FOOTBALL AWARDS, FIELD HOUSE DEDICATION
SLATED AT HALFTIME OF UM-IDAHO GAME

MISSOULA--

The man who has earned national recognition in the sports of track and field and cross country at the University of Montana will be honored Monday night at halftime of the Montana-Idaho basketball game with the dedication of the Harry Adams Field House.

Adams, who began his track coaching career as head mentor at UM in 1933 and continued in that capacity until his retirement two years ago, is currently a professor emeritus in the health and physical education department at the Missoula school.

Besides the dedication ceremonies, Monday's halftime will be used to honor outstanding University football players for their performances during the 1967 season which the Grizzlies closed with a 7-3 records, their best in 30 years.

To be presented are the Terry Dillon Memorial Award, which goes each year to the outstanding backfield performer offensively or defensively; the Paul Weskamp Memorial Award, initiated this year, which goes to the outstanding offensive or defensive lineman, and the Golden Helmet Award, also new this year, which will to to the best hitter on the 1967 squad.

Honorary captains will also be named for the 1967 season, and Grizzly linebacker Bob Beers will be honored for his selection as a first team Little-All-America.
