ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

To Dr. Harold Tascher, Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Montana, for his encouraging assistance and constant guidance.

To Mrs. Adeline J. Clark, Law Librarian at the Montana State Capitol, who aided in legal interpretation and organization of data.

To the many State employees who generously gave time and thought during interviews.

To the several State employees who so kindly assisted through correspondence.

To Mrs. Floyd Keys, Clerk of Court of Wibaux County, for the use of books and for aid in interpretation.

To Mrs. Esther W. Hughey, Instructor at the Helena Business College, for counsel in editing and mechanical set-up.

To Mr. William Giles Campbell, author of the "Form Book for Thesis Writing," for providing a much needed, practical guide which gave assurance to a frequently puzzled student.

THE NATURE AND PURPOSE OF THE STUDY

I. DEFINITION OF THE STUDY

This is a directory of the public sources of research data in the State offices of Montana.

II. NEED FOR THE STUDY

Many State offices have filed data of unlimited value to research students. The Board of Equalization has detailed information relative to taxation in Montana. The Commissioner of Agriculture has data concerning farm produce, marketing associations, grain inspection, weights and measures, and land for colonization. The Attorney General has information relative to general welfare, unemployment, federal relief, crime reports, and court opinions on legislation relating to housing construction under the Federal Housing Act. Each State agency, as is shown in the following study, has data of potential value for research.

Little of this data filed in State offices has been utilized because only through much difficulty can its character and location be determined. There has been no convenient medium -- book, pamphlet, official, or department -- through which the public sources of research data in the State can be obtained.
III. THE WAY IN WHICH THIS STUDY FULFILLS THE NEED

The intent of this study is to provide a complete, accurate, and usable directory of the public sources of research data in the State offices of Montana.

It is hoped that this study will (1) make much valuable research data more easily available to students; (2) aid students to avoid compiling data which has already been assembled in a State office; (3) help students to avail themselves of the most data possible regarding topics studied; (4) suggest new and valuable topics for investigation and research; (5) eliminate requests for data from officials who cannot logically be expected to have it, thus saving time of office workers and students.

IV. THE METHOD OF STUDY

A list of State offices and agencies was obtained by scanning the Constitution of Montana, the Revised Codes of Montana 1935, and the Legislative Session Laws of 1937 and 1939.

An outline of the data filed in each office or agency as required or suggested by law was procured from the same sources. The list of data from each office was presented to some member of the respective office staff by interviews or by correspondence. The purpose of the interview or correspondence was to gain additional information, improve interpretation, restate when desirable, and to make general corrections. The listed data was corrected and rewritten. A topical index of data filed in the State agencies was then compiled.

V. THE PURPOSE OF THE STUDY

The aim of this study is to provide for research students a practical, complete directory of the public sources of research data in the State offices of Montana. At all times this aim was to guide in the listing and arranging of data, in the compiling of the index, and in the grouping of the State agencies as sources of research data.

VI. DEFINITION AND EXPLANATION OF TERMS AND ABBREVIATIONS

State Agencies include all offices, commissions, boards, bureaus, and agencies that have been established by the Constitution of Montana or by the Legislative Assembly of Montana.

State Institution refers to an educational, a corrective, or custodial institution created by State law, and wholly or partially supported by legislative appropriations.

Constitution refers to the Constitution of the State of Montana. References are made to the Constitution by a Roman numeral, indicating the Article number, and an Arabic numeral, indicating the Section number. (e.g. XIV Sec.1 means Article XIV, Section 1 of the Constitution of Montana.)
Laws refer to the legislative session laws of 1937 or 1939. (e.g. Laws 1937 Ch. 67 means Chapter 67 of the session laws passed by the Montana Legislative Assembly of 1937.)

The date of the legislative session laws is always designated. These laws were passed by legislatures which met after the latest codification of the Montana Laws was completed in 1935.

Sec. refers to a Section of the Revised Codes of Montana 1935. The reference is to a Section of the political codes unless otherwise designated. (e.g. Sec. 305 is the Section 305 of the political code of the Revised Codes of Montana 1935.)

Estb. refers to the date an agency was established by present active law. An agency may have existed before it was definitely established by active law, or it may have existed in a different form at some other time.

VII. PROBLEMS CONFRONTED IN THE STUDY

Arrangement of Departments in Directory. The general plan of arrangement of the directory is to give the main heading of a department or office and to place subdivisions under that heading. The inter-relationship of some departments, the divisions within certain departments, the overlapping of duties between departments, the lack of legal relationship between departments caring for the same type of work, made some arbitrary action in arrangement necessary.
Confining the Study. An attempt was made to have a logical conformity in the listing of the agencies. Every agency created by the Constitution or by law was listed. Certain custodial and educational institutions were created by law. The State office to which each of these institutions report was given recognition. The data within the institutions themselves was not listed. The impossibility of a study of this type, including all the data in all State institutions, is evident.

There are three irregularities regarding the above. A treatment was made of the School of Forestry, which is a department of the Montana State University, Missoula; the Bureau of Mines and Geology, which is a department of the School of Mines, Butte; and the Agricultural Experiment Station, which is a department of the Montana State College, Bozeman. Each of these Departments is given special consideration in Montana Law; each contains a vast amount of data extremely pertinent to Montana industry; and each has data of which every research student should be conscious. For practical reasons, the inclusion of these special departments in the listing of State agencies seems justified.

Data Suggested by Law and Data Actually on File. A list of data for each agency as required or suggested by law was compiled. Actual data on file was often different from that suggested by law. For example, in listing the actual data of the State Electrification Authority and the State Planning Board, Mr. R. J. Kelly completely revised the data listed by law.¹

Agencies often file data which is not suggested by law. For example, the Livestock Sanitary Board has an index file of important magazine and newspaper articles concerning diseases of animals. This is not a legal requirement, but such data is a logical result of the work of the Board.²

A number of agencies were created by law but have no data filed. The Montana Commission on Intergovernmental Cooperation was established by the laws of 1937, Chapter 86. This agency, according to Mr. William Hosking, has no secretary and no definite office. Correspondence is received by any one of the members and that member passes it on to the member best able to answer it.³

A number of agencies established by the Legislative Assembly of 1939 have not been organized as yet and therefore have no data. For instance, The Montana Armory Board, created by Chapter 161 of the Laws of 1939, according to Mrs. M. H. Torbert, has held a preliminary meeting, but "nothing definite has been done about it."

The above examples show several types of differences between the legal specifications for data filed and the actual data filed. Because this is a listing of actual data on file, no data was listed for an agency unless it was actually on file.

Address of Central Office of Agency. Most State agencies, such as the Attorney General, the Auditor, the State Board of Equalization, and the Fish and Game Commission, have permanent addresses regardless of changes in personnel within the agencies. Certain agencies, such as the Abstractors' Examining Board, the State Board of Pharmacy, and the Science Commission of Montana, are in session only at set times and the address of the secretary of this type of agency may change with a change in personnel. For such agencies the address of the present secretary was given as the location.

Approximately one hundred twenty agencies which have been created by Montana law, constitutional or legislative, are legally active at the present time. In this study these agencies have been combined into sixty groups.

The information listed in this directory relative to each agency consists of: the legal name of the agency, the address, the date established by law, the composition of the membership of the agency, and the sources from which this information concerning each agency was compiled.

To allow convenient reference to sources of public research data on file within the Montana State agencies, a topical index was compiled and placed before the actual directory.

This directory consists of a listing of the sources of data in Montana State agencies by use of the Constitution, the Revised Codes of Montana 1935, and the Legislative Session Laws of 1937 and 1939. In so far as practical each list of sources of data was carefully checked and corrected by one or several members of the respective office staff.
The object of this study was to draft a directory of the public sources of research data in the State of Montana. This has been done. The material in a study of this type does not lend itself to the drawing of conclusions. For this reason the worker has not attempted to list conclusions from the content of the directory itself.

A directory of sources of data on file in State offices may be considered a necessity if citizens and officials are to know the exact location of data filed in State agencies. The experience of the worker has been that few State officials are familiar with data to be found in State agencies other than their own and the particular agencies with which they have official relations. The impossibility of many State officials becoming familiar with data on file in most State offices is self-evident to those who have the practical experience of having served in one of these offices. The very bulkiness of this directory and the extensiveness of the data which is listed herein may be sufficient to convince many people that the possibility of citizens and officials acquiring a knowledge of this data without special study would be very small.

As is inevitable in a study of this type, the worker received certain impressions. The following suggestions and impressions are a result of the experience of making this study and are given with the hope that they may in some way aid in defining certain present State problems, encourage appreciation for existing State government, and make accessible to others the essence of this study experience.

Section 520 of the Revised Codes of Montana 1935 limits the reports published by State agencies. Is the discouraging of the publication of reports a desirable method of economy? Are departmental reports necessary in a democracy to allow citizens to keep close contact with and control of government? Could a consistent and abbreviated system of reporting by all agencies be outlined so as to allow each department of government fair publicity and make possible balanced knowledge of agencies by citizens? Would such a system be cheaper, more efficient, and give better results for agencies and tax-payers than present methods of reporting?

There is no one central department for publications and publicity. The department of agriculture has a division of publicity, the highway commission handles some publicity, and the custodian of the Capitol has performed a small part. Would Montana publicity be cheaper, more balanced, and more effective if handled by a single special department? Would agencies now doing publicity work be able to concentrate more pointedly on their specific duties if all publicity were centralized in a department out of their offices. Is it possible that at present the busiest and most active agencies have the least time for reporting?

Recent laws have often made county agencies more responsible to state government and state agencies more responsible to federal government. The result is a uniformity in duties, aims, and reporting of the county, state, and federal agencies involved. Is this a part of a natural evolution of scattered divisions of government into a more closely knit co-ordinated centralized government? Should this centralization be encouraged? If so, how?

Montana has over sixty completely separated, legally created departments of government. Some work co-operatively with others, others work independently of agencies serving the same interests as their own. Agencies related by the nature of their work are often completely independent legally. Would a reorganization of these agencies be outlined which would reduce duplication of effort, provide more co-operation among agencies, centralize responsibility, and result in more efficient State government?
The State accountant prescribes accounting methods for certain agencies. In general, each agency selects its own accounting, recording, and filing systems. Would uniformity in accounting and filing methods result in more easily accessible research data and a smoother operating government? To what extent should uniformity be required?

Many officials, boards, and commissions serve ex-officio in capacities other than those originally outlined for them. Are ex-officio capacities as now exist always logical? Has the ex-officio method been overdone in Montana government?

This study has revealed the possibility of other research projects in Montana State government. Several of the projects suggested by this study are: an analysis of existing Montana State agency relationships and a reorganization of agencies for economy, efficiency, and effectiveness; an outline plan for a central publicity department with a definition of the organization of the department and its relationships with all agencies; a practical and uniform system of recording, filing, and accounting to be used by all agencies; an outline of a campaign to make citizens of Montana conscious of their State government, enable them to have a more sincere appreciation of the services of State government, and more intelligent attitudes and activities concerning the corrections of weaknesses of State government; and a directory of the personnel of State agencies for use by officials and citizens of Montana.
