSY SCHEDULE ON UM CAMPUS

Two law activities get underway this morning Thursday, (April 13) on the University of Montana campus, signaling the beginning of a busy four days for Montana judges, tribal judges, attorneys and law students.

The University of Montana law school board of visitors will commence its day-long meetings in the law building, Dean Robert E. Sullivan said. Three members are retiring and six new appointments to the board will be announced.

The Montana Tribal Judges Conference begins with registration at 9 a.m. in the President's conference room, Main Hall 202, on the campus. Prof. William Duke Crowley, director of the Montana Defender Project, said the conference is on criminal procedures and constitutional issues and it will feature Richman F. Allen, UM law grad and solicitor for the Bureau of Indian Affairs.
