CONCERNING THE MASQUERS

To serve the people of the state by presenting on tour and at home plays which have won distinction and note in New York and the larger cities but which have not appeared here because of the condition of the commercial theater; to help Missoula solve her theatrical problem through a combination of effort on the part of townspeople and students to interpret good drama for themselves; and to carry out its original purpose as an organization for the teaching of the staging of plays; these are the ideals which have governed the season's plans of the Masquers, the dramatic association at the State University.

The University Masquers, following in the van of a growing movement which has for its purpose the presentation of American and European drama by people outside the professional classes, has staged a series of plays this season with an additional attraction in the way of visiting theatrical stars of national and international repute in the profession.

Maurice Browne and Ellen Van Volkenberg, who are at present appearing with their own company in New York, appeared with the Masquers December 16, in their production of the Russian tragedy, "He Who Gets Slapped." This masterpiece is now playing its sixth month to capacity audiences in New York. Mr. Browne and Miss Van Volkenberg were founders and leading actors in the Chicago Little theater, established in 1910. For the past three years they have been at the head of a repertoire company in Seattle.

Alexander Dean, director of dramatics at the University, has directed the productions of the Masquers for the past two years. Mr. Dean was a pupil of Professor George P. Baker of Harvard, writer and director of the Pilgrim Pageant of Plymouth, and founder of the famous "47 Workshop." Since his study at Harvard, Mr. Dean has had professional work both as actor and stage manager, having played with such stars as Rose Coghlan, Margaret Illington and John Drew.

Newspapers over the United States have been loud in their praise of the Masquers' work.

The Little Theater Review of New York: In reviewing the first season of a serious dramatic program to be carried out by the State University, in considering the number of performances and participants, in counting the thousands who have attended the plays, no doubt remains as to there being an innate love for the drama in the people of Montana, and the need of encouraging the establishment of community theaters over the Treasure State.

The Hartford Comment (Hartford, Conn.) remarked in editorial: To what extent dwellers in the cities and towns of Montana are afforded an epportunity to witness at home performances of plays by visiting theatrical companies we do not know. It is in part to make up for such a limited theatrical fare that the University Masquers of the State University of Montana at Missoula go on tour It appears that the State University of Montana plan may bring pleasure and instruction, not otherwise obtainable, to a large number of persons. The list of plays attempted by these young men and women is one that might well stanger the director of any theatrical organization, but it is a list evidently selected with rare and unusual discrimination, a list that should afford those who participate in the productions, or those who see them as spectators an excellent idea of what may be termed the modern drama. Montana has good reason to appreciate this effort to entertain as well as to bring culture to its homes on the part of the young players of its university.
