Debate reflects candidates' diversity, goals

Karen Chávez
Kaimin Reporter

Delving into issues ranging from the legalization of same-sex marriages to campaign mudslinging, the candidates vying for Montana's lone U.S. House seat squared off in Missoula Monday night.

Democratic nominee Bill Yellowtail, Republican Rick Hill, and newcomer Dr. Jim Brooks of the Natural Law Party, faced the public in the first of a series of debates across Montana.

The candidates stuck close to their respective party platforms on the issues of welfare reform, the legalization of same-sex marriages, tax breaks for families paying college tuition, abortion, the minimum wage, education, defense spending and campaign spending.

Brooks, the medical director of the Western Montana Mental Health Center, said his party believes in harmonizing with "natural law." The three pillars of the party, he said, are: conflict-free politics, cost-effective solutions to the nation's problems, and preventive government such as cutting crime through what he calls "transcendental meditation."

Yellowtail, a former state senator from Wyola and an Environmental Protection Agency regional administrator, agreed with his opponents on the topic of resisting gun control, except in the case of convicted criminals.

The candidates differed sharply on the issue of educational choice for primary and high schools. Hill, a Helena businessman, said he would like to see public funding for students choosing to attend private lower schools, while Yellowtail insisted this would undercut public education.

Public funding for the National Endowment of the Arts was another point of contention. "Art is a fundamental aspect of humanness," Yellowtail said. "Art deserves, and we must demand, public support for art."

Hill said the NEA would be served better by the private sector. "We'll have an NEA," he said. "We don't need taxpayer support to do it."

The candidates also touched on the issue of Yellowtail's past indiscretions when posed a question by panelist, reporter Chuck Johnson. Hill, who had promised not to revisit Yellowtail's past delinquency of childcare payments, recently disclosed his own records of childcare payments for comparison. Hill said he did so because he is constantly asked about the issue by reporters, but doesn't think Yellowtail's past should be part of the campaign.

Brooks said he admired Yellowtail's handling of the situation by admitting his mistakes and said "mudslinging just diverts from the issues."

Americans want to hear what candidates think on the issues," Yellowtail said his family "has resolved these issues."

Administrators agree facility fee essential

Kortny Rolston
Kaimin Reporter

Editor's note: This is the first article in a three part series on the proposed facility fee.

Aging academic buildings and a lack of state funding has prompted UM's administration to seek alternate options to fund much needed classroom and laboratory renovations, said Jim Todd, UM's Vice President for Administration and Finance.

"We looked to the state, but they have typically focused attention on infrastructure or building new buildings," he said. "We discussed in May whether we could use proceeds from a revenue bond for the renovations."

The administration has proposed an academic facilities fee to upgrade classrooms and laboratories at UM and its branch colleges, Montana Tech in Butte, Western Montana in Dillon and the Helena College of Technology.

If approved by the Montana Board of Regents, the proposed fee would begin in the fall of 1997, assessing $85.62 per semester to non-resident students for 20 years.

The fee is expected to generate $7 million, and the 1997 State Legislature is being asked to match that sum.

"Regardless of whether or not they match the money, we're still going to spend $7 million in a revenue bond upgrading these buildings," said Hugh Jesse, UM's facility services director.

Todd said the fee proposal was introduced after a facilities inventory was completed in May, indicating a need for the $14 million in upgrades.

"We looked at how many classrooms and laboratories had not been renovated or built since 1970," Todd said. "We found that over 70 percent on UM's campus were built prior to 1970 and haven't had any work."

Jesse said about 230 of UM's classrooms and laboratories and seven of the College of Technology's rooms have been chosen because of age.

"We have a lot that haven't been touched since the 40s," he said.

Besides painting and cosmetic improvements, other upgrades include adding new fume hoods for labs, increasing chalkboards, updating lighting and electrical work and improving heating and cooling systems. Officials also hope to build ramps and upgrade elevators to meet handicap accessibility needs, Jesse said.

Political Science Professor Jim Lopach supports the fee and the upgrades that it would bring.

"I think the updates are so critical for teaching and learning that the fee seems reasonable," he said. "The benefit will go directly to the students."

Others, however, disagree with the idea that the fee should be assessed only to non-resident students.

"I think that if it's necessary it should be implemented, but they should look at balancing it out between residents and non-residents," said Josh Furrer, a senior in finance and business. "Non-residents already pay twice as much right now."

UM athletic department donation funds extend library hours

Erin Juntunen
Kaimin Reporter

Mansfield Library has extended its operating hours this year thanks to a $10,000 donation from UM's athletic department.

Athletic Director Wayne Hogan said his department donated 1995 national championship proceeds to the library so it can stay open an additional five hours a week.

The donation allows the library to extend its hours until midnight Sunday through Thursday, but it will still close at 6 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays. Previously, the library was open until 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday.

Karen Hatcher, Mansfield's dean of Library Services, said the library is experimenting with the additional hours this year, but will permanently extend its hours if students use the service.

For now the extended hours will operate on the athletic donation, but Hatcher said she doesn't know how the library will fund it in the future. Possibly, it could be funded by future donations or worked into the library's budget, she said.

Hogan said athletic donations are not unusual. The department donated $25,000 two years ago from semi-playoff game proceeds. The donation was used to hire students to shelve books.

Hogan said the athletic department was not able to donate as much money this year though because of the additional costs of traveling to the championship game in West Virginia.

The athletic department is always looking for an opportunity to give something back to the school, Hogan said.

"We thought it was a noble cause," Hogan said. "And something that really needed attention."

Hatcher said ASUM received student complaints about the library closing too early throughout the semester and during finals week. To meet student needs, the library will also extend its hours during finals week.

A student has been hired to gauge how effective the service will be. Hatcher said the student's job is to monitor the building and count how many students use the library between 11 p.m. and midnight.

Erling Oelz, Mansfield's director of Public Services, said he thinks the service will be worth it.

"We've always hoped to provide longer hours, we just needed the funding to do it," Oelz said.

Oelz said the library's next goal will be to extend weekend hours.

Silence fails everyone

The day is far off when a woman no longer has to prove that she didn't deserve her own rape.

Rape remains among the most vicious of crimes because of this burden of proof, and because of the cruelty of sluggish justice.

Yet we have begun to take steps in the right direction. We have begun to realize as a country, as a state, as a town, that women are not to blame for the crimes committed against them, no more than murder victims or abused children.

We have begun to protect the rights of victims in court.

But it is still far too easy to dig up testimony that blames women for rape, especially for date rape. It is far too easy to tell stories that imply responsibility. It is far too easy to say that a woman's past is reason enough for rape.

Fortunately, laws like the Montana Rape Shield Law keep this kind of testimony out of court. These laws, however, do not keep date rape from happening.

Rape Shield Laws don't protect women from having too much to drink, or from ending up in situations they can't control.

Rape Shield Laws don't let women know about the risks that are out there or the frequency of scenarios like the one involving [redacted] and Michael Johns.

Rape is shocking. It's grisly. It's ugly to talk about, to think about and to write about.

It is still important, however, to recognize this crime and all its ugly realities.

We cannot sanitize rape. We can't gloss over the fact that it happens, and we can't withhold the facts about it.

Rape is a crime that makes people angry, and it should.

We need to feel angry about trials that are delayed because of irrelevant testimony, and we need to feel angry about half-hearted information about how to protect ourselves. We need to feel angry enough to watch for the scenes that too often become scenes of rape.

There are few guidelines for writing about rape, and even fewer guidelines for avoiding the anger that comes from these stories. But we simply have to know. We can't pretend rape doesn't happen any more than we can pretend it's easy to understand.

We can't back down, or give up, or just let it lie. Rape is a crime that keeps people silent by fear. We fail all the victims of rape, silent or otherwise, when we fail to resist that fear.

New fee for non-residents only

Guest Column by Jim
Todd

On Sept. 16 and 17, University of Montana-Missoula students will vote on a proposal to establish an Academic Facilities Fee paid by nonresident students to finance the renovation of classrooms and laboratories. This effort will involve not only the cosmetic remodeling of classrooms and laboratory, but the installation of modern equipment and improved access for students with disabilities. Included in the scope of the project will be classrooms and laboratories that have not been substantially improved since they were constructed over 20 years ago.

The proposed Academic Facilities Fee would be assessed to nonresident students on all four UM campuses, effective Fall Semester 1997 following approval by the Board of Regents. Resident students and their families have already paid for the construction of academic buildings on the campus, and the 1997 Montana Legislature will be asked to appropriate Montana tax dollars to match support from UM. The proposed fee, therefore, constitutes a non-resident contribution to the academic facilities of the University.

The proposed Academic Facilities Fee would finance a tax-exempt $7 million revenue bond issue from The University of Montana, and the Board of Regents will submit a request for an additional $7 million from the 1997 Legislature. In the event the Montana Legislature does not appropriate the matching funds, President George Dennison has made a commitment to seek funds from other sources. The total funding of $14 million would be devoted exclusively to classroom and laboratory projects on all four campuses of the University, including the colleges of technology. The scheduled completion date is fall 1999.

Based upon last year's enrollments and assuming no increase in future nonresident enrollment, the Academic Facilities Fee for nonresidents on the Missoula campus would be $86.62 per semester. Again, the fee would be assessed to nonresident students only. If nonresident enrollments increase, as they have each year for the past decade, the fee could be reduced in future years.

A recent survey of nonresident, undergraduate academic year tuition and mandatory fees at Western public universities indicates that nonresident fees at UM are among the lowest, ranking 21 among 28 public institutions. Nonresident students attending public universities in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Minnesota, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon and Washington all pay higher tuition and fees than in Montana; nonresident students in North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah and Wyoming pay lower rates. UM is and will remain a bargain for nonresidents.

Only recently has the University been given a green light to use tax-exempt revenue bonds to finance improvements for academic facilities. Last May the Regent's bond counsel advised that the existing tax-exempt bonding authority of the Regents is "the most direct and practical vehicle for financing deferred maintenance items and academic capital facilities and renovations." With this legal opinion and Regental approval, UM can proceed with the use of revenue bonds for academic facilities.

The University's proposal also includes a unique student financial aid feature: a college savings bond program for future students. Capital Appreciation Bonds (zero coupon bonds) will be included in the overall financing. The United States General Accounting Office, in an August 1995 report, indicated that these tax-exempt bonds can be "marketed as a way for families to save for future education expenses." Therefore, the project is a way to address existing classroom and laboratory problems on the campus while aiding future students in meeting college expenses.

The classroom and laboratory project will be managed on the campus by a building committee composed of students, faculty and staff. Such a committee is required for all major capital construction projects of the University.

Finally, the revenue from the Academic Facilities Fee will be dedicated exclusively to improvements in classrooms and laboratories. Revenue from the fee will not be used for any other purpose within the University. The University's Internal Auditor will periodically review expenditures from this account.

Living with change

Editor,
I embarked on an 11-month visit in Japan in May of last year. Since my return to Missoula this spring, I have noticed a whole lot of change and most of it is crappy.

I've lived in Missoula since I was two. The university has always been a major piece of Missoula and, as a student, it is the place where I see most of the change. So here's my bitch list:

The Copper Commons, now known as "The Commons," used to be The Place to study, hang out, grab grub, etc. Now, with its polished surgical steel and polyurethane tables, I feel like I'm in a hospital cafeteria. The crinkle-cut fries used to be my mainstay, now they've got freak-fries served on plastic blue plates from Wal-Mart. I liked the dark and dirty place that used to occupy the part of the UC second floor.

The radio station is definitely an improvement over the Missoula airwaves of old. But what do you do when alternative becomes mainstream? I'd rather listen to good music than alternative music, which is played simply for the sake of playing alternative. Dave Matthews Band? Bush sucks. I saw them in concert. Play something alternative like Iggy and the Stooges, Siouxsie and the Banshees, James Addiction, Brand New Heavens, Duran Duran (Nobody plays Duran Duran anymore. That would be alternative.)

The school color change was definitely a good idea. Brown and yellow remind me of toilet levers.

As the Tibetan monks create their mandala downstairs, I am reminded that the only constant in this universe is change, so I guess I had it coming, huh? (We all have it coming, kid.) I'm glad the people here haven't.

LaserNet access upgraded, expanded

Sonja Lee
Kaimin Reporter

An updated and improved LaserNet will allow UM students and Missoulians to access a collection of CD-ROM databases from their homes and campus computer labs rather than just the library lab, Bill Elison, social science librarian at the Mansfield Library said on Monday.

The changes are still being completed, Elison said, so only a limited number of the CD-ROM titles are currently accessible. The collection of databases is currently available to students working in the library computer lab on the third floor.

Elison said students will first be able to connect with LaserNet in campus computer labs, using the Netscape program. Access will then spread to faculty offices, residence halls and into the homes of those trying to dial-up.

"We're really working to improve accessibility," Elison said.

Using LaserNet, students can compile bibliographies and access partial texts from periodicals. With the improvements, Elison said full-texts will also be available and access to information will be much faster. Elison also said that because the system will be accessible through Netscape, the menu will be sporting a new look that will be easier to follow.

Sue Samson, a humanities librarian and instructional coordinator at Mansfield, said some professors have integrated a short class on LaserNet into their course schedule. Staff is also on hand at the Mansfield reference desk to help students trying to use LaserNet.

The LaserNet improvements are being funded by Student Computer Fees and a donation from the athletic department, Elison said.

Grizzlies skin Beavers 35-14

Cody Rathel
Kaimin Sports Reporter

In his first start at quarterback, Brian Ah Yat silenced his critics in a hurry Saturday, leading UM to touchdowns in its first three drives and directing the Griz to a 35-14 win over Oregon State.

Ah Yat tossed two touchdown passes and finished the afternoon 20-36 for 177 yards.

"Brian did a great job of running the offense. I think overall we executed in every phase," Head Coach Mick Dennehy said.

"There is always some wonderment going into the first game, but we executed our offense really well from the start," he said.

Montana took an early 21-0 lead in the first half after Josh Branen scored from one yard out, followed by Brian Gales' six-yard rushing touchdown.

"I was really pleased with the way we ran the ball early in the game," said Coach Dennehy. "When our guys were fresh, we dominated their defensive line, and then as the game wore on and we became fatigued, we neutralized them."

The temperature at kickoff in Corvallis, Ore., was 80 degrees, a big concern to Dennehy going in.

"The wide receivers were the first group that I saw signs of heat problems, especially after our long third drive of the game. Our defense played extremely well when they were fresh, but the heat began to take its toll," Dennehy said.

Ah Yat completed the third drive in 15 plays with a five-yard pass to former Beaver Joe Douglass. The 83-yard drive took the Griz 4:05.

The Griz also capitalized on several OSU mistakes, as the Beavers were penalized nine times for 93 yards.

But it was OSU turnovers that killed the Beavers.

"Creating turnovers is always something you hope to do. To me the crucial point in the game was when they scored on the first drive of the second half and then held us. I thought when we came right back with a turnover and then capitalized on it was crucial," Dennehy said.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo will be the Grizzlies' first opponent at home this season. Last week the Cal Poly Mustangs almost upset Idaho State, which was picked in the pre-season to finish near the top of the league.

"They could have won that game against Idaho State, which makes them a very scary opponent to face. They are a good balanced team with strong linebackers, and they are three deep at wide receiver," Dennehy said.

The Mustangs will be missing running back Antonio Walker, who sprained his ankle in last week's game. Walker was a 1,000 yard rusher a year ago.

"He is a good player, and I am not sure how they are going to replace him," Dennehy said.

Saturday will be Parents' Day, with kickoff at 1:35 p.m.

"Every game is special at Washington-Grizzly Stadium and with Parents' Day this weekend it will be a great atmosphere to play in," Dennehy said.

UM's women's rodeo team stampedes competition

Carly Nelson
Kaimin Sports Editor

UM's defending Big Sky champion women's rodeo team left the competition in the dust this weekend in Cody, Wyo. The team scored 425 points, leaving Miles City Community College a distant second with 90 points. "They were spectacular," Coach Joe Durso said. "Everyone on the team scored points...even the ones who came individually." Top scorers for UM were freshman Cally Goyines in goat tying, sophomore Rachael Myllymaki in barrel racing and senior Teresa Wolff in break-away roping.

Durso said the women's team dominated the rodeo because it has been building strength for the past three years. The program has attracted athletes from around the state.

"They work very well as a unit and take the sport very seriously," Durso said. "They all have a lot of talent."

In past years, UM had problems attracting rodeo athletes because it's known as a "granola school," Durso said.

"Most cowboys and cowgirls wanted to go someplace else," he said.

The team has attracted more talent recently due to the success of the rodeo program and the school's academics, he said. On the men's side, UM came in fourth with 140 points. Miles City Community College grabbed first place.

UM junior Shaun Gerleman took first in the final round of steer wrestling. Freshman Bryan Patterson won the first round of calf roping. Sophomore Jason Olson was third in bull-riding while freshman Buddy Dolan rounded out the competition with a fourth place finish in bareback riding.

In team roping, senior Timy DeLong and sophomore R.J. Patterson took first with freshmen Wes Tinsley and Mikkelsen coming in fourth.

Besides UM and Miles City, Montana State University, Western Montana College, Northern Montana College, Dawson Community College and Northwest College also competed in Cody.

The monthly variable interest rate on the Campus Z-Station Loan is based upon the prime rate plus 4.25%. The prime rate is the rate of interest reported in the Wall Street Journal on the first business day of such month. Any changes to such rate will take effect on the 15th business day each calendar month and will remain in effect until further changed. For example, the month of May 1996 had an interest rate of 12.50%. The loan has a 7 year term with no prepayment penalty. If you were to borrow $2,000.00 and maintained a constant variable rate of 12.50% during a 7 year repayment period, then your APR would be 14.50%, and your monthly payment would be $36.22 for 84 months. Any increase in the prime rate may take the form of higher payments.

ASUM seeks student political action directors

Kortny Rolston
Kaimin Reporter

UM students with an interest in campus, local, state and national politics are invited to apply for ASUM's two student political action director positions.

"SPA directors sift through the sand of issues and find the nuggets we need to concentrate on," said ASUM President Jason Thielman.

The SPA co-directorship is currently divided into on-campus and off-campus affairs, but Thielman said he is hoping to combine the two positions to make them more efficient.

"One person could probably do in 80 hours what two people do in 120," he said.

These directors help with activities such as organizing voter registration and lobbying the Board of Regents.

Applications are due at 9 a.m. tomorrow at the ASUM office on the first floor of the University Center.
