MISSOULA--

Teachers of all subjects may register by mail by July 15 for a new course in viewing, evaluating and relating films to reading programs.

The course will be offered through the Film Study and Reading Workshop from July 22-Aug. 2 at the University of Montana, Missoula.

Participants who do not register by July 15 may do so on the first day of the workshop, (July 22) according to Mrs. Geneva Van Horne, Missoula, director of the program, which is being held in conjunction with the UM School of Education.

School administrators, curriculum coordinators and school and public librarians as well as all teachers also will benefit from the two-week session, Mrs. Van Horne said. Three graduate or undergraduate credits are available to those taking the course.

Purpose of the workshop is to learn to use the film effectively in course work and to integrate it with subject matter, Mrs. Van Horne said.

Scheduled for the program are more than two dozen films, many of them film classics such as "To Kill a Mockingbird" and "West Side Story."

Interested persons may write Mrs. Geneva Van Horne, c/o School of Education, University of Montana, Missoula, Montana, 59801.
