MISSOULA--

A pair of highly-sought-after junior college football players from Washington will be turning out for spring football practice this year for the University of Montana Grizzlies.

Jack Elway, Grizzly assistant coach and former head mentor at Grays Harbor Junior College in Aberdeen, Wash., announced Monday that Bill Gutman, an offensive tackle, and Rick Harber, a defensive end-linebacker, have been attending the University since the beginning of winter quarter.

Gutman, 6-3 and 235 pounds, attended Evergreen High School in Seattle before moving to Grays Harbor JC, where he played freshman ball for Coach Elway.

He was selected for All-Washington junior college football honors both years at Gray Harbor.

"Bill has excellent speed for a tackle," Elway said, "and should help give our offense more punch next fall."

The 6-2, 218-pound Harber graduated from Puyallup, Wash. High School before attending Grays Harbor, where he was an All-Washington JC defensive end two times.

"Rick is an exceptionally hard hitter who loves the game of football," Elway commented.
