Applaud the Machine

_The phonograph knows more about us than we know ourselves._
THOMAS ALVA EDISON, 1888

i. Tone Test, Carnegie Hall, 1920

Behold the Diamond Disc and our lovely vocalist, Miss Anna Case.

A layer of sound breathes beneath an exact layer of sound. It is unblemished, pure: applaud the machine. Listen:

you can't parse it, can't distinguish one from one.

Her voice, a perfect copy of her voice.
This is not representation, not documentation, not a recording. I have ignited sound, conceived an authentic music, rid of the clutter.

ii. Paranormal

Once, I was content with exactitude.
But isn't there more? What we need is a Phonograph with a Soul. Imagine the possibility: to call out to ghosts—of ideas, ancestors, spent desires.

Maybe Marconi was right: no sound has ever died. There is a secret knowledge in the cylinder: the hills and dales,

the diamond stylus, the locked language of the dead.
iii. Mood Change Party

We’ll throw a Mood Change Party: listen to my re-creations, my sonic communications, and chart your changes: now sad, now joyful, once troubled, now carefree. Can you feel the ghost moving through?

Are you transformed? Applaud the machine.
