MISSOULA--

The first annual instructional symposium on stringed instruments is slated for the University of Montana July 14-16.

The Program sponsors are the Montana Chapter of the American String Teachers Association and the UM School of Fine Arts.

Main purpose of the symposium is to enable private and institutional string teachers in Montana to evaluate contemporary approaches in the teaching of violin, viola, cello and bass.

A number of well known Montana musicians, including UM faculty, will contribute to the workshop sessions, panel discussions, lectures and informal rehearsals.

Rehearsals will focus on baroque and classic string ensemble, romantic and contemporary string. Movies, demonstrations and displays of music and teaching materials will be presented.

The conference is open to the public without charge.
