"That government of the people,
by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

FOREWORD

Montana was organized as a Territory, by Act of Congress, approved by Abraham Lincoln, May 26, 1864, and became the forty-first state of the Union under the proclamation of Benjamin Harrison on November 8, 1889.

During its existence as a Territory, there were held three constitutional conventions. The first was called without authority of law, by proclamation of Secretary and Acting Governor T. F. Meagher, on the petition of a number of citizens. This movement for a constitutional convention was looked on with disfavor by most residents of the Territory.

At that time, there were nine counties in Montana. Under Acting Governor Meagher's proclamation, the membership in the convention was distributed as follows: Beaverhead 5, Deer Lodge 10, Edgerton (now Lewis and Clark) 10, Gallatin 5, Jefferson 5, Madison 10, and Missoula 5.

This convention met at Helena April 9, 1866, and completed its work on April 14. Eight of the delegates did not attend its sessions.

The fruit of its labors was a constitution, copied largely from that of California. The completed manuscript was taken by Thomas E. Tutt, a member from Edgerton county, to St. Louis with the understanding that it should be published in pamphlet form. This was never done and as no copy of the instrument was deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Territory at Virginia City, this interesting historical document was lost from the archives of Montana.

Convention of 1884

The second constitutional convention was convened at Helena January 14, 1884, under the authorization of House Joint Resolution, approved March 7, 1883, and concluded its labors on February 9.

This convention consisted of 45 members, apportioned among the thirteen counties as follows: Beaverhead 2, Dawson 1, Choteau 2, Custer 3, Yellowstone 2, Deer Lodge 3, Gallatin 5, Jefferson 2, Lewis and Clark 4, Madison 2, Meagher 3, Missoula 4, Silver Bow 6. In addition to these two delegates were also allotted to each of the three judicial districts into which the Territory was then divided.

An elaborate constitution was drafted during the 27 days session, which was ratified at the general election in November, but Congress failed to take any action on the subject of admission into the Union.

Convention of 1889

Under the provisions of the Enabling Act of Congress, approved February 22, 1889, the Legislature again provided the necessary machinery for holding the third constitutional convention. This convention convened at Helena July 4, 1889, and adjourned on August 17. The body consisted of 75 members distributed among the 16 counties of the Territory.

This constitution was ratified at the election called for that purpose on October 1, and on November 8, President Harrison issued his proclamation admitting Montana into the Union as a sovereign state.

Since its adoption, there have been ten amendments submitted by the Legislature and ratified by the votes of the state. In addition to these, two others were submitted by the Seventeenth Legislative Assembly which will be acted upon at the coming general election.

An Act of the Twelfth Legislative Assembly authorized the publication of the debates and proceedings of the Convention of 1889 and made an appropriation therefor. No action was taken in the matter, however, until the Legislature in 1919 again made an appropriation of $7,000 for the same purpose. This publication is the result of that action.

As the publication of Madison's private journal of the proceedings of the Federal Constitutional Convention of 1787 has thrown great light upon the debates attendant upon the creation of that historic document, it is hoped that the present publication will be of real benefit to students of Montana's history as to the men and motives involved in writing our own basic law.

Helena, February 6, 1922.

Jos. M. Dixon
Governor.

ENABLING ACT

(Public No. 52)

An act to provide for the division of Dakota into two States and to enable the people of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Washington to form constitutions and State governments and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States, and to make donations of public lands to such States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, Sec. 1. That the inhabitants of all that part of the area of the United States now constituting the Territories of Dakota, Montana, and Washington, as at present described, may become the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington, respectively, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. The area comprising the Territory of Dakota shall, for the purposes of this act, be divided on the line of the seventh standard parallel produced due west to the western boundary of said Territory; and the delegates elected as hereinafter provided to the constitutional convention in districts north of said parallel shall assemble in convention, at the time prescribed in this act, at the city of Bismarck; and the delegates elected in districts south of said parallel shall, at the same time assemble in convention at the city of Sioux Falls.

Sec. 3. That all persons who are qualified by the laws of said Territories to vote for representatives to the legislative assembly thereof, are hereby authorized to vote for and choose delegates to form conventions in said proposed States; and the qualifications for delegates to such conventions shall be such as by the laws of said Territories respectively persons are required to possess to be eligible to the legislative assemblies thereof; and the aforesaid delegates to form said conventions shall be apportioned within the limits of the proposed States, in such districts as may be established as herein provided, in proportion to the population in each of said counties and districts, as near as may be, to be ascertained at the time of making said apportionments by the persons hereinafter authorized to make the same, from the best information obtainable, in each of which districts three delegates shall be elected, but no elector shall vote for more than two persons for delegates to such conventions; that said apportionments shall be made by the governor, the chief-justice, and the secretary of said Territories; and the governor of said Territories shall, by proclamation, order an election of the delegates aforesaid in each of said proposed States, to be held on the Tuesday after the second Monday in May, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, which proclamation shall be issued on the fifteenth day of April, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine; and such election shall be conducted, the returns made, the result ascertained, and the certificates to persons elected to such convention issued in the same manner as is prescribed by the laws of the said Territories regulating elections therein for Delegates to Congress; and the number of votes cast for delegates in each precinct shall also be returned. The number of delegates to said conventions respectively shall be seventy-five; and all persons resident in said proposed States, who are qualified voters of said Territories as herein provided, shall be entitled to vote upon the election of delegates, and under such rules and regulations as said conventions may prescribe, not in conflict with this act, upon the ratification or rejection of the constitutions.

Sec. 4. That the delegates to the conventions elected as provided for in this act shall meet at the seat of government of each of said Territories, except the delegates elected in South Dakota, who shall meet at the city of Sioux Falls, on the Fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, and, after organization, shall declare, on behalf of the people of said proposed States, that they adopt the Constitution of the United States; whereupon the said conventions shall be, and are hereby, authorized to form constitutions and State governments for said proposed States, respectively.

The constitutions shall be republican in form, and make no distinction in civil or political rights on account of race or color, except as to Indians not taxed, and not be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States and the principles of the Declaration of Independence. And said conventions shall provide, by ordinances irrevocable without the consent of the United and the people of said States:

First. That perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured and that no inhabitant of said States shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship.

Second. That the people inhabiting said proposed States do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within the boundaries thereof, and to all lands lying within said limits owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes; and that until the title thereto shall have been extinguished by the United States, the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition of the United States, and said Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States; that the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said States shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands belonging to residents thereof; that no taxes shall be imposed by the States on lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States or reserved for its use. But nothing herein, or in the ordinances herein provided for, shall preclude the said States from taxing as other lands are taxed any lands owned or held by any Indian who has severed his tribal relations, and has obtained from the United States or from any person a title thereto by patent or other grant, save and except such lands as have been or may be granted to any Indian or Indians under any act of Congress containing a provision exempting the lands thus granted from taxation, but said ordinances shall provide that all such lands shall be exempt from taxation by said States so long and to such extent as such act of Congress may prescribe.

Third. That the debts and liabilities of said Territories shall be assumed and paid by said States, respectively.

Fourth. That provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of systems of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of said States, and free from sectarian control.

Sec. 5. That the convention which shall assemble at Bismarck shall form a constitution and State government for a State to be known as North Dakota, and the convention which shall assemble at Sioux Falls shall form a constitution and State government for a State to be known as South Dakota; PROVIDED, That at the election for delegates to the constitutional convention in South Dakota, as hereinbefore provided, each elector may have written or printed on his ballot the words, "For the Sioux Falls constitution," or the words, "against the Sioux Falls constitution," and the votes on this question shall be returned and canvassed in the same manner as for the election provided for in section three of this act; and if a majority of all votes cast on this question shall be "for the Sioux Falls constitution" it shall be the duty of the convention which may assemble at Sioux Falls, as herein provided, to resubmit to the people of South Dakota, for ratification or rejection at the election hereinafter provided for in this act, the constitution formed at Sioux Falls and adopted November third, eighteen hundred and eighty-five, and also the articles and propositions separately submitted at that election, including the question of locating the temporary seat of government, with such changes only as relate to the name and boundary of the proposed State to the reapportionment of the judicial and legislative districts, and such amendments as may be necessary in order to comply with the provisions of this act; and if a majority of the votes cast on the ratification or rejection of the constitution shall be for the constitution irrespective of the articles separately submitted, the State of South Dakota shall be admitted as a State in the Union under said constitution as hereinafter provided; but the archives, records, and books of the Territory of Dakota shall remain at Bismarck, the capital of North Dakota, until an agreement in reference thereto is reached by said States. But if at the election for delegates to the constitutional convention in South Dakota a majority of all the votes cast at that election shall be "against the Sioux Falls constitution," then and in that event shall be the duty of the convention which will assemble at the city of Sioux Falls on the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, to proceed to form a constitution and State government as provided in this act the same as if that question had not been submitted to a vote of the people of South Dakota.

Sec. 6. It shall be the duty of the constitutional conventions of North Dakota and South Dakota to appoint a joint commission, to be composed of not less than three members of each convention, whose duty it shall be to assemble at Bismarck, the present seat of government of said Territory, and agree upon an equitable division of all property belonging to the Territory of Dakota, the disposition of all public records, and also adjust and agree upon the amount of the debts and liabilities of the Territory, which shall be assumed and paid by each of the proposed States of North Dakota and South Dakota; and the agreement reached respecting the Territorial debts and liabilities shall be incorporated in the respective constitutions, and each of such States shall obligate itself to pay its proportion of said debts and liabilities the same as if they had been created by such States respectively.

Sec. 7. If the constitution formed for both North Dakota and South Dakota shall be rejected by the people at the elections for the ratification or rejection of their respective constitutions as provided for in this act, the Territorial government of Dakota shall continue in existence the same as if this act had not been passed. But if the constitution formed for either North Dakota or South Dakota shall be rejected by the people, that part of the Territory so rejecting its proposed constitution shall continue under the territorial government of the present territory of Dakota, but shall, after the State adopting its constitution is admitted into the Union, be called by the name of the Territory of North Dakota or South Dakota, as the case may be: PROVIDED, That if either of the proposed States provided for in this act shall reject the constitution which may be submitted for ratification or rejection at the election provided therefor, the Governor of the Territory in which such proposed constitution was rejected shall issue his proclamation reconvening the delegates elected to the convention which formed such rejected constitution, fixing the time and place at which said delegates shall assemble; and when so assembled they shall proceed to form another constitution or to amend the rejected constitution, and shall submit such new constitution or amended constitution to the people of the proposed State for ratification or rejection, at such time as said convention may determine; and all the provisions of this act, so far as applicable, shall apply to such convention so reassembled and to the constitution which may be formed, its ratification or rejection, and to the admission of the proposed State.

Sec. 8. That the constitutional convention which may assemble in South Dakota shall provide by ordinance for resubmitting the Sioux Falls constitution of eighteen hundred and eighty-five, after having amended the same as provided in section five of this act, to the people of South Dakota for ratification or rejection at an election to be held therein on the first Tuesday in October, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine; but if said constitutional convention is authorized and required to form a new constitution for South Dakota it shall provide for submitting the same in like manner to the people of South Dakota for ratification or rejection at an election to be held in said proposed state on the said first Tuesday in October. And the constitutional conventions which may assemble in North Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall provide in like manner for submitting the constitutions formed by them to the people of said proposed States, respectively, for ratification or rejection at elections to be held in said proposed States on the first Tuesday in October. At the elections provided for in this section the qualified voters of said proposed States shall vote directly for or against the proposed constitutions, and for or against any articles or propositions separately submitted. The returns of said elections shall be made to the secretary of each of said Territories, who, with the governor and chief justice thereof, or any two of them, shall canvass the same; and if a majority of the legal votes cast shall be for the constitution the governor shall certify the result to the President of the United States, together with a statement of the votes cast thereon and upon separate articles or propositions, and a copy of said constitution, articles, propositions, and ordinances. And if the constitutions and governments of said proposed States are republican in form, and if all the provisions of this act have been complied with in the formation thereof, it shall be the duty of the President of the United States to issue his proclamation announcing the result of the election in each, and thereupon the proposed States which have adopted constitutions and formed State governments as herein provided shall be deemed admitted by Congress, into the Union under and by virtue of this act on an equal footing with the original States from and after the date of said proclamation.

Sec. 9. That until the next general census, or otherwise provided by law, said States shall be entitled to one Representative in the House of Representatives of the United States, except South Dakota, which shall be entitled to two; and the Representatives to the Fifty-first Congress, together with the governors and other officers provided for in said constitutions, may be elected on the same day of the election for the ratification or rejection of the constitutions; and until said State officers are elected and qualified under the provisions of each constitution and the States, respectively, are admitted into the Union, the Territorial officers shall continue to discharge the duties of their respective offices in each of said Territories.

Sec. 10. That upon the admission of each of said States into the Union sections numbered sixteen and thirty-six in every township of said proposed States, and where such section, or any parts thereof, have been sold or otherwise disposed of by or under the authority of any act of Congress, other lands equivalent thereto, in legal subdivisions of not less than one-quarter section, and as contiguous as may be to the section in lieu of which the same is taken, are hereby granted to said States for the support of common schools, such indemnity lands to be selected within said States in such manner as the legislature may provide, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior; PROVIDED, That the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections embraced in permanent reservations for national purposes shall not, at any time, be subject to the grants nor to the indemnity provisions of this act, nor shall any lands embraced in Indian, military or other reservations of any character be subject to the grants or to the indemnity provisions of this act until the reservation shall have been extinguished and such lands be restored to, and become a part of, the public domain.

Sec. 11. That all lands herein granted for educational purposes shall be disposed of only at public sale, and at a price not less than ten dollars per acre, the proceeds to constitute a permanent school fund, the interest of which only shall be expended in the support of said schools. But said lands may, under such regulations as the legislatures shall prescribe, be leased for periods of not more than five years, in quantities not exceeding one section to any one person or company; and such lands shall not be subject to pre-emption, homestead entry or any other entry under the land laws of the United States, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, but shall be reserved for school purposes only.

Sec. 12. That upon the admission of each of said States into the Union, in accordance with the provisions of this act, fifty sections of the unappropriated public lands within said States, to be selected and located in legal subdivisions as provided in section ten of this act, shall be, and are hereby, granted to said States for the purpose of erecting public buildings at the capital of said States for legislative, executive and judicial purposes.

Sec. 13. That five per centum of the proceeds of the sale of public lands lying within said States which shall be sold by the United States subsequent to the admission of said States into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to the said States, to be used as a permanent fund, the interest of which only shall be expended for the support of common schools within said States, respectively.

Sec. 14. That the lands granted to the Territories of Dakota and Montana by the act of February eighteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, entitled "An act to grant lands to Dakota, Montana, Arizona, Idaho and Wyoming for university purposes," are hereby vested in the States of South Dakota, North Dakota, and Montana, respectively, if such States are admitted into the Union, as provided in this act, to the extent of the full quantity of seventy-two sections to each of said States, and any portion of said lands that may not have been selected by either of said Territories of Dakota or Montana may be selected by the respective States aforesaid; but said act of February eighteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, shall be so amended as to provide that none of said lands shall be sold for less than ten dollars per acre, and the proceeds shall constitute a permanent fund to be safely invested and held by said States severally, and the income thereof be used exclusively for university purposes. And such quantity of the lands authorized by the fourth section of the act of July seventeenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, to be reserved for university purposes in the Territory of Washington, as, together with the lands confirmed to the vendees of the Territory by the act of March fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, will make the full quantity of seventy-two entire sections, are hereby granted in the like manner to the State of Washington for the purpose of a university in said State. None of the lands granted in this section shall be sold at less than ten dollars per acre; but said lands may be leased in the same manner as provided in section eleven of this act. The schools, colleges and universities provided for in this act shall forever remain under the exclusive control of the said States, respectively, and no part of the proceeds arising from the sale or disposal of any lands herein granted for educational purposes shall be used for the support of any sectarian or denominational schools, college or university. The section of land granted by the act of June sixteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty, to the Territory of Dakota, for an asylum for the insane shall, upon admission of the said State of South Dakota into the Union, become the property of said State.

Sec. 15. That so much of the lands belonging to the United States as have been acquired and set apart for the purpose mentioned in "An act appropriating money for the erection of a penitentiary in the Territory of Dakota," approved March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, together with the buildings thereon, be, and the same is hereby granted, together with any unexpended balances of the moneys appropriated therefor by said act, to said State of South Dakota for the purposes therein designated; and the States of North Dakota and Washington shall, respectively, have like grants for the same purpose, and subject to like terms and conditions as provided in said act of March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, for the Territory of Dakota. The penitentiary at Deer Lodge City, Montana, and all lands connected therewith and set apart and reserved therefor, are hereby granted to the State of Montana.

Sec. 16. That ninety thousand acres of land, to be selected and located as provided in section ten of this act, are hereby granted to each of said States, except to the State of South Dakota, to which one hundred and twenty thousand acres are granted, for the use and support of agricultural colleges in said States, as provided in the acts of Congress making donations of lands for such purpose.

Sec. 17. That in lieu of the grant of land for purposes of internal improvement made to new States by the eighth section of the act of September fourth, eighteen hundred and forty-one, which act is hereby repealed as to the States provided for by this act, and in lieu of any claim or demand by the said States, or either of them, under the act of September twenty-eight, eighteen hundred and fifty, and section twenty-four hundred and seventy-nine of the Revised Statutes, making a grant of swamp and overflowed lands to certain States, which grant it is hereby declared is not extended to the States provided for in this act, and in lieu of any grant of saline lands to said States, the following grants of land are hereby made, to-wit:

To the State of South Dakota: For the school of mines, forty thousand acres; for the reform school, forty thousand acres; for the deaf and dumb asylum, forty thousand acres; for the agricultural college, forty thousand acres; for the university, forty thousand acres; for State normal schools, eighty thousand acres; for public buildings at the capital of said State, fifty thousand acres, and for such other educational and charitable purposes as the legislature of said State may determine, one hundred and seventy-five thousand acres; in all five hundred thousand acres.

To the State of North Dakota a like quantity of land as is in this section granted to the State of South Dakota, and to be for like purposes, and in like proportion as far as practicable.

To the State of Montana: For the establishment and maintenance of a school of mines, one hundred thousand acres; for State normal schools, one hundred thousand acres; for agricultural colleges, in addition to the grant hereinbefore made for that purpose, fifty thousand acres; for the establishment of a state reform school, fifty thousand acres; for the estabishment of a deaf and dumb asylum, fifty thousand acres; for public buildings at the capital of the State, in addition to the grant hereinbefore made for that purpose, one hundred and fifty thousand acres.

To the State of Washington: For the establishment and maintenance of a scientific school, one hundred thousand acres; for State normal schools, one hundred thousand acres; for public buildings at the State capital, in addition to the grant hereinbefore made for that purpose, one hundred thousand acres; for State charitable, educational, penal, and reformatory institutions, two hundred thousand acres.

That the States provided for in this act shall not be entitled to any further or other grants of land for any purpose than as expressly provided in this Act. And the lands granted by this section shall be held, appropriated, and disposed of exclusively for the purposes herein mentioned, in such manner as the legislatures of the respective States may severally provide.

Sec. 18. That all mineral lands shall be exempted from the grants made by this act. But if sections sixteen and thirty-six, or any subdivisions or portion of any smallest subdivision thereof in any township shall be found by the Department of the Interior to be mineral lands, said States are hereby authorized and empowered to select, in legal subdivisions, an equal quantity of other unappropriated lands in said States, in lieu thereof, for the use and for the benefit of the common schools of said States.

Sec. 19. That all lands granted in quantity or as indemnity by this act shall be selected, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, from the surveyed, unreserved, and unappropriated public lands of the United States within the limits of the respective States entitled thereto. And there shall be deducted from the number of acres of land donated by this act for specific objects to said States the number of acres in each heretofore donated by Congress to said Territories for similar objects.

Sec. 20. That the sum of twenty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to each of said Territories for defraying the expenses of the said conventions, except to Dakota, for which the sum of forty thousand dollars is so appropriated, twenty thousand dollars each for South Dakota and North Dakota, and for the payment of the members thereof, under the same rules and regulations and at the same rates as are now provided by law for the payment of the Territorial legislatures. Any money hereby appropriated not necessary for such purpose shall be returned into the treasury of the United States.

Sec. 21. That each of said States, when admitted as aforesaid, shall constitute one judicial district, the names thereof to be the same as the names of the States, respectively; and the circuit and district courts therefor shall be held at the capital of such State for the time being, and each of said districts shall, for judicial purposes, until otherwise provided, be attached to the eighth judicial circuit, except Washington and Montana, which shall be attached to the ninth judicial district. There shall be appointed for each of said districts, one district judge, one United States attorney, and one United States marshal. The judge of each of said districts shall receive a yearly salary of three thousand, five hundred dollars payable in four equal installments, on the first days of January, April, July, and October of each year, and shall reside in the district. There shall be appointed clerks of said courts in each district, who shall keep their offices at the capital of said State; the regular term of said courts shall be held in each district at the place aforesaid, on the first Monday in April and the first Monday in November of each year, and only one grand jury and one petit jury shall be summoned in both said circuit and district courts. The circuit and district courts for each of said districts, and the judges thereof, respectively, shall possess the same powers and jurisdiction, and perform the same duties required to be performed by other circuit and district courts and judges of the United States, and shall be governed by the same laws and regulations. The marshal, district attorney, and clerks of the circuit and district court of each of said districts, and all other officers and persons performing duties in the administration of justice therein, shall severally possess the powers and perform the duties lawfully possessed and required to be performed by similar officers in other districts of the United States; and shall, for the services they may perform, receive the fees and compensation allowed by law to other similar officers and persons performing similar duties in the state of Nebraska.

Sec. 22. That all cases of appeal or writ of error heretofore prosecuted and now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States upon any record from the supreme court of either of the Territories mentioned in this act, or that may hereafter lawfully be prosecuted upon any record from either of said courts may be heard and determined by said Supreme Court of the United States and the mandate of execution or of further proceedings, shall be directed by the Supreme Court of the United States to the circuit or district court hereby established within the State succeeding the Territory from which such record is or may be pending, or to the supreme court of such State, as the nature of the case may require; PROVIDED, That the mandate of execution or of further proceedings shall, in cases arising in the Territory of Dakota, be directed by the Supreme Court of the United States to the circuit or district court of the district of South Dakota, or to the supreme court of the State of South Dakota, or to the circuit or district court of the district of North Dakota, or to the supreme court of the State of North Dakota, or to the supreme court of the Territory of North Dakota, as the nature of the case may require. And each of the circuit, district, and State courts, herein named, shall, respectively, be the successor of the supreme court of the Territory, as to all such cases arising within the limits embraced within the jurisdiction of such courts respectively with full power to proceed with the same, and award mesne or final process therein; and that from all judgments and decrees of the supreme court of either of the Territories mentioned in this act, in any case arising within the limits of any of the proposed States prior to admission, the parties to such judgment shall have the same right to prosecute appeals and writs of error to the Supreme Court of the United States as they shall have had by law prior to the admission of said State into the Union.

Sec. 23. That in respect to all cases, proceedings, and matters now pending in the supreme or district courts of either of the Territories mentioned in this act at the time of the admission into the Union of either of the States mentioned in this act, and arising within the limits of any such State, whereof the circuit or district courts by this act established might have had jurisdiction under the laws of the United States had such courts existed at the time of the commencement of such cases, the said circuit and district courts, respectively, shall be the successors of said supreme and district courts of said Territory; and in respect to all other proceedings and matters pending in the supreme or district cases courts of any of the Territories mentioned in this act at the time of the admission of such Territory into the Union, arising within the limits of said proposed State, the courts established by such state shall, respectively, be the successors of said supreme and district Territorial courts; and all the files, records, indictments, and proceedings relating to any such cases, shall be transferred to such circuit, district, and State courts, respectively, and the same shall be proceeded with therein in due course of law; but no writ, action, indictment, cause or proceeding now pending, or that prior to the admission of any of the States mentioned in this act, shall be pending in any Territorial court in any of the Territories mentioned in this act, shall abate by the admission of any such State into the Union, but the same shall be transferred and proceeded within the proper United States circuit, district or State court, as the case may be: PROVIDED, HOWEVER, That in all civil actions, causes, and proceedings, in which the United States is not a party, transfer shall not be made to the circuit and district courts of the United States, except upon written request of one of the parties to such action or proceedings filed in the proper court; and in the absence of such request such cases shall be proceeded with in the proper State courts.

Sec. 24. That the constitutional conventions may, by ordinance, provide for the election of officers for full State governments including members of the legislatures and Representatives in the Fifty-first Congress; but said State governments shall remain in abeyance until the States shall be admitted into the Union, respectively, as provided in this act. In case the constitution of any of said proposed States shall be ratified by the people, but not otherwise, the legislature thereof may assemble, organize, and elect two Senators of the United States; and the governor and secretary of state of such proposed State shall certify the election of the Senators and Representatives in the manner required by law; and when such State is admitted into the Union, the Senators and Representatives shall be entitled to be admitted to seats in Congress, and to all the rights and privileges of Senators and Representatives of other States in the Congress of the United States; and the officers of the State governments formed in pursuance of said constitutions, as provided by the constitutional conventions shall proceed to exercise all the functions of such State officers; and all laws in force made by said Territories, at the time of their admission into the Union, shall be in force in said States, except as modified or changed by this act or by the constitutions of the States, respectively.

Sec. 25. That all acts or parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act, whether passed by the legislatures of said Territories or by Congress, are hereby repealed.

SIGNATURES.

PROCEEDINGS

FIRST DAY.

Thursday, July 4, 1889.

The convention was called to order by Mr. L. A. Walker, Secretary of the Territory of Montana, at 12 o'clock noon July 4th, 1889, who spoke as follows:

Gentlemen: It is with much pleasure that I call this convention to order, a convention that meets for the purpose of framing a constitution for one of the largest states in the Union, the great gold and silver State of Montana. I will now call the list of names as filed in the office of the secretary by the canvassing board, which list constitutes the names of the members who are entitled to seats in this convention. I will call the list according to districts.

Secretary Walker then called the roll of members by districts, and those present answered to their names as called.

Secretary Walker: There being a quorum present, I am now ready for any motion that the convention may see fit to put.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: For the purpose of forming a temporary organization, and in order that business may be facilitated, I will place in nomination as temporary chairman of this convention Hon. Joseph K. Toole of Helena.

Secretary Walker: Mr. Toole's name has been placed in nomination for temporary chairman or president.

Mr. W. A. Clark of Silver Bow: The gentleman who has just been nominated for the position of chairman of this convention is eminently and thoroughly qualified, as every one present knows, for that position. He has been a loyal and faithful servant of the Territory of Montana and, next to Mr. Springer, the father of that bill, has done more than any other man in the house of representatives to secure the passage of the bill by which we are enabled now to throw off the territorial government and assume that of statehood; and as a testimonial to this gentleman and a deserving compliment for his constant fidelity to Montana, I take pleasure in seconding the nomination made by the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Joy of Livingston: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that we have met here to transact business of vast and far-reaching importance to all the people of this Territory, it is very necessary that we place in nomination at this time a man as temporary chairman who is acquainted as far as may be with all the various interests of this Territory. I desire to place in nomination as temporary chairman a man who is familiar with the various resources of our Territory, a man who is essentially a mining man—a man who comes from an agricultural country, a man who is familiar with the stock interests and comes from a stock section as well of our country, a man who is a thorough parliamentarian, who has had a great deal of experience in such bodies—a man who will fulfill the duties of that office with credit to himself, to this body, and to the people of Montana. He needs no further introduction from me. I will nominate Hon. George O. Eaton of Park County.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of seconding the nomination, I rise to endorse the sentiments expressed by the gentleman from Park.

The presiding officer: George O. Eaton's name has been placed in nomination.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula County: I take pleasure in seconding the nomination of Hon. George O. Eaton as chairman of this convention.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I rise, representing Yellowstone County, one of the eastern counties of Montana, to second the nomination of George O. Eaton for temporary chairman of this organization. In doing so I heartily endorse all that has been said by the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) and Mr. Burleigh, and the gentleman from Missoula County.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clark: I also, Mr. Secretary, take great pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. Eaton as temporary chairman of this convention, and I trust there will be some democratic members who will see the propriety of selecting him for that position.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I don't know of anything that has occurred in my life-time that affords me so much pleasure as to be in a position as a representative from Custer County, a delegate from the eastern part of this Territory, than to rise here and second the nomination of Hon Joseph K. Toole.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move the nominations be closed.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clark: I second the motion.

The presiding officer: It is moved and seconded that the nominations be now closed. Those in favor of the motion will signify the same by saying aye; those opposed, no. (A pause.) The ayes have it, and the nominations are now closed. The convention will now proceed to elect a temporary chairman.

The convention then proceeded to the election of the temporary chairman by ballot.

The Tellers announced that there had been 67 ballots cast, of which Joseph K. Toole had received 36.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that the election of the Hon. Joseph K. Toole be made unanimous.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clark: Mr. Chairman, I second the motion of the gentleman from Park, and nothing affords me greater pleasure in my own political experience than to second the nomination of Mr. Toole, a townsman of mine who has grown up under my own observation, as a man fit for the position with which this convention has honored him.

The presiding officer: Gentlemen of the Convention, it has been moved and seconded that the election of the Hon. Joseph K. Toole as temporary President of this Convention be made unanimous. Are you ready for the question?

The question was then put and carried.

The presiding officer: The ayes have it, and the Hon. Joseph K. Toole is elected temporary President of this Convention. I will appoint Mr. Collins of Choteau and Mr. Hickman of Madison to escort Mr. Toole to the Chair.

Mr. Toole then took the Chair and addressed the Convention as follows: Gentlemen of the Convention:

I am profoundly grateful for this evidence of your confidence and esteem. I consider it no slight honor to be chosen to preside over the temporary organization of this important body. It is the largest deliberative assembly ever convened in this Territory. Certainly none ever met charged with higher duties or graver responsibilities. As I look this Convention over and see all of our actions clothed with the authority of an act of congress, I begin to realize how near we are to the threshold of statehood. Looking out into the splendid procession which lines the streets with flying banners and gilded streamers, the memory of other days comes back in strange contrast with the present. The occasion invites only a glance at the panorama of the past.

In the stretch of a quarter of a century we behold the birth of this territory. Scattered here and there were a few intrepid spirits, poorly housed and still more poorly clad and fed, in pursuit of fortunes. The population represented the best and worst elements of society. Malefactors and law breakers were holding high carnival. With them honor was a jest and virtue a fable. Law and order were "more honored in the breach than in the observance." Interesting as it might be, time does not permit to recount the dangers through which the pioneers passed, nor the trials and sufferings entailed upon them by a residence in such a climate and under such circumstances.

It is enough to know that they overcame every difficulty and surmounted every obstacle. In all their laudable ambitions they finally triumphed. All along the line will be found the record of an honorable career. For twenty years I have been a close observer of men and affairs in this Territory. During that time I have noted with pride the increase of our intelligence, the advancement of our civilization, the development of our resources, the augmentation of our wealth, the stimulation of our ambitions, and the realization of many of our best hopes, until to-day I behold here assembled the representatives of a people, who by every rule of virtue, education, property, patriotism and industry, are filling to the fullest measure every requirement of citizenship.

Twenty-five years have wrought these and many other changes. They might have been longer delayed under different circumstances. It was fortunate for us that among the brave and adventurous spirits who subdued the plains and conquered the mountains in order that they might lay here broad and deep the foundations of a great commonwealth, there were not a few men of high character, sound integrity and rare ability. They formed the nucleus around which matured and prospered the brave men and beautiful women of these matchless mountains. They inhabited what was then a remote land. I fain can hear the glad acclaim that went up when the news, so long delayed by the method of its coming, finally reached them, that Montana on the 26th day of May, 1864, had been organized as a Territory, and that the law, although traveling with a leaden heel, was soon to be securely enthroned in their midst. The view of our career as a people of our unexampled progress and prosperity, the hardships endured, and the ultimate success attained thereby, ought ever to be to us an inspiring memory.

Before another six months shall have rolled round, our territorial garments will be cast aside, a new state will be born and spring full-fledged into the family of the Union, and on her shining brow will be seen in golden and silver light the coat of arms of the State of Montana, and there will be inaugurated a new festal day for us, which, let us hope, we may cherish and perpetuate with no less interest and enthusiasm than that which seems to animate the great throng within our hearing in this celebration of the natal day of our nation. (Applause.)

And finally, gentlemen of the Convention, when our labors shall have been concluded, and the time shall come when we are called upon to put aside our swaddling clothes and don more fitting raiment, may the territory which we shall have nurtured into statehood, lay down the scepter obedient to the constitution and the laws without the shadow of repudiation having tainted its good credit or the stain of dishonor having marred its bright escutcheon. For this high honor, again I thank you.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that Mr. W. H. Todd of Choteau County be placed in nomination for temporary Chief Clerk of this constitutional Convention.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I second the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that William H. Todd be placed in nomination as temporary Chief Clerk of this Convention. Are there any other nominations? Is the Convention ready for the question?

The question was then put and carried.

The Chairman: The motion prevails, and Mr. Todd is declared elected temporary Chief Clerk of this Convention.

The Chairman: What is the further pleasure of the Convention

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move the nomination of Mr. Samuel Alexander as Sergeant at Arms of this Convention.

The nomination was seconded.

The question was put and carried.

The Chairman: The motion prevails and Mr. Alexander is elected temporary Sergeant at Arms of this Convention. What is the further pleasure of this convention?

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that there are exercises going on outside that many of us would like to listen to and observe, I move that this Convention do now adjourn until 12 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that we cannot adjourn until we are sworn in, and as the motion of the gentleman from Custer was not seconded, I move that the Chair appoint a Committee of five to wait on the Chief Justice of the Territory, and ask him to swear in the members of the convention.

Motion was duly seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the Chair appoint a committee of five to wait upon the Chief Justice of the Territory, and ask him to deliver the oath of office to the members of the Convention.

The motion was then put and carried.

The Chair then appointed as members of such committee Messrs. Collins of Cascade, Burleigh of Custer, Hershfield of Lewis & Clark, Luce of Gallatin, and Parberry of Meagher.

Chief Justice Blake then appeared within the bar of the house and administered the oath to the members present.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Mr. President, I think, sir, it is important that a temporary stenographer be elected at this time to keep the records of the Convention, and I therefore name as such stenographer, Mr. C. P. Connolly.

The nomination was duly seconded.

The Chairman: Mr. C. P. Connolly is placed in nomination as temporary stenographer. Are there any further nominations? If there be no further nominations, all those in favor of the nomination will say aye, those opposed, no.

The motion prevails, and Mr. Connolly is elected as temporary stenographer of the Convention.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that the gentlemen of the press of this Territory be entitled and invited to the privileges of the floor of this Convention.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the members of the press of the Territory be invited to accept the privileges of the floor of the Convention.

The motion was then put and carried.

The Chairman: What is the further pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move that when we adjourn, we adjourn until to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that when this Convention adjourns, it adjourn to meet to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move to amend the motion by making the hour 10 o'clock, instead of 12 o'clock.

The amendment was duly seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that when the Convention adjourn, it adjourn to meet to-morrow at 12 o'clock, and the motion is made to amend by striking out 12 o'clock and inserting 10 o'clock. The question is upon the amendment.

The amendment was then put and lost by a vote of 26 in the affirmative and 29 in the negative.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clark: I move to amend the original motion by making the hour 1 o'clock instead of 12.

Amendment duly seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the original motion be amended by changing the hour from 12 to 1 o'clock. Are you ready for the question?

The amendment was then put and carried.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that to expedite matters a committee of credentials be appointed at this session. The record ought to show that some committee, or the Convention itself, has passed upon the credentials of the members.

The motion was duly seconded.

The chairman stated the motion.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I scarcely think it is necessary to appoint a committee on credentials. The official count has been made here by the secretary and governor, and the official list presented here, and I hardly think it is worth while asking for the credentials, when they have already been certified to by these officers as the members who have been elected. I hardly see the necessity for it.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: It seems to me that it is entirely unnecessary that there should be a committee on credentials. The very act under which the delegates were elected and authorized to assemble here provides that the secretary of the Territory should be the person to issue to the persons elected their certificates of election. That has been done. The secretary himself, in person, has assembled this convention, called it to order and

WILLIAM J. KENNEDY	JOSEPH K. TOOLE	CHARLES H. LOUD
	GEORGE B. WINSTON

Mr. Callaway of Madison: It might be right for me to say in addition to what the gentleman from Custer has stated here, that there is no contest here, there is no disagreement or protest by anybody, or anything of that kind, and it would seem to me wholly unnecessary, at this stage of the proceedings, that a committee on credentials should be appointed. The officer duly authorized and appointed by the act of congress has certified the credentials of the members of this body, and has also certified that those who have responded to the roll call of the clerk here were entitled to seats as members of this body.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I will second the motion, as I understand a deliberate body of this kind is the judge of who are its members. No one else is authorized to judge of the qualifications of its members. While the secretary may know who are the members of the constitutional Convention from the official records in his office, what does this Convention know about it. That is the question. It is not what the secretary knows; but it is what this convention knows; and in my judgment this Convention should have a committee and receive the credentials of the members of the Convention and make a report, and it should be determined who they are and they should be enrolled as such.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask in the event of this committee being appointed, what credentials do we present to that committee? The secretary has already certified to those who are elected to this body and I presume—I have, I suppose we all have, from the secretary or County Clerk of our respective Counties a letter of credentials. Now this committee on credentials, which credentials are they to pass judgment upon, the credential of the secretary or the credential of the County Clerk, which of these two is the essential?

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clark: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me unnecessary to appoint a committee on credentials. The names of the delegates elected have been taken, and they have taken the oath. They are, presumably, at least, members. Now in all bodies of this kind, it has been the custom to appoint among the standing committees a committee on privileges and election, and if there should be at any time a dispute as to the right of any person to his seat, that case would be referred to that committee, and be reported upon in the customary way for the transaction of business by such a body. Therefore it seems to me entirely unnecessary to appoint a committee; that nothing would be gained by it; and that if there were a disputed seat, the committee on privileges and election would be the committee to pass upon it first and the Convention afterwards.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that there has been no notice of contest; that there is nothing for a committee to act upon. The Convention is not here to raise any questions. The list of members has been furnished by the secretary who called the Convention to order, the names have been duly recorded, the roll has been called and the members have responded to it and have taken their oath of office, and it seems to me that it would be a work of supererogation to appoint a committee on credentials here when there is nothing for it to do.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: The gentlemen do not seem to meet the point that I raised on this question, and that is this: We are a Convention here selected from the people of Montana Territory to form a constitution and have been elected in pursuance of law, and we are the ones to judge who are the members of this Convention, and the very thing that the gentlemen assert here, that we could have a committee upon elections, and that that committee should determine who is elected to this Convention, if there was any contest, shows that this Convention is the judge of who are the officers of the Convention and who are the members elected to the Convention; and it seems to me entirely proper that we should have a committee of that kind.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I noticed upon the reading of the call that several names had to be corrected. Now, that is one point in favor of this committee; and another point is, that this list which has been brought here is not under the great seal of the Territory of Montana. The badge of our right to sit in this Convention is, it strikes me, the certificate of the governor with the great seal of the Territory attached, and if that be presented here, then this Convention will know the names of every member of this Convention and we will take notice ourselves of who are the members of this Convention. It strikes me that this is a preliminary matter, simply calling the roll, and in that mistakes may be made; but the certificate bearing the seal of the governor and the secretary of the Territory bears upon its face the verity of the fact that we are elected and entitled to seats in this body, and I do not think that list is any such evidence, and I do not think that it should be received here. I don't think we can make ourselves any too solid in this Convention, and this committee will inconvenience us but little.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: (The gentleman attempted to speak, but could not be heard, on account of the noise and the band out-doors.)

The Chairman: The Chair is unable to hear the remarks of the gentleman from Custer.

The Chairman: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr Collins), that the Chair appoint a committee on credentials; the number of that committee was not suggested at the time—(interrupted).

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Committee of seven.

The Chairman: That a committee of credentials consisting of seven members be appointed. Are you ready for the question? (The question was then stated.)

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Will the chairman please repeat the question?

The Chairman repeated the motion.

The Chairman: The Chair is in doubt; those who are in favor of the motion will please rise.

The Chairman: Twelve gentlemen vote in the affirmative; those opposed will rise. Evidently there is a majority, and the motion is lost.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that this Convention now adjourn.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the Convention do now adjourn. As many as are in favor will say aye, those opposed, no. The motion is carried and this Convention is now adjourned.

Convention adjourned until 1 o'clock P. M. the 5th day of July, A. D. 1889.

SECOND DAY.

Friday, July 5, 1889.

The Hon. Joseph K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, temporary President, in the Chair.

Convention called to order at 1:25 P. M.

The President: The Chair has been informed that there are a number of members of this Convention present who were not here yesterday. The Chief Justice of the Territory is present and will now administer the oath of office to such of those as were not here at that time, if they will come forward.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow, and Mr. Hammond of Jefferson then came forward and were sworn in by the Hon. Chief Justice Blake.

The President: The Chair will lay before the Convention for its information the following telegrams which were received this morning.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Before we proceed to business, believing, as I do, that it is eminently proper and right, and because it is proper and right, I think we ought to commence these proceedings by calling upon some ministerial gentleman present to open the exercises with prayer; and I move you, that the chair invite some ministerial gentleman who may be present to open the exercises with prayer.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the chair invite some minister present to open these exercises with prayer. As many as are in favor of the motion will say Aye.

The ayes have it, and the chair will be happy to invite any minister present to open these proceedings with prayer.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I would suggest that Rev. George C. Stull is present, and ask that he be invited to offer prayer.

The Chairman: The invitation of the Convention is extended to Rev. Mr. Stull, and he is invited to open these exercises with prayer.

Rev. Mr. Stull then offered prayer.

The Chairman: The Clerk will now read, for the information of the Convention, certain telegrams which have been received.

The Clerk then read the following telegrams:

"Sioux Falls, Dakota, July 4, 1889.

"President of the Constitutional Convention:

"South Dakota Constitutional Convention sends its greeting to Montana Constitutional Convention.

"Signed: A. J. EDGERTON, President."

"Olympia, W. T., July 4, 1889.

"Chairman of the Constitutional Convention:

"Washington congratulates Montana on approaching statehood, and predicts that the stars of the new states will rise high and be resplendent in the firmament, and that their honorable fame will grow with the centuries.

"(Signed) J. J. MOORE, President."

"Bismarck, Dakota, July 4, 1889.

"Constitutional Convention:

"The Constitutional Convention of North Dakota sends greeting, and bids you God-speed in your advance movement towards statehood and full American citizenship. May the four new stars about to be added to the national flag not lose in brilliancy through lack of care in laying the foundations of the states to be. Let Washington bring fruit and flowers—Montana, its precious metals—to add to the beauty and wealth of our nation; while the Dakotas will bring wheat and corn for the people of the world.

"(Signed) F. B. FANCHER, President."

The Chair: What is the pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clark: I move you, Mr. Chairman, that we accept the telegrams with our profound thanks and heartiest sympathies, and that the Chairman of this Convention, on behalf of the Convention, be authorized to return our thanks and to return like congratulations to our sister territories.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chairman then put the motion as stated, and the same was duly carried.

The Chairman: What is the further pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I move you, Mr. Chairman, that the Convention proceed to the election of permanent officers.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I only wish to suggest, Mr. Chairman, not with a sense of taking the floor, but with the gentleman's permission, that I think it would be proper to call the roll of this Convention.

The Chairman: The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk then called the roll.

The Chairman: The motion is that the Convention do now proceed to the election of permanent officers. Is there a second to the motion?

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chair then put the motion as stated, and the same was duly carried.

The Chairman: Nominations are now in order.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Mr. Chairman, before nominations are made of any of the officers, would it not be proper for the Convention to determine just what offices are to be filled? It seems to me that that would be better. It is a question we will have to meet and solve sometime, and, perhaps, just as well now as any time.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clark: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that the law determines that, in the first instance and as soon as our permanent organization is effected, we will then, by resolution, have to provide for such officers as we shall certainly need in addition to those provided for.

The Chair: On the suggestion of the member from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Maginnis), the chair would state that the law under which we are assembled defines such officers as we shall have. Nominations for permanent officers are now in order.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the Convention: I rise to place before this Convention the name of Hon. W. A. Clark, of Silver Bow County. Anything that I can say in commendation of Mr. Clark I feel would be unnecessary, as the gentlemen of the Convention, and indeed every one present, are aware of his worth, his energy and his eminent fitness for the place for which I name him; and what I desire to say is simply to bear testimony to his worth and eminent fitness for the position. Mr. Clark is a gentleman who has been prominently identified, and is prominently identified, with almost every interest in the Territory. He is a gentleman that has served the people of this Territory in many capacities, and one—I will only refer to one at the present time—and that is as President of the Convention that assembled here four years ago and formed a state constitution to abide admission into the Union. Mr. Clark was the presiding officer of that Convention; he went to the trouble and expense of presenting that constitution to the proper authorities at Washington, asking for the admission of Montana at that time as a state; and I venture to say, gentlemen, that there is not a man within the confines of Montana Territory that has done more to forward and hasten statehood than the Hon. W. A. Clark of Silver Bow County.

The Chairman: Hon. W. A. Clark, of Silver Bow, is placed in nomination. Are there any other nominations?

Mr. Eaton of Park: In making a nomination for the position of permanent Chairman, I am actuated by the knowledge that my candidate, in his life and history—known to all men—needs no eulogy at my hands. His life and his history is the life, or a part, at least—a prominent part—of the life and history of the Territory of Montana from its inception; and without further commendation I desire to present the name of the Hon. L. H. Hershfield.

The Chairman: The Hon. L. H. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clark County, is placed in nomination. Are there any other nominations?

Mr. Hickman of Madison: As a member of the County of Madison I desire to say that this delegation takes pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. L. H. Hershfield.

The Chairman: Are there any further nominations?

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, I rise to second the nomination of the Hon. W. A. Clark as President of this Convention; and in doing so, I want to remark that no words from me could indicate to this Convention—who are as well, if not better, each and every man, acquainted with Mr. Clark than I am—his qualifications and fitness for that honorable position.

The Chairman: Is the Convention ready to cast their ballots?

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move you, Mr. Chairman, that we proceed to ballot.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I move you that we call the roll, and that each gentleman respond.

The Chairman: If there be no objection the Clerk will proceed to call the roll, and the members will come forward and deposit their ballots.

Mr. Eaton of Park: How is this, vive voca or ballot?

Mr. Joy of Park: I move you, Mr. Chairman, that we proceed to vote by ballot as we did yesterday, for the candidate of our choice.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chairman put the motion. Division was called for.

The Chairman: As many as are in favor of the amendment will rise until they are counted. The gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Maginnis) moved that the Clerk proceed to call the names of the members of the Convention, and upon the calling of the names that the members announce their preference. The gentleman from Park (Mr. Eaton) moves to amend, by voting by ballot as the names of the members are called—that they approach the Clerk's desk and deposit their ballots. The question now is on the amendment of the gentleman from Park to proceed to vote by ballot.

The Convention then voted on the amendment. The vote resulted in thirty-nine votes in the affirmative, the votes in the negative not being counted.

The Chairman: The motion prevails; and as the names of the members are called they will approach the Clerk's desk and deposit their ballots.

The Chair then appointed as Tellers Messrs. Aiken and Rickards of Silver Bow.

The Chairman: Gentlemen of the Convention, the Tellers report as follows:

Seventy-seven votes have been cast, of which—

The Hon. W. A. Clark receives 39.

The Hon. L. H. Hershfield receives 32.

The Hon. George O. Eaton receives 1.

The Hon. Martin Maginnis receives 1.

By your votes you have elected Hon. W. A. Clark President of this Convention.

The Chair then appointed the Hon. Martin Maginnis, of Lewis & Clark, and Dr. Parberry, of Meagher, to notify the Hon. W. A. Clark of his election as President of the Convention, and to escort him to the Chair.

The Chairman: Gentlemen of the Convention, I have the honor and pleasure of introducing to you the Hon. W. A. Clark.

The President then took the Chair and addressed the Convention as follows:

Gentlemen of the Convention: I am deeply moved, and grateful beyond expression, for this manifestation of your confidence and respect. I fully realize that to be chosen the presiding officer of a Convention in which there are so many distinguished representatives of the people of Montana, and which has for its purpose the framing of an organic law for the future government of the state, is a rare and distinctive honor, of which any man may justly be proud. I am not unmindful of the grave responsibilities and difficulties incident to the position, and I accept it, relying confidently upon your indulgence and co-operation. We have reached an eventful era in the history of our country. Montana, whose origin in the wildest regions of the west over a quarter of a century ago some of you have witnessed, has, notwithstanding the disadvantages and embarrassments that attend a territorial form of government, experienced a phenomenal development, and stands to-day without a peer among the territories, the gem and the pride of the northwest. She is now about to put off the garb of territorial existence and assume the dignity of statehood, and the work of this transition is confined to our hands. While we may well congratulate ourselves upon the honor that has been conferred upon us, we should be admonished that there are likewise most solemn and important duties imposed upon us. We are to build a structure that shall exist through the ages to come; that shall exert an influence for good or evil upon the destinies of generations yet unborn. It is a work which commends itself to our most serious consideration; a work which challenges the exercise of our best and noblest faculties—a work to which we should bend our best energies, and to which we should subordinate every selfish, personal and partisan consideration, to the end that we may present a constitution that shall be worthy of the State; that shall be acceptable to the people, and that will enable Montana to embrace the golden opportunity now first presented, and which, if neglected, may long be deferred, to take the proud position to which she is entitled in the great sisterhood of states. I thank you, gentlemen, for the honor you have conferred upon me.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, in the matter of the election of permanent officers, I offer the following resolution:

The Resolution was sent up to the President's desk, and read by the Clerk, as follows:

Resolved, That the following named subordinate officers be elected by the Convention:

Chief Clerk.....	W. H. Todd
Engrossing and Enrolling Clerk.....	G. H. Stanton
Sergeant-at-Arms	Samuel Alexander
Messenger	Eugene Dickenson
Chaplain.....	H. E. Clowes
Watchman.....	J. M. Kay

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was duly seconded.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the following substitute:

The substitute was sent to the President's desk, and read by the Clerk, as follows:

Resolved, That the following named persons be declared elected subordinate officers of this Convention:

Chief Clerk.....	James B. Wells
Enrolling and Engrossing Clerk.....	John R. Eddy
Sergeant-at-Arms.....	Capt. L. F. Wyman
Watchman	George Lee
Chaplain.....	Rev. R. E. Smith

The substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow was duly seconded.

The President: Gentlemen, the question is upon the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow. Are you ready for the question?

The President then put the question, and a division was called for, which resulted as follows: Ayes, 33; noes, 38.

The President: The amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow is lost; the question now is upon the original resolution. Are you ready for the question?

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clark: I move you, sir, as an amendment to this resolution, that the officers for the different places named in the resolution be elected separately, and in the order named, and not consecutively.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clark: I rise to the point of order, Mr. President, that the gentleman is not in order; that the question has already been submitted and a vote taken on the division.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clark: I understand, Mr. President, that we have taken a vote upon the amendment offered, and that the original resolution has not come forward; and until that time, other amendments will be in order.

The President: The Chair sustains the gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Craven).

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clark offers an amendment—that the officers of this Convention be elected separately and by ballot.

Mr. Toole of Lewis and Clark: I call for the ayes and noes upon the amendment.

The vote was then taken, which resulted as follows: Ayes, 35; noes, 35.

The President: The amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Craven) is lost. The motion now is that the names in the resolution submitted by the gentleman from Cascade shall be declared elected.

The President then put the motion, and the same was duly carried.

The Chair then stated that the Hon. Henry N. Blake, Chief Justice of the Territory, was ready to administer the oath of office to the officers elected.

The said officers appeared at the bar of the House, and were duly sworn in by the Chief Justice.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I desire to offer a resolution.

The resolution was sent to the Clerk's desk.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow will now be read.

The Clerk then read the resolution, as follows:

"Resolved, That the delegates in this Convention assembled do declare, on behalf of the people of the proposed State of Montana, that we adopt the Constitution of the United States."

The motion was duly seconded by Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clark.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I desire to explain to the Convention, with reference to this resolution, that, under the Act of Congress under which we are assembled, there is a provision that the delegates elected and assembled in the Convention shall declare, on behalf of the people of the Territory, that they adopt the Constitution of the United States, and thereupon shall proceed to form a state constitution. I desire to read here the two lines in the fourth section of the Act in relation to the subject. (The gentleman read the part of the Act referred to.) This, it would seem to me, under this law, is a pre-requisite to proceeding to the formation of the constitution. Of course it is the desire of the whole Convention to comply as strictly as possible with the provisions of this Act, and with that end in view I offer this resolution, and move its adoption before any other proceedings are had.

The President: The question is upon the resolution offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The Chair then stated the question, and the motion was duly carried.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, would it not be necessary to make a record upon this question?

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move that the ayes and noes be called, so that there can be a record of the vote.

The Clerk then called the roll. All of the members present, without exception, voted in favor of the resolution.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I desire to offer another resolution.

The resolution was sent to the President's desk, and read by the Clerk, as follows:

"Resolved, By this Convention, that permanent seats be assigned to the members in the following manner: Slips of paper, numbered consecutively from 1 to 25, inclusive, to correspond with the number of districts represented, shall be prepared by the Clerk and mixed together in a hat. The Sergeant-at-Arms shall draw the slips from the hat one at a time, and the members of the districts whose number corresponds with the number on the slip first drawn shall have the first choice of seats. The members of the district whose number is next drawn shall have the second choice; and so on, until all the numbers are drawn from the hat. Members of a district may select seats adjoining or separate, as they prefer. If any member of the district is not present at the drawing, his associates from that district may select his seat."

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was duly seconded.

The President stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, there is one suggestion I would like to make. Under the resolution, as I understand it, the members will all be occupying their seats. I move to amend, that when the drawing commences, the members retire beyond the bar of the House, and when the names are drawn, select their seats and keep them until the drawing is concluded, under penalty of forfeiture if vacated.

The amendment was duly seconded.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I accept the amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that an exception be made to this resolution, and that Mr. McAdow of Fergus, Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow, and Mr. Parberry of Meagher, and also the President, be entitled to choose their seats.

The amendment was duly seconded.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I said nothing about that in the resolution, as I looked upon that as a matter of courtesy upon which there was no necessity of a resolution.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: I would suggest the name of Mr. Robinson.

Mr. Collins of Cascade also suggested the name of Mr. Brown of Choteau.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow also suggested the name of Mr. Marshall.

Mr. Eaton of Park also suggested the name of Mr. Burleigh, and Mr. Burleigh thereupon declined the courtesy.

Mr. President: All the amendments to the original resolution have been accepted excepting the gentlemen from Silver Bow, from Meagher, from Fergus, from Missoula, from Choteau, and from Deer Lodge out of the number of those who shall select their seats by lot. The question now is upon the original motion as amended. Are you ready for the question?

The President then stated the question and the same was duly carried.

The Clerk then proceeded to the drawing of the seats by lot, and the members took their seats according to the order of the choice drawn by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. Toole of Lewis and Clark: Mr. President, I offer the following resolution:

(Resolution sent up.)

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clark will now be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

"Resolved, That a committee of eleven be appointed on rules and order of business, and that pending the adoption of permanent rules, that the rules of the Montana Constitutional Convention of 1884 be adopted for the temporary government of this convention."

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clark: I move the adoption of the resolution. Motion was duly seconded.

The President then stated the motion, and the same was duly carried.

The President: I will name as the members of that committee, Messrs. J. K. Toole, Eaton, Cooper, Robinson, Carpenter, Knowles, Callaway, Middleton, Bickford, Warren and J. R. Toole.

What is the further pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I desire to offer a resolution.

Mr. President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Missoula will now be read.

Clerk read resolution, as follows:

"Resolved, That it be the sense of this Convention that for the purpose of expediting the work thereof, there be employed in addition to the employees allowed by law, one official stenographer, one chief clerk, five additional clerks, who shall be assigned to such duties as may be found most expedient; three pages to assist the messenger in the performance of his duties, and one assistant sergeant-at-arms. That such employees shall receive such compensation as may be provided by resolution of this Convention."

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was duly seconded.

The President stated the motion and the same was duly carried.

The President: The Chair would suggest that there be a committee appointed for the distribution of the work of this Convention.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clark: Does not that come under the jurisdiction of the rules on order of business?

The President: It is a matter that requires considerable thought and care, and in order to distribute this work properly, the Chair is of the opinion that a separate committee should be appointed for that purpose.

Mr. Loud of Custer offered the following resolution, which was read by the Clerk:

"Resolved, That a committee to consist of one member from each district be appointed to report to this Convention upon the best mode of proceeding, and including such committees as in its judgment shall be necessary."

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clark: I would ask the gentleman offering the resolution if that is not already covered by the resolution concerning the committee on rules and procedure which has just been adopted?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I would like to have the resolution passed a moment ago re-read; I think it covers both the order of business and the rules.

Clerk re-read the resolution.

Mr. Loud of Custer: I would ask that the other resolution be now read.

Clerk then read the resolution offered by the gentleman from Custer.

Mr. Toole of Lewis and Clark: I think it was the contemplation, Mr. Chairman, that the committee on rules should be charged with that responsibility. They seem to follow the rules of the old Convention and they provide for the order of business, committees, etc. Of course I defer to the judgment of the Convention with reference to it; but I anticipated that at the time of the introduction of the resolution.

The President: Is the resolution of the gentleman from Custer seconded?

A Member: I second the resolution.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I move to amend the motion of the gentleman from Custer by striking out "committee of one from each district" and inserting "committee of five." The committee is entirely too large.

A Member: I second the amendment.

The motion was then stated by the President.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, it occurs to me that the resolution that has just been adopted provides for the temporary use of the rules of the old Convention. I have no copy of those rules, but I suppose they provide for such circumstances and contests as are necessary. It seems to me that this is a matter that is somewhat in conflict with the resolution just adopted.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, the resolution which has just been adopted provides that the rules of the last Constitutional Convention of this Territory shall be adopted for the temporary government of this Convention. Among other things those rules provide: (The gentleman then read that part of the rules of the Convention of 1884 relating to the committees.) Those are the standing committees as provided by the rules of the Convention. I think they cover the entire ground.

Mr. Loud of Custer: With the consent of my second, I will withdraw my resolution.

Mr. President: There is an amendment offered to it which is now before the Convention.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I withdraw the amendment.

The President: The motion and amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer is now withdrawn. What is the further pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Toole of Deer Lodge: In view of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Missoula, I move you, sir, to proceed now to the election of the extra officers enumerated in the resolution.

Motion duly seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, I move as an amendment, that we postpone the election of the officers mentioned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, when we at that hour proceed to the election of the officers.

Amendment duly seconded.

The Chair then stated the amendment, and the same was carried by a vote of 32 to 23.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to inquire if the rules which have just been adopted here are in existence so that the members can avail themselves of them. There should be some arrangement made whereby we can have a copy.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clark stated for the information of the gentleman from Custer that there were no extra copies of the rules to be had.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I understand, Mr. President, that the rules under which we are now acting provide that the hour for the meeting of the Convention shall be 10 o'clock in the morning. I therefore, since we can do no business until this committee on rules make their report, move that we now adjourn.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: It appears to me that a motion was made that we proceed to elect the extra officers provided in the resolution; then that motion was amended that that be postponed until to-morrow morning. The motion as amended has never been put to the Convention.

The President then stated the motion, which was duly carried.

Mr. President: The question now is on the adjournment.

The Chair then stated the question on the adjournment, which was duly carried, and the Chair then announced that the Convention stood adjourned until 10 o'clock on the morning of Saturday, July 6th, A. D. 1889.

THIRD DAY.

Saturday, July 6th, 1889.

The Convention called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

Clerk called the roll.

The President: I would like the pleasure of the Convention upon the reading of the minutes at the present time. The Chief Clerk is somewhat confused in the multiplicity of his duties and is hardly in shape to present them at this time.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that we dispense with the reading of the minutes until Monday morning.

The President: If there is no objection the reading of the minutes will be dispensed with until Monday morning.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, the Committee on Rules have instructed me to make a full report and ask for its present consideration. (The report sent to the Clerk's desk.)

The President: The report of the Committee on Rules is before the house, if there is no objection it will be read.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Cascade will now be read.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows: Resolved, That the following named officers be declared officers of this Convention:

Chief Stenographer.....	C. P. Connolly
Watchman	George Lee
Clerk	Jno. Kay
Clerk	Edward Kerr
Clerk	John Trumbull
Clerk.....	E. C. Garrett
Clerk	Lee Swords
Page.....	W. D. Alexander
Assistant Chief Clerk.....	William Taylor
Doorkeeper and Asst. Sergt.-at-Arms.....	Wm. Greene

The President: What is your pleasure concerning this resolution?

Mr. Loud of Custer: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, I think the resolution offered by the gentleman from Cascade is at present uncalled for.

and I think it proper that this resolution should be laid on the table; I therefore make that motion.

The President: The motion is not before the house yet. Is the resolution seconded?

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I second the resolution.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, before the Convention is called to vote upon the resolution I wish to say that that was made the special order yesterday evening for this morning at 10 o'clock and that the officers named in the resolution were the ones that the Convention provided for yesterday at the afternoon session.

The President: It has been moved and seconded that the resolution as read be adopted. The gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Hershfield) moves to lay the motion on the table.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I second the amendment.

The President then put the amendment and declared the same lost.

The President: The question is now upon the original resolution.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, let me inquire whether the resolution embraces the name of William L. Green for Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms.

The Clerk stated that by permission of Mr. Collins of Cascade the name of William L. Green for Doorkeeper and Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms is inserted in the resolution.

The Chair then put the motion, which was duly carried.

The President: The report of the Committee on Rules will now be read if there be no objection.

The Clerk then read report of Committee on Rules.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, the Committee on Rules having under consideration the subject of rules for the government of this body had before them the copy of the rules of the Constitutional Convention of this Territory in 1884 and it was the testimony of those who were members of that Convention that the business of the Convention was disposed of orderly and with dispatch under those rules; and we therefore took them very largely as they were. Some modifications have been recommended by the committee, among others one relating to printing. Instead of having printed generally all resolutions and propositions intended to be embraced in the constitution the committee thought it advisable that only such matters should be printed as should be reported back from a standing or select committee, and in case it was reported favorably it was to be printed as a matter of course, and in the event it was reported adversely the printing of the resolution or proposition was to be within the discretion of the Convention. We provided further that the printing committee should have control of the subject of printing. In order that the original propositions and resolutions might not be lost or mislaid by going into the hands of the printer we thought it advisable to provide that it should be the duty of the printing committee to see that certified copies of the matter were made and placed in the hands of the printer to be by him printed and returned as soon as possible; provided, however, that a greater number than 150 should not be printed. I believe that those are substantially the changes and modifications made in the rules of the former Convention, with the exception that we thought it advisable to add to the numbers of the special committees which were provided for by those rules, and I think we added about in the proportion of two or three to each committee. Where it was three we added so as to make it five and so along down the list of committees.

Upon the reading of the rules I discover that one was omitted which was recommended by the committee and which I will now ask to present, and in connection with it that it may be presented with those rules so that when they are voted on they may all be considered together.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Chairman of the committee in reference to the rule relating to the President pro tem.

The rule provides that in the absence of the President there shall be a President pro tem. Does that mean for the day or for the entire session of the Convention?

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clark: It will provide simply during the absence of the President.

The President: The additional rule reported by the Committee on Rules will now be read.

The Clerk read the rule.

The President: Gentlemen, what is your pleasure concerning the report of the Committee on Rules?

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, it strikes me that one of the most important committees here is the one on apportionment and representation, and it is one of the smallest committees in point of numbers. I see that the Committee on Mines and Mining has nine members, and that on Apportionment and Representation seven members. I move to make the Committee on Apportionment and Representation eleven members.

The President: I suggest to the gentleman from Custer that it might be well to receive this report and then take it up.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clark: I move you, Mr. Chairman, that the report be received for the consideration of the Convention.

Motion duly seconded.

The Chairman put the question and the same was duly carried.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I now put my motion and ask that the Committee on Apportionment and Representation be increased from seven to eleven members.

Motion was duly seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the Committee on Apportionment and Representation be increased from seven to eleven members. Are you ready for the question?

Mr. Toole of Lewis and Clark: Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Apportionment and Representation, as suggested by the gentleman from Custer, is certainly a very important committee; but I think it was the idea of the Committee on Rules that owing to the importance of the matter, and with the view of being able to have a fair representation of the members present, for the consideration of business, and in view of the fact that if there should any difficulty arise in the Convention, as invariably has been the case in the legislative assemblies of the Territory, it would probably arise in the adjustment and apportionment of this question of representation, and that we could perhaps dispose of it, better reach a fair and just conclusion by a smaller committee, than we could by a larger representation, and I think that it was with this view that the Committee on Rules recommended the number. I think that it will result advantageously to the convention by having a smaller representation, rather than by having a large one.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I suggest that my views are correct. It is very seldom one man will disagree with himself; but we are here acting for several Counties where there are large interests, it seems to me that it is nothing more than right that the people from the different localities in the Territory have pretty fair representation, and have something to say. I must stand by my motion.

The Chairman then put the question, and a division being called for by Mr. Burleigh, 30 members voted in the affirmative, and 27 in the negative.

The Chair then announced that the motion was carried, and that the committee would stand eleven on apportionment and representation.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, as that committee has been increased, I make a motion that the Committee on County, City and Town Government be increased from seven to eleven members. I believe that is one of the most important committees of all: its scope is far reaching, and it is a subject in which all of us in all sections are interested, and I believe that the committee should include the diverse views of the Convention, and of the different portions of the Territory. I would like to see it increased to eleven or fifteen. I make a motion, however, to increase it to eleven.

Br. Burleigh of Custer seconded the motion.

The Chairman then stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, it appears to me that the gentlemen place a great deal of weight upon the matter of the number of persons upon a committee. Now I believe that so far as the power and duties of committees in the Constitutional Convention are concerned, they differ materially from similar committees in a legislative body, in this, that I believe it is not wise on the part of a standing committee whose duty it is to submit articles and sections proposed to be incorporated in the constitution, to accompany those articles with anything but the mere statement that that is their report; so that in increasing this committee to eleven from the sixteen counties in the Territory, does not give each county representation. If every county is entitled to be heard, we had better have a member from each county, and the more members you add to a committee of that kind the more cumbersome and unwieldy it is. It is a matter that comes before the Convention for full and careful consideration. Every member of the Convention has a right to express his views to that committee; and I believe on any proposition, whether it be judiciary or otherwise, a committee of seven can accomplish more work than a committee of eleven; and when you increase a committee beyond that, it becomes all the more cumbersome and unwieldy, and less consideration, in my judgment, should be given to their report. I think that the resolution as reported by the Committee on Rules gives each committee a sufficient number of persons to do the work of this Convention, and do it well. They submit simply what is proposed to be incorporated or embodied in the constitution. It then becomes the property of the Convention, and is referred to the Committee of the Whole, and is considered there from every possible point of view, and in the interests of every locality. I do not see any good purpose or judgment in increasing this committee.

Mr. Stapleton of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I believe that the committee appointed yesterday was competent to decide this matter. I believe that all these questions were fully discussed before that committee, and if we now go to changing the number of these standing committees the different gentlemen in the convention will find that some other committees are not as fully represented as they would like to have them, and each member of the different committees will think that his committee is the most important, and would like to have it increased. I believe, if we undertake now to increase the number of these standing committees, there will be no end of it. I believe in supporting the action of the committee, for the reason that I believe they have fully considered the matter.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, I have no doubt that the two gentlemen who have just addressed the Convention are sincere in their opinions, and stand ready to justify them with argument; but the reasons which satisfy their minds may not fully satisfy me that I am not right. Now I am in favor of the largest representation that we can get, and I only wish that it would be possible, in the nature of things, in adopting a constitution for the government of the people of Montana, that every voter, every thinking man, could be present and take part in its deliberations. But instead, they have sent here their representatives. Instead of sending a democracy here, they have sent their representatives, and we are a sort of republican institution—a representative institution. It seems to me the larger these committees are, the more nearly we will come to representing the will of the people who sent us here. I am in favor of large committees, in favor of large representation, and as we get further on in the work of this Convention, if I am able to be here, I shall certainly favor a large representation of the members of the Convention in the different work of the convention.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I think that the number of committeemen would place every member of this Convention upon about three committees. Except where it is necessary to give a committee information as to certain localities, I do not believe that it is good policy to increase these committees, for this reason, that after you get the committees together, it will be found that it will very often occur that you can not get a majority of that committee to act, and hence that these small committees are really better where it is not necessary to have a committee large enough to give special information of the different localities. In relation to towns and cities, what is good for one town or city or county in this Territory, is going to be good for all. The rule is to be general; it is not to be special; and I think that it will be found that our committees are really too large now. As to popular representation, the idea that a committee which is to take up a matter and consider it, is to be a popular assembly, is new to me in a legislative body. We are a popular assembly here, and the reports of these committees will be received in this popular assembly; but when we come to consider matters in a committee, it is a special tribunal, if I may use that word, to frame and put the sentiments of this Convention into proper form and present them here to be considered.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, the Committee on Rules itself believes that important committees should have a large representation. They have appointed 15 upon the Judiciary Committee, and 11 on two or three other important committees; and so by their own report and by their own action, they say important committees should have a large representation. Now I claim that the Committee on Town, County and City Governments—a committee which reports upon the fundamental law for every county, every town and every city in Montana—is on a par with the most important committee upon the list, and that taking the policy of the committee itself as a basis, this committee should be increased to a proportionate size. Now, the report of any committee in this convention carries with it great weight. Their report, unless fraught by secret opposition or by a large majority, is liable to pass this Convention; and I feel that this committee having to take into consideration these important matters, and take into consideration the diverse views and sentiments of this Convention, and of the people back of this Convention—I believe that instead of seven or eleven, it should be sixteen—one from each county. It may be necessary that the entire form of town, city and county governments, in the interests of the future State, be changed. It may be necessary that they have a different set of officers, different safeguards, different policies and different systems, and it may be best, and I think it is best, to have all the views upon this question, and have a large committee decide, and decide it promptly, so that when it comes before this Convention, we can take the formative views of this committee and pass them without lengthy debate. I believe this committee is a very important one, as important as the Judiciary Committee itself, and a large committee should consider the questions that will come before it, so that a majority can lay down a definite policy; and that definite policy laid down by this committee should be the policy of the Convention.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Mr. President, there is one proposition that suggests itself to my mind that has not been brought out. It seems to me that in all probability the question of the holding over of county officers may come before this committee, and if so, it does seem to me that it would be well to have each county represented on that committee; and I am sorry, indeed, while I am in favor of the amendment offered by my friend from Cascade—I am sorry that he did not make it sixteen, so that each county might be represented on this committee. We have come here from our respective counties, having heard expressions from all sides upon this question, and I believe, as the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) has said, that the reports of these committees are likely to be adopted. It is proper and right, and I believe it will expedite matters, if this committee can be increased to the number as enumerated by the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins); and therefore I favor the amendment.

The Chair then stated the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade, and the same was declared lost.

The President: What is your further pleasure concerning this report?

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I desire to offer an amendment to the last rule sent up by the committee—I do not know the number of it—but it has reference to resolutions to be incorporated in the Constitution being read at length. I desire to offer an amendment to that, in addition, on the final passage, such resolutions or incorporations, or both, in all cases be taken by ayes and noes, and entered on the minutes.

The President: There is an amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow to Rule 29.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I have conferred with a number of the committee, and I am authorized by them to accept this amendment.

The President: The amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow has been accepted. Rule 29, as amended, will read as follows:

The Clerk read the rule as amended.

The President: The delegation from Cascade county, and also the gentleman from Meagher (Dr. Parberry), wish to be excused until Monday afternoon next.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Mr. President, Mr. Joy of Park county was unexpectedly called away last evening, and I move that he be unanimously accorded leave of absence from last evening until Monday morning.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I would like to be excused from the session until Tuesday, on account of business of importance.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: Mr. President, would it not be well to know what time these members can come back, so that we can adjourn to that time?

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I move that when we adjourn, we adjourn until 2 o'clock on Monday.

The motion was duly seconded.

The President then stated the motion, and the same was carried.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow will be excused until Tuesday, if there be no objection.

Mr. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I desire to offer a resolution.

The resolution was sent to the Clerk's desk and read, as follows:

"Resolved, That a committee, consisting of seven members, be added to the rules, and designated a Committee on Labor."

The motion was duly seconded.

Mr. Toole of Deer Lodge: I presume it is unnecessary, Mr. President, to say that there are a great majority of our people in this Territory who may be designated as laboring men, and a majority of the men who will pass upon this constitution are men who are known and designated as laboring men; and it is only just and proper that we should recognize these men and give them recognition. For that reason I have suggested this resolution.

The President put the question, and the same was duly carried.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, there is one slight change in the rule relating to reconsideration, if I understand it, that I think might properly be corrected. There is a little apparent obscurity in the matter, and I would like to have the rule read.

The Clerk read Rule 42.

Mr. Burleigh: I think, Mr. President, in order to make it a little plainer, the word "majority" should be stricken out, and "any member who voted in the affirmative" should be substituted. That is the usual phraseology in rules of that kind, and of course, while it may be understood, it is not as clearly expressed as I would like to have it.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I do not think there can be any objection to the change, but the rule as stated is taken verbatim from one of the rules of the House of Representatives; I think it is unambiguous as it stands, and that the language employed is the proper language.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, I withdraw my amendment.

The President: The amendment of the gentleman from Custer has been withdrawn.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move, Mr. President, that the report of the Committee on Rules, as amended, be now adopted.

The Chair stated the motion, and the same was duly put and carried.

The President: A resignation has been handed in, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk then read the resignation of Mr. John Kay as watchman, and the resignation was duly accepted.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the rules which have just been adopted provide that all printing of the Convention be done under the direction and control of the Committee on Printing. I presume the President of this Convention will not be able to announce the committees before Monday, and, in view of the fact that the members generally desire to have a copy of the resolutions, I move that the Clerk of this Convention be authorized to have printed two hundred copies of the resolutions adopted by the Convention today, as soon as practicable, so that we may be able to have them here on Monday.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair then stated the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move an amendment by adding the words "that the rule be suspended." The report of the committee has been adopted and it is necessary to suspend the rules.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I accept the amendment.

The Chair then put the motion, and the same was duly carried.

The President: The gentleman from Jefferson County (Mr. Bullard) desires to be excused until Monday; if there be no objection leave of absence will be granted him.

Mr. McAdow of Fergus: Mr. President, would it not be advisable to swear in the additional officers of the Convention?

The President: The Chief Justice announces that the members can be sworn in in his office after the adjournment of the Convention. The additional officers elected will wait upon the Hon. Judge Blake and be sworn in, at his convenience.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: I move that we now adjourn.

The motion was duly seconded and carried, and the Convention adjourned until Monday, July 8, 1889, at 2 o'clock P. M.

FOURTH DAY.

Monday, July 8th, 1889—2 O'clock P. M.

Convention called to order, the President in the Chair.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: I would say to the gentlemen of the Convention, that Mr. Knippenberg asks to be excused until tomorrow, also Mr. McAdow and Mr. Brown.

Mr. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. Gaylord of Silver Bow desires to be excused this afternoon.

The President: If there be no objection these gentlemen will be excused.

The Chaplain then offered prayers.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Mr. President, if it be in order, I would suggest that Mr. Fields of the Twentieth District is now present, and if the time is appropriate it would be well that he should take the oath in order to take part in the proceedings of the Convention.

The President: The gentleman from Park will please come forward and take the oath of office.

Mr. Fields of Park was then sworn in by the Chief Justice.

The Clerk read the journal of the first day's proceedings, and, after one or two corrections, the minutes were approved.

The Clerk then read the minutes of the second day.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, as Mr. Fields, the member from Park, was unavoidably detained by an accident, I would ask the unanimous consent of the Convention, in case he wishes to do so, that he be allowed to have his name placed among those adopting the Constitution of the United States.

The motion was duly seconded, stated and carried.

Mr. Fields' name was called, and his name was inserted in the minutes as voting in the affirmative on the resolution adopting the Constitution of the United States.

The Chair announced that there being no objection to the journal of the second day the same stood approved.

The journal of the third day's proceedings was then read.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, it seems to me that there is one part of the minutes that is not sufficiently specific. It says that an amendment was proposed by Mr. Toole, and it seems to me that it was an amendment to a rule. It does not appear whether it was an amendment to a motion or to a rule; as a matter of fact, it was an amendment to a rule. I think the words "amendment to the rule" should be inserted, and I so move.

The motion was duly seconded and carried.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, it has been suggested to me that the amendment should be worded somewhat differently, so as to read "an amendment to the report of the Committee on Rules."

The Clerk then read the minutes as amended.

There being no further objection to the minutes of the third day's proceedings, the President announced that they stood approved.

The President: The Clerk will read a communication.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"Helena, Montana, July 8, 1889.

"To the President and Members of the Constitutional Convention:

"The Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Montana, in conference assembled, sends greeting, and by their committee extends a cordial invitation to attend a lecture upon the issues of the hour, from a temperance standpoint, to be delivered by Dr. A. B. Leonard of New York, this afternoon at 4 o'clock, in St. Paul's M. E. Church, opposite the Court House.

Respectfully submitted.

(Signed) M. J. HALL,
GEORGE M. RYDER, Committee."

The President: The Chair desires to state in this connection that he is not yet quite ready to announce the committees, but will be ready tomorrow morning; or, if it please the Convention to hold a meeting this evening, I will be ready to announce the committees this evening, at any time they may fix.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, in view of the fact that the President is unable at this time to announce the standing committees, I move that the Convention take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I ask the gentleman to indulge me while I offer this resolution.

The resolution was sent up to the Clerk's desk.

The President: The resolution of the gentleman from Custer will now be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"Resolved, That the territorial officers, including the Judges of the Supreme Court, be granted the privilege of the floor of this Convention."

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move to amend, so as to include the members of the Constitutional Convention of 1884.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I accept the amendment.

The motion as amended was then put by the President, and the same was duly carried.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Now, Mr. President, I renew the motion which I made a moment ago, that we take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening, at which time no other business will be transacted except the announcement of the standing committees.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chair then stated the motion. Same was duly carried.

Adjourned until 8 o'clock P. M. July 8, 1889.

Eight P. M., July 8, 1889.

Convention called to order, the President in the Chair.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Gentlemen of the Convention, I am now ready to announce the permanent committees.

The Chair then read the list of committees, and desired the pleasure of the Convention.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move you, sir, that the list of committees be referred to the Committee on Printing, with instructions to have 150 copies printed.

The motion was seconded and carried.

The Convention, on motion, adjourned.

FIFTH DAY.

Tuesday, July 9th, 1889, 10 O'clock A. M.

Convention was called to order by the President.

Clerk called the roll.

Chaplain offered prayer.

The journal of the previous day was read, and there being no corrections, the Chair announced that the same stood approved.

Mr. Joy of Park sent a resolution to the Clerk's desk.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Park will now be read.

Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

"Resolution on Preamble: We, the people of the State of Montana, grateful to Almighty God for affording us an opportunity to do so, hereby ordain and establish this Constitution."

The President: If there be no objection, the resolution will be referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke sent up a resolution to the Clerk's desk.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke will now be read by the Clerk.

Clerk then read the resolution, as follows:

"Resolution on Preamble: We, the people of Montana, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to secure its blessings, and a more independent and perfect government, establish justice, insure tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Montana."

The President: If there be no objections, the resolution offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke will be referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following resolution, and ask that the rules be suspended if necessary.

The President: The gentleman from Custer offers a resolution.

Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved; That a committee to consist of eleven members be added to the standing committees of this Convention, to be known as "The Committee on Irrigation," to which committee shall be referred all matters pertaining to the subject of irrigation, coming before this body.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the suspension of the rules and the adoption of the resolution.

Motion seconded by Mr. Loud of Custer.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Agriculture to report at as early a day as possible.

Mr. Muth of Lewis & Clarke seconded the motion.

The Chair stated the question and the same was put and carried.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: Mr. President, the Judiciary Committee is one of the largest and most important of the committees, and probably will have as much or more work to do than any other of the committees; therefore I move that a Clerk be assigned to the Judiciary Committee.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, it seems to me that the Judiciary Committee ought to be entitled to select its own clerk. If there is any choice in the matter of clerks, it appears to me it ought to be left with the committee.

The President: That may be done by having leave of the Convention, according to Rule 35.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I do not mean by this motion that we should have an additional clerk to those already appointed; but I meant that one of the five should be assigned to the Judiciary Committee.

The Chair re-stated the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that one of the clerks already appointed be assigned to Committee Number 7—the Committee on Finances of the State.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The President: I would ask the gentleman from Cascade if it is meant by his motion that the committee shall have a clerk for the exclusive use of that committee?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I think the committee will need the exclusive use of a clerk; but when there is no necessity for his services, they will be turned over to the Convention.

The President: According to your resolution then, it would give the committee the preference of the clerk so long as he was required by the committee.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Mr. President, it seems to me as though some general rule ought to be adopted on this proposition. Here are five clerks and many committees. These clerks are to be assigned. The first five committees that shall ask for clerks will probably receive them, and the remaining committees will have no clerk, and in some way—I am not prepared to make the suggestion, even; but it seems to me as though some general rule should be adopted whereby these clerks could be used by all the committees. I suppose it would not be practicable to confine one clerk to any given committee. It might be hard work for the clerk; but I presume they should be divided around and used on the several committees. As I say, I am not prepared to make the suggestion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: As I recollect, that was the understanding that the adoption of the rules provided, that if each committee could not have its own clerk, he should be assigned to the committees for duties to be performed, subject to the directions of the chairman of the Convention.

The President: The Chair will state the motion, which has been moved and seconded, that one of the clerks selected by this Convention be assigned to Committee Number 7.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I think it is perfectly apparent from what has been said by the gentleman from Park that if the assignment of these clerks is made at this time, the result will be that there will be about 49 committees, of which 17 will feel that each is quite as important as the other, and that 17 will be left without any clerk, and the result of this will be, perhaps, to excite some feeling, and at least a great deal of inconvenience and disparity between these committees; and I therefore move as an amendment, Mr. President, that the President of this Convention be authorized to assign the clerks to the several committees from time to time as his judgment shall dictate, in order to secure the speedy transaction of business.

Motion was seconded.

The President: It has been moved and seconded that the President of the Convention be authorized to assign the clerks to the several committees as in his judgment he may deem it expedient to do so.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole), the mover of this amendment, if his amendment refers to the additional clerks. By the action of this Convention we have already assigned one of these clerks to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: So far as I am concerned, I am willing that the Judiciary Committee shall have one clerk. They will have the greater part of the work, and while I am expressing but my own views with reference to this, I am willing, so far as I am concerned, that that committee shall be entitled to a permanent clerk, and that the other four shall be assigned from time to time as the several committees shall require.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I believe it is right that I should express to the Convention at this early day my opinion, that it is a very unfortunate and untoward circumstance that we have a top-heavy committee, and I hope that it will not remain top-heavy during the session of the Convention. Now I am perfectly willing that the Chair shall distribute the clerks to the other committees as they are entitled to them; but I believe it is not right that the committee with the most members on it, with the most talent and with the most easy flow of graceful language, and the committee that even if it does endeavor so to do, will probably influence and control the action of this Convention during its entire session, should start in by trying to monopolize the working force of the Convention. My motion is certainly withdrawn in favor of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and I wish only this early in the Convention to express my regret that some committees are so very large, and others so very small; some have such very great influence, and others such very small influence. I withdraw my motion.

Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, if the gentleman withdraws his motion, then I make that as an original motion.

The President: The motion having been amended and the amendment withdrawn, if the gentleman accepts the amendment it will stand with the original resolution. The question now is upon the resolution as amended.

The Chair then put the motion and the same was carried.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I desire to ask whether any resolution has been adopted regarding the subject matter of the proposed constitution into sections, and referring it to those various committees, whether the committees will take charge as indicated by their titles without any further action of the Convention, or whether it shall be decided by the Chairman, as the different motions are to be considered.

The President: The Chair will state that there has been no resolution passed as to the distribution of the business of the different committees. The title of the various committees will indicate the work which shall properly go to them. Is there anything further to be presented to this Convention this morning?

Mr. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I move that we take a recess until 2 o'clock this P. M.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: If the gentleman will withdraw his motion for a moment, I desire to say as a member of the Printing Committee to the members here present, that if each member will furnish some member of the committee with a memorandum of the distance traveled, or the place from which he traveled, it will aid the committee in getting at the matter of mileage, and leave the matter to be settled as soon as possible. We deem it necessary to get the matter into the shape of a resolution, if the members will take it upon themselves to do so, that we may have some basis to aid us in arriving at the conclusions.

The President: The chairman of the Committee on Printing, Mileage and Contingent Expenses requests of the members of this Convention that they present to that committee all data concerning mileage, and all other matters pertaining thereto. The Chair would urge upon the members a prompt compliance with the request of the Printing Committee. Is there a second to the gentleman from Deer Lodge to take a recess?

A Member: I second the motion of the gentleman.

The Chair then put the motion and the same was duly carried, and the Convention took a recess until 2 o'clock P. M.

2 o'clock p. m.

The President called the Convention to order.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: I would state to the Convention that the gentleman from Jefferson (Mr. Bullard) was called away on professional business, and desires to be excused. If there be no objection, the gentleman will be excused.

The President: The oath of office has not been administered to the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Kohrs); if the gentleman will come forward, the Chief Justice will administer the oath of office.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, Mr. C. M. Webster is detained on account of sickness; I hope the Convention will excuse him until he is able to attend.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade announces that his colleague has been unavoidably detained, on account of illness; if there be no objection, he will be excused.

The President then announced, the Chief Justice not being present, that Judge Liddell would administer the oath of office to the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Kohrs).

Mr. Kohrs was then sworn in by Judge Liddell.

The President: The chair would state to the gentleman from Deer Lodge that it was necessary for the Convention to pass a resolution supporting the Constitution of the United States. That the gentleman may have an opportunity of voting upon it, the clerk will call his name, so that his vote may be recorded on that proposition.

The Clerk then called the name of Conrad Kohrs, and Mr. Kohrs responded Aye.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, the Committee on Mileage are ready to report as to the matter of mileage for the members.

The report was sent up to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk then read the report of the Committee on Mileage.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention concerning this report?

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the report.

The motion was duly seconded.

The President then stated the motion, and the same was duly carried.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I desire to introduce the following resolution, and ask that it may be referred to the proper Committee.

The President: The resolution introduced by the gentleman from Yellowstone will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Resolution in Relation to County Officers. All county and precinct officers who may be in office at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall hold their respective offices for the full time for which they may have been elected, and until such time as their successors may be elected and qualified in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution and the laws now in force; and the official bonds of all such officers shall continue in full force and effect, as though this Constitution had not been adopted."

The President: If there be no objection, this resolution will be accepted, and referred to the Committee on City and Town Organizations.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: Mr. President, I desire to introduce a resolution.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Fergus will now be read.

The Clerk then read the resolution of the gentleman from Fergus, providing for the publication of the general laws passed by the Legislature.

The President: This resolution will be received, and referred to the Committee on Printing, etc., if there be no objection.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: Mr. President, I have another resolution which I desire to offer.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Fergus will now be read.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

"That the proper Committee is instructed to consider the question of trusts, and to report to the Convention a provision by which all combinations of capital to prevent competition and thereby raise the price of any necessary articles to the consumer, shall be effectually prevented."

The President: If there be no objection, this resolution will be received, and the chair is of the opinion that the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal is the proper one to which to refer this subject. If there be no objection, it will be referred to that Committee.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I desire to offer a resolution.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Custer will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Resolved, that the Chief Clerk be instructed to furnish to the Secretary of the Territory a certified copy of the report of the Committee on Report, Mileage, etc., relative to the mileage of the members of the Convention.

Mr. Middleton moved the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded, and the same was duly carried.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I move that it shall be the duty of the Chief Stenographer to transcribe daily into longhand the entire proceedings of the Convention, and deposit the manuscript with the President of the Convention daily, for reference to the Committee on Printing, for examination by the Convention, and be deposited with the Secretary of the Territory, and a receipt taken therefor. We have a Chief Stenographer, and some order must be made by the Convention for the purpose of transcribing, recording and doing something with it. I make this as a motion, so that it shall go before the Convention, and be amended, if necessary, or acted upon.

The Chairman stated the motion.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to inquire if it is possible for one man to do this work. If it is not, I should think there should be some arrangement made by which he could have assistants. It strikes me as being a most onerous duty. Let us throw some light upon this subject, and let us know whether he can perform this duty; if not, there should be some resolution passed to furnish him such assistants as is necessary to enable him to do the work.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, if the Convention passes this motion, or some other motion to this effect, then, certainly, we should introduce a resolution to pay the Stenographer for his services. I have a resolution drawn, which I will introduce, if no one else introduces a resolution to that effect, which prescribes that he shall receive for his services $15 a day and 20 cents a folio for transcribing the record, and that he shall furnish all the necessary labor for performing the whole duty.

The President: Do you offer that as an amendment?

Mr. Collins: No sir. I will introduce this motion, or some other motion to that effect, if the motion now before the Convention is carried.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: asked for the reading of the resolution, and the Clerk read same.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. President, I am, in limine, opposed to this proposition. First, it contemplates an impossibility upon the part of the Stenographer. Any one who is familiar with the work of a Stenographer in reporting the proceedings of this assemblage knows the utter impossibility of one man taking the proceedings of this Convention each day as they occur and transcribing them into longhand, and have them ready for us by the next day. That involves an utter impossibility as the work of one man. Now then, so far as the employment of a sufficient corps of reporters to do this work is concerned, and what is contemplated beyond this resolution as supplementary to it—what is suggested by the gentleman from Cascade County—it involves something which is a little beyond the reach of our power; that is, we have not the means. When he suggests the propriety of paying him $15 per day, and so much per folio for transcribing he is silent as to what fund that is to be paid from. It becomes as important to know where it is to be paid from as it is to draw the checks. Then, it is absolutely certain that the provisions of this act of Congress, this enabling act has made no provision of that character. We are not authorized to employ parties to perform this extra service and draw upon the fund of the United States for the purpose of paying the expenses of this Convention. If we present our order in favor of these parties for this service, the Secretary of the Territory will simply refuse payment of it.

which he has a legal right to do. From the examination of this question which I have given it, I am satisfied that he would be justified in refusing to pay these bills. Then the next question arises, what power has this Convention to appoint any other body of men, or what fund has it to draw upon? None whatever, except what is appropriated by the Congress of the United States. Now then, we have no power to bind a future Legislature of Montana, to compel them to make an appropriation to pay these bills; we have none whatever; it becomes only a matter of discretion and magnanimity, or generosity, on the part of a future Legislature to foot the bills that we may incur. Then I say that this resolution, and the whole thing, contemplates a matter that is beyond our reach. It is very easy to pass a resolution instructing the Stenographer to do this work, but the next question arises, how is he to get his pay for it? I say there is absolutely no provision whatever for the payment of these expenses incurred. If the Stenographer sees fit to chance a future Legislature to meet these bills, that becomes a question for his consideration alone, but we have no power now to pay him a farthing for anything he does, nor have we the power to pay some of these other officers that we have employed. Then I say, for these reasons, it seems to me it is impolitic to leap into contracting debts that we have no power in the world to liquidate. Then, unless it was something that was so absolutely essential that it could not be dispensed with, we have got to make some provision, in some way for paying it; but these are expenditures that, it seems to me, are not absolutely essential. Our Chief and Assistant Clerk report all the proceedings of this Convention that are essential. They are read from day to day, as they are taken, and they suffice for the practical purposes of the Convention; and what is beyond that, that the Stenographer must report to this Convention, is just simply what I am saying at the present time—what each of the gentlemen are saying—and what is to be reported tomorrow morning and read. It is time consumed, for all that the gentlemen of the Convention can hear and know what it is that is going on, and I imagine it will be no very great benefit to them to re-read tomorrow morning what has been said today in this Convention. And then I say that it is not a matter of absolute necessity, and, as we have not the means to pay for it, it seems to me it would not be wise to have it done. For these reasons I am opposed to it. Then, as to the other resolution, the suggestion that would be embodied supplementing the proposition now before us, I would have something to say upon that which it is not necessary to say at the present time. But, it seems to me that, as the resolution now stands, it is requiring an impossibility of the Stenographer, because he cannot report these proceedings and have them ready by tomorrow morning; it would take the work of four men, constantly employed—four Stenographers with compensation at $60 per day—to do what is contemplated in this resolution.

Mr. Collins: As the whole matter is before the house, both the duty of the Stenographer and the compensation of the extra clerks already selected by this body, I offer, with the consent of the Convention, another resolution to be appended to the first one.

The President: The Clerk will attach the resolution to the previous one, and read the entire resolution.

The Clerk read same.

Mr. Robinson: Do I understand the gentleman to offer that as a substitute to the other?

The President: It is all to be incorporated in the original motion. It becomes part of the original.

Mr. Robinson: I would have the further objection to that, Mr. President, that so far as it contemplates $15 shall be the entire compensation for the Stenographer for reporting the proceedings of the Convention and nothing for assistants outside, that would not be unreasonable; but from the knowledge of it I have from the practical work of writing out into long-hand, 20 cents a folio is too much. If we had a bank, like some other gentlemen, to foot the bills, I would have no objection to allowing the Stenographer 30 cents; but the limited means we have, and from the character of the work, and the practical knowledge I have of employing stenographers, men to transcribe, and compensation which is fixed by the statute of Montana Territory for work of that character, which is 5 cents per folio, which is not large I admit, but I know, in copying, that type-writing at 20 cents per folio is entirely disproportionate to the amount of work that is done; and to report the proceedings of this Convention it would cost us $100 a day—it would cost the State of Montana $100 a day to copy these proceedings; the bills would foot up that amount. Then I say that it behooves us to proceed in as economical way as we can in organizing a new state; and I think this compensation provided for by this resolution is disproportionate, and is wrong.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, it seems to me that we started out wrong in the beginning in appointing these committees. I think, before cutting the garment, we should have sized up the cloth, and not undertaken to cut a giant overcoat out of a chemise pattern. We should have employed just such committees and clerks as were necessary, and if there are not ample funds here to pay for them, we can follow the example of our forefathers, which was displayed in 1776, and which we propose to display here in getting the state into the Union, and that is, if the Federal Government is not willing to pay the bills necessarily incurred in creating this Convention and in passing from the territorial state into that of statehood, that the members assembled here release their per diem to compensate a sufficient corps of clerks in this Convention; and therefore I move to amend the resolution of my friend from Cascade, that the members of this Convention release so much of their per diem, to carry on the business of this Convention, as may be necessary.

The President: Is there a second to the motion?

Mr. Collins: Mr. President, it has been determined by the Convention. It is a part of its duty to take the entire proceedings of this Convention in short-hand. That has been already determined, so that it seems the Convention must determine what we shall do with that shorthand manuscript, and how much we shall give the Stenographer for his services. Now, I have inquired somewhat into this matter and I find that $15 per day is a very reasonable compensation for the entire services. Usually, for a body of this character or kind, or even for a legislative body, it requires two stenographers, one for one-half of the day and the other for the other half, and during the time the Stenographer is not taking shorthand notes, he is transcribing, with the assistance of other clerks. But here, our Stenographer proposes to take the whole of the proceedings—all of them—our forenoon and afternoon sessions, and during our night session, and to employ assistants to transcribe it into longhand, at his own expense. I am informed from reliable authority that 20 cents a folio is the legal rate in the eastern states for that work. The Stenographer has to reread his manuscript to another Stenographer, and that Stenographer again to transcribe his notes into longhand; that, in the present proceedings of the Convention, may take two or three clerks, but that, when the real work of the Convention begins, it will probably take four; at least four, if not more. So that, all things considered, the Convention having decided that we shall have a Stenographer, I believe that the rates herein mentioned are very reasonable. The Chief Stenographer of the Convention has consented to the resolution, at first insisting that he should have $20 per day, but has consented to the resolution as it now stands, $15 per diem, and will try to perform his duties. Now, if we have a Stenographer at all, I say that we must do something with the record. It won't do to allow him to keep that until the Convention adjourns, and then put it into an old trunk and burn it up. If we have a Stenographer, he should each day transcribe his notes, and do something with the transcript; and if it is not the sense of the Convention, then let us let our Stenographer out, and do with the simple minutes of our Chief Clerk. The salaries of the other officers are, I think, very reasonable. So far as the pay for those officers are concerned, that is something that is yet to come before the Convention. I believe though, for my own opinion, that in some part of our Constitution we can insert a clause which will provide that the first Legislative Assembly shall provide a certain amount of money, name it John Doe, Richard Roe, and so on, completing the entire list, and paying them in full for their services in this Convention. And if the people pass this Constitution that we adopt, with that proviso in it, the first Legislative Assembly must pay those bills, and that, if the worst comes to the worst, that the vouchers of this Convention to these employees are worth at least 90 cents on the dollar. But I believe, if this is done, there are plenty of gentlemen who will see that the bills of these employees are not discounted at all. I believe that is a matter for future consideration.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President: The main question that is brought up by reason of this resolution is as to our authority or ability to provide as to how these attaches shall be compensated for their services. It is true that the Act of Congress under which this Constitutional Convention has met and is attempting to act does not provide for the compensation or employment of more clerks or attaches than would be allowed to one branch of a territorial legislature; but here we are, 75 members, for the purpose of framing an organic law for the future state of Montana. It is absolutely out of the question to get along with the clerks and attaches provided for in that enabling act. The question has been touched upon by the gentleman from Cascade, as to the power of this Convention by ordinance to require the first state legislature to pay off these extra expenses; and I will say that I have examined that question to some extent, and the authorities upon the subject, and am satisfied that the Convention has no such power. However, there can be no doubt but what the first legislature that meets in the State of Montana will provide for the compensation of such clerks, stenographers and attaches, as this Convention may deem it wise and necessary and expedient to employ, provided that their compensation is fixed at something reasonable, and I do not think there will be any difficulty in the matter of vouchers being issued under the direction of this Convention, signed by the Chief Clerk and President, being negotiated in the banks of this City, perhaps for 100 cents on the dollar, and wait and run their chances upon what a future legislature will do. But when a question of that kind comes before a legislature in the future, the matter will then come up as to the reasonableness of the compensation attempted to be fixed by this Convention, and I submit that, so far as the compensation of the Stenographer, as provided in that resolution, in my judgment, it is unreasonable; it is too much. I do not believe, on the other hand, that it is possible for one stenographer to do this work; I do not believe he can find any clerks that can transcribe his notes; I do not believe he can find another stenographer who can take his shorthand notes and transcribe them into longhand. I believe that we should have two or three, or more, stenographers, sufficient to take down the entire proceedings of this Convention, and pay each one of those stenographers a reasonable compensation—something that the Legislature in the future would say was reasonable, and would not hesitate to provide for. The gentleman from Deer Lodge has suggested that perhaps we had better get along without the stenographer. I do not believe that that would be the part of good judgment. Two or three states in the Union did not provide for the keeping of the record of the debates in their Constitutional Conventions; all that they have of the record is simply the published Journal of the Proceedings; and, so far as I have been able to learn, the historical societies of those states, and their supreme courts, would find almost invaluable a record of the debates which took place in those conventions, of which there is no record; and I believe we should provide not only for the publication of the Journal, but for the taking down and transcribing of all of the debates—the entire proceedings of this Convention—and make provision, before we get through, for their publication; that that should be done by a sufficient number of stenographers; that each one should take down shorthand notes to the extent that he could transcribe, and bring here the next day, to be referred, as the other portion of the gentleman's resolution provides. But I do not believe that if the compensation of the stenographer is fixed as provided for in that resolution that the resolution when it comes before the Legislature, will be allowed. I believe it is too much, and that it ought not to be allowed in that kind of way; and it seems to me, that if we get started and find out we have not stenographers enough, we can provide for another one; and when we get further along in the Convention, if the work becomes more arduous, provide for more, so that the proceedings may be taken in full and transcribed in 24 or 48 hours. But for the resolution to go through as it is now, I think, would be a blunder, and I should certainly, although I am in favor of sufficient clerks to do the work of this Convention, and do it well and speedily, and am in favor of paying them a reasonable compensation, I should be forced, at this time, to vote against this resolution.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I do not see the necessity of having a stenographer. To extend the transcript of the Stenographer's notes would be of no earthly benefit to this Convention, unless they were printed, and printed copies laid upon the desks of the members of this Convention within 24 or 48 hours at most after the stenographer's notes were taken. Therefore, for this Convention, I cannot see of what earthly use it would be to transcribe and extend those notes. There would be one copy; every member of the Convention would want to see it, and it would be impracticable for the members all to see what had been transcribed. Now, if it would be of any earthly use to this Convention, it seems to me that it should not be done unless it would be a great benefit in the future. There would certainly be a great expense connected with it, if the proceedings were taken so as to be laid upon the desks of the members of this Convention; the cost of the printing alone would be an enormous sum for this Territory. But the question then arises as to the future use. Now, it would be of no earthly use in the future; it would be of no use unless the report was a correct one. Now, the finest stenographer in the world would be apt to make very absurd mistakes. It is almost impossible for any member to hear more than three-fourths of what the other members are saying. Therefore, for the transcript to be accurate, it would have to be carefully examined by every member who had said anything the day before, and there might be a temptation, once in a while, to make it a little different, if it were not as popular as it might have been. But, at the same time, it is to be presumed that each member would want it corrected. Now, it would be impossible for that to be done. Why is it that the minutes of our excellent Clerk are corrected frequently? It is because no person is able to hear precisely everything that is said. Now, it would not be possible for this Committee to report—it would be impossible for the President himself to state precisely every step in the proceedings of the day, and when this transcript was submitted to him; therefore, I think it would be worse than useless for this transcript to be made and filed away for future publication some years hence, and so unreliable that no person who knew of the proceedings would be willing to verify it with his own statement of its correctness. So it would be of no use to this body; and if no reliance could be placed upon it in the future, it seems to me we would be incurring an unwarranted expense by the passage of this resolution, and that the resolution ought not to be carried.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I understand from my colleague that one of the objections which he makes to the employment of a Stenographer is the unreliability of his report. I therefore ask that the Stenographer may now read the remarks of my colleague from Lewis & Clarke County, in order that he may ascertain with what degree of correctness he is transcribing the proceedings of the Convention.

Mr. Carpenter: I move to amend by including, also, the remarks of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The President: Was the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke seconded?

Mr. Carpenter: It seems to me, Mr. President, that this matter would get to be child's play. It is not that I question the ability of the stenographer, but it is that I question whether he can catch the remarks of all the members from the confusion in the room. The Stenographer might get my remarks correctly, because he happens to be situated very near me.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: The Stenographer, I believe, is situated away over on this side.

Mr. Robinson: I arise to a point of order: is the motion before this Convention being discussed?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, as to the compensation provided by Congress, Congress votes $20,000 in a lump sum for the expenses of the Convention. Now some officer—the accounting officer of some bureau or department in Washington has chosen to say how that shall be apportioned. I venture to say that nearly everybody is familiar with the fact that those gentlemen have, from the beginning, undertaken to make laws, and that their decisions are continually overruled by the gentleman from Dakota; for I venture to say that, during his term as Delegate to Congress, very many of such decisions in regard to territorial legislation and to the expenditure of money thereunder were made by this gentleman, who set up not only to interpret but even to make the laws of the country, in their clerical decisions, were afterwards overruled. And so, Mr. President, in regard to the amount of this $20,000 appropriated by Congress, Congress may, under the persuasions of the two senators and one representative that we will send down there, appropriate sufficient to make up the deficiency; but, in case they stand upon their record, and appropriate no more, they certainly will never wish to have recovered into the Treasury any of the $20,000 that has been appropriated. Now, if this Convention does not waste too much time in debating, there will be ample money appropriated for all of these deficiencies, and though some accounting officer of the Treasury, or some fourth rate clerk, may make an arbitrary decision, it can be corrected by a single line. But if these expenses are not otherwise met, then I am sure the Territory of Montana, which now undertakes to bear its own expenses regardless of the Federal Government, will certainly be able, and will meet them with faith and honor. As to the value of the report, I should think that no gentleman would doubt that the report of this Convention would be of extraordinary value to the future. In case of any disputes with regard to the debates on previous days, we will have the record to appeal to at any time to correct misunderstandings that may arise on this floor during the debates of the Convention. As to the method of compensation, it is the ordinary method in legislatures to pay the stenographer so much, and then he pays out of whatever is given him, the transcribers of his notes. Now, the Chief Reporter of the Senate and House of Representatives is each allowed a stated sum, and out of that sum he sees that his notes are properly transcribed into ordinary writing. He may employ one, or two, or three, or four assistants, just as he chooses; he may do it himself if he pleases, but Congress votes him a certain sum, and out of that sum he pays his assistants. I suppose that is the intention in this case: if the gentleman takes the notes of this Convention, and we allow him a certain sum, he will see that it is daily transcribed and put into proper shape.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: I ask for the reading of the resolution, for information.

The Clerk read the resolution.

Mr. Chessman: I call for a division of the question; the resolution gives to the Stenographer his fees and compensation, and other salaries are added to it; I desire to vote separately for each of these provisions.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I may be allowed to say that, in my judgment, the first resolution offered by my friend from Cascade is impracticable. As I understand it, the Stenographer shall submit this matter in detail to the President, who shall in turn submit it to the Committee on Printing. Now I would like to ask when this matter is to be read, or how much of it is to be eliminated, so that the Clerk may know how much of it is to be read to this body. It seems to me that in every way it is impracticable. Now, there is a part of this resolution that I would like to vote for, and would like to support.

The President: I will say to the gentleman from Silver Bow, that a division has been called for by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Chessman), and, according to the rules, any member of the Convention has a right to ask for the division of a question where it contains more than one proposition: so that, if there be no objection, this question will be divided.

Mr. Collins: Before it is divided, I ask permission to insert "and door keeper $5 per day."

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: In the resolution he is designated as Assistant Sergeant at Arms instead of Door Keeper.

Mr. Collins: Well, whatever his name is.

The Clerk read the first part of the resolution.

Mr. Rickards: If I am in order, I would move that this part just read be referred to the Committee on Printing, Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

The motion was duly seconded.

The President stated the motion.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I would suggest that all that other portion relating to the Stenographer be referred also. I understand the second part was added to the first.

The President: At your suggestion it has been divided.

Mr. Chessman: My desire was that the salaries of the pages and other clerks should be divided. All that portion which pertains to the Stenographer should be divided from the other portion.

The President: According to the way the resolution has been read, it does not embrace all that you desire to be embraced in the first portion?

Mr. Chessman: I understand that the second portion was added to the first, making it all one resolution; and therefore I desire to separate all that which pertains to the Stenographer from the other portions—all the other as to salary and compensation.

The Clerk read the first part of the second resolution.

Mr. Rickards: With the consent of my second, I would change the phraseology of my motion to read, that all parts of this resolution referring to the dues and compensation of the Stenographer be referred to this Committee.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I would like to ask for information, through the Chair, of the gentleman from Cascade County, if the compensation named in this resolution is to be the entire compensation allowed the Chief Stenographer for all of the services; in other words, if he is to pay—incur the expense and pay the bills for any assistants he may need here in completing this work, that is, the work named in the resolution.

Mr. Collins: The Chief Stenographer is to employ all the assistant stenographers necessary, and all the necessary longhand writers to thoroughly transcribe and place in the hands of the Convention each day, the proceedings of the Convention, in longhand, at his own cost and expense.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Then I will move to strike out the words "$15" and insert "$20". I am opposed to sending any man out of this Convention a pauper who comes in here a full-fledged citizen. I think the compensation is more than reasonable—it is exceedingly reasonable.

The President: Did I understand the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow was seconded?

Mr. Rickards: I understood it was.

The President: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow to commit to the Committee on Reporting, Printing, Mileage and Contingent Expenses, all that portion of this resolution pertaining to the Stenographer and his fee, or compensation. The question now before the Convention is upon the commitment of this question.

Mr. Ealon, of Park: I would like to ask the gentleman from Cascade for information in regard to the 20 cents per folio—whether or not he intends that to be additional compensation over the $15 to the Stenographer as an excess over the legal rate. I understand the legal rate in this Territory for transcribing is very much less than 20 cents per folio, and I wish specifically to know if the gentleman from Cascade means that as an additional inducement to the Stenographer to perform all those duties enumerated himself, and to pay his own assistants; or whether the gentleman from Cascade does understand that 20 cents is the ordinary legal rate.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, the intention is that the Chief Stenographer and his assistants—he must appoint another stenographer to read his shorthand notes to; then the Stenographer he appoints takes the copy in shorthand, and then that is again read by the second Stenographer to the longhand writer. Now the idea of this 20 cents is to divide it between the three, giving ten cents to the longhand writer and ten cents to the two stenographers. The parties who do the writing receive but ten cents per folio; the Stenographer and his assistant receive the other ten cents; and I believe it is well worth it. He not only reads from his notes to the other Stenographer, but after the Stenographer reads from his notes to the longhand writer, he must again re-examine the work, and see that it is in accordance with the official record; so that he has a great deal of work besides the simple work of translating his notes to the other Stenographer, and he and his co-laborer are actually entitled to the ten cents.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, if I understand the gentleman from Cascade, the Stenographer undertakes then to deliver a faithful report of this Convention for the sum named in the resolution, $15 a day and 20 cents per folio, to be distributed among his assistants.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Now, Mr. President, may I say a word in support of my motion? I am in favor of the employment of a Stenographer to report the proceedings of this Convention, so much as may be necessary for the Chief Clerk to complete his record; but I am not in favor of reporting these debates, for, if that were to be the case, this debate has already cost the Territory over $100. I do not understand it as a business method. It does not look to me like a business method of conducting the affairs of this Convention, and therefore I am not in favor of the employment of a stenographer to write out in detail and submit to the President of this Convention the proceedings of the Convention. And I believe that in submitting this matter, or referring it to this Committee, as I had in view in my motion, that they would present it to this body in a more business like manner. I say this without any disparity to my friend from Cascade, but I believe that the ends before us would be better subserved.

The President then put the motion, and a division being called for, the same was carried.

Mr. Collins: Mr. President I move to refer the other resolution to the same Committee. The same question was brought up in debate here, and we should settle the whole matter at once.

Mr. Collins' motion was seconded.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I do not see any necessity for referring that portion of the resolution to the Committee at all.

The President: If the gentleman will allow the Chair to state the question, the question now pending is in relation to the commitment of the other portion of this resolution.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I see no necessity for referring that portion of the resolution to the Committee on Printing and Mileage. It involves simply the question of the salary of these respective officers embraced in the resolution. It comes especially within the purview of that Committee. This Committee is specially charged with that, and therefore, as to that part of it affecting the manner in which the report be made, the compensation which might be voted to him by this Convention would come within the jurisdiction, properly, of that Committee. Certainly, so far as the other part of the resolution is concerned, it does not relate to the question of reporting, or printing, or mileage, and, therefore, that Committee would have no more jurisdiction than any other Committee of this Convention.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I desire to arise to a point of order. It is moved to refer to a Committee, which is not debatable according to my recollection of the rule.

The President: I would say to the gentleman from Deer Lodge that the question to refer is debatable.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: I see no reason why this matter should not be disposed of at this time. It is simply a question of how much salary the attaches of the Convention shall receive, and surely it is not exorbitant. There is no reason why we should not vote upon it now, and, for one, I am ready to vote now in favor of it.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: The gentleman from Deer Lodge brings up the question as to whether we are entitled to employ any officers except those provided by law, and he laid particular stress in his argument upon that point. The gentleman from Custer stated that it was not within the provisions of the Convention to authorize or compel the first Legislature to pay these officers. So this question comes up and should be settled before it again comes before the Convention. I believe that if the whole matter is referred to this Committee, it will investigate not only the legal questions but the other questions, and report thereon to the Convention.

The President: The question is upon the reference of the remaining portion of the resolution. The Chair then put the question, and being in doubt a division was called for, and resulted in a vote of 26 in favor of the motion and 31 against.

The Chair announced the motion lost.

The President: The question pending before the Convention now is upon the division of the remaining part of this resolution: what is your pleasure concerning the remaining part of this resolution.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: I move its adoption.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, I am in favor of voting the officers a proper compensation, but it seems to me—(interrupted)

The President: I would state to the gentleman from Park that that portion of the resolution has been referred, and the question now is upon the remaining portion of the resolution.

Mr. Eaton: Will the President inform me if the $15 per diem and 20 cents per folio has been adopted?

The President: No, sir, it has been referred.

The Clerk read the remaining portion of the resolution.

Mr. Robinson: I will inquire how many pages we have?

The President: The gentleman inquires how many pages have been appointed, and is informed that the number is four.

Mr. Robinson: How many other clerks are employed?

The President: Five.

Mr. Robinson: I am in favor of being pretty liberal myself, and I would like to know how we are going to pay them, before we indulge in this liberality. That is the only objection I have. It seems to me, in the first place, that the number of pages we employ is unnecessary, and I am not certain as to the number of clerks besides those provided by the act of Congress; it seems to me we are launching into it just a little too brash; and if we characterize our whole movements in the state government and in the Constitutional Convention at the same ratio, have everything we do in proportion to this, and if that spirit permeates the legislative bodies of the State of Montana, I predict that it will not be two years before the State of Montana will be so overwhelmingly in debt that many tax payers will wish we had a territorial form of government instead of a state.

Mr. Collins: Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him for a moment? The Convention has already allowed the four pages and five clerks.

Mr. Robinson: I knew that before. I gained that information from the President. Then I say, that like every other undertaking in its inception, business enterprises or anything else that a man goes into,—like people first launching into the world going to housekeeping, they must be governed by circumstances and their means. If they have not the means to do as they would like—to cut a wide swath, they must circumscribe their actions within their means. This is an important feature of our local affairs, self government; it is one of the most important; it is laying the foundation; it is establishing a precedent for all future time to come; and I say that if we have claimed for years that we are able to maintain a state government—it has been asserted in our legislatures and in the halls of the Congress of the United States that we were capable of economizing and maintaining a state government with the wealth and population we have, that is, if we economize. Now everything depends upon what we do in this Convention. I am in favor of liberality; I am not in favor of being too parsimonious, but I do say that, in order to maintain our government and keep ourselves free from a public debt, it is necessary that every move that we make should be a cautious one, and not involving expenses that are not necessary. Now, this Convention has seen fit to employ these extra pages and clerks without any fund to draw upon for the money, without any appropriation being made for it. I agree with my friend that has made the suggestion in relation to the legal question, that this Convention has no power to bind the Legislature in its action. So far as that is concerned, it can repudiate everything we do. But, presuming that it will honor what debts we have incurred, and pay them, then I say, that while we have seen fit to employ these pages without any means of paying them at all, why then let us limit it down to a compensation as small as they can possibly get along with. Then I say that we might take some of the pay out of our per diem and give to these pages and clerks. But I believe these boys would be patriotic Montanans enough, when they have got the future state to serve, that they would be willing to serve for a little less than $4 per day, what we get for blowing off our wind here. (Laughter.) Yes sir, I believe we should certainly retrench all we can. Upon the other proposition, as it has been referred to a Committee, I shall have more to say when it returns to the House, but I think that the compensation is a little too much, and so I am opposed to the resolution.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would move to amend by striking out the words "of the other" and substitute in lieu thereof "following," so that it would read smooth, that is all. It would then read "that the compensation of the following appointed officers" instead of "the compensation of the remaining officers."

The President: The Clerk will read it as amended, the mover having accepted the amendment.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire if there are not six additional clerks, including the Chief Clerk?

The President: The Chief Clerk reports that there are five clerks besides the Chief Clerk.

Mr. Chessman: I understand there is no compensation allowed for the Assistant Chief Clerk, and therefore he should be included in the other.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: Before voting upon this question, I desire to know if these officers understand that there is no provision of law, and no authority in this body to pay them any salary whatever—if they understand that they are to take the chances of the future Legislature of Montana paying them the salaries provided for here? I think that, before we have their services, they should fully understand that; then I am perfectly willing to let them take their chances. I simply ask this by way of inquiry, because, before voting upon this question, before accepting the services of the officers, I, for one, understand we can give them nothing. I understand the only thing this Convention can give them is a certificate, and then, with that certificate in their possession, they take their chances hereafter of procuring their pay from some future Legislature; and all I desire is that they shall be fully informed of this before accepting their services, and I would like to ask some one who knows, if they understand this. If they do, then I am ready to vote upon the question.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Mr. President: I am opposed to the appointment of any more clerks at all. It is bad enough to be compelled to sit here and listen to these debates, and I think it would be an act of cruelty to plunge the Territory into debt for the purpose of preserving the eloquence that will be poured forth here and sweep everything before it. Of course, the people are interested in knowing what we accomplish, but the means by which we get at it—the arguments—are not worth anything. Life is too short; we have got too much to do. No one can say anything here but has been said a thousand times before, and better than it will be said here. To appoint clerks to transcribe and write out in longhand the proceedings of this Convention would be an act unwarranted, and would be an act of cruelty to them as well as an act of cruelty to those who come hereafter, and I am opposed to spending money in that way.

The Chair then put the question, and the same was duly carried.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I move that we do now adjourn.

The President: I will say to the gentleman, before that motion is put, that there is a communication I would like to have read.

The Clerk then read the following communication.

“Helena, Montana, July 9, 1889.

Hon. W. A. Clark, President of the Constitutional Convention, Helena, Montana.

Dear sir: On behalf of the citizens of Great Falls we extend to you, and through you to the members of the Convention, an invitation to attend the banquet to be given by the citizens of Great Falls on Friday evening, July 12th inst.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) PARIS GIBSON,
T. E. COLLINS,
C. M. WEBSTER.

Helena, Montana, July 9th, 1889.

“Hon. W. A. Clark, President Montana Constitutional Convention, Helena.

Dear Sir:—The Montana Central railway company will be pleased to accord to the members of your honorable body and their families a pleasure trip through the canyons of the Prickly Pear and Missouri to Great Falls and return, leaving Helena at 11:55 a. m. on Friday the 12th inst, going through to the Great Falls of the Missouri, spending the night in the city of Great Falls and returning by special train the next morning, reaching Helena at 12 m. As all your members are interested in the material welfare of our new commonwealth, we will give you an opportunity of inspecting one of the most extensive coal mines in the Rocky Mountain region.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) C. A. BROADWATER,
President.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention regarding these communications?

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move that we accept the invitation of the citizens of Great Falls, and also the invitation of the Montana Central Railway Company.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chair then put the motion, and the same was duly carried.

The President: If there be no objection I will communicate with these gentlemen, and tender, on behalf of the Convention, the thanks of the Convention for their generous invitation. There is now the motion to adjourn.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: If the gentleman will allow me, I would like to bring another matter before the Convention before we adjourn.

Mr. Luce withdrew his motion.

Mr. Collins: Committee No. 7, on the Finances of the State, have had a meeting, and request me to ask the authority of the Convention to employ a clerk—not to take one of the clerks of the Convention, but to employ one specially for it. I ask for the authority, and I make a motion that the Committee have authority to employ a clerk.

The President put the motion, and division being called for, the motion was lost by a vote of 24 to 20.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, called for the ayes and noes.

The President: The question before the House is to empower the Committee on Finances to employ a clerk.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: That is in addition to the clerks that have already been employed?

Mr. Joy, of Park: I did not hear the result of the vote.

The President: The motion was declared lost.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: I would like to ask if all the clerks are so busy that none of them can attend to that work at the same time, without the necessity of the Committee employing an additional clerk.

Mr. Collins: In answer to the query of the gentleman, I would state, that at the meeting of the Committee it was the request of the Committee that another clerk be employed. We thought the Committee should be the judge of who should be the clerk. The Committee had in mind a clerk, and would like to employ that clerk for the particular services required. We do not think that the clerks already selected would have time to attend to the wants of this Committee. That there are a number of other committees here—in fact, every committee, I believe, for the first week of the Convention, should have a clerk for the purpose of briefing the matter that will probably come before it. The subject matter of each committee will be briefed in such a way, so that the members of each committee can see what those committees have to say upon that matter; I believe that the Convention will be advancing its own interests, and that it will adjourn two or three weeks earlier by appropriating enough clerks. Now, if that is true, I certainly think that a Committee should have the right to choose the clerk that it thinks is qualified for the particular work for which he is chosen. Now, our Committee had a meeting, and said they wanted to employ some one else, and they did it for the reason that they thought the other clerks would be busy in attending to the wants of the other committees. There are only five clerks to go around among those committees, and I believe that the other committees should be empowered to employ extra clerks. Certainly we ask it of the Convention, and I think that the Committee knows what it wants; and I believe that in this early stage the Convention should grant it. I believe that it will expedite the labors of that Committee, and that it will be to the best interests of the Convention to grant it.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I arise to a point of order; is a question, after the ayes and noes have been called for, debatable?

The President: It requires one-fifth of the number present to call the ayes and noes, which has not been done.

Mr. Rickards: In answer to what Mr. Collins has said, I would like to say, does not this body think that, by giving this Committee authority to employ an additional clerk—I say an additional clerk—I mean in addition to the five that have already been employed—that it is establishing a precedent that nearly every committee will have a right to ask? Now I want to give notice that the Committee over which I have the honor to preside, if you establish this precedent, will ask for a clerk.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: You ought to have one.

Mr. Burleigh called for the ayes and noes.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Burleigh: Mr. President, I arise to a point of order,—that it is not in order to adjourn when a motion is pending. I asked for the ayes and noes, and, as I understand it, the Chairman did not put the question, to ascertain whether a sufficient number of the members were in favor of calling the ayes and noes.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I understand the Chair decided the vote was lost, and I do not think the ayes and noes can be called for after a motion has been decided.

Mr. Burleigh: I withdraw the motion; I ask for no courtesies.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a suggestion before we adjourn, and that is that the Sergeant at Arms be instructed to see if it is not possible to make some different arrangement of the desks of the members of this Convention, as it is utterly impossible for members, during the day, to hear what is going on with the desks arranged as they are. I believe it would be possible to do away with one or two of these aisles. I ask that the Sergeant-at-Arms be instructed to see if some such arrangement cannot be made. It is utterly impossible to hear what transpires.

The President then put the motion to adjourn, and the same was duly carried.

Adjourned.

SIXTH DAY.

Wednesday, July 10th, 1889.

The Convention was called to order at 10 o'clock a. m. by the President. The Clerk called the roll.

The President announced that he had a letter from Mr. Knippenberg.

which stated that he was compelled to be absent on account of illness in his family, and begged to be excused until noon of Wednesday (to-day).

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the Journal of the previous day.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I have a memorial that has been placed in my hands for presentation to this body.

The President: The Clerk then read as follows:

"To the Honorable Members of the Constitutional Convention of Montana,

Honorable and Dear Sirs:—The Montana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now assembled in Helena, Montana, respectfully memorialize your Honorable Body to expressly consider the matter of legislation regarding the high and important issue involved in Sabbath observance, and that you incorporate in the new Constitution to be framed by you, complete provision forbidding all Sunday traffic and work, except the works of religion, and the works of real necessity and mercy. That you submit with your form of Constitution the following on the subject of Temperance:

That the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, except for medicinal purposes, and except for use in the arts and sciences, the manner of such sale to be regulated as shall be prescribed hereafter, is and shall be forever prohibited in Montana.

That this clause be inserted by you, either in the Constitution to be voted upon, or appended to it, if, in your judgment, it would be jeopardizing it, as a clause to be voted upon separately, at the same election at which the Constitution is submitted, and after insert it, should it receive a majority in its favor of all votes cast.

Having confidence in the ability and integrity of your Honorable Body to perform the functions for which it has been chosen, and with great respect for each of you personally, and with a prayer for the prosperity of our beloved Montana, we remain, fellow citizens of this great commonwealth,

(Signed) THE MONTANA CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH,

G. C. STULL, Secretary.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that Committee No. 13, on Miscellaneous Subjects, is the proper Committee to which to refer this memorial; if there be no objection it will be referred to that Committee.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. President, Committee No. 1 desires to report.

The report was sent up to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk then read as follows:

Mr. President, your Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights respectfully submits the annexed reports for the consideration of the Convention.

(Signed) BICKFORD, Chairman.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move that the report of the committee be received, and be referred to the Committee on Printing.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was duly carried.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Mr. President, I have a resolution.

The resolution was sent up to the Clerk's desk, and the Clerk read as follows:

"Resolution No. 8. School Lands.

Resolved, that none of the lands granted by Congress to the State of Montana for the support of common schools shall ever be sold or granted, or disposed of in any manner except by lease, nor shall any moneys received therefrom be used for any other purpose than for the support of the common schools of the State."

Mr. Luce moved that the resolution be referred to Committee No. 20.

The President: If there be no objection, the resolution, as read, will be referred to Committee No. 20, on Boundaries, Public Lands and Homestead Exemptions.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I desire to offer a proposition.

The same was sent up to the clerk's desk.

The President: Rule No. 21 provides that all these propositions and resolutions shall be on legal cap paper, or printed. They shall likewise be prefaced with the title, briefly indicating the subject to which they refer. The gentleman from Silver Bow will be kind enough to comply with those regulations.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Mr. President, I desire to offer the following ordinance:

The President: The proposition introduced by the gentleman from Gallatin will now be read.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"Proposition No. 4.

ORDINANCE

Be it Ordained by the Montana Constitutional Convention:

1st. That perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of the proposed State of Montana shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship.

2nd. That the people inhabiting said proposed State of Montana do agree and declare all right and title to the public lands lying in the boundary thereof, and to all lands lying within said limits, owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes, and that, until the title thereto shall have been extinguished by the United States, the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition of the United States; and said Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States. That the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State of Montana shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands belonging to residents thereof. That no taxes shall be imposed by the said State of Montana on lands or property therein belonging, or which may hereafter be purchased by, the United States, or reserved for its use. But nothing herein contained shall preclude the said State of Montana from taxing, as other lands are taxed, any lands owned or held by any Indian who has severed his tribal relations, or has obtained from the United States or any person the title thereto, by patent, or other grant, save and except such lands as have been or may be granted to any Indian or Indians under any Act of Congress containing a proviso exempting the lands thus granted from taxation. But said last named lands shall be exempt from taxation by said State of Montana so long and to such extent as such Act of Congress may prescribe.

3rd. That the debts and liabilities of said Territory of Montana shall be assumed and paid by said State of Montana.

4th. That provisions shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of systems of public schools, which shall be open to all children of the people of the State of Montana.

5th. That this ordinance shall be irrevocable without the consent of the people of the United States and the people of the Territory of Montana.

The President: If there be no objection, this will be received and referred to the Committee on Ordinance, No. 22.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: Mr. President, I desire to offer a resolution.

The same was sent up to the Clerk's desk, and the Clerk read as follows:

"Resolution No. 9. The establishment of New Counties.

Resolved, that in the creation and establishment of counties, they shall be named with regard to mountain ranges, rivers, or other appropriate natural features of the country in the vicinity of the proposed new county.

The President: If there be no objection, this will be received and referred to Committee No. 10, on City and Town Organizations.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I desire to offer a resolution, and ask that it be referred to the proper Committee.

The President: The Clerk will read the resolution offered by the gentleman from Madison.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolution No. 10. Concerning Free Passes by Corporations.

Resolved, that the following be incorporated in the Constitution as one of its provisions, and be properly numbered.

Section No railroad, or other transportation company, and no agent, officer or employee thereof, shall issue or give or offer, either directly or indirectly, to any member of the Legislative Assembly, or to any executive, judicial or ministerial office of this State, or of any county, district, township, municipality or other division thereof, any gratuitous transportation over or upon or any pass or free ticket for passage over or upon any route or line, or part thereof, of such Company, or make or direct or consent to any contract or arrangement by which such officers, or any of them, shall be transported or conveyed over or allowed to travel upon such route or line, or any part thereof, at any less rate, or for any less compensation than is charged the public generally; and no member of the Legislative Assembly, and no such officer as above mentioned, shall accept, or receive, or use, while he is a candidate for office, or while he continues in office, or within three months after he ceases to be in office, any pass or free ticket from any railroad or transportation company, or make or consent to any contract or arrangement by which he, or any of his family or employes, shall be transported or conveyed by such company gratuitously, or at any different or lower rate or charge from that required of the public generally. That any railroad, or other transportation corporation or company violating any provision hereof shall forfeit to the State one thousand dollars for each and every violation hereof, to be recovered by action at law; and any officer herein mentioned who shall violate any provision hereof shall forfeit his office, and all the emoluments thereof.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment. Insert at the word ordinance "this article shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

The President: The amendment is not in order at present, unless it be accepted.

Mr. Callaway: It can be referred to the Committee with the resolution.

The Chairman: If there be no objection, this amendment, with the resolution, will be referred to Committee No. 12, on Corporations.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I would move that it be referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects and Future Amendments; I do not think it properly belongs to the Committee on Corporations.

The motion was seconded, the Chair put the question, and the same was duly carried.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I now offer the following resolution.

Mr. President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Resolution No. 11. Resolved, that the following be inserted in the Constitution. No property in this State shall be exempt from taxation except the property of the United States, the State, counties, towns and other municipal corporations, and public libraries. All mines and mining claims, both placer and rock in place, containing ore bearing gold, silver, copper, lead or other valuable mineral deposit, for which a United States patent is issued, shall be taxed at the Government price therefor, unless the surface ground thereof has a separate and independent value, in which case it shall be taxed as provided by law. But all machinery used in mining, and all property and surface improvements pertaining to or upon mining claims which have separate and independent value, and the annual net proceeds of all mining claims shall be taxed as provided by law."

The President: If there be no objections, this will be received and referred to Committee No. 7, on Finances.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. President, I desire to offer a resolution.

Mr. President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Park County will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolution No. 12. Resolution on Suffrage.

Every male citizen of the United States above the age of 21 years, who can read and write the English language, and who has not been convicted of treason or felony, and who shall have resided in this State one year, and in the city, county or district where he may offer to vote for six months next prior to any election, and no other persons, shall have the right to vote in this State. Provided that nothing herein shall disfranchise any person who was a qualified voter at the time of the adoption of this Constitution."

The President: If there be no objection, this resolution will be received and referred to Committee No. 2, on Right of Suffrage.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I desire to offer a resolution.

The same was sent up to the Clerk's desk, and the Clerk read as follows:

"Resolution No. 13. Resolved that all articles from No. 2 to No. 17, inclusive, of the Constitution of 1884, be referred to the appropriate standing committees of this Convention.

Mr. Whitehill: Mr. President, I wish to say in favor of that resolution, that most of the resolutions which are now being read are copied verbatim, or at least a part of them, from the old Constitution, and I desire by that resolution to refer each section of the old Constitution, under the heading, to the appropriate Committee of this Convention, and it will thereby save a number of resolutions that are now being introduced.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Inasmuch as this matter has already been covered by the report of the Committee on Preamble, and that matter has already been properly referred, I would move that this resolution, presented by Mr. Whitehill, be referred to the same Committee.

Mr. Whitehill: The Committee has already reported.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I ask for the reading of the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution as offered.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Chair would suggest that, according to Rule No. 22, the subject of this resolution may be out of order. It states that proposals and resolutions mentioned in Rule No. 21 shall embrace but one subject.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, this would not be intended as a resolution embodying anything for adoption in the Constitution, but a resolution outside of that. It is simply a resolution of reference to come before the body. It would not be a resolution to be numbered under the particular rule which the Chair has read. It is a resolution for reference simply.

Mr. Whitehill: Mr. President, I withdraw the resolution and put it in the shape of a motion. I move that the matter contained in that resolution be adopted.

The Chair then put the motion, and the same was carried.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I now offer my proposition.

The President: The proposition offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow will be read.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"Proposition No. 2. To prevent Convict Labor under Contract. That any person or persons convicted of a crime in the State of Montana, and while under sentence for the same, shall not be allowed to labor for any individual, company or corporation. Neither shall the State have power to enter into an agreement or contract with any individual, company or corporation to have convicts do any labor that will in any way compete with free labor.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, as there is nothing before the Convention at this moment, I would like to make a suggestion for the consideration of the members, and they can take such action upon it as they see fit. It becomes more apparent every passing hour that the great bulk of the labor to be performed in this Convention is to be done in the committees—all preliminary work, to say the least—and I would suggest for the consideration of the members, whether it would not be better to agree to one morning hour here for the ordinary routine business, and then allow the balance of the day to the committees, in order to prepare their work, &c., until such time as there is sufficient business before the Convention, in the shape of the reports of the committees, to require two sessions a day. I simply mention the matter in order to bring it before the Convention. I do not desire to intrude my own opinions in any way, but it seems to me, as a matter of economy of time, that we ought to have some arrangement of that kind.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I fully concur in the suggestions of the gentleman from Custer. I think that having one morning hour here for the introduction of resolutions and petitions, in the form of business, and then taking a recess, say until 4 o'clock, coming together again and going over what may be necessary to be done at that time, and then adjourning, would be perhaps the best way we could spend our day, until such time as the committees who are to lay the ground-work of the Convention will be ready to report. To do otherwise would simply be wasting our time, as we have done today and yesterday, in the introduction of resolutions covering ground which has already been covered.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: This question might as well be decided now. As the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke says, it is a waste of time to remain here while important work remains to be done by the committees, and I therefore move that the Convention do now adjourn.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that we take a recess until 4 o'clock.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I cannot see any advantage in having two sessions a day.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I would like to offer a resolution in regard to the matter of amending the rules in regard to committees.

Mr. Carpenter: I will yield to the gentleman.

The President: The gentleman from Custer offers the following resolution.

"Resolved that the Rule No. 36 of the Rules of this Constitutional Convention be amended by adding to subdivision 6 of said Rules the following words: Provided that the committees numbered 17, 19 and 21 of the standing committees of this Convention may report at any time during a session of the Convention."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I would move the suspension of the rules, and ask that that resolution be placed upon its final passage. The committees that it relates to are the Committee on Reporting and Printing, the Committee on Engrossing and Enrollment, and the Committee on Revision, Phraseology and Adjustment; and it seems to me it will expedite the work of the Convention if these committees are allowed to report at any time they are ready to report, whether it is the order of business or not. I think these committees ought to be allowed to report when the Convention is in session.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer seconded the motion.

The President then put the question.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I would move that Committee No. 21 be excluded from that resolution. That Committee ought not to report until the entire Constitution has been settled upon, and then the arrangement of the sections and the phraseology can be corrected.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I presume that Committee No. 21 should be stricken from that resolution, and I move that it be so amended.

The President: If there be no objection to this amendment, it will be received. Committee No. 21 will be eliminated from the resolution.

The Chair stated the motion, and the same was carried.

The Chair then put the question on the motion to adjourn, and the same was duly carried.

Adjourned.

SEVENTH DAY.

Thursday, July 11th, 1889.

Convention called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day, and the same stood approved without correction.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau, chairman of the printing committee, sent up a report of said committee to the clerk's desk.

Mr. Eaton of Park, chairman of the committee on military affairs, sent up report of said committee.

The Clerk read the report of the committee on military affairs as follows: "Mr. President, the committee on military affairs having had under consideration the subject of military affairs for the constitution, respectfully submit the following report, and recommend the adoption of the same.

Article Section 1.—The militia of the state of Montana shall consist of all able bodied male citizens of the state between the ages of 18 and 45 inclusive, except such persons as may be exempt by the laws of the State or of the United States.

Section 2.—The Legislature shall provide by law for the organization, equipment and disciplining of the militia, and shall make rules and regulations for the government of the same. The organization shall conform as nearly as practicable to the regulations for the government of the armies of the United States.

Section 3.—The Legislature shall provide by law for the maintaining of the militia by appropriations from the treasury of the state.

Section 4.—The Legislature shall provide by law for the safe keeping of the public arms, military records, relics and banners of the state.

Section 5.—When the Governor shall, with the consent of the Legislative Assembly, be out of the state in time of war at the head of any military force thereof, he shall continue Commander-in-Chief of all the military forces of the state.

(Signed EATON, Chairman.)

The President: If there be no objection, this report of the committee on military affairs will be received, and referred to the committee on printing, with the request that it be printed.

The President: The chair would ask the chairman of the committee on agriculture and other affairs, if a report is not due on a reference made to them three days ago, if the chair is not mistaken, on the subject of irrigation?

The chairman of said committee, Mr. Kohrs, sent up the following report, which was read by the clerk as follows:

"Mr. President, your committee on agriculture, manufactures, etc., to whom was referred resolution number three, beg leave to say that we have considered the same, and would respectfully recommend its adoption by the convention.

(Signed: C. KOHRS, Chairman.

The President: This resolution refers to the appointment of a committee on irrigation, the number to be placed on that committee was left blank in the original resolution, and has not been reported by the committee.

Mr. Burns, of Lewis & Clarke: I would suggest that there be a committee appointed to consist of 11 members, and I make a motion to that effect.

The motion was duly seconded.

The President put the motion and the same was carried.

The Clerk then read the resolution as completed.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, moved to amend by adding to the resolution the following: "To which committee shall be referred all matters pertaining to the subject of irrigation coming before this body."

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning the resolution as amended, and the report of the committee.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: I move the report of the committee be received and adopted.

The motion was duly seconded.

The President put the motion and the same was duly carried.

The President: The report of the committee on printing will now be read.

The clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President, your committee on reporting, printing, etc., having had under consideration resolution number seven, relating to the official stenographer and his compensation as introduced by Mr. Collins, would most respectfully recommend the following in lieu thereof: Resolved, that it shall be the duty of the chief stenographer to transcribe daily into long hand the proceedings of the convention and deposit the manuscript with the president of the convention, daily, for reference, and to the committee on printing for examination, and after approval by the convention to be deposited with the Secretary of the Territory and a receipt taken for the same; that the compensation of the chief stenographer shall be $15.00 for each and every day this convention shall actually sit in session, and that said chief stenographer shall be entitled to the additional sum of 15 cts. per folio for each and every folio transcribed by him from his notes of the proceedings of the convention.

(Signed) C. E. CONRAD, Chairman.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning this report of the committee on reporting, printing, etc.?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I move that the report be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, the adoption of the report means the final action on it. It is necessary to receive the report before any action is taken on it, and I therefore move that the report be received.

Mr. Collins: Mr. President, I have always thought that when a report was received from a duly organized committee of this body, that there is no necessity for a motion that it be received in fact, and that if it is not referred or placed on file, the proper action is to adopt, so as to bring it before the house. Certainly the report has already been received. It is entirely superfluous, after the committee has reported, to move that it be received.

The President: I think the gentleman from Cascade is according to rule 37 correct upon this proposition.

The President then stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson: That brings it up on its final action.

The President: The gentleman from Fergus is entitled to the floor.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: Mr. Chairman, it was not until immediately before the meeting of this body, that I was advised of the action taken by the majority of the committee, and I desire now to state, without wishing to make any minority report, that I should have some objection to the adoption of the resolution as presented by the majority of the committee. I do not wish to make a speech, and I trust that the stenographer will not take down my very brief remarks at any length. But there are very serious objections it occurs to me to the adoption of this resolution. I think that the matter, as presented to this body, of obtaining through the stenographer an accurate and reliable report of the proceedings here, and the remarks made by members, is impracticable. I do not think that the object will be secured. In the second place it would be impracticable as to the matter of price. I do not think that the pay is sufficient. I do not think that the proposition of reporting every word that is said here, every motion made and all the remarks of the members, for future examination is practicable. If I understood the remarks made by the gentleman from Cascade the other day, in reference to the resolution it proposed that the chief stenographer shall prepare his notes; that he shall read them to a second stenographer, that the second stenographer shall re-read them to a long hand writer. That in the next place they shall be referred to the president, and in turn referred to the committee on printing for examination as to their accuracy. I do not think that is practicable; and again if it were practicable, and if a sufficient amount of money were provided for doing the work, I think it would cost too much. On a little consideration, I believe you will come to the conclusion that these reports can be made, and made accurate, so as to be worth anything in future as a reference. I do not think that a matter of $5000 or $10000 will pay for it; and therefore I think we are going a little too far. I do not wish to judge for any other member of this convention; but if my constituents have done me the honor to send me here, I must submit to what I think would be their judgment. They are largely composed of ranchmen, and they are especially poor this year; and I do not wish by any action of mine to propose or vote for one dollar of unnecessary taxes. And further than this Mr. President, I do not think we will need a stenographer; I do not think we want one; I do not think there is ambition enough among the members here to be reported in full, or that any of the members of this convention desire such a report. I do not think the game is worth the candle, and I felt at one time very much disposed to move to lay the whole subject on the table; for the present I will confine myself to moving the indefinite postponement of the whole matter, and the discharge of the stenographer.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, as a member of the printing committee, and one of the majority that concurred in the report of the committee which has just been read, in reply to the gentleman from Fergus, I simply want to say that I understood it to be the general sentiment of this convention that its entire proceedings should be kept in some way or another for future reference, perhaps for future publication. I agree with the gentleman in a sense, that is to say, so far as the ambition of the members here to go into print on everything they do, and every word they say. I do not believe the general sentiment is such as wants it for that purpose. But I do believe that it is important and wise, that not only the entire proceedings, but the entire debates of this convention be reported, that in future ages, perhaps 40, 50 or 100 years from now, they will become of value; and the older the state of Montana grows, the more valuable these debates and the record of proceedings will be. Now as to the matter of this expense, I am one who was disposed to feel that $15.00 per day, and 20 cts per folio for transcribing all of the short hand notes was too much. I think the committee have given that matter mature consideration. They have consulted with the stenographer we have here, Mr. Connolly, and with others, and we have come to the conclusion as indicated by that report, that this work cannot be done, and properly done for less money than as suggested by the report—that is $15.00 per day and 15 cts. per folio for the transcript. Mr. Connolly has agreed with the committee, or indicated to the committee, that he would accept that proposition, if the convention adopted that report; and it seems to me that it is within reason, in view of the fact that these proceedings should certainly be reported.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, as I have intimated my views to this convention upon this proposition heretofore, it is necessary to add but little more to what I have said. In the first place so far as the reasonableness of the compensation is concerned, I have only this to say, that in the experience that I have had with stenographers in copying their reports of judicial proceedings into long hand upon typewriters, I have found them to transcribe very easily 100 folios per day, and from that to 150 folios in a day; and from all I can learn from the stenographers that I have had employed in such work as that, 100 folios a day is not an unreasonable days work. Then there is $15.00 per day to the stenographer for transcribing these notes. Our statute has fixed the compensation of stenographers for transcribing their work and reports at 5 cts. per folio, and they can make good wages at that, so they tell me; and they do not hesitate to do the work at that price. So far then as the $15.00 per day for the work in the convention is concerned, I care but little about the cost, because it amounts to but very little itself. One man can do that very easily for the few hours we are in session, and I care not whether it is $8.00 per day, $10.00 per day or $15.00 per day. But there is something underlying the whole thing that causes me to oppose the whole system of reporting these proceedings. If, Mr. President, it is material to report the debates of this convention—if anybody should have the curiosity in future years, probably when many of us are dead, to read the proceedings of this convention, the most important of all the proceedings are the debates and discussions upon material propositions that occur in the various committees; at least there should be there, where each and every proposition is more thoroughly digested by the respective committees than anywhere else. Then if it is material to report the debates, it is material to report the discussions in the various committees. There is where the work is done. Then if the debates that occur in this room are only reported, we have got but a portion of them, and it is necessary to have a stenographer for each of these various committees. Now then, so far as the materiality is concerned, I have this to suggest. I would ask the gentlemen of this convention, how many of them have read the debates in the convention that framed the constitution of the United States where there was some brains employed—men of character—the ablest men that our nation has ever produced were in that convention, where they had not the land marks to guide them that we have, but the whole thing was manufactured out of new cloth entirely; where they discussed these propositions thoroughly, each one at a time. And where those debates have been reported, how many gentlemen of this convention, or how many men since these reports have been published in book form, have ever taken the trouble to read a solitary speech made by these eminent men. I dare say that there is not one American citizen in 60,000 that has ever read these debates. Then I say if the American people did not feel interest enough to read the debates of such an eminent body as that, how many of our constituents who have sent us here will read our discussions in this convention? I think it is fair to state, that there will not be one man in 50,000 that will ever read a word in this convention, hereafter. Then I say that so far as any aid to the Courts in interpreting the constitutional provisions that will be embodied in this constitution is concerned, there is nothing in that whatever, because the Courts in determining the statute, or in determining the construction of the statutes or constitution, do not look to the debates that occurred; but on the various propositions they take the instrument itself as it reads on the surface, and interpret from that alone. Then I say that so far as aiding this convention is concerned, these reports can serve no purpose whatever, because they will not be accessible to the members of the convention even if they are transcribed in long hand, one copy of it for the whole convention, within 24 or 48 hours after they occur, they are inaccessible to the members of the convention. Therefore they can be of no use or benefit to the convention as it progresses. Then it can only be for just merely the speeches of the convention. As I suggested before so far as the material part of our work is concerned, as it progresses our clerks keep a faithful record of that. The memories of the members of the convention are refreshed on it as to all that is material, that is necessary for us to know. Then the only purpose that the report of the stenographer would subserve, would be to preserve the speeches that are made here. Then I say as these speeches are only for future reference, and nothing else, and when you consider the fact that in all human probability, so few people will read them hereafter, it seems to me that it is hardly worth while to indulge in the expense of reporting and transcribing these speeches for that purpose. Why, sir, I have myself had occasion to examine the constitutional provisions of the state where I lived for 14 years, where the debates in that convention were open to me every day. I do not think for any purpose that they could serve me as a rising politician, statesman, lawyer or citizen, or any other purpose, that it is worth my while to go to work and read those speeches when there was so much to be read. Why, if a man of intelligence will take that which is most important to him and read that, then I say, having as limited time as we have, people will not select these speeches in this constitutional convention and read them, because they will read other matter. Then I think it is a waste of time and money to publish these speeches, and while we desire in organizing our state government to do so in the most rigid economy, yet to supply ourselves and the people with everything that is really needed and beneficial to them, and I think that what is useless and will serve but little purpose, let us eliminate and dispense with. Why, sir, upon this very proposition the celebrated ornithological effort of Mr. Cox was delivered upon a proposition of this kind. To report all this useless kind of matter the government pay the expense of sending it broadcast throughout the land. Mr. Cox opposed that whole system, and that is what called forth one of those three celebrated speeches. It is entitled "The Silver Tongued Speech"; showing in a humorous, ridiculous way, the utter uselessness of scattering those things broadcast throughout the land, because they serve no purpose. Why even in the proceedings of the Congress of the United States, how many people read those debates there. Even the ablest efforts of our big men in the Congress of the United States, there is not one in 10,000 of them ever read. So there are piles and piles, wagonloads and steamboal and carloads of matter that is published at the expense of the government of the United States. It becomes a habit and custom to publish them, and the government of the United States has oceans of money to throw away. Not that they serve any practical or beneficial purpose whatever, but because it is customary, and the government of the United States is ready and can well afford it. But we are not in that happy condition, and I insist as a matter of economy, let us eliminate everything that is useless where it costs us money.

For these reasons, Mr. President—other members of this convention may do as they please—whether I stand solitary and alone upon this proposition or have the support of a respectable minority of the convention, or the support of a majority of this convention—I feel it my duty as a citizen of Montana Territory, to express my views upon this proposition, irrespective of what anybody may think—irrespective of what the reporters may think in scribbling for the newspapers upon this proposition; it is wholly immaterial to me; it is a duty I feel I owe to myself as a representative of the people of the state of Montana, to express my honest convictions upon this proposition; and for that reason, Mr. President, I shall vote against the whole proposition.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Custer: Mr. President, there are occasions in the life of nations and individuals, when, it occurs to me, that many considerations which would otherwise have unusual weight, are unworthy of being entertained; and it strikes me that the present moment is one. This is the most important gathering that has ever convened within the limits of the Territory of Montana. Its deliberations are of vast historical importance, and it seems to me, that for the sake of our constituents, and for the sake of the people of Montana, that the deliberations of this body should be taken down by a stenographer, that our constituents may refer to them in future years. As a question of economy, it seems to me, we might set it aside, this being the birthday, you might say, of the nation. We should set all partisan feelings, all considerations aside, and we should look upon it as a question of liberality. The remarks that have been made by certain members here, carried to their logical conclusion, would destroy all historical memories and collections. History is invaluable, not alone as a collection of past events; but as a matter of reference, whereby future generations may map out their lines of progress, and select those conclusions that have been shown by time and experience to be practicable and sensible. And it seems to me that on the present occasion, we should indeed be imbued more by the spirit of liberality than one of parsimony. As regards the economical administration of this soon-to-be state, there is no member of this convention that will be actuated by a more economical spirit than myself. But I believe there is a wide distinction between economy and parsimony, and I believe that certain members of this convention are verging toward the latter.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks from the member from Deer Lodge, and also to the remarks of the gentleman who has just taken his seat; and if anything satisfies me of the perfect accuracy of the position taken by my friend from Deer Lodge, it is the able, lengthy and elaborate argument, which he made here in support of his petition. What future generations will care about that speech is more than I know, and more than will ever be discovered I presume. Now I have no objection and think it proper to take down the official acts of every member of this Convention—his vote and all his acts; but the reasons which he assigns for his acts are so liable to be erroneous, that I do object to burden the record of this convention with it. Now if this matter is to prevail, I shall most certainly ask as one of the humble members of this convention that I be excepted from the operation of the rule, for I do not want to transmit to posterity and to my children the reasons that I shall assign for my acts here. I would much rather they would take my acts, and let them infer therefrom the reasons which actuated me, than to have my reasons taken down in black and white. I shall sustain the position taken by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, for I believe it to be perfectly right and proper. I do not wish to consume the time of the convention in any elaborate argument upon the proposition, but will sustain it.

The President: The question before the convention is upon the adoption of the resolution. There is a motion offered that it be indefinitely postponed, which has received no second as I understand it.

Mr. Robinson: I second the motion.

The President: The question now is upon the indefinite postponement of the resolution.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I have no objection to the present stenographer if we are to have a stenographer. I believe him to be an able stenographer and perfectly competent to take these proceedings. I have no objection to the price if this work is to be done. But there is one thing in that resolution which it strikes me is entirely impracticable. It provides for the approval of this report by the convention. Now it is impossible for the convention to act intelligently upon that report unless it is read over every morning, or unless it is printed and laid on the desks of the members, which would involve a very great expense. If the report is to be transcribed for the approval of the members, it should be printed, and that would involve a great expense to make the matter at all practicable.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, it is not unlikely that before the conclusion of this convention, I shall incur the charge of being parsimonious, but sir, so far as this resolution is concerned, I feel very much disposed to vote for, and to sustain it in every way I can. I think, sir, that the position which the gentleman from Deer Lodge has assumed in stating the proposition, is entirely too broad, and presents to the convention a situation of affairs which is not contemplated by the resolution itself. The impression which he makes here is that we are seeking to make a charge against the state of Montana, for the printing of the entire proceedings of this convention. The resolution does not seek to do anything of the kind. It simply provides that the stenographer shall take the proceedings of this convention in detail, and then transcribe and extend them in long hand, so that the legislature of the state of Montana at any session during the existence of this constitution may provide for the printing of the proceedings of this convention if it is deemed advisable to do so. All that is sought to be charged here or recommended to the State to be charged, is whatever may be necessary under this resolution to pay for the reporting and transcribing the notes of the stenographer. I do not agree with the gentleman from Deer Lodge that these reports are wholly invaluable. They may be of no value to me today, or to any member of this convention, or to any gentleman who resides within the territory. But the time may come when the measely sum of $900 or $1000 necessary to preserve the record from which these proceedings can be printed, will be but a tithe of their value. The time may come when they may serve some useful purpose from an historical point of view. I know, sir, that the states of the union, generally, have preserved in detail the proceedings of their constitutional conventions, and I am advised that four or five states have neglected to do this, and that at this time the Historical Societies of those several states, consider that these proceedings would be invaluable if they could be obtained. So far as the mere matter of expense is concerned, the investigation which I have made satisfies my mind that it is not unreasonable. I believe that the stenographer who has been appointed, together with such assistance as he will be able to command, will, with the amount of compensation provided in this resolution, be enabled to report intelligibly the entire proceedings of this convention. It is not like the case suggested by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson) where stenographers take the reports of the proceedings of the courts and transcribe them in long hand upon the typewriter, where he asserts 5 cts. per folio is ample compensation; but here it requires an expert stenographer—two of them—one who may take a short hand report in the morning, that one transcribe that report into long hand in the afternoon, and another to go through the same proceedings in the afternoon. So that he has nothing in common with the individual who reports the proceedings of the court, who is required to do only a certain amount of labor, whereas the stenographers who are here employed will be required to do all of the labor whatever it may be, in order that it may be presented here from day to day. I have no desire, so far as I am concerned, nor I believe has any member of this convention, any personal desire or ambition, to see anything that he may say reported and printed in any public volume; but I believe that the state of Montana ought not to be behind in a matter which may prove of historical interest and value in the future. We are today without a particle of indebtedness existing against the territory, and if we should be fortunate enough finally to be admitted to the Union, I take it, we will be able to commence our state government without being indebted to the extent of a single dollar. Out of all the new states to be admitted, I think it is safe to say, that for the small compensation that will be required to preserve the proceedings of this Convention, the State of Montana can well afford to be abreast of the times, and on an equal footing with her neighbors.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I think, Mr. President, that the use to which the report of the proceedings of this Convention will be put in the future, and their general value, has not been stated. We are not able always to express our views in such perspicuous language that they can be readily understood. The debates of a constitutional convention are used as information in interpreting what is to be understood by the provisions of the Constitution. That is what the meager notes of the debates in framing the Constitution of the United States are preserved for. That is their general value. They are not only used by courts in interpreting that instrument, but the debates of that constitutional convention are used by Congress in determining what should be the scope of the laws they are to enact, and every state legislature of the Union does the same thing. And that is the object of reporting these debates. It is not a matter of history, to transmit to future generations what we have said here. Our imperfect language here would amount to but very little as a matter of history. But what we want with the language that is used here in debate upon the proceedings of the Convention is that the constitution we frame may be properly interpreted. What do we mean by the language we use in the constitution? And for that purpose the reports of these debates may be very valuable. Now, courts resort to the history of their time in interpreting a constitution or in interpreting a law. You see that in the great decision known as the Dred Scott decision. They went back to everything of that kind—the history of the times and the history of the constitution to determine what was meant by the term "citizen" in the Constitution of the United States. And so there may be certain provisions in our constitution that will need special interpretation. Much of our constitution will be borrowed from the constitutions of other states, but we have some things that are special. Here we have a committee on irrigation, and that will be almost a special matter with us; and it is going to be a matter that will concern the citizens of this future state very much. And for this reason, I am in favor of supporting the resolution. I know nothing about how much or what is a reasonable compensation. So far as I am concerned, I generally pay these bills when they are presented to me, and say nothing about how much per folio it is.

Mr. Burns, of Lewis & Clarke: I did not see the resolution referred to the committee on printing, but I want to say that the gentleman from Fergus (Mr. Watson) has interpreted my opinions on this subject, and has left me very little to say in the matter. But I think that the report of the majority of the committee, if adopted, will involve us in an expenditure of a great deal more money than this convention imagines. I have here the reports of the convention of Illinois, and the report of that convention there—the cost—amounted to the sum of $57,000. And I know that the reports and the printing of the reports of the Constitution of California for 1878 and 1879 cost something like $20,000. Now, is this convention prepared to involve this new state in any such scheme as that? I do not think so. I do not believe in too much parsimony in this matter, but I do not believe that we can afford to pay anything which will increase the per cent of taxes to such an extent. In regard to the matter of this report being necessary for the interpretation of this constitution in the future, I think we are going to make a constitution that will be so unambiguous to the people of Montana that they will not have to read all the speeches made here in this convention in order to interpret the meaning of it; and so far as that is concerned, I think the record will be good for nothing.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, the gentleman who has last spoken has voiced my opinion of this matter. I do not believe that this convention realizes the amount of expense that this would incur to the new State of Montana. We are surely voting a tax upon the people of Montana, when we vote for this expenditure, and the question, it appears to me, that we should consider now is whether if the people themselves had voted upon this question they would have incurred the expense of voting for these taxes. I believe that four-fifths of them would vote against it; and whether or not it would be of any benefit to anyone, I believe it would cost the future State of Montana $40,000 or $50,000; and I do not believe that the voters and the people of Montana Territory, if they could get the debates of this convention in book form, would be willing to pay 15 cents apiece for them. I do not believe that they will ever be read. I will inquire of any man in this Convention, if he has ever read the reports of the proceedings of any convention that has ever been held in the United States; and I venture the prediction that there is not a man within the sound of my voice that has ever read them. There is no gentlemen here yet who has spoken upon this subject who has claimed or pretended to claim that this will be of any benefit to the people of Montana for the present time, or within any reasonable time in the future. Some gentleman—I believe my friend from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, claimed it would not be of any benefit to any man in this convention, nor would it be of any benefit to anyone now in the Territory of Montana; but that at some future time it might possibly be of some benefit to someone. It reminds me very much, Mr. President, of the old lady by the name of Smith, who bought a second-hand doorplate with the name of Jenkins upon it. She got it for a bargain and so thought she would buy it; and when her husband desired to know why she bought it, her own name being Smith, she justified herself by saying that they might some time in the future have a daughter born to them, and that daughter might marry a man by the name of Jenkins, and that if she did that this doorplate would become practically invaluable. (Laughter.) And that is about as near, Mr. President, as we have come to locating any time when these proceedings will be of any value whatever. Now, for my part, I am not willing to vote these taxes upon the people of Montana, because I believe that they themselves would not incur it if they had a voice in the matter; and we should not be more liberal with their money than they themselves would be. Therefore, I believe it is eminently proper to lay this whole matter on the table.

The President: I would inform the gentleman that there is a motion before the convention to indefinitely postpone the proposition.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Now if this matter is indefinitely postponed, as I understand, that discharges by that act the official stenographer already employed.

The President: The motion includes the discharge of the stenographer.

Mr. Rickards: As I said the other day when this matter was up, I am in favor of the employment of an official stenographer to assist the clerk in making up his record, and I would be sorry to see the matter indefinitely postponed; for while I am not in favor of the employment of an official stenographer and an assistant to transcribe what he may take down into long hand, yet I am in favor, as I say, of an official stenographer to assist the chief clerk. Now, as has already been said by Mr. Robinson, if this stenographer could take down the debates in the committee rooms, where, I believe, the most brilliant things will be said during our sitting in this body, I do not know but it might possibly be of some assistance or a source of some information for future generations. I had the pleasure last night of hearing in a committee upon which I have the honor to serve, from our brilliant friend, Major Maginnis, a sentiment that I would like to see in print and preserved for all future time—the most brilliant thing that I have heard since I came into this convention. But that would be impracticable. I am in favor of the employment of an official stenographer, and therefore I shall vote against the indefinite postponement of the proposition; and if that motion to indefinitely postpone is not carried, I shall ask for a division of the proposition before us that we may employ an official stenographer, but not to provide for the transcript into long hand of what has been said.

Mr. Muth, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that this question be divided now. I am not in favor of having this work transcribed immediately, but I am in favor of retaining our stenographer. I have no doubt that his notes will be of value, and the time will come when the first legislature of the State of Montana will want these notes transcribed into long hand. That will be ample time to do it. They will then be in a position to pay for the work, and they can provide the funds for the payment of it. The question, as it strikes me, can be readily divided—one proposition to lay the report of the committee on the table, and the other as to the discharge of the stenographer. It strikes me that it can be done very easily, and I ask for a division of the question.

The President: Is there any objection to dividing this question? If not, the question before the convention will be upon the indefinite postponement of the report of the committee on printing, except as to that portion which relates to the discharge of the stenographer.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I call for the ayes and noes upon this question.

The President: The gentleman calls for the ayes and noes. All those in favor of the ayes and noes being called will rise to their feet. There is a sufficient number to call for the ayes and noes. The motion now is upon the indefinite postponement of the report of the committee upon printing, except as to that clause which relates to the discharge of the stenographer, which is divided and will be made a separate question.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, do I understand that the debate is closed on this matter?

The President: I would say to the gentleman that the ayes and noes have been called on this question and the debate is closed.

Mr. Middleton: With the indulgence of the convention, however, I would like to say that the matter of the shorthand notes will be absolutely worthless unless they were transcribed. If Mr. Connolly, the official stenographer should die, no living man could read his notes, and the probabilities are that within 5 years he could not transcribe his notes. If they are taken down, they would practically be of no value whatever, except to transcribe them.

The clerk called the roll and the members responded as follows: Ayes: Burleigh, Burns (A. J.), Buford, Bullard, Breen, Carpenter, Chessman, Courtney, Dyer, Eaton, Giffelte, Gaylord, Haskell, Hobson, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Joyes, Joy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Kanouse, Loud, Luce, Muth, Marshall, Marion, Parberry, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Rickards, Stapleton, Schmidt, Sargent, Witter, Watson—36.

Nays: Aiken, Browne, Brazleton, Burns (Edward), Burns (A. F.), Bickford, Conrad, Collins, Cooper, Cardwell, Craven, Cauby, Callaway, Durfee, Dixon, Fields, Graves, Gibson, Goddard, Hartman, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Mitchell, Middleton, Myers, Mayger, Maginnis, Ramsdell, Toole (J. R.), Toole (J. K.), Webster, Winston, Whitehill, Warren, Mr. President—37.

The President: The vote stands as follows: Ayes, 36; Noes, 37. The motion to indefinitely postpone is lost. The Question now recurs upon the original resolution that the report of the committee be adopted.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I call for the ayes and noes.

A sufficient number being in favor of the ayes and noes the clerk called the roll and the vote resulted as follows: Ayes: Aiken, Browne, Burleigh, Burns (Edward), Burns (A. F.), Bickford, Conrad, Collins, Cooper, Cardwell, Craven, Callaway, Dixon, Fields, Graves, Gibson, Goddard, Hartman, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Mitchell, Middleton, Myers, Mayger, Maginnis, Ramsdell, Toole (J. R.), Toole (J. K.), Webster, Winston, Whitehill, Warren, Mr. President—35.

Nays: Brazleton, Burns (A. J.), Buford, Bullard, Breen, Carpenter, Chessman, Cauby, Courtney, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Gillette, Gaylord, Haskell, Hobson, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Joyes, Joy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Kanouse, Loud, Luce, Mulh, Marshall, Marrion, Parberry, Reek, Robinson, Rotwill, Rickards, Stapleton, Schmidt, Sargent, Witter, Watson—39.

The President: The vote stands as follows: Ayes, 35; Noes, 39. The motion to adopt the report of the committee is lost.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow, sent up a resolution to the clerk's desk, and the same was read as follows:

Resolution No. 13. "Resolved, That the legislative assembly shall have no power to make an appropriation for any purpose whatever for a longer period than two years."

The President: If there be no objection, this resolution will be received and referred to committee number 3.

Mr. Conrad, of Choleau, sent up a resolution to the clerk's desk, which was read as follows: "Resolution No. 14. Resolved, That there shall be no new counties established, unless the assessed valuation within the limits or boundaries described for the proposed county, shall be $3,000,000 or more. No territory shall be taken from any county whereby it would leave said county with less than $4,000,000 of assessed property."

The President: If there be no objection this resolution will be received and referred to the committee on city, town and county organizations.

The President: The gentleman from Park (Mr. Eaton) offers the following proposition, which the clerk will read.

The clerk read as follows:

"Proposition No. 5. Education. Article—, Section—. Every parent, guardian or other person in the state of Montana, having control of any child between the ages of 8 and 14 years who is of ordinary physical and mental strength, shall be required to send such child to a public or private school, taught by a competent instructor for a period of at least 12 weeks in each year, 6 weeks of which shall be consecutive. The legislative assembly shall by appropriate legislation carry this section into full force and effect."

The President: This proposition will be referred to the committee on education, if there be no objection.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"Proposition No. 6 offered by Mr. Eaton of Park. Labor. Article —, Section —. No child under 14 years of age shall by any corporation or person be employed in either mines or manufactures in this state."

The President: This proposition will be referred to the committee on labor (No. 23), if there be no objection.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) offers the following resolution.

The clerk read as follows:

"Resolution No. 15. Resolved, That no citizen of the state shall ever be required to obtain a license from, or to pay any tax of money to, the state, or any county thereof, or municipal corporation therein, for the privilege or authority to carry on or indulge in any trade, profession, occupation or business whatever."

The President: This resolution will be referred to committee number 7 on the finances of the state, if there be no objection.

The President: The gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) offers the following proposition.

The clerk read as follows:

"Proposition No. 7. Labor. Section 1. No corporation now existing or hereafter formed under the laws of this state, shall, after the adoption of this constitution, employ directly or indirectly in any capacity, any Chinese or Mongolian. The legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to enforce this proposition.

Section 2. No Chinese shall be employed on any state, county, municipal or other public work within this state, except as punishment for crime.

Section 3. The legislature shall discourage by all means within its power the immigration to this state of all foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States. All contracts for Chinese of coolie labor to be performed in this state to be void. All companies or corporations whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be punished by such fines and penalties as the legislature may prescribe. The legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities or towns in this state, for the removal of Chinese without the limits of such cities, and every other location within prescribed portions of those limits."

The President: If there be no objection this proposition will be referred to committee No. 23 on labor.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Burns) offers the following.

The clerk read as follows:

"Proposition No. 8. Whereas the subject of irrigation is of paramount interest to the state of Montana, and one which deserves the serious consideration of this convention, as on it depends in a great measure the future prosperity of the agricultural interests of this state, in view of this fact, the following articles shall obtain a place in this constitution. The legislature shall provide for the construction and maintenance of a system of irrigating canals and ditches in this state. Such canals and ditches to belong forever to the state, and remain under its direct control."

The President: This will properly come under the head of committee number 4, to be appointed, and it will so be referred if there be no objection.

Mr. Field, of Park: Mr. President, I offer the following resolution.

The clerk read as follows:

"Resolution No. 16, relating to the appointment of special deputies, marshals, policemen or private detectives, by sheriffs, mayors, or any other person of the state authorized by law to make such appointments. Resolved 1st. That no sheriff, mayor or any other person of the county, city or state, authorized by law to appoint special deputies, marshals, policemen or detectives in this state, to preserve the public peace, and prevent or quell public disturbances, shall hereafter appoint as such special deputies, marshals, policemen or detectives, any person who shall not have resided continuously in this state for the period of one year at least, and in the county where such appointment is made, for a period of at least six months, prior to the date of said appointment.

2. That it shall be unlawful for any person, company, association or corporation, to bring or import into this state any person or persons or association of persons, for the purpose of discharging the duties devolving upon sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, marshals, policemen, detectives, constables or peace officers, in the protection or preservation of public or private property, or in the punishment of any person violating the criminal laws of this state.

The clerk then read as follows:

"Resolution No. 17, offered by Field of Park, for the protection of discharged employees. Resolved. 1st. That if any person, agent, company or corporation, after having discharged any employe from his or its service, shall prevent or try to prevent by word or writing of any kind, such discharged employe from obtaining employment, with any other person, company or corporation, such person, agent or corporation shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable for damages to be recovered by civil action.

2. If any railway company or any other company or partnership or corporation in this state shall authorize or allow any of its or their agents to blacklist any discharged employe, or attempt by word or writing, or by any other means whatever, to prevent such discharged employe or any employe, who may have voluntarily left such service, from obtaining employment with any other person or company, such person or corporation shall be liable in treble damages to such employe so prevented from obtaining employment, to be recovered by him by a civil action.

Mr. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I wish to offer a resolution, and if the same is not in order now, I ask the unanimous consent of the convention that it be read.

The clerk read as follows:

"Resolved that it is the sense of this convention that no resolution relating to subject matter proposed to be incorporated in this constitution, shall be in order except as an amendment to the report of some committee."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I move that the rules be suspended and the resolution adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The chairman stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to understand the meaning of the resolution before I vote on it.

The clerk read the resolution.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: As this is in the nature of a rule, I would ask that the gentlemen consent to have it referred to the committee on rules.

Mr. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I would like to say this, it seems to me that we waste time in the introduction of these resolutions. The committees have been assigned to do this work, and to make reports here on all matters that come up for consideration, and when the committees report it strikes me that if anybody has anything to offer, or the report of the committee should not be accepted, then the committee's report and the matter offered would be before the house, and that would be the proper time to offer these resolutions. I noticed yesterday and part of today, that these resolutions presented here are copied from old constitutions, and I think it is an absolute waste of time, and is taking up the time of the convention. I offer it so that it may be put in working shape as soon as possible, and put in such condition that we can accomplish something, and I wish to adopt the suggestion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and ask that it be referred to the committee.

Mr. Burleigh: I withdraw my motion.

The President: The question now is upon the suspension of the rules, and allowing this resolution to be received and referred to a committee on rules. There is no debate allowed on this question unless by the courtesy of the members.

Mr. Burleigh: I would say that the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke was to refer with the consent of the author of this resolution, to the committee on rules, and I therefore thought it was unnecessary to force my motion asking for the suspension of the rules, but that I would withdraw that motion and let it go legitimately if it could to the regular order of business.

The President: Then if there be no objection, this resolution will be received and referred to the committee on rules. Resolutions number 16 or 17 offered by the gentleman from Park (Mr. Fields) will be received if there be no objection, and referred to the committee on labor. The proposition offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Hogan) will now be read.

The clerk read as follows: "Proposition No. 3. To prevent imported labor under contract into the state of Montana.

It shall be unlawful for any individual, company or corporation, having work done in the state of Montana, to import into the state any person or persons under contract or agreement to perform any labor in the state of Montana. That any individual, company or corporation violating any provision hereof, shall forfeit to the state $1000 for each and every violation hereof, to be recovered by an action at law.

The President: If there be no objection, this proposition will be referred to the committee on labor.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move that the stenographer of this convention be assigned to aid the chief clerk and the various committees as the President shall direct. We seem to have a stenographer, but with nothing to do, and there are quite a number of committees that need assistance; the chief clerk may need his assistance; and therefore I make the motion.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the stenographer be assigned to aid the chief clerk and the committees of the convention as the president may direct.

The chair then put the question and a division being called for, the motion was carried by a vote of 42 to 15.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: Mr. President, in view of the fact that the convention cannot return from Great Falls until noon Saturday, I move you now that the convention adjourn until Monday.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Mr. President, before the motion is put, I should like to ask leave of absence until 3 o'clock Monday afternoon; I desire to go home.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman from Gallatin will be excused until Monday at 3 p. m.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone, that when the convention adjourn, it adjourn until Monday at 2 o'clock P. M. I am in favor of allowing those persons who see fit to go home in the meantime, an opportunity to return before the meeting of the convention on Monday.

Mr. Maginnis: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to offer a resolution before the motion to adjourn is put. I did not have it ready in the regular order of business.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentleman will be allowed to offer the resolution.

Mr. Maginnis: I would like to have it embodied by this convention in a memorial to the president and congress of the United States.

The clerk read the resolution as follows: "Whereas the government of the United States has customarily granted to the new states all the swamp lands within their boundaries; and whereas the quantity of such land in the state of Montana is very limited and of little value, and the government should deal as liberally with this state as with our predecessors, Resolved, that in lieu of the swamp lands, the government should grant to the state of Montana all the arid lands within its boundaries, on such conditions as may provide, that the value of such lands shall be devoted to the purpose of constructing and maintaining reservoirs, aqueducts, ditches and other modes of reclaiming the same by irrigation and making them productive and valuable."

The President: If there be no objection, this resolution will be referred to the committee on irrigation. The motion now is that when the convention adjourn, it adjourn until 2 P. M., Monday.

Mr. Burleigh: Mr. President, I think the hour should be put at 4 P. M., as the eastern train does not get in until that time, and there are several gentlemen living in the eastern part of the territory who wish to go home; and I do not think, from the preparations that will undoubtedly be made at Great Falls to give the convention a fine entertainment, that they will care much about taxing their brains with any very excessive mental labor immediately upon their return. I have been in the habit of attending matters of that kind myself, and from my own experience I am strongly induced to urge the motion.

The amendment was accepted by Mr. Bickford.

The President: The question then is upon the motion to fix the hour to which the convention shall adjourn at 4 o'clock on Monday instead of 2 o'clock.

The chair then put the motion and the same was carried.

Mr. Burleigh: I move that we do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the motion and the same was duly carried and the convention stood adjourned until Monday, July 15th, 1889, at 4 o'clock P. M.

EIGHTH DAY.

Monday, July 15th, 1889.

Convention was called to order by the president at 4 o'clock P. M.

The clerk called the roll.

The President: Mr. J. R. Toole of Anaconda desires to be excused, as he desires to leave on important business. An excuse is also asked for Mr. Gaylord. If there be no objection, these gentlemen will be excused.

The clerk read the journal of the preceding day.

The chaplain offered prayer.

The clerk then read the following communications.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. President, I move you, sir, that the communication now in the hands of the clerk be referred to the committee of the whole, to be considered in connection with the report of the committee on preamble and bill of rights when the same is taken up.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the motion and the same was carried.

The clerk then read a communication from Messrs. N. W. Harris & Co., Bankers of Chicago, Ill., dated July 3rd, 1889, urging the convention to embody in the constitution a provision limiting the indebtedness of any county, city, township, school district or other municipal corporation in the state of Montana, to a rate not to exceed five per cent of the valuation of the taxable property thereof, to be ascertained by the last assessment previous to the incurring of any such indebtedness.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I move that the communication be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the motion and the same was carried.

Mr. Joy, of Jefferson: Mr. President, I desire to present the following petition and request that it be read.

The clerk then read as follows: "Petition for equal suffrage. To the honorable members of the constitutional convention of Montana. We the undersigned adult citizens of Montana, desiring that our woman citizens may enjoy all the privileges of statehood that our men will, would respectfully pray and petition your honorable body to incorporate in our state constitution about to be framed, an equal suffrage provision." The petition was signed by several citizens.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move that the petition be referred to the committee on suffrage.

The motion was seconded.

The chair then put the motion and the same was carried.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, the committee on education desire to make a report.

The President: The report of the chairman of the committee on education will now be read.

The clerk read as follows: "Mr. President, your committee on education, to whom was referred proposition number 5, introduced by Mr. Eaton, entitled education, beg leave to report that they have duly considered the same, and respectfully recommend that it do not pass.

(Signed) J. E. RICKARDS, Chairman."

Mr. Bickford: Mr. President, your committee number 1 desire to report.

The President: Does the convention desire to take any action upon the report of the committee on education with reference to the proposition?

Mr. Rickards: Mr. President, I move that it be filed for general orders.

The President: If there be no objection, it will be so referred.

The clerk read the report of committee No. 1, as follows: "Mr. President, your committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, to whom was referred resolutions No. 1, and 2, would most respectfully report that they have had the same under consideration, and return the same without recommendation.

(Signed) W. M. BICKFORD, Chairman."

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move that the report of the committee just read be placed upon file for general orders.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Maginnis: Mr. Chairman, the committee on Executive Department beg leave to report as follows, and ask that the report be printed and re-committed, or if that is not the custom of the convention, that it be placed on the general file.

The clerk read as follows: "To the president of the convention, Sir, your committee to whom was referred the subject of the Executive Department, respectfully beg leave to submit the following as their unanimous report.

(Signed) MARTIN MAGINNIS, Chairman."

"Section 4. The Executive Department shall consist of a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, State Auditor, and Superintendent of Public Instruction."

Mr. Maginnis: I do not know as there is any necessity for reading the report. The members can get at it better by having it printed and placed upon their tables.

The President: If there is no objection to dispensing with the reading of this report, it will be placed upon the general file.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: Mr. President, your committee on Printing beg leave to report.

The clerk read as follows: "Mr. President, your committee on Printing, to whom was referred the rules and order of business, have carefully examined the same, and find that they have been correctly printed."

(Signed) C. E. CONRAD, Chairman."

The clerk again read as follows: "Mr. President, the committee on Printing to whom was referred resolution No. 4, introduced by Mr. Watson of Fergus, in relation to the matter of publishing the laws, beg leave to report, that they have had the same under consideration and report it back without recommendation, believing that it is more proper for legislative action, than action by this convention."

(Signed) C. E. CONRAD, Chairman."

The President: It will require the action of this convention to have this report printed. What is the desire of the convention with reference to it?

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: Mr. President, I would desire to ask the indulgence of the convention to make a minority report, in addition to the majority report of the Printing committee. I have not been advised of anything in this committee, and it is not to my knowledge.

The President: Has the gentleman from Fergus a report prepared?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that permission be extended to the gentleman to file a minority report, when he has it ready.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The clerk then read as follows: "Mr. President, your committee on printing have carefully compared propositions Nos. 1 and 2, and examined the same, and find them correctly printed."

(Signed) C. E. CONRAD, Chairman."

The clerk again read as follows: "Mr. President, your committee on labor request longer time before reporting on proposition number 7, relating to Chinese labor, also proposition No. 3, relating to the importation of laborers under contract, and resolution No. 17, relating to the protection of discharged employes."

(Signed) PETER BREEN, Chairman."

The President: If there be no objection this committee will be allowed further time to report.

The clerk again read as follows: "Mr. President, your committee on Labor make the following report and recommend the adoption of the same. The committee on Labor recommend: Sec. 1. That a bureau of labor and industry shall be established, to be located at the capital of the state, which shall be under the management of a commissioner who shall be appointed by the Governor, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the same term as the executive state officers.

Sec. 2. The commissioner of labor and industry shall perform such duties and receive such compensation as may be prescribed by law, and it shall be the duty of the legislative assembly at its first session to prescribe such duties and compensation, and to pass such laws as may be necessary for the government, regulation and support of such bureau.

Section 3. That no person or persons convicted of a crime in the State of Montana, and while under sentence for the same, shall not be allowed to labor for any individual, company or corporation; neither shall the State have power to enter into agreement or contract with any individual, company or corporation to have convicts do any labor that will in any way compete with free labor.

Section 4. That no child under fourteen years of age shall by any corporation or person be employed in either mines or manufactories in this State.

Section 5. That on and after the adoption of this constitution by the State of Montana, it shall be unlawful for any company or corporation to pay their employes in any other way than in lawful money of the United States.

Section 6. That on and after the adoption of this constitution by the State of Montana, all state, county and municipal work shall be done by the day, and that eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work for all classes of mechanics and laborers in connection with the same.

Respectfully submitted,

PETER BREEN, Chairman."

The President: If there be no objection this report will be received, ordered printed, and placed upon the general file.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: There was a portion of the committee that was not present at the principal session of the committee on Labor, and I will ask the privilege for them of filing a minority report, if they see fit after seeing the printed copy. They were not present at the principal meeting at all, and I think it no more than right, they should be allowed that privilege.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: It seems to me, Mr. President, it would be a better plan to have the report recommended and give the minority an opportunity to file their report.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, the only two that were absent were Mr. J. R. Toole, who was called away on business and Mr. Graves. I think Mr. Graves saw the report before it was committed. I do not see the necessity of recommending it. We have met here two or three times, and that was all we could get. By giving these gentlemen leave to file a minority report, I think it is all that can be expected.

The President: Is there any objection to giving the committee leave to file a minority report? If not, such leave will be granted. I desire to state to the convention that the chairman of the committee on Legislative Departments has returned resolution number 16 stating that it was not within the province of that committee, and that it was in relation to the appointment of peace officers and private detectives, etc. If there be no objection that resolution will be referred to committee No. 5, on the Judiciary.

Mr. Buford, of Madison, sent up a resolution.

The clerk read as follows: "Resolved that the following be incorporated as a provision in the constitution and be properly numbered; no state, county or municipal officer shall hold office for more than two consecutive terms, except Senators and Representatives.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning the reference of this proposition?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I suggest that the resolution be divided, and that portion of it referring to state officers be referred to the executive committee, and the portion referring to city, town and county officers, be referred to the committee on cities, towns and counties.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The President: The proposition will be so referred.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau, sent up a resolution which the clerk read as follows: "Resolved that the legislature shall provide for a State Examiner, whose duty it shall be to examine the books and accounts of all state, district and county officers in the state, at least once a year.

The President: If there be no objection this will be referred to committee No. 3 on Legislative Departments. The chair would state that it is now ready to announce committee No. 24 on Irrigation. The committee will consist as follows: Parberry, Meyers, Burleigh, Kohrs, Luce, Graves, Mitchell, Hobson, Marion, Buford and Chessman.

The President: The regular order of business has now been passed. Is there anything further to come before the convention?

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the motion and the same was declared carried, and the convention stood adjourned until Tuesday, July 16th, 1889, at 10 A. M.

NINTH DAY.

Tuesday, July 16th, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the president at 10 A. M.

The clerk called the roll.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge was excused.

The President announced that he had a letter from Mr. Gaylord, saying that the writer was quite unwell, and acting under the advice of his physician, and that he might not be able to be in attendance for two or three days.

Mr. Gaylord was excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I beg leave to present the following memorial.

The clerk read as follows: "I herewith submit to your honors, the following, which I trust will receive at your hands the unprejudiced and nonsectarian consideration it merits."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I move to suspend the reading of the memorial and refer it to a committee.

The President: The chair is of the opinion that it requires a suspension of the rules to dispense with the reading of memorials and petitions.

Mr. Burleigh: I then move to suspend the rules.

The motion was seconded.

The chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Before that motion is put I would like to know from whom this memorial emanates.

The clerk stated that the memorial was signed "O. B. Whitford."

The chair put the motion, and a division being called for the same was carried by a vote of 46 to 7.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the committee on Legislative Departments wish to report.

The clerk read as follows: "Mr. President, the committee on Legislative Departments have had under consideration resolution number 13, and have directed me to report adversely and recommended that it lie upon the table.

(Signed J. K. TOOLE, Chairman."

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning this report.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow, requested that the resolution be read.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: That was the report of the committee, that it should simply be reported adversely. There was no report that it should lie upon the table. The accompanying report was written by the clerk and not signed.

The President: Being reported adversely, it is within the discretion of the convention whether it shall be printed or not.

Mr. Maginnis: I move that it go up on the general file.

The President: It will take that order unless otherwise disposed of. The printing of it is within the discretion of the convention. The chair would suggest to the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that the report of the committee contains this clause, "that it do lie upon the table."

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: As stated by me, that was the report as inserted by the clerk; it was not intended, and I ask that it be withdrawn.

Mr. Rotwitt, of Meagher, sent up report which the clerk read as follows: "Mr. President, your committee on suffrage, to whom was referred resolution No. 12 relating to suffrage, introduced by Allan R. Joy, have had the same under consideration, and do respectfully return it herewith with the recommendation that it do not pass.

(Signed L. ROTWITT, Chairman."

The President: This report will take its regular course, if there be no other disposition to be made of it.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, it seems to me that rule number 23 requires all matters placed on the general file to be printed.

and my idea is that it is not desirable at all, that these matters that are reported adversely should be printed. I may not be right, but that is my understanding of it—that 100 copies of the file for each day shall be printed. As soon as a matter is placed on the file, it is practically ordered to be printed.

The President: I would call the attention of the gentleman from Custer to the first part of rule Number 23, in which it says, that if reported favorably, such propositions shall be printed; otherwise they shall be within the discretion of the convention, and thereupon shall be placed upon the general file. It is true that it may seem to be conflicting as the last clause states that 100 copies of the file shall be printed each day, but the language of the rule is not ambiguous.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus, sent up a report.

The President: The minority report of the committee on printing offered by the gentleman from Fergus, will now be read.

The clerk read as follows: "The report of the minority committee on printing, etc. The undersigned, a member of the committee on printing, etc., respectfully begs leave to submit the following report upon the resolution on the subject of the publication of the general laws, which was reported back by the majority of the committee with the recommendation that no action be taken by the convention. I would have been glad of the opportunity to present to the full committee such considerations that appeared to me to be important; but was engaged upon another committee and had no notice of a meeting of the committee on printing having been called. No reason is presented by the majority of the committee for their recommendation, beyond the intimation that they believe the subject to be one which ought properly to be left for the consideration of the legislature. Of course I think it may be assumed, that it is deemed by the majority as an unimportant matter, which the legislature may or may not act upon at its discretion. The undersigned much mistakes the general tone and opinion of this convention, if they shall be found to agree with the majority after full consideration shall have been had; and he objects on his own behalf, and in his judgment on behalf of a large majority of the people.

The President: If there be no objection this report will be received and placed upon the general file; but will not be printed except by order of the convention.

Mr. Calloway, of Madison: I desire to inquire whether the report of the majority was received, as it may be of some interest to this convention, I move that the minority report be ordered printed.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The clerk has raised the question whether the preamble shall be included in the printing, or whether that portion of it which would really constitute the report.

Mr. Calloway: Mr. President, if I am in order, it seems proper to have all the report printed.

The chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I hope this motion will not carry. If we stretch the construction of the rules, so as to provide for the printing of the reports of the committees, then the general file will be lumbered with reports upon every conceivable subject from the committees of this house. I do not believe that a fair construction of the rules requires that any minority report of a committee shall be printed or shall be placed upon file. The rules, it seems to me, provide that any matter introduced relating to the constitution shall be read and referred to a committee, and that nothing shall be placed upon file except a favorable report of such committee. The committee considers everything that is placed before it and acts upon it, digests it and brings in its report. Now there is no committee of this body as I understand it, that is compelled to report adversely on any proposition. It can report adversely, but is not compelled under the rules to report adversely. It decides upon everything before it and reports, and that report it seems to me under the rules is the only thing that is placed upon the files, and is printed for the benefit of the convention. Now all these adverse reports can be brought before the convention when the report of the committee of the whole is placed before the convention.

I know this was the form of procedure in the convention of 1884, and I do not believe the rules of this convention are so materially changed, that this is not the proper construction of the present rule. Certainly if you allow every report to be placed on file and printed, and allow every member of this convention to make voluminous reports upon every subject before it, then we might as well make up our minds to stay here all summer, and possibly a little longer.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I heartily concur in the remarks made by the gentleman from Cascade. There can be no doubt that if matters of this kind go onto the general file, whether printed or not, that we have a six months job before us. Every one of these little matters will necessitate perhaps half a day or a day's time in their discussion; and, as has been suggested, if any member or a minority of a committee, are of the opinion, or desire to report in some other way, they can offer it in the way of a substitute or amendment to the report at the time the report is received; they can both go in together, so that if one or the other goes on the file, they will constitute but one report. Now the report of the majority on this resolution was adverse; that is not printed or ordered printed. Here is a report of one of a committee of five, which it is proposed to order printed and placed on the general file. I am certainly opposed to it and do not think it is a proper way to get at it. We never can make a constitution on earth in that kind of way.

Mr. Poole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I think there is a misapprehension on what is intended by the general file, and I think the attention of the convention ought to be called to it at this time in connection with this particular subject. I do not believe it was the intention of the committee on rules in the formation of rule No. 23, that these several propositions that were reported back from committees of the convention should be reported back and numbered General Files No. 1, 2, 3, 4, etc., but that it was the intention of the committee that when a report was made favorable, that that proposition, whatever it was, should be numbered proposition No. 1, 2, or 3, as the case might be, and that it should be printed as such, and that it should be shown that it had gone to the committee of the whole, and that is what was meant by the sentence at the close of rule No. 23, that 100 copies of the general file shall be printed each day, so that something in the form of a calendar should be had for each day, showing that proposition No. 2 was reported on a certain day from a certain committee, and was then pending before the committee of the whole; that propositions No. 3, 4 and 5, should they be reported adversely as the case might be, had been reported back and were pending, and that from day to day, a calendar or general file should be printed, showing what business was then pending before the convention. There is nothing now for the information of this convention except to hunt up what are denominated general files, and get them together, by which we can ascertain what business is before the convention, whereas I think the intention of the committee on rules was that a general file or calendar, if you please, should be printed each day, showing what business was then pending before the committee of the whole, so that every member of the convention should be able to pick up that calendar or general file and ascertain at once what business was then pending before the committee; and as was suggested by the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton), it was never designed to print anything except those reports which were reported back favorably, and if there should be an adverse report, or if there should be a report made without any recommendation whatever, that so far as the printing was concerned, it was to be in the hands of the convention, and it was considered that in the event that there was a minority report, or a favorable report in which every question was considered at length or liberally discussed, it should remain for the convention to say whether or not that report should be printed. The suggestion I made in the outset, I think ought to be passed upon in some sort of way, either by the president or the convention itself in the interests of the orderly dispatch of business.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, to bring this matter directly before the convention I rise to a point of order that the motion is not in order under the rules.

The President: The chair would like to have the sense of the convention upon this subject.

Mr. Calloway, of Madison: I would like to ask for information from the gentleman as to what rule governs this motion.

Mr. Collins: The motion of the gentleman from Madison is that this entire report be placed upon the general file and printed as I understand it. Now rule No. 23 provides as follows: "All propositions and resolutions embracing matters proposed to be incorporated in the constitution, the printing of which is provided for in subdivision 23, and all other printing for the use of the convention shall be done under direction" etc. There is not a word that any report of a committee shall be printed, neither in that rule, nor in any other of the rules of our convention. My idea is that under a fair construction of the rules, nothing can be printed except by the consent of the convention, unless it be a majority report of a committee; but certainly under no rule, nor under any radical construction of a rule, can a report of a committee be printed, unless the house first says so.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the chair to rule No. 23, in which all points of order are submitted to the President of the convention. He can pass upon them in the first instance, and then if any member of the convention feel dissatisfied it can be submitted to the convention.

The President: The rule, I believe, is that the chair may ask the consent of the convention, if he is himself in doubt upon any question. The chair desires to give the widest liberality to the minority, and unless it is insisted upon, the chair would prefer that the convention should decide the point itself.

Mr. Collins: I withdraw the point of order, Mr. President.

The President: The point of order is withdrawn.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask for information, what was done with the majority report that was considered yesterday.

The clerk announced that the report of the majority of the committee was placed on general orders.

The President: I would state to the gentleman from Silver Bow, that the report was not ordered to be printed.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I understood from the chair that the majority report had been ordered printed; and I so understood it in making my motion; if that report has not been ordered printed, I shall certainly ask consent to withdraw my motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I believe this matter will come before the convention every day, and I would like to ask the President to give a decision on the matter.

The President: The chair is of the opinion that no report, except the report of the committee which necessarily is a majority report, can be ordered printed. If it is a favorable report it will take its regular course and be ordered printed; if it is an adverse report, it can only be printed by order of the convention.

Mr. Collins: Is it the view of the chair that not the report itself; but the propositions and resolutions which they recommend shall be adopted or rejected shall be printed?

The President: The proposition or resolution itself, of course, if reported favorably shall be ordered printed.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I do not know whether all this discussion is in order or not; but since the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) raises the question, it does appear to me that a minority report should be treated with as much deference and respect as the majority report. I do not believe that the sense of this convention would order otherwise, and as I understand rule No. 23, or subdivision No. 23, as it is called, the printing of the report was that part of it to be embodied in the constitution. That was the part that was to be printed at the discretion of this convention.

The President: reading "The majority report if favorable shall be printed."

Mr. Rickards: But the minority report can be printed at the discretion of this convention.

The President: Of course the minority report can be taken up and printed. The convention can order anything done; but according to this rule it would not be in order at this time.

Mr. Maginnis: Mr. Chairman, in case of a majority report, as I understand, you simply report the matters that the committee reports, not the report itself; otherwise I should be very strongly of the same opinion as the gentleman from Silver Bow. The rights of the minority in this convention are just as sacred as the rights of the majority, and if there was but one single man who felt himself aggrieved, or his sense of justice abused, I would be in favor of giving him every privilege, going so far as to give him the same right to print and put his views upon the records of this convention as all the rest of the members of the convention. But if the rule stands as interpreted by the chair, that each will have to appeal to the convention, I see no necessity for further action.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, it does not seem to me that there should be any difficulty in the interpretation of this rule. There is nothing in rule 23 that authorizes the report itself, whether favorable or unfavorable, to be printed, as a matter of course or otherwise. It refers simply to the propositions. All the propositions and resolutions embracing matter likely to be incorporated in the constitution, reported by a standing or special committee, shall be read and reported, and if reported back favorably, not such report but such resolution or proposition shall be ordered printed; otherwise the printing thereof shall be within the discretion of the convention, and thereupon the same shall be placed upon the general file kept by the clerk; that is the general file which I suggested a moment ago; not the printing of the proposition itself at length, but the general file or calendar, whatever you may be pleased to call it; but it especially provides that not the report but the resolution or proposition shall be printed.

The President: That principle the chair holds to be correct.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the committee on towns and counties to the resolution which I introduced in relation to county and precinct officers, four days ago. No report has as yet been made.

The President: Can the chairman of that committee give the gentleman any information?

Mr. Brown, of Choleau: I would say, Mr. President, that the time in which the committee was given to report has not yet elapsed.

The President: The gentleman explains that the time in which the committee was given to report has not yet elapsed, and that the committee has further time in which to make a report on the proposition.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I desire to introduce the following resolution and move its adoption.

The President: The clerk will read the resolution offered by the gentleman from Park.

The clerk read as follows: "Whereas under the provision of the enabling act of congress, the employes of this convention have been limited, defined and designated, so far as the liability of the general government is concerned to pay the same; and whereas this convention has employed clerks and pages largely in excess of the requisite and necessary number required; and whereas the state of Montana will be called upon to pay such unwarranted expenditures of money; and whereas to reduce the force of the employes of this convention would not impede or retard the labors of this body,

Therefore be it resolved that two pages, three clerks, and the assistant sergeant at arms, be and they are hereby discharged.

The motion was seconded by Mr. Robinson.

The President stated the question.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, in support of that resolution, I simply desire to say that I believe that the extra persons or the persons named are entirely unnecessary to the orderly and speedy dispatch of the business before this body.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to a point of order, and beg to refer you, sir, to rule 23. The point of order is that these resolutions should be referred to the proper committee without debate.

The President: I would say that the chair would suggest to the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, that rule 22 refers as the chair understands it to propositions and resolutions relating to matter to be incorporated in the constitution. This is a matter that is not concerned in the constitution, and is not a matter to be incorporated in the constitution, and hence I decide that the point of order is not well taken.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Continuing, Mr. President, I simply desire to close by saying, that these employes being as I understand it not at all necessary, and solely a burden and expense, shall though it be, to the future state of Montana, I see no reason why they should be continued here under pay. I therefore move that resolution and I hope it will prevail.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I had the honor last winter to be a member of one branch of the legislature, and from a political point of view was in the minority, or rather with the minority. In each house of the legislature which was entitled according to law to identically the same number of employes and attaches that we are entitled to in this convention under the enabling act of congress, a resolution was introduced early in the session in both houses, that five additional clerks be employed in each house, which resolution was adopted; so that in each house of the legislature, one composed of twelve members and the other composed of twenty-four, they had the same number of clerks that we have in this convention of seventy-five members. The people of the Territory of Montana did not complain that that was an unreasonable number of clerks. Here is an unwieldy body of seventy-five men. A large amount of clerical work is to be done, and from day to day as we progress that clerical work will be increased. It seems to me that this resolution is certainly uncalled for, that it indicates a disposition not in harmony with the sentiments of this convention. I have no hesitation in saying that I believe one of the first things that the legislature of the state of Montana will do, when it has convened, is to pass a resolution or a law appropriating sufficient money to pay these extra attaches. We have here, it is true, three pages more than we had in either house of the legislature; with that exception the number of attaches of this convention is identical with the number of attaches of one house of the last legislature. Now why is it that our friend from Park has become so parsimonious as to intimate by resolution or otherwise that we do not need these clerks or employes in a convention like this, when his own people last winter saw fit and deemed it necessary to use as many attaches in each house of the legislature. I am certainly opposed to the resolution. I do not believe it is the sense of this convention. I do not believe that it is a party measure; I do not believe it ought to be looked upon in that way. But I certainly am opposed to anything in the nature of such a resolution, and I believe the time will come within ten days, when we will find that it is absolutely impossible to get along with the number of clerks that we have now; that it will be necessary to employ other clerks and perhaps stenographers, in order that this convention will not last all summer. I certainly hope the resolution will not prevail.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, my views upon this proposition have been expressed to this convention heretofore, too thoroughly to require any reiteration, but I certainly stand in and endorse the proposition of the author of this resolution, for the reason that when I look around me, and see what these pages and clerks are doing, and what is required of them, I see the entire utter uselessness of them. I do not see any use for retaining them. It is wholly immaterial to me as a member of this convention what the last legislature did or did not do, that is no guide for us; they may have been a lively body of men requiring a dozen additional clerks and pages; but we can see—from the effect upon this convention, we can see its requirements, and we can see that no more pages are required than these two boys that we have here. We can see too well that these extra clerks are not employed. They are drones; they are doing nothing worth speaking of, if anything at all. Then irrespective of what the last legislative assembly did or did not do we can see as a practical problem that we have no use for these supernumeraries. Therefore, Mr. President, I am in favor of the motion prevailing.

Mr. McAdow, of Fergus: Mr. President, it seems to me that this convention has rather got into a penurious and parsimonious mood. I do not see any necessity why this convention should take up so much time in trying to cut down the wages of a few pages and clerks. Now I think it is necessary, if we want to get to work and do our duty, that these pages and clerks will be required to wait upon this convention. This convention meet here, and they refer resolutions after resolutions that are offered, to committees that are appointed. These committees are composed of intelligent gentlemen, and are supposed to take care of their part of what it is intended they shall do; but these resolutions are shoved in upon them, instructing them and suggesting to them to do such and such a thing. Now if I understand the business of this convention, we expect to go into committee of the whole, and act upon the reports of these committees, and sir, if it is necessary, and these gentlemen want to make their amendments, then is the proper time to put in the amendments and have them discussed. All these resolutions that are thrown in here have to be printed. And, while I am in sympathy with the gentleman from Fergus in regard to his resolution, and believe it is right, at the proper time that can be put in as an amendment and we can get through with this work, and this $20,000 will pay for the services of the clerks; but if it should go beyond that, if they are afraid that the people of Montana will not pay any part of this extravagance as they call it, let the members of this convention chip in a few dollars and settle this whole matter. If we go on as we should do, and do our work, these attaches will certainly be employed, and I would now like to see us get down to work if possible, and attend to our work, and I think we will have no trouble about money.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I would simply like to ask one question of the gentlemen who have spoken in opposition to this resolution. I would like to appeal to the good sense of this convention, and ask them what possible use this body has for an assistant sergeant at arms. I cannot conceive of any possible function that that officer has been called upon to perform since this convention met. Now the question of extravagance and the question of parsimony and this, that and the other does not pertain to this question. It is simply a practical question of what we need and I believe we are perfectly competent to decide what officers we need without reference to the respective bodies of the legislature, or what they did or did not have. I think that our own knowledge is sufficient. With reference to the other questions which were indirectly touched upon, I do not propose to enter upon them. It is certainly beneath my dignity at least to follow up that particular line of argument. The question at issue is just exactly what clerks we need for the actual transaction of business here, nothing more, nothing less.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, if there is any time in the world when we will need the extra assistance which has been provided here, the time is certainly approaching if it has not already arrived. It is fair to say that during the last week which was the first week of this convention, the business of this convention has been in such a condition as that perhaps this assistance was not needed, but at this time the committees have under consideration certain business which has been presented to this convention and they are each at work making reports; and the time is rapidly approaching when the convention will be in session perhaps from four to six or eight hours per day for the consideration of the general business of the convention which will embrace every proposition submitted to this convention and then it will be that the pages which have been authorized by the rules of this convention, will certainly be needed for the aid and assistance of members who will not be as they now are in the different committee rooms considering these propositions; but who will be in this convention where their services and attention will be required. And I undertake to say to the gentleman from Park, that the assistant sergeant at arms will perhaps have enough employment in this convention from this time on to the day of its adjournment. The assistant sergeant at arms may be sent into the city or elsewhere at the call of the house. It will be necessary at least that the assistant sergeant at arms shall be at the door and that his services will be required in the performance of such other duties as will necessarily be required by this convention. I do not believe, Mr. President, that the people of this territory or of the proposed state of Montana would expect that seventy-five members who have come here to serve their constituents in the great work of making this constitution should be compelled to stay here without the necessary aid and assistance of these employes. They came here once willingly upon the call of the legislative assembly, and for four weeks they performed these duties that are now devolving upon this convention without a dollar of compensation. I think the people of this territory are quite content that that sort of service shall never be rendered without the necessary aid and the necessary compensation for that purpose. I believe, sir, that this assistance is necessary and I believe that the time has now arrived, when from now on it will be necessary to have here every particle of the assistance which we have provided for by the resolution of this convention, and for that reason, sir, I am opposed to the motion of the gentleman from Park.

The President then put the question, and a division being called for by Mr. Eaton, the chair announced that there were 14 voting in the affirmative, and 41 in the negative, and the motion was declared lost.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move that the convention adjourn.

The motion was seconded, was declared carried, and the convention stood adjourned until Wednesday, July 17th, 1889, at 10 o'clock A. M.

ADJOURNED.

TENTH DAY.

Wednesday, July 17th, 1889.

The convention called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The clerk called the roll.

The chaplain offered prayer.

The clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: Mr. President, I have a petition from the citizens of Madison County, which I would like to have referred to the committee on Suffrage.

The President: The memorial offered by the gentleman from Madison will now be read.

The clerk read as follows:

"To the Honorable Members of the Constitutional Convention of Montana.

We, the undersigned, adult citizens of Montana desiring that our women citizens may enjoy all the privileges of statehood that our men will, would respectfully pray and petition your honorable body to incorporate in the state constitution about to be formed an equal suffrage provision.

(Signed) EDWIN COOLEY, and 30 others."

The President: If there be no objection this memorial will be received and referred to the committee on Suffrage.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow, sent up report of the Judiciary committee.

The President: The report of the chairman of the Judiciary committee is presented and will be read by the clerk.

The clerk read as follows: "Report of the Judiciary committee on resolution No. 16. Mr. President, the judiciary committee to whom was referred resolution No. 16, relating to the appointment of special deputies, detectives, etc., report that they have considered the same and herewith report it back adversely, and recommend that it be not incorporated in the constitution, all of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) W. W. DIXON, Chairman."

Mr. Browne, of Choteau, sent up the following report which was read by the clerk: "Mr. President, your committee to whom was referred resolution No. 18 introduced by Mr. Buford, report that they have had the same under consideration and respectfully return same with the recommendation that it do not pass.

(Signed) DAVID G. BROWNE, Chairman."

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I wish to ask what committee this is, Mr. President?

The President: The committee on city, town and county organizations.

The clerk read a report from the same committee as follows: "Mr. President, your committee, to whom was referred resolution No. 9 introduced by Mr. Kennedy, beg leave to report that they have had the same under consideration, and respectfully return the same with the recommendation that it do not pass.

Signed DAVID G. BROWNE, Chairman,
Committee on county, town and city organization."

Mr. Callaway, of Madison, sent up the following report which was read by the clerk: "Mr. President, your committee on boundaries, public lands and homestead exemptions, beg leave to report and respectfully recommend that the following provisions be incorporated in and embrace a part of the constitution.

Article 1—Boundaries.

Section 1. The boundaries and jurisdiction of the State of Montana shall be as follows, to-wit: Commencing at a point formed by the intersection of the 27th degree of longitude west from Washington with the forty-fifth degree of north latitude; thence due west on the forty-fifth degree of latitude to a point formed by its intersection with the thirty-fourth degree of longitude west from Washington; thence due south, along the thirty-fourth degree of longitude, to a point formed by its intersection with the crest of the Rocky Mountains; thence following the crest of the Rocky Mountains northward till its intersection with the Bitter Root mountains; thence northward along the crest of the Bitter Root mountains to its intersection with the thirty-ninth degree of longitude west of Washington; thence along the thirty-ninth degree of longitude northward to the boundary line of the British Possessions; thence eastward along that boundary line of the 27th degree of longitude west from Washington; thence southward along the 27th degree of longitude, to the place of beginning.

The President: This report will be referred to the printing committee, and ordered to be printed if there be no objection and placed on file.

Mr. Rotwitt, of Meagher, sent up the following report which was read by the clerk: "Mr. President, your committee on rights of suffrage, and qualifications to hold office having had such subject under consideration, respectfully submit and recommend its adoption."

The President: This report will take the usual course and be ordered printed if there be no objection.

Mr. Callaway sent up a further report which was read by the clerk as follows: "Mr. President, your committee on boundaries, public lands and homestead exemptions, to whom was referred resolution No. 8 introduced by Mr. Luce, beg leave to report that they have had the same under consideration, and respectfully recommend that the same in substance and in due form be incorporated as a provision in the constitution.

Signed CALLAWAY, Chairman."

The President: This report will take the usual course if there be no objection.

Mr. Kohrs, of Deer Lodge, sent up the following report which was read by the clerk: "Report of committee No. 16. We, your committee on agriculture, manufactures, commerce and immigration, beg leave to submit the following report. We have diligently inquired into the various means and ways which may have a tendency to promote the different interests above named, and are of the opinion that there should be established a bureau for statistics on agriculture, manufacture and commerce to which may be added the branch of labor and we herewith recommend the following sections to be adopted in a separate article of our constitution:

Section 1. A bureau of agriculture, manufacture and commerce shall be established to be located at the capital of the State, which shall be under the management of a commissioner who shall be appointed by the governor and confirmed by a majority of the senate and hold his office for the term of four years from the day of confirmation by the Senate.

Section 2. The commissioner of agriculture, manufactures and commerce shall perform all such duties and receive such compensation as may be prescribed by law, and it shall be the duty of the legislative assembly at its first session to prescribe such duties and compensation and to pass such laws as may be necessary for the government, regulation and support of said bureau.

(Signed C. KOHRS, Chairman.)

The President: This report will be referred to the printing committee to be printed.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Mr. President, I offer the following resolution.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Gallatin will be read by the clerk.

The clerk read as follows: "Resolved, that the legislative assembly shall have the power to limit by law the number of retail dealers in liquors, wines, ales and beer, and any and all other intoxicating liquors or drinks in the counties, cities and towns of the State, in proportion to the number of inhabitants of such counties, cities and towns, respectively, and to prescribe the qualifications of persons who may so retail the same therein, and to prescribe all rules and regulations for the sale thereof."

The President: The gentleman offering this resolution asks that it be referred to committee No. 7. If there be no objection, it will be so referred.

The clerk read the following resolution, also offered by Mr. Luce, "Resolved that gambling of any kind whatever shall not be deemed a legitimate trade, occupation, profession or business, and may be prohibited by appropriate legislation."

The President: The gentleman also requests that this resolution be referred to committee No. 7. If there be no objection it will be so referred.

Mr. Browne, of Choteau, offered the following resolution, which was read by the clerk as follows: "Resolved that the legislative assembly of the state of Montana shall have no power to reduce or increase the fees or salaries of county or state officers during the terms of office for which they are elected."

The President: If there be no objection, this will be referred to committee No. 10 on city, county and town organizations.

Mr. Hammond, of Jefferson, offered the following proposition which was also read by the clerk as follows: "Proposition relating to Gambling, Article—, Section—. No games of cards, dice, billiards, pool or any form of gambling whatsoever shall be permitted or allowed to be carried on in any building or room where intoxicating liquors are sold, or exposed for sale."

The President: If there be no objection, this proposition will be referred to committee on miscellaneous provisions.

Mr. Loud, of Custer, sent up the following resolution which was read by the clerk as follows: "Corporations other than municipal. Resolved that the Governor shall upon his qualifying and entering upon the duties of his office under this constitution, appoint by and with the approval of the Senate, a Board of Railroad Commissioners, to consist of three members whose compensation and duties shall be as prescribed by law."

The President: If there be no objection, this resolution will be referred to committee No. 12.

The clerk read the following which was also offered by Mr. Loud: "Corporations other than municipal. Resolved that no railroad, express, or other transportation company, doing business in the state of Montana, shall pool or enter into any arrangement or agreement with any other similar corporation or company whereby the rates and charges for the transportation of passengers or freight by such companies or corporations, shall be removed from natural competition, and the legislature is required to pass laws for the enforcement of this prohibition."

The President: If there be no objection, this resolution will be referred to committee No. 12.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I believe there was no disposition made the other day of resolution, which I think was No. 7, relating to the employment and compensation of the stenographer, and I move you that that resolution be now referred to a special committee of seven to be appointed by the chair.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that resolution No. 7, offered by the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins), be referred to a special committee of seven to be appointed by the chair.

The chair put the question, and the same was declared carried.

The clerk read the following communication:

"Helena, Montana, July 16th, 1889.

Hon. W. A. Clark, President,

Constitutional Convention, Helena, Montana.

Dear Sir:

I herewith tender my immediate resignation as Assistant Chief Clerk of the Constitutional Convention of Montana.

Respectfully,

(Signed) WILLIAM TAYLOR."

The President: If there be no objection, this resignation will be accepted.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning the filling of this office.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I think, Mr. President, the position should be filled. I think that we have arrived at that stage in the convention when we should have a much larger force than we have now, so as to enable the convention to transact its business and get home. This thing of economy that has been preached here, so far as the force of clerks is concerned is the sheerest nonsense in the world. I am in favor of increasing the force here, to a sufficient extent to enable the convention to go on and complete its work with the utmost dispatch consistent with the due order which should attend our deliberations. I move that the position be filled forthwith.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the motion and the same was declared duly carried.

The President: Are there any nominations for the office of Assistant Clerk?

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, there is a lady in Helena, who is looking for a position of that kind and who came before this convention before, for a position as clerk, but she had another position offered her and withdrew her application before this convention. I will place her name in nomination. She is a good stenographer, and I think will make a good Assistant Clerk. I nominate for that office Miss Jennie Merriman.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move that the nominations be closed.

The President: As many as are in favor of electing Miss Merriman to the office of Assistant Clerk, will say aye and those opposed, no.

The motion was carried and Miss Merriman was declared elected to fill the position of Assistant Clerk.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I move you that we now go into committee of the whole.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I hope we may be allowed one day more to go on and finish our committee work. I am satisfied that if the committees are allowed one day more, they will be ready to report tomorrow, and it seems to me that if we break in here by going into committee of the whole, it is really interfering with and obstructing the progress of the convention and its work, and I do hope that we may be allowed one day more in which to go on and complete our work in the different committees. After that I shall not interpose any objection to going into committee of the whole.

The chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton).

Mr. Burleigh called for a division, and the chair announced the motion lost.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move that the convention do now adjourn until tomorrow morning, and that the time be fixed at 9 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The motion is that the time to which the convention shall adjourn, shall be fixed at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I have been requested to make an application for Mr. H. B. Blackwell, Secretary of the American Woman's Suffrage Association, for the privilege of addressing the convention.

The President: If the gentleman from Silver Bow will allow me, the motion is not to adjourn, but to fix the time to which the convention shall adjourn.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. President, I would like to make an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Callaway) that we adjourn to meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the motion of the gentleman from Madison be amended and that the convention take a recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, it seems to me that if we are to go into committee of the whole, it is very important that the committees should be prepared for the work of this convention. It seems to me to be much better to adjourn regularly from day to day until this business comes before the committee of the whole; then, if it is necessary to have an afternoon session, we can have it. At present I think it is to the interest of the convention not to have an afternoon session; it would interfere with the work of the committees.

The chair then put the motion and the same was declared lost.

The President: The question is now upon the original motion that the hour be fixed at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The chair put the motion to fix the hour for adjournment at 9 o'clock the following morning, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move, Mr. President, if it be in order that on the conclusion of the call of the order of business, Mr. Henry B. Blackwell, Secretary of the American Woman's Suffrage Association, be invited to address the convention.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow, seconded the motion.

The President: It is moved and seconded that after the order of business is exhausted, that the Hon. Henry B. Blackwell of Massachusetts, be requested to address the convention.

Mr. Eaton: I desire to offer an amendment to the motion.

The President: The gentleman from Park offers an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, that the Hon. Henry B. Blackwell be invited to deliver an address in this hall at 8 P. M., today.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. President, I move to lay the motion and the amendment on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question and there being a call for the Ayes and Noes, the chair announced that the vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Burns (Edward), Craven, Gillette, Graves, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Joy, Joyce, Kennedy, Kohrs, Luce, Marion, Mayger, Mitchell, Muth, Robinson, Rotwitt, Schmidt, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter—24.

Noes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Bulford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns (A. F.), Burns (A. J.), Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durtée, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Hammond, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Knowles, Loud, Magnus, Marshall, Middleton, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reed, Rickards, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, Warren, Webster, Mr. President—48.

The President: The question now recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Park.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: In connection with that matter, I will state that it was the intention of Mr. Blackwell to leave at 3:15 this afternoon for Washington Territory; he will only detain the convention for 20 or 30 minutes. He will be brief in his remarks, and I think it is a matter we should hear, instead of having the lecture delivered to people this evening, who will probably take but little interest in it, and who are not members of the convention. If this amendment carries, of course Mr. Blackwell will be unable to speak.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, I have no desire to seem lacking in courtesy on this or other similar propositions; but it seems to me if this convention is unable to spare the time necessary to listen to a petition from one of our citizens, as was seemingly the case yesterday, when a petition was referred to a committee without having been fully read, that following that precedent, we can spare no time—none of our valuable time—for the purpose asked, and therefore I am opposed to this resolution.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, the objection that I entertain to a proposition of this character is that I am opposed to this convention even dignifying the applications of men from outside. We do not want such propositions as this or any other. We are perfectly capable of managing our own affairs here without these people coming from the outside and wanting to intrude themselves upon our attention. I want to treat them the same way that this convention treated those Chicago bankers the other day, and show them that we can take care of our own affairs. We can take care of our own affairs without them, and we have something else to do. Our time is all employed without such interference from them, and for that reason, Mr. President, I moved to lay the whole proceeding on the table. I am opposed to dignifying these applications even with the respectful vote of the convention.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I wish only to say a few words. There are men undoubtedly in this convention, as there are everywhere, that are afraid that they will get some light from the outside; they are afraid that some information will come to them from some source. Now there are some people who are very sethish in this respect about Montana, and about her productions and her people and it is a wonder to me that they have read any literature from any other country than that which is published in Montana. Now in regard to this question of Woman Suffrage. It is a question that has a respectable following in the east; men of prominence and influence all over the country are interested in this subject, and Mr. Blackwell is a man of character and standing, a man that has been before the public on this question for 20 years or more, and if he has anything to say upon this question, let us hear it. It is not necessary we should adopt his views. It is not necessary that the distinguished gentleman from Deer Lodge should even listen to them; we can excuse him from this convention if he does not wish to hear them. But there are some here that would like to hear what is to be said upon this question. If there is any new light to come from any source, let us arise and meet it. Let us not by a sneer or by narrowness, or by wrapping ourselves up in the opinion that Montana knows everything she needs to know, and close the door to everything that can come from the outside. I am in favor of hearing what the gentleman has to say on this subject.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I am a little surprised at the insinuation of Judge Knowles, that the members of this convention do not wish to hear anything on this subject. That was not the point. A few days ago a noted temperance lecturer came to this town, and he kindly invited this convention to go to a public place and hear him. Many of the members accepted that invitation. Now if we are to listen upon this question, and invite lecturers before this convention, I am certain there are other interests here, besides woman suffrage, and if we invite gentlemen here to lecture to us upon that subject, the people who are interested in our mines—I understand that question will come up—there are gentlemen, eloquent speakers in this Territory who would like to be here, and who are not members of this convention; and in regard to corporations, railroad corporations. If we start this business by inviting people who are interested in what this convention does, we will spend our whole time in listening to gentlemen who desire the privilege of addressing this convention. Now if this gentleman desires to address this convention, let him appoint a time and place in this city, where all the members can go and not take the time of the convention in listening to him. Then there is the question of the precedent it establishes. The gentleman has no more right to ask our time than any other one who is interested in the passage of any of the propositions which come before this convention, and for that reason, I am opposed to this motion. If he is invited, I shall be glad to hear him, for I am pleased to confess, that while I am not much taken with this principle of woman suffrage, still I would like to hear an able exponent; but I object to his taking up our time here in asking us to invite him here; and I will go as I say, if he will appoint a place on the outside.

The chair then stated the motion.

The ayes and noes were called for.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau, asked if it was compulsory upon the members to be present at 8 o'clock in the evening, when Mr. Blackstone would address the convention, and the chair informed the convention that the attendance was not necessarily compulsory.

The ayes and noes being called, the chair announced that there were 55 voting in the affirmative and 13 voting in the negative. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns (A. F.), Burns (A. J.), Burns (Edward), Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durice, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marshall, Mayger, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Webster, Wilter, Mr. President—56.

Noes: Craven, Canby, Hartman, Joy, Kennedy, Mitchell, Marion, Robinson, Rotwitt, Winston, Whitehill, Watson, Warren—13.

Absent: Gibson, Gaylord, Haskell, Hatch, McAdow, J. R. Toole.

The chair then announced the motion carried, and the Honorable Henry B. Blackwell was thereby invited to address the members of the convention at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The President then announced that he was in receipt of a note from Mr. Blackwell, saying that he would accept the invitation for 8 o'clock the same evening.

Mr. Eaton, of Park, suggested that the galleries should be thrown open to the public in the evening.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, suggested that the floor of the house be open as well as the galleries.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: This is the action of the convention, and it is the action of the convention as a body. This hall is for the purpose of the deliberations of this convention, and I do not see under the rules of the house, how the privileges of this floor can be extended to outside parties. Under the rules of the house I do not see how it can be without suspending the rules, for they prescribe who shall be entitled to a seat upon the floor of the convention. It is the action of the convention and the members will be in the convention assembled as the convention. If that is the case, I do not see how the rules can be transgressed by inviting other parties upon the floor.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I do not think it would be advisable to give the floor of the convention to outsiders. I suppose every member of this convention will be here and in his seat. There is very little room outside of that occupied by the members. I beg the pardon of the gentleman from Deer Lodge. When I say that every gentleman will be present, I would qualify that by saying that every member except the gentleman from Deer Lodge will be here.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The President: There is an invitation here, which the clerk will read with the permission of the convention before the motion to adjourn is put.

The clerk then read a communication from Howard J. Lowry, Photographer, Pittsburg Block, Helena, Montana, inviting the members of the convention to call and have their photographs taken, so that the photographer might arrange them in groups for the purpose of preserving as an historical memento of the occasion, photographs of the different members.

The chair then put the question on the motion to adjourn, and the same was declared carried.

The following is the address of the Hon. Henry B. Blackwell, delivered before the members of the constitutional convention on Wednesday evening, July 17th, 1889, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention:

I should not presume to be here to address you upon this important question, if I were not commissioned to do so by the American Woman's Suffrage Association, of which I am Secretary; nor would the Association have commissioned me to do so, if it had not been in their judgment, a period of unusual and critical importance, not only to the cause which I am here to advocate, but to the country to which we all belong. It is a very impressive and a very novel spectacle to see a great territory, extending almost from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Coast, moving with one common purpose from territorial conditions into those of statehood; and we feel in the east that that change is one of the very greatest social and political importance, destined to have very grave consequences upon the future legislation of this country; and we feel that it is very important that in the organization of these new states, you will not put up those barriers against the growth of public opinion, that in our eastern states have made it almost impossible in many cases for the legislatures to reflect the public will.

For I need not remind you gentlemen, that when you organize your state constitution, if you place in that constitution, in the clause upon suffrage the word "male" as a limitation, unless you accompany it with some other provision, you put an almost insuperable barrier against any future step in the direction of equal suffrage for all citizens without regard to sex. Those barriers exist in the eastern states because they were organized, many of them, more than 100 years ago. But you have been hitherto free from those barriers, ever since the Territory of Montana was organized your legislatures have had the right by the enabling act of congress to extend suffrage at your pleasure to all citizens irrespective of sex. You have not seen fit to do it, simply because no large body of your citizens has asked for it, and we—our association—have never come here to ask for it because we are not desirous of interfering with the institutions of the different states and territories. But when you organize your state, we do desire—we do most deeply desire—that you should feel it possible to take the great step in social and political progress which woman suffrage means, and that you should put into the body of your constitution, a clause reciting that all citizens 21 years of age, of sound mind, not convicted of crime, shall have the right of suffrage irrespective of sex. But if, gentlemen, in your judgment, public sentiment is not ripe for this, if in your judgment your constituents are not at present ready for that change, then we ask you simply to continue in your state constitution, the same political status of the women of Montana, which they have occupied ever since you were a territory—in other words—that when you come into the full exercise of your own rights as a sovereign state in this Union, you shall not accompany that act by putting a barrier that did not before exist, in the way of the intelligent women of Montana Territory, if they ever desire and express a general demand for suffrage. I may be told, that if such a desire is expressed, a constitutional amendment may be submitted, and that the people may vote upon it and change it. That in the abstract is true; but practically as you know, gentlemen, without a political party organized upon the question, it is almost impossible to obtain the verdict of the people, because it is difficult to obtain their attention to a question of this character; and I will simply allude to our experience in the territory of Colorado when it became a state in 1876. It was provided by the constitutional convention of Colorado, that the following legislature should submit a constitutional amendment to the people, and it was so submitted; and at an expense of several thousand dollars a number of eminent speakers were secured who gave their services and visited almost every organized precinct in that state. You know it is very much like your own state, largely composed of mining camps, largely composed of large cattle ranches. We held several hundred meetings. At the close of every meeting we took a vote, and after having heard the arguments and listening to the reasons, the vote was in every case almost unanimous for woman suffrage, and I was told by no less a gentleman than Mr. Allen, who is talked of so much in the Territory of North Dakota as likely to be their first Governor, that he then lived in Colorado, and he said that the politicians generally expected it would be carried; but unfortunately the men who were opposed to it, did not attend the meetings. Every man who beat his wife, every man who habitually got drunk, every man who didn't know his right hand from his left voted solidly against it; and enough conservative men, who believe that everything that is, is right, and that everything new is wrong, they voted with them. The matter had not had a fair consideration before the people, and the result was, that upon a light vote, it was voted down. Now the point is this: your legislature will be an intelligent body of men, selected by the people for the purpose of considering public questions, paid for their time to come here, and consider such questions as this, and if you put into your constitution a provision empowering your legislature hereafter at its discretion to extend suffrage to all citizens 21 years of age, of sound mind, not convicted of crime, without regard to sex, this subject will be considered from time to time, and the legislature will consult with its constituents. The question may at any time be made an issue in the politics of your state, and when public sentiment is ripe for the change, the legislature is empowered to grant it—just as every territorial legislature that ever met in Montana has had that same power. And we ask that while you organize your constitution in accordance with the supposed public sentiment of the day, that you do give to the legislature this harmless, this beneficent power to extend suffrage hereafter to other classes of our population which may in the course of social and political development be needed for the best interests of the state and Nation.

And having now stated the very simple and conservative proposition which I am here tonight to advocate, in order to strengthen the probability in your minds that such a change may be demanded at no distant day, I desire you to lay aside preconceived prejudice, if you have it, and look at this matter of woman suffrage in the light of simply common sense. Gentlemen, what is a vote? A vote is an intelligent expression of a political opinion upon questions of common interest, to the whole people—women no less than men—I say it is the expression of an opinion, and your own convention is assembled tonight under an enabling act of congress which provides that you shall form a constitution not repugnant to the principles of the declaration of independence. Well gentlemen, I think I can show you that upon the principles of the declaration of independence, a woman has the same right to vote as a man. Let me simply call your attention to the fact that this declaration of independence begins thus: "We hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created equal, endowed by their Creator by certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." "Then" said our fathers "to secure these rights"—the rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—"governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." Now is there a man on this floor or a man in this territory, who will doubt or deny that a woman has the same right to life and liberty and the pursuit of happiness as a man. Why everybody will admit it. "But" said our fathers "to secure these rights"—the rights of women equally with the rights of men—"governments are instituted deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." Women are governed, and the only form of consent known in the republic is the ballot. And so long as one half of our citizens, or rather I should say here one third of your citizens, for I am told that the men exceed the women two to one—so long as one third of your citizens are denied by the constitution and laws, the right of consent, the principles of the declaration of independence are violated, so far as the women are concerned. I may be told that our fathers did not mean that because they did not put the ballot in the hands of women. Yes, but they denied the right to others besides women. Gentlemen, some of our conservative men, who are not willing that you should even consider this question—some of our conservative friends seem to forget the fact that the institutions under which you are living did not exist 100 years ago; that the great majority of the men who vote today in Montana were not allowed to vote 100 years ago. Men seem to forget that political society is progressive and that the thoughts of men widen with the progress of years. I remind you that little more than 100 years ago this country was a monarchy, governed by King George and the British Parliament beyond the sea, and when our fathers took up the standard of rebellion against the British government, and put forward those principles, they were regarded by the people of that day, as more dangerous than the principle for which I am here tonight. Why, gentlemen, look at the history of mankind; Everywhere, in all ages, the earliest form of government is a despotism. What is a despotism? It is a political society, where only one man or as it sometimes happens one woman, is the sole source of political power, and all that the body of men and women have to do is to obey. That is the beginning, but it is better than barbarism, because any form of government is better than none. It is order, and order is heaven's first law; and so even despotism is better than barbarism, which is a state of war where every man's hand is against his neighbor. And so political progress begins and very soon it is found to be inexpedient and unwholesome to trust the political power in the hands of one man; that he violates the right of the people and robs them, and so a new movement begins, and the second step has always been to change the despotism—the one man power—for the aristocracy of birth, that is, a political power where certain great and noble families alone exercise political power. And these families became educated and intelligent, and they serve as a counterpoise to the excesses of the despot. And thus political power gradually widens. Commerce begins and manufactures. A new step is taken, a great many rich men demand admission and they are brought in in short and the aristocracy of birth gives place to the aristocracy of wealth—the moneyed power. Now, gentlemen, when this country was discovered, the highest form of political progress that the world had ever reached was the aristocracy of birth and wealth, and when the great monarchies of France and Spain and England took possession of this continent and undertook to parcel it out, it was on the understanding that the same aristocratic governments should exist here as in Europe; but it was so far off they could not reach it and very rapidly the land passed into the hands of the men who tilled it, and for the first time in history, the great mass of farmers were the owners of the farms they cultivated; and these men in their turn demanded suffrage; they demanded it of the British government, and when it was denied them they took up arms in rebellion; and when they had carried that contest to a successful issue, they like us were the creatures of habit, and although they had put forward that wonderful declaration of independence, when they came to apply those principles, they didn't half apply them in the case of men, to say nothing of women; for not only did they want an entire race of slaves; but when they organized their state governments after the war ended, they limited the suffrage to those only who possessed a certain amount of property. They allowed no man to vote, unless he owned a certain amount of real estate; so that it is literally true, that when the war of the rebellion ended, the majority of the men by whose blood and toil and sacrifice, the independence of this country had been achieved, found themselves as utterly shut out of the government as they had been under King George. But scarcely had the guns of the rebellion ceased to sound, when the old Democratic party under the leadership of Thomas Jefferson demanded suffrage for poor white men as the natural right of the citizen under the declaration of independence. They said a man may be poor, but honest and intelligent and industrious; he has a right to the ballot and he needs it more than the rich man, for his protection. The Federal party which had carried the war of independence to a successful conclusion, intrenched in power in state and nation resisted the demand. They said no. "Suffrage is for gentlemen, for scholars, for college graduates; the hard handed sons of toil have no right to the ballot," and so the battle raged. Old Benjamin Franklin, a born democrat, took a most hearty interest in the repeal of the property qualifications for voting. Said Franklin, "In my town in Pennsylvania a man owned a jackass worth 40 pounds, and the man voted; but one day the jackass died, and the man was not allowed to vote. Who, then, is it that votes in Pennsylvania, the man or the jackass?" (Laughter and applause.) A fine sentiment of justice, to which we appeal, gentlemen, tonight in behalf of equal suffrage for women, rallied to the support of the Democratic party in its war against property qualifications. State after state swept them away, so that when the war of the slaveholders rebellion broke out in 1861 only two states retained them, the state of South Carolina and the state of Rhode Island; and I am proud and glad to say that last year the state of Rhode Island wiped them out, and today there is not a state from ocean to ocean that retains the property qualification. Now what was the result of that to the country? No sooner was it known in Europe that any American—the poor man—has the same political rights as the rich man, than that great stream of immigration set in, which in about 100 years has transformed a few feeble agricultural colonies on the Atlantic seaboard into a great continental nation, with its railroads, telegraphs, electric lights, 50,000,000 of free men and half free women, living today under the stars and stripes of this republic, because the democratic party in 1790 had the sagacity and the justice to extend suffrage to the working men of America. (Applause.) But they set up a white man's government. Why? Because in nearly every state, negroes were held as slaves, and it is impossible in any state or nation, that a slave can be a voter, because in law he is the property of his master, and to give him a vote, is only to double his master's vote. And no sooner was this great step of progress made, then great men in the north and south began to agitate for the emancipation of the slaves on the ground that slavery was contrary to the principles of the declaration of independence and the rights of men. The democratic party which had held power for generations, and the whig party which had grown up with the manufacturing interests of the nation sided with the south, and at last as the discussion grew on the south undertook to secede from the union and to organize a slave holders' rebellion—just such a rebellion as the old rebellions of Greece and Rome, which you know had but a very small class of voters—the great mass of men and women in Greece were slaves—and so they attempted to organize a slave holding confederation. Then the great republican party came forward; in its turn it became champion of political progress. It put down the rebellion, it emancipated the slaves, and then it demanded suffrage for the negro man, upon the very same arguments on which they had demanded for the white man, as the natural right of a citizen under the declaration of independence; and they not only put the ballot in the hands of 800,000 emancipated slaves, not one in a hundred of whom could spell, much less comprehend the word "vote," but they wrote it in the constitution that hereafter no man should be deprived of his ballot on account of race or color or previous condition of servitude. Now, gentlemen, you see we have made three great changes within the century; first we were a monarchy government by King George and the British Parliament; then we became an aristocracy of wealth and an aristocracy of money under the old federal party, then we became an aristocracy of race under the old democratic party, and within the recollection of men in this hall we have become an aristocracy of sex under the Republican party—a nation where every man is a sovereign and every woman a subject; and some people seem to think that we have reached the political millenium, and that all we have to do is to live on the laurels of our ancestors. But I am here to say that we have only half applied the principle. Governments are just only when they rest on the consent of the governed. Women are governed. Governments are organized for the protection of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Women have the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and therefore either the principle of the declaration of independence is false or your government is a despotism so far as women citizens are concerned. Now, gentlemen, I do not see how the logic of that can be answered. Either the principle is wrong or the women have a moral right to vote. I am one of those who believe it is always right to do justice. I am one of those who believe in the Republican-Democratic principle, of an extended suffrage, and I remind you gentlemen in organizing your state constitution, of the words of Tennyson, in his immortal ode upon the Duke of Wellington, when he says: "For in all time and through all human story, the path of duty is the way to glory." Now if you have the manhood, the enlightenment, the courage to put the full woman suffrage, the full universal suffrage in accordance with the declaration of independence, into the body of your state constitution, I can promise you that within five years you would have in Montana 100,000 of the most progressive, and the most desirable immigrants that America can furnish. (Applause.) The same interest in the principles of our government that has brought me here, gentlemen, to plead the cause of universal suffrage tonight is uppermost in the minds of hundreds of thousands of our eastern people, and is checked and repressed by the conservatism of these old constitutions, which it is almost impossible to change. Now then I say deliberately, if Montana will put universal suffrage in its state constitution, you will have 100,000 of the best immigrants that New York, the New England and Middle Western States can furnish; and your fields will smile under irrigation and your mines will pour forth streams of the precious metals, with the hardy handed laborers who will join their interests with yours. But, gentlemen, some people are not quite sure that it is safe to do right; there are plenty of people who want to know it is safe to do justice, and for the benefit of these, I want to prove to any man or women who has simply listened to me without prejudice, that woman suffrage means the most thorough and radical political reform that the world has ever seen; and I just ask you to look at this point. It is admitted among political thinkers that every class that votes makes itself felt in the political governments in the direction of its interests, its principles and its peculiarities, for instance, a certain district in New York City sent to Congress for many years the Hon. John Morrissey. John Morrissey was a gambler and a prize fighter; everybody knew it; he was sent to Congress because he was a gambler and prize fighter, to do the bidding of a constituency of men like himself, and who sat there as the representative of the gamblers of America, to see to it that congress made and enforced no law against gambling. So you see that gamblers if they have votes make themselves felt. When I was a young man traveling in the Wabasha Valley upon my business, I found horse stealing a fashionable vice, and the farmers of that valley could not get any justice, for the horse thieves had organized themselves; they elected a judge, and they elected a sheriff, and they packed the jury, and when an honest farmer caught a rascal in the act of stealing his horse, 9 times out of 10 the sheriff forgot to lock the door and the man escaped without a trial; but if he was brought to trial, the Judge, elected by the votes of horse thieves charged upon some technicality in favor of the prisoner, and the jury packed with horse thieves brought in a verdict of not guilty; until the farmers were compelled to organize bands of regulators, and they hung several of the most desperate horse thieves, and so put down the fashionable vice of horse stealing. Well now, gentlemen, I am not here tonight to advocate that you put into the constitution of Montana a guarantee that the gamblers and the horse thieves shall vote, for I presume you may put in the word "male", and that would cover them all; not one of them but would vote early and often. I am here to advocate extending suffrage to that great class known as women, and if you want to know what they would do for the government, you must ask yourself in what respect do women differ from men, because today we have a purely masculine government, we have in it all the qualities of men, and they are noble qualities, qualities given by God for wise and good purposes as I believe. But, gentlemen, the woman is different from the man. I demand woman suffrage first of all because women are different from men, and always will be so, and if you want to know just what those feminine qualities are, of which the government will in part partake when women vote, I ask you to look with me for a moment at the qualities in the woman that differ from those in the man. Now it is the glory of womanhood that women are less under the influence of great physical appetite and passion than men; they are more influenced by their convictions, by their sympathies, by their love of their associates. Women are not tempted by the gross vices to which our sex are subject. They are not tempted by the saloon, they are not tempted by the gambling house, nor the worse house, but women are in point of fact different in these respects, for they have an elevating and refining influence, because they are thus exempt in part by nature from the overpowering temptations which appeal to men. Why, gentlemen, you know the condition of this city of Helena in early days and every other mining camp; you know the condition of the men of California; you know the story of California and how their condition was elevated and how men were made better by the presence of women and that is as true today as it was then. Now, gentlemen, in the next place, women are more peaceable than men. I know there are qualities in women that far surpass those in our sex. It is true not only of the man, but of the whole animated creation. The male animal is the fighting animal; and it is as true of the man as of the buffalo. Now when you consider the government is organized, first of all, not to make men temperate, not to make men honest, but to protect the peace, and the property and the lives of men from the aggressors, you will see that to keep the peace is the first duty of the government. We have had already repeated wars with foreign nations. We have had our Presidents assassinated, we have had the most bitter strife of parties, and we have had a civil war that has cost millions of dollars because we have organized our political society on the instincts of the male human being, without bringing with it the power of the female human being. We find in Genesis that God made man in His own image, male and female, and gave them dominion—not the man dominion over the woman. And so I might go on through the Bible and show you that in the Jewish nation and in the early forms of Christianity women were recognized all through as the equals of man. But I won't stop on that now. But, gentlemen, in the next place, women are more temperate than men. Now, I have had more than one man say to me since I have been here that he would vote for woman suffrage but he was afraid of prohibition. Well, I told him his fear was very unreasonable, because prohibition was unpopular. I said, There is one State in the Union where woman suffrage has a foothold, and there has never been any movement in Wyoming for prohibition; they have established good order and good morals, but they have never attempted to establish prohibition in the Territory of Wyoming where women have had control now for many years. But, gentlemen, I am willing to admit that women are in favor of temperance, and I don't believe there is a man on this floor that is not in favor of temperance; I don't believe there is a drunkard on our streets but what in his heart is in favor of temperance; and it is simply a question of what is the best mode to reach it; and when you have woman suffrage the good men and women of the community will study this question of intemperance and they will make some wise and good and conservative law and they will enforce that law. Now, I want to say a word on prohibition and license, because I want you to see that this has nothing to do with the question of prohibition. When I moved to Massachusetts twenty years ago I found a prohibitory law on the statute books, but I had not lived a month in Boston before I saw liquors sold, and on every street, under a prohibitory law. It was not enforced. And the people rose up against it; they said it was nothing but organized hypocrisy: it was nothing but an organized blackmail upon the liquor dealers, and the policemen were largely bribed not to see what was going on under their eyes. They swept it away, and they passed a restrictive law, that the saloons should be closed on Sunday, and that no liquors should be sold to minors, etc., and those restrictive laws are no better enforced than the old prohibition laws. They are all set aside. Now, why is it that in Massachusetts prohibition didn't prohibit and restriction does not restrict? Simply because there was not voting power enough behind the law to make the officers of the law perform their duty. And what you want, gentlemen, is to have that moral power behind a temperance law which will see that it is fully and freely and honestly enforced. I agree with General Grant, who said the best way to repeal a bad law is to enforce it, and I will add, the best way to maintain a good law is to enforce it; and I maintain it is wrong and foolish to say that woman suffrage means prohibition, or that it means high license, but I do maintain that woman suffrage does mean temperance, because we know as a matter of fact that the women of the community are more temperate than men, and that not one woman in fifty is in the habit of drinking intoxicating liquor. Well, now, gentlemen, women are more chaste than men; if it were not so you would not have the pure and happy homes of Helena and of Montana; and woman suffrage means a respectable purity in legislation. Women are more economical than men. It is harder for a woman to get a dollar than it is for a man. Under our present organization women cannot get a fair pay for their work; they never did and never will until they get the ballot. We have 20,000 women in Boston working at $4 a week and less. How can those women live lives worth living on such a miserable pittance as $2 and $4 a week? And why is it they are thus oppressed? Simply because public sentiment has not demanded for women the same measure of equality and justice that it demands for her brother. We exclude women from a thousand avocations which they could attend to just as well as men, and we crowd them into a few avocations where they are underpaid. People say "That is supply and demand". But supply and demand are regulated by the habits and customs of society, and I remind you that six months after the women had the ballot in Wyoming the legislature passed a law that in all schools where women are employed a woman should be paid the same wages as a man. "Equal pay for equal work" is the watchword of justice, and it is the meaning of woman suffrage. Women never do and never will get it until they have the ballot, and, gentlemen, no class of men ever had it until they got the ballot. Why, it is not a hundred years ago that it was made a law in England for two men to combine and try to raise their wages. Another point: I say women are more economical than men. But the highest argument, gentlemen, as statesmen that you ought to consider in this matter is, that the women are the most law-abiding class of our citizens. If you will search the records of the courts of the United States, you will find that there are more than ten men convicted of crime to every one woman. Not only that, the crimes that the women are convicted of, men generally go unpunished for. They are mostly for debauchery and drunkenness. Men are seldom convicted of this offense. Men are convicted of rape and murder and robbery, a more serious and aggravated class of crimes. So that not only are our women ten times as law abiding as men, but the crimes they commit are a less dangerous class of crimes. Women are more peaceable than men; they are more humane; they are more temperate; they are more just; they are more economical; they are more law-abiding. Are not these the very qualities that obtain in our government? And when we have the refining and purifying influence of women superadded to the strength and the business capacity of men, we shall have a perfect government—a government of the people—and we never shall have it without them. Now, gentlemen, I know it is said that women do not want to vote, and to a certain extent it is true. No class of citizens ever did want to vote until the ballot was placed in their hands. After the war of the revolution ended the white man, the working men of America, never petitioned for the ballot, but the democratic party with Mr. Jefferson as their leader said: "It is their right and they shall have it." And without a petition and without a request the ballot was put in their hands and the great body of that class of men have been voting the democratic ticket from that day to this. When the Republican party put down the rebellion no petition for suffrage went in from the negro; no organized demand was ever made in his behalf by his own race. But the leaders of the Republican party said "We know the negro is loyal and has followed the flag of his country, and we will give him the ballot as a political necessity and a social justice," and they put it in his hands without asking. So, gentlemen, it is uncertain that any class of citizens will ever demand the ballot until it is given them. They will become broader and wiser and better women when they feel they have a duty to perform for the protection of their homes and for the good of their country. And when men say women do not want to vote, I say, How do you know, gentlemen? When you say women do not want to vote, I am afraid you are altogether too much afraid of hurting their feelings. It reminds me of a very bashful man named John. Poor John was regretting that life was passing and he had no wife and no home; and I said "John, why don't you marry?" "I am a poor man; nobody wants to marry a man without property." I said "John, how do you know?" "Why," he said, "you would not have me take such a liberty with a woman as to ask her to marry me." "Well, John," I said, "it seems but natural that you should." Just then a bright thought struck me, and I said "John, have you ever seen the woman you loved well enough to marry? A woman for whose sake you are willing to leave all the world and be faithful unto her until you die? If you have," I said, "you just ask that woman if she has any objection to your making her a matrimonial proposition, and if she objects you dry up; don't say another word." John went away and I forgot all about it. A few days afterwards he came rushing in and shook my hands until I thought they would come off. "Oh," said he, "I was down to Mary Ann's house last night." Said he, "I have loved her for years, and she looked so beautiful I thought I would give anything in the world to make that terrible proposition, and I make a great effort and I said, Mary Ann, would you have any objection if I made you a matrimonial proposition?" "Why, no John," she said, "if you want to make a proposition of that kind, don't you wait a moment on my account, but go ahead and make it." Said he, "I made my proposition, and would you believe it, she actually accepted me and we will be married on the first day of next month." Laughter. Well, now, gentlemen, when Mary Ann here in Montana tells you she has all the rights she wants and she does not want the ballot, she has not thought about it; and if she has thought about it she is thinking of some John here in Montana that she thinks doesn't want her to vote, and she doesn't want to be irritable, and she doesn't want to lose the esteem of her male friends; but, gentlemen, it is your fault that she says that, because we have always taught the women that it is not their business to meddle with politics; and so it is our fault after all. But my word for it, if you meet Mary Ann out here in Montana half way and tell her that you are willing she should vote to elect good men, to make good laws and build up a grand state among these mountains in the very center of the continent, my word for it, Mary Ann will accept the proposition and she will vote in the interest of God, in the interest of her home, of her husband, of her children and her native land, and you will have a better wife, a better home, and a better government; for it is true, gentlemen, that in every department of human effort where men and women work together it is better that man should not be alone. Oh, gentlemen, I wish we would rise to the dignity of this great question. This is not a mere question of woman suffrage. It is a question of the amelioration of the human race; it is a question of the life of human society. And I remind you that if the historian asks in any age or country which were the foremost race, he doesn't ask who had the most money, or the most silver and gold; he asks where were the women placed? And he writes down the ruling race as the race that gave freedom to its women.

Gentlemen, you are here to make laws for the government of posterity. Don't put in these restrictions; don't tie up the hands of your legislatures. Give them a chance to make laws in accordance with the progress of society and the demands of an enlightened and progressive public opinion. And let us all stand for progress, let us all stand for justice and for liberty and for equal political rights for men and women. Then we may exclaim in the words of Longfellow:

"Thou, too, sail on, O ship of State,
Sail on, O Union strong and great;
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate."

ELEVENTH DAY.

Thursday, July 18th, 1889.

Convention called to order by the President at 9 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the Journal of the previous day.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: The Committee on Education desire to make a report.

The President: The report of the Committee on Education will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President, your Committee No. 8, on Education, to which was referred Article 9 of the Constitution of 1884, beg leave to report that it has duly considered the same, together with all matters pertaining to this subject, and herewith transmits the result of its labors in the form of the following provisions, which are hereto attached, and recommend that they be adopted as a part of the Constitution.

PROPOSITION NO. 17.

"July 18, Reported by Committee on Education—J. E. Rickards, Chairman.

(General File No. 16)

Section 1. It shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly of Montana to establish and maintain a general, uniform and thorough system of public, free, common schools.

Sec. 2. The public school fund of the State shall consist of the proceeds of such lands as have heretofore been granted, or may hereafter be granted to the State by the general government, known as school lands, and those granted in lieu of such; lands acquired by gift or grant from any person or corporation under any law or grant of the general government; and of all other grants of land or money made to the State from the general government for general educational purposes, or where no other special purpose is indicated in such grant; all estates or distributive shares of estates that may escheat to the State; all unclaimed shares and dividends of any corporation incorporated under the laws of the State, and all other grants, gifts, devises or bequests made to the State for general educational purposes.

Sec. 3. Such public school fund shall forever remain inviolate, guaranteed by the State against loss or diversion, to be invested, so far as possible, in public securities within the State, including school district bonds, issued for the erection of school buildings, under the restrictions to be provided by law.

Sec. 4. The Governor, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Secretary of State, Attorney General shall constitute the State Board of Land Commissioners, which shall have the direction, control, leasing and sale of the school lands of the State and the lands granted or which may hereafter be granted for the support and benefit of the various State Educational Institutions, under such regulations and restrictions as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 5. The interest on all invested school funds of the State, and all rents accruing from the leasing of any school lands, shall be apportioned to the several school districts of the State, in proportion to the number of children and youths between the ages of six and twenty-one years, but no district shall be entitled to such distributive share that does not maintain a public free school for at least three months during the year for which distributions shall be made.

Sec. 6. It shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly to provide by taxation, or otherwise, sufficient means, in connection with the amount received from the general school fund, to maintain a public, free, common school in each organized district in the State, for at least three months in each year.

Sec. 7. The public free schools of the State shall be open to all children and youth between the age of Six and Twenty-one years.

Sec. 8. Neither the Legislative Assembly, nor any county, city, town, or school district, or other public corporations, shall ever make, directly, or indirectly, any appropriation, or pay from any public fund or moneys whatever, or make any grant of lands or other property, in aid of any church, or for any sectarian purpose, or to aid in the support of any school, academy, seminary, college, university, or other literary scientific institution, controlled in whole or in part by any church, sect or denomination whatever.

Sec. 9. No religious or partisan test or qualification shall ever be required of any person as a condition of admission into any public educational institution of the State, either as teacher or student; nor shall attendance be required at any religious service whatever, nor shall any sectarian tenets be taught in any public educational institution of the State; nor shall any person be debarred admission to any of the collegiate departments of the university on account of sex.

Sec. 10. The Legislature shall provide that all elections for school officers shall be separate from those elections at which other State or county officers are voted for.

Sec. 11. The general control and supervision of the State University and the various other State educational institutions shall be vested in a State Board of Education, whose powers and duties shall be prescribed and regulated by law. The said Board shall consist of Eleven members, the Governor, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Attorney General, being members ex-officio, the other Eight members thereof shall be appointed by the Governor subject to the confirmation of the Senate, under the regulations and restrictions to be provided by law.

Sec. 12. The funds of the State University and of all the other State institutions of learning, from whatever source accruing, shall forever remain inviolate and sacred to the purpose for which they are dedicated. The various funds shall be respectively invested under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and shall be guaranteed by the State against loss or diversion. The interest of said invested funds, together with the rents from leased lands or properties shall be devoted to the maintenance and perpetuation of these respective institutions."

The President: If there be no objection, this report will take the usual course, and be referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the Committee of Legislative Departments desires to make a report.

The report was sent up to the Clerk's desk, and read, as follows:
 "Resolution No. 19, by Conrad, Providing for State Examiner, July 16th, received and referred to Committee on Legislative Departments.

Mr. President, your Committee on Legislative Departments have directed me to report back the within resolution, with the recommendation that the same be referred to the Committee on Executive Department."

(Signed) J. K. TOOLE, Chairman.

Mr. Brown, of Choteau, sent up a resolution to the Clerk's desk, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, that the Committee on Judiciary of this Convention be instructed to consider and report whether the Enabling Act of Congress provides for a general election to be held before admission to fill all the offices, both state and county, created by the Constitution."

The President: This resolution will be referred to the Committee on Judiciary, if there be no objection.

* The President then announced the special Committee to consider Resolution No. 7, as follows: Middleton, Maginnis, Knowles, Callaway, Muth, Haskell, Parberry.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I move that the Convention do now resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, for the consideration of general orders.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair then put the question, and the same was carried.

The President: The Chair will appoint the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Callaway) to take the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Callaway in the Chair.

The Chairman: The Committee will come to order. The first proposition on general file is No. 1, on Preamble.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that we proceed to consider General File No. 1, and that we consider the same by sections.

The Chairman: It is unnecessary to do that, as the rule provides that the article shall be read by sections.

The Clerk read Section 1 of the Preamble and Bill of Rights.

Mr. Bickford: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that in the second line the words "by virtue" be stricken out, and, in lieu thereof, the words, "in accordance with" be inserted.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Schmidt, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer an amendment to Resolution No. 1.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Missoula moves to amend the Preamble as follows: Strike out of line two the words "by virtue of" and insert the words "in accordance with." What is the pleasure of the Committee?

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer an amendment to the Preamble.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers the following form of Preamble: "We, the people of Montana, grateful to Almighty God for civil and religious liberty, in order to secure and perpetuate the same, and to organize a free government for ourselves and those to come after, do ordain and establish this Constitution."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, I do not think it is necessary to refer in this Preamble to the authority by which we form a State Constitution.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, will a substitute for this be in order? If so, I offer the following substitute.

The Chair rules that this would not be in order.

The Chairman: There has been offered by the gentleman from Missoula an amendment. To that amendment the gentleman from Silver Bow offers an amendment, and no other amendment can be received at this time.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Schmidt, the gentleman from Silver Bow, has another amendment, which is an amendment to the amendment. I have not heard the amendment of Mr. Schmidt read.

The Chairman: The substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Schmidl) is as follows:

"We, the people of Montana, in order to establish for ourselves and our posterity a permanent and republican form of government, and to provide for enactments thereunder of just laws, and a prompt and proper execution of the same, and an impartial administration of justice among us, and with a view of insuring order and domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and maintaining those means which conduce to human development and progress, and with the purpose of protecting ourselves in the enjoyment of those inalienable rights and cherished liberties which we have inherited from a brave and noble ancestry, do hereby enter into a solemn compact with each other, and declare and ordain this to be the Constitution for the State of Montana."

Mr. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that that amendment be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the substitute just read, which is an amendment to an amendment, be laid on the table.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I would inquire where the table is in the Committee of the Whole? We are working under Jefferson's Manual, and in the Committee of the Whole a motion to lay upon the table is not in order.

The Chairman: The point of order of the gentleman is well taken. The question before the Committee now is upon the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, I move that the consideration of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Haskell, of Dawson: Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, so that when this Committee arise it report this first substitute back to the House, with the recommendation that it be indefinitely postponed.

The Chairman: The gentleman is out of order. The question is upon the adoption of the substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Schmidl).

Mr. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that when this Committee rise, it report the substitute back with the recommendation that it do not pass.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The Chair then put the motion, and the same was lost.

The Chairman: Now the question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Breckford).

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I move to amend, so that the whole reference to the action of Congress will be left out, and that the Preamble, when adopted, shall read: "We, the people of Montana, grateful to Almighty God for the blessings of liberty, in order to secure the advantages of a state government, do ordain and establish this Constitution." I hold that we establish this Constitution by virtue of the inherent right of the people, and it is not necessary for us to refer to the Enabling Act of Congress.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The Chair desires to put the motion on the substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Sargent).

The substitute was then read.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I agree that any reference to the Enabling Act here in our Preamble should be left out. I see a disposition here, and that disposition has been manifest for several days, to bring a matter into the Preamble of this Constitution that will be disagreeable and obnoxious to quite a number of the citizens of this Territory, and that is the reference in that Preamble to Deity—to Almighty God. I do not believe in mixing up, in any manner, religion with government. For a great number of years there has been a society organized in the United States seeking to amend the National Constitution by having some reference therein to Almighty God. It has met with but little favor.

It has been a question that has been discussed to a considerable extent. Religion was originally mixed up with government. Every government had its religion. The Jewish government had, as the head of their government Jehovah. All pagan nations had a religion—their peculiar and national religion. We have, in this country, generally adhered to the Christian religion. But this country is a free country. Every religion can be practiced here—it matters not what it is. A religion that would acknowledge Budha as the fountain of religion would be as appropriate here in this country as the Christian religion. The people that believe in no God are as good citizens of this nation as those who recognize the existence of God. As for myself, I believe in an Almighty God; but I do not believe in bringing it in here—bringing it into our civil government. I think that our religion should be separated entirely from our civil government. It should not be mixed up in any way, shape, form or manner. You know that, in the interpretation of the Constitution of the United States, our courts have occasion to recur frequently to its Preamble. Who inaugurated the Constitution of the United States? "We, the people." And the courts have deferred to that as interpreting as to whether that Constitution was a Constitution by the people or adopted by the state. And so, if you go on in this Preamble here, the question may arise hereafter, whether or not, in establishing our Constitution, if we recognize a Deity, it would be proper for a man who did not entertain such sentiments to hold office in this country—whether or not we had not made such a recognition of God as to become part of the Constitution of the land. And I tell you, gentlemen of this Convention, now, that there is a large element in this Territory, and all over the United States, that will not approve of a Constitution of that kind, where people can appeal to this Preamble in future, and say, "You have come here in your Preamble, and you have recognized God; that is a part of your civil government; that is a part of the institutions of your country—"when we know full well that here, in the very bill that is presented here, under which we are convened today, there shall be nothing upon the subject of race—religious liberty shall be guaranteed to all; and at the very start out of your Constitution you come in here and you recognize a religious people. It may be hereafter used in interpreting that Constitution, and I believe that we should not adopt any Preamble of that kind. I do not care how simple the Preamble is, but the bringing into this Constitution of a question of religion is something that I do not believe is really in accordance with this Act under which we have assembled. The religion of the country is the Christian religion, which recognizes as the founder of our religion, Jesus Christ. To Him we all bow; He is the head; He is the head of the religion; and if you are going to establish anything in this Constitution, you had better make a reference to Jesus Christ instead of God Almighty.

Mr. Kanouse, of Meagher: Mr. Chairman, in order that we may proceed more intelligently in this matter, it seems to me it would be well for members who desire to offer an amendment, that they offer the substance of those amendments, to enable us to vote upon those pending more intelligently than we otherwise could. In view of this fact, I offer the following as a substitute to the Preamble now before the Convention: "We, the people of Montana, in order to secure the advantages of state government, and to perpetuate the blessings of civil and religious liberty, do ordain and establish this Constitution."

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, there are 75 members of this Convention, and I believe there is not one of them who is not able to write a Preamble, and it is simply a matter of choice as to any of them. Now this Preamble which has been prepared by the Committee is a concise one. It embodies the ideas that most of the members of this Convention are willing to adopt; and in reply to Judge Knowles' ideas, it seems to me they are very queer. He says he acknowledges the fact that there is a great Creator, and I do not believe there is a nation on the face of the earth that does not. It is not a matter of religion, the placing of the words "Almighty God" there. If we were to adopt this idea and give recognition to the birth of Jesus Christ in it, then we might be treading on some religion; but the mere fact of our recognizing our gratefulness to Almighty God is something that is recognized by every savage tribe upon the face of the earth. Not only the cultured and intelligent people, but the savages, recognize the fact that there is an Almighty God, and I believe it is proper in this connection to show our gratitude to the great Creator—to show our gratitude for the blessings of liberty we enjoy. Now, another thing to which some of the gentlemen object is that we have made an allusion to the power which has given this authority. I say that this is eminently proper. You should remember that when Ethan Allen demanded the surrender of Fort Ticonderoga, the attendant officer, when asked by what authority, he answered, "In the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." And I believe that in recognizing the Congress in this it is proper. We believe, and I believe, that this is a nation, and that, without the authority of Congress, we have no power whatever to act. In 1884, we attempted to make a Constitution, and why didn't it carry? Because it was not authorized by Congress. And so I say that it is eminently proper here that we recognize the fact that we are acting here by authority of the Congress of the United States. Now, gentlemen, why are we acting? Why do we want a state government? For no other purpose, I believe, and every gentleman of this Convention will agree with me that it is for the purpose of securing the advantages of a State Government. It is not for the purpose of securing the blessings of liberty. Everybody knows that was secured to us a century ago, and we are not establishing a Constitution now under the same circumstances under which the first Constitution was established. And nearly every one of these amendments that I have heard read are copied almost verbatim from some Constitution that was framed in 1776. The conditions are greatly changed. Here is a preamble which expresses exactly what we are doing now. I venture to say that it is not copied from any preamble of the Constitution of the United States—I venture to say that it is not copied from one of them; and I think the ideas embodied in this one prepared by the Committee are proper. I am perfectly willing to say, and will say it again, that it is a matter of choice. I believe there is not a member of this Convention who cannot write as good a one; but what is the use of discussing all these ideas of the different gentlemen? Let us adopt one or the other and settle the matter.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, as the gentleman says, this matter is greatly a matter of choice. Now, merely to shorten up this discussion and come to a conclusion as soon as possible, I wish to offer, whenever I am in order, a substitute for the Preamble, which will read something like this: "We, the people of Montana, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution." Now, that will answer just as good as anything else; the reasons why we do it are not important, and there is no reference to any outside matter in it.

The Chairman then put the question upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Sargent), and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. Chairman, if I am in order, I have an amendment which I would like to offer.

The Clerk read as follows:

"We, the people of Montana, grateful for all the causes which have conspired to permit so glorious a consummation, do ordain and establish the following Constitution."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the amendment that I offered is pending, is it not?

The Chairman: I will say to the gentleman from Park that the gentleman who now occupies the floor has previously offered an amendment, and therefore that is the amendment before the Convention at this time.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the amendment that I offered is now pending. Now, I do not care to debate this question at all; I do not care to go into the religious question. I do not care to have this Convention enter upon the unprofitable field of religious discussion. I do not doubt, that as long as man finds himself an inhabitant of this world, surrounded by forces that he cannot control, but which have the most momentous effect upon his destinies, that the question of what power has made the world, and what powers control and direct it, will be one of the greatest and most absorbing questions which can agitate, as for all time they have agitated, the minds of men. The answers that have been given to these profound questions may not have satisfied humanity. The Hebrew answer may not be satisfactory, the Christian answer may not be satisfactory, the Mohammedan or the Pagan answer may not be satisfactory, and the scientific answer may not be satisfactory; but the most unsatisfactory answer of all is the answer of the man who says there is no Cause and there is no God (Applause). I do not desire, indeed, I am most averse to the proposition, that any form of faith or creed shall be crystallized in this Constitution; but I find that, as the Preamble now reads, it is in conformity with nearly all of the Constitutions of all the States of the Union; and while this reference may not be contained in the letter of the Constitution of the United States, it is embodied in that grand instrument, the real Preamble of the Constitution of the United States—the Declaration of Independence. The reference to the Supreme Power is broad enough to embrace all sects and creeds—even the most advanced advocates of the new scientific thought may be content with it as the formation of a name for the primal energies of the universe, which, in their minds, is the first grand cause of all. I cannot understand how any man can find his conscience or belief hurt by this reference to the Great Power and Governing Cause. There can be no objection to it as it stands, and I am willing that it shall stand. It is in most of the State Constitutions, and, as it has never done any harm in any of them, I am sure that it can do none in ours. I do object, however, to that clause of the Preamble which says that we ordain or make this Constitution by virtue of an Act of Congress. I hold that it is framed by virtue of the inherent right of the people of Montana. I have always held that it was the right of the people of all the territories to form their Constitutions and apply for admission into the Union, without the intervention of any Act of Congress. Nearly one-half of the territories that have gone into the Union have formed their Constitutions without any Organic or Enabling Act of Congress; and although, as my friend from Silver Bow says, we formed a Constitution that was not accepted, it was not rejected on that ground. The Congress that rejected it, rejected it on other grounds, for they recognized the fact that previous Congresses had admitted territories into the Union which had framed their Constitutions without any Enabling Act. Therefore, I object to the statement in this Preamble that the people of Montana form their Constitution by virtue of this Act of Congress. It is inconsistent with the declaration immediately following, that all power is derived from the people. I call for the reading of my amendment.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I sent up an amendment, Mr. Chairman, but it seems to have been lost.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"We, the people of the Territory of Montana, invoking the blessings of Almighty God, do establish this Constitution for the State of Montana."

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I will give my reasons for that. The Enabling Act was passed in order to enable the territories to form Constitutions for themselves as States. Some of the territories have dodged that, and in the previous Constitution Montana dodged it. They said "we, the people of Montana." Well, now, that accurately expresses nothing. It is the people of the Territory forming a Constitution for themselves as a State. Therefore I have offered this amendment, although I shall not be able to vote upon it, as I am compelled to attend upon the Supreme Court in the next room; but I will leave it in the hands of the Convention.

The Chairman: The question before the Committee is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Maj. Magnus). It strikes out all that part of the Preamble referring to the Act of Congress.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I will vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Magnus) because I believe it is in the line of a good amendment, and, if that carries, then I will vote for one or two other amendments that have been offered in the Committee; and in that way we can come to a conclusion after awhile. But this is better than the original, and so I will vote for this.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I believe that everybody agrees that this is a matter very much of taste, and it is not important. It is simply the Preamble, and I do not quite understand why the gentlemen should be so punctilious with reference to the use of language. The Committee was charged with the duty and responsibility of reporting this Preamble. I think they were eminently competent to consider that question, and believe that they have considered it, giving ample time for that purpose. Now there certainly cannot be any impropriety in the use of the language that this is done, not by virtue of the Act of Congress, but in accordance with it. I believe that the chairman of the Committee himself has so amended the Preamble. We are yielding nothing when we say "in accordance with" it. There is not a gentleman upon this floor but knows that the Governor and the Chief Justice and the Secretary of this Territory apportioned the Territory pursuant to that Act of Congress. They know the Executive of this Territory called this Convention together pursuant to that Act of Congress, and that we are assembled here today, with a full corps of officers to run this Convention, and that everything we do here, is in pursuance of the Enabling Act of Congress. Now, I believe in supporting and sustaining the Committee, especially upon these matters that are considered unimportant and immaterial. They have given it, I think, proper consideration, and if the reports of the Committees of this Convention are to be entitled to no consideration, and we are to branch out in this line of policy, it is my opinion that this Convention will be in session here for 60 or 90 days. (Applause.)

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I simply want to call the attention of the Committee to section 8 of the Enabling Act: "And if the Constitutions and governments of said proposed states shall be republican in form, and if all the provisions of this Act have been complied with in the formation thereof, it shall be the duty of the President of the United States to issue his proclamation announcing the result of the election in all four of the States, and thereupon, the proposed States which have adopted Constitutions and formed State governments as herein provided, shall be deemed admitted by Congress into the Union"; etc. Now, I think that this Preamble simply intends to recognize the Act of Congress, and, under this amendment, to state in the beginning that we propose to make a Constitution in accordance with—that is all; and I do not understand why the Act of Congress which enables us to come here should be entirely ignored; and for that reason I have no objection to the Preamble as proposed and amended by the Chairman of the Committee.

The Chair then put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis), and the amendment was declared lost.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Did I understand, Mr. Chairman, that there was an amendment of the Committee to strike out "by virtue of" and make it "in accordance with"?

The Chairman: Yes sir.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: The amendment offered by the Committee, or by myself as Chairman of the Committee, was to strike out the words "by virtue of" and insert the words "in accordance with the provisions of."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I have no objection to that.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I think the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, when he comes to consider this question, will not agree to that. This Convention is not really making this Preamble for itself. This does not say that "we, the Convention of Montana Territory," do these things in accordance with the Act of Congress, but "we, the people." Now, the people are adopting this Constitution in their sovereign capacity, by virtue of the sovereignty that is in them—their inalienable rights. That is what is being done here. It is not adopted by this Convention. We meet here, we are proceeding in accordance with the Act of Congress; but when the people come to adopt this Constitution, they will say they do not adopt it by virtue of any Act of Congress, or in accordance with any Act of Congress. There is no authority given to them by virtue of the Act of Congress, because, as the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) says, they can adopt a Constitution without any Act of Congress. They will adopt this Constitution by virtue of the sovereign power that is in them. The Act of Congress has nothing to do with it.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I offered an amendment, or proposed to, which, if now in order, I will renew.

The Chairman: Will the gentleman from Silver Bow indulge me? There are now three amendments which are proposed. The first one is the one offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter), which was sent up some time ago; the second is from the gentleman from Park, and the next is from the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon). Was there a second to the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke?

A member: I second the motion.

The Chairman: The amendment will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"We, the people of the Territory of Montana, invoking the blessings of Almighty God, do establish this Constitution for the State of Montana."

The Chair then put the question on the above amendment and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, I now renew my amendment.

The amendment was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman offers the following amendment: "We, the people of Montana, grateful for all the causes which have conspired to permit so glorious a consumption, do ordain and establish the following Constitution."

The Chair put the question on the above amendment, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I now move the adoption of my amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman offers the following substitute for the Preamble:

"We, the people of Montana, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution."

The Chair then put the question on the above amendment, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 43 to 26.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I now move the adoption of the Preamble reported by the Committee, as amended by the Committee.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The Preamble reads as follows:

"We, the people of Montana, grateful to Almighty God for the blessings of liberty, in order to secure the advantages of a State government, do, in accordance with the provisions of the Enabling Act of Congress, approved the 22nd day of February, A. D. 1889, ordain and establish this Constitution."

The Chair then put the question on the above Preamble, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move, if it be in order, that when the Committee arise it report the Preamble back, with the recommendation that it be passed as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman: Before that motion is put, I would say that it is not necessary, in my opinion, to have this motion laid before the Convention.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Inasmuch as this is a beginning, we might as well start out well, and I do not think it is necessary to state these motions on every paragraph. I suppose the rule in Committee is that, after a paragraph is passed, you cannot go back to it, and after all these amendments of the different articles are carried, a single motion that the Committee rise and report back the entire proposition with the amendments, is sufficient. It will save much time, and I think it would be best to follow the course I have suggested.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my motion.

The Chairman: Section 1 reads as follows: "Section 1. That all political power is vested in and derived from the people; that all government of right originates from the people, is founded upon their will only and is instituted solely for the good of the whole."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move to strike out the word "from" in the third line, which reads "originates from the people" and insert instead "originates with the people"—in other words, I move to amend by striking out the word "from" in line 2 of Section 1, and inserting instead the word "with."

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair then put the question on the amendment, and the same was carried.

Mr. Kanouse, of Meagher: I move to amend the section by striking out the word "that" wherever it occurs in the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Meagher [Mr. Kanouse] moves to amend by striking out the word "that" in the section, wherever it occurs.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend that motion by inserting the word "and" in the place of the second "that"; so that it shall read "and all government of right originates with the people," etc.

The motion was seconded.

The chair then stated the motion.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: You will observe that if that amendment is adopted, it will be necessary to amend all the following sections clear through. That follows only after the heading; it is a declaration by the people of Montana that all political power, etc. Now, if that section was taken by itself, the amendment would be proper; but taken in connection with the statement that it is a declaration of the rights of the people, I think the word comes in proper enough.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, in discussing this question I would say to the Convention that your Committee had under consideration the very question which is now pending before the Convention; that in order to satisfy the minds of the Committee a thorough investigation was had, and nearly all the Preambles and Bills of Rights of the different States of the Union were examined, and it was found to be almost the universal practice to use the phraseology here used in this report. I would say further, as the gentleman from Deer Lodge has well said, this is a declaration of the rights of the people. It is different from the ordinary grammatical construction, in connection with a matter of this kind, and it is entirely proper that it remain as it is. There is no grammatical error whatever as I can see, in using the word as it has been used here. We declare that certain things are the rights of the people. It seems to me that the report of the Committee should be adopted as it is. These amendments, if they are of any use whatever, are so immaterial that it is hardly worth while to discuss them. This Committee has had them under consideration. If there is anything that is of a material nature, I would be glad to see it corrected; but to spend the time of 75 men in discussing what is only a matter of taste,—and every man in the Convention will have a different idea as to what should be the grammatical construction of the sentence,—I say it is foolish. We are hardly called upon to do that.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I would ask if there is not a Committee on Phraseology that goes over all these things afterwards, and, if so, why cannot we leave this to them?

The Chairman: The question before the Committee is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, which is an amendment to an amendment. There are two amendments pending, one from the gentleman from Meagher to strike out the word "that" wherever it occurs. The amendment to that is upon the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to insert after the word "people" the word "and."

The Chair then put the question upon the amendment and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now is upon the amendment to strike out the word "that" wherever it occurs in the Section.

The Chair then put the question and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now is upon the adoption of the amendment to strike out "from" in the last line and insert in lieu thereof the word "with."

The Chair then put the question and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The question now recurs upon the adoption of the Section.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, in order to further facilitate the business of the Committee of the Whole, I suggest the rule be, that, where a section is not further amended, it shall stand, without any motion to adopt. Where it is not amended, or where it is amended by the Committee, the section shall stand for report.

The Chairman: If that be the sense of the Committee, the Chairman will adopt the rule.

The Clerk then read Section 2, as follows:

"Sec. 2. That the people of this State have a sole and exclusive right to govern themselves as a free, sovereign and independent State, and to alter and abolish their Constitution and form of government whenever they may deem it necessary to their safety and happiness, provided such change be not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

There being no amendments offered to Section 2 the Clerk then read Section 3, as follows:

"Section 3. That all persons are born equally free, and have certain natural, essential and inalienable rights, among which may be reckoned the right of enjoying and defending their lives and liberties; that of acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and of seeking and obtaining their safety and happiness in all lawful ways."

There being no amendments offered to Sec. 3, the Clerk then read Section 4, as follows:

"Sec. 4. That the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination shall forever hereafter be guaranteed, and no person shall be denied any civil or political rights, privilege or capacity, on account of his opinions concerning religion, but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be construed to dispense with oaths or affirmations, excuse acts of licentiousness by bigamous or polygamous marriage or otherwise, or justify practices inconsistent with the good order, peace, or safety of the State, or opposed to the civil authority thereof, or of the United States. No person shall be required to attend or support any minister or place of worship, religious sect or denomination against his consent; nor shall any preference by law be given to any religious denomination or mode of worship."

There being no amendment to Section 4, the Clerk then read Section 5, as follows:

"Sec. 5. That all elections shall be free and open, and no power, civil or military, shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage."

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I move to amend Section 5 by striking out the words "and open" in the first line, after the word "free."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I do not know what the words "and open," as they occur in the section, mean. We have now the secret ballot, and by the late law of the Territory the polls are removed, and no man can come within a certain distance of the place of voting; and it seems to me that the word as printed may render that law unsatisfactory, although that is not the intention; and it seems to me that the words "and open" really add no force to the section.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I do not understand that the provisions of the bill known as the Australian System, prevents an open election; in other words, while there are restrictions placed around the exercise of the right of franchise, the Australian System does not prevent an open election. There is a meaning to the words, and the meaning should be preserved in this Constitution. Not only are elections to be free, but they are also to be open. They should be open to all persons who are legally entitled to vote. The polls should be open to all persons, who, under the laws of this Territory and the United States, are entitled to the right of franchise. I believe that the words should be left in, because the right may be protected by their remaining in the place where they now are.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I agree with the views of the gentleman from Missoula. I understand this to mean in contradistinction to secret elections—that is, the elections themselves shall be open while the ballots may be secret, closed ballots. But the election itself must be free and open to everybody—as contradistinguished from any secret election; it is in public and free to everybody. I see nothing wrong as it now stands, in the section.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I certainly am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall). It is about time we had an election in this country that is free and not open. We have had enough of open elections in this country; and if this clause in this Constitution is for the purpose of doing away with or making a dead letter of the Australian System, which is now on our statute books, the sooner we know it the better.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, the words "and open," as used in that section, can certainly mean nothing more nor less than that the elections shall be public as contradistinguished from secret. Now, to say that that has anything to do with the Australian System of voting, or any other system of voting, is sheer nonsense. It certainly is right that that provision should remain where it is. The elections may not under any circumstances be conducted secretly. It means that the election itself should be public, but it has nothing to do with the mode or manner of voting.

The Chair then put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Clerk then read Section 6, as follows:

"Sec. 6. That courts of justice shall be open to every person, and a speedy remedy afforded for every injury of person, property, or character; and that right and justice should be administered without sale, denial or delay.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the word "should" and insert the word "shall" in the second line.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair then put the question, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, before proceeding, I move to strike out the word "of" in the second line and insert the word "to," so that it shall read "for every injury to person, property or character."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question upon the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, and the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 7, as follows:

"Sec. 7. That the people shall be secure in person, papers, home and effects from unreasonable searches and seizures, and no warrant to search any place or seize any person or thing shall issue without describing the place to be searched and the person or thing to be seized, as near as may be; nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation reduced to writing.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I desire to amend Section 7.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers the following amendment: "Amend Section 7 by inserting therein, after the word "seized," on line 3, the following, "and the claim of right of such person or thing seized, and object of such seizure."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair then put the motion, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move to amend that section by striking out the words "as near as may be," in the last line, after the word "seized."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that those words in this section simply amount to nothing. The Constitution of the United States, which provides for the same thing, says "particularly describing"; and it does seem to me that to require it to be described as near as may be is equivalent to leaving it out altogether.

The Chair put the question, and a division being called for, the motion was carried by a vote of 35 to 29.

The Clerk read Section 8, as follows:

"Sec. 8. That, until otherwise provided by law, no person shall for felony be proceeded against criminally, otherwise than by indictment or information (and by information in cases where the accused has been held to answer by the committing magistrate, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service in times of war or public danger. In all other cases, offenses shall be prosecuted criminally by indictment or information. A grand jury may be drawn and summoned at any time when, in the discretion of the district judges, it may be necessary.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to Section 8.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers the following amendment to Section 8: "Amend Section 8 by striking out, in line 1, the words 'that, until otherwise provided by law.'"

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, there are some additional amendments there that I would like to have read. I would prefer to have the whole amendment read.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"also, in line 2, the words 'incidental or'; also all those words in brackets; also, all those words beginning with 'in,' in line 4."

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow. I would like it to be considered as a whole. I would like to amend the whole section so as to read, when amended, "No person shall for felony be proceeded against otherwise than by information, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service in the time of war or public danger."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to ask the learned gentleman from Silver Bow County if the object of the amendment is to abolish the grand jury entirely, and wipe it out from the statute book, or whether it is the intention to leave it in the discretion of the Judge in extreme cases, or such extraordinary cases as may appear to the Court on certain occasions, to select a grand jury to aid the court?

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I offer a substitute for this section as worded, in order to get the whole matter before the Convention.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: If the Chair will allow me, I will answer the gentleman from Custer. My object in making this amendment is to abolish, absolutely and forever, the grand jury system in the State of Montana (Applause). Now, I do not know that this section as I have amended it is in proper form, and I did not have time to prepare a substitute for it, and I have no doubt there are gentlemen here who can greatly improve on the reading of the amendment as offered. I have had a great deal of experience with the grand jury system in this Territory. For the last 20 years there has been scarcely one year that I have not served upon a grand jury in this Territory; and in a great number of the indictments.—I think that it would average 60 per cent. or more—that have been found by the grand juries upon which I served, they were either quashed or a nolle entered. I have studied that system carefully. I have seen men go before the grand juries of the counties in which I have lived, actuated by the spirit of revenge to fasten something upon some man against whom they had a grudge. I have witnessed the fact that all the indictments that have been found were upon ex parte evidence, and as I stated, generally arose from matters of personal consideration. And it may grow out of this that any man in this community, or in this commonwealth, may have a slain fastened upon his name which will last forever, while he is as innocent as a new born babe upon the subject matter of the indictment. Gentlemen, I consider that it is inquisitorial; that it is founded upon ex parte evidence, and that these matters can be reached by information in every case, and the grand jury system done away with. I consider that it is a relic of the dark ages, that has lingered and clung to the institutions of this country, and that it is time for the citizens of the Nineteenth Century, and the people of Montana who are now about to be clothed with statehood, to rise up in their majesty and relegate it to the dark ages from whence it came (Applause).

The Chairman: If the gentleman will indulge me a moment, I wish to say that the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) offers a substitute in relation to this matter—to strike out Section 8 and insert the following:

"Sec. 8. Criminal offenses of which justices' courts, and municipal or other courts inferior to the district courts, have jurisdiction, shall be presented by complaint; criminal offenses of which the district courts have jurisdiction shall be prosecuted by information after examination and commitment by a magistrate, or by leave of the court, or by indictment without such examination or commitment, or without such leave of court. The grand jury shall consist of seven persons, of whom five must concur to find an indictment. A grand jury shall only be drawn and summoned when the district judge shall, in his discretion, consider it necessary, and shall so order." The gentleman from Silver Bow moves that this be adopted as a substitute.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Now, Mr. Chairman, I will proceed to say what I proposed to say before I sat down, and that is, that the gentleman from Silver Bow County is not more firmly impressed with the importance of abolishing the grand jury system than I am; and I believe in making no half way work of it. I agree with him fully, that the system is a relic of the dark ages of barbarism, that came down to us from our forefathers, and that we have no use for it; that it is a black spot and a disgrace upon the escutcheon of our country at the present time. The substitute offered by my friend from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon)—who is an eminent lawyer, one of the ablest in the Northwest—seems to me to furnish no adequate remedy that should be considered in disposing of this question. I believe the time has come when a man should go clothed in the full panoply of manhood and make his complaint against the accused, and have him arrested and held, and not any sixteen men in a secret inquisition; and I shall, for one, vote against the grand jury system—to abolish it root and branch—and vote for the proposition of the gentleman from Silver Bow County (Mr. Clark); which I think is right.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I think we are now considering for the welfare of Montana one of its very important propositions in this Constitution. I do not quite agree with the gentlemen who have addressed this Convention upon that proposition. I do not entirely agree with them, but that is a matter in the discretion of this Convention. I am thoroughly imbued with the idea of prosecuting criminal cases by information and complaint, and am thoroughly imbued with the idea of dispensing with the grand jury system as far as it is possible to do it, and were it not but for one thing that I shall suggest, I should heartily and thoroughly concur in the views expressed by the gentlemen; and that is this, whether or not it would be wise to entirely wipe the grand jury system out, or whether it would not be wiser to retain it as contemplated in the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, to a limited extent, leaving it discretionary with the Judge of the Court when a grand jury should be empanelled or to provide that it shall be empanelled once a year—a grand jury of seven or nine persons—for these reasons alone; sometimes, on overhauling the books and affairs of the county it might be necessary to make an examination and a grand jury would be the proper persons to do it—a small grand jury; and more important than that would be this: if we could have ideal prosecuting attorneys at all times, then I would say wipe it from existence entirely; but experience has taught us that we won't at all times get men who are entirely independent and free from the influences of friends or power, or a fear, sometimes, of cliques. Fear of political influences, of classes of men, may operate on the minds of time serving district attorneys, who would fail to file informations against men where there was merit in the case. Through the influences of these men prosecuting attorneys might not at all times do their duty. Then as a check, Mr. Chairman, upon such influences as that, whether or not it would not be wise to retain a grand jury of seven or nine persons, to be called at the discretion of the presiding judge, or to be called once a year, as a check upon the influences that official men, or cliques of men who have large political influence, might exercise over the minds of these prosecuting attorneys, who would not be willing at all times to come up squarely to the mark irrespective of influences that might be brought to bear upon them. It is a question for the consideration of this Convention, whether it would not be wiser to retain the grand jury system to that limited extent, as embodied in the substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow,—Mr. Dixon, I believe. I am rather, so far as I am concerned, after giving it due deliberation and consideration, inclined to support that proposition, and not to abolish the system entirely, but to retain it to that limited extent, to provide for those contingencies.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the objections proposed by the gentleman from Deer Lodge have not very much weight. Now, he states that the grand juries may be necessary for the purpose of examining records and the official acts of public officers, and matters of that kind. I do not know what the experience of the gentleman from Deer Lodge is with reference to these matters. I do not think, having engaged in the practice of law, he has been on as many grand juries as I have; and I have seen some of these examinations of public records, and it usually results in about this: the last day before the grand jury adjourns, they appoint a committee to go and visit the Treasurer's office; another committee will go down to the Clerk and Recorder's office, to see that he has not been derelict during the past year; another committee for the hospital and jail, etc. These gentlemen go down and see the Treasurer and Clerk, who sometimes have a box of cigars, the boys are treated, and they go off feeling satisfied. Now, that a grand jury should be required to examine into the official acts of the public officers is one of the preposterous questions that are occasionally presented to an intelligent body of men. It would require a large clerical force and a great deal of time to do it. It is a uniform thing for them to go to these offices and come back and make a report; they do not know whether the Treasurer has got fifty thousand dollars or ten thousand dollars, as his books would show; they do not know anything about that. Hence, the idea of their making an examination such as ought to be made is little short of preposterous. Now, as to the question of a district attorney being purchased or corrupted, I do not understand that this matter lies wholly within the jurisdiction of the prosecuting attorney. I understand that any citizen of this state, or this county, may lodge information against any other man and have him brought to justice for committing a crime. And the expense entailed upon the state or territory is a question of grave consideration. You have sixteen men empanelled to meet at the beginning of a term of court, and there are witnesses brought here, summoned to the county seat from all over the territory, in some cases, to await the action of this grand jury; and, in many instances, those witnesses are kept there for days before they are brought to give their evidence--which, by the way, is evidence that would not be received in a court of justice; and many times grand juries have had to delay from day to day to send all over the county to get witnesses upon some new case that has just been brought in the last few days of their session; and I say, therefore, that the objections to that part of the system which the gentleman advocates do not seem, in my opinion, to have such weight as bearing upon this question.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, in order to expedite the consideration of this subject, I move you, sir, with the consent of the Convention, that the amendment, together with the original section, be referred to the Judiciary Committee, with instructions to report upon it, and to report a substitute if they deem it necessary.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I hope that motion will not prevail. We have got the question before us now, and I think it is the time to dispose of it.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order: I do not know by what authority a Committee of the Whole can refer a matter to the Judiciary Committee, or any other Committee.

The Chairman: The Chair was about to state to the gentleman from Missoula, that he is of the opinion that the point of order made by the gentleman from Silver Bow is well taken. Certainly this Committee could not refer any business to any Committee, but it could make its report and recommend it to the Convention, and then the Convention could refer it.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: If the Chair will permit me, I will change the wording of my motion, and move you, sir, that when the Committee arise it report this Section 8 back, together with the amendment offered with the recommendation that it be referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, this, probably, is as important a question as will probably come before this Convention. I am in favor of having this matter referred, for the purpose of having this section properly drafted. From the reading of the amendment as proposed by the gentleman from Silver Bow, and the substitute that was offered, I am unable to understand just how it reads and what it means. But it occurs to me that, before that reference is made, the expression of the Committee of the Whole should be ascertained, so that the Judiciary Committee in preparing a substitute for Section 8, if they might see fit to do so, would know whether or not the Convention were in favor of abolishing the grand jury system entirely. So far as I am concerned, I heartily concur with all that has been said by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark. So far as the matter of providing that the grand jury may be impanelled in the discretion of the district judge is concerned, the history of the grand jury system in the State of Wisconsin demonstrates that that power practically amounts to nothing and is not exercised. The constitution of the State of Wisconsin was amended in 1871, abolishing the grand jury system. The legislature at its next session prepared a statute on the matter of information that is full and complete. The district judges under that law have the power and authority to impanel a grand jury when they deem it necessary. But there has never been a grand jury impanelled in that state since the adoption of that amendment to the constitution except one. That exception was at the time the Newhall House in Milwaukee burned down, where there were several lives lost and culpable negligence charged as to the cause of the fire. A grand jury was impanelled at that time upon the order of the district judge, deeming it a matter of the greatest importance, of the ablest and best men that could be found in the city of Milwaukee. That grand jury sat for several days and practically accomplished nothing. They found no indictments against any one. That is the only instance in eighteen years, under the Wisconsin statute and constitution, where the judges have the power to impanel a grand jury, that it has been exercised. So that I believe it would be ~~safe~~ enough for us to provide in this Constitution for its relegation to the past, where it properly belongs. But it occurs to me that we should in some way or other ascertain the sentiment of the Committee of the Whole, before the reference, as contemplated by this motion, is made.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. Chairman, It seems to me that it is too important a question to be decided off-hand. I do not think we have, any of us, considered it thoroughly enough. This question has been agitated for several years by the ablest men in this country, and sentiment with regard to it is divided. Now, I have listened very attentively to the remarks of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, and I fail to see that the argument which he presents would in any way help us out of the dilemma. According to his statement, he bases his claim that the grand jury system should be relegated to the past upon the ground that a great deal of injustice is done through spite and revenge, actuated by improper motives; that men come before a grand jury and secure the indictment of some citizen, and in that way the name and fame and family of worthy citizens are disgraced. Now, how are we to avoid that? If there was any way—if the suggestion he makes would help us out, I would be in favor of it. But he said, the second time he stood upon the floor, that according to his idea, his understanding would be that it would not be left to the prosecuting attorney alone to present these cases, but that any citizen of this state might go and lodge complaint against another citizen, known or supposed to be guilty of any crime. Would not that give the same opportunity for this spite and revenge to take its course? Would it be any more difficult for a man to go before a justice of the peace, or even before a district court, and make a statement that some crime had been committed, even if he were actuated by spite or revenge? Would it be any more difficult for him to drag a man into court than it is now for him to go before a grand jury and accomplish the same purpose? I do not see that you advance one step by that proposition. A man has the same right to work out his spite and the same opportunity that he has now under the grand jury system. Now, if that be not the case—if a citizen will not be allowed, if we do away with the grand jury system—if he will not be allowed to go into court and lay his information, why, then, it all devolves upon the prosecuting attorney, and I do not believe there is a man in the territory, or the state of Montana, who would want to be responsible, personally and politically, for the prosecutions that are laid—and, as we know, three-fourths of them are unfruitful. A large proportion of them, as shown by the records, have resulted in the acquittal of the defendant, and the prosecuting attorney, whoever he may be, will be charged up with the institution of the case, and he will be blamed for it. I do not believe there is a prosecuting attorney in the Territory who would want to hold that position under that system. I am in favor of leaving a clause, possibly, in our Constitution, that a grand jury of five or seven or nine men may be impanelled at any time to investigate the county offices and to take the responsibility of these indictments whenever it may be deemed advisable by the district judge.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I desire just simply to say a word of explanation as to my position. I believe that I stated that these proceedings before a grand jury were ex parte—that they were inquisitorial. It is a sort of Star Chamber proceeding, where a man has no chance on Earth to defend himself. He cannot know even when they are proceeding against him; whereas, if the information be alleged against a man, and he be brought into a court of justice, it is an open court. He can bring his witnesses there, and he may defend himself, and remove, thereby, the cloud that might be hovering over his fair name and reputation. They are entirely different propositions. One is a secret inquisition, in which men called by the state are deliberating upon a man's act, without his knowledge, perhaps, and, as I said, they may be intent upon blackening that man's character for some personal consideration, and he is not allowed to bring his witnesses there to defend him. It is entirely different.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would like to suggest, that under the laws of this territory at the present time, and as they have been for years, the grand jury has had the right to require the witnesses for the defendant, and to notify the defendant himself to come before the grand jury; and whenever in any case an indictment is not found, it never does come to light, so the man's name is not injured very much; and if there is an indictment found, he then has an opportunity to bring forward his witnesses and show that he is innocent of any charge whatever. I do not see that the fact that it is an ex parte proceeding cuts any figure in the case whatever. If there is no indictment found, the man is not injured very much. The grand jury is under oath not to divulge anything of what transpires in the grand jury room, and no one is likely to talk of what transpires in the session of the grand jury. If the Party charged is an innocent man, he is not injured to any great extent. If he is not guilty, he comes into court, has compulsory process for obtaining witnesses, and if any wrong has been done him he has every opportunity to vindicate himself and his honor.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: With reference to a single point. There seems to be some little difference of opinion as to just what line of procedure may be indulged in in a grand jury room. The gentleman who last spoke, for instance, says it is quite possible, and even proper, for a grand jury to investigate the defendant's side of the case—to bring in his witnesses, or even the defendant himself. With reference to that single point I am disposed to take exception, for this reason: As a member of a grand jury, I distinctly remember being charged by a judge, that it was highly improper to call in witnesses for the defendant at all, and absolutely improper to have anything to do pertaining to even a suggestion of bringing in the defendant himself. That was charged by the judge upon the bench. So much for that single feature. And with regard to the general feature, I only want to add a word, that I believe the grand jury system is an absolute inquisition, in that an indictment brought against a man, no matter how innocent he may be, sticks to him and clings to him, a stain upon his fair name forever; and that it is quite possible for a grand jury to bring an indictment against a person upon such evidence, that not one syllable will even be permitted to be uttered in the court room when the trial of the case comes up. I am opposed to the whole system on principle.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, to bring this matter clearly before the Committee, I move to amend the motion by adding "with instructions to report a motion which shall abolish the grand jury system"

The Chairman: The gentleman from Missoula moves that Section 8, with the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) be referred to the Judiciary Committee. Now, the gentleman from Cascade desires to add to that motion the words, "with instructions to report a section abolishing the grand jury system." The Chair will treat this motion of the gentleman from Missoula and the motion of the gentleman from Cascade as one motion.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clark: Mr. Chairman, I trust this amendment will not prevail. This matter of the grand jury system is one of the important things for this Convention to settle. I do not wish this question to go before the Committee on Judiciary in any way curtailed or bound up by any vote that we may now take upon it. I want that Committee to act entirely free in the matter; not to be under any instructions or to draw any inference as to what the opinion of this Committee may now be; and give us all plenty of time, so that the matter may be thoroughly discussed and looked into before any inference of that kind be drawn from the present vote.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I desire to suggest that, according to my opinion, no prosecution for a criminal offense will be, or can be commenced without an ex parte and inquisitorial examination. And it seems to me that the question really now is as to whether that examination shall be made by a grand jury, or shall be made ex parte, when the affidavits are filed before the magistrate and a warrant for the defendant is applied for. Now the gentlemen take a very different view of the institution of the grand jury from what our fathers did at the time of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. The Constitution of the United States, as originally reported by the Convention in 1787, had nothing in it about a grand jury; but the states, when they came to ratify that Constitution, proposed some seven or eight amendments that they considered important, made to preserve the rights of the people against the oppression of officers and of the government; and among them was the institution of the grand jury; and some of the states went so far as to propose that the ratification of the Constitution of the United States should be conditioned upon the adoption of this amendment. Very many came to the conclusion, finally, that they could not make that sort of ratification without endangering the Constitution, but in their state conventions, as I understand it, proposed these amendments to the Congress of the United States, and the first Congress submitted them to the states, and they were adopted. The grand jury system as presented to us in the Constitution of the United States, in Article 5 of the Amendments, in connection with other great rights of the people, says: "No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless under presentment or indictment of the grand jury, except in cases arising in the land and naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger, nor shall any person be subjected for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor to be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law," etc. It was considered then that the grand jury system was a safeguard—a protection of the rights of the people against the power of public officers, of the public generally, and of the government; and it was inserted in the Constitution for that purpose. I have always believed that it had that effect to it—that men summoned from the different parts of the country, common citizens of the country, not sworn officers of the law, not prejudiced and bound to believe a man is guilty when he is charged, but the common people of the country; that the rights of the citizen are more clearly protected when it says that he shall not be prosecuted unless twelve of these common citizens of the country, summoned from different parts of the country, have heard the evidence—ex parte, if you choose, and inquisitorial, and all that—shall have probable cause to believe that man is guilty and ought to be prosecuted. And I believe the rights of the citizens are more clearly protected by the grand jury than if left to any officer to issue a warrant for his arrest. And so far as the slain is concerned, the indictment of the grand jury is only the charge upon which the warrant issues. That charge must always be made. The evidence is there to warrant its issue. The character of the man is as much hurt whether it is issued upon the indictment of the grand jury, or upon affidavits of citizens generally, or any officer. I believe myself that the grand jury was intended, and has always been considered, as a protection of the rights of the citizen. I believe it has that effect to it. But that is not the only benefit of it. What is everybody's business is nobody's business. The grand jury, generally selected from different parts of the county and sworn to diligently inquire into the evidence and breeches of the law committed, is the body of the county. It is their special duty to inquire into it, and they are sworn to do it; and very few indictments probably could be found in any county that would not permit these inquisitorial investigations. But when it is everybody's business, no citizen wants to be a common informer, and generally no citizen will be an informer unless he feels himself injured, and probably feels malicious against the party against whom he is going to inform. And it seems to me, not only for the protection of the citizen, but for the protection of the country, and the punishment of offenses, that the grand jury is a good thing. And I do not believe with the gentleman from Custer that it is a relic of the barbarous ages. It was required by our forefathers to be put in the Constitution of the United States, because they believed it was a protection to the citizen.

That is what it was done for. I believe that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) is a good one. It is not necessary, probably, that every offense should be prosecuted by indictment; but let it be prosecuted by indictment, or, before the man is held to answer in the circuit court, let it be examined or inquired into. I believe that is the proposition of the gentleman from Silver Bow—that the district courts have the right to summon grand juries. Let them inquire into offenses in the county which have not been inquired into, and let the district court summons a grand jury when it is necessary from his knowledge of what is going on in the county; and let a party be prosecuted, and only prosecuted, either when he is indicted by the grand jury, or after a fair examination before a tribunal of the country. And I shall, so far as I am concerned, support the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move, Mr. Chairman, that when the Committee arise, they report progress, and ask for more time, and that we do now arise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and a vote being taken the same was carried.

IN CONVENTION

President Clark in the Chair.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move to take a recess until 2 o'clock.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move that when this Convention adjourn, it adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The President: Before the motion to adjourn is put, the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole will be received.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Chairman of the Committee of the Whole: Mr. Chairman, I beg leave to report that the Committee of the Whole have been in session on the consideration of General File No. 1, and they report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move that the report of the Committee be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was carried.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, I now renew my motion.

The Chair: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman to take a recess until 2 o'clock.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I would like to ask leave of absence for this afternoon and to-morrow, Saturday.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be granted leave of absence.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move an amendment to the motion to take a recess, that we now adjourn until to-morrow morning, at 10 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was lost.

The Chair then put the question on the motion to take a recess until 2 o'clock, and the same was carried.

Recess.

2 o'clock p. m.

Convention called to order by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Upon taking a recess the Convention was engaged in the consideration of General Orders. Unless it be desired by the members of the Convention to take up the regular order of business we will proceed with the consideration of General Orders.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: Before going into Committee of the Whole, Mr. President, I ask leave of absence until Monday.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be granted leave of absence until Monday.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Mr. President, I desire a like absence.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin desires leave of absence until Monday; if there be no objection it will be granted.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move you, Mr. President, that the Convention resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole.

The motion was seconded and carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Callaway in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order by the Chair.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, the question, as I understand it, now is upon the motion to defer the matter of the abolition of the grand jury system, and the different amendments thereto, to the Judiciary Committee for report to the Convention. It seems to me in regard to that matter that it is a matter upon which the Committee has some discretion, and I think we might as well consider it now while before us instead of delaying it by a reference to the Committee. I desire to say a word, and I shall not take up but a very few minutes. There seems, as I understand it, to be a general conviction that the grand jury system as at present, with the expenses that are attached to it—the necessary expenses in the matter of proceedings by indictment in every case, should be remedied; but exactly how that is to be done is a question upon which members differ. Now, in regard to this matter of abolishing the grand jury entirely, it is a very radical proposition. So far as I know, and I think I am correct in making the statement, there is not a state in the Union that has yet abolished entirely the grand jury system; and when we undertake to do that we are taking a step, which, although in the direction of reform, is one that is entirely too radical; and we are undertaking an experiment that I, for one, cannot countenance. The institution of the grand jury is a very old one. Its proceedings, the law relating to it and to indictments, is well settled and understood. If we throw that aside entirely—if we undertake to substitute an entirely new system for it, we are treading, I think, upon rather dangerous ground. Now, the substitute which I have introduced here is intended to, and I think does, apply to the subject in about this way. We do not abolish the grand jury entirely, but we reduce it largely in number, from sixteen men, as at present, of whom twelve must concur to find an indictment, to seven, as proposed here. However, as the matter of numbers is not important—it might be thought better to make it nine, of whom seven may concur; but that is simply a matter of choice. Now, it is proposed to retain this grand jury, but to make it necessary that crime should be prosecuted as a general thing by indictment. It is proposed here that crimes in the district court—criminal offenses—shall be prosecuted by information in two classes of cases: one is where there has been an examination and commitment by a magistrate, and another is by leave of Court given for that purpose. So that this does not give any one county attorney, or any other person, the right to institute a prosecution in the district court; but it does, without the formality and dilatoriness of the proceedings by grand jury, after examination and commitment by a magistrate, give the right to proceed by information, or, on the other hand, by leave of court, which would apply in that class of cases, for instance, while the court is in session, where it would seem superfluous, but where the court, being satisfied that a crime has been committed for which an information should be filed, should direct such information to be filed and no further proceedings would be required. But there may be cases arise, in times of public excitement, where, from a failure of the district attorney or any other officers entrusted with the administration of the law, attempts may be made to shield parties from indictment, or, rather, from proceedings in criminal cases where the management and accounts of officers should be investigated and looked into criminally; that, as has been said here, not being the business of any one in particular could be overlooked and neglected. For that class of cases, and to keep a guard and check over the district attorney, or any other officer, and see that he performs his duty, and to enable the grand jury when it may be necessary to look into cases that they have overlooked, or to which public attention has not been drawn sufficiently, or which there is not a disposition to prosecute, although they should be prosecuted, then a grand jury is summoned, and it may indict in any case. It is not restrained by the fact that there must have been first an examination and commitment by a magistrate; it will require no leave of court for them to proceed, but they may go on at once, and have the power to indict the district attorney, or the judge upon the bench, and thus exercise a supervisory power over these other officers, and see that as far as possible, none shall escape who shall violate the criminal law. Now that is the object of this provision. We retain the grand jury because we know the course of procedure in that body, and the indictment, and all matters relating to the practice, are settled by law; and we only call it when, in the judgment of the court, it is necessary. It is not a prerequisite to the prosecution of public offenses; it is only kept there for the purpose of calling them together whenever, in the opinion of the court, it may be necessary; and it certainly seems to me to be a necessary provision to retain. If it is not needed, as very likely it will not be more than once in one or two years perhaps, it will not cost anything. If it is needed, it will be needed, and in some cases needed very badly, and if there is no provision for it there will be no way of getting at it. The provision which I have introduced here, except in relation to the size of the grand jury, which I have reduced here because it seems to me really that nine men or seven men are just as good as sixteen men—but, with the exception of that and with the exception of the provision which it would seem now better to provide for in relation to one or two other matters—with those exceptions the provision is taken exactly from the constitution of California; and, as I said before, if we undertake to abolish the grand jury, we are trying an experiment that has not as yet been tried in any state of the Union. California, Wisconsin, and several other states—I do not know exactly how many—have adopted substantially the term which it is now proposed to insert here; but they have never gone to the extent of abolishing the grand jury; and if it be true, as the gentleman from Custer says, that it is the history of Wisconsin that a grand jury has never been called although the constitution authorizes it, it seems to me that that would be a strong argument in retaining this provision of the grand jury, although it may never, or possibly very seldom, be called into requisition. With these exceptions, reducing the number of the grand jury and providing for information to be filed by the court as well as by a magistrate, the proposition offered here is taken almost literally from that of California. Now, I believe, for I do not wish to discuss this matter further—but I believe, in regard to these propositions of reform, while there are a great many reforms needed and while there are a great many that can be made, if you undertake a radical reform it should be done carefully and respectfully. I much prefer, so far as I know anything about the matter, to take experience that has been acquired by action under certain laws or certain provisions of the constitution, without branching out wildly into some new and entirely different scheme that has never been tried before. And while I believe, as I said, that it is useless to require a grand jury to find an indictment in order to prosecute for crime, still I think there are cases where the intervention of the grand jury will be required; and if the institution is left in such a shape, so reduced in number and with no requirements necessary, certainly it seems to me to be a great deal better to retain that institution than to do away with it altogether and branch out altogether into a system that no state has yet undertaken to try (Applause).

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I think that, in the main, I am in favor of the substitute embraced in Mr. Dixon's motion. I certainly am in favor of it, I desire simply to reply to the arguments of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall). I believe that the idea he conveyed was, that, on account of Amendment No. V to the Constitution of the United States, wherein it says that "no one shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless under presentment or indictment of a grand jury," etc., that that was applicable to all the states and territories, and that thereby we are prohibited from incorporating such a provision in our state constitution; at least, if that was not the idea conveyed, that it was a precedent for us to establish. Now, as a matter of fact, that provision has been incorporated in a great many of the states of this Union. It has been incorporated in the constitution of Arkansas, in the constitution of Connecticut, in the constitutions of Iowa, Louisiana, Minnesota, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Tennessee, West Virginia and some others; and it is incorporated there just as it is in the Constitution of the United States, and, of course, it would be impossible to abolish this grand jury system. But there are quite a number of the states where there are different provisions; and, as Mr. Dixon has said, there is not a state in the Union where the grand jury system has been abolished. In five of the states, that is, in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Kentucky, Alabama and Mississippi, it is provided that no person shall be proceeded against criminally by information. In Wisconsin the provision is that no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law. That is the provision in the Constitution of the United States, and under that provision, I understood from the gentleman from Custer, that a grand jury has never been called. Now the California provision is that offenses may be prosecuted by indictment or information after examination and commitment by a magistrate. In some states the constitution gives the legislature power and authority to abolish the grand jury system, and that is the case with Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Oregon and Colorado. And now I come to the question which the gentleman raises in regard to this being binding—this provision of the Constitution of the United States being binding on us, and that we cannot incorporate it here. That has been decided in a number of cases—two cases in the United States courts, and several cases in the state courts—that the provision of the Federal Constitution as to prosecutions by indictment or presentment to the grand jury has been held to apply only to offenses against the United States, and not to offenses against the individual states; and that has been decided, as I said, in the case of Missouri vs. Lewis, 101 United States, 22, and in the case of Hurtado vs. California, 110 United States, 516. It has been decided in a case in Indiana; in two cases in California; in one case in Wisconsin; in one case in Kansas; and in one case in Mississippi. So that the objection of the gentleman from Missouri, that we cannot incorporate such a provision, has been decided by the highest courts of this land, and it is held that we have the right, if we see fit; but no state in the Union has seen fit as yet to do more than the State of California. That comes nearer abolishing it than any of them, but it leaves it so that a grand jury may be called in each county once a year. As a matter of fact that virtually abolishes it, because it is seldom, if ever, called; and that is just what we desire to do here. There may arise cases when it will be necessary, and when nearly everybody will be anxious that this grand jury should be invoked. Now, this system does away with the objections of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark). I agree with him absolutely, and am very much in favor of abolishing this system as an inquisitorial proceeding—a Star Chamber, where people are injured, as the gentleman has said; but if there is any good in this system of the grand jury, we retain it; so that it is a compromise really between the gentlemen who are in favor of the grand jury system and those who are in favor of absolutely abolishing it. It does away with the objections of those in favor of abolishing it, and it retains all the good points, if there are any, in the grand jury system. For that reason I am greatly in favor of the proposition, or the substitute offered by Mr. Dixon.

Mr. Middleton then called for the reading of the substitute again, and the Clerk read same.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Now, Mr. Chairman, while the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) may be correct in the position which he has assumed, I think his reasons are a little bit "fishy"; and I will state here that I do not believe that there is the slightest danger of a district attorney, who must be a member of the legal profession, and is presumed to be a man of honor, who is elected to that office and takes his oath of office to discharge his duties with fidelity, the same as a district judge does—I do not believe there is any danger of his being corrupted or of failing to do his duty, his whole duty, in the prosecution of criminals. And, as one of the district attorneys, duly elected by the people, I wish to say, that if that is intended as an aspersion upon those gentlemen as a class, or upon any one of them individually, I stand here to repel it; and while I do not profess to be more honest and conscientious than my neighbors, I do assert and maintain that there is not a man on the bench, or at the bar, in any county of this Territory, who endeavors to administer the law more faithfully than I do. Now let us come down to the practical part of it. There was a good deal said here this afternoon about the grand juries' operations. It is, and always has been, an inquisitorial body of the strictest kind, acting in secret, and so designed to act in that way, without assuming the responsibility of its acts, because they were done in secret. It was provided that the grand jury should be organized and it should be a strictly inquisitorial body, doing its work in secret; and its oath says that none of its secrets should be disclosed. I trust that system under the enlightenment and advancing civilization of this period of the Nineteenth Century, when every man is supposed to be independent and when every man is allowed to assert his rights under the Constitution, will wholly disappear. If any man is offended—if he is injured—if he sees an offense committed, he has a right to go before a committing magistrate, a justice of the peace, or any other authorized magistrate, and make complaint against the offender, and have him brought up there, and, if probable cause appears, he is held to answer, where? To the inquisitorial body of the grand jury? No; but to the court itself; thereby dispensing with the necessity of grand juries, which have entailed such enormous expenses and such debts upon our counties. What is there to prevent a man from going out here and proposing a charge against his derelict neighbor who has assaulted his wife or children, who has assaulted an honest man in broad daylight, and accusing him of the crime? The magistrate who sits there, clothed with all the panoply of his office, under the sanction of his oath, after hearing both sides, and after having provided the accused with an attorney, as he is bound to do under the law as it now exists, finds the man guilty and holds him for the crime. Is it necessary then, in order to ascertain whether that committing magistrate has done his duty, and incur the further expense of a grand jury? By no means. Let the accused go up and face the court like a man, and, if he is innocent, prove his innocence. Now there was something said this morning about this dangerous man having power to nolle the indictment in case he was a corrupt man. There is nothing of the kind here. It has been the custom here, through the wisdom of the man who founded the law, that no indictment shall be nolle prossed except on order of the court, upon ground stated. Apply that ground to the preliminary examination of the magistrate, before whom the man is to answer, and you have all the safe-guards. Now one of the arguments that have been used here in favor of this municipality of districts, is that in consequence of getting rid of the probate courts—in consequence of getting rid of the clerks of the probate courts and this burdensome grand jury system—we would actually reduce the expense of running our courts here—one in each county at a less expense than we have been running them heretofore. I believe that is true, but I do not believe there is any necessity of holding on to this fossilized, defunct end of an old system, for fear of cutting loose and making a new departure. We are making a new departure. We are starting out here, leaving the swaddling clothes of territorial government and territorial vassalage behind us, prepared in the full panoply of manhood to start out and run a state upon patriotic, lawful and safe principles, without anything to drag us back to the imbecility of the past. Now I think my friend—Mr. Dixon—who is one of the finest lawyers in this country, one of the most eloquent of the gentlemen who adorn this country, and a gentleman of whom I feel proud as a citizen and as a professional brother—I think he has seen something that is frightening him from the true course of political consistency here, and wants to hang on to this old relic that we want to get rid of on the ground of the speedy administration of justice and upon the ground of political economy.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, upon a careful consideration of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, I am disposed to adhere to that. There was one little proposition advanced by the gentleman who last addressed this Convention, the entire details and practical effects of which he has perhaps lost sight of; that is to say, that if we do away with the system of grand juries entirely, and leave it to the prosecuting officer to prosecute all cases where a committing magistrate has bound the party over to appear before the district court, I regard it as a very unsafe procedure indeed—very unsafe. I have had occasion to notice those things very critically and caretully. If you adopt a rule making it incumbent upon the prosecuting attorney to prosecute in the district courts all parties bound over by a committing magistrate, then you would entail almost as much useless expenses upon the respective counties and districts in Montana as you would by the system of grand juries; because it is a well known fact to those who have observed, that notwithstanding that the testimony on either side may be submitted to the average committing magistrate, with all deference to their judgment and the panoply of their official position and oath, with all due deference to that, it is patent that, in a very large majority of the cases in which they bind the parties over, they mistake the case entirely; because they bind parties over to appear before a grand jury when any good lawyer examining the facts in the case would see the utter impossibility of reaching a conviction; and that thing occurs in perhaps half the cases which they bind over. Then a system which requires a prosecuting attorney to appear in the district court and summon all the witnesses on either side of that case, and subject the county to the expense of it, would entail an enormous and unnecessary expense; besides that, it would be the very thing exactly that we desire to avoid, and that is to harass and annoy men who are not guilty of the charge against them; that is one of the cases that we desire to avoid as much as we possibly can—to avoid subjecting innocent parties, or even if they are guilty, where there is not sufficient evidence to reach a conviction—to avoid the expense of a prosecution, and to avoid harassing them with a prosecution. Now then, I say that if we adopt any rule that will make it incumbent upon the prosecuting attorney to prosecute in the district court every man who is bound over by a committing magistrate—then I say, in order to shun one evil we are jumping into a greater one, or as great. Now it seems to me that what is contemplated by the substitute provided for that exactly—that is, the prosecuting attorney may prosecute parties who are committed by a committing magistrate, or, where they are not committed by the committing magistrate; in either case it leaves it discretionary with him, subject to such legislation as may be prescribed. It is well known, too, that it will not do to rest these prosecutions only on cases where a committing magistrate has bound the parties over, because it is a well known fact that there are a large class of cases that never reach a committing magistrate or justice of the peace, and yet the public interests demand they should be prosecuted. Therefore, I say it is the better policy to leave all these matters in the sound discretion of the prosecuting attorney, who is the best judge of the character of the case, and who knows whether the party can be brought to a successful conviction. Leave it to his discretion entirely upon that, who is the best judge of all those propositions. That is what this substitute contemplates, as I understand it. Then, in order to meet a class of cases—with all deference to the class of men who may be elected prosecuting attorneys to guard against improper influences being brought to bear upon time-serving men—because it will not always do to follow out the theory, for the theory and the practice of it, we are taught, are two separate and distinct things, and practice will not always carry out these things—the prosecution is that we are always going to have prosecuting attorneys who will come up to the mark, who are good lawyers, and who will do exactly what is right without fear, favor or affection; but, as a matter of practice, we know that we cannot always get such men, and we should guard against the possibility of such calamities as that. Then I say, let us adopt a system in our Constitution by which we can steer clear of these evils, and it will be a protection to prosecuting attorneys as well; it will certainly be most gratifying to them to know that, being invested and clothed with this sole power, there is a tribunal standing behind them, so that they can say to men who think they have refused to prosecute men that they think should be prosecuted—they have something to fall back upon, and they can say, "gentlemen, if you think this man for any reason should be prosecuted against my judgment, here is a tribunal and the case can be submitted to that tribunal." It is a shield and a protection to prosecuting attorneys, and it puts them in a better position to inspire the confidence of the public and to perform their duties properly. Then let us guard against these evils that may come, not predicting that they will. It is the dictate of wisdom to guard against those contingencies that may arise. I can foresee them as plainly as I can see the face of the presiding officer of this Committee. Experience has taught that these men occupying official positions will not always do just what is right. Why sir, as an illustration of that, the Congress before the last passed a law providing that the fees of officers should not be increased or diminished during the term of office. Our Legislature last winter passed a law increasing the fees of some of the officers. As it is understood, I presume the proper interpretation of it would be that that law would only apply to those who were elected or appointed before the next general election; but in spite of all of that, my observation has been that every solitary officer had jumped in and charged the fees from the very turn loose under the new fee bill, in violation of this Act of Congress, thereby, under our law, subjecting them to a criminal indictment. If the temptation of officers and men is sometimes too great, human nature is weak and they will do it. Their judgment may be warped; sometimes they will commit errors of judgment not wilfully. And I say, let us, in these matters, guard against these things, and place a protection over prosecuting officers, and place it beyond the power of men to go to extremes. Who has not seen instances where communities have vibrated to extremes against officers who are faithfully trying to discharge their duties? Who has not seen the public clamor, or rumors, or misunderstandings of facts of this thing, that and the other, accuse men wrongfully of these things; and I can foresee where it is more likely to occur in cases of this character than any other; that in these criminal matters it often divides itself into cliques—one party in favor of the accused, or men who should be accused, and the other against the party. Communities will divide themselves upon it; rumors will be rife; exaggerated statements of fact will become rife, and the public will become excited, and they will get wrong impressions of it. They will be ready to accuse a prosecuting attorney of favoring this man, that and the other for business influences, political influences, money influences, that and the other thing. It places an honest prosecuting attorney in a very unfavorable position indeed—the man who desires to do his duty irrespective of friendship, fear, or favor—it places him in a very unfavorable position. Then I say, in order to enable this man to go fearlessly up to the work and do what is right, I say let us have some tribunal to stand behind him, that will be a refutation of false charges and false impressions that the public may gain about him as a prosecuting officer, and who can say to them, "Gentlemen, if I am wrong in my judgment about this thing, here is a tribunal standing behind me, a grand jury that may be summoned, and let them act upon the case, then, if they say I am wrong, I will cheerfully prosecute that case." It relieves him of responsibility in these cases, and for that reason I regard this as a very essential feature in our Constitution. Then it seems to me, taking all these propositions together, that the most rational and the best theory we can adopt is the one suggested by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) as a substitute for this bill. Upon mature deliberation, and the experience I have had as a prosecuting officer, and watching these things as carefully and closely as I have done, I say it is better all around to retain that much of what has been regarded by some gentlemen as a fossilized remnant and a relic of barbarity. The gentleman from Missoula County has used the very language that I desired to express to this Convention. He gave the fairest exposition of the grand jury system—the way a great many who laid the foundation of our government reviewed that thing; they considered it carefully and thoroughly. All these things are subject to abuse, but it seems to me that the gentlemen who took the opposite side have vibrated to something of an extreme in condemning the grand jury system. While I am opposed to its general use, I believe the state will be subserved by retaining it to the extent of the substitute that this Section 8 contemplates.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, the only excuse I have for offering any remarks at this time is that I think this is one of the most important questions that will come before this Convention, and I have very little to add to what has been said by the gentleman who preceded me and the mover of this proposition. I can conceive instances where it would be necessary for the rights of the people, for the due execution of the criminal laws of the land, that there should be a grand jury behind all of these prosecutions, or, rather, examinations before committing magistrates, or informations that may be presented by leave of the court. Now, sir, let us suppose—and it is not very much of a stretch of the imagination to suppose magistrates who are not familiar with the criminal laws of the land; I have seen those that were not as thoroughly cognizant of it as my friends from Deer Lodge or Silver Bow counties—and the prosecuting attorney has made out a very good case, and through the stupidity of the magistrate the accused is discharged. Now, then, if the people of that community think there has been a violation of the criminal laws of the land and would desire to have that party punished, the grand jury may take up such a case as that. Again, it frequently occurs that, after an examination before a committing magistrate, further evidence has been found, and there should be occasions, or means rather, to meet such a case at that. I think a grand jury that may be called in the discretion of the court is just exactly the body for all such cases as that. Then, again, there is another thing which seems to me to be overlooked. There are certain proceedings in the examination of criminal offenders that certainly should be kept secret. I will instance simply this matter of the Cronin murder in Chicago, where for weeks a special grand jury investigated all the charges. Now then, it is necessary before an examining magistrate, under our system of jurisprudence, that the examination should be open to all the world; and the criminal himself becomes cognizant of everything against him. If he finds that it is light and he can fix it, he stands and takes the charges; but, otherwise, you will find him in Canada or some other country. There are cases of that kind that should go before the grand jury; and, as was suggested by the gentleman from Silver Bow county, there is no expense attached to this method unless the grand jury is called into requisition; and it seems to me that if they were called, say once a year, it would not be very burdensome to any county. There are—and I will repeat it—there are cases where there should be Star Chamber investigations—secret investigations; otherwise the arm of the criminal law is weakened; men may escape justice; and I think, taking this all in all, that it would be dangerous to abolish all together the grand jury system. I would be willing to compromise and say that five should compose a grand jury; but we should have some body that could be called to meet cases that might be evaded or might be passed over—the cases where they might not be properly investigated by the committing magistrates or the prosecuting attorneys. I say that somebody—some collection of men or grand jury—you may call it what you please; if you object to the name of grand jury, call it some other name—but that some collection of persons intended to meet such exigencies as I have mentioned should be maintained in every system of government.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I desire to withdraw the motion made by myself, before a recess, to commit this matter to the Judiciary Committee for report.

The Chairman: The gentleman withdraws his motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, the motion before the House is the proposition or motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow. On that I wish to say one word and I will offer an amendment to it—or rather, a substitute for it. I will read the amendment for the information of the Committee, but I will call the attention of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to the fact—(interrupted). If the substitute is not in order—(interrupted)

The Chairman: The first amendment was the one offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clarke, and the next was the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, which becomes the second amendment; and a third amendment is not in order.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I understand the motion of the President of the Convention is the original motion. The motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, is the amendment, and this is an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: My understanding is that the original motion made by the gentleman from Missoula County has been withdrawn.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, my motion to refer to the Committee on Judiciary, with instructions to report a section that would abolish the grand jury system, has probably been lost. As my motion does not seem to be before the Committee, I would like to say a word upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clarke. Now, Mr. Chairman, I believe it should not be the exclusive right of the members of the bar to settle this question. We all feel proud of the Judiciary Committee of this Body; no better one could have been organized or put into working order in any one of the great states of this

Union, and this Convention and the people of Montana should feel proud of it; but, notwithstanding that fact, I claim that upon a question of this kind, the members of this Convention who are not members of the bar are as well qualified to judge by past experience of this matter as they are. I claim that because the members of the bar are almost unanimously in favor of this proposition, they should not by their fine arguments and glib tongues convince all the balance of us that we should go with them. Now sir, I believe that aged lawyers, and learned lawyers—men who have retired from the practice—men who have written text books upon legal subjects, and who have written special articles upon this subject in the great magazines of this country, almost unanimously agree that it would be a step in the right direction—a great reform—to abolish the grand jury, and almost abolish the petty jury. Now, if that is the case, and if in conjunction with that a half dozen or more of the great states of this Union have virtually abolished the grand jury system, and have gotten along very well without it, then I ask why in all reason should not the State of Montana advance in the reformation of the judicial system of the country and also abolish it. I believe that the attorneys at law, taken as a class, are the most conservative citizens in the United States; that it is harder for a lawyer to jump out of the beaten rut, no matter how far back that rut may have originated—no matter in what times or under what circumstances it was commenced—it is harder for a lawyer to jump out of that rut than any other class of citizens in the United States. I believe, as a fact, that it is a good thing for the United States that such is the case; but upon questions that other people can judge of, it seems to me that the opinion of lawyers should not prevail. The arguments of the gentlemen who have talked this forenoon upon this question it seems to me are conclusive that the grand jury system should be abolished, and I believe that is the voice and opinion of the people of Montana; that opinion is voiced by almost the unanimous community in favor of the abolition of that system. I believe I have heard an expression from nearly half the laymen of this Convention in favor of the abolition of the grand jury system; I have heard an expression from a number of the attorneys in favor of the abolition of that system; and I hope that, when it comes to a test, that this matter will be referred to the Judiciary Committee, with instructions to draw such an iron clad section as shall forever abolish it and give us in lieu of it something else. If that is the view of the Convention, I believe it is the proper course to take, and I will say here and now that when they do pass upon the matter and introduce that section, I believe that every citizen of Montana will feel that the section is perfect, and that there is no danger of a great radical change or a great disruption of judicial proceedings because that section abolishing the grand jury is incorporated in our Constitution. I, for one, hope that this will be looked at from every point of view, and that the majority of the Convention will vote in favor of abolishing the system. I can conceive of no case on earth, under any circumstances, or in any country, where it requires the examination of a grand jury. It may be possible that county affairs and county boards and county proceedings may have to be examined by commissions, but, if so, it can be provided for by law; but in other matters certainly, and upon a fair trial before a committing magistrate, or, better still, a perpetual session of the court, and a production of the offender, upon information, before the court, would be a move in the right direction, and a great reform in our present judicial system.

Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I quite agree with the gentleman from Cascade, that this is a matter that does not interest exclusively the lawyers in this Convention, but that it is a question which closely concerns every citizen of the Territory of Montana. I am not satisfied with the grand jury system, and believe, I think with the majority of this Convention, that if not absolutely abolished, that such a provision should be put into the Constitution as will authorize its assembling only in case of necessity. The gentleman from Cascade says that he cannot imagine of any case where it would be absolutely necessary to call a grand jury. Take, for instance, the suggestion, which was a potent one, by the gentleman from Gallatin County (Judge Luce), who suggested that where a committing magistrate should after hearing the testimony presented to him, decide that the party ought to be acquitted, and thereupon his discharge was had. Now, everybody knows that committing magistrates and justices of the peace are selected without reference to their qualifications, that is to say, they are not selected with reference to their being learned in the law, and that it frequently happens that justices of the peace and committing magistrates discharge individuals accused of crimes when subsequently grand juries not only indict them, but they are tried and convicted. Suppose we abolish the grand jury system entirely, and are remitted simply to this process. A man commits a felony; a trial is had before a justice of the peace; no jury is had; it lies within the province of the committing magistrate to determine whether that party is guilty, and the committing magistrate decides that the party is not guilty and he goes scot free. But aside from that, as was suggested by Judge Dixon this morning, we are acquainted with the decisions and rules of the common law with reference to indictments. Suppose we absolutely abolish the grand jury system, which takes with it as a matter of course, the indictment, and we have nothing left but an information. That is not a proceeding at common law. It has no significance or definition by which we are to determine what it contains, and during the period of time from which this State shall be admitted into the Union upon the proclamation of the President of the United States, up to and including the time that the legislative assembly shall determine what shall constitute an information, we will be left without any remedy or process by which criminals can be brought to justice. Aside from that again, I believe, and my experience I think justifies me in the statement, that there are times, sir, of great public excitement and popular indignation, when the passions of men and of citizens are aroused, when the prosecuting attorney and the officers of the court need to be sustained, upheld and fortified by an indictment brought by a grand jury and, as was suggested, where officers themselves, the sheriff, the constable and others in authority, shall neglect and fail to perform their duty, the fact that a grand jury can be called by the judge of the court, is a wholesome provision, and one which would operate, I think, properly, in forcing upon those officers the fact that there was some authority by which their acts might be brought to the attention of the court. Now this is simply a provision, such a one as exists in several of the states of the Union where they have seen fit not entirely to abolish the grand jury. I believe that our experience will be in keeping with that of the other states that have adopted this provision, that the grand jury system will be virtually abolished and be a dead letter but I think it quite proper, as suggested by all of the gentlemen who have advocated the retention of the grand jury system, that we keep it in reserve to meet those conditions that we cannot at this time anticipate.

The Clerk was directed to read the substitute once more, and read as follows:

Sec. 8. Criminal offenses of which justices' courts and municipal, and other courts inferior to the district court, have jurisdiction, shall be prosecuted by complaint. Criminal offenses of which the district courts have jurisdiction shall be prosecuted by information, after examination and commitment by a magistrate, or by leave of the court, or by indictment without such examination or commitment or without such leave of court. A grand jury shall consist of seven persons, of whom five must concur to find an indictment. A grand jury shall only be drawn and summoned when the district court judge shall, in his discretion, consider it necessary, and shall so order.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to take up the time of the Convention, as I expressed my views upon this subject this morning, but I wish simply to say a word, and I believe I am entitled to close this debate. If I held to the principles advocated by the gentleman from Deer Lodge and the gentleman who has just addressed you, from Lewis & Clarke, I should certainly be in favor, not of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, but I should be in favor of the clause as reported back by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. Their arguments have tended in the direction of supporting that proposition, and not the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, which, as I take it, is simply a little reserve, to be held in cases of emergency if the emergency should ever arise. Now, these gentlemen are arguing upon the main proposition and not upon the substitute. I have no disposition, gentlemen, to cling to the memories of the past. I know we are apt to cling with veneration to those forms and customs which have the dust of time upon their brows, and while

I am willing to give due credit to those immortal ancestors who framed the Constitution of the United States, we must bear in mind that they lived in an age different from this that they had just emerged from a monarchical government and that we have made the progress, and a remarkable progress, of almost a century and we must recollect that they lived at a time and in an age when human slavery was recognized almost all over this country; at a time when a respectable community, a peaceable, intelligent, well educated community in Massachusetts, directed the burning of people for witchcraft; and I say that we have advanced from that period, and this country has seen a remarkable and wonderful development; and why should it not in these matters which pertain to the judiciary of this country? I have not heard a single argument advanced by these gentlemen that is, in my mind, conclusive that this dark blotch upon American civilization should be retained in the judiciary of this country. If we were to narrow down the information to the prosecuting officer it might be different; but I understand it is the contemplation of this measure that any man may lay an information against a criminal and have him arrested. This simply provides, as I understand it, that in the discretion of the Judge, should emergency arise, a grand jury may be impanelled to investigate measures of this kind. Now, it has been stated here that there are several states—I believe the state of Wisconsin, if I am not misinformed, and the state of California—have adopted provisions very similar to this which we shall adopt if the substitute of the gentleman shall prevail; but we are informed here that there has been no opportunity presented, and no occasion presented for calling this grand jury into requisition in the state of Wisconsin; and I believe, gentlemen, that the time has come when we should discard this grand jury system. It is cumbersome, it is expensive, it is inquisitorial, it is ex parte, it is one of the remnants of barbarism that has been entailed upon the institutions of this country; and I, for one, am ready to believe in the intelligence and integrity and the good sense of the people of Montana and I say that, while these people have been hesitating to throw this odious proposition overboard, although they have almost concluded to do so, let Montana take a forward step and cut the thread that binds us to the barbarous past.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I have listened with a great deal of interest to this grand jury discussion, and I have learned more about it than I ever knew before. It is true that some of the information gained does not coincide with my observation or experience. I had no idea that the grand jury system was such a system of odious iniquity, devouring the reputations of innocent people. I have been on grand juries of different kinds, and I cannot recall any instance where any innocent person has been injured. I can recall a great many instances where there has been a failure to bring guilty ones to justice, where the evidence was not sufficient to convict. As I have listened to the charges of the great crimes which have been committed in the name of the grand jury against innocent persons, I have gone back in my mind and peered into the past to see if I could recall any instance of that kind, and I have failed to do so. I have also been surprised to hear that the grand jury system is a relic of barbarism. I am not very well versed in history, but I had an idea that our jury system was the outgrowth and result of Magna Charta, that great charter which was wrested by the barons of England from the king, in the 12th or 13th century, and was the first mortal blow to the idea of the divine right of kings, and was the entering wedge which has grown and spread and resulted in the freedom which we enjoy here. I am not one who advocates that the old ways are the best ways because of their age; but I believe all established usage should be carefully weighed and considered both as to its near and as to its remote results; because, if once embedded in the Constitution, it will be very difficult to expunge it, and I think that the power which it is contemplated by this resolution to take from the hands of sixteen men and put into the hands of one man is in the direction of centralization, and that it would be less satisfactory and more liable to abuse than the system now prevailing. I am not in favor, therefore, of the abolition of the grand jury.

The Chair then put the motion on the question of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, and a division being called for, the substitute was declared carried by a vote of 53 to 10.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Now, Mr. Chairman, I offer the following:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 8 so as to read as follows: "No person shall for felony be proceeded against criminally otherwise than by indictment or information, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service in the times of war or public danger. In all other cases offenses shall be prosecuted by information or complaint."

Mr. Carpenter: Mr. Chairman, I offer that resolution, which is very much like the one adopted and very much like Section 8 as reported by the Committee; but in that proposition all legislation is stricken out. I think, in the bill of rights, we ought to adhere strictly to certain principles, and discard all legislation that may be attempted to be interjected. The complaint principally made against the Constitution proposed four years ago was that there was too much legislation in it. We are proceeding in a way that will add to our Constitution to be adopted this fall perhaps a dozen pages more of legislation than the proposed Constitution of four years ago contained. I am entirely opposed to abolishing the grand jury system. It has come down to us for centuries as a shield and protection to the innocent, and the defense of the poor and weak against the strong and the rich and the powerful, and it is needed for that purpose as much in Montana today as it was in England four hundred years ago. But, at the same time, there is, I believe, among many, a feeling that proceedings by information would be preferable. This leaves it with the legislature to provide as it may see fit for criminal prosecutions by information in certain cases, and perhaps, if public sentiment should become so strong in favor of it as to warrant it, in all cases. It is very much, as I said, like Section 8, discarding the legislation. The complaints which I have heard have been ten times more pronounced against trial by petty jury than the inquisitions by grand juries. For these reasons, and because it is simple and accomplishes what I believe to be the sentiment of many with whom I have conversed in this Convention, I offer this proposition.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: I will state to the gentleman that, by the action of the Committee upon the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, it takes the place of Section 8, and this would be an amendment to Section 8.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: This is now to amend Section 8—not the original one, but the one as adopted.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, it strikes me that this is a substitute that does away with the force of Section 8 as it now stands, and which seems to have met the sense of the Convention. I do not believe in leaving this matter to the legislature; I believe in providing for it here. That does not abolish the grand jury, nor does it in any way prevent the numerous objections to the grand jury. Now, I am in favor of settling this matter here. Another thing that occurs to me in the consideration of such a section is that it provides that offenses shall only be prosecuted by indictment. Now it might be held with very good reason as a matter of law, that an indictment would necessarily have to follow the indictment under common law, and that the grand jury would have to consist of that number, and that the proceedings in every case must go back to the proceedings that were legally necessary in a grand jury. I am not, as I said before, in favor of greatly modifying this grand jury system. It seems to me, however, a matter that should be decided here. I am opposed myself to putting any legislation in the Constitution, but this is a matter that ought not to be left in such a shape that it can be changed from time to time by different sessions of the legislature.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clark: Mr. Chairman, I would say just one word. I think that goes almost as far as any constitutional provision you can find. If by degrees the legislature adopt the system of prosecution by information, and it works well, there will be no reason for proceeding further with the grand jury system. If we insert it in the Constitution they cannot change the system, but if we leave it to them for them to adopt, and legislate in regard to it as they think proper—if the system of prosecution by information works well, then it can certainly be continued; if it works badly, then it can be discarded; but until they do proceed by information the prosecutions should be by indictment under that section.

The Chair then put the motion on the amendment offered by Mr. Carpenter, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clark: I would like to offer an amendment to Section 8, to increase the number of jurymen from seven to nine, making seven the necessary number to find an indictment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to amend by making it five.

The Chairman: The gentleman moves to amend Section 8 by increasing the grand jury from seven to nine. This is seconded. The gentleman from Cascade moves to amend by making it five in place of seven.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: My amendment is that it shall consist of five persons, of which three shall concur to find an indictment.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, that is a matter that does not seem to me really to be of very much importance, but it strikes me that a grand jury to consist of seven persons is enough. On the other hand—(interrupted)

The Chairman: I will state to the gentleman that the motion of the gentleman from Cascade is limited to five.

Mr. Dixon: It seems to me, although it is, of course, an expression of opinion, it seems that five should concur to find an indictment. I think a grand jury of five would be pretty small, and when you make it so small as that, it appears to me it might be objectionable in more than one respect. I am inclined to think that the number as it now stands in the amendment as adopted is correct.

Mr. Mayger: Mr. Chairman, I offer my amendment to Section number 8 for the purpose of having a sufficient representation. In a large county, like this county, where there are so many different sections of it, I think it would require as many as nine to represent the whole county. That is the only reason why I made the amendment to increase the number to nine instead of seven.

Mr. Collins: I think seven is about right and I therefore withdraw my amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Cascade withdraws his amendment; it now recurs upon the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark, that the grand jury shall be composed of nine, and shall require seven to indict.

The Chair then put the motion, and a division being called for, the amendment was lost by a vote of 21 in the affirmative to 38 in the negative.

The Clerk then read Section 9, as follows:

"Sec. 9. That treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort; that no person shall be convicted of treason except on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on his confession in open court; that no person shall be attainted of treason or felony by the Legislative Assembly; that no conviction shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture of estate; that the estate of persons who may destroy their own lives shall descend or vest as in cases of natural death."

There being no amendments to Section 9, the Clerk read Section 10, as follows:

"Sec. 10. That no law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech; that every person shall be free to speak, write or publish whatever he will on any subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty; and that in all suits and prosecutions for libel, the truth thereof may be given in evidence, and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the fact."

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to Section 10.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers a substitute for Section 10.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Declaration of Rights, Sec. 10. Every citizen may freely speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all suits or prosecutions for libel, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury, and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous was true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the fact."

The substitute was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the substitute, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I desire to amend Section 10.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers an amendment to Section 10, which is as follows:

Amend Section 10 by striking out the words "law and the" after the words "determine the," in line 4; and add after the word "fact" at the end of said line the words "and the court shall determine the law."

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I will state the object of that amendment. As the original section stands it provides that the jury in these cases of libel shall determine not only the fact but the law. There is a section on our statute books to the same effect. I never could see any legal logic or philosophy in an action of libel where the jury determined the question of law any more than in any other character action. How and why it ever got there has always been incomprehensible to me. It seems to me, in a libel case, as well as all others, that the jury should determine the fact and the court the law; and the object of the amendment is to place it on the same footing or foundation as any other civil action, that the court shall determine the law and the jury shall receive the law from the court.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and the same was declared lost.

The Clerk then read Section 11, as follows:

"Sec. 11. That no ex post facto law or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or retroactive in its operation, or making any irrevocable grant of special privileges, franchises or immunities, shall be passed by the legislative assembly."

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clark: Mr. Chairman, I move to amend this Section 11 by striking out, in the first and second lines, the words "or retroactive in its operation." I consider it very important that the motion should prevail. Under this provision it would be impossible to pass certain remediable laws which are very necessary. If a justice of the peace or notary public fails to qualify or performs an act in any irregular manner, it may become very necessary, to save the title to valuable property, in many instances, that the legislature should confirm the acts of that justice of the peace. Very often there are irregularities of that kind, and it becomes necessary for the legislature to act upon them and confirm them. There may be cases where a person is appointed to office, performs his duties, but the legislature may have neglected at first to fix the salary or afford any compensation, and any act of that kind would have to be retroactive. Now, as a general rule, I am opposed to all retroactive or retrospective measures; but it seems to me that we would hamper the state in a way that would be very unpleasant and very injurious, and which might hazard the title of property in many instances where an officer had acted through some little neglect of form. The courts always hold an act prospective and not retrospective where it is possible to do so and there is very little danger of retroactive measures escaping the scrutiny of a court except in cases where they are necessary.

The Chair then put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk then read Section 12, as follows:

"Sec. 12. That no person shall be imprisoned for debt, except in such manner as may be prescribed by law, upon refusal to deliver up his estate for the benefit of his creditors, or in cases of tort, where there is strong presumption of fraud."

Mr. Farren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I offer the following, and would say that Section 13 of the old constitution seems to have been left out by the Committee for some reason or other. I think it should go in.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers the following: After Section 12 in the report of the Committee, insert the following, and change the number of the succeeding sections to correspond:

"Sec. 13. The right of any person to keep or bear arms in defense of his home, person and property, or in aid of the civil power when thereto legally summoned, shall not be called in question; but nothing herein contained shall be held to permit the carrying of concealed weapons."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared duly carried.

The Chairman: This section will be inserted as Number 13, and Section 13, as it now stands, will be numbered 14.

The Clerk then read Section 14, as follows:

"Sec. 14. That private property shall not be taken for private use unless by consent of the owner, except for private ways of necessity, and except for reservoirs, drains, flumes or ditches on or across the lands of others for agricultural, mining, milling, domestic or sanitary purposes."

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move the rejection of this section. I do not believe myself that this Convention has the power to authorize the legislature to take private property for private use. I believe that an act of the legislature doing so would be a violation of the Constitution of the United States, which says, "property shall not be taken except by due course of law;" and it has always been held, I believe—I have never heard of any state or any court holding that a legislature has the right to take my property and to give it to anybody else; and if they have a right to take it for one thing they have a right to take for any private use except it was prevented by this Constitution. The Constitution of the United States says, "public use"—"private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation." But I know of no law which authorizes a legislature to take private property for private use; and it seems to me that it is the height of despotism for any one to take my property. Now I believe some court has decided that a private pass way is a public use; that, although it is for the especial benefit of a particular person, yet that anybody has a right to use it, and it is therefore for public use. Ditches and drains for irrigation purposes should be for public use, but if so the public must have the right to use it; and I do not believe myself that the legislature of any state has the right to take a ditch across my land, or that any person has the right to take a ditch across my land for his private use; I think not. I believe that the legislature of the Territory of Montana has an act that authorizes condemnation of private property, or the right to take a ditch across private property for the purposes of irrigation. Judge DeWolf, at the last term of the Missoula court, decided that that act was unconstitutional. That, of course, was unconstitutional because they were acting under the Constitution of the United States, and it has been held always, that although private property might be taken for public use on just compensation being paid, that private property could not be taken, under the Constitution of the United States, for private use, under any circumstances, without the consent of the owner; and my own judgment would be that an act of the legislature passed in pursuance of this, unless the court should decide that the purpose of irrigation is a public use, would be unconstitutional; for it does strike me that it is the height of despotism to admit that any majority has any right to take my property and give it to anybody else against my consent, or has the right to damage my property for the benefit of anybody else; and I believe that no legislature should have the right to take private property for private use for any purpose; and I move to reject Section 13 of the report.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clark: I do not know, Mr. Chairman, how the courts may decide a matter of this kind, but it seems to me that, if our valleys are to be occupied by farmers, that the section had better stand as it is.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I was going to say, Mr. Chairman, that in Section 14 as it stands I do not see anything that authorizes the legislature to take private property unless with the consent of the owner; that is the way it reads.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: Mr. Chairman, I do not know that I thoroughly understand this proposition, and would like to understand it before I vote upon it. I find here in the Constitution of Colorado, under the head of Irrigation, the following: "All persons and corporations shall have the right of way across public, private and corporate lands for the construction of ditches, canals and flumes for the purpose of conveying water for the irrigation of agricultural land, and for mining and manufacturing purposes, and for drainage, upon payment of just compensation." Now, do I understand that the legislature by this act cannot enact such laws as to enable a person to force a drain ditch through a piece of land if the owner does not desire it? I think, under this Constitution of Colorado, that it allows any person owning land lower down on a stream to run a drain ditch through his land and the compensation to be determined by the courts; and that is what I understand by this same clause here.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, Sections 13 and 14 should be considered together in determining this question. The intention of the two sections is that private property may be taken for private use upon the payment of just compensation to the owner of the private property; and the decision which Judge Marshall mentioned as having been rendered is perhaps the reason that the clause has been inserted in the manner in which it is here inserted. Under the law of eminent domain it has been held by many courts that, inasmuch as the constitutions of the different states provide that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, that for that reason private property shall not be taken for private use under any circumstances. Now, sir, I deem it unnecessary to state to the members of this Convention that it frequently becomes necessary in the Territory of Montana for private property to be taken for what is in fact a private use; and that is particularly true in the case where, when one person owning a piece of land near another, finds it necessary to carry water upon that land for the purposes of irrigation—when that is done, or when the person who seeks to carry water across the land of another, he is taking private property for a private use; in other words, if I seek to carry a ditch across another man's land, no matter how much of a necessity it may be to me that this water should go across the land of another, it is nevertheless a private use. In order to avoid the difficulty which is encountered in other constitutions, this section 13, or 14 as it is numbered, in the report of the Committee was inserted here; in other words, it provides a way, upon the payment of just compensation to the party owning the property,—that is, property may be appropriated by the legislature. This, of course, does not provide the way; it simply gives the right, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the legislature, for a private person to carry his ditch across the land of another for private use. We have numerous instances in our own county, where persons have sought to carry water across the lands of another, and they are met in every instance, not only by the constitutional provision in the enabling act of this Territory, but by the decisions of the courts, and by that old constitutional provision in the Constitution of the United States, which prevents them from carrying water on their land for the purpose of irrigation. It is not always true that the damage to the land crossed is of any great amount; but where there is not the best of feeling existing between neighbors, they seek to prevent persons from going across their land, no matter whether it is of any damage to them or not, and no matter whether the full amount of compensation is paid them or not. It is a means of oppression in a great many instances, as where a person is prevented from cultivating his own land when he cannot get water upon it. I apprehend we are differently situated in this matter than are a great many states of the Union, and that it becomes with us absolutely necessary to take private property for what is in fact a private use. The courts say that whether it is a private or public use is a matter for the courts determining the case; but the courts are not always right in determining these questions, and do not always arrive at right conclusions. And if the provision is inserted and acted upon by the legislature which hereafter meets in this proposed state, I apprehend some just rule may be provided by which private property can be taken for the purpose of running irrigating ditches across private land; and that the interests of the people will be subserved if this clause, or these two clauses are inserted in the Constitution. By an Act of the Congress of the United States, passed, I think, in 1874, the right of way for roads and ditches was given by the general government of the United States over all public land. A person who has been so fortunate as to locate his ranch and build his ditches before the title of that land has been acquired by somebody else, is in such a condition that he need not take advantage of this provision; but as our Territory becomes more thickly settled, it will become necessary more and more, each and every year as it rolls on, that private property should be taken for what is actually a private use. Therefore I say, notwithstanding that we are getting beyond the point where many of the other states have gone, that we should introduce this innovation; we should take this step in advance in order that all the lands in the Territory may become available for agricultural purposes, where it is possible to obtain water upon them. Let us not throw a block under the wheels of progress, but rather urge the car along.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I do not know what the sense of the Convention upon this subject is: It is a departure from the ancient land marks. But we live in a different country, and are surrounded by a different climate and a different soil from that which exists where the common law had its birth. Most of the constitutions of the states and the Constitution of the United States have retained this old provision that private property should not be taken for a public use without just compensation; and it has been held generally by the courts that private property cannot be taken for a private use at all. There has been some dispute as to the question of what is a public use, and hampered by a provision something like the old form, in the Constitution of Nevada, they have held that it was a public use for a man to go on to another man's land and sink a mining shaft, so that he could work his mine, or enable a corporation to do so. Now I pretend to say that that was traveling outside of the ancient land marks entirely. In relation to this question of irrigation, in Colorado they made a decision that a man had a right of way out of necessity. That is carrying that doctrine of right of way further than it has been carried by any other court that I know of. Now it seems to me that the way out of this is, as far as we can, to grant for these special purposes that are expressed here a power in the legislature to grant this right of way. It is necessary to the growth and prosperity of this country. If we ever expect to have great irrigation ditches and canals to irrigate this country, it is necessary that we should have that right of way; or somebody will stop every enterprise of that kind and black ball it on the start. There may be some doubt as to whether or not such a court as the Supreme Court of the United States would be disposed to hold, even if we cannot do this by virtue of the constitutional provision, that this is one of the rights that has been handed down to us by our fathers; but I find that in the Constitution of Illinois they provide there for condemning a right of way for drainage. In Illinois they do not need water for irrigation, but they have so much water there in certain localities that they need drainage; and in the provision in their Constitution the legislature is given this right to enact laws for condemning for private individuals a right of way for drainage. I have not observed any decisions upon that question, but I have thought of this matter for years. I believe that the courts are entirely right in this idea that the present law we have upon the statute book is in violation of the Constitution of the United States, although I believe there are two district courts that have decided that it is not, and that it is a public use for one man to have a right of way for a ditch over another man's land. But I do not believe that that is the correct interpretation of the law. But to set every matter at rest, as far as we can, for the benefit of the country, and looking to its future growth, we ought to establish, I believe, these two propositions. I looked over them more carefully than

I have any other two provisions in this declaration of rights, and I believe that in the grant of legislative powers to the legislature, there ought to be an additional plank. This is trying just simply to let down the bars to let the legislature do what it can do; that is about all. A Declaration of Rights in a Constitution means nothing except that it either puts up the bars or lets them down. But it might be doubted whether or not, without a special grant in the legislative power, that the legislature could do this thing, even with this provision in the Declaration of Rights, and I think that, when the time comes, we will want to grant the power to the legislature to do just what is embodied here in this Bill of Rights. I am certainly opposed to striking out those provisions; I believe in letting them stand.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clark: Mr. Chairman, I entirely agree with the gentleman in the necessity for keeping these provisions in the Constitution. New conditions and new necessities make new laws, and even the Supreme Court of the United States has been known to change front on many propositions. In the decision of a certain mining case in this Territory which came before the Supreme Court of the United States, Justice Miller made the remark that if anybody had told him two or three years before that he would have put his name to a decision of that kind he would have told him he was a fool. Now, in addition to these two sections, I think I shall offer the following: "The right of eminent domain shall not be curtailed, and the property of corporations shall stand upon the same principle as the right of persons."

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I withdraw my motion, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: This Section 14 can mean nothing. It provides for the taking of private property for private use. It seems to me that the difficulty could be obviated by this Convention putting a section in this Constitution declaring what shall be a public use. Now, I undertake to say that, under the system of jurisprudence in this Territory, the construction of ditches across another man's land for the purpose of irrigation is a public use; that is, under our system; and also the construction of ditches and flumes across another party's lands for the purpose of mining. From the earliest history of this Territory it has grown up with this jurisprudence, and has become a part of the law of the land here and is a public use, and you will find it defined in the law upon eminent domain as to what is a public use, and that definition has always been acted upon. This decision that has been referred to is something new to me. Of course it might be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, but the Constitution of the United States simply provides that private property cannot be taken for public use without just compensation. The courts have always denounced the idea of taking private property for private use, and always should, because if you open the door for one purpose it may be opened for all purposes, and no man would be secure in his property. But I think that this Constitution can define what a public use is, and make all these purposes for which it is intended that the use of land for reservoirs, drains, flumes or ditches for agricultural, mining, or milling purposes, shall be used for a public use, and you can get around all the decisions that have been made that denounce the taking of private property for private use. The matter of compensation comes afterwards. You cannot take private property for private use without due compensation, and it certainly can never be taken in this Territory except by due process of law. I do know that this Territory would dry up and die—would not be fit to live in, if we are curtailed in the construction of ditches across other people's lands. These lands are arid; they must be supplied with water; and I think that this Convention here has the power to declare what, in this Territory, will be a public use, and I hope that some gentleman who is more skillful with his pen than I am will frame such a provision as that, or, if the Convention will give me time, I will do it myself. But by doing that you will not go contrary to any decision, because you define what a public use is, and you can condemn property for that use. In order that we may live and in order that we may have something to feed our cattle upon it is necessary that the construction of ditches should be considered a public use, even to the watering of a man's garden, for it increases the value of the property of the Territory; and certainly, in the working of mines, where drains are necessary, it should be declared to be a public use, and that the land of another may be condemned for that use, not as a private use, but as a public use. This section, as drawn, seems to be in the teeth of the decisions of the courts, that private property cannot be taken for private use, and then you have the condemnation of the courts—even the Supreme Court of the United States—of this provision, wherein they have decided that it is unconstitutional. Recollect that the President has a right to review all these things, and if he finds that it is in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, he has the right to keep us out of the Union; and I think, for our own benefit, for the sake of coming into the Union as a state, and for the benefit of our people after we get in as a state, that there should certainly be uses here that have heretofore not been considered public uses by declaration or by this Convention, and I do not think anybody outside of the Territory or State of Montana has any right to question our views or authority upon any provision of that kind. This is simply for this Territory, without interfering with any rights of citizens outside the Territory or State of Montana. These are my views, and I hope that some such clause will be adopted.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clark has offered an amendment to this section.

Mr. Witter, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I would ask if we cannot consider the two sections together first.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that the two sections be considered together, and that they be consolidated and numbered as one section—numbered as Section 14.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clark offers as an amendment to Section 14, which is a consolidation of Sections 13 and 14, the following amendment: After the words "just compensation," in line 2, insert as follows, "the right of eminent domain shall not be curtailed, and the property of corporations shall stand upon the same footing as that of private persons."

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair put the question upon the amendment, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I would move as an amendment, that the two sections be consolidated, and that the word "Section," in Section 15, be stricken out, and the word "provided" be inserted in lieu thereof.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kanouse, of Meagher: Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to be numbered Section 15.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Meagher offers a separate section, to be numbered 15, to follow No. 14, "that the taking of private property for ways of necessity, for reservoirs, drains, flumes or ditches on or upon the lands of others shall be deemed and taken to be a public use.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clark: I do not believe there is any proposition that will go into this Constitution that is of any more importance to the people of the proposed state of Montana than the proposition we are now considering, and I do not believe that anything that has been yet suggested or offered will obviate the difficulty, the constitutional objection, to taking this character of property for what will be determined to be, in all probability, a private use. I therefore move that the consideration of these two sections be omitted for the present, and that we pass on to the consideration of the other items in the Bill of Rights, in order that we may try and devise some means by which we can get rid of the difficulty.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 15, as follows:

"Sec. 15. That in criminal prosecutions, the accused shall have the right to appear and defend in person or by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation; to meet the witnesses against him face to face; to have process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county or district in which the offense is alleged to have been committed."

There being no amendments to Section 15, the Clerk read Sections 16 and 17, as follows:

"Section 16. That no person shall be imprisoned for the purpose of securing his testimony in any case longer than may be necessary to take his deposition. If he can give security for his appearance at the time of trial he shall be discharged upon giving the same; if he cannot give security his deposition shall be taken in the manner to be prescribed by law.

Sec. 17. That no person shall be compelled to testify against himself in a criminal case, nor shall any person be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense. If the jury disagree, or if the judgment be arrested after verdict, or if the verdict be arrested for error of law, the accused shall not be deemed to have been in jeopardy."

There being no amendments to Sections 16 and 17, the Clerk read Section 18, as follows:

"Sec. 18. That all persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties except for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great."

There being no amendments to Section 18, the Clerk read Section 19, as follows:

"Sec. 19. That excessive bail shall not be required, nor excess of fines imposed, nor cruel or unusual punishments inflicted."

There being no amendments to Section 19, the Clerk read Section 20, as follows:

"Sec. 20. That the privilege of the right of habeas corpus shall never be suspended, unless in case of rebellion or invasion the public safety require it."

There being no amendments to Section 20, the Clerk read Section 21, as follows:

"Sec. 21. That the military shall always be in strict subordination to the civil power; that no soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, except in the manner prescribed by law."

There being no amendments to Section 21, the Clerk read Section 22, as follows:

"Section 22. The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate in criminal cases, but a jury in civil cases in all courts or in criminal courts not of the grade of felony, may consist of less than twelve men, as may be prescribed by law."

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I have a substitute for Section 22, which I desire to offer.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers the following as a substitute for Section 22, as follows: "The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all and remain inviolate; but in all civil cases, and in all criminal cases not amounting to felony, upon default of appearance or by consent of the parties expressed in such manner as the law may prescribe, a trial by jury may be waived or a trial had by any less number of jurors than the number provided by law. A jury in justice's court, both in civil cases and in cases of criminal misdemeanor, shall not consist of more than six persons. In all civil actions two-thirds in number of the jury may render a verdict, and such verdict so rendered shall have the same force and effect as if all of such jury concurred therein."

The motion on the adoption of the substitute was seconded.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to ask the gentleman if the legislature can provide for a less jury than six before a justice of the peace.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: The substitute is for a jury of not more than six.

The Chair put the question on the motion, and the substitute for Section 22 was declared adopted.

The Clerk read Section 23, as follows:

"Sec. 23. Laws for the punishment of crime shall be founded on the principle of reformation and prevention, and not of vindictive justice."

Mr. Durfee, of Deer Lodge: I move to strike that section out. I do not see that it means anything.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I hope that we will not strike out that provision. The gentleman says that he does not see that it means anything. It does mean a good deal. It means that the punishment for crime shall be with the view of reforming the criminal, and with the view to prevent in the future, his committing the same crime, instead of incarnating him simply as a punishment, without any other object in view than to simply punish a man in a kind of spirit of revenge, he is put there for the purposes of reformation and prevention. That is all there is to it. The idea is that the punishment shall be somewhat with a view to reform the man, making him a better man, and especially in relation to our penitentiaries and institutions where men are confined who are to be punished for crime, that they shall have a tendency to make men better. If we are to put a man there, simply for the purpose of punishing him, in this age and with the name of God Almighty in our Constitution, that we shall be vindictive towards any man, be he criminal or otherwise, seems to me to be a preposterous proposition. I am opposed to striking that out and hope it will remain there as showing that we belong to the advanced age in regard to this matter.

Mr. Duffee, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I cannot see that it would add any force to the idea that the punishment would be vindictive because declared so in the Constitution; and what effect or what force it would have on the criminal, or what effect it would have in the administration of the law—I mean this declaration in the Constitution—I cannot see; and as it would be simply superfluous and lumbering up the Constitution without any purpose, I see no reason why it should not be stricken out.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, the Committee had this matter under consideration. They thought that perhaps it might not mean anything, and then again that it did mean something. Inasmuch as this is simply a declaration of principles, we thought it well to put the exception in there as a declaration of the people of this Territory, showing the ground upon which we punish crime—not, as Judge Knowles has well said, in a vindictive spirit, but in a spirit of prevention, and for the purpose of preventing the recurrence of the same crime, and that, as a civilized nation, we had some respect and something in common with the rest of the world. We want them to understand the principles upon which we base our laws. This is one of the progressive ideas of our present civilization, and one of the ideas which perhaps will shine as brightly in the years to come as any other—that our laws are based upon principles of humanity and not upon principles of revenge. I hope the section will stand.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 24, as follows:

"Sec. 24. No law shall be enacted which will prevent persons of foreign birth or residence from becoming the owners of mines or mining property, except under the restrictions contained in the laws of the United States relative to the location thereof."

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer a substitute to Section 24. If the Chair will permit me I will read this myself. "Strike out Section 24, and insert instead the following: Sec. 24. Persons of foreign birth or residence shall have the same right as native born citizens to acquire, purchase, possess, enjoy, convey, transfer and inherit mines and mining property, and milling, reduction, concentrating and other works and real property necessary for or connected with the business of mining and treating ores and minerals. Provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to infringe the authority of the United States to provide for the sale or disposition of its mineral and other public lands."

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula, asked that the substitute be re-read, and the Clerk re-read the substitute.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I have some doubt as to whether that ought to be placed in the Bill of Rights. It seems to me that our liberties would not be curtailed by leaving that section out, and that it would be just as well, if it is to be incorporated at all, that it should be incorporated in some other place than the Bill of Rights. As a matter of fact, I cannot see that it is necessary that it should have any place in the Constitution. It seems to me that every word and every idea expressed in that section is legislation pure and simple. At any rate there is no room for it in the Bill of Rights. If it is for the interests of the State of Montana that it should be enacted into a law, it will probably receive the attention of the legislature, and as long as it is to the interests of the State of Montana that that should be a law it will doubtless remain upon our statute books. But I simply class that section as a broad and sweeping matter which does not refer in the remotest degree to our rights or our liberties, and ought not to be incorporated in the Constitution, more particularly under this head. Besides, the time may come, ten, fifteen or twenty years from now, when this proposition should be changed—this legislation should be changed—and it seems to me that if that time ever does come the people of Montana should have an easy and legitimate way of changing it. But, and any rate, if the members of this Convention insist that it shall go into the Constitution, let us put it in some more appropriate and convenient place.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would like to state, in regard to this matter, that so far as I know, it is the general desire among persons who are interested in mines in this country that the restriction which is now placed by the law of the United States on this matter should be removed. I know, and every man who is connected with mining matters in the Territory knows that by that Act of Congress a great deal of foreign capital has been kept out of this country, which would otherwise come in here and be invested in our mines. It is a class of capital which is desirable; we want it to come here: it will benefit the whole country, and it will benefit every community. Now, as to the matter of putting it into the Constitution, if we make no provision whatever in regard to it, then we go back to the common law, and under that aliens cannot inherit or acquire property to hold it. So that, in the absence of any provision in the Constitution, we would stand in the same condition that we do now—that no sales of mining property could be made to aliens. There is another phase of this matter; it seems to me that this is a matter which requires a constitutional provision in order to give it some stability and security. If a man comes here from abroad and desires to put money into our mines and our mills, he certainly wants to have some reasonable security that the capital invested will be safe. If no provision is made in the Constitution for this purpose, it certainly would not give any alien very much security in his investments, but, on the contrary, leave them in rather an uncertain condition, and leave to every succeeding legislature to act about it as they choose.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman if this substitute relates to mining property alone, or to all property.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Only to mining property and property connected with mining.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I do not understand the policy of making this exclusive of other property. We are offering to dispose of the public lands of the United States. It has been the policy of every state, I believe, to permit foreigners to hold property and inherit real estate, and I think this provision seems to be altogether too exclusive.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would say in reply to the gentleman who has just addressed the Convention that I believe it is generally considered an unwise plan to allow foreigners to come in and monopolize the public land of this country. That has not been disputed, I believe, among people who have been engaged in agriculture, and among people generally. But, so far as mining property is concerned, we have had an illustration of the benefits of allowing foreign capital to be invested in this country, and of the disadvantages which have arisen under the operation of the alien law, as it has been termed, which now prohibits foreign capital from being invested in the territories of the United States. We have had several investments in this Territory prior to the operation of that law, and an instance of that, I believe, is the Drum Lummon mine, which was operated and has been operated by foreign capital. As the law stands to-day foreign capital is excluded from this Territory; and we know—gentlemen who are connected with mining enterprises know—that probably millions of dollars have been excluded from this country and have found investment elsewhere. I am personally acquainted with a number of extensive mining operators and promoters of mining industries who have solicited and obtained capital from foreign countries to be invested in the mines of the United States, and almost all of these gentlemen have left this country for a more profitable field of operation. We know that the great accumulation of capital in foreign countries has resulted in a very low rate of interest, and a rate of interest that would be favorable to those people would not be considered a rate of interest very favorable to the industries of this country. Hence it is well that the people of Montana should be allowed a certain liberty and scope in the sale of their mines to foreign capitalists who have plenty of money, thereby to induce them to come here and build large smelting plants and large mills and other enterprises of that kind, which would necessarily involve the expenditure of large sums of money and result in the fostering and development of other great industries in this country. Hence I agree with the spirit of this amendment and believe that it should be adopted.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clark: Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of the adoption of this amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, and I concur in the suggestions of the gentleman from Silver Bow who last addressed the Committee that we need and want and ought to invite the acquisition, especially as directly connected with the development of the mining interests of this country, of foreign capital. It is known and understood that in foreign countries, and especially in Europe, many parties are now lending out large sums of money at low rates of interest, and that they are willing, and quite willing, to undertake the hazardous investments that sometimes accrue in mining operations, where the people of the United States, in many instances, are unwilling to make ventures. I believe that it will not be disputed that it is on account of foreign capital having been introduced into this country that much of our mining industry has been stimulated and our resources developed. But I am unwilling to go to the extent suggested by the gentleman from Gallatin, that this ought to apply to all real and personal property. It was the acquisition of the great agricultural sections of the country in Dakota and in Colorado that gave rise to the discussion of this question in the Congress of the United States, which resulted in the passing of the prohibitory act which prevented the Territories of the United States from disposing of the lands of the United States to aliens, and prohibited aliens from acquiring mining and other property into the United States. The Committee of Congress that had that Act under consideration simply considered it from the point of view of the agricultural interests, and the mining aspect of it was overlooked at the time of its passage by Congress. None of the reasons that operated to make it beneficial to pass that law applied to the mining interests of this country. Mines are a character of property which do not grow and enhance in value by the lapse of time, but, on the contrary, as they are worked out the property itself becomes valueless; whereas, with reference to the other kinds of property, namely, the agricultural property of the country, the lapse of time in many instances serves only to enhance its value by reason of the improvements which are made upon it. And so it was that a large syndicate of European capital took up millions and millions of acres of the public lands—agricultural lands—in the Territory of Dakota and in the State of Colorado, or the Territory of Colorado; and it is against the acquisition of that character of property, I think, that both legislation and constitutional provisions ought to be directed. I believe that it is in the acquisition and possession of small homes that the happiness and prosperity of this country depends, and if by any provision in this Constitution it is permissible for foreign capital to obtain large quantities of the agricultural lands of this country, I believe that the time will come when the people of the State of Montana and the people of the whole United States will rise up and protest. But as against the mineral interests of this country no such objection as that can be urged.

The Chair put the question upon the adoption of the substitute for Section 24, offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon), and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 25, as follows:

"Sec. 25. That the people have the right peaceably to assemble for the common good, and to appeal to those invested with the powers of government for redress of grievances by petition or remonstrance."

There being no amendments to Section 25, the Clerk read Section 26, as follows:

"Sec. 26. That no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

There being no amendments to Section 26, the Clerk read Section 27, as follows:

"Sec. 27. That there shall never be in this state any involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted."

There being no amendments to Section 27, the Clerk read Section 28, as follows:

"Sec. 28. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise."

There being no amendments to Section 28, the Clerk read Section 29, as follows:

"Sec. 29. The enumeration in this Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny, impair or disparage others retained by the people."

Mr. Fields, of Park: Mr. Chairman, I move that Section No. 30, which I herewith submit, be incorporated in the Declaration of Rights of the people of the Territory of Montana.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Park offers the following, to be inserted as Section No. 30: "That no armed person or persons be brought into this State from other states to preserve the peace, except upon a call issued by the Governor of the state or the Commander in Chief of the United States Army."

The motion was seconded.

J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I desire to ask if the law of the Constitution of the United States does not make that provision. It occurs to me, Mr. Chairman, that it does. I can conceive of no case whereby a military or other power would be called in this state, or in any other state, without an order of the Governor or the Commander in Chief of the Army.

Mr. Fields, of Park: Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen, I would like to say a few words in regard to this matter. We find that there was a bill introduced in Congress February 2nd, 1888, and a committee of five appointed to investigate troubles arising in different states by armed bodies being kept by corporations and companies for the preservation of the peace. That same committee reported to the Fiftieth Congress, Second Session, February 27th, 1889. Upon a thorough investigation of the case they found in the State of Pennsylvania one company, the Redding Railroad Company, employed three hundred policemen, and the coal and iron company employed four hundred and twelve, making a total of seven hundred and twelve men, all armed with revolvers and rifles, to keep the peace, and keep the working men and others in servitude. Now I claim, among the rights of the people of Montana, that we should preserve the peace in Montana first ourselves, and if we are unable to preserve that peace ourselves, that our governors shall apply and call for our militia, and, if that fails, that the United States army may be called upon. I do not believe, nor I shall not believe, that any corporation or person has got the right or power to employ armed bodies of men to shoot down people who assemble and congregate for the purposes of freedom, and I think that the time has come when the people, in our Bill of Rights, shall show that we are ready and able to protect ourselves without any such armed bodies being in our midst; and I shall uphold this measure, and I hope that every true, loyal, peace loving and liberty loving member of this Convention will vote for it.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, "That the right of any person to take or bear arms in defense of his own home, person and property, or in aid of the civil power when thereto legally summoned, shall not be called in question." That is one of the sections in our Bill of Rights. I feel that, as a citizen of this Territory, that in defense of my own property, if I cannot defend it myself, that I shall have the right to invite outsiders to aid and assist me in defending it.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I think this declaration is in harmony with right, and it seems to me that a person, or the people of this Territory who are unable to defend their homes, by calling upon the military power through the Governor that they can get the necessary protection; and I am certainly opposed to the granting of the power which should by right belong to the Governor, and only to the Governor, to the head of any corporation, in the event of any trouble. I hope it will never be necessary to go to that extent, but in case it does, I think you will agree with me that the people of this Territory can always elect to office men upon whom the public can depend and men who shall exercise the duties of their office to the satisfaction of the people. Believing that, I certainly shall vote for this resolution.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I labored under a misapprehension when the resolution was first read, but I am heartily in favor of it. I hope it will never come to a pass here when we are not competent and capable of managing affairs of this kind as citizens of our own state, and I must here say that we should endeavor to guard against the possibility of such contingencies as have occurred in the United States; bodies of men such as Pinkerton's men have gone into certain states and intimidated citizens of those states for pay. For this reason I shall support heartily the amendment as offered.

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson: Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen, as I understand the resolution that is offered, it is offered particularly against those vast and armed bodies of men known as the Pinkerton detectives, and this Convention is not the only Convention that is dealing with this question. The Convention sitting in Washington Territory had the same matter before it, only they had an illustration of it last winter when there were armed forces of Pinkerton detectives brought into their coal mines and intimidated miners because they had the manhood to stand up there and demand their rights. We see examples of it all over the country; we saw it in Montana in 1876, when the railroad brakemen went on a strike against lowering their wages; and that strike was not well under way when there was a special body of Pinkerton detectives came to Butte, three—I think four—in number came for a starter. I was informed of it at the time, for I was in Butte. And then again we saw another corporation in this Territory, which I shall not name, that brought Pinkerton detectives to their works, and they were employed there a year ago, when I quit their employment. These men did not come as soldiers, or as officers of the law interested in the welfare of the Territory, but they came at the bidding of some corporation, that, for a monetary consideration, wishes to crush the manhood of the people of the Territory to advance their own interests and to swell their own bank accounts. If we are going to have labor troubles here, which I hope we never will have; let us have our own officers, granting that we can depend upon them, and if necessary let them come and reason with us and talk to us, and, if necessary, arrest us; but we do not want any such class of men as makes up the standing armies in Chicago today to go to any part of the Union where they can be at the call of corporations. There are several states of the Union where they are depending upon their citizens for the preservation of the peace in times of peace, and for my part I shall vote for this proposition and support it to the best of my ability, and I hope every other member of the Constitutional Convention will do the same.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I have not given much thought to this matter. It was sprung rather suddenly on the Convention; but I certainly should think that the ideas of every patriotic Montanan would be in line with the feelings expressed by the different speakers in favor of this proposition. The first duty of our own officers and of our own people is to enforce our own laws, and suppress all riots and all insurrections against them; and the Constitution of the United States, whenever the constituted authorities of Montana are unable, provides a way by which we can be reinforced by the whole people of the United States upon the call of our legislature and our Governor, directed to the President of the United States, for all the power of the Government to help suppress any riot or insurrection, and to maintain and enforce our laws. These are the legal and constitutional ways of enforcing the laws of all good government. Now I do not know anything about these matters that have been brought up, and I do not know that they should be cited as reasons, particularly the employment of detectives or anything of that kind, for the adoption of this resolution; but I do know, and every member of the Convention and every lawyer and every citizen knows, that for any one or anybody to bring an armed body of men into this Territory for any purpose whatever, either to foment trouble or to put it down, is an invasion of the Territory of Montana, and of its sacred rights and privileges. (Applause)

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I certainly favor this amendment as offered, and I can see no reason why this Convention should object to it. I can see no objection in it to influence any patriotic citizen against it, nor can I see any reason why every patriotic citizen should not approve it. I think we can keep the peace here, and I think we can do it much easier and better than to have any class of armed men brought into this Territory. I think it is a good clause to insert in the Constitution, and I certainly will favor it. I think that every state in the Union, or at least the citizens of every state in the Union, should be able to keep and to preserve the peace among the citizens of that state. If not, let the United States army, or the proper officers import the troops into this or any other state to do it. I do not believe in bringing these armed bodies of men into any state of the Union, and therefore I shall support the proposition.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, Article 3 of our Bill of Rights says, "All persons are born equally free to have certain natural, essential, and inalienable rights, among which may be reckoned the right of enjoying and defending their rights and liberties; that of acquiring, possessing and protecting property," etc. Now I claim that if any man has property within the limits of the Territory of Montana, and thinks that he cannot have it protected sufficiently, he has the right to go to the ends of the country and summon all the military and civil aid of the United States. I say that it would be an infringement on his rights that he should not go anywhere to seek that protection that he is entitled to have under the Constitution of the State, and I am certainly opposed to the resolution for this reason.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I take exceptions to the remarks of my friend from Silver Bow. I object to any person or corporation, or the representative of any person or corporation, going outside of the State for protection to the property of that corporation, and that is the object of the resolution, and I can see nothing wrong with it.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, in the consideration of this matter it seems to me that we are actuated, each one, more by selfish motives than otherwise. We should endeavor, in the discussion of this question, to be actuated by calm, deliberate action. It is a recognized fact today that there is a great social struggle going on, and that this fight today is between the so-called capitalist and the laboring man. We may define them by different names; we may attempt to say that it is not so, but the fact still remains that in every daily paper that we pick up we see that this struggle is going on. I expect to vote against certain propositions that have been introduced by what are termed representatives of the labor element, but still I maintain that the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Park is just and honest and will be beneficial in its results. There have been provisions, and there are provisions that the military may be called on in any time of danger, or in times when property is threatened; I think that is sufficient, and the resolution, as introduced by the gentleman from Park, is to protect the honest laboring man and to destroy the power and the action of the Pinkerton detectives in standing over men—laboring men—and threatening and menacing them in the rights which certain statutes of this Territory accord them; and I believe that every man who has given this subject due consideration must admit that in order to preserve the rights of the laboring men we must provide in the Constitution ways and means whereby no force of any kind or character can be held over private individuals to intimidate or menace them in any way, by any class or body of men. I think that the Constitution of the United States and that the laws of our land are sufficiently clear and explicit in their character to adequately protect every man's property within the limits of Montana, and I do not see in this resolution any intimation that threatens in any way the property of any person or persons.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I do not think the Governor of one state has the right to call on the governor of any other state for military assistance under any circumstances.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The Constitution of the United States says that the President of the United States shall use the armies of the United States upon the call of the governor of any state, or the legislature thereof. I move, Mr. Chairman, that the Committee do now arise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

The President in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order, and the Chair announced that the Convention would hear the report of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I have to report that the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration General File No. 1. Progress has been made, and the Committee asks leave to sit again.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move that the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole be adopted, and that the Committee be granted further time for the consideration of General File No. 1.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Buford, of Madison, moved that the Convention do adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

Adjourned until Friday, July 19, 1889, at 10 A. M.

TWELFTH DAY.

Friday, July 19th, 1889.

The Convention was called to order by the President at 10 o'clock A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, Mr. Haskell was called away from town yesterday, and would like leave of absence until Monday afternoon.

The President: Mr. Myers, the gentleman from Yellowstone, desires leave of absence after today's session until Tuesday next, at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Mitchell desired leave of absence until Monday.

Mr. Gibson also desired leave of absence until Monday morning.

The Chair announced that these gentlemen would be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the Journal of the previous day.

The Chair announced that the Clerk had a communication on suffrage, which would be received and referred to the Committee on Suffrage without being read.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone, sent up the report of the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings, which the Clerk read, as follows:

"Mr. President, your Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings desires to report the following, to be incorporated in the Constitution.

(Signed) ALFRED MYERS, Chairman."

Section 1. Educational, reformatory, and penal institutions, and those for the benefit of the insane, blind, deaf, and mute and such other institutions as the public good may require, shall be established and supported by the state in such manner as may be prescribed by Law.

Section 2. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the state, but shall at its third regular session, after the adoption of this Constitution, provide by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the state at the general election then next ensuing, and a majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election, the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the state at the next general election; Provided, That until the seat of government shall have been permanently located, as herein provided, the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of

Sec. 3. When the seat of government shall have been located as herein provided, the location thereof shall not thereafter be changed, except a vote of two-thirds of all the qualified electors of the state voting on that question at a general election, at which the question of the location of the seat of government shall have been submitted by the Legislative Assembly.

Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall make no appropriations or expenditures for capitol buildings or grounds until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided.

Sec. 5. The several counties of the state shall provide, as may be prescribed by law, for those inhabitants who, by reason of age, infirmity or other misfortune, may have claims upon the sympathy and aid of society.

The President: If there be no objections this report will be referred to the Committee on Printing and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Brown, of Choteau, sent up report of Committee which was read by the Clerk as follows:

"Mr. President, your Committee to whom was referred Resolution No. 14, introduced by Mr. Conrad, relating to the creation of new counties, beg leave to report that they have had same under consideration, and respectfully return same without recommendations."

(Signed) DAVID G. BROWN, Chairman.

The President: This report, with the resolution referred, will take the general course and be placed on the general file.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up the report of the Committee on Legislative Departments, which the Clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President, your Committee on Legislative Departments have had under consideration sundry propositions to be embodied in the Constitution of the State of Montana, and have directed me to report back the accompanying provisions, with the recommendation that the same be adopted as the Article on Legislative Departments."

(Signed) J. K. TOOLE, Chairman.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the articles embodied in the report are numerous, and are to be printed, and I ask the unanimous consent that the reading of it be dispensed with, and that it be referred to the Committee on Printing.

The President: If there be no objection to the request of the gentleman, that the reading of the articles be dispensed with, it will so be dispensed with and be ordered printed.

The report of the Committee was as follows:

PROPOSITION NO. 19.

Article on Legislative Departments.

Section 1. The legislative power shall be vested in a Senate and House of Representatives, which shall be designated "The Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana."

Sec. 2. Senators shall be elected for the term of four years, and Representatives for the term of two years, except as is otherwise provided in this Constitution.

Sec. 3. No person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained the age of twenty-one years, or a Senator who shall not have attained the age of twenty-five years, and who shall not be a citizen of the United States, and who shall not for at least twelve months next preceding his election have resided within the county or district in which he shall be elected.

Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly of this State, until otherwise provided by law, shall consist of sixteen members of the Senate, and fifty members of the House of Representatives. It shall be the duty of the first Legislative Assembly to divide the State into Senatorial and Representative districts, but there shall be no more than one Senator from each county. The Senatorial districts shall be numbered from one consecutively to correspond with the number of counties. The Senators shall be divided into two classes. Those elected from districts numbered odd numbers shall constitute one class, and those elected from districts numbered the even numbers shall constitute the other class; and when any additional Senator shall be provided for by law his class shall be determined by lot. One-half of the Senators elected to the first Legislative Assembly shall hold office for one year, and the other half for three years; and it shall be determined by lot immediately after the organization of the Senate, whether the Senators from the odd or even numbered districts shall hold office for one or three years.

Sec. 5. Each member of the first Legislative Assembly, as a compensation for his services, shall receive six dollars for each day's attendance, and twenty cents for each mile necessarily traveled in going to and returning from the seat of government to his residence by the usually traveled route, and shall receive no other compensation, perquisite or allowance whatsoever. No session of the Legislative Assembly after the first, which may be ninety days, shall exceed sixty days. After the first session the compensation of the members of the Legislative Assembly shall be as provided by law: Provided, That no Legislative Assembly shall fix its own compensation.

Sec. 6. The Legislative Assembly (except the first) shall meet at the seal of government at twelve o'clock noon, on the second Tuesday after the first Monday of January, next succeeding the general election provided by law, and at twelve o'clock noon, on the second Tuesday after the first Monday of January of each alternate year thereafter, and at other times when convened by the Governor. The term of service of the members thereof shall begin the next day after their election, until otherwise provided by law: Provided, That the first Legislative Assembly shall meet upon the proclamation of the Governor, after the admission of the State into the Union, upon a day to be named in said proclamation, and which shall not be more than fifteen or less than ten days after the admission of the State into the Union.

Sec. 7. No Senator or Representative shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office under the State; and no member of Congress, or other person holding an office except attorney at law, notary public, or in the militia under the United States or this State, shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

Sec. 8. No member of either house shall, during the term, for which he shall have been elected, receive any increase of salary or mileage under any law passed during such term.

Sec. 9. The Senate shall, at the beginning and close of each regular session, and at such other times as may be necessary, elect one of its members President pro tempore. The house of Representatives shall elect one of its members as Speaker. Each house shall choose its other officers, and shall judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its members.

Sec. 10. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum, to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and compel the attendance or absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may prescribe.

Sec. 11. Each house shall have power to determine the rules of its proceedings, and punish its members or other persons for contempt or disorderly behavior in its presence; to protect its members against violence or offers of bribe or private solicitation, and with the concurrence of two-thirds, to expel a member, and shall have all other powers necessary for the Legislative Assembly of a free state. A member expelled for corruption, shall not thereafter be eligible to either house of the Legislative Assembly and punishment for contempt or disorderly behavior shall not bar a criminal prosecution for the same offense.

Sec. 12. Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings and may, in its discretion, from time to time, publish the same, except such parts as require secrecy, and the ayes and noes on any question shall, at the request of any two members, be entered on the journal.

Sec. 13. The session of each house and of the committees of the whole shall be open, unless the business is such as requires secrecy.

Sec. 14. Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

Sec. 15. The members of the Legislative Assembly shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, violation of their oath of office, and breach or surety of the peace, be privileged from arrest, during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place.

Sec. 16. The House of Representatives shall have the sole power of impeachment. The concurrence of a majority of all the members shall be necessary to an impeachment. All impeachments shall be tried by the Senate, and when sitting for that purpose the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation to do justice according to law and evidence. When the Governor or Lieutenant Governor is on trial, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall preside. No person shall be convicted without a concurrence of two-thirds of the Senators elected.

Sec. 17. The Governor and other State and Judicial officers, except county judges and justices of the peace, shall be liable to impeachment for high crimes and misdemeanors, or malfeasance in office, but judgment in such cases shall only extend to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust or profit in the State. The party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall, nevertheless, be liable to prosecution, trial, judgment, and punishment according to law.

Sec. 18. All officers not liable to impeachment shall be subject to removal for misconduct or malfeasance in office, in such manner as may be provided by law.

Sec. 19. No law shall be passed except by bill, and no bill shall be so altered or amended on its passage through either house as to change its original purpose.

Sec. 20. The enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "Be it enacted by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana."

Sec. 21. No bill for the appropriation of money, except for the expenses of the government shall be introduced within ten days of the close of the session, except by unanimous consent of the house in which it is sought to be introduced.

Sec. 23. No bill, except general appropriation bills, shall be passed containing more than one subject which shall be clearly expressed in its title; but if any subject shall be embraced in any act which shall not be expressed in the title, such act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be so expressed.

Sec. 24. No bill shall become a law, except by a vote of a majority of all the members present in each house nor unless on its final passage the vote be taken by ayes and noes, and the names of those voting be entered on the journal.

Sec. 25. No law shall be revised or amended, or the provisions thereof extended by reference to its title only, but so much thereof as is revised, amended, or extended, shall be re-enacted and published at length.

Sec. 26. The Legislative Assembly shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say: For granting divorces, laying out, opening, altering or working roads or highways, vacating roads, town plats, streets, alleys or public grounds; locating or changing county seats; regulating county or township affairs; regulating the practice in courts of justice; regulating the jurisdiction and duties of justices of the peace, police magistrates, or constables; changing the rules of evidence in any trial or inquiry; providing for changes of venue in civil or criminal cases; declaring any person of age; for limitation of civil actions; or giving effect to informal or invalid deeds; summoning or impaneling grand or petit jurors; providing for the management of common schools; regulating the rate of interest on money; the opening or conducting of any election, or designating the place of voting; the sale or mortgage of real estate belonging to minors or others under disability; chartering or licensing ferries or bridges or toll roads; remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures; creating, increasing, or decreasing fees, percentages, or allowances of public officers; changing the law of descent; granting to any corporation, association, or individual, the right to lay down railroad tracks, or any special or exclusive privilege, immunity, or franchise whatever; for the punishment of crimes; changing the names of persons or places; for the assessment or collection of taxes; affecting estates of deceased persons, minors, or others under legal disabilities; extending the time for the collection of taxes; refunding money paid into the state treasury; relinquishing or extinguishing, in whole or in part, the indebtedness, liability, or obligation of any corporation or person to this State, or to any municipal corporation therein; legitimizing, except as against the State, the unauthorized or invalid act of any officer; exempting property from taxation; restoring to citizenship persons convicted of infamous crimes; authorizing the creation, extension, or impairing of liens; creating offices, or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, townships, election or school districts; or authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children. In all other cases where a general law can be made applicable, no special law shall be enacted.

Sec. 27. The presiding officer of each house shall, in the presence of the house over which he presides, sign all bills and joint resolutions passed by the Legislative Assembly immediately after their titles have been publicly read; and the fact of signing shall be at once entered upon the journal.

Sec. 28. The Legislative Assembly shall prescribe by law the number, duties and compensation of the officers and employees of each house; and no payment shall be made from the State Treasury, or be in any way authorized to any such person, except to an acting officer or employee elected or appointed in pursuance of law.

Sec. 29. No bill shall be passed giving any extra compensation to any public officer, servant, or employee, agent, or contractor, after services shall have been rendered or contract made, nor providing for the payment of any claim made against the state without previous authority of law, except as may be otherwise provided herein.

Sec. 30. All stationery, printing, paper, fuel, and lights, used in the legislative and other departments of government, shall be furnished, and the printing and binding, and distribution of the laws, journals and department reports and other printing and binding, and the repairing and furnishing the halls and rooms used for the meetings of the Legislative Assembly, and its committees, shall be performed under contract, to be given to the lowest bidder, below such maximum price and under such regulations as may be prescribed by law. No member or officer of any department of the government shall be in any way interested in any such contract; and all such contracts shall be subject to the approval of the Governor and State Treasurer.

Sec. 31. Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, no law shall extend the term of any public officer, or increase or diminish his salary or emoluments after his election or appointment; Provided, That this shall not be construed to forbid the Legislative Assembly from fixing the salaries or emoluments of those officers first elected or appointed under this Constitution, where such salaries or emoluments are not fixed by this Constitution.

Sec. 32. All bills for raising revenues shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose amendments, as in the case of other bills.

Sec. 33. The general appropriation bills shall embrace nothing but appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the State, interest on the public debt, and for public schools. All other appropriations shall be made by separate bills, each embracing but one subject.

Sec. 34. No money shall be paid out of the treasury, except upon appropriations made by law, and on warrant drawn by the proper officer in pursuance thereof.

Sec. 35. No appropriation shall be made for charitable, industrial, educational, or benevolent purposes to any person, corporation or community not under the absolute control of the State, nor to any denominational or sectarian institution or association.

Sec. 36. The Legislative Assembly shall not delegate to any special commission, private corporation, or association any power to make, supervise, or interfere with any municipal improvement, money, property, or effects, whether held in trust or otherwise, or to levy taxes, or to perform any municipal function whatever.

Sec. 37. No act of the Legislative Assembly shall authorize the investment of trust funds by executors, administrators, guardians, or trustees in the bonds or stock of any private corporation.

Sec. 38. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to pass any law authorizing the State, or any county in this State, to contract any debt or obligation in the construction of any railroad, nor give or loan its credit to or in aid of the construction of the same.

Sec. 39. No obligation or liability of any person, association or corporation, held or owned by the State, or any municipal corporation therein, shall ever be exchanged, transferred, remitted, released or postponed, or in any way diminished by the Legislative Assembly; nor shall such liability or obligation be extinguished, except by the payment thereof into the proper treasury.

Sec. 40. Every order, resolution or vote, in which the concurrence of both houses may be necessary, except on the question of adjournment, or relating solely to the transaction of the business of the two houses, shall be presented to the Governor, and before it shall take effect be approved by him or, being disapproved, be re-passed by two-thirds of both houses, as prescribed in the case of a bill.

Sec. 41. If any person elected to either house of the Legislative Assembly shall offer or promise to give his vote or influence in favor of or against any measure or proposition, pending or proposed to be introduced into the Legislative Assembly, in consideration or upon condition that any other person elected to the same Legislative Assembly will give, or will promise or assent to give, his vote or influence in favor or against any other measure or proposition, pending or proposed to be introduced into such Legislative Assembly, the person making such offer or promise shall be deemed guilty of solicitation of bribery. If any member of the Legislative Assembly shall give his vote or influence for or against any measure or proposition, pending or proposed to be introduced into such Legislative Assembly, or offer, promise or assent so to do, upon condition that any other member will give, or will promise or assent to give his vote or influence in favor of or against any other measure or proposition, pending or proposed to be introduced in such Legislative Assembly, or in consideration that any other member hath given his vote or influence for or against any other measure or proposition in such Legislative Assembly, he shall be guilty of bribery, and any member of the Legislative Assembly, or person elected thereto, who shall be guilty of either of such offenses, shall be expelled, and shall not thereafter be eligible to the Legislative Assembly, and, on the conviction thereof in the civil courts, shall be liable to such further penalty as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 42. Any person who shall directly or indirectly offer, give or promise, any money or thing of value, testimonial, privilege or personal advantage, to any executive or judicial officer, or member of the Legislative Assembly, to influence him in the performance of any of his official or public duties, shall be deemed guilty of bribery, and be punished in such manner as shall be provided by law.

Sec. 43. The offense of corrupt solicitation of members of the Legislative Assembly, or of public officers of the State, or of any municipal division thereof and the occupation or practice of solicitation of such members or officers, to influence their official action, shall be defined by law, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 44. A member who has a personal or private interest in any measure or bill proposed or pending before the Legislative Assembly shall disclose the fact to the house of which he is a member, and shall not vote thereon.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher, sent up the report of the Committee on Irrigation, which the Clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee on Irrigation, to whom was referred Proposition No. 8, offered by A. J. Burns, of Lewis & Clarke, hereby beg leave to report that they have duly considered said Proposition, and recommend that same be not adopted as a part of the Constitution.

Signed PARBERRY, Chairman."

The President: If there be no objection, this report, with the accompanying Proposition, will be placed on the General File.

The Clerk also read the following report, which was sent up:

"Your Committee on Irrigation, to whom was referred the Resolution of Maginnis relating to the grant of arid lands by the United States to the State of Montana, beg leave to report favorably on the same, and recommend the Convention to memorialize Congress accordingly.

[Signed PARBERRY, Chairman."

The President: The Chairman understood that this was referred to the Committee on Irrigation for the purpose of drafting this memorial.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: The Committee were undecided whether they should memorialize Congress or not before proceeding further.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move that the subject matter of that report be recommended to the Committee on Irrigation, with instructions to draft the memorial.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Conrad sent up a report of the Printing Committee which the Clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee on Printing, to whom was referred Resolution No. 8, and Propositions Nos. 10, 11, 13, 14, and 15, beg leave to report that they have compared the copies with the original, and find them correctly printed, except a few immaterial typographical errors, which have been corrected with a pen.

(Signed C. E. CONRAD, Chairman."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I desire to offer the following Resolution.

The President: The Resolution offered by the gentleman from Custer will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Whereas, since the organization of the Territory of Montana the counties thereof have borne the expenses of the administration of justice and of government, and from their resources have provided for the same, and aided in the development and progress of the Territory; and

Whereas, they have necessarily incurred large indebtedness, which is now burdensome, and will become more so with the additional taxes necessary to be collected for the support of the State government;

Resolved, that it is the sense of this Convention that the State assume all county indebtedness as it existed on the 1st day of July, 1889, less the value of the public improvements in each county, such value to be ascertained by the actual cost of such improvements as shown by the records and accounts of the said counties; and that the Committee on Public Debt and Finance be instructed to report the necessary constitutional provision to carry out this Resolution."

The President: If there be no objection this Resolution will be received and referred to Committee No. 7.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Is it the understanding, Mr. President, under the reading of that Resolution, that that Committee is compelled to introduce an Article embodying the sense of that Resolution, to be incorporated in the Constitution?

The President: The Resolution is referred to the Committee simply for the purposes of consideration and report.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, it strikes me that it is hardly necessary to refer a Resolution of that character to any committee, and I make a motion that this Resolution be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh called for the ayes and noes.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke, asked that the Resolution be read, and the same was read.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I arise to a point of order. This proposition must be submitted to a proper Committee without debate. It is a matter that is intended to be incorporated in the Constitution, and under Rule 22 it must be referred to an appropriate committee.

The President: The question hinges upon the fact as to whether this is a proposition or a resolution; the Chair is of the opinion that it is a resolution, proposing matter to be incorporated in the Constitution, and the Chair is therefore of the opinion that the point of order taken by the gentleman from Missoula is well taken, and that this resolution ought to go to the Committee for consideration.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: As I understand the Resolution, does it not require the Committee to report such a Resolution, or is it left to the discretion of the Committee?

The President: This matter is referred to the Committee to consider and report back to the Convention. It implies an instruction, but until it is moved and adopted by this Convention that instruction has no force. It is the opinion of the Chair that this matter should be referred to the Committee, without debate, for consideration and report.

The Clerk then read the following, offered by Mr. Luce of Gallatin.

IRRIGATION.

"Resolved that the following four sections be, under appropriate numbers, made a part of the Constitution in the Article under the head of Irrigation.

Sec..... The water of every natural stream not heretofore appropriated within the State of Montana is hereby declared to be the properly of the public; and the same is dedicated to the use of the people of the State, subject to appropriation as hereinafter provided.

Sec..... The right to divert the unappropriated waters of any natural stream to beneficial uses shall never be denied. Priority of appropriation shall give the better right as between those using the water.

Sec..... All persons and corporations shall have the right of way across any lands in the State for the construction of ditches, canals and flumes for the purpose of conveying water for domestic purposes, for the irrigation of agricultural lands, and for mining and manufacturing purposes, and for drainage, upon payment of just compensation.

Sec..... The General Assembly shall provide by law that the Board of County Commissioners in their respective counties shall have the power, when application is made to them by either party interested, to establish reasonable maximum rates to be charged for the use of water, whether furnished by individuals or corporations.

The President: This will be received and referred to Committee No. 24, if there be no objection.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move that the Convention do now resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole and continue the business that we were engaged in yesterday in Committee of the Whole.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Callaway, the gentleman from Madison, to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison, in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: When the Committee arose yesterday it had under consideration the proposition of the gentleman from Park: what is the pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: Will the Chair please state the proposition. Mr. Fields of Park sent up a substitute.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Park desires to withdraw the proposition offered yesterday, and to substitute the following:

"Sec. 30. That no armed person or persons be brought into this State from other states on the pretense of preserving the peace, except upon a call made by the Legislature of this State, or, of the Governor when the Legislature is not in session, but this shall have no application to the forces of the United States.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers the following: "No armed person or persons shall be brought into this State from any other State to preserve the peace, except upon the application of the Legislature, or of the Executive when the Legislature cannot be convened."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I desire to say in explanation of that, that I have sought to employ, as near as possible, the language used in the Article of the Federal Constitution so far as the power is concerned—that it shall be upon the application of the Legislature of the State or of the Governor when the Legislature cannot be convened.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, called for the reading of the resolution of the gentleman from Park, again.

The Proposition was read.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, if I am in order, I would like to offer a substitute for the whole matter.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin offers the following as a substitute for the entire.

"No armed person or persons or armed body of men shall be brought into this State for the preservation of the peace or the suppression of domestic violence except upon the application of the Legislative Assembly or of the Governor when the Legislative Assembly cannot be convened."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis called for the reading of the Resolution offered by Mr. Fields of Park, which was read.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, in relation to the substitute which I have just offered, I simply rise to call the attention of the Convention to Section 4, Article 4, of the Constitution of the United States: "The United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the Legislature or Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence." I think that the proposition I have offered there is in exact accordance with the Constitution of the United States. That troops may be brought here, or forces of United States troops may be brought here, for the protection of this State either against insurrection or against domestic violence, which may include, of course, the keeping of the peace, and I am free to say that I agree with the intention of the design and principle involved in the proposition of the gentleman from Park County, and I think that this embraces about the same idea with a correct conformity with the provision of the Constitution of the United States. I put it upon the broad ground that the State of Montana is capable of taking care of itself if we are not so capable, why we are not then capable of statehood. I believe that the people of Montana can protect themselves so far as necessary, and keep the peace of Montana, without the aid or interference of unauthorized armed men or armed bodies of men.

Mr. Fields, of Park: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin is in strict conformity with Section 4, of Article 4, of the Constitution of the United States, and I also believe that it is in strict conformity with the resolution that I presented. So, also, is the other amendment. The point which I wished to cover was to avoid to the utmost any lengthy article or resolution, and in presenting the resolution which I did I was strictly cognizant of the effect of the existence of Section 4 of Article 4 of our federal Constitution. In the section which I have presented I refer to the Legislature, and instead of using the word "Executive" I used the word "Governor," meaning one and the same thing. Now I believe that it is necessary for the people of Montana to put themselves upon the basis of self protection. I wish to see it adopted and brought forward, giving the people a right to first take care of themselves, and if they are not able to do so, that they shall then have the right to call on others to help them. It is a known fact that when any disturbance of the peace, such as we have had in Pennsylvania and other Eastern states in the past, that armed bodies of men have been imported into those localities for the purpose of intimidating and coercing honest laboring men; and the Congress of the United States has taken these things into consideration, and did appoint a Committee of five to investigate these troubles, and they reported, and showed in their report that in one valley alone, in Pennsylvania there were seven hundred and twelve armed men under corporations there to preserve the peace, and that the report, when given, showed that the workingmen of those districts in which these disturbances occurred were in a state which I would term chattle slavery. I am willing that any substitute that may be offered here which will cover what was contemplated in my resolution shall be adopted, and I am willing to vote for it. I do not wish the honor or glory, if there be any in it, of presenting the resolution at all. I want to see it carried either one way or the other, so that in future those questions of people whose rights have been denied to them may look forward to our legislatures for protection. I am here not for the protection of the workingmen alone, I believe in equal protection all around. I am not here in the interests of any political party. I am here for a government that will give us equality and justice from one end of the page to the other, and from one class of citizens to the other, and I hope that this section will be adopted, and that the fact will be taken into consideration that it is not introduced for the purpose of giving any one man or class of men any more rights than any other.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I ask leave to withdraw the amendment which I presented. I think the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) expresses in better terms than my own the purposes of the resolution, and I therefore wish to withdraw it.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin covers the ground, and is acceptable to the mover of this resolution, hence I shall support its adoption. I have the fullest confidence and the greatest faith in the ability of the people of Montana to govern themselves without the intervention of armed forces brought in here, whether by corporations or individuals. I do not believe in importing into this Territory Pinkertons or any other class of men who make their living by a system of espionage upon the acts and conduct of the workmen of this State. We have the necessary machinery of government, or will have when this State is thoroughly organized, to protect all the property and all the rights of the people. For that reason I give my hearty support to the Resolution offered by the gentleman from Park, and the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: If my memory serves me correctly, one of the very first things that this Convention did was to adopt the Constitution of the United States as a basis for all work that we were to undertake. Now, if it is necessary for us to take up one section or part of this Constitution and engraft it in our State Constitution, where may it stop? I want to say to you, and to this body, that I feel that we will be transcending our duties as a Constitutional Convention to adopt this measure, or anything like unto it. That I may not be misunderstood, if I were a member of a state legislature and a matter of this kind was introduced, I should most heartily support it; but I say again that, as a Constitutional Convention, it seems to me we are transcending our duties to attempt any such legislation as this. Now, if there are reasons for adopting this measure, the same arguments can be adduced for the adoption of other like measures, and if we are to undertake them, where are we to stop? I want to say simply that I am opposed to any legislative enactments in this Constitutional Convention, and therefore I shall vote against this proposition as offered by Mr. Fields, or by Mr. Luce, or any other that may be offered as a substitute for the original.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I think that we should have something of the kind in the Constitution. The establishment of a state government, with the full equipment of officers incident thereto, presupposes not only a power but an obligation on the part of the State to preserve peace and order among its own citizens, and in this connection I am prone to abide with my own people. With the safeguards thrown around each citizen by the Constitution of the United States, I am willing to entrust my life and liberty and property in the hands of the citizens of this state. Once establish the principle that any company or corporation has the unqualified right to bring in ten Pinkerton detectives on the ground real or fancied, that they are necessary for the preservation of the peace, and you establish the principle, and you give them the right to bring in one hundred men. With the right to bring in one hundred men you give them equally the right to bring in one thousand men—a standing army resting on their arms around the peaceable forces of the industries of this State—the number of the men, the character of the soldiery and the duration of their presence to be determined only by the wish and the wealth of their employer; and this, Mr. Chairman, in an age when feudalism is supposed to exist only in the dusky past—this condition, Sir, when we have entered into a social compact, entrusting to the executive and judicial departments the preservation of our lives, our liberty and our property. What are constables and sheriffs for if they are powerless to preserve the peace? They may call any citizen to their assistance; if they are powerless they can appeal to the Governor, and he can call out the militia. What purpose have we in the establishment of a state militia? Is it merely for the purpose of wearing out military cloth and brass buttons—exploding surplus powder, in showing their bravery only in quelling these horrible Indian massacres, of which we saw an instance in Missoula county a few days ago? (Laughter) When the constables and sheriffs are powerless, and the people of the Territory and the Governor and the militia, the entire military force of the United States stands ready at our invitation to preserve peace and order. Hence it is that this resolution can do no harm, and it will eventually prevent a great deal of possible harm, and should have a place in the Constitution. I stand ready to lend my vote in favor of its adoption. (Applause).

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr Chairman, I am unable to add anything to what the gentleman has already said, unless it be to say that I have seen something of the affairs that the gentleman from Park county alludes to, and which prompted him no doubt to present this Resolution; and I am heartily in favor of the Resolution as suggested by the gentleman from Park. I think that in this day and age and generation, when we are all taught to believe and work upon the principle of equality one with another, that it is improper that, while an honest man is laboring in the mines, or in any other employment, any other citizen should stand over him with a shot gun in order to intimidate him in any manner. I think it is perfectly safe to adopt the Resolution as suggested, and I am heartily in favor of it.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: In reply to the suggestion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards), that the Constitution of the United States affords the protection alluded to, I wish to say that I agree with him, but those old constitution makers never had the faintest idea that the time would arise when private individuals or private corporations would take into their own hands the military forces in order to preserve the peace or protect their own property. Now their property has the same right to protection that mine has, and it certainly would not be right on my part to establish an arsenal in my own house and employ private soldiers to protect my own property, but rather that I should go to that great source of protection that every citizen goes to—government. I say that it was never contemplated that any such state of affairs should ever exist in any state. Again, it has always been the policy of the law to suppress anything that tends to a breach of the peace. Now I say that when unauthorized armed men stand about and around those who are in the employ of any corporation or any private individual, it is a menace to those men employed by these corporations or individuals, and it tends to a breach of the peace; and if you permit it upon the one side you must permit it upon the other; then you have two standing armies that are not recognized by any law upon God's earth ready to fight at the drop of the hat; you have bloodshed in engagements that nobody can sanction. I say that anything that tends to a breach of the peace should be discouraged in this new State of Montana, and I do undertake to say that, so far as I know the citizens of this Territory, they are a loyal, law abiding people, not only in keeping the peace but in preventing breaches of it—patriotic not only in preserving the rights of every citizen but also in seeing that no man shall do that which shall tend to a breach of the peace. And then again, I say that for all purposes in this Territory, so far as I understand it, the organization of this new State will be sufficient in power—the executive power—to keep the peace, and suppress domestic violence; but if we ever do degenerate to the extent that we cannot rely upon our executive arms, then we have this protection that is guaranteed to us in the fourth Article of the Constitution we may then call upon the Executive, or the Commander in Chief of the forces of the United States, to-wit: The President of the United States,—to send troops in here to suppress our own domestic, internecine violence, I insist that it has grown up within certain states of this Union, and it may apply sometime to this State, that men think they are above the law and better able to protect their own property than the executive of the state in which they live, and therefore they call to them unauthorized bodies of armed men—I do not care for what purpose, it is wrong anyway and anywhere, and for that reason I am strongly in favor of this proposition, and I only offer this substitute in order to bring it completely, as I think, within the provision of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I wish to have one word to say upon this question. I am very pleased and proud to vote for a proposition of this kind, for the reason that I think it is an act of simple justice. I have lived long enough in Montana to know that the people of this Territory are amply able to take care of themselves; but even though it should come to such an emergency that we would not be able to do so, we have a course open to us, and that course is entire and complete compliance with the law. However, I have this suggestion to urge, and that is that these two resolutions seem to be about the same in substance. Now, in order that there may be no misunderstanding I would like to see either one or the other withdrawn. I would certainly be pleased to vote for either one. As it is, I will vote for the substitute.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, there seems to be a great unanimity of opinion upon this question; but I apprehend there are two sides to the question. My idea is that the privileges of the citizen are that, in case of danger to himself, he may call upon the citizens to surrender even life itself, if necessary, for his protection, and also, that when the life or property of a citizen is in danger, the duty of the government towards that citizen ends only when his life or property is placed in danger. Now in Article 14 of the Amendments to the Constitution it says, "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States." Now I say that it is an abridgment of my rights and privileges, guaranteed to me by the Constitution, if I cannot at my discretion, within the law, call upon the sixty millions of people within the United States, if necessary, to preserve my life and property; and if this Constitutional Convention, or the Legislature of Montana, passes any law forbidding it, in my judgment it is clearly unconstitutional, and will be void and of no effect. If the State of Montana can abridge the rights and privileges of the citizens as guaranteed by the Constitution conversely they can abridge the rights of the Government; and if the individual is protected behind imaginary state lines, they can say that the Government shall not call upon them, or define and restrict the manner in which they can do it whenever the country is in danger. I say it is a bad principle, and legislation pure and simple, and it is also officious and ought not to be incorporated in our Constitution. Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clark, called for the reading of the original proposition and the substitute therefor.

The same was read.

Mr. Craven: I rise to make this suggestion. The original resolution has a limitation clause saying that these men shall not be brought in from other states; the substitute says they shall not be brought here, whether from other states, or from Canada, or from across the Ocean.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I just want to say a word. I cannot hear all that is said in favor of or against this section, but I have heard enough to lead me to believe that perhaps I have been misunderstood. I want to again assert myself. I say that I am opposed to the adoption of this Section, or substitute, simply because I do not believe it is our province, as a Constitutional Convention, to do it. Now, as a resident of Silver Bow county, I have seen some of the evils aimed at in this Resolution, and I want to say, in order that I may not be misunderstood, that I believe it is wrong, radically wrong, to bring in any armed body of men as we have seen it done in Montana; and I say again, if I were a member of the State Legislature, I would champion such a cause as Mr. Field's champions; but there have been other resolutions or propositions offered here upon which the same arguments in favor of their adoption can be advanced, and now, thus early in the proceedings of this Constitutional Convention, it does seem to me we had better establish a precedent we can safely follow; and if we adopt this measure, as I said before, where shall we stop? For this reason, and only this reason, I shall vote against the adoption of the Section.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge, here arose to address the Convention, upon which there were several calls for the question.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I do not presume, Mr. Chairman, that the members of this Convention are aware of the fact I have listened patiently to what they have had to say upon this proposition in violation of the rules of this Convention and this Committee, that provides that until all the other members of the House or Committee shall have spoken, no member shall be entitled to speak more than once. I have listened to more than one speech, waiving my time in favor of gentlemen who have made two, and possibly more, arguments upon this proposition, and I presume such gentlemen would not now, after having infringed upon the rules, in any way desire to prevent me from expressing what I may think about the proposition. I know that I have not a very pleasing way of addressing any body of men; I know, Mr. Chairman, that I have not the faculty of at all times being on the popular side of a proposition. If I am noted for anything, Sir, I believe it is a reputation I sometimes enjoy for having the unpopular side of public propositions. I remember, Sir, years ago, in the Legislative Assembly of this Territory, when I happened to have the unpopular side of some propositions, that I was hooted and scoffed and abused by the members and everybody else, because I had the unpopular side of a proposition that saved Montana Territory from bankruptcy; and the public are indebted sometimes to men who have the faculty of taking the unpopular side of a proposition and paying no attention to what other men may think about it; but whether it is popular or unpopular to act upon their own judgment in the line of what they think is just and right—that class of men who stand sometimes as the rock bound shores of the ocean, and say to their opponents, thus far shall you go and no farther. These men, Sir, are even indebted to that class of men who are unpopular for their own protection. If we are swept by popular notions in this Convention, and run riot to pander to this thing, that and the other, then, Sir, I say we are in danger. But sometimes is it not well to listen to the reasons and ideas advanced by men who are unpopular, or that the Convention may not want to hear? I do not desire, Sir, to intrude myself upon this Committee and speak except where I believe it is my duty as a member of the Committee, and Convention, and a duty I owe to the men who sent me here to represent them in this Convention and Committee. Thus, in answer to the clamors of those who protest against anything I might say upon the proposition, I will proceed now to express my convictions upon this question. That I may intelligently understand it, for the purpose of making an inquiry, Mr. Chairman, I would ask that this amendment we are voting on be now read, because there are some very striking features in it that I may possibly be able to point out to this Committee.

The amendment was read.

Now, Sir, this amendment leaves the matter, in my opinion in some obscurity. We have some provisions of the Constitution of the United States, and some settled principles of law in regard to the matters contemplated in this that we cannot set aside or bid defiance to. It seems to me, among other things, that we have a provision of the Constitution of the United States—of the amendments to the Constitution, Article 2, which says, "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed." Now then, Sir, this amendment proposes a thing that seems to be somewhat ambiguous. It is very far reaching in its scope, that is, it prohibits any person bringing armed men into the Territory for the purpose or under the pretext of preserving the peace. Now, Sir, if that is the literal meaning of this Section, it is certainly in violation of this provision of the Constitution of the United States of men living upon the borders of this Territory find their property is in danger—are jeopardized by armed mobs of Indians or other lawless men, which are frequent on the borders of this Territory and over in Idaho or Utah or Dakota or Wyoming—they find armed men that are available there for their protection and for the protection of their property, and they are living in the remote parts of Montana Territory, when the Legislature cannot be convened in time to afford them any protection, then—then, Sir, if this amendment contemplates a prohibition against a man's stepping across the line and bringing his neighbors, and men that may be convenient there, across to aid him, to prevent the Indians from burning his farm houses down, or to prevent raids or injury to his person or property—prevent him or them from bearing arms, but the right of the Constitution that is guaranteed to them—then, if this is meant to prohibit that, and it seems to me it smacks very strongly of it, then I say it is in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and it is wrong in principle if it is meant to strike at a proposition of that character; if it is meant to strike at these men who live upon the borders of Montana, and they are prohibited from getting those who live outside of the confines of the State to step across the line and assist them, whether it be one man or two or twenty-five or fifty or one hundred men—if it is meant to prevent that, I say it is in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and it is against justice to those who occupy the border possession of Montana. I say, upon that proposition, it is wrong. If it is meant, Mr. Chairman, to prevent them coming as armies to assist as police force, then I say it is utterly useless, for this reason: In the first place, it is well understood by any man who understands the institutions of our country how, these things all originated under the Constitution and organic law of the United States; that is to say whenever process is put into the hands of any executive officer issued from any court, or whenever that officer is acting in his official capacity, and there is resistance to the service of that process, then the law points out the course, and the only course, to pursue—that is, that officer calls upon the people of the community as a posse to assist him in executing that process from the courts; he has a right to call on anybody as a posse to assist him in the execution of that process; then if he is unable to execute that process in that way he calls upon the Governor of the State for assistance; then, if from any cause the Governor of the State is unable to secure sufficient force there to assist in executing that process, or if the Legislature is not in session, the Governor then calls upon the President of the United States and the Secretary of War for assistance. These are the only ways, Sir, provided by law, that forces can come from the outside, that even the militia of the State can be organized for the protection of property and to enforce the process of the courts. These are the only known ways under our laws and under the Constitution of the United States, and the only way it can be done; and I say that this amendment to this proposition would be useless in that view of it, and would present an absurdity. If, as I suggested before, it was intended to prevent the other purposes that I mentioned, then I say it is wrong in its principle and should not be enacted. I heard an expression from the lips of the gentleman from Park County—whether there was any covert meaning in the suggestion, or whether the gentlemen have any other hidden meaning beyond what appears upon the face of this resolution, I know not, neither do I care. His suggestion was that the working men of Montana should be protected. Now it is a query in my mind what relation the workmen of Montana have to this proposition in the Constitutional Convention any more than those men who do not work. They are all entitled to equal protection. Even if a man is a bum he is entitled to the protection of the laws. The merchant, the business man and the professional man are all entitled to the protection of the laws, and to the right peaceably to bear arms; but what harm can there be, Sir, in any man bearing arms in Montana Territory, even if they step over from the borders of Idaho into the limits of Montana at the suggestion of their neighbors, or otherwise, to assist in protecting them on the frontiers—what harm there can be in that, to go there in a peaceable way for the purpose of protection alone, I am certainly at a loss to know. There is a marked distinction, Mr. Chairman, between men assembling for unlawful and riotous purposes, and those coming together in a peaceable way. I have yet to learn that there is any violation of law for a man to bear arms in a peaceable way for the protection of his own life or his own property or that of his neighbor, whether it be within his state or that of another; whether he comes within the confines of our State voluntarily or whether he comes at the expense of his neighbor or friend; he comes there for a lawful purpose, Sir, and on the borders of Montana—that is, sparsely settled places—it seems to me it often becomes absolutely necessary that he should invoke the armed assistance and aid of his neighbors beyond the limit of the State of Montana, and not wait until the destruction of his property to apply to the Legislature for permission for him to step over outside of the borders of the State and invoke the aid and assistance of his neighbors. Then I say that I have yet to learn that such a thing ought to be a crime. It would be in violation of every principle of criminal law that I have ever known in my life. I believe it is the right of a man, let him be where he may, whether on the soil of his own State or that of a neighboring state, in a peaceable manner to carry arms—to be there for any purpose when he is not violating any law; and, Sir, upon that proposition the criminal laws invite two propositions. Such acts on the part of men are what we call “per se”—that is, within themselves—crimes, and such as are made by statute crimes. One necessarily involves turpitude and the other does not. Now then, if we carry out this provision, we do this: We lay the foundation for a crime that never was recognized in any civilized country anywhere as a crime—that is, for a man to assist in the protection of the life and property of his neighbors, although it may be beyond the confines of his own state. There never was a system or principle of law that made that a crime. It is not “per se” a crime. Then we propose in our enactment here to make that which never was and is not a crime, but is lawful and commendable in itself—we propose to make that a crime and prohibit it. Mr. Chairman, I say that the principle of this thing is wrong in itself, and I ask this Convention to pause and think of these propositions before they launch blindly into it—I cannot say blindly, because the thing has been discussed here at some length. I do not desire to force my views upon this proposition, but I make these suggestions to this Convention, and I ask the members here to seriously stop and consider whether I am right or wrong. Upon mature reflection these are considerations that present themselves to me. I care not how any gentleman upon the floor of this Committee may think about it. I care not whether I am a majority or in the minority. It is my right, privilege and my duty in representing the State of Montana to express these convictions; and mark you, gentlemen, if this theory is carried out that is proposed in this Section, the time will come when good men and women and children in this Territory may have cause to regret it.

Mr. Fields, of Park: Mr. Chairman, have I the right to speak once more on the Resolution?

Mr. Robinson: By leave of the Committee.

Mr. Fields: The gentleman from Deer Lodge asserted that I had a hidden meaning in using the word working men. I might assert the same of him, that he had a hidden meaning in going up to the borders of our Territory to protect people from invasion, cruelty, etc. Why does he not bring back his argument to the place that he started from—the place that we aimed this article at. I tell you that in Pennsylvania, and I have got a report made by the Committee here in full, as I mentioned awhile ago. The Committee was appointed in a resolution presented to Congress February 2nd, 1888. The following gentlemen were appointed on that Committee: G. D. Tellman of South Carolina, W. J. Stone of Missouri, J. Logan Chapman of Michigan, John A. Anderson of Kansas, and A. X. Parker of New York. That Committee in their examination showed where two companies banded together, called in that valley, the Reading Devil Fish—have seven hundred and twelve policemen armed with Winchester rifles and revolvers, who stand guard over a mass of working men, twenty-two thousand in number, engaged in mining and fifteen thousand engaged on the railroads, making in all thirty-seven thousand persons, representing in all one hundred and seventy-five thousand persons, over whom they exercise the control that I would only give credit to where there is a despotic form of government which desires to condemn and intimidate and destroy the life and the property of its citizens. Now we do not in that article attempt to restrict or stop any protection to these people. We have left our clause or section upon an application to the Governor. I use the word Governor in the articles I presented, but the word Executive, I suppose, will cover my ground, and will be better adapted to the meaning and perhaps learning of some of the gentlemen present. I cannot possibly see where this is going to work any injustice whatever; and so far as any hidden meaning upon my part in saying that it was for the benefit of working men, and for their protection against others,—I believe it is time and I believe it is necessary that they should take some stand upon which to protect themselves and to aid themselves. And I stand here as the representative of the working man to see that he does get justice in our Constitution equally and on the same platform with every other person living in the State of Montana. We want equality and fairness with each and every one. Now we have two resolutions, or one resolution and the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin. I am willing to accept the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin in order to facilitate this matter and not cause any confusion, as it is claimed that it covers a little more ground than what mine did; but I find in that substitute there is no reference made in regard to the armed forces of the United States—our regular army, and if there is not some point in there it might be held to be in conflict with the privilege of moving infantry to be used in the State of Montana or for the transportation of United States troops to Montana for guard duty, or through the State. Of course I do not wish to see us step back to the old Maryland proclamation prohibiting arms, in days gone by. We understand, according to history, that that has all been done away with, and I am not in any sense an old rebel, because I was not living in those days, and I do not believe in presenting anything that would cover any such act as that. I believe in life, liberty and pursuit of happiness in the broadest sense, and I claim that, when the people of Pennsylvania are living under the Constitution of the United States, they are not enjoying those privileges of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; and further, that those people are in a position, with the Declaration of Independence read to them once a year, that makes it a farce and a lie in the face of it, when those people are not permitted to enjoy the blessings of life and liberty as citizens of the United States; and I believe that the time has come when those people have got to assert their rights, and have got to do it in a good, legitimate and lawful manner, and in no other way; and those rights will never be given to them unless they take a step in advance for the same. Now, I do not mean to be antagonistic to capital, I do not wish to make a king or peer or prince out of the working man; but I believe in giving him the just fruits of his labor and a just remuneration for the work he does; and I do not believe in having him down in the ditch digging, with a shot gun pointed at him, and not allow him to speak one word with his neighbor. I believe it is the right of every citizen to ask for more pay, and to receive it, if he can get it in a legitimate way. I do not believe we are asking too much for those people, in the face of what we profess here when we say that we propose to form a Constitution that will give us all equality, life and liberty, and the pursuit of happiness to the fullest extent.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to ask if an amendment would be in order?

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: For information, before that is answered, I would like to ask how many amendments are in order?

The Chairman: An amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Hogan: Well, has not that been offered?

The Chairman: It has been withdrawn. The gentleman from Custer offers the following as an amendment to the amendment: "No armed force of any character shall ever be brought into the State of Montana, or organized in the State by any private person or persons or by any company or corporation, to influence or force any citizen of the State of Montana to either labor, or deter or influence any person from laboring against his will, under such fines and penalties as may be provided by law."

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Now, Mr. Chairman, while I am in favor of the greatest measure of human liberty that can be enjoyed by man on earth, I am equally in favor of throwing such safe guard around him as shall insure his safety against domestic violence, or violence of any kind; and I was not aware—it may be owing to my ignorance or lack of pursuit of information, that there was a condition of things, or even had been a condition of things in this Territory, where laboring men were environed by an armed force, or foreign forces brought in here in the interests of capital, to either compel them to labor against their will or to defer them from laboring, as they saw fit. I am most certainly in favor of the spirit of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Park county, and if I could be made to believe that an exigency has arisen in the Territory of Montana where its citizens were influenced or oppressed, or were liable to be influenced or oppressed by any force that is brought in from without the boundaries of the Territory of Montana, I would not only vote for that, or any other measure, but I would, at my time of life, shoulder my rifle and go out in defense of the liberties of the people. I have merely introduced this amendment for the sake of an opening wedge, to get up here and express my sentiments. While I do not believe, and cannot believe, that a condition of things exists here which calls for the insertion in the Constitution of Montana of a restrictive clause of the character which is embodied in the suggestion of my friend from Park county, if it does exist, I am heartily in favor of it. But it is a matter of so grave importance that I would like to have it well considered and referred to a committee, and to a special committee, if necessary, for the express purpose of investigating the matter—studying it in all its bearings, and then presenting it here as a separate and independent article to go into the Constitution. I will withdraw the substitute.

The Chairman: The question then recurs upon the adoption of the proposition offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Chair then put the question upon the adoption of the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce), and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: This brings us now to the consideration of Sections 13 and 14, which were postponed on yesterday.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, I move that the further consideration of Sections 13 and 14 be for the present postponed, and that when the Committee arise it recommend to the Convention that Sections 13 and 14 be recommitted to the Committee on Irrigation.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Chairman: With the consent of the gentleman from Gallatin, I will substitute the word "committed" for the word "recommitted" in his motion.

The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, now offers to amend Section 13 by striking out the same and inserting the following in lieu thereof:

"Section 13. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having been first made or paid into court for the owner."

The Clerk here announced that this was intended as a substitute for both Sections 13 and 14 in the printed copy, and that the same should be numbered Section 14.

The Clerk then read the following, as offered by Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke:

"Amend Section 15 by striking out the same and inserting the following in lieu thereof:

Section 15. The use of all water now appropriated, or that may hereafter be appropriated, for sale, rental, distribution or other beneficial use and the right of way over the lands of others for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals and aqueducts necessarily used in connection therewith, as well as the sites for reservoirs necessary for collecting and storing the same shall be held to be a public use."

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, on yesterday was not there a motion made to combine Sections 13 and 14 into one section.

The Chairman: The Chair understands there was.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: The understanding was that they were to be considered together.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I desire to have the whole of the article read now, with the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, so that we can see how it reads.

The Clerk read the sections and substitute, as requested.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I would ask the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke if he considered the propriety of inserting private ways in this—if he has discussed that question? I would like to offer an amendment if it would not interfere with the intent and purposes of the substitute, that private ways—roads—be inserted also.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I hope we will get rid of this proposition before we adjourn, and for the purpose of doing that I suggest that the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) will be acted upon. I hope it will be lost. I make the suggestion simply that we may dispose of it before adjournment.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment because I consider that the fundamental law should speak in no uncertain language upon this absorbing question. We are directly interested in promoting, by every constitutional method, the storage and disposition of water by means of reservoirs, ditches and canals. The subject is not only of local concern, but it is attracting national attention. In order to accomplish desired results the right of eminent domain must be invoked to secure the right of way for canals and ditches and the sites for reservoirs for storage and distribution of the water, and in order to secure the condemnation of private property for this purpose, the use to which the property is to be applied must not be a private but a public use. I think it entirely competent to say in this instrument that these particular uses are public. The term public use must have a meaning controlled by the necessity and not that which it generally bears. Our condition is anomalous—our country may be said to be an arid country where an artificial water supply is necessary for a successful cultivation of the soil. The authorities are not uniform in expounding the doctrine of eminent domain, but considering our condition it is safe to say that we are within that principle in adopting this amendment. It has been repeatedly held that you can appeal to the doctrine of eminent domain to protect, drain and render valuable lands which, by the overflow of a river, might otherwise be an extensive and worthless swamp. Here the conditions are changed. We do not seek to drain lands, but by irrigation to flow water upon the surface. By analogy and parity of reasoning the same principle is applicable. In order to protect, reclaim and render valuable our lands, which otherwise would be valueless and a waste, this right must be upheld. It is necessary to declare the use of water which is sold, rented or distributed, a public use, in order to protect the public against vindictive and arbitrary owners and corporations who would sell to one and refuse to sell to another, or who would charge one person one price and another person another price. As before suggested, our condition with respect to these matters is peculiar. Water and the right of way for ditches, canals and flumes, as well as for sites for reservoirs, is a conceded necessity. By this method we declare what is a matter of common knowledge. It has been held that when the government is supplying its own needs, or is furnishing facilities for its citizens in regard to those matters of public necessity, convenience or welfare, which on account of their peculiar character and the difficulty—perhaps impossibility—of making provision for them otherwise, it is alike proper, useful and needful for the government to provide. The amendment emphasizes that principle, and, in my opinion, makes it impossible for the narrow selfish and unfriendly conduct of an individual to impede the settlement, cultivation and development of the State. No problem connected with our present or future concerns us more than this. I therefore think it not only wise but expedient to provide as far as we can, for the most efficient and comprehensive system of irrigation, and the right to condemn private property is an indisputable condition to that end.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman whether or not the language that is used there would be construed so as to give only the right of way to persons who are constructing ditches for the purposes of distribution and sale.

Mr. Toole: I would say to the gentlemen that the language is broader than that; the language is "sale, rental, distribution or other beneficial use."

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: It ought to be broad enough at all events so as to cover what are denominated private ways for ditches. I am fully aware of the condition we are living under in this matter, and while I am willing to vote for this substitute, I really think that it will not mend matters much. I do not think that this Convention can ever, by a clause in it, say that a horse is a cow. I do not think that any court would come around, after this Convention should say that, and say that it was a cow; and so when they say that a private way is a public use, where it is only for one individual, I do not believe that the courts will so construe it. Such terms as private ways and public ways are old. I know that courts have gone very far in such matters: Whenever they have seen a great necessity existing for putting a new construction upon the law and giving new interpretations to the terms, they have been disposed to do so; and I believe that the courts would uphold, as far as they could, the old provisions of this bill of rights. But I would say to the gentlemen here that I do not believe this matter in the bill of rights is going to accomplish what they want. I believe there will have to be a positive grant of legislation upon the subject, and that either the Irrigation Committee or the Committee upon Legislative Powers have got to make a positive provision upon this subject, granting the legislature the power to establish these ways. I do not believe we can do any better in this matter than to vote for the substitute, although I do not think that it adds anything at all to the original provision that was made.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move you, Sir, that the Committee do now arise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and a division being called for, the motion was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move you, sir, that we do now take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The President: Before that motion is put, the Chair will hear the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, The Committee of the Whole, having under consideration General File No. 1, have made some progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that they have made progress, and asks leave to sit again. If there be no objection this will be granted.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy), the same was declared carried, and the Convention took a recess until two o'clock.

RECESS

2, P. M.

The Convention was called to order by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, it being out of order at this moment, I would ask unanimous consent to introduce a petition, with an accompanying letter and would say that I am not familiar with the contents of the letter, which has just been handed to me, and while the letter, I notice, is rather lengthy to be read in Convention, I would say that there is a postscript which will probably cover all the necessary features, so far as the Convention is concerned. I ask unanimous consent for its consideration.

The President: Is there any objection to granting the request of the gentleman from Park. If there be none the communication will be received and read.

The Clerk then commenced the reading of a certain Memorial to the Governors and Conventions of the coming new States.

Mr. Callaway asked, as a matter of information, whether the Memorial came from parties outside of Montana, and, if so, that he would move that it be laid upon the table, no matter what the nature of the memorial might be.

The President: The gentleman can object to its consideration.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to have it read for the information of the Convention.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I did not quite understand the gentleman, but if there is any objection to its consideration, I would simply ask for its return, so that I can properly introduce it at some other time.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I do not object upon the grounds that it is not in the order of business, I object because it is a memorial presented here, or a petition presented from people here, who have no right to petition or memorialize this Convention. It is right that any man or woman in the Territory of Montana may address this Convention in a respectful way upon any matter, but I deny the right of outsiders, or people who are non-residents of Montana, to address this Convention in any way except by the universal consent of the Convention.

The President: The gentleman desires the petition to be returned to him for introduction at some other time.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, if there be no objection, in order to expedite matters, I would like to ask that the Judiciary Committee be allowed to report.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of the Judiciary Committee will be received.

Mr. Dixon asked that the report be received and referred to the Committee on Printing.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee will be received and referred to the Committee on Printing. There are two reports, one on the Judiciary, and one on the Pardonng Power. These reports will both be received and referred to the Committee on Printing, with orders that they be printed.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"Mr. President: I am instructed by the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Departments to report the following, and recommend its incorporation into the Constitution as the Article on the Judiciary Department."

(Signed) DIXON, Chairman.

ARTICLE ON JUDICIAL DEPARTMENTS.

ARTICLE.

Judicial Departments.

Section 1. The Judicial power of the State shall be vested in the Senate sitting as Court of Impeachment, in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Justices of the Peace, and such other inferior courts as the Legislative Assembly may establish in any incorporated city or town.

Supreme Court.

Sec. 2. The Supreme Court, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, shall have appellate jurisdiction only, which shall be coextensive with the State, and shall have a general superintending control over all inferior courts, under such regulations and limitations as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 3. The appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court shall extend to all cases at law and in equity, subject, however, to such limitations and regulations as may be prescribed by law. Said court shall have power in its discretion to issue and to hear and determine writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition and injunction, and such other original and remedial writs as may be necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. When a jury is required in the Supreme Court to determine an issue of fact, said court shall have power to summon such jury in such manner as may be provided by law. Each of the justices of the Supreme Court shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition by, or on behalf of, any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or the Supreme Court, or before any District Court of the State, or any judge thereof; and such writs may be heard and determined by the justice, or court, or judge, before whom they are made returnable. Each of the Justices of the Supreme Court may also issue and hear and determine writs of certiorari in proceedings for contempt in the District Court, and such other writs as may be authorized by law to issue.

Sec. 4. At least three terms of the Supreme Court shall be held each year at the seat of government.

Sec. 5. The Supreme Court shall consist of three justices, a majority of whom shall be necessary to form a quorum or pronounce a decision; but one or more of said justices may adjourn the court from day to day, or to a day certain; and the Legislative Assembly shall have the power to increase the number of such justices to not less nor more than five.

Sec. 6. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the electors of the State at large, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 7. The term of the office of the Justices of the Supreme Court, except as in this Constitution otherwise provided, shall be six years.

Sec. 8. There shall be elected at the first general election provided for by this Constitution, one Chief Justice and two Associate Justices, who shall constitute the Judges of the Supreme Court, and they shall hold their offices until their respective successors are elected and qualified. The terms of office of said Justices shall be designated on the ballots at the time of their election. The Chief Justice shall at said first election be elected for the term of three years, and said two Associate Justices, one for the term of five years, and one for the term of seven years, and after said first election one Justice (or more, if the Legislative Assembly shall increase the members to five) shall be chosen every two years, and the terms of office of said additional Justices shall be fixed by law in such manner that at least one of said Justices shall be elected every two years. The Chief Justice shall preside at all terms of the Supreme Court, and in case of his absence the Judge having the shortest term to serve shall preside in his stead.

Sec. 9 There shall be a clerk of the Supreme Court, who shall hold his office for the term of six years, except that the clerk first elected shall hold his office only until the general election in the year 1892, and until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be elected by the electors at large, of the State, and his compensation shall be fixed by law, and his duties prescribed by law, and by the rules of the Supreme Court.

Sec. 10. No person shall be eligible to the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, unless he shall have been admitted to practice law in the Supreme Court of the Territory or State of Montana, be at least thirty years of age, and a citizen of the United States, nor unless he shall have resided in said Territory or State at least two years next preceding his election.

District Court.

Sec. 11. The District Court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases at law, and in equity, including all cases which involve the title or right of possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll or municipal fine, and in all cases in which the debt, damage, claim or demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy exceeds fifty dollars; and in all criminal cases amounting to felony and all cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for; of actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer; of proceedings in insolvency; of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; of all matters of probate; of actions of divorce and for annulment of marriage, and of all such special actions and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for. And said Courts shall have the power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor in all cases where they are authorized so to do by the laws of the United States. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in such cases arising in justices and other inferior courts in their respective districts as may be prescribed by law and consistent with this Constitution. Their process shall extend to all parts of the State, provided that all action for recovery of, the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real property shall be commenced in the county in which the real property, or any part thereof, affected by such action or actions, is situated. Said courts and the judges thereof shall have power also to issue, hear and determine, writs of mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, injunction and other original and remedial writs, and also all writs of habeas corpus, on petition by, or on behalf of, any person in actual custody in their respective districts. Injunctions, writs of prohibition, and habeas corpus, may be issued and served on legal holidays and non-judicial days.

Sec. 12. The State shall be divided into judicial districts in each of which there shall be elected by the electors thereof one judge of the District Court, whose term of office shall be four years, except that the district judges first elected shall hold their offices only until the general election in the year 1892, and until their successors are elected and qualified. Any judge of the District Court may hold court for any other district judge, and shall do so when required by law.

Sec. 13. Until otherwise provided by law, said districts shall be constituted as follows: First District, Lewis and Clarke county; Second District, Silver Bow county; Third District, Deer Lodge county; Fourth District, Missoula county; Fifth District, Gallatin county; Sixth District, Jefferson county; Seventh District, Custer county; Eighth District, Beaverhead and Madison counties; Ninth District, Park and Yellowstone counties; Tenth District, Cascade and Meagher counties; Eleventh District, Fergus and Dawson counties; Twelfth District, Choteau county.

Sec. 14. The Legislative Assembly may increase or decrease the number of judges in any judicial district: Provided, That there shall be at least one judge in any district established by law; and may divide the State, or any part thereof, into new districts; Provided, That each be formed of compact territory and be bounded by county lines, but no changes in the number or boundaries of districts shall work a removal of any judge from office during the term for which he has been elected or appointed.

Sec. 15. Writs of error and appeals shall be allowed from the decisions of the said district court to the Supreme court, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 16. No person shall be eligible to the office of Judge of the District Court unless he be at least twenty-five years of age, and a citizen of the United States, and shall have been admitted to practice law in the Supreme Court of the Territory or State of Montana, nor unless he shall have resided in the State or Territory at least one year next preceding his election. He need not be a resident of the district for which he is elected at the time of his election, but after his election he shall reside in the district for which he is elected during his term of office.

Sec. 17. The District Court in each county, which is a Judicial District by itself, shall be always open for the transaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days. In districts where two or more counties are united, until otherwise provided by law, the district judges shall fix the terms of court, provided that there shall be at least four terms a year held in each county.

Sec. 18. There shall be a clerk of the District Court in each county, who shall be elected by the electors of his county. The clerk shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as other county officers. The duties and compensation of the District Clerk shall be as provided by law.

County Attorneys.

Sec. 19. There shall be elected at the general election in each county of the state, one County Attorney, whose qualifications shall be the same as are required for Judges of the District Courts, except that he need not be over twenty one years of age and whose term of office shall be two years. He shall have a salary to be fixed by law. One-half of which shall be paid by the state and one-half by the county in which he is elected; he shall in addition to said salary receive such fees as may be provided by the Legislative Assembly and shall perform such duties as may be required by law.

Justices of the Peace.

Sec. 20. There shall be elected in each organized township of each county by the electors of such township at least two Justices of the Peace, who shall hold their offices, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, for the term of two years. Justices Courts shall have such original jurisdiction within their respective counties as may be prescribed by law, except as in this Constitution otherwise provided; Provided that they shall not have jurisdiction in any case where the debt, damage, claim, or value of the property involved exceeds the sum of three hundred dollars.

Sec. 21. Justices Courts shall not have jurisdiction in any case involving the title or right of possession of real property, nor in cases of divorce, nor for annulment of marriage, nor of cases in equity nor shall they have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, certiorari, quo warranto, injunction, or prohibition, nor the power of naturalization; nor shall they have jurisdiction in cases of felony, except as examining courts; nor shall criminal cases in said courts be prosecuted by indictments; but said courts shall have such jurisdiction in criminal matters, not of the grade of felony, as may be provided by law; and shall also have concurrent jurisdiction with the District Court, in cases of forcible entry and unlawful detainer.

Sec. 22. Justices Courts shall always be open for the transaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days.

Sec. 23. Appeals shall be allowed from Justices Courts, in all cases, to the District Courts, in such manner and under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.

Police and Municipal Courts.

Sec. 24. The Legislative Assembly shall have power to provide for creating such police and municipal courts and magistrates for cities and towns as may be deemed necessary from time to time, who shall have jurisdiction in all cases arising under the ordinances of such cities and towns, respectively; such police magistrates may also be constituted ex-officio justices of the peace for their respective counties.

Miscellaneous Provisions.

Sec. 25. The Supreme and District Courts shall be courts of record.

Sec. 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general, and of uniform operation throughout the State; and the organization, jurisdiction, powers, proceedings and practice of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, shall be uniform.

Sec. 27. The style of all processes shall be "The State of Montana" and all prosecutions shall be conducted in the name and by the authority of the same.

Sec. 28. There shall be but one form of Civil Action, and law and equity may be administered in the same action.

Sec. 29. The justices of the Supreme Court and the judges of the District Courts shall each be paid quarterly a salary, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. The salaries of the justices of the Supreme court shall be paid by the State. One-half of the salary of each district judge shall be paid by the State, and the other half shall be paid by the county, where only one county is included in a Judicial District; and where more than one county is included in a Judicial District, the said other half of said salary shall be paid by the counties included in said district, in proportion to the amount of assessable property in each of such counties according to the last general assessment for taxation. Until otherwise provided by law, Justices of the Supreme Court shall be paid a salary of five thousand dollars per annum each. Until otherwise provided by law the salaries of the several District Judges shall be as follows: That of the Judges of the First, Second and Third Districts, Four Thousand Dollars per annum each. That of the Judges of the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Districts, Three Thousand Dollars per annum each. And that of the Judge of the Ninth District, Thirty-Five Hundred Dollars per annum.

Sec. 30. No Judge of the Supreme or District Court shall accept or receive any compensation, fee, perquisite or emolument for or on account of his office in any form whatever, except the salary provided by law.

Sec. 31. No Judge, or Clerk of the Supreme Court, or of any District Court, shall act or practice as an attorney, or counsellor at law in any court in this State during his continuance in office.

Sec. 32. The Legislative Assembly may provide for the publication of decisions and opinions of the Supreme Court.

Sec. 33. All officers provided for in this article, excepting Judges of the Supreme Court, who shall reside within the State, shall respectively reside during their term of office in the District, County, Township, Precinct, City or Town for which they may be elected or appointed.

Sec. 34. Vacancies in the office of the Supreme or District Court or Clerk of the Supreme Court shall be filled by appointment, by the Governor of the State, and vacancies in the office of County Attorney, or Clerk of the District Court and Justices of the Peace shall be filled by appointment by the Board of County Commissioners of the County where such vacancy occurs. A person appointed to fill any such vacancy shall hold his office until the next general election, and until his successor is elected and qualified. A person elected to fill a vacancy shall hold office until the expiration of the term for which the person he succeeds was elected.

Sec. 35. No Justice of the Supreme Court or District Judge shall hold any other public office while he remains in the office to which he has been elected or appointed.

Sec. 36. A cause in the District Court may be tried by a Judge pro tempore who must be a member of the bar, agreed upon in writing by the parties litigant, or their attorneys of record, approved by the court.

and sworn to try the cause; and in such case any order, judgment, or decree, made or rendered therein by such Judge pro tempore, shall have the same force and effect as if made or rendered by the court with the regular Judge presiding.

Sec. 37. Any Judicial officer who shall absent himself from the state for more than sixty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office.

The Clerk again read as follows:

"Mr. President: I am instructed by the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Departments, including Pardoning Power, to report the following, and to recommend its incorporation into the Constitution as the Article on Pardoning Power."

Signed DIXON, Chairman.

ARTICLE ON JUDICIAL DEPARTMENTS.

Article

Pardoning Power.

Section 1. The Governor shall have the power to grant pardons, absolute or conditional, and to remit fines and forfeitures, and to grant commutation of punishments and respites after conviction and judgment for any offenses committed against the criminal laws of the State: Provided, however, That before granting pardons, remitting fines and forfeitures, or commuting punishments, the action of the Governor concerning the same shall be approved by a Board, or a majority thereof, composed of the Secretary of State, Attorney General and State Auditor, who shall be known as a Board of Pardons.

Sec. 2. The Legislative Assembly shall by law prescribe the sessions of said Board, and the manner in which applications shall be made, and regulate the proceedings thereon. But no fine or forfeiture shall be remitted, and no commutation or pardon granted, except upon the approval of a majority of said Board, after a full hearing in open session, and until proofs, notice of time and place of hearing, and the relief applied for shall be given by publication in some newspaper of general circulation in the county where the crime was committed, at least once a week for two weeks. The proceedings and decision of the Board shall be reduced to writing, and with their reasons for their action in each case, and the dissent of any member who may disagree, signed by them, and filed, with all papers used upon the hearing, in the office of the Secretary of State.

Sec. 3. The Governor shall communicate to the Legislative Assembly, at each regular session, each case or remission of fine or forfeiture, reprieve, commutation or pardon granted since the last previous report, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of remission, commutation, pardon or reprieve, with the reason for granting the same, and the objections, if any, of any member of the Board made thereto.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move that the Convention do resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the General File.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Before that motion is put, as a matter of privilege, may I ask for leave of absence until Monday?

The President: The gentleman will be excused until Monday, if there be no objection.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, that the Convention resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the General File, and the same was declared carried.

The President called the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Callaway, to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF WHOLE.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison, in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Committee had under consideration the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to Sections 13 and 14. The gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) offers an amendment to that substitute. The substitute is as follows: "The use of all water now appropriated, or that may hereafter be appropriated, for sale, rental, distribution or other beneficial use, and the right of way over the lands of others for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals and aqueducts necessarily used in connection therewith, as well as the sites for reservoirs necessary for collecting and storing the same, shall be held to be a public use."

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move to amend by striking out the word "and" before the word "aqueducts," and insert the words "and roads" after the word "aqueducts."

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, called for the reading of the substitute as amended.

The Clerk read same.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I take it, Mr. Chairman, that the object of the gentleman who introduces that, is that he does not mean to confine the meaning of roads simply that are used in connection with irrigating ditches, but that it is for the purpose of allowing the condemnation of private property for private ways; or is it intended to embrace roads to be used in connection with irrigating ditches, flumes, etc?

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I would state to the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke my object in inserting that word "roads" was to cover such roads as would be necessary in building reservoirs. It would be necessary to have a private way in building reservoirs and improvements of that character, and it is simply to include the use of those ways. Now there is another matter that I feel ought to be incorporated, unless it is covered by the principle of eminent domain, and that is with regard to roads built for the purpose of gaining access to mining property.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I think the section amply covers that now, as it stands, upon the principle that when the condemnation shall have taken place that these private ways are open to the public use, and I believe it is sufficiently provided for under the general proposition that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, and the money paid for the owner, if possible, into court. It is certainly embodied in that, and it rests upon the proposition that when condemnation is had, even to a private way, that after it is once established, it is for public use likewise, and not simply for the use of the individual to whom it is granted.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I would state in relation to that, that when we use the term "road" we mean a public highway, and that comes within the general powers of the government to establish rules. One of the functions of the government is to establish rules, and the only provision is that this bill of rights embodied in the Constitution shall not take private property for private use; that is, taking it for a road without just compensation. Then there is a broader line, in which there is a conflict of decisions, and that is what is called "private ways." Now I find, as laid down in Lewis on Eminent Domain, the courts have held that where roads of necessity connect a farm with a public highway or a public place of resort, and everybody has a right to travel on it, that it is a public highway. The title does not pass from the party. But where, as in the case of a private highway, the title to the way passes to the man and his assigns, that is taking private property for private use and unless there is some provisions of the Constitution allowing that, it cannot be done. I believe in this old Bill of Rights here before it was amended—they used the words "private ways of necessity"; and then left with the legislature to provide what should be a necessity.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I do not desire to complicate this question, and therefore withdraw my motion in favor of the original proposition.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow withdraws his amendment. The question now is upon the substitute offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the substitute offered by Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke, and the same was declared carried, and adopted in lieu of Sections 13 and 14.

The Chairman: This, Gentlemen of the Committee, disposes of General File No. 1.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now arise, and instruct the Chairman to report File No. 1 to the Convention with the amendments as passed.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I trust the gentleman will withdraw that motion for a moment.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, in Section 15 as adopted yesterday by the Committee of the Whole, in the fourth line, it reads, "and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury in the county or district in which the offense has been committed." I would like to ask for information of this Convention, does not that include the right of a man to take a change of venue, for instance, from this county into another district, if he cannot, for any reason, be tried by a jury in his own county?

The Chairman: I would inform the gentleman that after a section is passed we cannot return to the consideration of it.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, asked for the unanimous consent to recur to the consideration of the section.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, there are two sections I desire to amend, 1st, amend Section 17 by inserting therein, after the words "error of law," in line 3, as follows: "or, if any jury or the Judge of the court shall from sickness or other cause become unable to act after the impanelling of the jury." I will state that Section 17 reads as follows: "That no person shall be compelled to testify against himself in a criminal case, nor shall any person be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense if the jury disagree, or if the judgment be arrested after verdict, or if the verdict be arrested by error of law, the accused shall not be deemed to have been in jeopardy." Now this amendment comes in after the words "error of law."

The amendment was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge asks unanimous consent to recur to Section 17, for the purpose of offering an amendment. If there be no objection it is so ordered.

The Clerk read the amendment.

The Chair then put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Robinson: I now desire to amend Section 15, which I will read, by inserting after the word "behalf," on line 3, "under such regulations as the Legislature may prescribe as to paying for their attendance and process.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I will state to the Convention the object in offering that amendment is that, as the Section now reads the construction that would probably be placed upon it would be the proper construction,—that in all these criminal processes the defendant would have the right to call any number of witnesses. The Section reads "In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to appear and defend in person and by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation; to meet the witnesses against him face to face; to have process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf," etc. Now, as that stands, the interpretation would be that no legislation could be had except on the basis that the State would be compelled to pay for an unlimited number of witnesses the defendant might see proper to order. The idea is to place it in such a position as to limit the number of witnesses the State will pay for, and for process, and such things as that. The idea is to place the matter in such a condition that if the Legislature sees fit to limit the number of witnesses that the State shall pay for the defendant, that it may do so. In many of the states of the Union—it is so in the United States courts, and the United States does not pay for the witnesses of the defendant at all—in some of the states they pay for a limited number, and pay for them only on the order of the Judge that the witnesses are necessary. Now my object is to place that in the Constitution in a condition so that the Legislature of Montana hereafter may regulate that if they desire it. As a question of practice, we know that an unlimited number of witnesses are summoned without any use whatever, because they can get their attendance without costing the defendant anything. The object is to put a check on that if the Legislature sees fit to.

Mr. Durfee, of Deer Lodge: I am in favor of the amendment proposed by Mr. Robinson for this reason: when I was prosecutor of Deer Lodge county, a case came under my observation where the defense summoned nineteen witnesses, not one of whom was placed upon the stand. Those nineteen witnesses cost the county something over seven hundred dollars. For that reason I am in favor of something of the kind being embodied in the Constitution.

The Clerk read the Section as contemplated by the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me we are treading on dangerous ground when we undertake to go in and limit the number of witnesses that the defendant may call in his defense. I do not believe there is very much danger of abusing this right. It is true that the gentleman from Deer Lodge may be alarmed on account of there having been more witnesses summoned in a certain criminal action in his county than may have been necessary. I have seen that thing done. But I do not believe it can be limited with safety to the honest and fair administration of the criminal law. I know that there are frequently more witnesses summoned than are necessary; but how does the defendant know what is to be brought up against him? If there are ten witnesses summoned for the prosecution, and there are eleven witnesses who know that he is innocent of the charge with which he is accused, and there is a preponderance of evidence, I know of no reason why he should be restricted to seven or eight or nine witnesses. It is true that in some cases it may be burdensome; but so is the administration of criminal law burdensome in any case. But it is one of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution, and it seems to me that it is one of the most sacred rights written in the Constitution of the United States, or that can be written in the Constitution of Montana. I do not believe that it is safe to restrict; if I did, I would certainly vote for the amendment; but, believing, as I do, that it is not safe, I shall be compelled to vote against it; and I do not believe in the main there is danger of increasing the expenses unnecessarily in the administration of criminal law by allowing the defendant to summon the number of witnesses that he or his counsel may deem necessary to prosecute his defense.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I think the gentleman is laboring under a misapprehension. This amendment does not propose to limit it at all, but proposes to put the Constitution in such shape that, if the Legislature sees fit hereafter to make this limitation, it shall have the right to do so.

Mr. Burleigh: I am opposed to that. There are restrictions enough in it now.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I think the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge is in the line of reform, and I believe every gentleman in this room who has attended sessions of grand juries or district courts, or has seen the innumerable witnesses before probate courts and justices of the peace, who have had no business there at all except for the purpose of getting public sentiment to dismiss the prosecution, will bear me out in my view of the matter. In a number of cases I have seen hordes of witnesses brought together for that purpose alone, and I believe this amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge is greatly in the line of reform, and I hope it will pass. It is not right the people of the State should be burdened with that class of witnesses.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I do not understand that the amendment is intended to limit the number of witnesses, but the number the State shall pay for. The defendant may have as many witnesses as he is able to bring. I am in favor of the amendment.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: That is not the spirit of the law—interrupted.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer is out of order. The gentleman from Silver Bow has the floor.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, it is provided here that a man shall have compulsory process for his witnesses. Then it is proposed to give the power to the Legislature to say how many of those witnesses the State shall pay for. Now, how does the witness know that he is one of the witnesses that is going to be paid? You are going to give a man the power to send out for as many witnesses as he wants, and then you are going to put a limitation on that and say that four, for instance, only are to be paid for. Now, how does a man know that he is one of the four, and, as Dr. Burleigh has said, we are treading upon sacred ground here. It has been found by the experience of our race that men who are tried for offenses should have every facility to make a defense; that the courts should be open to them; that they should have jurors from the citizens of the county or the community where they live to try their offenses; that they should have compulsory process for witnesses—and because somebody has abused this power, as in one instance cited here in Deer Lodge county, it is proposed to restrict this right—put it down to such number as the Legislature may see fit. I think we had better stand by the old landmarks. We have grown up in these ways; we have become civilized—we have become a great people, and other nations are looking now to these common law principles. In Spain they have adopted this jury system and the right of compulsory process for witnesses; in Italy they have adopted it; and it is in the line of the protection of the people against arbitrary power. We have to some extent abolished the grand jury system. Now, let us not make an entire reformation in this matter—do not think that we are so much wiser than our fathers about this matter and try to put in a clause here that would inaugurate an era of littleness,—which is about the amount of it. It is not every man that is accused of crime that is guilty. There is a disposition in some quarters to cry out whenever a man is accused of crime that he is guilty. There is not a homicide committed in the country that every newspaper which discusses the matter does not denounce as a murder at the start. "Another Murder." They do not stop to consider any of the circumstances at all; and I think it is time for us to pause awhile in this career and consider for a moment that the rights of the citizen should be protected.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to make a few remarks more in connection with what the gentleman from Deer Lodge has so justly stated, but I would like to hear this matter discussed a little more liberally, for it is a matter of great importance, by some of the older members upon this floor, for whom I have great respect. It is no new question; it is one that has agitated the public mind for one thousand years. The time once was when the government, in the hands of a despot, could go out and take one of its subjects, and go into a sham investigation into the cause of his guilt, and if it was deemed necessary to convict him without witnesses, without counsel, without forms of law; and to a very great extent it is carried on now in some parts of the world, and in some parts of what is termed the civilized world. Why is it that the government is allowed to go out, on suspicion, and lay its heavy hand upon one of its citizens, deprive him of liberty, lock him up and charge him with the crime of murder, larceny, or any other crime? It is an arbitrary and despotic power, but it has been deemed necessary to tolerate it under certain restrictions for the safety of the State. Then what? The government says by way of recompense, "this man shall have a right to a fair and impartial trial by a jury of his peers; he shall have compulsory process to produce witnesses in support of his innocence; and while he goes into court with the heavy hand of the law laid upon him, nevertheless, he shall have an impartial trial, and he shall have compulsory process to bring the witnesses in to prove his innocence." The government of the United States and the government of England, for the last five hundred years, has not gone beyond that; and now to come in here and require a man upon whom suspicion, perhaps unfortunately, may rest to be deprived of the full measure of protection which the Constitution of England and the Constitution of this country has thrown around him, seems to me to be a step backwards and in favor of the arbitrary, despotic power.

The Chairman: How can a Legislature determine in any case how many witnesses a man should have?

Mr. Burleigh: It can no more determine it than we can determine how many angels there are required to surround the throne of God and keep it in place; and I shall vote against this amendment.

The question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge was then put, and declared lost.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up an amendment to Section 15.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers the following amendment to Section 15: "Amend Section 15 by adding thereto the following: "subject to the right of the State to have a change of venue for any of the causes for which the defendant may obtain the same."

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair put the question upon the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I desire to call the attention of the Convention to some provisions contained in Sections 15 and 16. I do not know whether the members of the Convention have noticed the inconsistency that is presented in those two sections or not. It is this: that in criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to defend, etc., "to meet the witnesses against him face to face." That is an old constitutional guarantee, so far as that is concerned. Now, what I desire to call the attention of the Convention to is this: Section 15 reads, "That no person shall be imprisoned for the purpose of securing his testimony in any case longer than shall be necessary to give his deposition; if he can give security for his appearance at the time of trial he shall be discharged," etc. "If he cannot give security, his deposition shall be taken in the manner to be prescribed by law." This presents a legal contradiction. I have not prepared an amendment to it; but as it stands it is a legal conundrum; that is, that the defendant shall be entitled to have his witnesses face to face before him, and that the witnesses shall not be imprisoned. Now then, if a witness is brought up and required to give security to appear for the prosecution, why there is no object whatever in taking his deposition; it is a mere nullity. It is never required that a witness be imprisoned on the part of the defense. This has reference to the depositions on the part of the prosecution. Now then, the first part of it is a contradiction to the second; it would require an entirely useless act to take the deposition of a witness for the prosecution in a criminal case if he must meet the witness face to face (reading "If he cannot give security." "And if he cannot give security for his appearance at the next term of court, or won't do it—if he cannot give security, his deposition shall be taken in the manner to be prescribed by law. That provides for an entirely useless thing, and falls as a dead letter. There is a contradiction in that that cannot be carried out. I trust that some member of the bar will find some way out of this difficulty by suggesting some amendment.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I do not think that provision is necessarily contradictory—that the deposition to be taken can only be taken in the presence of the accused. The accused would have the same opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses as he would on the trial. I know that the same provision is contained in the Constitution, and I never heard the question yet being raised. If it were taken with the purpose of secrecy, when the accused was not present, it would be a different matter; but, as the matter stands, I think the provision is right.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I would state that I have conversed with the Committee on the Bill of Rights, and they changed the old bill of rights in the Constitution of 1884 for the very purpose of obviating the difficulty that the gentleman has pointed out. They claim, and I think correctly, that those two provisions of the Article are to be construed together, and that when the Legislature provides for taking a deposition the Legislature will provide that the prisoner must be present and have the right to cross-examine. If he is in custody he must be brought there by an officer; if he is not in custody, but on bail, he must be notified, and his attorney notified and required to be there for the purpose of taking his deposition. So that I think those two provisions will go well together. This provision about taking a deposition on the part of the prosecution is a new one in a bill of rights, but still it is very unjust to a witness to confine him in jail with fifteen or twenty convicts for six months, as has been done in this Territory in one or two instances, when there might be some provision or law by which his deposition could be taken. The defendant would have the right to be present and cross-examine him, and the individual liberty of the citizen would be preserved in that way.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I admit that this is an invasion upon the old rule; but since my residence in Montana I have seen so many cases of extreme hardship under the law as it now exists on our statute book, in taking poor and indigent persons and thrusting them into jail, and keeping them there six months at a time, and at an expense to the county, that I believe this provision has both justice and merit in it; and in view of the fact that when a deposition is taken there will be some provision made for the accused to confront the witnesses against him face to face, have all the advantages of cross-examination which he could have if present at the trial of the case in court, I do not think there is any extreme hardship in it; and it seems to me that if there is a hardship at all that it should be borne by the defendant in this case. It certainly would be a great matter of economy, and it would save the incarceration of witnesses who have committed no crime, and who are consigned to cells, in some instances with felons—for there have been cases here where the penitentiaries were so crowded that the felons were kept in the county jails, and I have known where witnesses have been kept in jail in Custer county with felons, where there was no provision for taking their depositions—and I think the provision is a wise one under the circumstances.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out that section—Section 16, or 17 as it will be re-numbered.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole: Mr. Chairman, when this matter was considered before, it seemed to me that it was a proper provision, but upon reflection I am very much inclined to go with the gentleman from Deer Lodge. I believe that this right to meet the witnesses face to face, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, is a sacred right of the defendant, and that its importance cannot be overestimated. It may be true, sir, that the construction given to it by the gentleman—by meeting the witnesses and having the privilege and opportunity to cross-examine—may be construed to be meeting the witnesses against him face to face; but, sir, there is more involved in that proposition than the mere fact of meeting the witnesses face to face. The defendant, when he is upon trial, charged with crime, is entitled to have the witness brought face to face—to be confronted with him—in order that the jury charged to consider and determine the offense may look into his face and see whether he is testifying truthfully or not. It is not the mere statement, or the language which the party uses that entitles the witness to credence, but it is his hesitation—his halting—the very picture of perjury sometimes depicted upon his countenance—that stamps a witness frequently as a perjurer; so that I say that the constitutional provision guaranteeing to an individual the right to meet the witness face to face and to be confronted with the witnesses against him ought to be broad enough and comprehensive enough in its signification to require that that witness shall appear before the court and before the jury, in order that those who are the only judges of the credibility of the witness may be able to see his manner—his deportment—the feeling, if any, which he manifests in giving his testimony. It is true that it will save some cost and some expense, which in some instances would be a great hardship upon counties, or, possibly, upon the State; but I believe that the great benefit resulting to the defendant himself, to the people who are interested in seeing that there shall be a free, fair and impartial trial—the benefits that will accrue in the interests of justice will more than compensate for any matter of expense.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: It may be advantageous to the accused person to have the jury before whom the case is tried to look the witness in the face; but the old Constitution says that the witness shall meet the accused face to face, and I do not know of any provision that the jury shall. Now then, I would undertake to say that if I were over here on Mount Helena, and were a stranger, and should be so unfortunate as to go down on Main street and witness one of these affrays that sometimes happen here in this town, and a party should be killed in that affray, and I were unable to give security for my appearance in court, it would be a great hardship for me to have to go to jail and be incarcerated, as has been said here, with felons, until such time as the court might get ready to try the case. Now, if a speedy trial could always be assured, and the case would be tried the first term, there might not be much hardship in it; but you know that these cases are continued from day to day and from term to term. And, sir, would it not work detrimentally to the criminal jurisprudence of this State in this way: that if the witnesses themselves think that they will be incarcerated if they give up the knowledge that they know something about a criminal case, why I undertake to say that there are men who are not so patriotic and not so much imbued with the idea of the expression of General Grant on one occasion—"Let no guilty man escape"—but what they will dodge the issue and never let the community know that they have any knowledge about a case; and I am inclined to believe that no better provision than this that we have already passed upon can be had. It sometimes happens that a very good man a long ways from home, leaving a family dependent upon his support, may be so unfortunate as to be a witness to some criminal act—may be confined, as I say, from six months to two years in jail, in order that he may be a witness on the trial, and when the trial comes on the fellow that is accused gets clear and this man has been punished, and held for two years. It strikes me there should be some little innovation upon the wisdom of our fathers. All of these matters grew up in times, it is true, when there were great abuses, and all this progress towards liberty and freedom and fair trials and everything of that kind grew out of the times of oppression and great need; but it seems to me that we have passed that day and are now in such a situation that we can safely trust to the taking of depositions in these cases, and that the old common law idea that the accused should see the face of the witness against him will be subserved when he sees the face of the witness against him in taking his deposition. I understand that this has been adopted in other states, and that it is not a new proposition here in the Territory of Montana; and I, for one, hope that this provision will not be disturbed. You need never go to the expense of keeping your witnesses in jail longer than is necessary to take their depositions, to say nothing about the liberties of your people. You are keeping dozens of men in prison in order that they may appear against some man that is accused, and, as I said before, the accused goes free and the witness is punished for the time he is compelled to stay in jail.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, while I am inclined to leave the discussion of these matters to the gentlemen here who are familiar with propositions of law, yet in this argument made on both sides there are a few ideas that suggest themselves to me. One of these is, that if you allow this section to stand as provided here, I take it you will find that there will be a great deal more of this deposition business than is anticipated. When it is the rule—it is the usual thing that a man who is a creditable, honorable and honest man in any community is usually able to procure sufficient bond to guarantee his appearance in any case that might come under this provision; but if you allow this section to stand as it reads now, there are a great many men who won't exert themselves to secure those bonds, knowing that if they even assert they cannot secure the bonds they can get out of it by having their depositions taken; and there are a great many people who would be reluctant to get people to go on their bonds, knowing that this provision is in the Constitution whereby, if they cannot procure bonds, they can have their depositions taken and so escape any further trouble; and the very class of men whose depositions would be taken under these provisions are the very class of people that the jury and the judge should meet face to face in the court room, because they are usually people without any character, without any standing in society, and usually people who would be apt to prevaricate. For this reason I heartily concur with the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that it is well to strike it out, and not retain it in the Constitution.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I agree with the gentleman who has just taken his seat, as well as the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke and the gentleman from Deer Lodge, that this section should be stricken from the Constitution, and upon the ground that it is unconstitutional—upon the ground that it is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States in that respect. The sixth amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that the defendant shall be confronted with the witnesses against him, and have compulsory process, etc. That section does not mean that the defendant shall be confronted by the witness upon the taking of a deposition but upon the trial; and as has been aptly said by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, it is for the very purpose that when a witness goes upon the witness stand to testify against a person accused of a crime the jury may have the opportunity of observing the deportment, the character and the manner in which the witness testifies before them; the reasonableness or unreasonableness of his story; the manner—whether he hesitates—whether he is a willing or unwilling witness, as the case may be; and I believe, with the gentleman who has just taken his seat, that the majority—and, in fact, a large majority of the witnesses who are compelled to give bonds under these circumstances are of such a character as should be placed under the scrutiny of a jury of twelve men, upon the trial of the case. As a matter of course this may be abused in some cases. I know that in my county there was a witness confined in the jail there for a period of about nine or ten months awaiting the trial for which he was held, and it so happened that the defendant in the meantime died, and thereby beat the case. Nevertheless, I happened to know at the time that that witness was not a material witness in the case, but the Justice of the Peace who held the defendant to answer to the charge before the grand jury took another view of the matter, and I was prosecuting attorney at the time. He was held to appear before the district court, and he was not a material witness in the case. When the session of the district court came around, the defendant, by some hook or crook, got a continuance of the case until the next term. Before the next term, as I say, he died. The testimony of that witness would have been absolutely worthless upon the trial of that case. And I say that, while it may work a hardship in some cases, I do not believe it is in accord with the Constitution of the United States—in Article 6 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States—which I have just referred to. And for that reason, and the reason that the defendant is bound to be confronted by the witness upon the trial of the case which takes place in a court, before a jury of his peers, and not upon the taking of a deposition, I am in favor of striking out the provision. It is very frequently the case that where a deposition is read in court, without having the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witness, the manner in which he testified, that it reads well, and upon its face looks as though he was telling the truth and the whole truth; but when the same witness would be subject to the scrutiny of a jury and a court, and put upon a cross-examination upon the trial, it would be apparent that the witness was fabricating his story from beginning to end; and I am not in favor of permitting the provision to remain in the Constitution, but am in favor of striking it out.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I do not understand that this Article 6 in the Constitution of the United States applies in any way to prosecutions for state offenses; it only applies to proceedings in the federal courts, the same as Article 5 of the Constitution of the United States, which says "No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentation or indictment of a grand jury." That has already been passed upon by this Convention. But none of these sections of the Constitution of the United States apply except where a limitation is placed upon the State itself to make the law. Now, in regard to this particular question, I think it has been ruled in several states, where an examination was had before a committing magistrate or coroner, or justice of the peace, for instance, and that testimony is certified to by the magistrate, that it was admissible in testimony in case of the absence or death of the witness who testified, provided the testimony was given in the presence of the accused. It seems to me that this is a very proper provision in our Constitution. Though, of course, left to the Legislature to carry into effect as it will. The very great hardships imposed upon witnesses in so many cases by reason of being imprisoned because they happen to be deserving, worthy, poor men, but still away from friends who could give the bail required, is sufficient argument in itself in favor of the retention of the clause in the Constitution. It seems to me the injustice arising from a failure to convict a prisoner on account of such testimony would not be a drop in the bucket to the innocent man who would be imprisoned without cause and whose deposition could not be taken unless upon the trial.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I am in favor striking that provision from the Constitution for the reason suggested by the gentleman from Yellowstone, that the witness should be present in court and before the jury. There is not an attorney in the Territory who would not say to me that he would rather have one good witness than the deposition of three witnesses to bring in and read before a jury; and the judge always instructs the jury that they are to gather from the witness on the stand, his manner of testifying, his apparent fairness, his interest in the subject, his apparent intelligence or lack of intelligence, and from all other facts and circumstances surrounding the case and bearing upon the trial, whether or not the witness is worthy of credit, and that they shall give credit accordingly. I say that is the most important part of this proposition. There has been considerable talk about the hardship that comes of incarcerating these poor innocent persons in jail. I have been in the practice for seven years and I have never known of but one instance of persons being confined in a jail for the purpose of securing their testimony, and that was in Gallatin county some five or six years ago, and they were witnesses for the defendant, incarcerated at the instance of the defendant and I want to suggest to the people here who are figuring upon this proposition that there is no serious hardships about it; if a man is a stranger, if he has no means whatever—the bail is seldom more than two or three or four hundred dollars—but if he cannot deposit that, and is unable to furnish the requisite amount of bail, that man is generally in the habit of working day by day for his living, and if he does go to the county jail until the next term of court meets, he draws his pay, three dollars a day, and that is as much as he gets for working, and he is not confined in jail with a felon; I have never known such a case, and I do not believe a gentleman on this floor can cite one. When a man goes to jail for that purpose, charged with no crime whatever, but simply to wait there until the next term of court, I never knew of a sheriff in this Territory that would confine such a man in jail with a felon,—a man that had been sentenced to the penitentiary and retained in that jail for lack of room in the penitentiary. I never knew such a man but had the utmost liberty about the jail; and, in the case of which I speak, they were out upon the street day after day and simply slept there at night, and when they did sleep there, they slept in the room that was provided for them apart from the prison cells entirely, and that was as good a room as I was sleeping in at that time, and perhaps ever will sleep in. I believe, as some of the gentlemen have said, that it is in the line of what we have already adopted. But this is another proposition, as I take it, this is to strike out one of the very safe-guards of the Constitution itself, that an accused person shall be confronted with the witness against him, face to face, in the court room; and in that way, and in that way only, can you secure the fullest rights to the person before a jury on trial for a crime. I hope that section will be stricken out.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Now, Mr. Chairman, while I dislike, very much, to consume the valuable time of this Committee, I think that my friend is a good deal in the condition that the prophet told King Saul he was,—he has become so much interested in this case that he is liable to the accusation that the zeal of his house hath eaten him up. Now, I have known, in Custer county, within the last three or four years, cases where men were held as witnesses, were unable to give the necessary bail for their appearance in court, and were incarcerated in the county jail with felons. That was when the penitentiary at Deer Lodge was so overloaded that they were compelled to employ the authorities of Custer county to keep their felons in that jail. Now, in regard to this hardship that scarcely ever occurs, it occurs to me that it was not very many years ago that a man was traveling through on one of these railroads with his family, to seek his home in the West; he happened to get out at a station, and there he witnessed a murderous assault by one man upon another. He was detained. He had a wife and six little children, and they were going through to Washington. He was compelled to take his family off from the train, and was kept there, and instead of being kept there at three dollars per day, all they were allowed was two dollars a day. If the gentleman will look at the Compiled Statutes, page 403, at Section 102, he will find two dollars a day prescribed by statute. Now, what has occurred may occur again, and it is an abomi-inable hardship to take a man from his home simply because he is a laboring man, and to lock him up in the county jail week after week and month after month to testify in a criminal case, when all the purposes of justice could be answered as well by taking him before a magistrate, in the presence of the state's attorney, or the county attorney, and in the presence of the attorney for the accused, and there take his deposition in the solemn manner, under the security guaranteed by a rigid cross-examination. I have known cases where women were deprived of their liberty in this way. Of course, in the humane county of Park, it may not occur—up in the county of Park, where the Sheriff does not discharge his duty according to the letter of the law, and lets prisoners of this character run at large. But I am now speaking of a county where the law is administered by its officers, and I am speaking of the hardship under the administration of the law as known to the statutes of the Territory. I hope that clause will not be stricken out. I believe that the same justice can be secured to the State and the defendant under the honest administration of that law as under any other, and that every constitutional guarantee will be secured to the accused, and much will be saved to the commonwealth by enacting this as it stands in the report of the Committee.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: As has been said by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, this prohibition or limitation, as found in the amendment to the Constitution, is only a limitation upon the power of the general government; it is a limitation that does not affect the states; and, as is further said, this matter of meeting a witness face to face, it has been held by the courts that where a witness had appeared upon a preliminary examination, and upon cross-examination there by the defendant, and had died or departed from the State, that his deposition taken on the preliminary examination could be introduced in evidence; that that was confronting the defendant face to face. In regard to this matter of having a witness upon the stand, the gentlemen seem to put it all upon the ground that it is necessary in order that they may show that the party is not a prejudiced witness, or something of that kind. Now it is well known, as the gentlemen say here that a deposition does not have the same force and effect as the examination of a witness before a jury, and if there is anybody to be damaged in taking his deposition and having that testimony introduced, I think it is the prosecution and not the defense. The defendant can have every opportunity for cross examining the witness. Now, in order that this theory may be carried out by the gentlemen we turn in and deprive a man of his liberty. That is usually only for the punishment of criminals. It is a right that is sacred. If any man deprives another of his liberty he is generally, under the laws of every state, considered to be guilty of a felony; and here they propose to do this thing in order that a man may be a witness, and that he may appear at the trial; and it is just the same whether he is an immaterial witness or a very material one; he is held there just the same. The gentlemen seem to have a sort of hostility to a man who is found in this country that cannot produce four or five hundred dollars. Now there are a good many of us in this country that were strangers in times past, and even if we were pretty well known we could not have produced two, or three, or four hundred dollars.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Then you would have been willing to work at three dollars a day and get some money, wouldn't you Judge?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Not in jail. No Sir. I never wanted any employment there. You must remember that this is a new country, that people are coming here and are coming here with a view of making their homes, and a great many of them have very little money, and it will be very difficult for them to raise this money. I know a case where a young fellow over here in Deer Lodge county was sent to jail. Here he was a good, hard working young Swede, an honest young fellow; but nobody knew him well enough to go on his bond. And now there is a good deal to be said about this thing in another way—just as has been said here about people traveling. Now I know of a case where Jack Demers, who died here recently, was in Chicago and was robbed there, and he went to some of his friends about trying to do something, and they said that if he made any fuss about the matter, why, it would cost him a good deal; they said "the magistrate will bind you over under very heavy bonds, or you will have to go to jail, and unless you have got friends enough here in Chicago to give these bonds, why you will have to go there and communicate with your friends in Montana; and if you do give bonds and go back to Montana, you will have to come back here for the trial of the case, and when you get here the other party won't be ready for trial." So Jack put his hands in his pocket, and went down and bought his railroad ticket and started for home, and said nothing about it. Robbed in broad daylight, and yet he packed up and quit, and did not stay there, because he could not afford to be a witness. There are a great many cases like that, where men have just kept their mouths shut; and certainly, if I was a stranger, and knew anything about it, I do not care how great a crime, I would just keep my mouth shut. Now I can't conceive that this is a great hardship. I certainly am as lenient towards criminals, I think, as any attorney in the Territory. I want them to be confronted by the witnesses; and it is only, remember, when these witnesses are out of the Territory, when they cannot be brought into the court on a subpoena, that these depositions are to be read—when they are dead or out of the Territory so that they cannot be brought in, then their depositions can be used. Now those are the only cases, and it will not be many cases, even where men are let out on bond, that they will not be here in the country. But the other rule is getting to be quite common; it didn't used to be that way; but now it is getting quite common for a prosecuting officer to ask that the witnesses all give bonds to appear before the grand jury, so that those that cannot give bonds, why, pack them away to the jail. And it may be that they have a great many liberties about the jail; but while they are in jail, a place where it is a disgrace for a man to be; that is one of the facts about it; and there is not any man of fine feelings, any man of character, any man that has a proper regard for the fitness of things, that wants to be confined in a jail. And these things are worthy of consideration. Look not so much at the confronting part of it—having a man before a jury to be cross-examined by the defendant, but look at the witness that is there and subjected to this sort of punishment; look at him and consider his condition awhile; and it seems to me, under these circumstances, we will conclude that it is proper very often that a deposition should be taken.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I have been forty-seven years a practicing lawyer. I never saw a witness confined in jail simply because he was a witness in my life. I never knew any law before that authorized it. In Kentucky, where I have practiced, witnesses are always released upon their own recognizance: If a witness fails to attend upon a subpoena, or in obedience to his recognizance, he is guilty of a contempt of court, and he is then put in jail and required to give bond, with security, for his appearance. And I will say that it does seem to me actually horrible, the idea of putting a perfectly innocent man in jail, not accused of any crime, and kept in there for months, maybe, because he is a poor man, unable to give bail for his appearance; and afterwards it turns out that there was no offense committed at all; and it does seem to me that if there is any way of avoiding that thing we ought to fix it up now; certainly, instead of keeping the witness in jail, let us let him give his deposition, if it is competent, and I am inclined to think it has been so held by courts, where the defendant was present and had an opportunity to cross-examine before the magistrate who took his deposition, that that was a compliance with the law which said that he had a right to be confronted face to face. I know that it has been held by some of the courts; but even if that is not so, do not let us fix a plan by which innocent people can be held in jail. Let us try it anyhow. We are not a court, and let us fix it so that we can let them give their depositions and go. I am not in favor of striking this out. I believe I would vote to amend it so that no witness should ever be imprisoned as a mere witness, but if we provide that his deposition may be taken, and after that he may be released, it seems to me that that is sufficient, and I shall vote for the proposition as it now stands in the Bill of Rights.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow, sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow moves to amend Section 16 by adding thereto the following, "and in the presence of the accused and his counsel."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the same section by inserting before the word "criminal," in the first line, the word "all," so that it will read that "in all criminal prosecutions." Then it will conform to the language used in the amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now arise and report back to the Convention the action taken, with the recommendation that it be adopted by the Convention.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION

Convention called to order by the President.

The President: We will hear the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: The Committee of the Whole have directed me to report in Convention that they have had under consideration Article on Preamble and Bill of Rights, and report the same back with the recommendation that it do pass as amended. I would ask of the Convention a little time, say until to-morrow morning, to report fully.

The President: If there be no objection the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole will be received, and the gentleman from Madison be granted reasonable time in which to make his report.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. Chairman, I move that we go into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the Convention do now resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole for the consideration of General File No. 2, on Military Affairs.

The motion was put, and declared carried.

The President: I will appoint the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order by the Chairman.

The Chairman: We have for our consideration General File No. 2, report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

The Clerk read Section 1 as follows:

Section 1. The militia of the State of Montana shall consist of all able-bodied male citizens of the State between the ages of eighteen (18) and forty-five (45) years inclusive, except such persons as may be exempted by the laws of the State, or of the United States."

Mr. Marion, of Missoula, sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Missoula moves to amend by striking out the word "citizens," in line 1 of Section 1, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "residents."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Marion, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, my objection is simply this. It seems to me that it is unfair to each and every citizen between the age of eighteen and forty-five to be called upon in case of necessity and to leave those men who come here from foreign countries, accumulate wealth here, and claim protection from our government, that they should be left aside and should not be compelled, as well as a citizen, to help defend the country. That is the only reason why I offer the amendment, and I hope it will prevail.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I doubt whether we can do that. I do not think we can make every resident of the Territory perform military duty here. I think, if we should attempt to do that, and impress the citizens of a foreign country, that they could claim the same duty from us, and I am opposed, under those circumstances, to making every resident responsible for military duty. We have residents ourselves in foreign countries that are doing business in England and in France, in South America and in China; and we would not want to establish the rule that those governments should call upon them to perform military duty. I think this might be amended so as to read, "residents who are citizens, or who have declared their intention of becoming such." That might be done. But to say that all residents in the Territory shall be subject to military duty in the State, I doubt our power to compel that, and I should be opposed to it.

Mr. Marion, of Missoula: If you will allow me, I will read from the Constitution of Colorado, where it says, in Section 1, that the militia of the State shall consist of every able-bodied male resident of the State between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, except such persons as may be exempt by the laws of the United States, or of the State.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I do not know what that exemption comprises or comprehends. I am not familiar enough with the laws of the United States to know whether that exempts residents or citizens of foreign countries or not; but, if not, it certainly would be a very unjust provision to adopt in the Constitution of this State. Let us take it home to ourselves. Suppose any of us should be traveling abroad, in foreign countries, and be subject to military duty at the caprice of some recruiting officer, and pressed into service; we would consider it an abridgment of our rights as American citizens, and no doubt our Government would be called upon to protect us. Now we should accord the same rights to people of other countries that we expect to be accorded us, and it certainly would be a very unjust provision, unless this provision which the gentleman quotes is comprehensive enough to exclude the residents or citizens of foreign countries.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, granting that we have the power to make all residents between these ages subject to military duty, whether citizens or not, I doubt very much the practicability of including them. If a resident of this State is not sufficiently interested in the affairs of this State and government to become a citizen, or to declare his intention of becoming a citizen, we do not want him in the militia. There may emergencies arise where the loyalty of the troops would be very much involved, and where the citizens of the State would be the most reliable, and upon them alone we should depend and on that account I think we had better leave it as it stands.

The Chair put the question, and the amendment was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 2, as follows:

"Sec. 2. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the organization, equipment and discipline of the militia, and shall make rules and regulations for the government of the same. The organization shall conform as nearly as practicable to the regulations for the government of the armies of the United States."

There being no amendments to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3, as follows:

"Sec. 3. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for maintaining the militia by appropriations from the treasury of the State."

There being no amendments to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4, as follows:

"Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the safe keeping of the public arms, military records, relics and banners of the State."

There being no amendments to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5, as follows:

"Sec. 5. When the governor shall, with the consent of the Legislative Assembly, be out of the State in time of war at the head of any military force thereof, he shall continue commander-in-chief of all the military forces of the State."

There were no amendments to Section 5.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee arise and report the Article back, with the amendments with the recommendation that it be adopted by the Convention.

The motion was duly seconded.

The Chairman put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

The President: We will hear the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole on General File No. 2.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole direct me to report that it has had under consideration General File No. 2, and that the same is returned to the Convention with the recommendation that it do pass.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of the Committee of the Whole will be received.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, if the Chairman of the Committee on Boundaries is ready to consider that Article, I believe it might be disposed of without debate. I therefore move that the Convention resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 13.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved that the rules be suspended, and that the Convention resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 13.

The President put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clark, in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The matter pending before the Committee of the Whole is Proposition No. 13, Article 1, on Boundaries, introduced by Committee No. 20, on Boundaries, General File No. 11.

The Clerk read Section 1, as follows:

"Section 1. The boundaries of the State of Montana shall be as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point formed by the intersection of the twenty-seventh degree of longitude west from Washington with the forty-fifth degree of north latitude, thence due west on the forty-fifth degree of latitude to a point formed by its intersection with the thirty-fourth degree of longitude west from Washington, thence due south along the thirty-fourth degree of longitude, to a point formed by its intersection with the crest of the Rocky Mountains, thence following the crest of the Rocky Mountains northward to its intersection with the Bitter Root Mountains, thence northward along the crest of the Bitter Root Mountains, to its intersection with the thirty-ninth degree of longitude west from Washington; thence along the thirty-ninth degree of longitude northward to the boundary line of the British possessions; thence eastward along that boundary line to the twenty-seventh degree of longitude west from Washington; thence southward along the twenty-seventh degree of longitude to the place of beginning."

The Chairman: If there be no amendments, the Section will be considered adopted.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: Mr. Chairman, I move that when the Committee arise the Chair be instructed to report Proposition No. 13 back, with the recommendation that it be adopted.

Mr. Muth, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I move that we take up General File No. 3, Proposition No. 5.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: That is the Article on Education, and I hope that that will not be taken up in the absence of the Chairman of the Committee.

Mr. Muth, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I move that we take up Proposition No. 11, General File No. 6.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that that proposition is reported by the Committee on Labor, and I understand that there was a minority report, or some of the members of the Committee who did not sign that report, I think we ought to give time in which to prepare a minority report, if necessary, and I think it would be well to pass that for the present and find out if there is any desire on the part of the Committee to make a minority report.

Mr. Witter, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Labor is to have a meeting today, and I think they themselves want to make some alterations in the report that has already been handed in. I think it would be well to postpone that for the present.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to amend to place that proposition at the foot of the General File.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Colline, of Cascade: I move that we take up the consideration of General File No. 7.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: Will the gentleman from Cascade kindly send to the Chair File No. 7.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire if File No. 7 has been printed.

The Clerk announced that the proposition was reported adversely and not printed.

The Clerk then read as follows:

"Resolution No. 13, Restricting Appropriations by Legislative Assemblies, introduced by Rickards, July 11th, received, read and referred to Committee No. 3, on Legislative Departments: July 15th, reported back adversely, and placed on General File No. 7." Resolved, that the Legislative Assembly shall have no power to make an appropriation for any purpose whatever for a longer period than two years.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move the adoption of the report of the Committee, and that the matter be stricken from the General File.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move that General File No. 8 be taken up.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Resolution No. 12, introduced by Allan R. Joy, relating to Suffrage. July 10th, received, read and referred to Committee No. 2, on Rights of Suffrage. July 16th, reported back with the recommendation that it do not pass, and placed on General File No. 8."

Resolution on Suffrage. Every male citizen of the United States above the age of Twenty-one years, who can read and write the English language, and who has never been convicted of treason or felony, and who shall have resided in this State one year, and in the city, county or district wherein he may offer to vote for six months next prior to any election, and no other person, shall have the right to vote in this State, provided, that nothing herein shall disfranchise any person who was a qualified voter at the time of the adoption of this Constitution.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the Resolution and the rejection of the report of the Committee.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I call for a division of the matter involved in the Resolution.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Then I make the motion that the report of the Committee be rejected.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, if we adopt the Resolution, we reject the report of the Committee, and therefore it is not necessary to make both motions.

The Chairman: I take it that the proper thing to be considered would be the adoption of the Resolution. If that is adopted it would be in effect a rejection of the report of the Committee.

The Clerk read the Resolution.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the Resolution.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move to amend the proposition by striking out the words "six months" and inserting "thirty days in the district," etc.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Cardwell, of Jefferson asked that the report of the Committee be read for the information of the Committee.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I arise to a point of order. We see the inconsistency of placing a matter of this kind on the General File, if anything has the very highest order of precedence it is the report of a Committee of this Convention. The report of the Committee of the Convention upon this subject has been filed, and so has this adverse report. Now, sir, my idea in bringing this up was to strike it from the file. This particular amendment, and a thousand others can be offered, but certainly the Committee will not allow the resolution of any member of the Committee to take precedence of the report of the Committee itself; so that it seems to me that those extraneous matters on this file should be stricken off, and that when we are ready to take up the report of this Committee, these matters can all come up in their proper form.

The Chairman: It is the opinion of the Chair that there is no authority in Committee of the Whole to strike from the General Files any matter that has been placed there by the order of the Convention.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I endorse the views of the gentleman from Cascade on that proposition. The proper way to consider the matter is to consider the report of the Committee, as suggested; the proper way now would be to defer the consideration of this until we consider the report of the Committee, as suggested by the gentleman from Cascade, and I move now, that this Committee defer the consideration of this proposition until the other is considered.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: At the time of the taking up of the consideration of the first resolution that has been rejected, I spoke to the gentleman from Cascade as to the propriety of this proceeding in this Committee. I have some little recollection, but not much, of these matters. It would seem to me that if we are going to discuss that resolution or proposition that is offered here, reject it or otherwise, we will never get through. The only way is to take up on the General File the propositions that have been returned and approved and printed, and to be incorporated as part of the Constitution. Now, sir, at the time of the taking up of any proposition on the General File, or by a committee recommended to the Convention, any gentleman may offer a resolution at that time, and any one has a right to offer an amendment, and the whole should come up together and I submit respectfully that this Committee should consider nothing else except some proposition that has been recommended favorably by a Committee.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. Chairman, I second the amendment of the gentleman from Yellowstone, and would like to have that question put.

The Chairman: What was the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone that was seconded?

Mr. Joy, of Park: Changing the time of residence.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: My idea is that the report of the Committee be adopted and General File No. 8 be stricken from the file, and I make that motion.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that when the Committee arise it report back the subject under consideration with the recommendation that the report of the Committee be adopted, and that the resolution be stricken from the General File.

The Chairman put the question, and a division being called for, the motion was declared carried by a vote of 30 to 15.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Now, Mr. Chairman, I move that when the Committee arise it report to the Convention, and recommend that all resolutions and matters upon the General Files which are not in the nature of a proposition be stricken from the General File.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk has called the attention of the Chair to the fact that there are some resolutions here that have been printed and are on the General File, and wishes to know whether it is intended to include these.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Certainly, they can be brought up at any time; they have no business on the General File.

The Chair put the motion in the amended form, and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: I will call the attention of the gentleman from Cascade to Rule No. 23, which provides that "all propositions and resolutions embracing matters proposed to be incorporated in the Constitution, reported by a standing or special committee, shall be read when reported, and if reported favorably such propositions or resolutions shall be ordered printed, otherwise the printing thereof shall be within the discretion of the Convention, and thereupon the same shall be placed on the General File to be kept by the Clerk, in the order in which they are reported."

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would like to know what that motion embraces. As I understand it, it is to strike off from the file anything not in the nature of a proposition or resolution. Now who is to determine the character of those resolutions already filed, as to whether they contain matter to be embraced in the Constitution? There are a number of them now on file, I understand.

The Chairman: I take it that the President of the Convention should do that, subject to an appeal to the Convention in cases of doubt.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: The question would be upon determining the character of those propositions, whether they were propositions containing matter to be embraced in the Constitution.

The Chairman: The motion which was just adopted, whether desirable or not, is clearly in conflict with the rule that has just been read.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move that we reconsider the proposition that has just been put to the house and carried.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the vote by which it was determined to report to the Convention to strike from the file all resolutions, etc., shall be reconsidered.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I hope that will not be reconsidered. We should have on the General File only reports of committees; if we have anything else upon the File, then the proposition embraced in a resolution may embrace the exact propositions that are in the report of a committee, and thus may be reported upon, or may be acted upon, by the Committee of the Whole before the report of the committee. Now certainly, it seems to be entirely right that the report of the committee should have precedence, and that the weight of its investigations and of its researches should have some consideration in this body. The General File, as I understand it, should be exclusively the report of the committee upon propositions which are to be embodied in the Constitution, and if we add anything else to it it will make the business of the Committee of the Whole very much disjointed and out of order, because we may take up a resolution which provides that a certain thing shall be embodied in the Constitution in a certain way, and possibly pass it, and afterwards take up the report of a committee upon that same particular thing which is different in wording and different, probably, in policy, and we cannot give that due regard to it and to their labor upon it that we should do after having considered it in Committee of the Whole. Now a committee of this house, it seems to me, should not report to the Convention, and the Convention should not authorize a Committee of the Whole to act upon any proposition at all, except something which is reported favorably by a committee; that is what the Committee of the Whole is organized for, and that is the object and purpose of the Committee of the Whole, that is, to fix up, amend and improve propositions that have passed through committees, and that have been introduced by members and have come before it in the usual way. Certainly it is not the object of the Committee of the Whole that it shall act primarily upon a proposition of a member, and it should not be placed upon the File. The proposition of a member should be acted upon by a committee, and the committee should report upon it; but in acting upon it, the Committee of the Whole should act upon that particular matter in connection with the report made by its own committee. If you take up any matter embraced in a resolution, certainly you should take up the committee's report in reference to that particular thing. But it is not fair—it is not in accordance with parliamentary regulations—it is not fair to the committee who have investigated this matter that you should take up a subject matter that has been reported by a committee and not give the time and opportunity to be heard in Committee of the Whole. It seems to me that the intention of the rule is that nothing should be taken up by the Committee of the Whole except matters acted upon by a committee of this body and intended to be embodied in the Constitution. Now I see there is a proposition here—No. 4. The minority report is to be presented, or has been presented; that will come up in its order; it should come up in Committee of the Whole in connection with the report of the Committee. The Committee on Suffrage have reported, and they have also reported an adverse resolution. Now this resolution should not be taken up unless you take up the report of the Committee on Suffrage; and my idea is that this Committee should instruct the Convention that a resolution and a report directly opposed to one another having been considered in Committee, should not be placed upon the General File. It has been referred to the Committee on Towns and Counties; now the Committee on Towns and Counties have not reported yet; they have not yet completed their labors. It would not be fair to that Committee to take up that report, because we would not then have the advice and benefit of their labors in the matter before them. It is the same way with Resolution No. 9. That particular matter has been reported adversely by the committee, but the committee may yet put in something that may cover that case in their report to be hereafter introduced. So that it would not be right, nor would it be in accordance with good business regulations, to bring that up in Committee of the Whole.

The Chairman: If the gentleman from Cascade will allow me for a moment, would it not be a good way in which to get out of the difficulty to move that when the Committee arise that it report the resolution back, with the recommendation to the Convention that the same be considered in connection with the report of the committee?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: My idea is that it should be considered in connection with that, and that the adverse report should be placed in the report of the committee, and they should all be under a general head and under one number. I move that the Committee of the Whole make that recommendation.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that when the Committee arise that it report back this resolution, with the recommendation that the same be considered in connection with the report of the Committee on Suffrage and Election.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: There is a question before the Committee; the question to reconsider is pending.

The Chair then put the question on the motion to reconsider, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would also like to include in Mr. Collins' motion all these considered resolutions to be considered in Committee of the Whole in connection with the proposition to which they belong, or rather in connection with the reports of the committee to which they belong. That would simplify matters and avoid any more rambling discussion of this kind. I move that as an amendment.

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Durfee, of Deer Lodge: It seems to me this would do, with one exception. There is a report here in relation to school lands that was reported favorably by the Committee on Boundaries and Public Lands, and the Committee of the Whole has already passed on that report of the committee, and I do not see how it can be considered. This report of the Committee on Boundaries and Public Lands in relation to school lands cannot be considered in connection with that having been already passed upon.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: That would take it out of the provisions of my motion. If it is considered, of course it would not be reconsidered. My motion pertained to all matters coming up hereafter.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now arise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration sundry propositions, and have directed me to report back certain recommendations, which I will file later in a written report.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole will be received.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would like to ask leave of absence until Monday, at 3 o'clock.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentleman will be excused until Monday, at 3 p. m. I have also a note from the gentleman from Beaverhead (Mr. Knippenberg), in which he states he was obliged to leave, and asks to be excused until Tuesday, at noon. If there be no objection, the gentleman will be excused.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried, and the Convention stood adjourned until ten o'clock, a. m. on Saturday, July 20th, 1889.

Adjourned.

THIRTEENTH DAY.

Saturday, July 20th, 1889.

Convention called to order by the President at 10 a. m.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The gentleman from Choteau, Mr. Brown, desires to be excused until Monday afternoon. If there be no objection, leave of absence will be granted him.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the Journal of the previous day.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. Chairman, I desire to present a petition, with the accompanying letter, by request.

The President: The petition offered by the gentleman from Park county, by request, will be read.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, I would suggest that, as the communication accompanying the petition seems to be very lengthy, that the postscript to the letter only need be read, as I did read that much of it myself, and presume that this communication, being more lengthy than the Convention would care to listen to, in anticipation of that I think he put in the postscript, which will furnish us some guidance for our action.

The President: If there be no objection, the communication will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Canandaigua, New York, July 11, 1889.

"To the Governors and Conventions of the coming new States:

We beg leave to commend to your favor the views of Professor E. Chadwick in regard to the christening of your noble States. Whilst brave pioneers are making these new States he watches, admires and suggests. We believe that the inspiring names he proposes will promote your glory, and gladden the hearts of all patriots."

Prof. Chadwick was born in New Hampshire before that ardent patriot Henry Wilson and near to him. Knowing all our states and territories from the Atlantic to the Pacific, his spirit is stirred within him when he sees so many of the old states named after kings and tyrants, and only one state proposed to be named for an illustrious American and champion for freedom:

(Signed by about twenty names.)

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move that further reading of the communication be dispensed with, and that it be laid on the table.

The President: The gentleman desired to have the postscript read.

The Clerk read:

"N. B. The Professor prays it may please the Hon. Governor, the Convention and your public spirited editors to publish this letter for the consideration of the people, as well as the Convention. Also the endorsement of Gov. Clark and the other eminent men who commend it."

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move that the communication be referred to Col. Searles, of the River Press.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move to amend, that it be referred to the Bitter Root Bugle.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I understand there is a valuable letter accompanying that petition, which is full of information. I move that it be read.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the letter, supposed to contain valuable information, be read.

The Chair put the question, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: The letter I refer to is a private one, and it is probably not in the hands of the Clerk.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I am opposed to reading any private correspondence in this Convention.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, the private letter is not among those papers.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I have read a part of the correspondence; the letter precedes the postscript.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I have read the entire letter, and it is a very interesting communication.

The President: The Clerk will proceed to read the letter.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: Mr. President, there was a motion to reconsider the vote.

Mr. President: Was the motion seconded?

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: Yes sir.

The President: The question now is upon the reconsideration of the vote by which the communication was ordered read.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read as follows:

"To the Governor and the Constitutional Convention of Montana.

"Honored Sirs:

"The great hour almost strikes for launching your magnificent State."

"Please permit humble fellow-citizen to make a few suggestions."

"1. According to national surveys and highest authorities, Montana is far less mountainous and elevated, on the average, than many other States and Territories of the great West."

"2. The mean elevation is only 3950 feet, whilst even the Lakes in the wonderful National Park are 7788 feet, or about twice as high as Montana."

"3. More than half of Montana is on a comparatively low level. Appleton's great Encyclopedia says "nearly three-fifths lie thus low."

"4. Not true to name, "or name not true to the facts, seems to be indelibly written upon the immense Territory of Montana!"

"6. This name is misleading, as it leads even the most intelligent people, if they do not investigate, to "believe a lie!"—that is, to believe that "Montana" is the name of the most mountainous region of North America!"

"7. Whilst "Montana" would thus be, for all time, a most glaring misnomer, another name most fit, true, and patriotic, invites your attention."

"8. This month of July, forever synonymous with Freedom and Independence, almost thunders forth the right name."

"9. Great Washington, destined to stand, evermore, upon the grand northern frontier west of you, giving his name to a new state, re-echoes the thundering demand—"Place me not here alone! Station to the East of me my great Secretary of State! For him I waited 100 years ago.—On him I leaned, Jefferson, that writer of the immortal Declaration.—That purchaser of your own immense territory, and of the many immense States stretching from the Gulf to the vast domain of Canada."

"And Still louder Washington thunders—"Make your great State an imperishable monument to Jefferson! Thus prove to all ages, and to all nations, that the grandest Republic of the world is not ungrateful!"

"Franklin and the Adamases, with the whole army of departed patriots, would join with Washington in appeals from the heavens, saying—"Give not to that magnificent State the misleading name of "Montana." Give it the immortal, historic name of Jefferson."

"11. Lincoln and all the martyrs for Liberty, have their blood crying from the ground, demanding the same thing. Not merely that we name a splendid State for the patriot who penned the Declaration, and who made the Louisiana purchase, but who also penned the ordinance of 1787 for great free territories northwest of the Ohio. The benign power of that ordinance secured a Free Northwest, and gave to our Great Republic the immortal patriots Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, the Harrisons—and universal Freedom!"

The reading of the foregoing was frequently interrupted with applause and laughter.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, I move that the further reading of the communication be dispensed with, and that the communication be referred to the Committee on Boundaries.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I think it would be more appropriate to refer it to the Superintendent of the Insane Asylum.

Mr. Collins' motion was seconded.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move to amend by striking out the words "refer it to the Committee on Boundaries."

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question now is upon dispensing with the further reading of the communication.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson, sent up the following reports:

The President: The reports of the Committee on Labor will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President: Your Committee on Labor have directed me to return Proposition No. 2 to the Convention, as the substance of it has been embodied in the report of the Committee on Labor.

(Signed) BREEN,
Chairman."

The Clerk announced that Proposition No. 2 referred to in the report of the Committee was the proposition introduced by Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow, to prevent convict labor under contract. Received July 10th, and referred to Committee No. 23, on Labor.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee on Labor reports Resolution No. 2, and states that it has been embodied in the general report of the Committee. If there be no objection, this resolution will be stricken from the files.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President: The Committee on Labor have considered Proposition No. 3, and have directed me to report the same back with the recommendation that it do not pass.

(Signed) BREEN,
Chairman.

The Clerk announced that Proposition No. 3 was a proposition introduced by Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow, to prevent the importation of contract labor; received July 11th, read and referred to Committee No. 23, on Labor.

The Clerk read as follows: "Your Committee on Labor, to whom was referred Resolution No. 17, introduced by Field, of Park, have had the same under consideration, and have directed me to report the same back without recommendation."

(Signed) PETER BREEN,
Chairman.

The Clerk announced that Resolution No. 17 was a resolution offered by Mr. Field, of Park, for the protection of discharged employees; received July 11th,—read and referred to Committee No. 23, on Labor.

The President: These reports will be placed on General File, to be considered in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President: The Committee on Labor have had under consideration Proposition No. 7, and have directed me to report the same back to the Convention, with the recommendation that it do not pass. This does not apply to paragraph 4 of section 3, which we recommend be referred to the Committee on City, County and Town Organizations, where it properly belongs."

(Signed) BREEN,
Chairman.

The Clerk announced the Proposition No. 7 was a proposition introduced by Mr. Allen R. Joy, of Park; received July 14th, read and referred to Committee No. 23, on Labor.

The President: The same disposition will be made of this report, if there be no objection.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I suggest that the paragraph mentioned be referred to the Committee on City, County and Town Organizations, as suggested.

The President: If there be no objection, there will be copies made of the paragraph mentioned, and the paragraph referred to the Committee on City, County and Town Organizations.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President: I have been instructed by the Committee on Labor to return Proposition No. 6, and state that it has been embodied in the report of the Committee."

The President: If there be no objection, this will be stricken from the file.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: The Committee on Printing desire to report.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Committee on Printing will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President: Your Committee on Printing, etc., have had under consideration Proposition No. 17, and have carefully examined the same, and find it is correctly printed."

(Signed) C. E. CONRAD,
Chairman.

The President: This report will be received and placed on file, if there be no objection. Are there any other reports of standing Committees?

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: Mr. President, I suggest that the Convention go into Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move that we take a recess of ten minutes, as a distinguished visitor to Montana is in the building, Judge Cooley, of Michigan, who is an authority on Constitutions, and if there is no objection the members would probably like to see him, and I therefore move that we take a recess of ten minutes.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The Convention will take a recess until forty minutes past ten, at which time it will again be called to order.

The Convention was called to order at 10:45.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I would like to submit a report, if not a little out of order.

The President: The Chair has been requested to make the announcement that Rev. R. C. Wylie, District Secretary of the National Reform Association, will preach in the St. Paul's M. E. Church, Sunday evening, Subject: "The Acknowledgment of God in the Constitution." Members of the Convention are invited to attend.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I have the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, which considered General File No. 1.

The President: The report will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President: The Committee of the Whole have had under consideration General File No. 1, on Preamble and Bill of Rights, and have directed me to propose to the Convention certain amendments thereto, and as so amended do recommend its adoption, as follows:

1. Amend the Preamble by striking out, in the printed copy, the words "by virtue," and insert in lieu thereof "in accordance with the provisions."

2. Section 1. Amend same by striking out, in line 2, the word "from," and insert in lieu thereof the word "that".

3. Section 6. Amend same by striking out the word "should", in line 2, and insert in lieu thereof the word "shall."

4. Section 7. Amend by striking out, in line 4, the words "as near as may be."

Section 8. Amend by striking out the entire section and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Sec. 8. Criminal offenses of which justices' courts, and municipal and other courts inferior to the district courts have jurisdiction, shall be prosecuted by complaint. Criminal offenses of which the district courts have jurisdiction shall be prosecuted by information, after examination and commitment by a magistrate, or by leave of the court, or by indictment, without such examination or commitment or without such leave of court. A grand jury shall consist of seven persons, of whom five must concur to find an indictment. A grand jury shall only be drawn and summoned when the district judge shall in his discretion consider it necessary and shall so order."

Section 11: Amend by striking out the words "or retroactive in its operation."

Section 131. That after Section 12 the following be inserted as Section 13, and all the remaining sections be so numbered as to correspond. "Section 13. That the right of any person to keep or bear arms in defense of his own home, person and property, or in aid of the civil power when thereto legally summoned, shall not be called in question, but nothing herein contained shall be held to permit the carrying of concealed weapons."

Amend Section 14 by striking out the same and inserting the following in lieu thereof: "Section 14. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having been first made to or paid into court for the owner."

Amend Section 15 by striking out the same and inserting the following in lieu thereof: Section 15. The use of all water now appropriated or that may hereafter be appropriated for sale, rental, distribution, or other beneficial use, and the right of way over the lands of others for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals and aqueducts necessarily used in connection therewith, as well as the sites for reservoirs necessary for collecting and storing the same, shall be held to be a public use."

Section 16. Amend by inserting after the word "in", and before the word "criminal," the word "all." Also amend by adding to Section 16 the following: "subject to the right of the State to have a change of venue for any of the causes for which the defendant may obtain the same."

Section 17. Amend by adding at the end of the Section the words, "and in the presence of the accused and his counsel."

Section 18. Amend by inserting after the word "law", and before the word "the", as follows: "or if any juror or the judge of the court shall from sickness or other cause become unable to act after the impaneling of the jury."

Amend by striking out Section 23 and instead inserting the following: "Section 23. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all and remain inviolate, but in all civil cases and in all criminal cases not amounting to felony, upon default of appearance or by consent of the parties expressed in such manner as the law may prescribe, a trial by jury may be waived, or a trial had by any less number of jurors than the number provided by law. A jury in justices' courts, both in civil cases and in cases of criminal misdemeanor, shall not consist of more than six persons. In all civil actions two-thirds in number of the jury may render a verdict, and such verdict so rendered shall have the same force and effect as if all of such jury concurred therein."

Strike out Section 25 and insert instead the following: "Section 25. Persons of foreign birth or residence shall have the same right as native born citizens to acquire, purchase, possess, enjoy, convey, transmit and inherit mines and mining property and milling reduction, concentrating, and other works and real property necessary for or connected with the business of mining and treating ores and minerals. Provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to infringe the authority of the United States to provide for the sale or disposition of its mineral and other public lands."

Section 31. Add a Section, to be numbered Section 31, as follows: "Section 31. No armed person or persons, or armed body of men, shall be brought into this State for the preservation of the peace or the suppression of domestic violence, except upon the application of the Legislative Assembly, or of the Governor when the Legislative Assembly cannot be convened."

Respectfully submitted,

['Signed'] CALLAWAY,

Chairman.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention concerning this report?

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the report. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: Mr. President, I have noted on my copy of this Preamble and Bill of Rights one or two amendments which I do not see referred to in the report of the chairman of the Committee of the Whole. In the fourth line of Section 9 as printed, the word "attained" should be "attainted." The other correction is, I think, where the suggestion was made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) in reference to the change of venue in certain cases.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, the amendment of Section 9 was simply a correction of the spelling. That is a matter that belongs to the Committee on Phraseology and Revision. The other amendment that the gentleman suggested was not adopted.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Fergus (Mr. Watson) was adopted by the Committee, which added these words: "subject to the right of a change of venue on the part of the State for the same causes for which the defendant might obtain the same." That was adopted by the Committee.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, would it not be well to allow this report to be printed, with the amendments? It can then be reviewed by the members before its formal adoption by the Convention.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Section 23 was not stricken out.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: If there is no objection I would like to withdraw the report for a few moments.

The President: The gentleman desires to withdraw the report for the present.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I would say to the gentleman from Missoula that this reference to the corrected numbers and not to the printed copy, it does not state that Section 23 was stricken out. The substitute offered for Section 23 was adopted and numbered 23.

The President: Does the Chair understand that the gentleman desires to withdraw his report?

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Yes sir, for the present.

The President: The gentleman from Madison, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, will withdraw the report for the purpose of correction, and will present it again.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade, Chairman of the Committee on Finances of the State, etc., desires to make a report, and if there be no objection his report will be received.

The Clerk read as follows: "To the Hon. President of the Constitutional Convention: Your Committee on Finances of the State, etc., to whom was committed the resolutions mentioned herein, beg leave to report the same as follows: Resolution No. 11, by J. K. Toole, relating to taxation and exemptions therefrom, has been duly considered and acted upon favorably in the report of the Committee. Resolution No. 15, by Luce, relating to license taxes, was discussed before the Committee, who have instructed me to report adversely on the proposition. Resolution No. 20, by Luce, limiting the number of retail liquor dealers, was rejected by the Committee, who deemed the subject matter a more proper article for legislation. They recommend that the resolution be not adopted. Resolution No. 21, by Luce, prohibiting gambling, was rejected as being entirely within the province of the legislative power. The Committee recommend that the resolution do not pass. Resolution

No. 25, by Burleigh, requiring the State to assume county indebtedness was decided upon adversely. The Committee see no reason to justify them in incorporating such a provision in the Constitution.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed T. E. COLLINS, Chairman of Committee.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I shall be under the necessity of moving this body that the report of the Committee be rejected, and that the resolution be adopted by the Convention; and while I do not care to bring the matter up today, I give notice that I will bring it up, if in order, at the next session of this Convention.

The President: The Chair would ask to what resolution the gentleman refers.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I mean the resolution recommending that the State assume the indebtedness of the different counties on coming into the State. It was referred here to the Committee on Finances, or some other committee, on yesterday, and it seems to have been reported adversely.

The President: The Chair would state that this resolution will take its place on the file, and come up in its regular order. Resolution No. 11 will be referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I would like to ask the gentleman what the indebtedness of Custer county is.

Mr. Burleigh: If the gentleman will take the trouble to look at the report he will find it there in dollars and cents. My impression is that the aggregate is a little over two hundred thousands dollars, and deducting the public improvements, it would bring it down to something like one hundred and sixty thousand dollars.

The President: The Chair desires to state that this question is not in order at present.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I think so myself (Laughter).

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I move that when the Convention adjourn at this session, it adjourn to meet on Monday, at 4 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that when the Convention adjourn, it adjourn to meet at 10 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move to amend by making it 2 o'clock. The motion was seconded.

Mr. McDow, of Fergus: I move to amend, that we take a recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The President: The question to fix the time takes precedence of the question to adjourn, hence the motion of the gentleman is not in order.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: How many amendments to the motion have been made, and is an amendment now in order?

The President: There is only one amendment so far—to change the hour from 10 o'clock until 2.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Then I move to substitute by making the hour 9 o'clock on Monday.

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I hope that motion will not prevail. Several of us wish to go East to our homes, and it will be impossible to be here by 9 o'clock. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his motion. It seems to me that 2 o'clock would be the more appropriate hour.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, there are several of us who want to go East very badly but we cannot get there, and I, for one, want to proceed with the business of this Convention and get through with it. If the gentleman can go home and get back in two days, he is favored, but there are those who are not so happily situated, of whom I am one, and we want to get through with the business.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I agree with the remarks of the gentleman from Park. My place of business being situated as it is I am unable to go away and get back again in less than five days, and I am in favor of having the work of the Convention expedited as much as possible.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Park, and the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon the amendment to fix the hour at 2 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend the motion now before the house by expunging the word "2" and inserting therein the word "10."

The President: The gentleman's motion is out of order. The regular time, as fixed by the rules, is 10 o'clock.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I suggest that we can oblige a great many gentlemen who wish to go home to spend Sunday, and if we choose we can hold a night session on Monday night. I suggest that by unanimous consent we do that—that is, make up the time in the evening. It is a matter of indifference to me personally.

Mr. McAdow: I move that we give the gentlemen permission to go home; I do not see why we should stop the business of the Convention.

The Chair put the question on the amendment to make the hour 2 o'clock on Monday, and a division being called for, the motion was declared carried.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison, sent up the report of the Committee of the Whole, properly amended.

The President: The Clerk will read that portion that is corrected by the Chairman of the Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: "Section 16. Amend by inserting after the word 'in,' before the word 'criminal', the word 'all'. Also amend by adding to Section 16 the following: 'subject to the right of the State to have a change of venue for any of the causes for which the defendant may obtain the same.'"

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention concerning the report of the Committee of the Whole which considered General File No. 1.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move its adoption.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, do I understand that this is the final passage?

The President: No sir, it has to go upon its final passage and be adopted section by section, by ayes and noes.

Mr. Dixon, of Suyer Bow: I would like to inquire whether the report is now open for amendment.

The President: Not until it comes before the Convention on its final passage. This is simply the report of the Committee.

The Chair put the question upon the adoption of the report of the Committee, and the same was declared carried.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention as to having this report printed, with the amendments?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, moved that the report of the Committee of the Whole be printed.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: Should not this all go to the Engrossing Clerk?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: No, it goes to the head of the house; it has not been passed yet.

The President: The question before the Convention is upon the motion of the gentleman to have the report printed as amended.

Mr. Collins: I wish to add to that motion, with the consent of the Convention, that it be referred to the Committee on Engrossing and Enrolling, and then put in the hands of the Committee for printing.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, it rather seems to me, for the purpose of expediting business, that the better way would be to bring this up before the Convention and get through with whatever amendments we have before it is engrossed or printed. I think the better way would be for the Convention to pass upon whatever amendments we desire to make before engrossing.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, as I understand the motion, it is now to refer to the Enrolling and Engrossing Committee with instructions to engross and print. Now that Committee and the printing Committee are two separate and distinct committees. It seems to me that it should go to the engrossing Committee and then be referred back here, properly engrossed, and then sent to the printing Committee; but it does not seem to me desirable to print these matters anyway, and at any rate not until they are acted upon in Convention.

The President: Does the gentleman offer that as a motion to amend?

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I simply suggest that it should go to the Enrolling Committee, without any instructions as to the matter of printing.

Mr. Cohns, of Cascade: That was my intention—to refer to the Engrossing Committee and then have it referred back.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: It seems to me that the proper place for all that to go is to the Engrossing Clerk. I do not think the Printing Committee have anything to do with it. It seems to me that the committee that has been selected for that purpose should do the engrossing.

The President: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, that the report of the Committee of the Whole, having under consideration General File No. 1, be referred to the Engrossing Committee to be engrossed.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Mr. President, I am not a very good parliamentarian, nor do I understand these tactics very well, but I would like to know the benefit of sending this report to the Engrossing Committee. As I understand it, that Committee was for the engrossing of bills after they have been passed. I cannot see why the Printing Committee cannot correct this and put in all these amendments, and have it printed.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. President, let us save three or four days' time now by referring this to the Printing Committee, and have it come back here by Monday morning, and then it can go to the Enrolling Committee, and afterwards come up for final passage.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend, that the report go to the Printing Committee, to have it printed, with the amendments, and then that it take its place at the head of the house calendar.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I am not very familiar with the proceedings in these matters myself, but it occurs to me that we are establishing rather a bad precedent, and one that is rather expensive and dilatory as well. Now this report may be amended when it comes up for final passage. It has been printed once and reported. Why not bring it up in its regular order, and when it is agreed to in Convention, then let us have it printed; but if we are going to print every article two or three times over, why it will incur an unnecessary expense, and it strikes me there will be a good deal of delay.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move to amend by putting this proposition on its final passage at this time.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Then I withdraw my motion.

The President: The motion made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, to refer to the Engrossing Committee, is withdrawn. The question now before the Convention is upon the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole), that this Preamble and Bill of Rights be put upon its final passage.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I desire to offer an amendment, that it be read by sections.

The President: I would say to the gentleman that the rules provide for that.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole), and the same was declared carried.

The President: File No. 1 will now be read by section. It will be read first as reported by the Committee, and then the amendments to each section.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I think it should be read as taken from the hands of the Committee of the Whole and as amended, and without any regard to the printed form.

The President: If that is the sense of the Convention, the Clerk will proceed to read the sections as amended.

The Clerk read the Preamble.

The President: The Chair would state that this will be read now as amended, by sections, and it is subject to amendment again; but if there be no amendments to be offered, we will pass over the Article section by section, consecutively, until the whole is read, and then a vote may be taken upon the whole file as amended.

Mr. Aiken, of Silver Bow: My understanding was that when this was passed there was an amendment in the first line, as follows: "We, the people of the Territory of Montana," instead of "We, the people of Montana."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: That was not adopted.

Mr. Schmidt, of Silver Bow: I move to strike out the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth words.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers the following amendment to the Preamble: strike out from the sixth to the fourteenth words, on the first line. The words proposed to be stricken out are as follows, "to Almighty God for the blessings of liberty." The Preamble as amended would read, "We, the people of Montana, in order to secure the advantages of a state government," etc.

The motion was seconded.

The ayes and noes were called for.

The Clerk called the roll down to Mr. Robinson's name. Mr. Robinson, though present, took no notice of the call, whereupon the Clerk repeated his name several times.

The President asked if the gentleman desired to be excused from voting. Mr. Robinson did not respond.

The Clerk proceeded with the call of the roll, many of the members being absent.

Mr. Aiken, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move the call of the house.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Sergeant at Arms endeavored to secure the attendance of the members, but without success.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I move that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with; all the gentlemen absent have gone home.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared lost.

The President: The Clerk will continue the call of the roll.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I arise to a point of order, to inquire whether any further proceedings can be had in this Convention until the call of the house.

The President: There is no motion in order except a motion to adjourn.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kohrs, of Deer Lodge: Before the adjournment of the house, I would like leave of absence until Wednesday.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I desire to be excused until 3 o'clock on Monday.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentlemen will be excused.

The Chair put the question on the motion to adjourn, and the same was declared carried, and the Convention adjourned until Monday, July 22nd, 1889.

Adjourned.

FOURTEENTH DAY. Monday, July 22nd, 1889.

The Convention was called to order by the President at 2 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Messrs. Graves, Knippenberg and Gaylord desire to be excused until tomorrow Tuesday, and Mr. Hammond, of Jefferson, to be excused until Thursday. If there be no objection these gentlemen will be excused.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Durfee desired leave of absence for today.

The President: If there be no objection, Mr. Durfee will be granted leave of absence.

Mr. Rotwitt, of Meagher, asked leave of absence for Mr. Kanouse.

The President: If there be no objection Mr. Kanouse will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the Journal of the thirteenth day.

The President: If there be no corrections, the Journal of the thirteenth day will be approved.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: Mr. President, I desire to make a report.

The President: The report of the Committee on Printing will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President: Your Committee on Printing, etc., to whom was referred Propositions Nos. 18, 19, 21 and 22, with instructions to print, beg leave to report that they have compared the printed copies with the original and find them correctly printed, with the exception of Proposition No. 21, which has been corrected by pen.

(Signed) CONRAD, Chairman.

The President read the order of business.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move that the Preamble of File No. 1 be made the special order for next Thursday morning, as a number of gentlemen are absent.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared lost.

The President: File No. 1, as reported back from the Committee of the Whole, with the amendments adopted, has been engrossed. The Clerk will read the same.

The Clerk read the Preamble.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of the Preamble.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I understand the amendment of Mr. Dixon has not yet been disposed of. I believe the vote was not announced. The Clerk will read the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The Clerk read as follows: "Strike out all of Preamble and insert instead "We, the people of Montana, do ordain and establish this Constitution."

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, I would like to ask what the minutes of the Convention show in regard to the action taken on this Amendment.

The President: The minutes show that the question was put to the Convention, but the result has never been announced. The Convention adjourned before the proceedings were completed.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I understand that the Convention is now under the head of unfinished business. It seems to me, that in view of the fact that a great many of the members are absent, some of them perhaps unavoidably, and several who have been excused, that perhaps it is not best for the Convention to take up and determine this matter now. There is plenty of work that can be done in the Committee of the Whole, and I move, as an amendment, if it be in order, that the order of business—unfinished business—be now dispensed with, and that the Convention now resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole for the consideration of other business. I believe that it is nothing more than just that a great many who are absent should be allowed to vote on the Preamble. In view of the fact that we have some other business in the Committee of the Whole, it is really not necessary that we should take final action at this time.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: It seems to me, that inasmuch as the vote has been reached upon the substitute of Judge Dixon, that it should be announced.

The President: There has been no second to the motion I believe. This matter has now come before the Convention anew. I would state to the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) that his motion is not in order unless by unanimous consent the Convention desires to entertain it.

The Clerk read the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Inasmuch as I was absent on Friday afternoon and during Saturday, I would like to ask for information, is this Proposition No. 1 up for final passage?

The President: Yes, sir.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Would it not be in order to postpone, and allow this matter to be made the order for a certain hour?

The President: The Chair would state to the gentleman that a motion to that effect has already been entertained and lost.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: It does seem to me, if I am in order, noticing the large number that are absent, that it would be manifestly unjust for us to proceed to a final disposition of this bill now before us; and it seems to me there ought to be a way out by which we can accommodate a large number of the absent members, whom I know desire to cast their vote on the final adoption or rejection of the matter now before us.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: It seems to me, Mr. President, that inasmuch as the ayes and noes were called on Saturday, that the vote upon that question should be announced, so as to give some one who voted in the affirmative, if they desire an opportunity, to reconsider. The ayes and noes were called upon the adoption of Judge Dixon's substitute, and I would like to have the result announced, so as to dispose of it. So far as expecting the members to be here at all times for the expeditious working of the business of the Convention, I have abandoned all idea of it. We have made up our minds to go on—those who want to remain here—and complete the business of this Convention.

The President: The Chair would state that the Convention adjourned without the vote being announced, and the roll would have to be called again.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: Was not this Convention working under a call of the house when we adjourned?

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: The adjournment does away with the call.

The President: I would state to the gentleman from Beaverhead that the question entertained and passed upon by the Convention was to make this a special order. I would say to the gentleman further, that a motion to postpone to a day certain would be in order.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: In view of the large number that are absent, as I said awhile ago, who, I know, want a voice in the settlement of this matter—and I think their preference should be considered—I move the postponement of this bill now before us—General File No. 1, I think it is called—until the hour of ten o'clock tomorrow.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend that in this way, that we postpone to ten o'clock tomorrow, in the meantime the Printing Committee be instructed to have this Bill printed and on the tables of the members. There are very important matters in this Bill of Rights, the most important that will come before the Convention; the matter in relation to grand juries and the imprisonment of witnesses, and several other things I have not time to enumerate; and I think it is very unwise for the Convention to act upon it without each member having the language of the Bill before him. The engrossment amounts to nothing. The members cannot examine critically the language of the engrossed bill. Therefore I would move, as an amendment that it not only be postponed until tomorrow, but that in the meantime it be printed, under the direction of the Printing Committee, and laid on the tables of the members.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I will accept that amendment.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move to amend that it be referred to the Committee on Engrossment for report, before printing.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: It has been engrossed already.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: But there has been no report made.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I will accept my amendment that will put this matter upon the desks of the members of the Convention; it will be a mere expense of ten dollars perhaps; but I will not accept anything that will delay it. I want this bill printed at the first moment.

The President: Does the Chair understand that the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke accepts the amendment offered by the gentleman from Madison?

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I will accept it, yes sir.

The President: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, which has been amended, and the amendment accepted, that it be referred to the Engrossing Committee to be reported upon.

The Chair put the question on the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: Did the Chair understand the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to include the printing of the report?

Mr. Carpenter: Yes sir,—that it be printed by the Printing Committee as early as possible.

The President: It is moved and seconded, that upon the return of this Bill No. 1 from the Engrossing Committee, it be ordered to be printed.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: The motion is out of order. It certainly is now in the hands of the Engrossing Committee, and is beyond the power of the Convention until that Committee reports.

The President: The point of order is well taken.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I ask leave to make a report as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole on General File No. 11.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole on General File No. 11 will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President: Your Committee of the Whole, to whom was referred the General File for consideration, beg leave to report as follows. The Committee has had under consideration General File No. 11, Proposition No. 13, on Boundaries, and return the same with the recommendation that it do pass. The Committee has also considered general File No. 7, Resolution No. 13 restricting appropriations by Legislative Assembly, and return the same with the recommendation that it do not pass. The Committee further recommends that General File No. 8, Resolution No. 12, on Suffrage, and all minor resolutions of like nature, be hereafter considered in Committee of the Whole in connection with the main report of the Committee to which such resolutions properly appertain.

(Signed) JOSEPH K. TOOLE,

Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the report. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I now move that the proposition embodied in that report and reported favorably be now placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Article I. Boundaries. Section 1. The boundaries of the State of Montana shall be as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point formed by the intersection of the twenty-seventh degree of longitude west from Washington with the forty-fifth degree of north latitude, thence due west on the forty-fifth degree of latitude to a point formed by its intersection with the thirty-fourth degree of longitude west from Washington, thence due south along the thirty-fourth degree of longitude to a point formed by its intersection with the crest of the Rocky Mountains, thence following the crest of the Rocky mountains northward to its intersection with the Bitter Root Mountains; thence northward along the crest of the Bitter Root mountains, to its intersection with the thirty-ninth degree of longitude west from Washington; thence along the thirty-ninth degree of longitude northward to the boundary line of the British possessions; thence eastward along that boundary line to the twenty-seventh degree of longitude west from Washington; thence southward along the twenty-seventh degree of longitude to the place of beginning."

The President: As many as are in favor of the Article as read being adopted and becoming a part of the Constitution, will say aye as their names are called.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote was as follows: Ayes—Aiken, Rickford, Brazleton, Breen, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gillette, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyce, Kennedy, Knowles, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marion, Marshall, Mayger, Middleton, Mitchell, Mulh, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rotwill, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, J. K. Toole, J. R. Toole, Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President; total, 57. Nays, none. Absent: Browne, Collins, Cooper, Durfee, Gaylord, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Joy, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Kohrs, McAdow, Myers, Webster; 18.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President: I move that the Article on Boundaries take its place in the Constitution after the Bill of Rights, or before the Bill of Rights and after the Preamble.

The President: Do I understand the gentleman's motion is that the Article on Boundaries shall be inserted immediately after the Preamble?

Mr. Maginnis: Yes sir.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I do not know whether or not it would be proper to have these things referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology?

Mr. Maginnis: I would move, then, to refer to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Do I understand there is a motion before the house?

The President: There is a motion to refer to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology. (To Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Does the gentleman mean to withdraw his motion in regard to placing this Article?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Yes sir.

The President: The question is then upon the reference of the Article to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move that General File No. 2, Article on Military Affairs, which has been reported upon favorably, be now placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Proposition No. 9. General File No. 2. Report of Committee on Military Affairs. Section 1. The militia of the State of Montana shall consist of all able bodied male citizens of the State between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years inclusive, except such persons as may be exempted by the laws of the State or of the United States."

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I wish to offer an amendment to that section.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers to amend Section 1 of General File No. 2, by inserting the following after the word "citizens," in the first line, "and those who have declared their intention to become citizens."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 2, as follows: "Sec. 2. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the organization, equipment and discipline of the militia, and shall make rules and regulations for the government of the same. The organization shall conform as nearly as practicable to the regulations for the government of the armies of the United States."

There being no amendments to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3 as follows: "Sec. 3. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for maintaining the militia by appropriations from the treasury of the State."

There being no amendments to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4 as follows: "Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the safe keeping of the public arms, military records, relics and banners of the State."

There being no amendments to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5, as follows: "Sec. 5. When the Governor shall, with the consent of the Legislative Assembly, be out of the state in time of war at the head of any military force thereof, he shall continue commander-in-chief of all the military forces of the State."

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I desire to make an inquiry as to this last section. It provides that when the Governor is absent from the State he shall still be at the head of the military forces thereof. Is there any provision providing that he shall be at the head of the military power of the State?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: It is in the executive department of the constitution.

The President: File No. 2, on Military Affairs, will now be put upon its final passage. The ayes and noes will be entered upon the Journal.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I desire to offer an amendment, to be added as Section 6.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers the following amendment: "Sec. 6. That the militia of the State shall not be called out except in case of eminent public danger, or upon urgent necessity, in aid of the civil authorities in the enforcement of process issued from some court of competent jurisdiction."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I think that that provision would be what I might term unconstitutional. The militia may be called out by order of the President of the United States. I would like to have the gentleman from Deer Lodge explain what he means by the words "except by virtue of some judicial authority or in aid of the civil authorities."

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Before the gentleman explains, I would like to mention one other matter. As I understand the section as read, it would also prohibit the Governor from calling out the militia for an annual encampment, or for drill purposes, for a week, or that matter. Will the gentleman also explain that as he answers Judge Knowles' query?

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: And I should also like to have the gentleman explain who is to decide what "eminent danger" is.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: It seems to me that there is one other expression there, and that is the expression "upon urgent necessity." Who is to be the judge of that? It seems to me that if you should put a provision like that in there, some one ought to be the judge of what is "eminent danger" or "urgent necessity." I am not a lawyer, nor the son of a lawyer, but it seems to me that it would be a lame way of putting it. I would like to hear from the gentleman as to who, in his judgment, would sit in judgment upon the "eminent necessity" of calling out the militia.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, in answer to the queries of the gentlemen I would suggest to the Convention that it is a proposition which is rather unusual in state constitutions. It is a declaration in the Constitution of the will and intent of the people of the State as to when the state militia shall be called out. First, in answer to the query of the gentleman from Silver Bow, I would advise him that my understanding of the law is simply this, that whenever it is necessary upon the call of the sheriff of a county. It is the usual course to be taken, and a proper provision should be made for that by the Legislature of the State. And it is the usual course, that wherever the militia of the State is to be called into requisition to aid the civil authorities in the enforcement of process issued from the courts, it is done by an appeal to the Governor of the State, or on representation that there is resistance to the execution of civil process. Upon that call, upon that representation being made, the Governor, as the chief executive officer of the State, is empowered then to call out a sufficient number of the militia to aid the sheriff as a posse to enforce the process of the courts of the State. That I have always understood was the process whereby the militia of the State was reached, and the proper one to be reached to aid the officers in the enforcement of the processes of the courts of the State. That is what that part of it is intended for. Then the other part of the section is intended as an expression of opinion on the part of the State, that the militia should not be called out except in cases of this urgent necessity. The object of that is to guard against the calling out of the militia of the State on every silly and foolish pretext that might be devised and gotten up by parties who are extremely anxious to make a display, or where parties in different remote parts of the State may urge the necessity of the militia to suppress Indian depredations, which, as we have seen time and again, have turned out to be utterly and entirely false.

If a system of that kind were tolerated it would be a very easy thing to get up a scare, and without sufficient cause or reason to call out the militia of the State and involve the State in hundreds of thousands of dollars of debt in thus calling out the militia and sending them to different parts of the State. And this is intended as an expression and direction, which I have frequently met with in constitutions as to calling out the militia of the state, that it should only be done in cases of urgent necessity. So far as the matter of urgent necessity is concerned, perhaps it would be a difficult matter to leave it in the hands of the governor to determine or in the hands of any tribunal to say in what cases there would be sufficient exigency for calling out the militia. It would be impossible to establish any mathematical rule by which the necessity of it would be determined. But this is only an expression in the Constitution that the militia shall be called out only in these special cases. I am not sure, Sir, but there should have been placed there the disjunctive "or"—"or in the enforcement of process," etc. The amendment was hastily drawn, but I desire to get it before the Convention, and think it is a material proposition for the Convention to give some expression to. It reads, "that the militia of the State shall not be called out except in case of eminent public danger or upon urgent necessity, or in aid of the civil authorities in the enforcement of process issued from some court of competent jurisdiction." There was one proposition suggested by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County, that it would not be proper to prevent the militia from parading if they desire. The objection to this is that they should not be called into active service. So far as the militia of the State being called out to parade, and to march around and have a good time among themselves, or have a display, no one can object to it while it does not cost the State anything. It is only these propositions that are likely to cost the state some money that it is intended to reach. I presume I will be allowed to correct my motion?

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman from Deer Lodge will be allowed to correct his motion.

Mr. Robinson: I have just made a correction in it in conformity with the suggestion I made.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I will say, in defense of the Military Committee, that we found no such provision in the constitution of any of the states. We make the Governor Commander-in-chief of the militia, and we must give him some discretion. Wisdom will not die with this body, nor will civilization fail when we are gone. If we propose to make a government for the people of Montana, and if they are fit for self-government, they will, in all probability, be able to maintain and perpetuate it; and I undertake to say that the verdict of the voters of the State upon any Governor who would wantonly and maliciously call out the militia and put the people of the State to expense, and subject himself to the ridicule of the press and the good sense of the people to whom we propose to submit the maintenance of the Government, would be quite a sufficient safeguard against it; and I hope the resolution will be voted down.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I think, if this amendment is adopted, it will be necessary to adopt another amendment providing the cases in which the Governor shall call out the troops. It is purely a matter for the Legislature to act upon. I think if the gentleman of the Convention desires to adopt this amendment that it will certainly follow that we must adopt another amendment providing when and for what purpose the Governor shall call out the militia. I think the report of the committee should be adopted just as it is, without the adoption of any other section.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It appears to me, from the reading of Section 2 of the file as it now stands, it shows the intention to leave the matter entirely with the Legislature, where it belongs. Reading "Section 2. The Legislature shall provide by law for the organization, equipment and discipline of the militia, and shall make rules and regulations for the government of the same."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The whole of the military and naval power of the United States is based upon those words.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: In the Constitution all that is necessary for us to do, all that is necessary to be done, and all that should be done, is to declare what kind of persons shall be subject to military duty, which is done here in Section 1, and who shall be commander-in-chief of the militia. That is done here in the last section. Now, then, to add the proposed amendment, to leave the matter in such a shape that some one-horse justice of the peace would have the power to determine what was "eminent danger," instead of leaving it to the executive of the state, seems to me a proposition that savors of absurdity. I think the article is sufficient and ample as it stands.

The President: The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, that the militia of the state shall not be called into service except in case of eminent public danger or of urgent necessity.

or in aid of the civil authorities in the enforcement of process issued from some court of competent jurisdiction.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon File No. 2, of Military Affairs. As many as are in favor of the adoption of the article will, when their names are called, say "aye."

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I call for the reading of Section No. 1, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows: "Section 1. The militia of the State of Montana shall consist of all able-bodied male citizens, and those who have declared their intention to become citizens of the State, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, inclusive, except such persons as may be exempted by the laws of the State or of the United States."

Mr. Luce: There is no such thing as a declaration of a person to become a citizen of a state. It should read, "those who have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States and who reside within the State." It is meaningless as it is.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I hardly think it reads that way. I think that the inference I would have is that it means a citizen of the United States.

The Clerk re-read the section.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President: It will be seen that this provision will hinge upon whatever qualification that is made in the article on Suffrage and Qualifications. If that article shall go on and declare that the citizens of this state—and those who are qualified shall be those who are citizens of the United States—shall vote, why it will be one way; and if it says "those who are citizens of the United States, or those who have declared themselves to become such," it would take them all in.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I move to re-consider the vote by which this amendment was adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The question recurs now upon the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Reek).

The Clerk read Mr. Reek's amendment.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention concerning this amendment?

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: It seems to me that this is the amendment just passed upon.

The President: It was adopted by the vote of the Convention, but it has been moved to re-consider, and the motion to re-consider has been carried.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I wish to offer an amendment to that. I wish to have it so that it will read, the militia of the United States shall consist of all able-bodied citizens of the United States.

The President: Will the gentleman from Deer Lodge accept the amendment?

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: Yes sir.

The President: The Chair desires to ask the gentleman from Silver Bow if this amendment is intended to include the whole section.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Yes.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read as amended.

The Clerk read as follows: "Substitute for Section 1.

Section 1. The militia of the State of Montana shall consist of all able-bodied male citizens of the State and those who have declared their intentions to become citizens of the United States, residing in the State, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years inclusive, except such persons as may be exempt by the laws of the State or of the United States."

The President: What is your pleasure?

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, it seems to me that any reference to any amendment here is useless. We have already declared in Proposition 14 who citizens of the State are. We have already declared that he shall be a citizen of the United States; he shall have resided in the State one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote. We declare there who a citizen of the State is. Now, what is the use of amending it?

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, what right has any State to declare any man subject to its military laws unless he is a citizen of the United States?

The President: There is no motion before the house.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I move the amendment be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: The Military Committee have simply declared what citizens of the State shall be subject to its military duty, and in another article of the Constitution is is defined what they shall do. I hope the article will stand.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: In accordance with what the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke has just said, I do not see how the State of Montana can call into service one who is an alien, although he has determined in his own mind to become a citizen of the United States. There is another objection raised which let me submit to the gentleman from Silver Bow. Every man, woman and child born within the jurisdiction of the United States is a citizen. This limitation is between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years. Now, he provides in that that all male citizens shall be subject to military duty between those ages; but his amendment is in reference to those who may declare their intention to become citizens. Now, suppose, sir, that a woman, as sometimes happens in this country, declares her intention to become a citizen? I hardly think that would then be the correct thing.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, I think the bill as it reported from the committee on military affairs is just exactly right, and I do not believe that any amendment would benefit it, but rather injure it. It seems to me it should be adopted just as it came from the hands of the committee.

Mr. Merriam, of Missoula: I desire to offer an amendment to the section.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula desires to offer a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I have no doubt but that the State of Montana may have authority to call out—interrupted.

The President: The Chair would state to the gentleman from Silver Bow that there is an amendment now offered.

The Clerk read the substitute for section 1 offered by the gentleman from Missoula [Mr. Merriam] as follows: "All able-bodied male inhabitants of this State between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years who are citizens of the United States, or who have declared their intention to become such citizens, shall be liable to military duty in this State."

Mr. Merriam, of Missoula: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The President stated to motion.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I am not sure that that changes the meaning of the amendment that I offered. It seems that all residents, who are citizens of the United States, or who have declared their intention to become such, shall be subject to military duty; and as I understand, the committee upon the subject of citizenship will report every person who is a citizen of the United States to be a citizen of the State. Now, my object in having persons subject to military duty who have simply declared their intention to become citizens of the United States and who reside in the State, is, that we have quite a large population of that kind, and the further fact that where they have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States and are residing with us, they are identified with us; they are supposed to have the same interest in enforcing the law that we have.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to ask the gentleman right here, would he then consider it right to disfranchise those people, or does he intend that the right of suffrage should go with the liability to military duty?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I do not understand that the right of suffrage should go with the liability to do military duty. Male suffrage is based upon the protection of rights that everybody, who is subject to law, should have some voice in enacting and in saying what those laws shall be—not based upon the liability to do military duty. There are a great many of us who are not liable to do military duty that yet have the right to military duty. All parties over the age of forty-five can vote, but they are not liable to military duty. There are certain sections of the country here in which there are quite a large number of persons who reside here who have property here, and who have simply declared their intention to become citizens, and notably in the section in Missoula where the gentleman who offers this substitute, comes from; and there will come times when it would be very proper and very convenient to have those persons able to perform military duty, and to be called out to do military duty. I am not unmindful of the fact that persons who have simply declared their intention to become citizens of the United States have done gallant fighting for the Government of the United States, and will do gallant fighting for the preservation of the law and order of this territory if called upon to do it, and I am not in favor of excluding them from performing military duty.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, it appears to me that the question of suffrage has nothing to do with the objection to or rejection of this section. Now, this section provides, and all amendments thereto provide, that all citizens who are over the age of eighteen and under the age of forty-five, shall be subject to military duty. Now, those young men who are over the age of eighteen, and not of the age of twenty-one, are made subject to military duty, and yet they cannot vote; and if you say that because a man cannot vote therefore he should not be subject to military duty, you are neither making those under twenty-one subject to military duty, nor those who are over forty-five. You should not allow them to vote when not subject to military duty. But I do not think one has anything to do with the other. Now, so far as those people who have declared their intention to become citizens but have not carried that intention into effect, is concerned, they have property and families in Montana; they have their property and the lives of themselves and their families to protect, and they are just as much interested in repelling an invasion of any hostile force or the enforcement of the law, as long as their lives and property are protected by the law, as anyone else; it makes no difference whether they vote or not. The object of calling out the military force is for the purpose of protecting the lives and property of people, whether they vote or not; and therefore all people who are residents of Montana should be subject to military duty, for the very reason that they are called out to protect their homes, their lives and their property. And there is no reason why anyone who has become naturalized should not fight for the homes and property of the commonwealth. It appears to me, Mr. President, that it is eminently proper that every able-bodied male resident, whether he is a citizen of the United States or not, if he resides within the territory of Montana, that he should be subject to military duty as long as he is protected by the law. If he were not protected by the law, then I would say that he had no interest in enforcing the law; but so long as he is protected by the law it is his right and duty to enforce that law; and therefore I think they should be made subject to military duty.

Mr. Merriam, of Missoula: My object in offering this amendment as a substitute is simply to try to get every inhabitant of the country to fight for the country in case of necessity. Let him be a citizen, a full citizen, or a man who has declared his intention to become such, it makes no difference; or even if a man comes into the country and accumulates wealth, owns property, and individual interests; and is protected by our government, I claim also that those men should be called upon in case of necessity to defend the country. But nevertheless this substitute reads "the gentleman read the substitute", and I say that it is proper. You will notice in our statutes that all men who have declared their intention to become citizens have a right to vote. There was some difficulty in the Legislature about that, and I remember well also that my good friend, Judge Knowles, went to work in 1872 and called a special term of Court, for the purpose of giving those men who had declared their intention to become citizens an opportunity to take out their papers. I was one of them myself. Every man who has declared his intention has a right to vote, and I do not see why if a man has a right to exercise all the privileges of citizenship, he should not be called upon in case of necessity to fight for the country. I hope this substitute will pass.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: That's exactly the point here, as the gentleman has argued. If he has a right to vote then he is liable to be called upon for military duty. There is a difference of opinion in this territory as to whether a man can come into the territory and in three months become a full-fledged voter. Now I do not know whether I am in favor of that or not, and I say that we might as well either defer it until we have decided that, or take the question now in its full bearing, and if we decide it now we must be consistent. They ought to be considered together.

The President: The question before the convention is upon the adoption of the substitute of the gentleman from Missoula.

A division being called for, the vote stood, twenty-nine in the affirmative to twenty-nine in the negative.

The President: The motion is lost.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, owing to the death of a friend, I am obliged to be absent from the convention and I ask to be excused. Before I go I would like to put in this as a privileged resolution. (The gentleman sent the resolution up to the Clerk's desk.) and ask as a further privilege that it be referred to the Committee on Rules. I also ask that the Executive File be not brought up until my return. I ask consent to have this resolution read and referred.

The President: By unanimous consent the resolution of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke will be read and referred.

The Clerk read the resolution of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke as follows: "Amendment to the Rule. Resolved that when the committee of the whole makes its report, that the same shall be read as a whole; then the vote shall be taken upon the amendments recommended by the committee, and when these are disposed of, the report shall be submitted for adoption, rejection or recommitment as a single question."

The President: This will be referred to the Committee on Rules. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, (Mr. Knowles.)

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I call for a division.

The vote was taken and resulted in a vote of twenty-eight in the affirmative to twenty-nine in the negative.

The President: The motion is lost. The question now recurs upon the original motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: Mr. Chairman: I think the amendment was accepted by the gentleman who moved the original motion.

The President: The amendment then is lost, as it was accepted by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Reek).

The President: The question is now upon the report of the committee.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to introduce an additional section.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers section 6 on military affairs. The question before the convention now is upon the section No. 1, the amendments having failed.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I understand, Mr. President, that these sections are deemed adopted unless they are amended?

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield) offers an additional section, as follows:

The Clerk read: "All inhabitants of this State of any religious denomination whatever, as from scruples of conscience may be averse to bearing arms, shall be excused therefrom but upon such conditions as shall be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly."

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I suggest that is not in order until we are ready and have disposed of Section No. 5.

The President: Everything has been disposed of now as the Chair understands it. The various sections were passed, and the Proposition was about to be placed upon its final passage when this reconsideration was had. The question now is upon the adoption of this resolution as presented by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I simply wish to test the sense of the convention in this matter. It seems to me that it has been entirely neglected. There is a very large population settled in the northern portion of our prospective State known as Mennonites, and those people have conscientious scruples against bearing arms. For that very reason they have left their own country, the southeastern portion of Russia. We have also another class of citizens who are conscientiously opposed to bearing arms, the Quakers. These men can be used for other purposes in time of necessity; there are different positions they can be placed in; and I think that a section of that kind, especially in view of the large immigration which we expect to have of that class of people, the Mennonites—I think it would not only be satisfactory to them but would also encourage a larger number of those people in settling among us.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I regret exceedingly to say that I am compelled to differ from my learned friend in regard to excepting the Mennonites and Quakers. I have no objection to leaving it with the Legislature to provide the conditions upon which they shall be released from military duty, but I will certainly require each man to send a full fledged man to the front as substitute. I have known some of those people. There are no greater money making people in the world, and while they are industrious, Godly people, they are the greatest money makers and scouters that I have ever known, from anything like duty. They have even been down in our country and fooled a lot of us fellows; and while I don't think they are worth a continental as would-be-soldiers, they accumulate more money than any people in the country, and I would require each and every one of them to send a brave substitute—either a brave Irishman or German—who is willing to fight for his country. I don't want to except any one, I don't care whether he is a Quaker or not. We know these Quakers are very good fighters. We have heard of the Quaker who stood with his eye-glass on the field and said "Friend, I do not wish thee nor the enemy any harm, but if thee want to hit him, hold thy musket a little lower". I want to lay down the rule here that every man who enjoys the blessings of Government shall in time of peril shoulder his rifle and go to the front; if he is too big a coward to go, put him in the trenches or somewhere else; but I am not in favor of excusing him on account of his con-sci-en-tious scruples, or on account of any dislike he may have for the smell of powder or the whizz of the bullets.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: On behalf of the Committee on Military Affairs, I beg to say that that Committee considered this question and decided that they would recommend that the matter of exemption be left entirely to the Legislature, and that they would so report. Section 1 reads "Except such person as may be exempted by the laws of the State or of the United States". That was the expression of opinion in the Committee, and I think it should be left in that condition.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I think probably I have omitted to examine thoroughly the report of the committee, as I should have done, and I think that the statement made by the Chairman on Military Affairs probably covers the intention of my resolution. Therefore I shall withdraw the resolution if I may do so in order.

The President: The gentleman withdraws the resolution. The question now recurs upon the adoption of file No. 2 on Military Affairs. If there be no objection it will be placed upon its passage. The ayes and noes will be placed upon the journal.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: E. D. Aiken, W. M. Bickford, J. F. Brazleton, Peter Breen, S. R. Buford, W. M. Bullard, W. A. Burleigh, A. F. Burns, A. J. Burns, Edward Burns, J. E. Callaway, Edward Cardwell, B. P. Carpenter, Milton Cauby, W. A. Chessman, C. E. Conrad, Walter Cooper, T. F. Courtney, A. J. Craven, W. W. Dixon, Wm. Dyer, Geo. O. Eaton, Wm. T. Fields, Chas. S. Hartman, Henri J. Haskell, L. D. Hatch, L. H. Hershfield, R. O. Hickman, S. S. Hobson, J. Hogan, A. R. Joy, Thomas Joyes, J. E. Kanouse, W. J. Kennedy, Hiram Knowles, C. H. Loud, L. A. Luce, J. E. Marion, Chas. S. Marshall, Wm. Mayger, C. R. Middleton, Samuel Mitchell, Wm. Muth, Wm. Parberry, W. R. Ramsdell, G. J. Reek, J. C. Robinson, L. Rotwitt, J. E. Rickards, F. E. Sargent, Leopold Schmidt, G. W. Stapleton, Joseph K. Toole, J. R. Toole, Chas. S. Warren, W. H. Watson, H. R. Whitehill, G. B. Winston, A. C. Walter and Mr. President—sixty.

Noes: None.

The Chair announced the vote:

The President: The article on Military Affairs, File No. 2, is now adopted as a part of the Constitution of the State of Montana. If there be no objection it will be referred to the Committee on Enrollment.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I would like to be excused for the day as I am anxious to attend the last right and services of a respected friend deceased.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke will be excused for the remainder of the day. We will pass to the consideration of General Orders No. 11.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into a Committee of the whole for the consideration of General Orders.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair will appoint the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, as Chairman of the Committee of the whole.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke, in the Chair.

Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Committee will take up General Orders No. 16, Proposition No. 17, Report of the Committee on Education.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I have the honor of being Chairman of this Committee but have been quite ill for several days and have not been quite able to give the matter the attention I would like to. I would therefore like to have the committee of the whole take up some other matter and postpone the consideration of this report for some future time. I will therefore move that this be passed for the present. I have not any preference for any other matter.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman, what is the pleasure of the Committee?

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: If I am in order I move you that we take up General File No. 5, Resolution No. 4.

The Chairman: The motion before the house is to take up General Order No. 5, which is Resolution No. 4 introduced by Mr. Watson of Fergus, and reported back by the Standing Committee on Printing without recommendation.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: Mr. Chairman, I feel very much disposed to second such a motion if it is made, but I hardly feel ready to go into it myself. Still I will do so if it is the pleasure of the convention. The report made by me has not been printed.

The Chairman: The Chair understands the rule to be that this proposition or Resolution should be taken up in connection with the report of the Committee of which this was a dissenting or adverse report.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: Mr. Chairman, that is very true, but the whole of the report of the committee is stated in this General File. It is simply not recommended, and I asked the privilege at the time of introducing a minority report, and did so, for the sake of bringing it before the house at the proper time.

The motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke was seconded.

The Chairman: The Chair understands the motion made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to be to take up Proposition No. 5, which is Resolution No. 4, in regard to printing General Laws. The resolution was introduced by Mr. Watson of Fergus.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: As I understand, by the action of the convention, all of these minor resolutions are to be considered in connection with the report of the committee having charge directly of that subject. As I understand it, that would be a matter which would properly come up for consideration when the report of the Committee on Legislative Departments was being considered, and I make that point of order.

The Chairman: The Chair understands that it has been decided by the convention that these independent resolutions, reported favorably or adversely in connection with the reports of committees, should be taken up and considered with those reports of the standing committees. The Chair is informed by the Clerk that this report came in with the report of the Printing Committee, and that it was not a report of a standing committee in reference to any proposition to be embodied in the constitution. This report, which is an adverse report, does not seem to be a report adversely upon any proposition to be embodied in the constitution, but a report in reference to some action to be taken independent of that.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: If the Chair please I think the Chair must be mistaken. The proposition was introduced by myself and referred to the Printing Committee and was reported adversely.

The Chairman: This seems to be an unusual question. The Printing Committee, as the Chair is informed, has made no report of any proposition to be embodied in the constitution. If the Chair is in error the Printing Committee will correct me. As the Chair is informed it was in reference to some other matter. With that report was the minority report on the resolution offered by the gentleman from Fergus, which had been reported without recommendation.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau. Mr. Chairman, I think the trouble was that the resolution was referred to the wrong committee. I imagine that it should have been referred to the Legislative Committee—this proposition to have the laws enacted by the Legislature published in every paper in the State—and it was referred to our committee and we simply referred it back without recommendation. I think the proposition should have gone to the Committee on Legislative Departments.

The Chairman: This report of the minority of the committee is not with reference to any proposition to be embodied in the constitution, but in reference to a resolution which the Chair will set forth for the information of the convention. The resolution offered by the gentleman from Fergus, was that the committee on Printing be instructed to consider and report to the convention for its action provisions which shall secure by publication to all of the people of Montana a knowledge of the General Laws passed by the Legislature. This was referred to the committee on Printing and reported back without recommendation. Upon that matter is the minority report. It seems to be on the General File, and these matters on the General File are referred to the committee of the whole. The Chair is of opinion that the committee of the whole has charge of this matter, although it is not in reference to any report.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke. I think that matter involves two propositions—either that there should be a provision in the constitution that those laws should be printed somehow, or that the Legislative Assembly should provide for their printing—either one or the other. I therefore move that when the committee rise it report this proposition back with the report that it be referred to the committee on Legislative Departments.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge, if in order, I move to proceed to the consideration of General File No. 6, Proposition No. 11, the report of the committee on Labor.

Motion was seconded and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Committee now has under consideration proposition No. 11 of the Article on Labor, and with that are three separate propositions to be considered, which the Clerk will read for the information of the committee.

The Clerk read as follows: "Proposition No. 7 by A. R. Joy, Chinese Labor. July 7th. Received, read and referred to Committee 23 on Labor, reported back by the Chairman of the Committee on Labor to be considered in connection with Proposition No. 11, General File No. 6. Also Proposition No. 3 by Hogan, referred back in the same manner to be considered with Proposition No. 11, General File No. 6. Also Resolution No. 17, offered by Field of Park, referred back to be considered with File No. 6, Proposition No. 11.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge. Mr. Chairman, I move we proceed to the consideration of the report of the committee.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 1.

The Clerk read Section 1 as follows: "Section 1. A bureau of Labor and Industry shall be established, to be located at the Capitol of the State, which shall be under the management of a commissioner, who shall be appointed by the Governor, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the same term as the Executive State Officers."

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move to strike out the word "Industry" in the first line and insert "Agriculture" instead.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin sent up an amendment to Section 1.

The Chairman: It is moved by the gentleman from Gallatin to amend Section one by striking out in line 1, the words "as the Executive State Officers" and insert in lieu thereof the words "of four years."

The Clerk read the section as proposed to be amended as follows: "A bureau of Labor and Agriculture shall be established, to be located at the Capitol of the State, which shall be under the management of a commissioner, who shall be appointed by the Governor, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the same term of four years".

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: The amendment contemplates the striking out of the words "the same term." My object is, Mr. Chairman, to give the term, because if they were appointed by the Governor they could not hold the same term as Executive Officers.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: We had the same matter under consideration, and as we did not know what time the Governor would be elected and for what term, we put it in the Executive Officers. Now if we make this four years, it doesn't look reasonable to ask the Governor to appoint a man for a longer term than he is elected for himself. If it was settled that the Governor would be elected for four years, I think it would be easier to get at.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend that motion by adding to it the words, "except as otherwise provided in this constitution": so that if it be arranged finally that the first officer shall hold for the period of three years, then this officer may be appointed for the same length of time, so that he shall hold for the same term as the Governor.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I accept the amendment.

The Chairman: The question before the committee is on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, subject to the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, which has been accepted, to strike out of the last two lines the word "same" and the words "as the executive state officers," and insert in lieu thereof "the term of four years except as otherwise provided in this constitution": so that the last two lines will read "subject to the confirmation of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the term of four years except as otherwise provided in this constitution."

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I would like some one to give some information as to what are to be the duties of this office. I am very much opposed to creating an office that, it appears to me, will be nothing but a sinecure. I don't know what the duties are applicable to this office. I certainly do not understand what duties such an officer would perform after he has been appointed.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: As a member of the committee that had this matter under consideration, I would say that I think in nearly every state in the union there is a commissioner of this kind. The United States also have an officer of this kind whose duty I believe it is to gather statistics in relation to the condition of labor, the rate of wages, the condition of manufactures, the condition of agriculture, the agricultural products throughout the country, etc. He is supposed to gather information that is useful in after years. Often times Legislative matters are referred to his office, and by having a bureau of this kind it puts things in such shape that they can intelligently act upon any matter that comes before them involving the question of labor, agriculture, &c.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, it strikes me, as my old friend Walker used to say, with the force of gun powder, that we can dispense for the present with a bureau of this character in this territory. I think the money would be better expended in trying to moisten the soil we have here under direction of some officer to be provided for by the Legislature. So far as the agricultural capacity of the country is concerned, it is pretty well understood by every one here, and with seasons like the present the less information we send abroad in regard to it the better it will be for us. I have no objection whatever to leaving it in the hands of the Legislature to appoint a commissioner, if they want to do it, but as to inserting anything of this kind in the constitution I believe it is out of place and will not be attended with any success. If there is a commission or bureau appointed, with three or five men, it will probably cost from three to five thousand dollars. In addition to that they will have to have a Secretary, which will cost $1500 more; they will have to have an office; where rents are high, as they are here in Helena, it will cost $1500 more; and it would run up after awhile to $25,000 a year. There may be a provision put in here to leave it to the Legislature to provide, if it is necessary, and whenever necessary, for one commissioner on agriculture, I do not believe it is politic to legislate in this way in a constitution.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: It occurs to me that this proposition that we are now considering, No. 11, should be considered with Proposition No. 15. It occurs to me that the same bureau can subserve the purposes intended by both of these reports. Section 1 of the Article we are now considering reads "A bureau of labor and industry shall be established" &c. Section 1 of Proposition 15 reads, "A bureau of agriculture, manufacture and commerce shall be established" etc.; and to bring the matter properly before the committee, in addition to the change suggested by the amendment now before the house, I move further to amend by inserting after the word "agriculture," which has been suggested by the gentleman from Silver Bow, in the first line, the words "manufacture and commerce."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I also move to amend that by adding the words "mines and mining," for the purpose of statistics. I think that is quite as important as the rest.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I think it is entirely unnecessary and uncalled for in this constitution to define just exactly what this bureau or commission will have to do. We find that the head commissioner, Carroll E. Wright—that all the statistics he gathers and the immense labor he does is not defined. He reports all the different statistics of the country; that is his duty. I think that the word "industry" would include all the different trades of the state, and I think that would be sufficient. I don't see that it is hardly necessary to add all this to it.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I would suggest that the gentleman strike out the word "mining."

The Chairman: There are two amendments to the motion already before the house. The gentleman is in order if he has a substitute to the Proposition.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I just merely drew the attention of the gentleman to the advisability of striking out the word "mining," because when he speaks of mines he includes it all.

The Chairman: The question before the committee is the second amendment to the motion to amend Section 1, so that it will read as follows: "A bureau of labor, agriculture, mines and mining," &c.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Now, Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, we have arrived at the consideration of the question upon the last amendment offered by the gentleman to tack on to all those other matters the words "mines and mining" as the case may be. Now, it seems to me that this is too much of a hodge-podge. It would require a very versatile character to take the position of commissioner—to be familiar with all these subjects. The industries enumerated here embrace the principal industries of this territory, and it seems to me that we might separate these to better advantage, and if necessary, have a commissioner appointed or bureau established to take into consideration labor, agriculture, commerce and manufactures. That is quite enough for one man to do; I think it is too much for one man to do. Probably labor and agriculture would be quite enough for one man. Then commerce and manufactures would be quite a large range and present quite a field, and give a man a chance to exercise his faculties, it seems to me. Then mines—that is one of the greatest industries of this country. If we are to have a bureau of agriculture and labor and these other industries, it seems to me we should have a commissioner for mining in this country. But I am opposed mixing them all up and having one man to attend to them all. Hence I am opposed to the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

The Chair put the motion on the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as we have stolen a portion of the report from the committee on agriculture, we might as well proceed to steal the whole report, and I would offer a substitute to General File No. 14 and General File No. 6, or Proposition No. 15 and Proposition No. 11.

The Chairman: The Chair thinks that is not in order on the motion to amend this section.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I will withdraw the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, moves to amend the amendment, which is an amendment to Section 1, by striking out all of line 1 up to and including the word "established" and insert in lieu thereof the following, "the Legislative Assembly may provide for the establishment of a bureau of labor and industry."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I just want to say a word in reference to that. It may become necessary for the establishment of some such an office as that, but I do not think at this time when we are forming a constitution that we ought to commence right at the beginning by loading it down with a series of new officers whose duties may not be onerous and whose compensation may be entirely out of proportion. I think it would be quite sufficient to leave the matter to the Legislative Assembly to provide for this officer if it shall become necessary, and I therefore move the amendment.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. Mr. Toole, and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: If there be no further amendment to Section 1, the section will be considered as adopted and the Clerk will read Section 2.

The Clerk read Section 2 as follows: "Section 2. The commissioner of labor and industry shall perform such duties and receive such compensation as may be prescribed by law; and it shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly at its first session to prescribe such duties and compensation, and to pass such laws as may be necessary for the government, regulation and support, of such bureau."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move to strike out Section 2.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 3 as follows: "Section 3. That any person or persons convicted of a crime in the State of Montana, and while under sentence for the same, shall not be allowed to labor for any individual, company or corporation. Neither shall the State have power to enter into agreement or contract with any individual, company or corporation, to have convicts do any labor that will in any way compete with free labor."

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I offer an amendment to that section.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge moves as follows, to strike out section 3 and to insert in lieu thereof the following: "It shall be unlawful for the commissioner or other state officers of any penitentiary or other reformatory institution in the State of Montana to let by contract to any person or persons, or corporations, the labor of any convict confined within said institution."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, the amendment which I have offered here is copied from the amendment to the Constitution of the State of Illinois, adopted four years ago, and while there may be some question in regard to this matter, I think there can be no doubt that this is the proper place to insert something of this kind, if it is believed that it should be done. When I happened to be a member of the Legislature at one time, not very long ago, there was a bill introduced for the contracting of the convict labor of this territory which passed one of the houses of the Legislature—it passed the council at that time and came very near passing the house also; and had it not been for the protest that was raised by the people of the territory of Montana and by the representatives in opposition to it, there is no doubt that the bill would have passed both houses and become a law. I happened, sir, some time before to be employed as guard in the State of Tennessee. It seems to be a common thing in penal institutions to contract the labor of the convicts in them. It is opposed to all human principles and all semblances of humanity. It is a disgrace to any civilization. Even if a man is a convict of the lowest order, it is no argument or reason why he should be abused under such a system of abuse as reigns under the system of contracting. The people of these states where this system of late years has obtained have risen up and abolished it. I notice nearly all of the States, by provisions in their constitutions, or else by Legislative enactment, have prohibited the system of convict labor. I offer the amendment to this Article for the reason that when I was on this committee I could not endorse the whole of the article as reported by the committee. I could not endorse it for this reason, that I believed it was against the principles of good government; I believed it was against the interest of the laboring men, although they asked this, or certain portions of it at least; I was not in favor of it for the reason that I believe that we are commencing at the wrong end of this question. I will not oppose any law or any enactment that would prohibit the system of contract labor in this country, but I differ with some of my colleagues on this matter. I take the ground that the cause of these agitations, if they may be called such, is not in the fact of an over-production of this world's goods, but in the fact of a wrong distribution. We are commencing at the wrong end of the matter. For that reason I offer this amendment, which will place the matter in such condition that the convicts may not be leased out by contractors but that under the direction of the State and under such laws as the Legislature may enact, there may be a provision for their employment, which I believe to be a wise and wholesome regulation. For that reason I offer this amendment and trust it will be incorporated in the Section of the constitution. It was adopted by the people of Illinois four years ago.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move to strike out the word "commissioner" and insert "warden or other person."

The Chairman: The amendment is a substitute for Section 3 and reads as follows: "It shall be unlawful for the commissioners or other state officers of any penitentiary or any other reformatory institution in the State of Montana to let by contract to any person or persons, or corporation, the labor of any convict confined within said institution." To that an amendment is offered as follows: "Strike out the word 'commissioners' and insert 'warden or other officer in authority.'" The question is now on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It occurs to me that we are here for the purpose of making or attempting to make a constitution for the people of Montana, and if I understand what that means, it is to make a constitution for convicts as well as for free individuals. There was an expression here upon the floor of the convention a few days ago as to the striking out of certain words in some other matter that was being considered, the nature of which was to indicate that punishment for crime should be reformatory and not vindictive. Now, I submit that these are matters that are proper and fair to come before the Legislature at any time, and unless limited by constitutional provision, the Legislature will have power and should have power either to provide by contract for the labor of these convicts, or by any other means whereby they can give them employment. To say that a man convicted of a crime, because he is sentenced to the penitentiary for five years or for ten years, or for life, shall be housed up and kept in some place where is not permitted to labor for that length of time, seems to be inhuman and instead of being in the nature of anything reformatory, it is the most brutal character of vindictive justice. On the other hand it is pretended here that this does not prohibit the State from resolving itself into a barrel factory perhaps and putting those convicts to labor—manufacturing tubs or barrels, or perhaps overalls. But does it seem reasonable that that kind of thing should be done by a State? I came from the State of Minnesota, from Stillwater, where I was for five or six years. During which time there was in the penitentiary of that state from 350 to 500 convicts. The convict labor there was let to a large corporation—the Northwestern Manufacturing and Car Company. That company employed outside the convict labor citizens to the number of about 1500, and I have had occasion in my business relations to go frequently every week, and sometimes every day of every week, inside of the walls of that penitentiary; and the suggestion here made by the gentleman that the treatment by those companies or contractors of convicts was improper was something that I never saw nor heard of there. The men were guarded and looked after by the officers of the State. The convicts were treated and did the same character and kind of work that was done by citizens. Some of those convicts were overseers in certain rooms, and departments. The company was engaged in a large, extensive and varied business, manufacturing almost all kinds of articles. Those men never complained. They said their treatment was the best. And if anybody will take and read the "Prison Mirror" published in the Penitentiary of Minnesota, they will see that the treatment not only on the part of the state officers but of the contractors for whom they have labored has been something they have never had occasion to complain of. Now by this Section, whether you adopt the original section or the proposed amendment, you practically provide that convicts shall be sentenced to absolute solitary confinement; that they shall not be permitted to do any kind of labor, because it does not mean anything else, for fear that the labor those convicts should do might in some way come in contact or compete with free labor. It does not seem to me that we want to put anything of that kind in the constitution. When the time arrives in the State of Montana, if ever it does, that the Legislature may deem it wise to make provisions of this kind, which they can do unless prohibited by this constitution, let them do it. But that time certainly has not arrived, and it does not seem to me it is starting out on the right track. I, for one, am opposed to any kind of a law or constitution that would say that a state shall not have the right to make such provision by Legislation as it may see fit for the working of its convicts. I would rather be in favor of putting a provision in the constitution compelling the State to make some reasonable provision whereby convicts may be permitted and have an opportunity to labor. Take a man and put him in a penitentiary for two years even, or for one year, and not permit him to even exercise his muscles—and I presume they would close him up in a 2x4 cell if they could—and what kind of a man will he be when he comes out? Is that year in the penitentiary intended to reform him or is it intended to ruin him for life? It seems to me that in the interest of humanity, and common sense, and common justice, that this is the most vicious character of Legislation instead of being a wholesome provision that should be inserted in the constitution. I am opposed not only to the section itself but to the amendment, for they are practically one and the same thing.

Mr. Fields, of Park: I have listened with close attention to the remarks of the gentleman from Custer. I first saw the light of day in the City of Joliet, Illinois, where a State Prison is located, and I know from what I have seen there that convict labor is an injury to the free laboring man outside of the prison. The gentleman from Custer tells us he is familiar with the state of affairs at Stillwater, Minnesota, claiming a car company down there employs six hundred convicts, I believe, and 1500 laboring men, all working shoulder to shoulder. I think that the people are putting a laboring man far below his level when they put him out to work with a felon that has been convicted of crime. Those men are employed by companies. They do not in the first place receive the remuneration for their wages that the free laboring man does and I will warrant that if they had the additional 1500 men—if they had the additional 1500 prisoners there that not one of the 1500 men would be working in those car factories at Stillwater. Now I do not propose, nor will I ever sanction any law that would stop or prohibit a prisoner from doing something in prison, but I will always uphold and stand by the conviction that convict labor should not be put on a level with the free labor outside of prison walls; and I believe it is wrong—wrong in the extreme that a man, who under the laws and constitutions of his country is a citizen, should be put in contact with and compelled to work by the side of a convict. I think it is out of the question. I shall never uphold it. I do not think it is proper nor right. There has been a great deal of injustice done in that way. I know that in Tennessee that the convicts were given out for grade labor for thirty cents a day, when laborers were getting $2 and $2.50 a day; and I think it is, speaking even moderately, a high handed outrage to put those convicts on a level with men who have lived up to the constitution and the laws of the state and of the United States. I am opposed to the whole system.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I have listened with considerable attention to my friend from Custer in speaking about convict labor, and the enormous evil it would be to the community to prevent those men from working. I presume from what that gentleman has said that he has never read the correct account of the men that have had charge of those convicts, giving the amount of labor that is given out in those prisons. We find in some states that there are certain industries of which from 40 to 60 per cent of the products thereof are manufactured in the prisons and placed out on the market to compete with people that are free. Does this convention think that it is right or just that a man that has to work for days wages—the only way he has to support, raise and educate a family—that he should be placed on a level, either physically or in the open competition of the markets of the world, with those convicts? Should my friend who has so eloquently argued about preventing the convicts from working like to be placed on a level with those men? I think not, and I think that those people who have to work at work that convicts do are worthy of the same consideration from us as any other person. Now I claim that instead of the work that convicts do being a benefit to the community, it is an injury. I claim that there is so much work to be done, and the fact of the matter is there are more people looking for work than there is work to be done, and the amount of work that is done in the penitentiary is just throwing that many people out of work that they absolutely need in order to secure a living. The consequence is this man, who may be a respectable, honest and worthy citizen must actually descend to theft if he can do no better. Then he is placed in jail and gets the same as the other convicts do. Now we can take the history of other nations and we find in a great many places that convicts do not work, or at least when they do work they are put to work at something that is not remunerative; whatever they produce is consumed in jail, and not placed on the labor market to compete with the labor of honest men. We find in several of the states where convict labor was in vogue of late years, that the people have found out the necessity of preventing them from competing with honest men. Now I claim that in the state of Montana at the present time there are not a great many convicts, but I think it would be a good thing to insert in the constitution some clause that would prevent the same things happening here that have happened in other places—in Alabama for instance, at Birmingham. You will find that the convicts are treated there worse than mules, and if we let this system creep in here we have no assurance but that the same crying evils will exist here at no distant day. I certainly would support the original section, because I do not think it is right that any man who is not a convict should be compelled to compete with a man who is a convict.

Mr. Brazleton, of Deer Lodge: I do not expect to be in the penitentiary very soon, but it seems to me that it resolves itself into this, that somebody is going to be inconvenienced, whether it shall be the convicts or the working man seems to be the question. If that is so, somebody is going to get the worst of it, and I think so long as there is no law that compels a man to go to the penitentiary, let them stay out of it or suffer the consequences.

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson: Mr. Chairman, I have come here as the representative of the laboring man, pledged to no political party, as you all know. I have kept very quiet here, and so have the gentlemen from districts 11 and 21, which include Jefferson County; but this is a little too much. The gentleman from Custer gets up here and he claims it is not interfering with the rights of the laboring man to place 1500 respectable free men by the side of convicts and compelling them to earn their daily bread in the company of degraded criminals. When a stranger goes along there at Stillwater for instance, how is he going to know the convicts from the free men unless by their dress? And has the gentleman from Custer no respect for the feelings of his honest fellow men? Does he think they have no feelings, or does he suppose he monopolizes all the finer feelings of mankind in the small compass of his own breast? How must men feel when they have been degraded to the level of convicts and subject to the same espionage as the convict? Another thing. If we wish to reform the convict, in correcting the right or as a matter for his own good, do we wish to have every passer-by scrutinize him with critical gaze? I will ask the gentleman from Custer, if he had been there in that gang, how he would like to have a thousand people a day size him up, and after he had come out of there meet somebody face to face, that had seen him working with that chain gang at Stillwater? Here is this question of the constitution, which is supposed to guarantee justice to all classes of people, but it says that the convicts must be made to work. Why should they be made to work? To exempt the tax payer from contributing towards their support? This gentleman who hails from Custer, if he is elected to the legislature again—a thing which I hope will not happen—he will introduce a bill to establish a shoe factory or something of that kind down in Deer Lodge. They will manufacture shoes and sell them throughout Montana and in that way pay the expenses of convicts. Now which is it, the people of Montana or the shoemakers that are supposed to support the penitentiary of Montana? That is one thing I wish to know. In the United States, on January 1st, 1877, we had forty-five thousand and some odd hundred convicts, engaged in labor that competed with free labor, and allowing for the usual allowances, it was estimated that there were thirty-five thousand and some odd hundreds thrown out of employment by this labor system; and in the United States there is estimated to be close on two million idle men without employment. It is estimated that we have four thousand idle men in Montana. We have a hundred and fifty convicts that we have put in the penitentiary because they were a curse to society, and of course it is too bad to keep them in idleness. We must throw out another 150 idle men in our cities by employing that 150 convicts. Then in the city of Chicago, at the present time, we have forty thousand idle people, as estimated on the first day of June. These are not to be taken into consideration in order to relieve their starving families are to be lost and wasted upon a government instituted for the purpose of the happiness of all, while these poor convicts, incarcerated behind the prison walls, in order that the anxieties of their minds may be relieved, must be put to work at some employment that will come in direct competition with the more fortunate laboring men of the country. In Montana, if our convicts are to be contracted out, what is to hinder any man that runs mines from hiring these convicts, and working the Anaconda, the St. Lawrence or any other mine that would employ that number of men? And who is it—is it the tax-payer or the miners in Butte that are thrown out of employment? I would like to ask the plain question whether the people shall support the convicts or not? If we wish to go down to the bottom of this thing, according to the commissioner that was appointed by the United States to examine into the matter, we find that the tax on property, necessary to support the whole convict population of the United States would not amount to more than thirty-nine cents on the thousand dollars; and under those circumstances it is hardly necessary, considering the consequences to the working classes of this country, that they, instead of the tax-payers generally, should be compelled to support the criminal classes, made up sometimes of what are supposed to be the very best class of citizens. What we wish to guard against particularly is the employment of convict labor in any branch of industry that will allow them to compete with honest men. Now I do not see the necessity for all this discussion in any matter that concerns the protection of the laboring man. I have been out of employment in this territory several times, and I do not want to be placed in the same position again this winter, simply because my employer may see the advisability of employing labor that he can get much cheaper than I could afford to work for. I hope this section will be adopted. I do not wish to see the convicts confined in their cells, continuously without work, nor do I see the necessity of it, but that they shall be supplied with machinery which will enable them to do the work of 200 or 300 men, that I do not approve of. It may be well enough to employ them and brand their goods as convict-made goods, and then employ them just enough for their health and for the purposes of exercise.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow, sent up an amendment, which the Clerk read as follows: "Strike out section 3 and insert instead, as follows: 'Section 3. The labor of convicts shall not be let out or hired by contract to any person, co-partnership, company or corporation. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the working of convicts, for the benefit of the State, but in such manner that the labor of such convicts shall not come in contact with free labor.'"

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I desire to say that that is mainly the provision in the constitution of California, except the last portion of it in regard to free labor, and it seems to me that it really covers the ground which we are trying to get at. Certainly, convict labor should not be contracted out. That seems to be the experience of all states. And still convicts should be employed. It is better for them and it is better for the community. But they should not be employed under any contract, or in such branches of industry as will come in contact with free labor. I do not believe that the spectacle of free men, guilty of no crime, seeking work, and compelled to meet the competition of convicts in the penitentiary, is altogether an edifying one. I offer this resolution as the true solution of this proposition, and I think it covers the ground that the members of the committee have recommended, as well as some of the grounds that have been touched upon by some of the gentlemen in debate.

The Clerk read the Amendment as offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Bullard, of Jefferson: I will not detain the committee but a moment. I think this amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow covers the ground exactly and completely, and I shall support it heartily; and to save the work of this committee I hope that the preceding amendment will be withdrawn and this one accepted in lieu thereof. This is the point that we have been working for in committee, and I think the committee will heartily support it. I for one shall do so.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I accept the amendment offered, and I will take one minute in reply to a few remarks made by the gentleman from Custer. I would advocate the adoption of this report on the ground that it is in accord with the rest of the constitution. Now as I have said, we have had no experience of this kind. The State of Tennessee has had experience with this question, and the people there have come to the conclusion that it is inhuman and vindictive in the greatest degree to put these people up to be bought in by contractors. On that ground I vote in favor of this proposition. I have seen a man in one instance so wrought up that he would sacrifice his life, so driven to desperation was he by his surroundings and by sickness and disease, for which he had no redress until his term was served out. I advocate the adoption of this clause in the constitution, and I hope it will prevail.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: This problem before us has occupied the minds, and the best minds, of statesmen and philanthropists for a number of years, and I have not yet had any intimation that it has ever been settled to the satisfaction of all persons concerned, and I have very little doubt that after this convention has adjourned we will leave it in the same unsettled, unsatisfactory condition. I am as much opposed as any one can be to seeing the honest artisan laboring shoulder to shoulder with convict labor; I am as much opposed as any one can be to maintaining our convicts in idleness; I believe it is wrong not only to them but wrong to the taxpayer who is called upon to support them in idleness; and when their term of service has expired they come out a burden, and more than a burden to us. Now, gentlemen, I do not believe, with all due respect to Mr. Dixon, that this amendment offered by him, covers the ground, and for that reason I am in favor of leaving this entire proposition in the hands of the Legislature. It does not seem to me that it is our province to attempt to legislate on this question. Now, I would like to ask Mr. Dixon, or any one else, how convict labor can be employed by the State without coming in competition either directly or indirectly with all honest free labor. We will have for instance in a few years to build an additional penitentiary, or it may be that in a very short while we will have to build an addition to the present penitentiary. That may give employment to scores of honest mechanics who will need that labor, but shall we say to this legislature or to that legislature, that they shall not provide for those convicts erecting that building? I say to you that if they erect it by their own labor they come in competition with the honest mechanics. Now I do believe that it is safer and better and wiser, if you will let me use that expression, to leave this entire matter in the hands of the Legislature. Two years ago I had the honor to be a member of the Territorial Legislature, and we wrestled with this question, and I suppose future Legislatures will wrestle with it; and I believe that if we attempt to adopt either the original section or any amendment that has been offered in lieu thereof we will act unwisely; and therefore I shall vote—and I hope I am understood—I shall vote against the adoption of the original or any substitute that may be offered in lieu thereof.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the adoption of this amendment, and I think very much with the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards). I would like to know how it is that the Legislative Assembly, or any other assembly, shall be able to provide that these men shall be permitted to engage in work for the benefit of the State and at the same time not come in conflict with free labor. It may be true, sir, that they will be able to put them at work at such employment as might not come directly in conflict with the free labor of the Territory of Montana, but it nevertheless is true, that if they are engaged in any industry that is useful and beneficial to the State that they will come directly in conflict either with the free labor of the State that will be necessary for the production of those articles, or in conflict with free labor somewhere in the United States. So far as I am concerned, sir, I believe that the State is under no obligation so far as its convicts are concerned, especially those convicted of felony and sent to the penitentiary, except to provide for them in such a way as shall be in the interest of a proper and healthful condition while they are there. I would, sir, rather than bring them in conflict with the free labor of the State or the United States, see to it, sir, that they were permitted and compelled to engage in nothing more than in the practice of the manual of arms; that they might be permitted to do that or some other thing that would be necessary for their health and the proper physical exercise necessary to secure it. But I am unwilling, sir, so far as my vote is concerned, to adopt this amendment or anything which is less restrictive in its character than the one which is presented in this article by the Committee on Labor.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I have but one word to say, sir, or perhaps two. I think that by this amendment presented by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) that there is an obligation put upon the Legislature of the State that is impossible of being carried out—that is if I understand the amendment, that the Legislature shall provide for certain work to be done by these convicts that shall not conflict with free labor. That I conceive to be an impossible task. As the two gentlemen who have preceded me have well said, you can imagine nothing in the way of labor that produces anything or that makes anything that will not come in conflict with free labor. Take the illustration of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards), the erection for instance of a State House. Now, that perhaps might be erected by mechanics in the penitentiary, and at the same time just so many free laborers of the same skill or belonging to the same class of mechanics would be cut out of employment; and I conceive that this Section 3 is infinitely better than this proposition that is before the committee now. The last clause of it provides "neither shall the State have power to enter into agreement or contract with any individual, company or corporation to have convicts do any labor that will in any way compete with free labor." There you have said all that this amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow says, and you do not undertake to impose upon the Legislature the impossible task of providing labor for the convicts that will interfere or compete with free labor. I would prefer Section 3 as it is printed.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: After all that has been said upon this subject it does not seem to me that there is very much to say, but this, however, I will say, that it has been a well recognized fact that the laboring people of this country have suffered very much by being put in competition with convict labor; and I feel now that this is the opportune time to raise this question. The gentleman who preceded me said that he was a member of the Legislature two years ago and wrestled with this question but they accomplished nothing. I am in hearty accord with the remarks made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. I feel, however, that there is a feeling ripe in the convention that labor is necessary for these convicts, that it would be exceedingly inhuman and cruel not to give them something to occupy their time or divert their minds. I would be perfectly satisfied to have them engaged at something in which they would not come into competition with the laboring man. I certainly very much differ from the gentleman from Custer in my views in regard to placing laboring men and convicts side by side, and I also differ with him in the fact that although we may be here to frame a constitution for convicts I think it is only to see that they receive proper reformatory punishment for their transgressions. Now then, this substitute proposed by Mr. Dixon, as I understand it, I think will provide in a great measure to exert the harm that usually follows the competition of convict labor with free labor. Anything that will do that will certainly have my hearty accord, and if I thought for a moment that we could pass the section as proposed with the labor bureau clause, I should certainly vote for it; but as the section proposed by Mr. Dixon comes up first I shall not miss the opportunity to give my vote in the direction of making a distinction between free labor and convict labor.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I would like to hear from the gentleman who has introduced this substitute. If he has in mind any manner of labor by which these convicts can be engaged so as not to compete in any way with free labor, I would like to know what it is. My idea is that if these convicts are employed it should be in some useful labor. This idea of putting convicts to turning cranks, piling up bricks and tearing them down again, I do not believe in. The greatest relief to the human mind which has become morally degraded lies in the consciousness of knowing that what we do is useful, and that some benefit will result from our labor, and under this substitute introduced by the gentleman from Silver Bow, I do not understand what labor they can provide for the convicts to do.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I am decidedly opposed to farming out convict labor and bringing it in competition with the honest labor of the country, but I am also decidedly in favor of convicts working at some useful employment. It appears to me that the trouble is not in having them work, but the trouble comes when you ask the question what will we do with the products of their labor. For instance, I believe that every convict, while he should not be brought into competition with honest labor, should be compelled to learn and follow some useful calling. I believe that nine out of ten convicts are placed in the penitentiary for the reason that they have never been taught to work and never been taught a trade and have never been taught enough to make them useful members in the community of which they live, and I believe that every man in the penitentiary who is placed there for a year or more should be taught some useful occupation; the first care that should be exercised over him should be to teach him some useful trade or occupation, so that when his time has expired and he is turned into the world again he will not be turned into the world as a hoodlum, all the time thinking of vice and folly, and thinking what he will do when he gets out, but that he will be ready to follow some honest, industrious pursuit; and if he has learned some trade, when he gets out he has got something that he can make a living at. You give him a chance. You do not throw him back again among the criminal classes, but you give him a chance to go among honest, upright people and earn his living the same as they do. But it seems to me that the great question arises and the whole difficulty lies in the problem of what shall be done with the product of his labor while he is in the penitentiary. There are always poor people enough, and if you establish for instance the business of manufacturing shoes in the penitentiary you diminish the chances of those poor people who are compelled to earn their living in a corresponding degree. It appears to me for that reason that the question should be left to the Legislature of what shall be done with the product of the labor of the people in the penitentiary. There certainly is a way to the solution of this difficulty. You might for instance have these convicts manufacture shoes and other ware, and after you have paid for the material there will always be enough of poor people and paupers, and the children of widows, and there will always be orphans enough and people of that kind, to wear out those shoes. That would not come in competition with anybody. Then you might put the matter in the hands of some officer, or somebody, so that he might seek out the most deserving and give these shoes and other ware to them, or sell them at such a small price that they could afford to buy them. I do not believe it is the matter of the manufacture but of the disposition of the products of their labor. I believe that the products of their labor should be so disposed of that they would not come in competition with the products of the labor of honest men; and for that reason I am not in favor of this amendment or of this section at all; I am in favor of leaving this entire matter, except so far as providing here that convict labor shall not be farmed out, to the Legislature. Further than to say that this labor shall not be farmed out I do not think we ought to go in this convention. I am in favor of leaving everything beyond that to the Legislature. It may be well enough to provide that their labors shall not come into competition with honest labor, but that it shall be a help to them and their families whenever they are unfortunate, and in that way the labor of the convict will become a blessing instead of a curse to the laboring people.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, this resolution, or the substitute, embodies, I think, two propositions; the first is to prohibit the contracting out of convict labor; that I believe all gentlemen here are opposed to and certainly it is an evil both to the convicts themselves and an evil as it comes into competition with free labor. Now, the substitute and the original report both provide for that. Then there is another matter in reference to the employment of convicts, providing that they shall be employed by the State but that they shall be employed in such manner that their labor will not come into competition with free labor. Now it is said, how can they be employed in that way? Why a number and variety of ways suggest themselves to me. They may be employed in building the walls of prisons; they may be employed in other public works, as was suggested by the gentleman who has just taken his seat—works that the State would not undertake if it involved the necessary expense of paying for them—the improvement of water power, &c. I do not intend to argue this question at length. The important thing I desire to get at is that the working of convict labor by contract shall be abolished, and that whatever labor is done by these convicts shall be for the benefit of the State and shall not come into competition with free labor. Now we have got to leave something to the Legislature, and all we ought to do is to place the necessary restrictions upon their enactments. We cannot provide for the whole system of the Government of the penitentiary and for the employment of the labor of convicts in this constitution, but we can bind the Legislature as to what they shall do. Now all that my friend from Silver Bow desires there can be done under this section, but we must leave some discretion to the Legislature, and while I desire to restrict them against contracting out the labor of the convict, I am willing to leave it to their discretion as to what they shall be employed in, subject only to the restriction that they shall not come into competition with free labor. I go to this extent, that if the Legislature cannot find any employment for those convicts that will not come into conflict with free labor, then I say let them remain idle. I am not one of those who have so much sympathy with convicts and persons convicted of crime as has been expressed in some of the debates upon this floor. If those convicts cannot be employed, or if the only way to employ them is to bring them into competition with free labor, then let them remain idle rather than bring them into competition with the work of the honest, industrious, unremitting and innocent toilers of the land. [Applause.]

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that the gentleman from Silver Bow has satisfied any man in this house that he has explained, in any way, shape or manner, where, if his substitute were adopted, it would be in the power of the Legislature to give the convicts one single minute's work. Now the matter of building a penitentiary is the very first thing, perhaps, that the laboring men and artisans would have the right to object to. That is a character of employment that is intended, perhaps, for the persons fitted for it—citizens who are not convicts in any sense of the word. It seems to me that looking at this matter from the laboring man's point of view, that the gentlemen are all wrong. I have been sat upon here and have been upbraided by gentlemen on this floor as being an enemy of the laboring element. Nothing certainly could be farther from my position. There is no man on this floor that knows any more about hard work, or that for his age has done much more of it in the matter of manual labor, than I have, and when I speak about labor and laboring men, I know what I am talking about. A person commits an offense, and is at the time a resident of the Territory of Montana; presumably he is a laboring man, for the most of us are. He is convicted and sentenced to the Penitentiary of the State of Montana. Now are the rest of the laboring men who are left in this State in any worse position by reason of his having to work in the penitentiary than they were by reason of his having worked before he was convicted and sent to the penitentiary? He still remains a human being; he still remains with hands and legs and means to move about and work. He is confined at the expense of the State, and let me suggest it right here, that when the Committee on Finance of the State, or when this convention comes to provide for the expenses of reformatory institutions and all the public institutions that will be deemed necessary in this State, I do not know where the money is to come from. That is simply one element to be considered, and I say that it is and should be considered by the people of the State of Montana who are now about to assume the obligations of a young State. She has not resources sufficient to throw money into her Treasury to enable her to keep all these men in idleness, and it is inhuman to do it if she had. Gentlemen have suggested here that the Legislature has done nothing with this matter. The Legislatures of older States have labored over this matter session after session, and but very few of them have ever attempted even to submit to the people an amendment to the constitution providing for anything of this kind. All of the power of legislation so far as a State is concerned that is not taken away from it by the Constitution of the United States or its own Constitution, still remains, so that if this matter be left alone, and if no word be said about labor or convict labor, the Legislature will be at liberty to enact just such laws as the times and the necessities of the times demand. I do not stand on this floor, Mr. Chairman, to talk for policy; I do not stand here to talk for votes. I will say to the gentleman that I agree with him in the hope that I will never come to the Legislature again, for there is nothing in it for me. But this is a matter of principle with me, and I believe the convention will bear me out in the view that some sort of means should be left whereby the Legislature can make provision for the employment of these men and for some remuneration to the State towards paying the expense of keeping, guarding and caring for those convicts; and I submit that in my judgment the last amendment proposed by the gentleman from Silver Bow is a snare; it means nothing; it leaves the matter just as it is in Section 3, and it ties the hands of the Legislature so firmly that they never can by any means or by any kind of legislation enact a law whereby men who are convicted of crime can be employed without coming into contact with free labor. It is something impossible. I am opposed in principle to this matter of farming out convicts; I do not believe in that, but I believe that the State should have an institution whereby it can, either through contractors or otherwise, put in machinery and manufacture anything and everything it wants to and put that stuff upon the market and sell it. As was well suggested here, every man convicted and sent to the penitentiary, if possible should be compelled to learn a trade, or to perform some kind of labor that would place him where, when his term of sentence was served, he could go out into the world and be of some use and benefit to himself as well as to society. All men who are sent to the penitentiary are not villains. It is true they may have committed some technical offense. Many of them go there who are; but to say that the Constitution shall provide that no man sentenced to the penitentiary shall ever be permitted to learn a trade—because that is what you say if that provision is adopted, that he shall not be permitted to labor—that he shall not be permitted to exercise even his muscles, except as was suggested, by piling up bricks and throwing them down again—then, gentlemen, I do not know whether I can vote for the adoption of that constitution or not. I do not believe we want to do that. There are institutions in the United States where the honest laboring man has had occasion to complain of the way in which convict labor was controlled and handled, but that condition of affairs has not existed here; there are but a few of the States where it has. The gentlemen who come here apparently to make a constitution for perhaps the Knights of Labor, come here with a large amount of statistics, and they tell us what has occurred here and there and everywhere, but it does not prove much. Leave this matter where the Legislature can say that when that condition of things arises we will change the law. Now, the mere fact that I made use of in my former illustration when I was on the floor before, that 1500 citizens, honest laborers, were working shoulder to shoulder with four or five hundred convicts does not seem to me so serious a matter as some people consider it. The fact is that at the time the contract was let to this manufacturing company at the penitentiary of which I was speaking, the City of Stillwater had a population of 7,000 people; inside of five years after that over 1500 people, most of them with families, were all doing well and were comfortably fixed in the necessities and comforts of life. Those men went out to work as citizens within the walls of that penitentiary, shoulder to shoulder, if you will have it that way, with men dressed in striped flannel, and went home to their families, and they were respected as much as any one in that town. And I venture to say to the gentleman back here who spoke about having been a guard in a penitentiary, that if he had performed his duty to the State those men would not have been abused, as he suggested they were. Under a proper system the convicts are guarded by, fed by and controlled by the State, whether under a contract system or otherwise. I do not know of my own knowledge of a single State where the State does not feed its own prisoners. Now these are matters that are brought in here for the purpose of influencing men who have not investigated this matter to permit to go into this constitution a clause that of itself and on its face is vicious, and that in its effect will be inhuman; and I believe that if the men who compose this convention will act from the dictates of conscience and upon their own sound judgment, without any other influences, they will vote against any provision going into this constitution that would tie the hands of the Legislature in any way, shape or manner as to the matter of convict labor in the State of Montana. (Applause.)

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: The paramount idea in the human breast, it seems to me, is self-preservation, and under this system of convict labor the right to honest labor for the time, being taken away from the free toilers of this country, the law of self-preservation and the right to self-preservation steps in and the laboring man is privileged to demand the right to his labor. Today under circumstances in many cases he is denied this right. Why? Because there is not a sufficient amount of labor; because there are more laboring men than there is work to perform. And having this inherent right I maintain that the laboring man has a right to demand on the part of the State that these people confined within the walls of a penitentiary shall not be allowed to infringe on his right to labor. If they by their labor shut him out of employment I maintain that it is one of his inalienable rights to demand that their labor shall not conflict with his labor and that the right of self-preservation with all its logical sequences, shall not be denied him.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Is an amendment in order at this time?

The Chairman: No sir.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I will state to the Chair that the gentleman from Deer Lodge withdrew his amendment.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I offered at one time, Mr. Chairman, to withdraw my amendment but my second did not consent, and I desire to do so now.

The Chairman: It is rather a stretch of parliamentary law, but that has been the rule of this committee.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: In the understanding of the Chair, is the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge before the committee? I only wanted to renew that if it was withdrawn.

The Chairman: The question before the house now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: As a member of the committee that recommended that report I certainly shall oppose the amendment offered by Mr. Dixon from Silver Bow. I think it covers the ground more specifically than the other. It gives the Legislature a chance to exercise some discretion. I differ materially from some other gentlemen that have spoken. I claim that any work that is done and placed on the labor market as donated for charitable purposes does not compete with free labor and I shall certainly vote for the amendment.

The Chair stated the motion on the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, called for a division. The vote resulted 24 in the affirmative to 30 in the negative.

The Chair declared the amendment lost.

The Chairman: The question is now on the motion of the gentleman from Custer. The original motion is "It shall be unlawful for the commissioners or other state officers of any penitentiary or other reformatory institution in the State of Montana to let by contract to any person or persons, or corporation, the labor of any convict confined within said institution." To that motion the gentleman from Custer offered the amendment to insert in the place of the word "commissioners" the words "warden or other officers in authority." So that it shall read "It shall be unlawful for the warden or other state officers in authority."

The Chair then put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The question is now upon the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, to which the amendment just adopted applies, and which has just been read.

The Chair then put the motion on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and the same was declared carried on division by a vote of 38 in the affirmative to 9 in the negative.

The Chair declared the substitute adopted.

The Chairman: If there are no other amendments to Section 3, the Clerk will read Section 4.

The Clerk read Section 4 as follows: "Section 4. That no child under fourteen years of age shall by any corporation or person, be employed in either mines or manufactories in this State."

Mr. Gibson, of Cascade, sent up a substitute for Section 4, which the Clerk read as follows: "That no child under fourteen years of age shall be employed by any person or corporation in the mines of this State, and in no manufactory within the State, for more than four months in any year."

Mr. Marion, of Missoula, sent up an amendment which the Clerk read as follows: "Amend by striking out the word 'fourteen' and insert in lieu thereof the word 'twelve'."

The Chairman: The question is on the motion made by the gentleman from Missoula to amend the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I am opposed to the amendment; first, because the child of that age is too young and in the next place, I am opposed to this whole provision. I am in favor of leaving it to the Legislature. The gentlemen think they have accomplished a good deal when they put a provision of this kind in the constitution. I say it has no sense; there is no penalty attached to it; it doesn't amount to the paper it is written on, and it properly belongs to the Legislature, and I believe there is no Legislature that can be convened in Montana but what would enact a law to that effect and provide heavy penalties for it. Your provision in the constitution doesn't amount to anything; it leaves the whole matter to the Legislature. The Legislature has got to go over all this matter again and provide a penalty, and I am for that reason opposed to encumbering the constitution with such matters as this. Let us put something in that amounts to something; such a prohibition amounts to nothing whatever.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marion), and the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Gibson).

The Chair put the motion on the question of the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Gibson) and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out Section 4.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson: If this question is to strike out this like everything else because the gentlemen say that there is no Legislature but what would pass such an enactment, I want to ask how it is that there have been fifteen or sixteen Legislatures and there have been no enactments of this kind. We have places in the Territory of Montana in both mines and workshops where it will kill any child to work four months in the year, and for that reason I am in favor of this provision standing just as it is. I claim it is no fit place for any child to work in the mine or workshop. They are liable to be blown up or killed; they are poisoned with the noxious air of these places, or they may be crushed with heavy weights falling upon them. I am in favor of the provision standing just as it is.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the gentleman, supposing any mining company fails to comply with that provision of the Constitution, what will you do with him? Are you providing any penalty?

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson: I should ask Judge Knowles to make some penalty.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: That is, you would make the Constitution a criminal statute? When you want to limit the powers of government upon a matter of this kind I am not here to interpose any objection, but this is a limitation upon the powers of individuals, and when you come to individuals you have got to make a penalty—you have got to add some kind of punishment as a penalty. Now, I have been in favor of such legislation as this, and whenever the time comes in Montana when children under fourteen years of age are employed in mines or factories, there will be found plenty of legislation upon that subject. It has been a fight that has been fought and won years ago in England. There the people rose up in their might and demanded legislation of Parliament to prohibit the working of children in mines. It was found that working children in mines away from the sunlight, not because they were liable to be hurt, not because they were liable to be injured by bad air, but because of the lack of God's sunlight, warped them and retarded their growth. Children growing up to manhood want the sunlight; they want the free air of heaven. The young of all animals, the whole animal creation is stunted and warped under such conditions; even fish that have no eyes are affected. It was found that the health of the children was ruined by working in mines. And for this reason I do not believe that there is any legislative body that could be convened in Montana but would pass a criminal statute. But you come in here with a prohibition on your citizens. Why, we are establishing a constitution here for the government, and when the government comes into being it can enact such statutes as these. I know of no legislative body in the United States where this question has been presented to them as a practical matter, that has not adopted it. The only thing I know of of the kind where such thing has been declared to be unconstitutional is where a Governor of New York vetoed a bill that provided that the street car drivers of New York should not be compelled to work fourteen or fifteen hours a day. He said it was not proper legislation. Here is a provision for the Statute of Montana Territory that I have been referred to: "All corporations or individuals working mines or manufactories, who shall employ, or permit to be employed, any children, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000." That is a Statute of Montana; it exists on the Statute Book; it will go into effect as the law of Montana and be enforced as a law of this State, and your constitutional provision does not amount to the paper it is written on, while that does amount to something.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, sent an amendment.

The Chairman, The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers the following amendment to Section 4. Add after Section 4, the following words, "The Legislative Assembly shall enforce this provision by appropriate legislation."

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I desire to enter a hearty concurrence to what has been uttered by Judge Knowles upon this question, and also to record my opposition to the amendment that has just been offered, upon this ground. Gentlemen seem to have mistaken the purpose of this body. We are not here as the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana; we are here for the purpose of enacting constitutional principles upon which shall be based the subsequent legislation of the State. Now it is argued that this is a good proposition. I heartily endorse it; this is a good proposition; so are some things which are contained in the Ten Commandments, and yet at the same time, that is no argument in favor of incorporating them in the Constitution of the State of Montana. We are not here for the purpose of making a Statute Book; if we are, then let us take the Statutes of the Territory of Montana, and those that are good, those that are beneficial, those that have served the purposes of this territory well, let us put them into the Constitution and do away with the Legislative Assembly entirely. Judge Knowles has completely answered every argument in favor of this proposition. Gentlemen of the convention we are fast drifting in all of our deliberations too much in the direction of legislation instead of incorporating principles in our constitution, and for that reason I say that though it be a good bill, and I would support it were this a Legislative Assembly, and were there any penalty affixed to it, yet at the same time this is not the time to have such a proposition introduced here. If we keep on endorsing and incorporating everything that is proposed here because it is good, because it is wise, because it is beneficial, a volume as large as Webster's Unabridged Dictionary will not contain the Constitution of the State of Montana. I am therefore not in favor of any motion which incorporates this in the constitution.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole and the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question is now on the motion to strike out Section 4.

The Chair put the motion moved by the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, striking out Section 4 and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move the committee do now rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the committee of the whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 5, being Resolution No. 4, in reference to printing General Laws. They have directed their Chairman to report to the convention that they request that it be referred to the committee on Legislative Affairs.

The President: Gentlemen of the convention, you have heard the report of the committee of the whole on the matter to which the Chairman has referred, and if there be no objection the matter will be so referred to the Committee on Legislative Affairs.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the Committee of the whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 11, Article on Labor, have made some progress, but not having finished the consideration of said article, have requested their Chairman to report that fact to the convention and ask leave to sit again.

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the report of the Committee. If there be no objection it will be received and leave granted to sit again.

Mr. Eaton, of Park, I move we take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer. I move as an amendment to that that we do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

A division being called for, the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) was declared lost by a vote of 20 in the affirmative to 32 in the negative.

The motion of the gentleman from Park having been seconded, the Chair put the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 8 o'clock P. M.

Monday, July 22nd, 1889. Evening Session. 8 P. M.

The convention was called to order. President Clark in the Chair.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The convention upon taking a recess was engaged in the consideration of General Orders. That is now the order of business before the convention.

Mr. Gibson, of Cascade: Mr. President, as my colleague, Mr. Webster, is sick, I would ask that he be excused.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade will be excused if there be no objection.

Mr. Haskell, of Dawson: I would ask leave of absence for my Colleague, Mr. Goddard, until Tuesday, if he has not been heretofore excused.

Mr. President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused until Tuesday.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the consideration of General Orders.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: If the gentleman will wait a moment, as Chairman of the Engrossing and Enrolling Committee, I would like to make a report. I sent up the report to the Clerk's desk.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Engrossing and Enrolling Committee will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom were referred Propositions Nos. 1, 2, and 13, beg leave to report that they have carefully compared each of the engrossed copies of said propositions with the originals as amended in committee of the whole, and find them correctly engrossed.

(Signed) MIDDLETON, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection the report will be received.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer. Mr. Chairman, I move that Proposition No. 1 be referred to the Printing Committee for the purpose of being printed and that Propositions Nos. 2 and 13 be referred to the Engrossing and Enrolling Committee for the purpose of being enrolled.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Toole), moves that the convention do now resolve itself into committee of the whole for the consideration of general orders. Is there a second to the motion?

The motion was seconded and the same was declared carried.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, will please resume his position in the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke, in the Chair. The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The convention is now in committee of the whole on Proposition No. 11, Section No. 5.

The Clerk read Sec. 5, as follows: "Sec. 5. That on and after the adoption of this constitution by the State of Montana, it shall be unlawful for any company or corporation to pay their employees in any other way than in lawful money of the United States."

Mr. Sargeant, of Silver Bow: I move that Section 5 be stricken out. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: I oppose that motion. I think this is a very good provision and would like to see it incorporated in the Constitution. I am certainly opposed to its being stricken out. I shall vote against the motion.

Mr. Sargeant, of Silver Bow: The reason why I object to the clause is because it is matter for Legislative action, if incorporated at all; it is something with which this convention has absolutely nothing to do. If this convention is going to regulate all the relations between the employer and his employees, we can sit here until election day and then our duties will not be over. I do not think any argument is required to show that this is not desired as a subject of constitutional provision.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 6 as follows: "Section 6. That on and after the adoption of this Constitution by the State of Montana, all state, county and municipal work shall be done by the day; and that eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work for all classes of mechanics and laborers in connection with the same."

Mr. Marion, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move that Section No. 6 be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I wish to show the reasons why I oppose that. It is a well known fact by persons who have paid much attention to this matter that state institutions, both in new and old States, are the cause of more jobbery than any other kind of public business. We are all familiar with the history of the State Capitol of the State of New York. I can see no reason why this clause cannot be put into the constitution. The tendency of the times is to something of this kind, and eight hours constitutes a legal day's work in nearly all branches or departments of business. The tendency of the times is such that we ought to take this step here and now. The forces of nature are being utilized to such an extent, that steam, electricity, and other forces are being employed in the matter of labor, so that it is a wrong to interfere with the men who do work and who are growing less every year, and I think it is a wrong state of affairs, when men who are compelled to work are made to work ten, twelve and fourteen hours a day. They are the very class of people who should advance in this world and who should have that time and opportunity to read and keep pace with the times and cultivate their minds that give men a taste for the higher things of life. The State would be better for it; the community at large would be better for it. The tendency of the times is in that direction and is pointing that way. Either this section or some similar one should be adopted.

Mr. Marion, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I have no remarks to make in regard to this section. I believe the meaning of the section is plain enough.

A division being called for the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marion) was declared carried by a vote of 21 in the affirmative to 19 in the negative.

The Chairman: I would call the attention of the committee to the fact that three other propositions were referred to the committee to be considered in connection with this proposition. What is the pleasure of the committee?

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move that when the committee rise it refer the propositions back with the recommendation that they do not pass.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I would offer as an amendment to that motion that those propositions be read and acted on separately, so that the members will know what they are referring back.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I hope this motion will not prevail. The gentleman who made the motion that they be referred back with the recommendation that they do not pass knows that the contents of them and knows that the substance of them to a considerable extent was embodied in the proposition just considered, and it seems to me a complete waste of time to consider all these propositions again after the main propositions have been considered and acted upon.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I think there is one proposition there about Chinese labor which was not embraced.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the gentleman I would state that there is nothing in any of these propositions that has any bearing on what has been acted upon, and my reason for moving the amendment was to have each proposition read and acted upon separately. If the committee wishes to take any action upon them let them do so, but let us not throw them in the waste basket without knowing what we are doing.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: It seems but fair that the gentleman who moved these propositions should have them considered, and I hope to see the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, carried.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I simply wish to say that I hope the motion of my colleague from Silver Bow (Mr. Hogan) will prevail. For one, I should not wish to see any person or any proposition treated unfairly. I believe that a proposition should stand on its merits, if it has any, and if it has not, this body is competent to judge. I hope there will be no disposition shown at any time by the committee of the whole or by this convention to treat discourteously any proposition of any gentleman of this convention.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I do not believe in any wholesale disposition of propositions and I am in favor of the motion made by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Hogan), with reference to considering these propositions separately. As the gentleman from Custer has suggested, the gentleman who made this motion to refer them in bulk may be well acquainted with their contents; the gentleman from Custer himself may be well acquainted with their contents; but I venture to say there is not upon the floor of this committee room a half dozen members who can tell what these propositions are. Hence, I am in favor of taking them up separately and giving them proper consideration before reporting them back.

The Chair put the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Hogan), and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the propositions.

The Clerk read as follows: "Proposition No. 7 by A. R. Joy, Chinese Labor. Section 1. Par. 1. No corporation now existing or hereafter formed under the laws of this State shall after the adoption of this constitution employ directly or indirectly in any capacity any Chinese or Mongolian.

Par. 2. The legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to enforce this provision.

Section 2. No Chinese shall be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work within this State except in punishment for crime.

Section 3, Par. 1. The Legislature shall discourage by all means within its power the immigration to this State of all foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States.

Par. 2. All contracts for Chinese and Coolie labor hereafter made to be performed in this State shall be void.

Par. 3. All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor shall be punished by such fines and penalties as the legislature may prescribe.

Par. 4. The legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for the removal of Chinese without the limits of such cities and towns, or for their location within prescribed portions of those limits.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I ask that the history of the proposition be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 7 by A. R. Joy, Chinese Labor, July 11th, received, read and referred to Committee No. 23 on Labor. Mr. President: The Committee on Labor have had under consideration Proposition No. 7 and have directed me to report the same to the convention with the recommendation that it do not pass. This does not apply to paragraph 4 of Section 3, which we recommend be referred to the Committee on City, County and Town organizations, where it properly belongs.

Signed BREEN, Chairman.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move that when the Committee rise they report back to the convention, recommending that this proposition do not pass.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 3 by Hogan to prevent importation of labor under contract into the State of Montana.

It shall be unlawful for any individual, company or corporation having work done in the State of Montana, to import into the State any person or persons under contract or agreement to perform any labor in the State of Montana.

That any individual, company or corporation violating any provision hereof, shall forfeit to the State one thousand dollars ($1,000) for each and every violation hereof, to be recovered by an action at law.

The clerk read the history of said Proposition as follows: Proposition No. 3 by Hogan, to prevent importation of contract labor, July 11th, received, read and referred to Committee No. 23 on Labor. Mr. President: The Committee on Labor have considered Proposition No. 3 and have directed me to report the same back with the recommendation that it do not pass.

Signed PETER BREEN, Chairman.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move that when the committee rise they report the resolution back with the recommendation that it do not pass.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I would state to the Committee that I hope this motion will not carry. My reason for doing this is that the only objection which was brought up in the Committee against it, or seemed to be, was the unconstitutionality of it. I do not think myself it is unconstitutional; it may be, but I do not think it. I think there are several things we have done that would infringe on the rights of the people as much as that. I believe it would be a benefit to all the people of the Territory; I believe it is something that would help the Territory in different ways. There is one thing it will do; we will get a better class of people in here. I do not believe any person that is brought in here under contract is worthy to be an American citizen. They are generally a class of people that are not identified with the American people or their institutions. They are an injury to everybody. That is the reason why I hope the motion will not prevail.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Resolution No. 17 offered by Field of Park: Protection of Discharged Employees, July 11th, received, read and referred to Committee No. 23 on Labor; July 20th, reported back without recommendation and placed on General File with No. 6. Mr. President: Your Committee on Labor to whom was referred Resolution No. 17 introduced by Field of Park, have had the same under consideration and have directed me to report the same back without recommendation.

(Signed) PETER BREEN, Chairman.

Resolution No. 17 relating to the protection of discharged employees:

Resolved, first, That if any person, agent, company or corporation after having discharged any employee from his or its service, shall prevent or attempt to prevent by word or writing of any kind such discharged employee from obtaining employment with any person, company or corporation, such person, agent or corporation shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable for damages to be recovered by civil action.

Second: If any railway company, or any other company or partnership or corporation in this State shall authorize or allow any of its or their agents to blacklist any discharged employees, or attempt by word or writing or any other means whatever to prevent such discharged employee or any employee who may have voluntarily left said company's service, from obtaining employment with any other person or company, such company or co-partnership shall be liable in treble damages to such employee so prevented from obtaining employment, to be recovered by him by a civil action.

The Chairman: What is the pleasure of the committee?

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move that when the committee rise it report the resolution back to the convention with recommendation that it do not pass.

The motion was seconded. The Chair put the motion to the house and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the committee rise and report to the convention.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move, sir, that when the committee rise it report Proposition No. 11, with the amendments, back to the convention with the recommendation that it be passed as amended.

The motion was seconded. The Chair put the motion to the House and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I now renew my motion that the committee do rise and report.

The Chair put the motion of the gentleman from Custer and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: Mr. Chairman, I move we take up Proposition No. 18.

There was no second to the motion.

Mr. Marion, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that this committee take up General File No. 14, Proposition No. 15 in relation to the Bureau of Agriculture.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move, Mr. Chairman, to strike out Proposition No. 15.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, the article which has just been adopted by the committee of the whole has a provision in it by which the Legislative Assembly may provide for a commissioner of Labor and Industry. I take it that that is sufficiently comprehensive to embrace a Commissioner of Agriculture, if the Legislature shall deem it necessary to create that office. I think, sir, from the start that we ought to make as economical a government under this constitution as it is possible for us to do. At this time there is in my judgment no special demand or necessity for the creation of that office, but if there should be upon the assembling of the Legislative Assembly, which will be not later perhaps than the 15th day of November next, in my judgment there is ample opportunity for the creation of that office.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the motion made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, that when this committee rise, it report this section or article back to the convention with the recommendation that it be stricken from the file.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman of Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: Mr. Chairman, I move that we take up Proposition No. 14, General File No. 12.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move to amend to take up General File No. 11, Proposition No. 13.

The Chairman: That has been passed.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Proposition No. 13 relating to School Lands, has that been passed?

The Chairman: The motion before the committee is to take up Proposition No. 14, General File No. 12 in relation to Rights of Suffrage.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: The gentleman from Silver Bow moves to amend to take up No. 13 instead of No. 12.

The Chairman: That has been passed by the convention.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: What is the pleasure of the committee? The Clerk will proceed to read Section 1.

The Clerk read as follows: "Section 1. All elections by the people shall be by ballot."

Mr. Cardwell, of Jefferson: I would ask that section 2 be passed over for the present. Some of the gentlemen who are on that committee are not here tonight. I would ask that the section be passed for the present.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I would move you, sir, the Proposition No. 14 be made the special order for 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Wednesday. I make this motion for the purpose of enabling all the members of the committee who made this report to be present.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: It occurs to me that if that is the only proposition that the committee wish to amend, that that might be referred and made a special order at that time and we could proceed with the rest of the propositions, and not take up some other proposition. As I understand, there are to be some amendments relating to the qualifications of voters, and who shall be entitled to vote. I would move an amendment that Section 2 be made a special order instead of the whole proposition.

Mr. Bullard, of Jefferson: I would ask if amendments cannot be offered when this proposition comes up for final passage?

The Chairman: That is the rule of the convention, as the Chair understands it.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I do not see that there is any use for us to be deferring these different propositions. It will certainly not go to its final passage this evening. Some of the committee can be here on its final passage and offer the amendments. I think if the members of those committees want to be present they should be here. We don't care about spending the summer here, and if you defer all these propositions just to suit the committeemen, you are apt to be here until next October.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I made the motion for the reason that one of the members of that committee is a cripple. He finds it, if not impossible at least very inconvenient to be out in the evening. He has an amendment to offer to some portion of this Proposition No. 14 which he considers material, and upon which he would like to be heard. I believe, sir, that the motion should prevail for this reason alone. I believe that we should extend to every member of this convention every courtesy that is within our power to extend, and I believe, sir, that it is our duty to listen to any gentleman who has an important amendment to offer to a proposition of this kind.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I desire to state my concurrence with the views of the gentleman of Missoula in regard to this matter. I am well aware that one of the gentlemen, a member of this committee, is not able to get here very well in the evening. He is a gentleman that is very deeply interested in this subject, and I think in all courtesy to this gentleman that we should defer the consideration of at least this section until it is convenient for him to be here with us in the day time.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I second the motion of the gentleman from Missoula.

The Chair put the question on motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford), the same was declared carried, the Proposition No. 14 was declared the special order for Wednesday afternoon at 2 P. M.

Mr. Buford, of Madison: I move this committee now take up Resolution No. 8, General File, No. 13.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Resolution No. 8 as follows: "Resolution No. 8 relating to School Lands, introduced by Luce. Resolved, that none of the lands granted by Congress to the State of Montana for the support of common schools shall ever be sold or granted, or disposed of in any manner except by lease, nor shall any moneys received therefrom be used for any other purpose than for the support of the common schools of the State."

Mr. Bullard, of Jefferson: I move you, sir, that when the committee rise it report this section back with the recommendation that it be adopted.

Mr. J. K. Poole, of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to offer an amendment which I will send up in a moment.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I desire to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) as follows: "Resolved, that the lands granted by Congress to the State of Montana for the support of common schools and for university purposes, may be sold or leased in the manner and at such times as may be prescribed by law, provided that none of such lands shall be sold for less than $10 an acre."

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, as Chairman of the Committee on Education, I express for myself, and I think for our committee, regret that we have taken up this matter at this time. The subject embraced in the original proposition, as well as the amendment just read, has been gone over thoroughly by the committee to which I refer. Our report is before you in printed form, and I think it would be manifestly unjust to your Committee to entertain this proposition at this time for consideration; and therefore I move as a substitute for all that is before us that when this committee rise they report back this proposition with the recommendation that it be considered at the same time with General File No. 16, which is the report of the Committee on Education.

The Chairman: The Chair is of the impression that this resolution is not in order at this time. The Chair is of the opinion that a resolution was passed a few days ago that when these independent propositions upon subjects cognate with the report of standing committees came up they should be considered with them. The resolution is therefore not in order, and will be considered when the report of the standing committee on Education is before the committee.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move that we take up Proposition No. 21, General File No. 21, Judicial Departments.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk proceeded to read Section 1, Proposition 21.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: If it be in order, sir, I would suggest Proposition No. 22 be taken up first. We will not have time to consider all of Proposition 21 tonight, and we might get through with Proposition No. 22.

The Chairman: If there be no objection Proposition No. 22 will be read.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, objected.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Proposition No. 21.

The Clerk read as follows: "Article—Judicial Departments, Section 1. The judicial power of the State shall be vested in the Senate, sitting as a court of impeachment, in a Supreme Court, District Court, Justices of the Peace, and such other inferior courts as the Legislative Assembly may establish in any incorporated city or town."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to strike out the words "sitting as a Court of Impeachment."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I hope the amendment will not prevail. There is not a State in this Union that does not provide a Court of Impeachment in dealing with certain officers, and it is as much a part of the duty of the State as its Supreme Court. It is a wonderful proposition to come from a gentleman of the legal lore and learning of my friend from Great Falls. He certainly must be stupefied this evening.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I beg to return my thanks to the gentleman from Silver Bow County for seconding this motion of mine so as to enable me to air my views before the committee upon this matter. I believe, sir, that the judicial proceedings of an impeachment are the most important that can be had in the State. I do not believe because it has been the practice in the past thousand years, that they should be tried before a political body, and that the new State of Montana should fall into that same groove. I believe, sir, that when an impeachment of an officer is necessary he should be impeached before the highest judicial tribunal of the State, and in the Supreme Court of the State, a Court which is farthest removed from political or partisan bias, or influence, and a Court which is particularly and especially learned in the law. I believe there is no use—I can see no use in following the old land marks in this particular case. The Senate of the State will be a party body; it will be composed of a large number of men. The question of the impeachment of a public officer will, to a certain extent, bring out all the latent prejudices and biased feelings of the parties connected with the case, as well as the members of the senate before whom it is tried, and it should be removed from an arena of that class or kind. Now, no matter what the judiciary committee may think of the fact, I believe, and I am glad again that the gentleman has allowed me to express it before the committee, that that should be relegated with the grand jury and other things to the rear; that it is no good argument that every other State of the Union has a court of this kind, and it is no argument that it has been in existence from time immemorial. I believe, sir, it would be a great stride in advance of the natural progress of things if the new State of Montana should wipe out of existence the Senate as a Court of Impeachment and place the power in the Supreme Court of Montana.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 2 as follows: "Section 2. The Supreme Court, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, shall have appellate jurisdiction only, which shall be co-extensive with the State, and shall have a general superintending control over all inferior courts, under such regulations and limitations as may be prescribed by law."

There being no amendments to section 2, the Clerk read Section 3 as follows: "Section 3. The appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court shall extend to all cases at law and in equity, subject, however, to such limitations and regulations as may be prescribed by law. Said court shall have power in its discretion to issue and to hear and determine writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition and injunction, and such other original and remedial writs as may be necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. When a jury is required in the Supreme Court to determine an issue of fact, said court shall have power to summon such jury in such manner as may be provided by law. Each of the justices of the Supreme Court shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition by, or on behalf of, any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or the Supreme Court, or before any district court of the State, or any judge thereof; and such writs may be heard and determined by the justice, or court, or judge, before whom they are made returnable. Each of the justices of the Supreme Court may also issue and hear and determine writs of certiorari in proceedings for contempt in the District Court, and such other writs as may be authorized by law to issue."

There being no amendments to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4 as follows: "Section 4. At least three terms of the Supreme Court shall be held each year at the seat of government."

There being no amendments to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5 as follows: "Section 5. The Supreme Court shall consist of three justices, a majority of whom shall be necessary to form a quorum or pronounce a decision; but one or more of said justices may adjourn the court from day to day, or to a day certain; and the Legislative Assembly shall have the power to increase the number of such justices to not less than three nor more than five."

There being no amendments to Section 5 the Clerk read Section 6 as follows: "Section 6. The justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the electors of the State, at large, as hereinafter provided."

There being no amendments to Section 6 the Clerk read Section 7 as follows: "Section 7. The term of office of the justices of the Supreme Court, except as in this constitution otherwise provided, shall be six years."

There being no amendments to Section 7 the Clerk read Section 8 as follows: "Section 8. There shall be elected at the first general election provided for by this constitution, one chief justice and two associate justices, who shall constitute the judges of the Supreme Court, and they shall hold their offices until their respective successors are elected and qualified. The terms of office of said justices shall be designated on the ballots at the time of their election. The chief justice shall at said first election be elected for the term of three years, and said two associate justices, one for the term of five years, and one for the term of seven years, and after said first election one justice (or more, if the Legislative Assembly shall increase the members to five) shall be chosen every two years, and the terms of office of said additional justices shall be fixed by law in such manner that at least one of said justices shall be elected every two years. The chief justice shall preside at all terms of the Supreme Court, and in case of his absence the judge having the shortest term to serve shall preside in his stead."

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: There is one question I would like to have explained. After the first term who is to be chief justice.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: As I take it the judge who is elected to succeed the chief justice will succeed the chief justice.

There being no amendments to Section 8 the Clerk read Section 9 as follows: "Section 9. There shall be a clerk of the Supreme Court who shall hold his office for the term of six years, except that the Clerk first elected shall hold his office only until the general election in the year 1892, and until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be elected by the electors at large of the State, and his compensation shall be fixed by law, and his duties prescribed by law, and by the rules of the Supreme Court."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I again move that that section be amended by striking out the word "six" and inserting "two" where it refers to the years in the second line. Change the term from six years to two years.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I can see why a judicial office should have a comparatively long duration, but I can see no reason why a clerical position, more particularly a political one, as the Clerk of that Court will be to a great extent, should hold an office for six years. I believe that the people should have the opportunity of electing the man who fills that position as often as they elect the one who fill the important positions in the several counties and in the State. The arguments which obtain as to the advisability of the long duration of judicial officers certainly will not apply to this clerical office, and taking all positions without an exception, judicial or otherwise, I believe that the nearer they come to the people the better they are for the people; the better they will perform their services and their duties, and the better satisfaction they will give. And if they are officers who are inclined to shirk any of their duties, if they do not comply with the law, the people at the following election can relegate them to private life. I believe in having elections often, and more particularly for clerical position. I hope that the term of this office will be reduced, if not to two years, at least to four.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I oppose the amendment of the gentleman for this reason, that the office of Clerk of the Supreme Court is one of the most important offices connected with that body. It is not every novice that can go into the Supreme Court room and discharge the duties there, and I think it would be the height of folly, with all due respect to my friend's better judgment,—for I know he is a man of sterling judgment; he never errs except when he gets on a judicial matter of this kind—but it seems to me that the Clerk of the Supreme Court should be elected for as long a term as one of the judges. Now it is the custom in many of the States to appoint a Clerk during life or good behavior, but out in this new territory that is starting out de novo in all of its branches there seems to be a dread of life appointments. In consequence I say it is better to refer this matter to the people, and the judiciary committee having this thing under consideration concluded after looking at it in all of its phases that it would be better to fix the term with that of the judges, six years. I think it is eminently proper that it should be so, and while I know it is a nice thing to go before the people every two years, and there is a sort of sound about it that is very pleasant to the popular ear, it nevertheless will obstruct the administration of justice in our Supreme Court. We have endeavored in organizing a Supreme Court here to organize it upon such a basis as will insure speedy action and a certain determination of all questions brought before it. And there is not a judge on the Supreme Bench, there is not a lawyer who practices in the Supreme Court, who does not know it is quite important to have an active, intelligent, upright Clerk, as to have an active, efficient, intelligent, upright judge on the bench. I hope the recommendation of the committee will be carried out. While I am very sorry to come into contact with my learned and amiable friend from Cascade, yet I think he will come to the conclusion that although it may not have as much of the popular eclat about it as it should have, yet it is the better course to pursue.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, and the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 9 the Clerk read Section 10 as follows: "Section 10. No person shall be eligible to the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, unless he shall have been admitted to practice law in the Supreme Court of the territory or State of Montana, be at least thirty years of age, and a citizen of the United States, nor unless he shall have resided in said territory or State at least two years next preceding his election."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I move you that the committee do now rise, report progress on Proposition No. 21, and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 22 in the affirmative to 31 in the negative.

There being no further amendments to Section 10 the Clerk read Section 11 as follows: "Section 11. The District Courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases at law and in equity, including all cases which involve the title or right of possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll or municipal fine and in all cases in which the debt, damage, claim or demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy exceeds fifty dollars; and in all criminal cases amounting to felony and all cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for; of actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer; of proceedings in insolvency; of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; of all matters of probate; of actions of divorce and for annulment of marriage, and of all such special actions and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for. And said Courts shall have the power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor in all cases where they are authorized so to do by the laws of the United States. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in such cases arising in justices and other inferior courts in their respective districts as may be prescribed by law and consistent with this constitution. Their process shall extend to all parts of the State, provided that all actions for the recovery of, the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real property shall be commenced in the county in which the real property, or any part thereof, affected by such action or actions, is situated. Said courts and the judges thereof shall have power also to issue, hear and determine, writs of mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, injunction and other original and remedial writs, and also all writs of habeas corpus, on petition by, or on behalf of, any person in actual custody in their respective districts. Injunctions, writs of prohibition, and habeas corpus may be issued and served on legal holidays and non-judicial days."

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin, sent up an amendment to Section 11.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Cooper) moves to strike out in line four the word "fifty" and insert the word "one hundred."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I would like to have that section fixed so that settlers along the lines of these railroads can collect the value of a horse without having to go to the District Courts.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I think the gentleman misunderstands the meaning of the section. The district court may have jurisdiction of all cases where the amount in controversy exceeds fifty dollars, but that does not prevent the inferior courts from having jurisdiction over a larger amount than fifty dollars.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin withdrew the amendment.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I now desire to renew the motion which was made a few minutes ago, that the committee do now rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again. I will state my reasons, if the Chair will put the motion.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: In explanation of the motion I would say, Mr. Chairman, that the very next section provides for the division of the State into judicial districts. A large number of the members from different parts of the territory are now absent who are anxious to be here when this proposition is reached. The report of the Judiciary Committee evidently contemplates that the members from the different parts of the territory should express their opinion, their will, and their wishes with reference to the districting of the State. It is only proper we should hear them and be heard also with regard to the condition the people may be in in the particular sections.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I agree with the gentleman in regard to the statement he has made. I think it is but fair that the absentees should be here and express their sentiments in regard to it, as they are as much interested as the balance of us, and I hope the motion will prevail.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I would suggest to the gentleman that that is not the next section; it is the following one.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I suggest that it is probable that there never will be a fuller attendance than there is now. In looking over the house, it seems to me, the convention is as full as it has been at any time since I have been here.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I do not believe the gentleman means just what he says. I have never seen the convention looking as sober as it does this evening.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 24 in the affirmative to thirty-five in the negative.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Sec. 12.

The Clerk read Sec. 12 as follows: "The State shall be divided into Judicial Districts, in each of which there shall be elected by the electors thereof one judge of the District Court, whose term of office shall be four years, except that the District Judges first elected shall hold their offices only until the general election in the year 1892, and until their successors are elected and qualified. Any Judge of the District Court may hold Court for any other Judge of the District Court, and shall do so when required by law."

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, to bring the matter before the Convention, and have it settled in Committee, I offer an amendment that shall go into this section which will provide that each of the organized counties in Montana shall have a District Court, and in each at least one Clerk shall be elected by the duly qualified electors. I wish to offer it now, and I do not believe it will interfere in any shape, manner or form with the Article as introduced by the Committee. I think it is the opinion of the majority of the convention that that should be the manner in which the Districts should be divided. I move that as an amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: Is this a substitute for the section?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: No sir, not a substitute,—it will combine sections 12 and 13.

Heading: "There shall be in each of the organized counties in Montana a District Court, for which at least one Judge shall be elected by the people, whose term of office shall be four years,—except that the District Judges first elected shall hold their offices until the general election in the year 1892, or until their successors are duly elected and qualified.

The Chairman: Does the gentleman from Cascade offer that as an amendment to section 12?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Sections 12 and 13 combined.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: The amendment in the form proposed is, in my opinion, not as it should be, and to get at what the gentleman wants, if he will let the section 12 stand as it is we can then amend section 13, if he desires.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I will withdraw it.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: The reason for that is, Mr. Chairman, that that would take away from the Legislature entirely the power over the District, whereas this way it would not.

Clerk then read section 13, as follows: "Until otherwise provided by law said District shall be constituted as follows:

1st District: Lewis & Clarke County.

2nd District: Silver Bow County.

3rd District: Deer Lodge County.

4th District: Missoula County.

5th District: Gallatin County.

6th District: Jefferson County.

7th District: Custer County.

8th District: Beaverhead and Madison Counties.

9th District: Park and Yellowstone Counties.

10th District: Cascade and Meagher Counties.

11th District: Fergus and Dawson Counties.

12th District: Choleau County."

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I wish to offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Madison offers the following amendment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read first the amendment offered by the gentleman from Madison.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend section 13 by striking out the word "and" in the 4th line and inserting the words "9th District" and renumber the subsequent districts.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade.

Clerk read as follows: "Until otherwise provided by law each of the organized counties in the State shall constitute a separate Judicial District."

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I understand that upon this matter there is a difference of opinion among the Judiciary Committee, and that some of the members of the Committee are in favor of this system. I believe it would be of great advantage to the new State of Montana to make each County—each one of the present counties—and each county that will hereafter be organized—a separate judicial District. We do away entirely with the Probate Judge—abolish that particular officer entirely—and the District Court of each County performs all the duties pertaining to that office. It simplifies matters; it makes less courts, and it facilitates the transaction of business in the courts; instead of waiting term in and term out to have lawsuits settled. Under this system, when courts are open from one end of the year to the other suits will be settled in a comparatively short time after they have been commenced. The system, I believe, has been in existence in California since the date of their new Constitution, and I understand, from lawyers, that it works well,—that it is a great advantage not only to the judiciary but to all the people. I believe that courts would transact their business in less time, with ten-fold less expense, by having a high court in session in each County always. I understand that the judiciary committee feel the same way, only that they think a few counties, one or two probably, have not business enough, nor population enough, to warrant it at present; but I believe the smallest county can well afford to stand the extra expense, if there is any, in the saving it will be to the people.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I am opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade. I am aware of the fact that there are certain counties in Montana whose population and business will justify the establishment and maintenance of a District Court within those counties alone. I am also aware that there are a number, and a considerable number of the counties in this Territory wherein the business would not be sufficient to justify the payment and maintenance of one District Court. Now, I presume that the different delegates here, representing these different districts, are better posted as to the needs and requirements of the several districts and counties that they represent than I am, but as one of the representatives from Gallatin county to which the judiciary committee have assigned one judge, I desire to enter my protest at this time. I know that one hve District Court Judge, assigned to the counties of Park, Gallatin and Madison, even if all the Probate jurisdiction has been conferred upon the District Courts, can transact every bit of the business by holding four terms a year in those counties, and then have five months in the year for recreation. Now, it is true, it has been argued, and will be urged upon this floor, that by the abolition of the Probate courts you have contributed to the salary of the District Court Judge the fees and emoluments which have heretofore gone to the Probate Judge and his Clerk. That is true, I admit it, and that thereby, so it is said, this will reduce the pay that you will have to make to the District Judge to a minimum. I am willing to admit that. But here is the proposition, if one man can do the work and do it well, in justice to himself, and in justice to the people of the three counties, is it not the height of absurdity and folly for us to say that there shall be three men to do that work? Now, I am not here posing as a parsimonious economist or anything of the kind; but I do say that when one man can do the work of three counties, and do it well, that we are not treating the people of this State right by paying three men to do it. Now, as to the other Districts of the Territory, I confess I am not so well posted on the business of them as upon these three; but, as for the three districts to which I have referred, I do sincerely enter a protest to this system, and hope that there will be a substitute proposed, at some time during the course of the proceedings, which will make less districts here. Give Lewis and Clarke County a district. I am informed by men who are acquainted with the business here that they are entitled to it, and it is only a question of a short time when they will need more. Silver Bow is in the same condition. Deer Lodge is, I am informed, in the same condition. Take the counties East of here,—many of the smaller ones,—and I do not believe that the people require it,—and while I do say that this arrangement is a good one whereby the work of the Probate Courts is transferred to the District Courts, and the District Judge receives the emoluments of the Probate court, yet why should we contribute that money towards the payment of three men when one will do just as well? I am opposed to the amendment.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman must remember that these small counties have not yet passed into a state of innocuous desuetude; they are yet expanding; they are growing; and while I would join him heartily in his sentiment, if we were cutting swaddling clothes for an infant, why, I would say cut it down to the minimum—but we are not; these counties are growing, and we expect them to grow amazingly more rapidly. We are not making this constitution for little Custer and little Gallatin counties as they are today. Why, as soon as we have entered as a State, people will come from all over the country here, and it will be necessary to provide for a much more extensive system of litigation than we have today. Now, if I believe that these counties would remain as they are today, I would say "bunch them up," a dozen together, as you do herrings, and dispose of them by the dozen. But why not go in now and provide a system that is matured, so that when the population comes we will be ready to meet them? I think the proposition a good one. I favored it in the committee and I favor it here.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I do not wish to impose upon the convention, but I wish to answer that argument. I believe in this convention providing for present conditions, and the providing an expansive system here of judiciary that may be expanded to suit the developments of this country. I do not want to see the development of the country retarded. I want to be up to the times, but I say it is a mistake, and a serious mistake, to take a step ten years in advance of the times and endeavor to suit it to the present conditions. Let us make a system that will just suit the present conditions, and make it expansive so that it may develop and fit the conditions of the country as it grows.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I understand it is provided in this section, as well as the one following, if that be adopted, that the Legislature may provide new districts, that is, may give more Judges to the several Districts as the occasion may require. Now, I think the position taken by the gentleman from Gallatin is a good one. I believe that such counties as Dawson and Yellowstone and Park and Choteau and Fergus, and those outlying counties, that have very little judicial business as compared with Silver Bow and Lewis and Clarke, and these other large counties, are very well and very liberally provided for by the report of the Committee on Judiciary. Now, I believe in having good work and good services, and in giving good pay, and in due time I propose to move an amendment with regard to that matter; but I am not in favor of imposing more districts on this State than is necessary to efficiently perform the business of the Territory or the State. Hence I believe that the plan adopted, as outlined in the report of the Judiciary Committee, is a very fair and liberal one. By the adoption of that report and the rejection of this amendment we will save four Districts to the Territory, which in the aggregate will amount to a good many thousands of dollars. I would rather take that money and pay more to the Judges that are constantly employed. We want efficient talent in all the Districts, and particularly in these large Districts where the Courts are behind from six months to a year and a half with their business,—hence I am opposed to the amendment.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: I do not wish to urge upon the committee the adoption of a motion or a substitute for any part of this section that would seem to be a hardship on any County. I have prepared an amendment relating to our own County, which, if this amendment as offered by Mr. Collins is rejected, I shall offer in behalf of Beaverhead. I believe, and I think I voice the sentiment of our people, so far as I can hear, that it is to the interests of Beaverhead County that it should be a separate District. It is possible that the court would cost a few more dollars than it does at the present time, but at the same time it would be a great convenience, and give us speedy action relative to litigation. I do not know how other counties are situated relative to Justices of the Peace, but in our County we have only two that I can think of at the present time that have served, or that we can get to serve,—only two townships that have Justices of the Peace. All business relative to the courts has got to be brought to Dillon before the Probate Court. Now, if we have to go from Beaverhead County fifty miles to Virginia City with every little matter, in the absence of Justices of the Peace, it occurs to me that the mileage and the necessary expense incurred would be heavier than the difference between the separate court system and the District Court system. I hope that Madison and Beaverhead counties can be set apart in districts separately. As to the other counties, I would not interfere with their arrangements, or whatever plans they may have.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: This is a proposition that was pretty thoroughly discussed in the Judiciary Committee, and it is true that there were some members who dissented from the voice of the majority of that Committee. While, Mr. Chairman, I was thoroughly impressed with the idea of this system of District Courts, I was in that committee, and still am, in favor of limiting it to the actual necessities and requirements of Montana. I cannot agree with my friend, Dr. Burleigh, and his suggestion would have a tendency to mislead this convention,—that is, in looking at the present situation of Montana Territory with what it may be in future. Now, I would suggest to this committee that this provides just exactly for that change of conditions. If the growth of those small counties is sufficient in the future to warrant the change, and in increase in it is desired, as the gentleman has suggested, then this constitutional provision makes ample provision for that; so that whatever exigencies arise, whenever one of these counties grows to magnitude enough to justify having a judge all the time, they cannot suffer long, but the next ensuing Legislature can make provision for that very thing. If, on the other hand, the conditions are reversed, and any county finds itself unequal to the task of supporting a separate judicial district, and it is desired that more counties shall be attached to any one particular district, it makes provision for that also. It makes provision in case this district should grow large enough that one judge could not do the business, that the Legislature may give them two judges, and it is the same with Silver Bow county, Deer Lodge or any other county. So that this makes provision for all those contingencies. Consequently we want to look at it as it now is under the present condition of affairs. While it may be well enough as a matter of pride to make a district of each county, I do not think it wise to do it. Another provision which should receive consideration is the salaries of these judges. If we increase the districts and make more judges than is necessary it burdens the State with unnecessary expense. Now, then, so far as Beaverhead County is concerned, I am pretty well posted on that. I am in the habit of attending court there about twice every year,—have been for some years,—the business of the district has been cleaned up in the district court in about two weeks; probably the last term they have run a little longer, and I am prepared to say that while these District Court Judges are invested with Probate jurisdiction and all that, on the other hand they are relieved of Supreme Court work. They have nothing to do but attend to the business of District Judges. This bill provides that not less than four terms of the District Court shall be held in each of these counties. That gives them ample time. It will give one Judge ample time to clean up all the business of those two counties, both of the Probate Court and general jurisdiction business, and have, as some gentleman suggested, six months of the year to spare. Then I say the work that would be imposed upon the Judge of that District Court, embracing those two counties, or any other two counties embraced in this proposition, would not be one-half the work that the Judge of Lewis and Clarke County has to do, nor would it be one-half of the work that the Judge of Deer Lodge County has to do, or the Judge of Silver Bow District would have to do. Consequently, as it now is, the work imposed on any of those Judges in these districts, in my opinion, would not be one-half the work or one-third the work that the Judges in these other counties, where there is only one county in the District, will have to do. While it would be much more justice, gentlemen of the Committee, to divide Lewis & Clarke County, and give her two Judges, and Deer Lodge and Silver Bow, the same, and according to the work—to the magnitude of it—it would be much more in consonance with reason to give each of these three counties two judges. But the Judiciary Committee were satisfied to try the experiment of one Judge in this County, one Judge in Deer Lodge County, and one Judge in Silver Bow County, notwithstanding the large amount of work that is to be done in those counties. The committee was satisfied to try the experiment, and if we find when the next Legislature after this meets, that one Judge cannot do the work of each of these counties, we will give them two; and, on the other hand, if in these counties where they are put together in one District one Judge cannot do the work of two counties, why then the Legislature can change it. There cannot be much injury done between now and the next session of the Legislature. So it seems to me that the proposition reported by the Judiciary Committee is the best one that can be devised, and I am opposed to these amendments. This thing was all done thoroughly in the Committee; it was discussed at a great deal of length. The proposition is to meet the present wants of the people of Montana in such a way that the system may be changed to meet the changing wants of the people. We think ourselves we have accomplished that.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman entirely misapprehends the tenor of my remarks,—I am not shedding crocodile tears over the work of judges or anything of that kind. I say there is not a county where it is not economy, as soon as the ball is put in motion, to provide for a Judge in each County rather than to keep the counties together, and for this reason: In the first place we avoid the salary, the compensation of the Probate Judge; we avoid the compensation of his clerk; we avoid the expense of bringing the jurors from an adjoining county; of sending a distance to subpoena them; and I say there is not an expense today, where there are two counties combined, that, taking the saving which results from having the court confined to the county itself, that is not economy. It is not necessary to go into the future to comprehend that. Take Dawson county and connect it with Fergus county over here, and when you come to take into account the salary of the two Probate Judges, of their clerks, the expense of running the court, subpoenas and mileage of witnesses and of jurors, why, I say it is a great economy, and it is a great economy today, and it will be from the very moment the system goes into operation. I do not care whether the Judges have got to work. They have to take the office, with its burdens, and should do it. So far as my young and able friend here from Gallatin county is concerned, I have no doubt he could do the business, if he were on the bench here, and have time to spare, but there are some of us older, a little stiffer, more rheumatic, and cannot move around very rapidly; and he will find after he has discharged that duty for ten or fifteen years that he will want a little rest. I think it is a matter of economy and will pay today, and so far as the committee agreeing on the proposition is concerned, it was expressly stated in committee that it was better to go into convention here and be referred to the Committee of the Whole, and then the districts that wanted to be divided could make their application, as is being done here now.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Beaverhead has stated a proposition to this committee that perhaps ought to be noted. It seems that the judicial calendar, in that county, is so small they can only find two men competent to be Justices of the Peace. If that be true, what is he going to do when it comes to make a District Judge? I know, sir, from the motion made by one of my colleagues from Madison, and seconded by the other, that it is their desire to have Madison county a separate district, and I think they have conspired with my friend from Beaverhead to carry it through. In the Committee of the Judiciary, I opposed this plan, because I believe a more economical and a safer one can be adopted by the convention. One gentleman, I think the gentleman from Cascade, quoted California. Perhaps it would not be improper for me to say that whenever you quote the California Constitution and California statutes you stand upon very ticklish ground, for the whole thing, the California Constitution and the California statutes,—the whole thing from beginning to end, is one conglomeration of nonsense. Now, sir, as the gentleman from Gallatin has well said, we are fixing our people a system whereby three men are employed to do certain work that one man can do just as well. You take the counties of Madison and Beaverhead and any man who is fit to go upon the bench in that District can discharge all the duties that are required by law, both in the District and Probate Courts, and have half of the time left to go fishing and hunting. We have fixed the salaries of the several District Judges in the Counties of Lewis and Clarke, Deer Lodge and Silver Bow, if I mistake not, at $4,000 a year,—in all of the other counties and districts the sum of $3,000 a year, except, I think, in Park and Yellowstone, in which the salaries are $3,500 a year. Now, when you come to Madison and Beaverhead, three thousand dollars, I ask you why you want the people of the counties of Madison and Beaverhead to double the salary when one man can take charge of the duties and perform them well. Then you speak again of California. Gentlemen of the Committee, let me say this to you, let some of these lawyers go to the California reports; the gentleman from Cascade says he understands the lawyers are satisfied with the system of California.—I say I have no doubt the lawyers are,—if they simply want to make business for themselves and inaugurate a system whereby they will be busy all the time they are on the right track. There are reported in the reports of the State of California, commencing from 1880 to 1887, more than ten thousand cases, taken to the Supreme Court of that State. There is not a State in the Union to compare with it in litigation; and I give you the philosophy of it, gentlemen; it is because of the fact of the character of the gentlemen on the District benches, as will probably be the case in Montana, if you adopt this single county system. There will be many exceptions, no doubt, but when their decisions are rendered the people are so dissatisfied that their only remedy is to go to the Supreme Court. In the period from 1850 to 1880, 30 years, under the old system of Districts in California, going back to the first time when a lawsuit was a luxury, and passing to the present condition, we find that in 30 years there were about 10,000 cases at least in the Supreme court, and in seven years, under the present system, there are more than ten thousand cases I believe there. It is that kind of dissatisfaction that the poor man has no chance against the rich if he feels himself aggrieved. Now, when we come to this proposition, my own opinion is that we should inaugurate a system, when we commence to build out jurisprudence in Montana, that the reports from the courts may be taken and embodied in book form, and they will be of such a character that all the States of the Union would have some respect for them. Go to these small counties. Take Madison, and where is your material there for a District Judge of ability and integrity? My friend who sits upon my right,—my colleague,—points to me. Let me say this in reply to him. I have no ambition to be a District Judge. I have never had any ambition for such a position; but suppose I wanted to go on the bench, I could attend to all the business in that county in two months' time every year. Why, gentlemen, in the County of Madison we have had an average there for years gone by of about a week's term of court. There is so little business there,—and I refer to a gentleman who sits within my hearing now to corroborate me,—that if all of the business there is in the county was put into the hands of one lawyer he would not have a respectable income; and yet you say to me that we must have a District Judge whose salary shall be three thousand dollars a year, practically to do nothing. I will not vote for it. I will not vote for a system that the people, in order to settle questions of law, must go as in the State of California, in seven years, with more than 10,000 appeals to the Supreme Court. That Supreme Court is away behind its docket today. Most of these cases of appeal there were criminal matters. The civil business is away behind, and they have their seven Judges of the Supreme Court; they have three commissioners in addition to that; the Supreme Court refers all matters to them, and they write the opinions for the Supreme Court, and yet they are behind. We would do the very same thing if we inaugurate the California system here today. Now, we can be more economical. As some gentleman has well said, let us leave it to the Legislature. If a time shall come in Madison,—I hope it will, for where there are people in business there is always law,—that the time will come and very speedily when we can afford a District Judge, but as to the business there now it would not justify us at this time. For that reason, I am strenuously opposed to the motion of these gentlemen, my colleagues. These people do not know as much about these things as I do, and I would be recreant to my own trust, to those who sent me here, if I did not state these facts to this committee.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I notice that the delegates from other counties are arranging their own districts to suit themselves. I think it is proper they should accord to the delegates from my County the same courtesy. I believe I know what Park county wants. I have talked this matter over with the people there during the past two years, and I know that Park county wants a district by itself, and I have what I consider a promise from the Judiciary Committee that it would be so reported. Through some mistake or misunderstanding it has not been so. If the Probate Judgeship is abolished, we want a resident Judge in Park County. In the first place it will be cheaper for Park county than any other system that can be named. The Probate Court this year in Park county cost the sum of $2,800, and if you pay the District Judge $3,500 it will be but an increase of $700. We will have a Clerk as we have now,—and I want to say to the gentlemen that have made these statements that the Judge who handles the business of three or four counties, and can go fishing two-thirds of the time during the year that if they consolidate two or three counties of the size of Park, he will not have time to go fishing any part of the year. There is not a county east of here but has a year's business on the docket, and I say give us Judges enough for once and let us clean up the docket; let the litigants clean up their cases, dispose of them and get them off the docket. I hope the motion will prevail. So far as I am concerned, I am in favor of it but if it does not go through I have an amendment here which I wish to offer on behalf of Park County. And I suppose all the gentlemen here, if we want a district by ourselves, will give it to us, if we are willing to pay for it.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: There are a good many things connected with the arguments adduced here this evening upon this question that I do not fully understand. Now, the gentleman from Park county, who has just taken his seat calculates that they are not going to have any Clerk of the Probate court there to do Probate court business, and he figures up what they have paid to their Clerk as so much money they will have to spare. Why, the Clerk of the Probate court will perform the Probate court duties just the same as he does now; and, until the legislature changes, just exactly the same fees. Then the gentleman from Beaverhead county talks about taking witnesses over to Madison county,—witnesses, what for? There is no necessity for those witnesses. In one case, upon the hearing of an injunction, witnesses came up here and made affidavits and filed them before the Judge when, under the practice of the courts here they could just as well have made the affidavits and not come up before the courts as to have come. And in relation to the gentleman from Yellowstone county, he wants a judicial system for the future; he wants for these young counties of Montana a judicial robe made to suit them when they are grown up. He reminds me very much of an old friend of mine Major Watson, down in Nevada, who put the harness of a great large horse upon a diminutive jack and when I said, "Major, that is too large a harness for that horse," he said "Never mind, Knowles, that jack will accommodate himself to that harness in less than three days," --(laughter,-- so it is with him, he is going to have these counties accommodate themselves to the Judicial system instead of having the Judicial system fixed up to accommodate the counties as they are now. Now, I believe I know something about judicial duties, and I agree with the gentleman from Gallatin here that one Judge can do all the business of the three counties he named, and have a good deal of time to spare and I cannot comprehend the gentleman from Park as to why they want one judge in Park county. If one judge can perform all the duties of Park and Gallatin,—and I am sure that unless the business there is a great deal larger than I am aware of,—one judge can do it, because I know what a judge can do,—I have presided over the District courts of this Territory for eleven years and I think I know what a judge can do, and if a judge can perform all of those duties for both of those counties, why give them a judge in each county? Is it a matter of sentiment? If it is just simply a matter of sentiment upon the part of these men, then I certainly don't want to quarrel with them. I am trying to establish here, for this young State of Montana a practical judicial system, one which will be fitted to the wants of these people. Now, in relation to Beaverhead and Madison counties why there used to be a great deal more business in Madison county than there is now; and if one judge performed all the duties for Beaverhead and Madison and Gallatin counties and then attended to two terms of the Supreme court a year and wrote the opinions of that court, and had time to spare, I think it is a ridiculous absurdity for them to ask for one judge for each county. I know that the business of the District court in those three counties did not occupy all of the time of the Judge of that District, even including the time he was occupied with his duties in the Supreme Court. I know that in Silver Bow county today there is more business civil, criminal and probate, than there is in Beaverhead, Madison, Gallatin and Park counties put together; and one judge will perform all those duties. Now, gentlemen there is another matter to take into consideration. You seem to think that because the Territory will probably pay one-half of the salary of these judicial officers that you do not have to pay it. You have only to pay one-half the salaries of these officers. Why, you pay your proportion of it in proportion to your taxable property. You pay your proportion of it just the same, and the gentleman from Park says: "Why, we ought to allow the people of Park to have such a judicial system as they want,"—why, if we are to pay for half of it we want something to say about it; we want something to say if the Territory is to pay half the salaries of these judges. And then what have we got for the salaries of these judges? We have got a judicial system here that is going to cost this Territory in the neighborhood of $50,000 a year right now.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Fifty-one thousand dollars.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: A judicial system for which we have to pay fifty-one thousand dollars. Then you have got the Clerks to pay for, and they will get fees from litigants. Why, gentlemen, we have got a great many other things to look after. How much money can we raise by reasonable taxation on the property in Montana Territory? We have got an Executive Department to pay for; we have got a penitentiary; we have got an insane asylum; we have got a legislative department to look after. Where is all this money to come from; is it to come out of the pockets of the taxpayers? And the gentleman from Park wants just such a judicial system as they fixed up down there in Park. In fixing up this judiciary system it is not to be fixed up by the delegates here in this convention, but by the gentleman and his constituents down in Park. Why, I am opposed to all this sort of talk about letting each county fix up its own system and for myself if I am in favor of any change in the report of this Committee it is to consolidate these judicial districts and put more of them into one district. If they don't suit,—if the child grows,—why, here is the legislature that can cut out new cloth and make a new garment for two years at least,—but for heaven's sake, don't let us put a man's clothes on a poor swaddling infant.

Mr. Joy, of Park: The gentleman from Silver Bow who has last spoken—interrupted.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: There are other gentlemen who want to speak upon this question and, under the rules, until all the members have spoken no member has a right to speak twice.

Mr. Joy, of Park: If there is any objection to my speaking I will retire. I just want to suggest that the gentleman who last spoke—the gentleman from Silver Bow—has told us a great deal about what he knows, and I wanted to suggest that there may be a few things possibly that he don't know. He has roared and ranted a good deal about the gentleman from Park, and he actually reminded me about that story of the lion and the jackass. A lion and a jackass entered into a combination to go out and search for prey and the agreement was that the lion was to post himself at the mouth of the canyon, the jackass was to go in around the inside and bray and make a loud noise and scare up the game, and the lion was to catch the game as it came out; and after the jackass had performed his part of the contract he came back and found the lion devouring the game. The jackass asked him if he had not performed his contract thoroughly and well, and the lion told him he had, and the jackass asked him if he had not brayed very loudly, and the lion told him he had and the jackass asked him if he had not frightened up a whole lot of game, and the lion said, "Yes, you frightened nearly everything in the country, and if I had not known that you were a jackass you would have frightened me." [Laughter] Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to say here that the honorable gentleman from Silver Bow does not know as much about Park county as he thinks he does, and I want to suggest here, at the start, that the argument he makes does not seem to have a bit of logic in it. Now, if I understand this question, if the Probate court is abolished, there will be no Probate court fees drawn by any person. If the Probate court system is to be abolished and somebody is to keep right on drawing the Probate Judge's fees and the Probate Clerk's salary, I am opposed to the whole thing,—but, as I understand it, nobody is to draw the salary of the Probate Judge or his Clerk. Now, I am in favor of it for one other reason.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: Will the gentleman allow me to ask a question,—what is the taxable property of Park county?

Mr. Joy, of Park: A little over three million of dollars.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: What is the population?

Mr. Joy, of Park: I don't know but I know that last year she cast about 1,750 votes. Park county cast more votes last year than did Gallatin, Yellowstone, Custer, Dawson, Fergus, Meagher or Choteau counties. I want to say that Park county has been a county for a little more than two years. I have been residing there during that time, and long before it was made a county, and if I remember correctly there has been but four civil cases tried in that county for the last two years, and for the sole and only reason that we could not get a judge to sit there long enough to clean up the docket; and when the last term of the District court closed in that county last April there were more cases on the docket on the day of adjournment than there were when the court opened. And I say, in view of this state of facts, we need another Judge. We want a Judge to clean up our business there. A resident Judge,—and I think we know as much about what we do want as the gentleman from Silver Bow knows. He claims to know all about judicial matters, and what he has done and what he can do, but I still maintain he does not know as much about Parke county as he thinks he does, and I want to suggest here, at I say we want a Judge for our county and I think this convention will give it to us.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I do not desire to take up much of the time of the convention. This is one of the most difficult subjects that came before the Judiciary Committee, and elicited a great deal of discussion; and unless this convention shall take a different course from what our Committee did, I don't know that we will ever be able to settle it except by letting each delegation have just such courts as they wish; in other words, if the delegation from each county wants one Judge I suppose they will have to have it. Now, I started out with the idea that Gallatin county might be attached to Park. I found a gentleman from Yellowstone who wanted that county to be attached to Park, and I did not find anybody from Park who was yearning to be joined to Gallatin. Consequently, I made up my mind that we had better put Park and Yellowstone into one District. Then I reached out for a respectable county to be joined with Gallatin, and laid violent hands upon Madison. Madison did not want to unite with Gallatin county, for some reason, I don't know what,—and the first thing I knew there was a proposition of marriage between Madison and Beaverhead, and they were married accordingly. Then, as we were running a railroad down in our county across to Butte, I concluded it would be a good plan to have Jefferson attached to Gallatin, but no, it would not work; Jefferson county wanted to be a District by itself and there was no county within reach that would accept a proposition of marriage with the county of Gallatin. Consequently, the poor old District has to stand alone,—and I do say that we could have one county attached to us and one judge to do the business of the two counties. You may put any county with Gallatin, and I think one Judge can do the business of it all. Now, then, the proposition is either to let these gentlemen from the several Districts settle their own affairs or else this Convention will have to take the "bull by the horns" and establish these judicial districts. There is another way, and as far as suffering Gallatin is concerned, we don't care if you do impose upon us either Madison, Yellowstone, Park or Jefferson. We would not object to our friend Dr. Parberry's county if it was not so far off,—any county that adjoins us. But this is not so serious a matter as the gentlemen seem to imagine. You will find that it provides as follows: "That the Legislative Assembly may increase or decrease the number of Judges in any judicial District." It is left to the Legislature after all. If you want two Judges in Silver Bow county, and the Legislature pleases, it will give them to you; and if we find one judge is too many for Gallatin, and we can make the Legislature believe that Park or Madison ought to be joined to us, I have no doubt that the Legislature will join them to us. And it goes further and says that they can divide the State or any part thereof into new districts. So I don't see that we will suffer very much. You will observe that Dawson and Choteau and Fergus are put into one District. A gentleman came up before the committee from Choteau county and requested that they should have a Judge but the Committee did not feel that Choteau county should have a district to itself. Now, so far as Gallatin county is concerned, I think that at any rate we may join with some other county in the making of a judicial district, and it will be feasible and economical. They say it is economical of course, to abolish Probate judges and all of their fees, but it is more economical if you abolish Probate judges in both counties and have one judge to do the business than it is to have two, so when you are on a question of economy let us go to a reasonable length. There will not be any recalcitrant manifestations of disapproval coming from me at least if this convention fixes these districts; but if it is the sense of this convention that we shall have one judge down in our county, and he is a pretty decent fellow, we will get along with him; and, for example's sake, I am satisfied he will not go fishing half the time, even if he has the time to spare.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move you, sir, that the Committee do now arise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Motion seconded.

The chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and, a division being called for, the motion was carried by a vote of 10 to 9.

In convention.

President Clark in the chair.

The convention was called to order.

The President: We will hear the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: The Committee of the Whole have had under consideration proposition No. 14 and have directed the Chairman to report the same back to the convention, and have same made a special order for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of the Chairman will be received and accepted.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis and Clarke: Mr. President the Committee of the Whole have also had under consideration proposition No. 13 in relation to a Bureau of Agriculture and have directed me to report it back to the convention, and recommend that it be not adopted.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole will be received.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis and Clarke: The Committee have also had under consideration proposition No. 21 and 22 in relation to Judicial departments, and have directed me to report the same back to the convention, with the request that the Committee be allowed to sit again.

The President: If there be no objection, the report will be received and the Committee will be allowed to sit again.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis and Clarke: The Committee of the Whole have also under consideration three propositions in relation to the report of the standing Committee on Labor, one in relation to Chinese labor, one in relation to discharged employees, and one in relation to the importation of contract labor, and have directed me to report the same back with the recommendation that they be stricken from the file.

A member: I move that the report of the Committee be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis and Clarke: The Committee has also had under consideration proposition No. 2, the proposed article on labor, and the Chairman asks permission to make a report tomorrow morning.

The President: If there be no objection, the Chairman will be allowed further time in which to make his report on proposition No. 2.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis and Clarke: I move you, Mr. President, that when the convention adjourn it adjourn to meet at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move that the Convention do now adjourn. Motion seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried and the convention stood adjourned until Tuesday, July 23rd, 1889, 10 a. m.

FIFTEENTH DAY.

Tuesday, July 23rd, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 a. m.

Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Buford, of Madison: Mr. President, Judge Luce being sick this morning I ask that he be excused.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the Journal of the 14th day.

The President: The Chair desires to state that there is a message from the President of the American Sabbath Union,—if there be no objection it will be read.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I would like to inquire if that communication is from citizens of the Territory of Montana?

The President: It is not.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Then I object to the reading of the communication.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President I move that it be referred to the Committee on Education to report back.

Motion seconded.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I understand that we are under the regular order of business which provides for the reading and presentation of petitions and memorials. I suppose this is in the nature of a petition and an order providing for the suspension of the rules would be necessary to do anything else but to read this petition. I make that point of order.

The President: The Chair desires to state that it seems to be the impression of the members of this Convention that these petitions and memorials shall be confined to citizens of Montana Territory. The Chair understands that this is the general feeling in regard to this matter, and hence the Chair is of the opinion that these petitions, memorials and remonstrances should be confined to those coming directly from people of this Territory,—unless the convention takes a different view, the Chair will so rule upon that question. Hence, the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow is in order if it is seconded.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to hear the petition read for information.

The President: There is an objection to the reading of the paper.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask how anyone can intelligently recommend that that communication be referred to a Committee unless they know something of the nature of it. I might, with propriety, move to amend by referring it to the Committee on Irrigation. I don't know the nature of it. I do not think this body is prepared to vote for a reference to any Committee unless they know its nature.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I think the members have a right to ask for its reading for information. A member may object to its consideration but I do not see how any member can object to its being read for information.

The President instructed the Clerk to read the message. The Clerk read as follows:

Blue Mountain Lake, New York, by the way of Saratoga, July 22nd, 1889, To the President of the Constitutional Convention, Helena, M. T.:

The American Sabbath Union, whose office is at 23 Park Row, earnestly recommend that provision should be inserted in your new constitution encouraging Sabbath observance. Perhaps the following form would be acceptable to the Convention:—"No work or trade shall be carried on on the first day of the week, usually called Sunday except such as may be strictly charitable or necessary, and the Legislature shall pass laws regulating and encouraging the observance of the Holy Sabbath by all the people of the—" (interrupted).

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I move you, sir, that we dispense with the further reading of the communication.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I have heard enough of this reading to warrant me to move an amendment.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow. I rise to a point of order. The question has not been stated.

The President: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, that the further reading of the communication be dispensed with.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move as an amendment to the motion that it be referred to the Committee on Education, that the telegram be laid indefinitely on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis and Clarke, sent up a report.

The report of the Committee on Miscellaneous provisions and Constitutional amendments will be read. The Clerk read as follows:

Report of the Committee on Miscellaneous subjects, etc.:

Mr. President: The Committee on Miscellaneous subjects and so forth, to whom was referred proposition No. 16 by Hammond relating to gambling respectfully report that the subject is one that should be reserved for the Legislative power; they have therefore rejected the proposition, with the recommendation that it do not pass.

(Signed L. H. HERSHFELD, Chairman of the Committee.

The President: This report will take the usual course.

The Clerk read as follows:

Report of Committee on Miscellaneous subjects, etc.:

Resolution No. 10 by Callaway relating to free passes granted by corporations has been acted upon by the Committee who, in lieu thereof, have adopted a substitute which they have incorporated in their report to be presented at an early day. They, therefore, recommend that resolution No. 10 be not adopted.

July 22, 1889. (Signed L. H. HERSHFELD, Chairman.

The Clerk again read as follows:

Report of the Committee on Miscellaneous subjects:

Mr. President: The Committee on Miscellaneous subjects, etc., to whom was committed the memorial from the Methodist Episcopal Conference concerning the establishment of a Sunday law and the prohibition of the liquor traffic, respectfully report that they have given earnest consideration to the memorial cited, and have decided that the question is one which rightly belongs to the Legislative authority of the State; and, in consequence, report adversely on the proposition, recommending that it be not adopted.

July 22nd, 1889.

(Signed L. H. HERSHFIELD, Chairman of the Committee.

The President: Are there any reports of Select Committees?

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: The report of your Select Committee, to whom was referred resolution No. 7 relating to the employment of a Stenographer, is now ready.

The Clerk read as follows:

Report of Special Committee on Resolution No. 7, with substitute:

Mr. President: Your Select Committee, to whom was referred resolution No. 7, relating to the duties and compensation of the chief stenographer, beg leave to report that they have had the same under consideration and report the same back to the Convention with the attached substitute, and recommend the adoption of the said substitute.

(Signed C. R. MIDDLETON, Chairman.

The following is the substitute referred to:

Substitute for resolution No. 7 offered by the Select Committee:

RESOLVED, That it shall be the duty of the Chief Stenographer to keep a full, true and complete record of all the proceedings of this Constitutional Convention, and within sixty days after the adjournment thereof to file in the office of the Territorial Secretary a full, true and complete typewritten copy of all such proceedings properly paged and arranged, and accompanied by the affidavit of such stenographer to the effect that such transcript is a correct copy of his stenographic notes of the proceedings of the Convention.

That the compensation of the chief stenographer shall be Fifteen dollars for each day that this convention shall actually be in session, and in addition thereto the sum of twenty cents per folio for each folio of the proceedings transcribed as herein provided.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to ask the Chairman of the Committee if that report is to include the debates of this convention,—the speeches made here?

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I will say for the information of the gentleman that the "proceedings of the convention," as I understand it, means the entire proceedings; all that occurs, either in convention, or in Committee of the Whole; the debates, motions, resolutions, votes, &c.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to say, Mr. President, that I will oppose the resolution.

The President: There is nothing before the Convention.

Mr. Bullard, of Jefferson: I move the adoption of the report.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I rise for information. I would like to ask if the Substitute, as reported by the Select Committee, is not substantially the same proposition that was voted down by this Convention some days ago when the matter was last up?

The President: The Clerk will read Resolution No. 7, to give the gentleman the information he requires.

The Clerk read Resolution No. 7 being Collin's resolution.

The President: The question is upon the motion to adopt.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, the Resolution, No. 7, that has just been read, was not acted upon by the Convention the other day, except by the action upon the Substitute, which had been offered by it, and which was rejected by this Convention. Now, in substance, a portion of the Substitute proposed by this Select Committee is similar to the original resolution as well as to the former substitute that was rejected. However, there is this distinction; it was considered in discussing the matter at that time by some of the members and justly so, that it would be absolutely impossible that there should be a transcript of these proceedings made and placed in the hands of the President within twenty-four hours after the shorthand notes were taken. This Resolution provides that that may be done within sixty days,—provides that a full, true and complete transcript of those shorthand notes shall be filed with the Secretary of State, accompanied by the affidavit of the stenographer that it is a true and correct transcript from his shorthand notes of all of the proceedings of the Convention. Now, so far as I am personally concerned, I would like to see this resolution adopted, for this reason: the stenographer is here and is going to take these notes; I have positive knowledge of the fact that he has been instructed by different individuals in Helena to take these notes saying that they would pay him at those rates as a private and individual enterprise. I submit that in my judgment, it is a matter that the State will want at some time and perhaps very soon, and undoubtedly it will provide for the publication of these debates. I believe it is safe to say that Congress will pay for every dollar of this expense. It is something that certainly should be preserved. But two or three States in the Union failed to take the precaution to keep a complete record of their proceedings, and they regret it sincerely now. There is one state—I think it was Kansas—where no provision was made by the Convention for taking or making any record of the proceedings, but a certain newspaper of sufficient enterprise in the city where the Convention was held, put their shorthand reporters in there, and took the proceedings in full, and I am informed that the State afterwards paid to that newspaper $10,000 for the correct transcript of the proceedings of their convention. The Committee have talked this matter over pretty carefully, and have investigated it, and made some inquiry as to about what the probable cost would be and I believe it is safe to say to this Convention that the entire cost of this transcript will be less than $2,000; that it will probably be somewhere between $1,400 and $2,000. Well, now, so far as the expense is concerned, even if Montana has to pay it, it seems to me to be a mere nothing. But I believe beyond any question the State will not have to pay it, and I don't believe that it is right for us as members of this Convention, to say that individuals shall come in here and take this record and pay the stenographer for it allowing it to become their individual private property, and if in the hereafter the State of Montana wants a transcript of these proceedings, to be placed in the position where they will have to pay five, ten or perhaps twenty prices for it. It seems to me the Resolution ought to be adopted. I believe it is as cheap as the work can be done. In South Dakota the Convention has provided for two stenographers each at ten dollars a day and twenty-five cents per folio. In Washington Territory, I am informed, they have provided for three stenographers; and here the Convention seems to feel that not even one is wanted. I wish the Convention would give this matter such consideration as it ought to have. I think it is a matter that we should hand into the office of the Secretary of State, to be used by the State in the future as it may see fit.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, when it comes to the expense of this thing, I think the gentleman underestimates what it will cost the State to transcribe the notes of the stenographer in longhand. I think it will on a mathematical calculation average during the session of this convention five hundred folios a day—the proceedings of this Convention that will be reported by the stenographer will probably average five hundred folios a day, which would be $100 a day for the transcript of these proceedings in longhand. If it runs thirty days it would be a matter of $3,000 for a transcript of the stenographer's notes. I understand that the proposition voted on the other day differed from this only in that that required it to be transcribed within twenty-four hours after the proceedings of the Convention. This provides that it may be done within sixty days after the adjournment of the Convention. The question that was voted on the other day was not the question of time required to do it, but the question of the necessity of having it done at all, the probable expense it would be to the State in transcribing these notes, and the expense to the State in publishing them, which the Convention, I thought, regarded as entirely useless, and voted it down on the question of principle, and not merely as a question of the time in which they should be transcribed. Now, then, if, as the gentleman says, it will not cost the State anything, I have no objection in the world to having the stenographer transcribe his notes and not look at all to the State for his compensation, but look to the Federal Government, or to individuals who may want to make a speculation out of it. I have no objection to his amusing himself in that way whatever; but I do object, Mr. President, to this Convention entailing a dollar's worth of useless expense upon the State of Montana.

Expense that will be of no benefit to us at all I object to. If these reports are going to be valuable, if there is a speculation in it, give some of the citizens of Montana an opportunity of taking it up as a matter of speculation, and let them pay the reporter for transcribing it and getting it out. Then, if he can sell them, let him take the chances of selling the copies of these debates, and make out of the speculation whatever he can. If I want one of those reports, I will pay for one, if we can agree on the price which I imagine, Mr. President, the two of us will never agree to at all. The man that should publish them would probably want $10 or $15 for a copy of them, and most of us would want to give him about fifteen cents and not a farthing more. We regard it as being worth just about that much to us—about fifteen cents, because we can all find something more valuable in future to employ our time than looking back to these debates and reading them. Now, sir, not only that, but there is the cost that is going to be to the State to publish all these proceedings. There are men whose eyes are wide open to speculation. It is going to be a good job to a man if he can get a bill through the Legislature to make an appropriation to publish these debates and proceedings. There is going to be a speculation in that. It is much easier generally to get a speculation through the legislature than it is to defeat a thing of that kind. Retrenchment and reform and economy is always difficult in our own private affairs and our own personal accounts and it is more difficult, Mr. President, when it comes to footing the bills of the public. It is much more difficult to adopt reform and retrenchment in those matters because we are voting away other people's money, and many men are reckless about those things; they do not stop to consider that they are in greater duty bound to retrench in public affairs than in their own private affairs; hence, for those reasons, some future Legislature will get up a speculation in publishing these proceedings, and involve the state in a large bill of expense. Now, sir, I can see the way this thing is drifting in the Convention, and there are secret murmurings going around among some of our best financial men as to the probable expense this Convention is going to entail on the State of Montana; and in view of that fact, sir, it is well for us to stop and pause in these things, and to consider for a few moments. We have claimed that we were able to support a state government—an economical state government; but we cannot afford to support the machinery of the state government of New York, Illinois, and many of the larger and richer states. We cannot afford such a machinery of government as that, because it would overwhelm us with a public debt, and the people would be complaining and wish that we had no state government. Add to these things all the large expense of cities as well as individual accounts. Some members say, Oh, well, this is a small matter and let us have it, let us have this thing, that or the other—it is a small matter and let us have it; we can do without it, but it is a kind of luxury and let us have it. Well where that system is pursued, and this thing, that and the other indulged in, at the end of the year when we come to foot the bills we find ourselves bankrupt. That is the way municipalities become bankrupt, and states and national governments and individuals become bankrupt, by indulging in this thing, that or the other that we could very easily and very well do without, but which is a mere luxury. Now then, this thing that we propose to indulge in is a mere luxury, not a necessity to the State Government of Montana. It is a thing merely to suit the whims and caprices and notions of men who think it might be of some future benefit. As I remarked, we are indulging in a system now—gentlemen on the floor of this Convention are advocating propositions one after the other, and when we come to foot up at the end of it, as one of the best financial men of Montana Territory has advised me, as near as he could estimate the cost of it, the expense of the first year of the State of Montana will run up to the sum of $380,000. Now, then, if that is so, or if it is half that amount, if the gentlemen will pause and hesitate on these things, they will come to the conclusion that we ought to try and avoid these useless things, and make expenditures only where they are absolutely necessary, and limit these amounts all we can. If these things become necessary in future, and we are able, and the State grows rich enough and able to afford them, that would be another matter but we are not able to afford them. My idea is that the whole taxation of the property of Montana for State purposes should not exceed three mills. As I understand it, so far as territorial purposes are concerned, it is confined within one mill, and we should not exceed for State purposes three mills. The way we are going on if we do not mind we will launch ourselves into a position where it will run to five or six mills for state purposes. I say, then, as this thing is useless, let us not put it into the power of the Legislature to swamp us in debt by publishing these reports. We are entailing an expense of probably $3,000 for transcribing them, which I regard as entirely useless, and I trust the Convention will take this view of it.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: The Resolution now before the Convention is specifically the same as occupied the Convention of five years ago, though I think that this will be less expensive than that. We are today every minute and every hour, making a part of the history of Montana. Perhaps generations to come and perhaps we ourselves would like to read that history again. To me it will be a matter of more than gratification if I can secure a copy of the resolutions and debates of the Convention that you have the honor, Mr. President, to preside over. In conversation with a gentleman a few days ago, a distinguished gentleman of this territory he asked me if I knew anything of the proceedings of the First Constitutional Convention held in Montana more than twenty years ago, and told me he would give, or he could raise within an hour's time $5,000 if some authentic minutes of that convention could be found, simply as a matter of historical interest. The gentleman who has just taken his seat said the other day when this same subject was under consideration, or rather asked the question, who had read the minutes of the debates of the convention that framed the Federal Constitution? And said that he did not believe that one man in a million had. I consider, Mr. President, that there is more than one man in this convention—more than one in seventy-five holds a copy of the minutes of James Madison and Mr. Yates of New York, taken from the debates of our Fathers 102 years ago, and they have given to those who have read the history of that convention a very great amount of information. The knowledge that we have derived from those minutes is to us as valuable as any other part of the history of the country. As the distinguished gentleman from Deer Lodge said the other day, it will be a matter of the judicial interpretation of the views of the members of this convention, and as to the interpretation they would give to the Constitution they would be of the very greatest value to the court, which afterwards construe the provisions of this Constitution. Why, Mr. President, it is surprising to me that in this age of progress, when we are laying the foundations for a great State—an empire within itself, containing a grand, noble race of men and women, to say that we will not have enough of sense, of decency of manhood to preserve the history of our country! As one of the members of the Committee, Mr. President, I give it my most hearty support, and I hope that this resolution will pass. Going a step farther let me say to the gentlemen of this Convention, that I do not believe that one dollar of the expense of this Convention will be paid for by the State of Montana. I think I can appeal to the distinguished gentleman who has for twelve years honored the Territory of Montana in Congress (Major Maginnis) that it has been the universal rule in all the forms of our government that where a Convention sat under an Enabling Act, that the expenses of that convention have been paid by the United States Government. Now, if we keep ourselves within due bounds, and are not unusually extravagant, if there is not sufficient already in the hands of the Secretary to pay the expenses of this convention beyond any question, proceeding from precedent and reasoning from that proposition, Congress will pass an act supplying the deficiency. And these gentlemen talk here about what the expense may be to the citizens of Montana. We are not appropriating any money, we are taking nothing out. The gentleman who proposes to take these notes has agreed to do so upon the suggestion of several prominent and enterprising citizens who have said to him, "We know what it is; we have had it before, you can go on and take the proceedings of the convention in shorthand and transcribe them, and as a matter of private enterprise we will pay you for your services in this matter what you have asked the convention." When we consider, too, that this is a matter for the Legislature exclusively; that if they do not want to pay this gentleman, he has agreed to take his chances—and if I was in the Legislature I would say here and now, sir, I should vote to compensate him according to his proposition, and should consider that we were doing well. We are not binding the Legislature; we are binding no one; and if these gentlemen have any consideration for themselves—if they have any reason to believe that what they have done and said shall be a part of history, I would ask them then why not vote for the proposition as offered by this Committee.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I believe that we have all made up our minds how to vote on this proposition, and notwithstanding my neighbor's opposition to luxuries, I propose this morning to indulge in a luxury that I never indulged in in my life before, and that is to call for the previous question.

The President: The gentleman has called for the previous question. The question before the convention is, shall the main question be now put.

The question was put and declared carried.

The President: The question now recurs upon the original motion, the adoption of the report of the Special Committee as read.

Mr. Robinson called for a division.

The vote stood forty in the affirmative to ten in the negative.

The Chair announced that the motion was carried, and the report of the Special Committee adopted.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the report of the Committee of the Whole is now ready.

The President: The report of the Committee of the Whole on the Article of Labor will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: The Report of Committee of the Whole on Article on Labor. Carpenter, Chairman. To the President of the Convention: The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration Proposition No. 11 on General File, being the proposed Article on Labor, and has amended the same as follows, to-wit: Section 1 is amended to read as follows: Section 1. The Legislative Assembly shall provide for a Bureau of Labor and Industry, to be located at the capital of the state, which shall be under the management of a Commissioner, who shall be appointed by the Governor, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the term of four years, except as otherwise provided by this constitution. Section 2, is stricken out. Section 3 is amended to read as follows: Section 3. It shall be unlawful for the Warden or other officer in authority, or other state officers of any penitentiary, or other reformatory institution in the State of Montana, to let by contract to any person or persons, or corporations, the labor of any convict confined within said institution. Sections, Nos. 4, 5 and 6 respectively are stricken out.

The Committee report the said article, with the amendments, to the convention, and recommend that it be adopted as amended.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) B. P. CARPENTER, Chairman.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention on the report of the Committee of the Whole on the Article on Labor.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move the report be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Is an amendment in order at present?

The President: Amendment to what?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: To the report of the Committee.

The President: Amendments will be in order when it is put upon its final passage. This is simply upon the adoption of the report.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: Mr. President, is there not a mistake in the first section wherein it reads, "Labor and Industry". It seems to me that "industry" was stricken out, and "agriculture" inserted.

The President: The word "agriculture" was stricken out afterwards.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead (Mr. Witter) moving the adoption of the report, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. H. Poole of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I move that the rules be suspended, and the Article on Labor placed on its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to amend section 1, by inserting the word "agriculture", so that it shall read "Agriculture, Labor and industry."

The President: That will come up when it is placed before the convention. The question now is simply to take it up and place it upon its final passage.

The Chair put the question on the said motion to take it up and place it upon final passage, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will read section by section. Any amendments desired to be offered will be received in their regular order.

The Clerk read section 1 as follows: Section 1, The Legislative Assembly shall provide for a Bureau of Labor and Industry, to be located at the capital of the State, which shall be under the management of a Commissioner, who shall be appointed by the Governor subject to the confirmation of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the term of four years, except as otherwise provided by this Constitution.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out the last words, "except as otherwise provided by this Constitution." I offered the amendment in Committee of the Whole, supplying those words, because as the section then read, I considered them necessary, but the tautology having been changed, the words are meaningless, and simply lumber the section with useless matter.

The President: Will the gentleman send his amendment to the desk in writing?

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to make an inquiry. Did the Clerk read the section "the Legislature ~~shall~~" provide this office?

The Clerk re-read the section as follows: "The Legislature Assembly shall provide" &c.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: That is not correct as acted upon in the Committee. "The Legislative Assembly ~~may~~ provide." I move to amend that, if that is the report of the Committee.

The President: If there is no objection to the amendment, the word ~~may~~ will be inserted instead of the word ~~shall~~.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Then, I move to strike out these last words, "Except as otherwise provided by this constitution."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, (Mr. J. K. Toole), and the same was declared carried; and the words, "Except as otherwise provided by this Constitution," were stricken out.

The President: The Clerk will read the Article now as amended.

The Clerk read Section 1.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade, (Mr. Collins, offers to amend section 1, by inserting the word "agriculture" before "labor," on line 1.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I ask to have the section read.

The President: The Clerk will read the section as proposed to be amended.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I take it that the action of the Committee of the Whole in striking out the word agriculture was because of the fact that the Committee on Agriculture of this Body reported a separate provision, providing for a Commissioner of Agriculture. But afterwards, the report of the Committee on Agriculture and the report of the Committee on Labor being almost alike, the Committee struck out almost entirely the report of the Committee on Agriculture. Now, "Industry and Labor", or "Industry or Labor" do not include agriculture, and I believe where there is a Commissioner of this class, or of this kind, they always have one on agriculture, or agriculture and labor and industry are combined. The Committee reported in favor of a proposition of this kind, and the sense of the Committee was to consolidate them, and they can be better consolidated, in my opinion, by the insertion of the word than by leaving it out.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will read section 1, as now amended.

The Clerk read said section 1.

The President: If there be no further amendments, the Clerk will proceed to read section 2.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Do I understand the rule to be that the ayes and noes may be called on each separate section?

The President: On its final adoption. You can take the ayes and noes on any question, if it is so ordered.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: The matter is now on its final passage, is it not?

The President: I believe it has been the custom heretofore to vote upon the Article itself—to take the ayes and noes upon the Article as a whole; and these sections are read and amended, or passed by in their order, if there be no amendments, considered to be adopted, and then the whole Article is placed upon its final passage, and the ayes and noes placed upon the journal. However, the ayes and noes may be ordered upon any of these amendments, but no section is placed upon its final passage until the whole proposition is placed upon its final passage.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I desire to have the ayes and noes called upon each separate section of that proposition. I move you to that effect.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment in these words: "Whose compensation shall be as provided by law," to be added to the section.

The President: The gentleman from Custer, (Mr. Burleigh,) offers the following amendment to be added to section 1, "Whose compensation shall be as provided by law."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will now read the section as amended, and then the motion to adopt will be placed before the Convention.

The chair read section 1, as amended.

The President: The question before the convention now is upon the adoption of section No. 1. The ayes and noes will be entered in the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

When the name of Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge was reached the gentleman rose and said: I desire to say a word in explanation of my vote on this proposition, which shall be in the negative. I desire to say this; I shall vote against this proposition, the establishment of this bureau, for the reason that I do not believe that the necessities of the state demand it, and it will require a large expenditure of money on the part of the state which we can well avoid for a while. For those reasons I vote No.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes. Aiken, Bickford, Brazelton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F. Burns, A. J. Burns, Edward, Carpenter, Callaway, Cardwell, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtnay, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Loud, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole Jos. K., Toole J. R., Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President,—61. Nays. Robinson,—1. Absent. Duffee, Eaton, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershtield, Joyes, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Luce, Myers, Maginnis, Webster,—13..

The President announced the vote, and declared Section No. 1 adopted.

The Clerk read section 2.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: Mr. President, as section 2 was stricken out in Committee of the Whole, and a substitute offered for section 2, by Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge, I move that section 3 be inserted for section 2 of this article.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula, (Mr. Kennedy,) moves that the Substitute offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Toole, as a Substitute for section 2, be numbered section 2. The Clerk will read that Substitute for the information of the Convention.

The Clerk read the Substitute offered by Mr. J. R. Toole.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I believe the Substitute offered by me was adopted with a very slight amendment in Committee of the Whole, and reported back.

The President: If there be no objection, this section No. 3 will be considered as section No. 2, inasmuch as section No. 2 has been stricken out of the report of the Committee, adopted by the convention.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Mr. President, if it be in order to offer at this time an amendment, I would like to do so. While I believe in submitting as gracefully as one can to the vote of the majority in some matters, I am not quite willing to vote for the adoption of this section, for reasons as stated yesterday in Committee of the Whole. I would rather that it be stricken out entirely; and if we must adopt something of that character, I have a substitute that I want to offer for it. However, I move that the section be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I am opposed to the striking out of that section for the simple reason that we have discussed that question, pro and con, and I believe, spent a couple of hours in doing it yesterday, and it was finally passed by a majority of the convention. That vote was taken after the question had been thoroughly discussed, and I believe now, as I did then, that it is a very essential clause to have incorporated in our Constitution. I am very sorry the motion has been moved by the gentleman from Silver Bow now because I know, or I believe at least, it will only have the effect of delaying the passage of this bill. I have no reason to think that any person who voted in the affirmative yesterday has changed his mind since. I believe the arguments that were adduced then, upon which this section was passed, stand just as good today as they were yesterday and will for years hence. Believing that it is a good section, and also believing it is very necessary, I certainly shall vote to day as I voted yesterday.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I wish to remind my friend and colleague, that there is not anything in this bill, except section 1, and this section that is before us, for, if my memory serves me correctly, sections 4, 5, and 6 have already been stricken out. Therefore, if it is the judgment of this convention that we shall strike out this section, we endanger nothing, for we have already adopted by our vote, section No. 1. I am in favor of establishing, and voted, as my vote will show, to establish a bureau for labor, but I am not in favor of this Convention attempting to legislate on this question of convict labor; for, as I said yesterday in Committee of the Whole, I feel that we are transcending our duties when we attempt it; and I do hope that we will take this broad view of it, and strike it out entirely. I am in sympathy with a great deal that was said here, indeed, I may say, with all that was said here yesterday about the evils of convict labor, but I do not believe this is the place, or the time to attempt to right the wrong. If we attempt it where shall we stop? For this reason, I believe, that this Convention can safely take this view and expunge it entirely from this proposition.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow Mr. Rickards, and a division being called for the motion was declared lost by a vote of 15 in the affirmative to 39 in the negative.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move to strike out section 2, and insert in lieu thereof, the following: "The labor of convicts shall not be let out by contract to any person, co-partnership, company or corporation, but the Legislature shall, by law, provide for the working of convicts for the benefit of the state."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke called for the reading of section No. 2.

The Clerk read section 2.

The Clerk read the Substitute offered by Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: It is manifest, that the sense of this Convention is to adopt some such provision as this. I believe that my substitute covers all that the original does, and goes a step farther. I believe, if it is important, that we attempt at this time to say that convict labor shall not be farmed out, it is equally important—and I think every argument that can be adduced in favor of one will hold good in favor of the other—that the state shall provide for the working of convicts, and any profit that may accrue therefrom, shall accrue to the state. I do not think it is worth while to attempt to take up your time in showing you reasons why this should be done; I think they are self-apparent. I leave the proposition to the Convention as I present it, hoping that inasmuch as by your vote, you have expressed a desire to enact a provision of this kind, that you will adopt my substitute.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I offer the following resolution.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter), offers the following. Resolved that section 2 be referred to Committee on Labor, with instructions to report a Substitute, providing and specifying the kinds of labor at which convicts may work with the least possible interference with free labor, and in which they may be employed.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of that resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I want to say just a very few words. I think it is cruel and barbarous to allow convicts to decay in prison without anything to do; after serving their term of imprisonment they come out, not reformed, but worthless, human creatures, as a rule. I am opposed to their doing work that will interfere in any way, except the slightest possible way, with our honest, hard working laboring men, there must be some kind of work that they can do, if we adopt this system at this time. There are few of them comparatively, in the territory now compared with the laboring men, and there must be something that they can do to keep their bodies from decay while they are in prison, and to prepare them to be useful citizens when they come out of prison. If there is a class of labor marked out which they may do for the state, although it is very unproductive, then moral reform will, to a certain extent, take place; a reform that is certainly very desirable; and there will be a great expense saved to the state in the future from the probable conduct of these convicts after their release from prison. If the system is adopted now, in the infancy of the state, labor will know all about it; labor will adapt itself to it; the laboring men will know that in a certain part of the state there is some stone quarry that convicts are working, and the laboring men—and there is plenty of demand for labor in this territory—will adapt themselves to other conditions; will seek other avenues; and these convicts, whether they be digging in a quarry, or leveling a mountain, or excavating an aqueduct, or providing something for the benefit of the state, will not interfere perceptibly with any laboring men of the Territory. It seems to me, that the laboring men themselves, so far as they are ably represented in this convention, and the Committee on Labor particularly, who are supposed to know the wants and desires of what are termed laboring men, will be able to specify here something under the broad heaven that these convicts may be permitted to do for the benefit of their bodies and their souls, and, at the same time, also for the benefit of the state. Therefore, I have offered that resolution, that it be referred to that Committee, to select, if possible, something that they may be permitted to do.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, it seems to me that I am compelled again to come to the rescue of the resolution I introduced yesterday, although I am somewhat reluctant to do so; and I am satisfied that it is the only solution we can arrive at in relation to this matter. It only advanced one proposition, that of prohibiting the contracting out of convict labor. It does not prohibit the Legislature at any time, and doubtless the first Legislature, or the second one, or the Legislature at some immediate time in the future, at least, will prescribe some means for employing the convicts, and keeping them in a physically and mentally sound condition, if that is necessary. The gentleman from Silver Bow places himself in a peculiar condition. In the first place, he advocates that we shall not legislate upon this matter; and in the next instance, he introduces a resolution, saying that the Legislature shall provide ways and means, and saying that the Convention shall provide ways and means for the employment of these convicts. He contradicts himself. The resolution I introduced, I believe, leaves the matter in an open, plain, straightforward way, and I am satisfied that unless we do something with this matter, and do it at once that the people will be convinced that we are gerrymandering so much with this convention that we will get nothing at all done. The purport of the resolution as I introduced it, comes from the State of Illinois. It was offered there four years ago and carried by the people of the state, and similar provisions have been made in the Constitutions of other states. It leaves the balance of the matter with the Legislature to decide as they may see best, and leaving it to them to say, the manner and kind and form of work the convicts shall be employed at. But, certainly, looking at the matter from a plain, common sense standpoint, and admitting that the convicts should be employed, the Legislature are the people who are to provide the manner in which they shall be employed. This resolution leaves it to the Legislature. The convention are not in favor of convict labor. The resolution that I introduced prohibits that, and, it seems to me, solves the whole problem.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I entirely agree with the gentleman who has just taken his seat. It seems to me that the matter is in a proper form now, and the convention ought to abide by it. We do not know what the state may want to do with these prisoners in the future. They may want to build some road across these valleys or mountains; they may want to employ them in boring a tunnel through these hills in order to let the water through. There are hundreds of ways in which they may be used that could not be foreseen by this Committee; and I think it is the part of wisdom and a conservative part, to stand by the resolution as shown to be favored by a majority of the convention, and not refer it to any Committee.

Mr. McAdow, of Fergus: Mr. President, I believe that this is certainly a subject for legislation. Now, sir, I do not believe that honest labor fears competition. You take an honest laboring man that proposes to make a man of himself, and a home for himself and his family, he lays by his earnings; he gets him a little home, and that home is found by the tax-gatherer, and taxes fall heavily upon him. You take the tramp labor that we have here as well as elsewhere, and I do not believe that he deserves any consideration whatever. This man will tramp from place to place; he will get employment, and after working a few days, he takes his few dollars, calls for his time, and goes into some rum mill, and there wallows in whiskey until his money is gone and the saloon man casts him out, and he then goes on again and repeats the operation. On the other hand, in our penitentiaries the convicts are generally men physically strong, and to pen these people up inside of walls there where they brood over their imaginary wrongs, they not only decay as the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke says, in mind and body, but, sir, they become insane, many of them, and then they are sent to an asylum as a charge upon the state for their life time. Now, sir, I believe that the penitentiary should be made self-supporting. It can be done, and so far as competition is concerned, it comes into competition with no one but the tramp labor; that I do not believe deserves any consideration whatever. I do not believe that there are any laboring men in this territory today that propose to live here and make their homes here but what would be in favor of making the penitentiary self-sustaining, so that they would not have to pay taxes for these people. I believe, sir, that the Legislature should have the full power to farm out this labor so as to make the penitentiary self-sustaining.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the gentleman a question, if it is not a fact that it is tramp labor which produces the convicts of the country.

Mr. McAdow, of Fergus: I think it is; I think they are the very men who produce the convicts; but I do not propose to let these men become insane, and to make them a charge upon the state.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: Mr. President, when my friend over there refers to tramp labor I do not exactly know what he means by the term. As a rule, my experience with tramps is that they do not work, and I find that men that earn their living by the honest sweat of their brow are not tramps. I claim, furthermore, that there is no such thing as tramp labor. I say, sir, if a man is here and thrown out of employment, and goes to seek employment elsewhere and cannot get it, and is unable to pay his way and has to travel the best way he can, I say he is not a tramp, but that he is just as good as my friend who calls him a tramp, and deserves just as much consideration at your hands. Now, sir, I claim the bill before you does not interfere with the state. The state can give them any employment they want to, but let them be under the jurisdiction of the state directly. It does not prevent the state from taking them out and working them on a road or elsewhere, but it prevents the state from leasing those men at twenty-five cents a day to my friend perhaps. It prevents the state from hiring a man at twenty-five cents when his work pays the contractor a dollar and a half or two dollars a day; and I claim that the proper place for it is in the Constitution. It was submitted to the people of Illinois, and adopted by the people of that state. I do not myself favor convict labor in any form; I claim it is a detriment to the community; but I do favor this bill in preference to leaving it to the Legislature. There is nothing in that bill that prevents the state from working the convicts at anything it may want to work them at. It only prevents them from hiring them or leasing them out to some other person. I think it is right.

Mr. McAdow, of Fergus: I wish to say in reply to the gentleman that it prevents the state from doing anything at all. I understand the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow says the Legislature shall do with it whatever in their judgment is feasible and proper. I am in favor of that amendment but I do not propose to adopt any measure which shall prevent the Legislature from employing convicts, or having them employed, because I think it is an injury to the convicts, and cruel to a great extent.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: As I understand, the question now is upon the motion to refer this matter to the Committee again. I am inclined to think that it would be only a waste of time to make such reference. The Committee have discussed these propositions, they have been discussed in Committee of the Whole, and now is a proper time to settle one matter. I hope the motion will be put and lost so that we can go on and discuss this matter either for or against.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter), referring the matter to the Committee on Labor and a vote being taken, the motion was declared lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards), as a Substitute, which was read before the Convention.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: May I ask simply that that Substitute be read again, and I would like the Clerk to read it slowly. There has not been any disposition on my part to try to annul any part of the Resolution, for which this Substitute has been offered, but simply to go, as I said before, a step farther, and provide that the Legislature shall provide for the employment of convict labor, and that the profit shall accrue to the state.

The Clerk read the Substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards).

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards), moving the adoption of the said Substitute, and a division being called for, the Substitute was declared lost, by a vote of 20 in the affirmative to 39 in the negative.

The President: The question now recurs upon the original proposition. If there are no further amendments, Section No. 2 will be put upon its final passage. The ayes and noes will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk read Section 2 as follows: "It shall be unlawful for the Warden or other officer in authority, or other state officers of any penitentiary or other reformatory institution in the State of Montana to let by contract to any person or persons, or corporations, the labor of any convict confined within said institution."

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Gullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Loud, Magnus, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, Mitchell, Muth, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitt, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R., Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—57. Nays—McAdow, Middleton, Rickards, Warren, Watson—5. Absent—Duffee, Eaton, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Joyes, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Luce, Myers, Robinson, Webster—13.

The President declared the motion to adopt Section 2 as carried.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move to offer a new section to be called Section 3.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Toole), offers a section to be numbered section 3, to be added to the Article on Labor.

The Clerk read same as follows: "Section 3. All state, county and municipal work in the state of Montana shall be done by the day, and eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work for all classes of mechanics and laborers in connection with the same."

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move to amend by laying the proposition on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman).

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, if it be in order to call for the ayes and nays on that motion, I call for the same.

The President: It will require one-fifth of those present to call the ayes and nays.

There being a sufficient number to call the ayes and nays, the president declared that the same would be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll, and the vote stood as follows: Ayes—Aiken, Beckford, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Gibson, Gillette, Hartman, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Loud, Marriott, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Parberry, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Warren, Whitehill, Winston—37. Nays—Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Bullard, Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Collins, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Haskell, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Maginnis, Ramsdall, Reek, Rotwill, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Watson, Witter, Mr. President—26. Absent—Dutree, Eaton, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Luce, Myers, Robinson, Webster—12.

The President announced the vote, and declared the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) carried and Section No. 3 as offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Toole) was laid on the table.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move that the article be referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

The motion was seconded.

The President: Does the gentleman mean that the article shall be first engrossed?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Yes sir, engrossed and referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis), and the same was declared carried.

The President: We will proceed to the consideration of matters under the head of unfinished business.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I move that File No. 1, embracing the Preamble and Bill of Rights, be made the special order for tomorrow at eleven o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The motion is to make File No. 1 the special order for tomorrow at eleven o'clock; it will require a two-thirds vote to so order.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Callaway), and the vote stood 29 in the affirmative to 5 in the negative.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I move we take a recess until two o'clock.

The President: The question is not disposed of yet. The motion to make this a special order having failed to receive two-thirds of the votes of those present, is declared lost. There is a motion before the house, which has been seconded, to take a recess until two o'clock.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Toole), to take a recess until two o'clock, and the vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Convention took a recess until two P. M.

Afternoon Session.
Tuesday, July 23rd, 1889.

The Convention was called to order by the President at two P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: When the Convention took a recess it was engaged in the consideration of unfinished business. That is now the order of business. General File No. 1 will take precedence in the order of business. It is now before the Convention for consideration.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I think that General File and Report of the Committee on Education was made the special order for two o'clock today.

The President: Two o'clock on Wednesday.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I would ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Public Lands, &c., be allowed to make its report.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of the Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands will be received and read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Mr. President, the Committee on Boundaries, Public Lands and Homestead Exemptions have had under consideration the subjects of the control and disposition of the public lands, and of homestead exemptions, and have instructed me to report the following articles, and recommend that the same be incorporated in, and form a part of the Constitution.

Public Lands. Article Section 1. None of the lands granted by Congress to the State of Montana, for the support of common schools, for the establishment and maintenance of a school of mines, state normal schools, agricultural colleges, a state reform school and a deaf and dumb asylum, shall be sold, granted or disposed of in any manner; but the same may be leased under such regulations as the Legislative Assembly may provide by law not inconsistent with the laws of Congress in force at the time same may be leased.

Section 2. The moneys, profits, and proceeds arising from the public lands shall be used and devoted exclusively for educational purposes, and it shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly to enforce this provision by appropriate legislation.

Article Exemptions. Section 1. The Legislative Assembly shall provide liberal exemption laws.

Respectfully submitted, CALLAWAY, Chairman."

The President: If there be no objection, this report will take the usual course, and be referred to the Committee on Printing, with orders that it be printed and placed on the General File. The convention will now proceed to the consideration of Proposition No. 1 on Preamble and Bill of Rights. The Clerk will proceed to read it.

The Clerk read the Preamble, as follows: "We, the people of Montana, grateful to Almighty God for the blessings of liberty, in order to secure the advantages of a State government, do, in accordance with the provisions of the Enabling Act of Congress, approved the 22nd day of February, A. D. 1889, ordain and establish this Constitution."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of the Preamble.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, as the Substitute for the Preamble has not been disposed of, it is before the House.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. President, I understand that substitute was disposed of and rejected.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I think that the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) is correct, that the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) was not disposed of. That vote was never announced, if I remember the fact.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, if I recollect right, I asked on yesterday that the vote might be announced—the vote of the day before—and if I am correct it was held that the Substitute was disposed of by the call of the House on the adjournment.

The President: The Chair decided that there was no decision of that question. The Chair did not announce the vote, because there were members present who did not vote. According to the rules, everyone is obliged to vote, unless excused by the convention; so that the matter is not yet disposed of, and may be brought up. It was taken from before the convention; it may be introduced anew.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, if it is in order, I desire to introduce that Substitute now.

The President: It is in order.

The Clerk read the Substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) as follows: Strike out all of Preamble and insert instead, "We, the people of Montana, do ordain and establish this Constitution."

The motion was seconded.

The President stated the motion.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, the gentlemen who are in favor of this Substitute have been represented as opposed to religion, as being infidels and atheists, and everything of that kind. I wish to say that a great many of them are not; but that they do not believe that the question of religion should be mixed up in any way, shape or manner or form with government. The fact that religion has been mixed up with government in years past has wrought much harm to humanity; wars have been waged, and men in their wrath have proclaimed a disbelief in all religions. The persecutions of the Christians in Rome was on account of the Pagan religion of Rome being considered part of the government. The war that was waged in the United Netherlands for eighty years was on account of religion; the Thirty Years War of Europe was on account of religion; cities were destroyed, the people were murdered and slaughtered in the most inhuman manner. It has been represented that the people of France at the time of the Revolution were a most irreligious people. The fact is that they were taught by their churches that they must submit to the powers that be, and when they rose up in their might, they said, if this is religion, that we must submit to these powers that destroy us, that rob us of our substance, that make us beggars upon the highway, that feed us upon black bread then away with all religion, away with your Bible. Today in Russia, because religion is a part of the Government, we have Nihilists, men that rise up and say "down with religion." In the old anti-slavery days in this country, when men said that slavery was according to the Word of God, the old Abolitionists said, let us then have an anti-slavery God; away with your Bible; away with all religion that teaches that slavery is a divine institution. And so, if we put this matter in this Preamble, it is in obedience to a religious sentiment, a sentiment that absorbs the human mind, that will cause men to forsake country and family ties and adhere to their religious convictions. For my part, I would like to eliminate every allusion to religion in a civil government. Then there is another matter in the Preamble, and that is that we are ordaining this Constitution in accordance with an Act of Congress. Some gentlemen seem to have no objection to that. I say we are ordaining this Constitution by virtue of the sovereign power reposed in us as a people entitled to self-government, a people who are entitled to originate their own government, and to establish it upon the basis that it shall be a government for the people and by the people. And it is for these reasons that we are opposed to this Preamble. We are not irreligionists; I know that there are men here supporting the measure who are, but the majority of those in this house who are opposed to this Preamble are not of that class. I believe in churches. I support churches. I pay money to build churches, and am in favor of the religionists of the country propagating the Gospel. But I am opposed to the mixing up in public affairs in any way of religion. I look only to the past. I know what it has done in the past, and I know there are people today all over this land whose souls are so wrapped up in the subject of religion that they think they must have it in every institution of the country. We have had to eliminate it from the public schools of the country. If it should be in the Constitution of this land, then put it into the public schools; put it in all of your institutions; do not say you have got it into the Constitution of your country, and yet you exclude it from the schools; let us be consistent. It is for this reason that I am opposed to that Preamble, and hope the substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow county (Mr. Dixon) will prevail.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I do not understand why it is the gentlemen are so sensitive about that clause in the Preamble, which says that this is done in accordance with the Act of Congress. Now, there is nothing there that renounces in any way the sovereignty of the people. There is no gentleman upon this floor who will go farther upon that question, or upon the question of State's Rights than I will, but there is nothing here which says that we do this by the grace of Congress.

or by virtue of the Act of Congress. This language was expressly used by direction of the Committee that reported this Preamble. But will anybody say we do not create this Constitution in accordance with this Act, inserting into the very ordinance and into the article itself, certain provisions which this Act of Congress, under which this convention is convened, declares shall be inserted in it? We are simply saying that we do this in accordance with that Act of Congress, which declaration will ever remain as a ready record, by which any citizen of the state of Montana or elsewhere may be able to turn to the Act of Congress under which this Convention was convened. I do not think that there is any departure from established principles with reference to sovereignty upon this question by inserting this in the Preamble. And now, a word, Mr. President, with reference to the main proposition, which seems to agitate so many of the members of this Convention. To every one of them, I accord the perfect right to vote for or against this proposition as his conscience may dictate. So far as I am concerned, I see nothing in the Preamble that is calculated to alarm anybody, whatever his religious convictions may be. It is simply a declaration, the barest mention in the most modest sort of a way of the name of the Supreme Ruler of the Universe. It reminds me very much, sir, and my vote, I believe, shall be controlled very much in accordance with what I learned with reference to a statement of a distinguished gentleman in the city of Minneapolis some years ago. There lived a noted infidel. He had been called on time and again by the religious population of the community to assist in the building of some institution for religious purposes. He had declined as many times, until finally, in order to appease the public sentiment, he proceeded to build a church complete in every detail, and turned it over to the congregation. A meeting was held in it. He was invited to be present, and he came; and the minister, who was then presiding, somewhat on the revival order, arose and asked if there was anybody there that believed in God to stand up. He looked around, and there was not a soul that stood up. Finally he said, if there is anybody here that wants to go to Heaven, let him stand up, and nobody stood up; and as a sort of last appeal he said, if there is a friend of Jesus in this house let him stand up. The old infidel looked around, he saw that nobody was getting up, and finally he got up himself and said, "Mr. Parson, you can put me down as a friend of Jesus, or any other man that ain't got any more friends than Jesus has." Laughter and applause.)

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: It may indeed seem presumptuous that I should attempt to answer my colleague and neighbor, Judge Knowles. I for one am sorry that this issue has been raised, but I call upon every gentleman upon this floor to witness that the "religious cranks," as we are sometimes sneeringly called, did not raise it. Now, I for one never gave the matter of the recognition of the Deity in this Preamble a moment's thought, until it was laid upon my table from our Committee; and I must say that the modest, simple recognition therein contained seemed to me so pre-eminently proper and right that I never thought that anyone would rise to his feet and call in question the appropriateness of the act. Now, this question and this false alarm has been raised of a union of state and religion. It would seem ridiculous, sir, if it was not said in such seriousness. I say without fear of contradiction that I would impeach the intelligence of this body if I presumed for one moment that you would attempt to unite religion and state, or, if you please, church and state. The idea is ridiculous. Now, my learned friend unquestionably knows a good deal about law, and a great deal about history, but I submit that he knows very little about religion (laughter), when he stands on this floor and says that a simple recognition of the Deity is religion. Why, sir, every man, speaking in a broad sense, recognizes a Supreme Being. The Nomadic subject recognizes the Great Spirit. Is he a religious savage? Nay, I have heard some men, and I am bound to say some on this floor, recognize the Deity, and call upon him, though in a very irreligious manner. Now, Mr. President, it does seem to me that it is time to call a halt when men stand on this floor and raise such false alarms as this. I want to remind Judge Knowles, and all others who may hold to such opinions as expressed by him—for he gave expression here last week to the sentiment that if we retained the few obnoxious words that were there, many of our citizens all over this territory would be offended—I want to remind him that the old Constitution of 1884 contained this same recognition, and the people passed upon it favorably. If there was any complaint, it was a very weak one and I never heard it. I also want to remind him that one of the first acts of this body was to call each member to his feet and take the oath of office, as prescribed by law. Did any one rise to his feet, and object and say that this might be a recognition of Deity, or of God, and offend our constituency? Now, to be consistent, why the oath of office? Why any oath in our courts of justice? Is the term the oath is clothed in "so help me God," a union of religion and state? Then, sir, if it is, Judge Knowles has been from time almost immemorial for I have heard of him almost since Montana has been Montana, guilty of trying to make a union of church and state. Do you say "foolishness"? Yes, I admit it, but that is the line of argument that has been advanced on this floor. Now, since this question has been raised, I say all honor to this Committee, having before them the experience and the Constitutions of other states, that they thought it wise and proper, to incorporate this simple recognition of God in this Preamble. I have examined the Preambles of all of the States of the Union, and I hold in my hand a memorandum; it is too lengthy to read, unless some one calls for it; and I make the statement that twenty-seven of our states have this recognition of Deity in their preambles, and some of them have gone farther than this, and recognized the Lord Jesus Christ. Now, sirs, these twenty-seven states commenced back as far as the history of this Nation. In 1776, Connecticut recognized Almighty God in her preamble, and as late as 1879, and in the Constitution of Connecticut in 1818, we see this same recognition of God. Now, sirs, in conclusion I would not take up one moment of your time if this issue had not been raised; but it has been raised, and every one must stand in my place and ask this body, "let us, grateful to Almighty God," if you please, that it has pleased our constituency to repose so much confidence in our integrity and ability to frame a constitution for this grand and glorious incoming State of Montana, rise to the importance of the occasion, and I predict that ninety-five per cent of our constituency within the bounds of Montana will say of us on this proposition alone, "well done." (Applause.)

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President I move you that the previous question be now called for.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, (Mr. Middleton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Question is upon the adoption of the Substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, (Mr. Dixon).

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, (Mr. Dixon), and a division being called for, the Substitute was declared lost, by a vote of 23 in the affirmative to 44 in the negative.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer a Substitute for the Preamble.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I believe it is the rule that when the previous question has ben moved and seconded no further amendments are in order. I now move the previous question again on the question.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: The amendment of the gentleman from Madison was presented first, I believe.

The President: It was not seconded; if it was it would be in order.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I withdraw my motion, as a matter of courtesy. I wish to say, however, that all these motions seem to be in the nature of dilatory; but in order that no gentleman shall feel himself aggrieved or cut off, I withdraw the motion.

The President: The Clerk will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Madison.

The Clerk read as follows: Preamble offered by Callaway: "We, the people of Montana, in order to form a more perfect government, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the State of Montana."

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move the adoption of the Substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. I understand the rule to be, that when the previous question has been put, the motion on the question called for and put, and the vote is in the affirmative, that it stops all debate and further amendments.

The President: The amendment was offered before the motion for the previous question was moved.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: The previous question as put on my motion would have the effect to bring the convention to a vote upon the amendments then pending, and immediately thereupon a vote upon the main question, according to Rule 13.

The President: The point of order of the gentleman from Custer is well taken, and no further amendments may be allowed. The question before the convention is now upon the adoption of the preamble, as read.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the preamble as read, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 1, as follows: Article 1. A declaration of the Rights of the People of the State of Montana. Section 1. That all political power is vested in and derived from the people; that all government of right originates with the people, is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole.

There being no amendments to Section 1, the Clerk read Section 2, as follows: Section 2. That the people of this state have the sole and exclusive right of governing themselves, as a free sovereign and independent state, and to alter and abolish their constitution and form of government whenever they may deem it necessary to their safety and happiness, provided such change be not repugnant to the constitution of the United States.

There being no amendments to section 2, the Clerk read section 3, as follows: Section 3. That all persons are born equally free, and have certain natural, essential, and inalienable rights, among which may be reckoned the right of enjoying and defending their lives and liberties; that of acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and of seeking and obtaining their safety and happiness in all lawful ways.

There being no amendments to section 3, the Clerk read section 4, as follows: Section 4. That the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination, shall forever hereafter be guaranteed, and no person shall be denied any civil or political rights, privileges or capacity, on account of his opinions concerning religion, but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be construed to dispense with oaths or affirmations, excuse acts of licentiousness by bigamous or polygamous marriage, or otherwise, or justify practices inconsistent with the good order, peace or safety of the State, or opposed to the civil authority thereof, or of the United States. No person shall be required to attend or support any ministry, or place of worship, religious sect or denomination, against his consent; nor shall any preference be given by law to any religious denomination or mode of worship.

There being no amendments to section 4, the Clerk read section 5, as follows: Section 5. That all elections shall be free and open; and no power, civil or military shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage.

There being no amendments to section 5, the Clerk read section 6, as follows: Section 6. That Courts of Justice shall be open to every person, and a speedy remedy afforded for every injury of person, property, or character; and that right and justice shall be administered without sale, denial or delay.

There being no amendments to section 6, the Clerk read section 7 as follows: Section 7. That the people shall be secure in their persons, papers, homes, and effects, from unreasonable searches and seizure; and no warrant to search any place or seize any person or thing, shall issue without describing the place to be searched, or the person or thing to be seized, as near as may be, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, reduced to writing.

There being no amendments to section 7, the Clerk read section 8 as follows: Section 8. Criminal offenses of which justices courts and municipal and other courts inferior to the district courts have jurisdiction, shall be prosecuted by complaint.

There being no amendment to section 8, the Clerk read section 9 as follows: Section 9. Criminal offences of which the district courts have jurisdiction shall be prosecuted by information after examination and conviction by a magistrate, or by leave of the court, or by indictment, without such examination or commitment or without such leave of court. A grand jury shall consist of seven persons of whom five must concur to find an indictment. A grand jury shall only be drawn and summoned when the district judge shall in his discretion consider it necessary, and shall so order.

Mr. Joyes of Jefferson sent up an amendment, which the Clerk read as follows: Motions to amend sections 8 and 9, article 1, by substituting the following. Section 8, no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land and naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger; all other cases shall be prosecuted criminally by indictment or complaint.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Jefferson, (Mr. Joyes,) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move to amend section 9.

The President: The gentleman from Meagher moves to amend section 9, by striking out the word "conviction" and inserting "commitment" in lieu thereof.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: That refers to line 2, of section 9, where it reads, "Criminal offences of which the district courts have jurisdiction shall be prosecuted by information after examination and conviction by a magistrate." It seems to me that that word "conviction" should read "commitment". It would be a strange sort of proceeding to prosecute a criminal for an offense of which he had already been convicted.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: That is undoubtedly a mistake. The printed copies, Mr. President, did not get here until just before the convention met at two o'clock, and the Committee had no opportunity to compare them.

The President: If there be no objection the correction will be made.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I think it should be stricken out altogether. It is not necessary at all. I therefore move to strike out the words "and commitment".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move to strike out in the second line of section 9, the words, "or by leave of the court". I do not understand what those words mean there. They seem to me to have no meaning whatever.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I think those words are important, and should be left there. It is intended to apply to crimes that might be committed during a session of court when the expenses of examination and commitment by a magistrate would be entirely unnecessary when the court might have the discretion of filing a commitment without going to the expense of preliminary proceeding by a magistrate. It seems to me they are very necessary. So, too, there might be cases in which the magistrate might fail in his duty. I think the clause is important, and that it will be found in practice to be very useful and a great saving of time, and an unnecessary delay and expense involved in preliminary examinations.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I cannot well see what those words mean, even after the explanation of the gentleman. They seem to me entirely improper, and have no meaning at all in this connection. Further, if he means the district attorney is going to be advised by the court to examine the case, and have him examine him and pre-judge the case before it goes to trial, it would still be decidedly improper.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: A judge can act, under our law, as a committing magistrate, and after a party has been examined before one committing magistrate he cannot be examined before another committing magistrate. Now, as a matter of practice, and which would probably be provided by law in all cases of examination before a committing magistrate the evidence will be reduced to writing, and that evidence, where the committing magistrate has failed to bind over the party to appear before the court, may be submitted to the judge, and the judge upon examination of that matter may say, "Why here this man ought to have been held to answer before the grand jury," and will so order. Now, that was the idea of putting that provision in, and that was all there was of it.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, (Mr. Carpenter,) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: In line 4, I move you that the word "seven" be stricken out, and "twelve" inserted; and that the word "five" be stricken out, and the word "nine" inserted therefor.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: If it is in order I move to strike out that sentence.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke moves to amend by striking out the sentence, beginning at the latter part of line 3, and ending at the latter part of line 4, as follows: "A grand jury shall consist of seven persons, of whom five must concur to find an indictment."

The Chair then put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, (Mr. Carpenter,) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now before the convention is on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, (Mr. Whitehill, to strike out the word "seven" and insert therefor "twelve."

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move to amend the amendment by striking out the word "twelve" and inserting "nine".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, (Mr. Witter,) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, (Mr. Whitehill,) that the words "twelve" shall be inserted instead of the word "seven".

The Chair then put the said motion to the convention, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I wish to offer an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers to amend section 9, by changing the word "seven" in the fourth line to "nine", and the word "five" in the same line to "seven". I would say to the gentleman from Deer Lodge, that the question of striking out "seven" and inserting "nine" has been disposed of in the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, which was lost. Does the gentleman wish to have the remaining part of his amendment placed before the convention?

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I did not understand the word "five" was included in the amendment.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move to amend section 9.

The President: I see by the printed copy, which I hold, that there are two sections marked section 9, and the Chief Clerk has just explained to the Chair that the first section marked section 8 is a part of it, and that section 9 follows; so that we are really offering these amendments to section 8, instead of section 9.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: The amendment just offered will apply to section 8.

The President: The gentleman from Meagher, (Mr. Kanouse,) offers to amend line 3 in section 8 as it is now by striking out the words, "without such examination or commitment, or without such leave of court."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: My only reason for offering that amendment is that it seems to be superfluous. I cannot understand what business it has in that connection, unless it be the sense of the convention that it is necessary to have it. It seems to me to be unnecessary.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I think the gentleman misapprehends the intent of that provision. When an information is to be filed it will be after commitment by a magistrate, or by leave of court. But a grand jury may indict without any leave of court, or without any previous examination by a magistrate.

The Chair then put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Meagher, (Mr. Kanouse,) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The President: If there be no further amendments to section 8, we will pass to section 9 of the printed copy, being the second section numbered 9.

The Clerk read said section as follows: Section 9. That treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it, or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort; that no person shall be convicted of treason except on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on his confession in open court; that no person shall be attainted of treason or felony by the Legislative Assembly; that no conviction shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture of estate; that the estate of persons who may destroy their own lives shall descend or vest as in cases of natural death.

There being no amendments to section 9, the Clerk read section 10 as follows: Section 10. That no law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech; that every person shall be free to speak, write or publish whatever he will on any subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty; and that in all suits and prosecutions for libel the truth thereof may be given in evidence, and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the fact.

There being no amendments to section 10, the Clerk read section 11, as follows: Section 11. That no ex post facto law, nor law impairing the obligation of contracts, or making any irrevocable grant of special privileges, franchises or immunities shall be passed by the Legislative Assembly.

There being no amendments to section 11, the Clerk read section 12 as follows: Section 12. That no person shall be imprisoned for debt except in such manner as may be prescribed by law; upon refusal to deliver up his estate for the benefit of his creditors, or, in cases of tort where there is strong presumption of fraud.

There being no amendments to section 12, the Clerk read section 13, as follows: Section 13. That the right of any person to keep or bear arms in defense of his own home, person and property or in aid of the civil power when thereto legally summoned, shall not be called in question, but nothing herein contained shall be held to permit the carrying of concealed weapons.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the convention to a difficulty that has existed in many of the counties in regard to the carrying of concealed weapons. The object of the law to prevent the carrying of concealed weapons is to obviate and prevent these quarrels in the streets, by which many lives are lost, and great danger to the persons is inflicted, and it has been held by a great many of our inferior courts that it is no violation of the law when a man does not keep the weapon concealed in his pocket. I would like to call the attention of the convention, without making any suggestion as to the remedy, of what seems to me an important measure in preventing the carrying of deadly weapons in towns or cities, whether concealed or not. It would certainly prevent a great deal of crime, a great many outrages, a great deal of personal injury and a great many lives. I would like to hear from some of the members of the convention on the subject.

No action being taken on the suggestion of the gentleman from Custer, the Clerk proceeded to read section 14 as follows: Section 14. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having been first made to, or paid into court for the owner.

There being no amendments to section 14, the Clerk read section 15 as follows: Section 15. The use of all water now appropriated or that may hereafter be appropriated for sale, rental, distribution or other beneficial use and the right of way over the lands of others for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals, and aqueducts, necessarily used in connection therewith, as well as the sites for reservoirs necessary for collecting and storing the same shall be held to be a public use.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I offer an amendment to add to that section.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers an amendment to add to section 15. "Private roads may be opened in the manner to be prescribed by law, but in every case the necessity of the road, and the amount of all damage to be sustained by the opening thereof, shall be first determined by a jury, and such amount together with the expenses of the proceeding, shall be paid by the person to be benefited."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I offer that amendment because there is no provision whatever in regard to private roads. A person may get a section of land somewhere, and a needy person at that, where it is hemmed in in such a way that there is no possible opportunity to make use of it. This provision in regard to private roads has within the last thirty years been introduced in almost every constitution that has been passed and I understand it was intended to be introduced here; but there is no provision in section 14 or 15 in reference to a private road, which may be determined to be a matter of necessity, and to be paid for in advance, as this amendment provides.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, (Mr. Carpenter) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read section 15 as amended.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I would like to inquire if the word "jury" in that amendment means twelve persons.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I suppose it means such a jury as is recognized by this Constitution.

There being no further amendments to section 15, the Clerk read section 16 as follows: Section 16. That in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to appear and defend in person and by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation; to meet the witnesses against him face to face; to have process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county or district in which the offense is alleged to have been committed, subject to the right of the state to have a change of venue for any of the causes for which the defendant may obtain the same.

There being no amendments to section 16, the Clerk read section 17 as follows: Section 17. That no person shall be imprisoned for the purpose of securing his testimony in any case longer than may be necessary in order to take his deposition. If he can give security for his appearance at the time of trial he shall be discharged upon giving the same; if he cannot give security his deposition shall be taken in the manner prescribed by law, and in the presence of the accused and his counsel.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I offer an amendment to that section.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers an amendment to add to section 17 as follows: "Or without their presence if they shall fail to attend the examination, after reasonable notice of the time and place thereof. Any deposition authorized by this section may be received as evidence on the trial if the witness shall be dead or absent from the Territory."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the reason I offer that is, that section 17, as it stands now, would amount to nothing, because it requires that the deposition shall be taken in the presence of the accused and his counsel. The accused can defeat it by simply not appearing. This is added so that on reasonable notice the deposition may be taken without their presence. This is a notice that the Legislature shall prescribe. If the accused shall not appear, it can be taken without his presence. Now, then, there is another reason why the latter part should prevail, and that is that there is no provision here for the deposition being used in evidence. This latter section provides that if the witness is dead or out of the state that the deposition may be offered in evidence, that is, if the witness were dead or absent from the state so that his testimony could not be obtained.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I consider this, Mr. President, the most dangerous departure that has ever been made from established principles in courts of justice. I submitted some remarks the other day upon this proposition when it was before the convention, and I undertook to show that the original intention of the Constitution of the United States, when it provided that the defendant should be entitled to meet the witness face to face meant something more than meeting him before the committing magistrate. I am ready here and now to assert that that is the established doctrine, as determined under the Constitution of the United States, which is applicable only in cases arising under the constitutional laws of the United States, and in the territories of the United States. That is the construction that has been given to it by courts of the highest respectability, which hold that it is in compliance with the constitutional provision if the defendant has been permitted to meet the witness face to face before the committing magistrate where he had the opportunity to cross examine, and that, in all probability, would be the holding of the courts of the State of Montana, under the Declaration of Rights, which is here presented. But I seek to evade a construction of that kind. Here you take it out of the possibility of the courts to determine any such proposition as that by providing in express terms that this evidence may be used against the defendant upon the trial of that cause. I take it, sir, as it has been suggested here, that this will result in all probability in saving some costs and expense to the several counties of this territory, and of the State of Montana, by reason of a provision by which the witness will not be kept in jail, and that it will also be a great benefit to the witness himself, because of the fact that he will be able to give this bond, which is provided for, or have his deposition taken, as the case may be. I do not believe, sir, that there is any constitutional authority, to support that by which you can take a witness and put him in jail, and compel him to linger there and languish, as was portrayed here the other day by gentlemen who are in favor of this proposition. I think, sir that the witness is at least entitled to the same consideration that the defendant himself is, and that would be to a speedy and impartial trial, if there is any charge or evidence against him; but certainly to take him and incarcerate him in prison is without authority under the constitution; and although the Legislative Assembly of this Territory has provided for it, and it is perhaps provided for in other sections of the country, I do not consider it is legislation following within the scope of the constitution. But to say that under this provision of the constitution, which guarantees these men the right to meet these witnesses face to face, that you may go off to the county jail, or elsewhere, and in the presence of the two or three or four persons, and in the presence of the accused, take his deposition which shall be brought into court and there used against him instead of allowing him to meet the witness face to face, is saying something, sir, that was never intended by the constitution of the United States, and which ought not to be permitted under this Bill of Rights. As I said the other day, this is a right which ought to follow the defendant all the way through in a criminal prosecution, in the prosecution before the committing magistrate, and upon the final trial in order that the jury summoned on their oaths to try and determine the guilt, or innocence of that defendant, may look as well into the face of this witness and ascertain whether or not he is telling the truth. It frequently happens, sir, or might happen that a witness taken out to some place away from the solemnities of the law, out from under the eye of the court and the jury and the multitude, that he might be able to tell a fair and plausible story; but that if he was subjected to the cross examination before a court and jury where they might look into his face, that he would break down under the fire of the cross examination, which might be had under such solemnities. I perhaps said all that I could say in reference to it upon that occasion, but when this question was once up in a state court there was an argument presented by a distinguished lawyer of his time, Judge Uriah Wright of the State of Missouri, who was attacking the very proposition, which is laid down under the decisions with reference to the constitution of Missouri, and I will read to the convention what was said by him, although the court determined then that meeting the witness before the committing magistrate where he was cross examined was a sufficient compliance with that provision. But I want to relieve this question of the additional embarrassment, which is sought to be placed upon it by this additional section, which goes further and says that the testimony may be taken at any time and used against him. It never was intended, sir, that it should go farther than to say that the testimony might be used where the witness had died, or where, for instance, he had gone out of the state and was away from the jurisdiction of the court. Here was what was said by the gentleman in the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri, and it strikes me, sir, it is conclusive, so far as argument is concerned. (Reading: "The 'accused' shall meet the 'witness face to face.' He shall thus meet him in all criminal prosecutions; that is the right. A meeting might involve only presence, contiguity; but that is not enough. It shall be a meeting in the mode and fullness in which man must meet his God in the day of final judgment, and that is, 'face to face.' The whole purpose of the provision is to thwart falsehood. If perjury were impossible, the provision would be without meaning. Two objects were secured by the words; first, the witness must look upon the accused, the intended victim of a false oath, that he may see the value of what he is about to destroy, and the accused shall look upon the witness as he swears; second the triers shall look upon the false witness and gather the perjury from his aspect. The means are simple, but human experience has established their efficacy as tests of truth. They invoke only moral power, but that after all is the highest power. It is hard to say which of the two instrumentalities is the greater. "And the Lord turned and looked upon Peter; and Peter went out and wept bitterly." Luke, Chap 22. When affidavits were read to Mary of Scotland, in prison, imputing to her great crimes, the unhappy queen said: "Who are the witnesses?" For their names were not given. "Bring them before me, and they will forswear their falsehoods when they meet me face to face." The other instrumentality (the right of the triers to look upon the witness) is auxiliary to this. It brings knowledge of whatever is accomplished for innocence by the prior means home to the right quarter, and in the right way. But its function does not stop here. It acts independently of the rules of evidence, by its own inherent power; and sometimes renders a right derived from those rules unnecessarily. Thus the inspection by the jury of a witness may dispense with a cross-examination; but when this fails it becomes auxiliary also to the rules of evidence, and gives to the right of cross-examination derived from those rules (not from the constitution) a power which it could not have without it. It is thus sufficiently manifest that the status of a 'witness' in a criminal prosecution, while it creates no rule of evidence, secures to any man accused of crime the largest amount of impunity from the operation of those rules which justice can allow.

"When and where shall this meeting transpire? Not in the secret chamber of the Grand Jury—not when complaint is made before a justice preliminary to a warrant; but whenever and wherever a criminal prosecution has ceased to be a proceeding ex parte, and has taken the matured form of a legal accusation of crime, and the witness is brought to sustain it. In all 'criminal prosecutions,' the right shall obtain, says the bill of rights. The words embrace, I think, every form of 'criminal prosecution' known to our laws. In prosecutions by presentment or indictment, the additional right of a speedy trial by a jury of the vicinage is given; but I am not prepared to say that the right to meet the witness 'face to face' is confined to that tribunal. Doubtless this security was mainly intended for the hour and place of actual peril, when liberty and life should be in greatest jeopardy, when the accused should stand before a tribunal having power over either or both; but the words are broad enough to cover the matured prosecution, wherever and whenever it takes the matured form of a legal accusation of crime. And the same words, as well as the reasons on which they rest, carry the right through every stage of the 'criminal prosecution,' so long as the 'witness' can by the mode of procedure be brought 'against' the accused. While the 'witness' may swear he shall swear 'face to face' with the accused. The security lasts as long as the peril and the protection never ends until the peril is merged in judgment.

"I deem it very fit to put a like question touching other and kindred rights secured by the same pregnant section of the bill of rights. How often shall the accused have counsel, and where? If he once have counsel, is the constitution satisfied? If he has counsel before the examining court, may counsel be denied him before the jury? If once before a jury he have counsel, may he be deprived of counsel on the second trial? How often may the accused have the right of trial by jury. If once a jury be impanelled in his case, is the constitutional guaranty at an end? May he be denied that tribunal afterwards? If the jury bring no verdict and are discharged, or if the verdict be set aside, may that constitutional 'bulwark' be from that time abandoned as having done its office, and the State proceed to judgment by a simpler and more summary process? How often shall the accused have the right to compulsory process to force the attendance of his witnesses? May the process be denied him if once invoked? These questions answer themselves. No power in the Government can rob him of counsel in a 'criminal prosecution' at any one of a hundred trials of the same cause. The jury must come a hundred times; if there be as many trials; and in all of them the compulsory process must go for his witnesses; and at every trial the witnesses against him must meet him 'face to face', that he may look for the hundredth time upon the witness while he swears, and every jury may see the manner of the swearing.

Now, Mr. President, it seems to me, that if this section is passed, which proposes to put it into the power of the prosecuting attorney to go to jail and take the deposition of a witness, or to go to a law office in this city, and take the deposition of a witness, and permit that deposition, as is proposed by the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke who just offered it, to be read in evidence, that you take away from the accused all the safeguards that were designed in the first instance by the constitution of the United States, and which ought to be designed by this Bill of Rights to throw around the accused. I think, sir, it is a departure from established principles that ought not to be tolerated in this convention.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I think this matter ought to be left to the Legislature and I offer the following substitute.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers as a substitute for section 17, "That no person shall be imprisoned for the purpose of securing his testimony, except as provided by law."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: That would be simply equivalent to striking it out, because whether that resolution passes or not, the Legislature would still have the power to imprison witnesses. The question has been whether the criminal shall be punished, or the innocent witness punished.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Well, do not you think that is a question that may be safely left to the Legislature?

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: The action of the Legislature in nine cases out of ten has been to imprison the witnesses.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Then I second the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) to strike the question out.

The President: The motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to strike out this section has been seconded, and is now before the house.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: This matter has already been left to the territorial legislature, and they have provided for the imprisonment of witnesses who were unable to give security, or who had not given security for their appearance before the court in these prosecutions. I do not think it is a safe repository for this power. I think it is one of the very fundamental principles that lies at the very foundation of the liberty of the citizen, and should be provided for in the constitution, and I think it should be placed beyond the reach and the power of the Legislature to check. Now, the idea, as I said the other day, of taking an innocent witness who is passing through the country here, who happens unfortunately to witness the commission of a crime, dragging him away perhaps from his family and throwing him into prison because he has not the means of giving security before the magistrate, seems to me to be as great a piece of barbarism as was ever practiced upon the early people of civilization by the inhabitants of the Barbary Coast. I, for one, cannot tolerate it.

Some gentlemen seem to go upon the hypothesis—the whole theory of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole), is that the witness is the criminal, and that the defendant is the honest man. It seems to me that we should throw some safe-guard around here, and take it from the power of the Legislature to make any provision as they have done, by which an innocent witness is thrust into prison, and taken from his family, and kept there until the term of court. I, for one, cannot sanction it.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I did not intend to say anything further upon this proposition, but the discussion has taken such a turn, and the amendments that have been made to it are of such a character, that I feel called upon to say a few words. Now, the amendment that is proposed by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) allows a deposition to be taken under provisions of law, after notice, in the absence of the defendant. Now, that will make a conflict with the preceding section, which says that the witness must be brought face to face. That is one objection to it. The next objection is that human experience has proven that it is best that a witness be confronted by the accused. Now, this is really for the preservation of the rights of the people. The state does not want to convict anybody who is innocent; the state has only one object in view in all prosecutions, and that is to convict guilty men; and it is found in all prosecutions that it is best that the witness should be confronted by the defendant. Now, the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, who is near me (Mr. Toole), says that this must be carried all the way through, that he be not only confronted on the preliminary examination, but he must be confronted on the trial before the jury. Well, now, courts have held for a great many years that that was not necessary. In the very case in which the distinguished lawyer from Missouri made that celebrated speech—(interrupted).

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Will the gentleman allow me a moment. They held that was not necessary where the witness was dead, or had gone beyond the jurisdiction of the state.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Well, this is not the proposition here either. It is to be taken under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Legislature, and it is reasonable to suppose that the Legislature will not establish a rule in relation to criminal matters that it has not established in relation to civil matters. A deposition taken in civil matters can only be used where a party is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, or dead; if he is going away, you can take the deposition but you cannot read it; if the party is within the jurisdiction of the court, and can be brought there by process of the court you cannot read it. It is only to be taken and used in the absence of the witness where he cannot be produced, and it is reasonable to suppose that the Legislature will provide such a provision of law in relation to taking the depositions of these witnesses. Now, the gentleman (Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke) wishes this matter so established and fixed that the witness must be present upon the trial. As he has admitted here, this is against former decisions of courts. Now, if those decisions, or the rule that has been established in these cases, has not produced hardship, is it reasonable to suppose that taking a deposition in the presence of the accused before a sworn officer will work this hardship? Is it reasonable to suppose that it will? Then, as to striking this matter all out and leaving it to the Legislature to determine, I would say that the taking of a deposition in a criminal case is derogatory to the principles of the common law, and unless you put it in this constitution, I doubt whether the Legislature would have any power to do that in a criminal case. The taking of a deposition, unless it is by some constitutional provision, I think, as a rule, is not allowed in the courts; and hence it was thought necessary to put this in the constitution for that purpose. Now, I have this to say, that if you leave it untrammelled to the Legislature, why, then you have got to strike out the other provision that the witness must be met face to face. Anyhow, I believe that those two sections will be construed together by any court in the world, and they will say this, that you have got to provide in taking your deposition a means for producing the defendant before the party who is to take that deposition, and before the witness. It is not necessary to go on here and provide all those means; you can leave it to the Legislature to provide them, so that the witness must be face to face with the accused; but do not fix us a whole code in relation to taking these depositions. That was the object of the Judiciary Committee in providing it. Now, the gentlemen say about this thing of imprisoning men as witnesses, "Why, that is as old as our institutions; why do we take recognizances from witnesses and require them to give bond for security?" That is an old provision of the law; it is older than the government of the United States, and it was required of them just for that reason, that they may give this security to appear, so that the state may have the attendance of these witnesses. I believe the provision that is here is about the best that can be done. I would sooner say with the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Tooke), strike the whole thing out than adopt the provision of the distinguished gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter). I do not believe for one in taking the deposition of any witness, or having any witness testify against a criminal except face to face. I know of an instance that occurred right in this community in the days of the old Vigilance Committee. Mr. Langford, now of St. Paul, was the chairman of that Committee. Men were brought in before that Committee that gave testimony before it of a crime committed by two parties and the Committee were almost unanimous that they ought to be punished after the manner of Vigilance Committees; but there were two or three friends of those parties there, and they finally prevailed after a great deal of discussion on bringing those two men before the Vigilance Committee. They were brought there and they were confronted, and they confronted the witnesses, and in fifteen minutes there were not found five men in that Vigilance Committee that were willing to vote for their conviction. The Chairman of that Committee, Mr. Langford, said that he had seen no rule of law more amply vindicated in his life than in the examination before that Vigilance Committee. This was the very thing that made the Star Chamber investigations of England so odious, that is to say, investigations without having the party confronted by the witness, and I believe there can be a means provided by the Legislature by which when a deposition is to be taken the criminal can be brought forward, and be made to confront the witness. He can be arrested for that purpose by a process of the court—re-arrested and brought there for that purpose. Some means can be provided rather than to have a man who simply happened to have eyes in his head and saw a criminal offense committed being incarcerated for months and months in one of our common jails.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: If the Convention will indulge me just one minute I wish to assume a case where, say, half a dozen witnesses are in jail for the purpose of appearing as witnesses for the prosecution. They cannot give the security required. On the other hand, here is the accused, under indictment, out on bail. It is impossible under our previous section to have that testimony taken unless he will consent. He refuses to consent. This provides a way to give him ample notice, and if he does not consent the testimony will be taken, because it will be his own fault if he does not meet the witness face to face. He has every opportunity given him to do it, and that is the only possible way to release an innocent witness from bondage.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: The gentleman from Silver Bow, the last speaker except Governor Carpenter, is a distinguished jurist. I have sat in his courts and heard him instruct juries as to the law—that the jurors were the exclusive judges of the evidence, and of the credibility of the witnesses, and that in considering their testimony they should take into consideration upon the question of credibility the manner in which the witness testified, his bearing upon the witness stand as a matter from which they could gather from their opinion as to whether that man was worthy of belief. That has entered into the jurisprudence of this country as one of the most essential rights of the accused, that that man on the witness stand should be seen by the jury; that they could take and look him over, understand his manner, look in his eyes, see his hesitation, and see whether he is telling the truth or not; whether he be honest or dishonest; and if there be anything essential in the defense of a man it is that very proposition. Allow me to ask the gentlemen of this Convention what they suppose would have been the result of the Parnell trial had not the perjurer met the court that tried that case face to face. I know, Mr. President, from nearly thirty-four years' experience at the bar that in many cases where you bring a witness before a Commission, a justice of the peace, to be examined, he may tell a smooth story, and when the testimony goes before the trial jury they have the matter in cold black and white. They cannot estimate the value that that man's testimony should have. He can lie as smooth as a liar can lie, and they will not know but what it is gospel truth; and I tell you, sir, that I agree with the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, that this is one of the most dangerous innovations that has ever been attempted in any fundamental law of the land. Because a man is accused, Mr. President, of a crime, it does not follow that he is guilty. Men have been incarcerated, they have gone to the gallows, they have gone to the guillotine upon false testimony offered. I know in the Territory of Montana innocent men have been accused of crime, indicted and convicted. This is one of the most sacred rights that belong to the American citizen; and therefore I shall heartily second the motion to strike this whole provision out. You may say, gentlemen, that when you put this provision upon the statutes of the Territory of Montana that an innocent may may be imprisoned, a witness who happened to see some crime committed, because he was so situated that he could not shut his eyes and stop up his ears, and could not give bail for his appearance that it is a wise provision. I think it one of the most outrageous and abominable restrictions upon the right of American citizens. No Legislature of the State of Montana can, with due regard to the Bill of Rights of the Constitution of the United States, put a man in prison and keep him there to be used as a witness, and I guarantee that if this case had ever come up on habeas corpus before a competent judge of the Territory of Montana, he would have said, release this man because it is unconstitutional. I do not know of any case of the kind, but I do not know of a statute in the United States that is in force except in Montana, that allows any such outrage upon the rights of a citizen. I am opposed to any provision of the kind of any character whatsoever, and therefore I shall vote with the gentleman from Silver Bow to strike the whole thing out. I oppose the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Major Maginnis, for the reason that his amendment would simply give authority to the Legislature to commit this crime upon liberty.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: We have heard a great deal about the rights of defendants, and about the rights of prisoners. Now, it appears to me, Mr. President, that the people have some rights as well as the criminal, and what we want to do is to so adjust our laws and constitution as to guarantee all the rights possible, both to the defendant and to the people. It will be admitted by everybody that there have always been too many loopholes by which many charged with crime, and guilty of crime, too, may escape punishment. Now, I do not understand what my friend, Mr. Toole, proposes to do in regard to this matter. He has addressed the Convention here in regard to what Mr. Wright of Missouri said in regard to this proposition, but it was only a few days after that that the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri decided that Mr. Wright was wrong. (Laughter) Now, Mr. President, they have decided there that when a man is met face to face with the evidence that is against him, when he is met once that is sufficient. It is not necessary that you should follow him around with the witness on every occasion. When he is present at the time that witness is giving his testimony, and with his counsel has an opportunity to cross-examine, that is all, it seems to me, that the most strenuous advocate of the rights of the prisoner should claim. When the trial comes off if that witness is within the jurisdiction of the court, then that evidence is not to be used at all but the witness himself is to go before the jury. But this is only a precautionary measure when the witness cannot be procured at the trial. Now, Mr. President, it is claimed that it is an outrage worse than barbarism to imprison a witness. It does look very hard to imprison a man for that, and be put to as much inconvenience and trouble as the man who has committed the crime. Now, you take the proposition of Mr. Toole, that a deposition shall in no case be taken; take the other proposition that the witness shall in no case be imprisoned and held as a witness; why, it necessarily results you have got no witness when the day of trial comes, and the result is that the man who has committed a cold-blooded murder, or any other crime that was witnessed by half a dozen people cannot be convicted because they are all gone and there is nobody to fix the murder at all, and consequently the accused walks into court with perfect impunity. Now, Mr. President, you have got to do one of two things. The people demand that they shall be protected, and the only way to do that is to bring this man to trial in some way, and before you can punish him you have got to have witnesses in some way. Now, if you decide it is morally wrong, legally wrong to imprison a man who cannot give a bond for his appearance, and then if you decide that a deposition cannot be taken, why, you just provide a highway by which everybody accused of crime can march off with perfect impunity, and there is no protection for the people at all. I am decidedly against striking out this clause in the constitution, and am in favor of Governor Carpenter's amendment, so that the prosecuting attorney, or anyone who has charge of the matter, can go and notify the defendant and his counsel that the deposition of the witness will be taken at a certain time and at a certain place, the same as you do in a civil case. Then, you have given him an opportunity, and that is all that anybody should ask. If they do not desire to be present when that evidence is taken, then the people cannot help it, the prosecution cannot help it. But when they have got notice and the prosecution goes before a notary public, or magistrate, or some person authorized to take oaths, and take that deposition, it is one hundred to one that the defendant will be there. He will want to know what that man is going to testify to; but if he is rebellious and stubborn and will not go there, then go and take the deposition anyhow. That is the only way to get the evidence, and I say go on and take the deposition, and when the day of trial comes, if that witness is beyond the jurisdiction and the control of the court, then that evidence can be read before the jury; but if the witness is within the jurisdiction of the court then it is not right it should be read. Of course, it is always better that the jury should judge of the bearing of the witness, but in the absence of that, you are going to say that the defendant shall go scot free. I say no, the people have some rights. This is the people against the defendant, and it is the people trying to protect themselves against the criminal classes; and instead of putting in our time here providing a highway by which the criminal classes should escape, I say that all we should do is to give them a speedy and impartial trial.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I demand the previous question.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh), and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The question before the Convention is upon the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, to strike out section 17.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Permit me to make an inquiry. I think the President insists upon putting the motion wrong. The motion is to strike it out. Now, if there should be a tie vote on the proposition the way the Chair puts it, the motion that it stand would be lost, and if the other way on the motion to strike out, it would be lost.

The President: I would say to the gentleman it is customary to put the motion that way. It is parliamentary form. If it is the wish of the Convention to put it the other way, the Chair will so put it.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I would prefer to have it put that way.

The President: If there be no objection as many as are in favor of striking it out say Aye.

The Chair announced the motion to strike out as lost.

The President: The question is now upon the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke which will now be read.

The Clerk read the amendment of Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke as follows: "Or without their presence if they shall fail to attend the examination after reasonable notice of the time and place thereof. Any deposition authorized by this section may be received as evidence upon the trial if the witness shall be dead or absent from the territory."

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move it be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I may be in error, but is not that last word a strange phraseology? Are we adopting a Constitution for the territory?

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I beg to apologize. It should be "state."

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, (Mr. Carpenter,) and a division being called for, the same was declared carried, by a vote of 15 in the affirmative to 13 in the negative.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I now move the adoption of section 17 as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, (Mr. Burleigh) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The ayes and nays should be entered upon this proposition.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I call for the ayes and nays upon the adoption of this section, in order that they may be entered in the journal.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I would like to ask whether it would not be sufficient to take the ayes and nays upon the adoption of the entire proposition after we have gone along this way, and made the necessary amendments.

The President: I would say to the gentleman from Silver Bow that it has been the custom heretofore to simply pass these sections, and make no motion to adopt them until the final section is reached and then the motion to adopt includes the whole file.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, I do not understand the gentleman from Custer. Does he wish the ayes and nays upon this particular section?

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Oh, no, sir.

The Clerk read section 18 as follows: Section 18. That no person shall be compelled to testify against himself in a criminal case, nor shall any person be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense. If the jury disagree or if the judgment be arrested after verdict, or if the verdict be arrested for error of law, or if any juror, or the judge of the court shall, from sickness or other cause, become unable to act after the empanelling of the jury, the accused shall not be deemed to have been in jeopardy.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: In line 5, fourth page, I would move to insert after the word "jury" the following, "the jury may be discharged and." There is no provision with reference to discharging the jury.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, (Mr. Carpenter,) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: Mr. President I desire to offer an amendment.

The amendment was sent to the Clerk's desk.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, offers to amend section 18 by striking out the words, "arrested for error of law," in line 3, page 4, and insert instead, "set aside, or if a new trial be granted or if the judgment be reversed on appeal."

The Motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: Mr. President I move to amend that by striking out the word, "verdict," and insert the word "judgment" in lieu thereof, for the purpose of making it harmonious with the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, (Mr. Robinson), and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, (Mr. Dixon.)

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk then read the section as amended, as follows: "Section 18. That no person shall be compelled to testify against himself in a criminal case, nor shall any person be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense. If the jury disagree or if the judgment be arrested after verdict, or if the verdict be set aside or if a new trial be granted, or if the judgment be reversed on appeal, or if any juror, or the judge of the court shall, from sickness or other cause become unable to act after the empanelling of the jury, the jury may be discharged, and the accused shall not be deemed to have been in jeopardy."

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I think the language ought to be changed. It reads, "the jury may be discharged." I think to make it grammatical and consecutive; it should read, "and the jury shall be discharged."

The President: If there be no objection, the Clerk will enter "shall" instead of "may".

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I now renew the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, that the word "verdict" the second time it appears in line 3, page 4, be made "judgment." If the gentleman of the Convention will turn back they will read, "If the jury disagree, or if the judgment be arrested after verdict, or if the verdict be arrested for error of law." It is a mistake somehow; it is intended to be "judgment." No one ever heard of a verdict being arrested.

The President: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Madison that that question has been disposed of.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I would suggest to the gentleman from Madison that it does not read that way now as amended. It reads, "If the verdict be set aside," the word "arrested" was stricken out.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Before we vote upon this provision, as now amended, I would like to call the attention of the Convention to the fact that I believe this is a greater innovation than you have yet undertaken. There is a provision there, as I understand it, that if the judgment is reversed, etc. Now, that language there does not confine it on appeal of the defendant but if it is reversed on appeal on the part of the state, why then the party is not in jeopardy. Now, the whole doctrine of jeopardy is gone in that case, because the State can take an appeal, and if the judgment is reversed, try the man over again.

The President: Does the gentleman desire to offer an amendment?

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: No, I desire to vote against that provision.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: Mr. President, it seems to me, that the same object that the gentleman from Silver Bow has upon appeal would operate upon a new trial. Where there has been a trial and a verdict, you cannot put the defendant in jeopardy again, whether by appeal or on motion of the court. It seems to me, that if that is what this section means, that is violative of the very first principle that a man shall not be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, not only on appeal, but on a new trial. If it is confined to the motion of the defendant, that it shall rest on appeal, or judgment arrested, or a new trial granted on this motion, it is perfectly right, but it seems to me, that it is intended to apply to any appeal, to give the Commonwealth the right to appeal or a new trial, or to move the arrest of judgment or anything else. That is putting a man twice in jeopardy for his own life, and is the very thing we are endeavoring to guard against.

The President: The Chair would state there is nothing pending before the Convention.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I desire to move you to strike out all of section 18, after the word "offense" on the second line of said section, at the bottom of page 3.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin. Mr. Hartman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: We will now pass on to the consideration of section 19.

The Clerk read section 19 as follows: Section 19. That all persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses when the proof is evidence or the presumption great.

There being no amendments to section 19, the Clerk read Section 20 as follows: Section 20. That excessive bail shall not be required, for excessive fines imposed, nor cruel or unusual punishments inflicted.

There being no amendments to Section 20, the Clerk read Section 21, as follows: Section 21. That the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall never be suspended, unless in case of rebellion or invasion, the public safety require it.

There being no amendments to Section 21, the Clerk read Section 22, as follows: Section 22. That the military shall always be in strict subordination to the civil power; that no soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, except in the manner prescribed by law.

There being no amendments to Section 22, the Clerk read Section 23 as follows: Section 23. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate, but in all civil cases and in all criminal cases not amounting to felony, upon default of appearance or by consent of the parties expressed in such manner as the law may prescribe, a trial by jury may be waived, or a trial had by any less number of jurors than the number provided by law. A jury in justice's courts, both in civil cases and in cases of criminal misdemeanor, shall not consist of more than six persons. In all civil actions two-thirds in number of the jury may render a verdict, and such verdict so rendered shall have the same force and effect as if all of such jury concurred therein.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers an amendment. Strike out in line six the words, "two-thirds in number," and insert in lieu thereof the words, "in number not less than three-fourths."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: Mr. President, I desire to move an amendment to the amendment by striking out all of section 23, after the word "persons" in line six of said section; in other words, the entire last sentence, "In all civil actions," etc.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, I hope this motion will not prevail. I believe I am somewhat in favor of the amendment proposing that nine may bring in a verdict not less than nine; but to say that the old rule, that the verdict must be unanimous, I do not believe it is the sense of this Convention that that should be done, or that that should be a provision of the Constitution. The gentleman who has made the motion to strike out, from his experience as a lawyer, knows undoubtedly that it many times happens in damage suits, and in various kinds of civil actions that it is possible for a party to the action to succeed in getting one or two friends on the jury that perhaps will go so far almost as not to intentionally disregard their oath, but lean so much to their friends as to be perhaps unconsciously, biased in his favor. Now, in the usual and ordinary matters of life, business, politics, and everything else, a majority rules. I would not be in favor of making it a bare majority in a jury trial, but I do believe that three-fourths of the jury should be sufficient in any civil action. It may be possible for a party to get one or two, or perhaps three men on the jury who may be to some extent biased in his favor, but to get more than that would seem perhaps improbable; and I believe that in a majority of cases, a verdict by nine would be more satisfactory than a disagreement and the retrial of the case. I have in my mind a case that I tried twice. The first time it was tried the jury were out some thirty six hours, and finally were discharged by the court, and stood ten to two. The case was retried at the next term of the court, and the jury stood, when they were discharged, nine to three, the majority of the jury being in both instances the one way. Now, I assert right here, that, in my judgment, on each one of those juries, there were two or three men who were not fit persons to sit upon the trial of that cause; and that the party made his brags that he had one or two men on that jury that never would bring in a verdict against him. I believe that a verdict of nine men should be sufficient.

Mr. Magnus of Lewis & Clarke: I ask that the Chief Clerk read to the Convention the opinion of Judge Deady, the United States District Judge of Oregon, the oldest and most distinguished jurist on this coast.

The Clerk read as follows: Provided that a majority of a jury may find a verdict in all cases, or at least do not tie the hands of the Legislature so that it cannot be done hereafter. This is a very important matter. The constitution of the jury must be reformed in this particular if this institution is not to become an impediment to the administration of justice. All those who thrive by the defense of criminals, and consider a hung jury, even if by one to eleven, the next thing to an acquittal, will be found opposing this reform. It could have no better commendation to the people at large, as I once wrote in an essay upon the subject, published in the American Law Review, Volume 17, page 403. This is emphatically an age of individual opinion and judgment, whether it is better or worse on that account, it is now not material to inquire, but in the consideration of this question the fact ought not to be ignored: With the exception, of juries it is a fundamental law of our institutions, and the unwritten law of society, that when any matter is submitted to the verdict or judgment of any number of persons, the action or opinion of the majority shall prevail. It applies to Congress and to courts, and there is no longer any good reason why the verdict of a jury should not conform to it also."

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President this is the advice given to the Constitutional Convention of our sister Territory of Washington by the oldest and most distinguished United States District Judge in this part of the country, known, I presume, to every lawyer here, and I hope it will have weight with the Convention that the very moderate reform that our Committee has recommended will be sustained.

The President: The Chair desires to state that the motion offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to amend will, according to the rules properly come first before the Convention. According to this rule, the Chair will entertain the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, to amend the latter part of the section, before the question to strike out, and that is now the question before the Convention.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: Do I understand now the motion before the House is on the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke?

The President: The Chair so stated.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: There is serious objection that may be urged against the motion of the gentleman, and that is that it might necessitate the dividing up of one of the jurors in order to arrive at a verdict. As I understand, the amendment provides that three-fourths of the jury may find a verdict.

The President: Any number not less than three-fourths.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: Yes, sir. Now, if a jury of nine were agreed upon, it would be hard to determine as I say, without cutting a juror in two; or if the number of five were agreed upon, or even six; and the same objection might be urged to the other proposition as to a two-thirds majority. Where it provides that a jury of a less number shall be agreed upon to try the case, if they should agree upon five or seven, it would be a hard matter then to arrive at the verdict. So far as the proposition is concerned as to the majority of the jury finding a verdict, I am in accord with that. The reasons have been well stated by other gentlemen who have preceded me, and better stated by the article read by the clerk, from the pen of Judge Deidy. There are numerous instances occurring every day in the courts of this territory and everywhere else, for that matter where great injustice is done to one or the other of the litigants. As has been said, it may be that a juror gets upon the jury who is biased or prejudiced in favor of one of the parties in a civil action, and he goes there with the prejudice in his mind, and perhaps, contrary to his oath, for that matter, and he would hang the jury and would lose it before he would give in. So, in a case of that kind a great injustice would be done. Not only that, but in minor offenses against the law of the territory, in misdemeanors the same rule would apply there. I am most decidedly in favor of a majority of the jury finding a verdict in all civil cases, and in cases of misdemeanor but I am not in favor of the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke as to three-fourths, or the other proposition of two-thirds.

*The Chair then put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Craven, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin to strike out all that portion of the section after "persons" in line six, as the Chair understands it.

The Chair then put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I move to amend the section by striking out the word "civil" where it occurs in the last line but one—line 6—so that it will read "In all actions."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman it seems to me, that the effect of that amendment should be well considered before this Convention votes upon it. The effect of that amendment is to say that every criminal prosecution in this country, no matter what it may be, even for the very highest offense known to the law, that of murder, or treason, shall be tried, and the party may be convicted by a verdict of two-thirds of the jury. Now, I was not particular about the motion which I made to strike out the clause which provides that two-thirds shall find a verdict in a civil action and I must confess this, that I am somewhat wedded to old institutions when it comes to the question of enacting a fundamental law, and it does seem to me that we are introducing an innovation here upon which the rights and liberties of the citizens of this community depend; and that this step is too far in advance. Every case of murder, every case of arson, every case of treason which occurs in the State of Montana, if this amendment prevails, will be tried by a jury two-thirds of whom may find a conviction. Now I frankly admit this, that the jury system which has been in vogue in the United States ever since its existence is not a perfect system, and I pretend to say, that no human system will be perfect. There are none but what will present their defects to us. But, gentlemen of the Convention when we are striving in advance, let us remember this, that the entire experience of this Nation during its entire existence has been in support of a jury system in which twelve men have concurred in all cases of felonies that are tried in the United States. Now it seems to me, that this is too much of a step in advance, and that if you must allow two-thirds of the jury to find a verdict, let it be at least in case of misdemeanor, if it is to be in criminal cases at all. I think the gentlemen will make a mistake if we permit the institution of a jury twelve of whom have been heretofore necessary to concur in a verdict, to be reduced to two-thirds. It is imperilling the liberties of the people.

The President: The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, (Mr. Robinson,) to strike out the word "civil."

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I am in favor of all radical reforms, but when such excellent authority as Judge Deidy advances a proposition of this kind, he stands as a disinterested party; it is well enough to stop to consider it, and if majorities rule in every transaction in life why not in these matters. If two-thirds of a jury can find a verdict in a civil case, I can readily see no impropriety in providing the same thing in criminal cases. The reasons assigned for a two-thirds or three-fourths verdict in a civil case, apply with still greater force in criminal cases, because if there is any temptation in any character of action to tamper with the jury, to get men on the jury who will not be governed by their oaths, and the law and the evidence in the case it is in cases of felony. The temptation in such cases is so great that if men can be obtained upon that jury by hook or crook to accept the defendant by means foul or fair, the temptation is so much greater that it is more likely to occur. For reasons of that character, the reasons for the change from a unanimous verdict to a two-thirds or three-fourths one are still greater increased. I am not radical upon these propositions but I desire the Convention to think the matter over a little before they pass on it one way or the other. It is worthy of consideration and not to be voted down hastily, but upon consideration and I say the reasons for it apply in criminal cases with greater force, if anything, than in civil cases. Now, so far, Mr. President, as men being convicted of crime who are innocent, that will rarely, if ever, occur. Under the instructions and admonitions of courts that jurors must be convinced of every proposition necessary to constitute the guilt of a defendant before they can find him guilty, and with the natural reluctance, sir, that jurors have to convicting innocent men, they always hesitate, they study, they go slow upon these propositions; they consider about it. And I have yet to meet an instance where a man has been convicted wrongfully. Besides that, Judges sitting upon the Bench, if they see that the testimony will not warrant a conviction, they are made of flesh and blood like jurors, and like every one else. They will never allow an innocent man to be punished. Such has been my observation, that there has been no danger of the innocent suffering the penalties of the law. Then, sir, those who advocate the very strictest enforcement of every right in behalf of the defendant, to the very extremes, while it may be good—while it may be a fine thing in theory, yet we want sir to protect the innocent as to punish the guilty. That, sir, is the object of every criminal code—to serve those two purposes, to protect the innocent as well as to punish the guilty. Now, sir, let us see what we are drifting into if we weigh down our criminal code and the defendants with a weight of technicalities by which it becomes next to impossible to secure a conviction of the defendant. Such a theory of criminal law is well suited to the ideal of men who devote their exclusive time in defending criminals, but what will be the effect of that. The effect of that would be, that it would be next to impossible to secure the conviction of a defendant where the conviction could be held down and the punishment secured. What then, would be the result of these homicides in felony cases? The result of that would be that there would be more men wrongfully condemned to death and suffer the penalties than would be under a liberal and fair character of criminal code. Why, some statistician has seen fit to take the year 1884 as an average year as to homicides; and upon examination finds that in that year 1,262 homicides had been committed in the United States. Of that number, 93 of them has been punished by the courts; 112 of them had been hanged by Vigilance Committees. Gentlemen may say it is wrong for Vigilance Committees to hang them, but nevertheless, they will do it, and there are no degrees in the verdicts of such tribunals as that. Their verdict is almost invariably murder in the first degree. Then, it is fair to presume sir, of that 112 that were executed at the hands of that character of tribunal, at least two-thirds of them were of such character of cases as no impartial jury or any lawyer, or judge of the court would say that they should have been convicted of murder in the first degree, but it would have been second degree or manslaughter and some of them under fair construction would have been entitled to an acquittal; yet, at the same time there were at least two-thirds of those 112 men who were executed because of the laxity in the administration of our criminal code. Now, then, in answer to those who have talked of the imaginary protection of defendants here, with fine sounding periods. Let us pause a little and see the effect of it. It is but human nature that wherever the laws are so constructed as to defy the conviction of criminals by the court, the people will not long be outraged in that way, but they will, whether it is right or wrong, take the law in their own hands. It is not a question for the man who is being dragged to the limb of a tree to be hung by a Vigilance Committee, or a mob. It is no consolation to him to know that their proceedings are wrong; it is no consolation to his friends, to his wife, his children, and his relatives, to think over the matter after the deed has been done; to think that the proceedings are all wrong. That does not alleviate the pain and mortification; it does not relieve the public of the odium of it; and I say, sir, if we would protect the lives of innocent men, which is one of the objects of criminal law, it must be so constructed that we must have an even and reasonable chance of punishing the guilty. It is the only way we can shield the innocent. Then, I say, let us pause in constructing a criminal code; let us pause and see that we have given the people an even chance with the defendant if we would protect the innocent; and I say, then, that this proposition to convict the defendant with less than the unanimous verdict of a jury does not present the monstrosity and the dangerous thing to the life and liberty of the prisoner that may be imagined; and on the whole, sir, I believe I am inclined to support the proposition.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, (Mr. Robinson), and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 14 in the affirmative to 45 in the negative.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I offer the following amendment. In all civil actions, and in all criminal actions not amounting to felony two-thirds in number of the jury may render a verdict, and such verdict, etc. Add the words, "and in all criminal cases not amounting to felony."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade, (Mr. Collins,) and a division being called for, the same was declared carried, by a vote of 32 in the affirmative to 22 in the negative.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: For information, I would like to ascertain how it reads as amended.

The Clerk read the section as amended.

The President: If there be no further amendments to section 23, the clerk will read Sec. 24.

The Clerk read section 24 as follows: Section 24. Laws for the punishment of crime shall be founded on the principles of reformation and prevention and not of vindictive justice.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move to strike out the five last words of that section, "and not of vindictive justice." I am in favor of the first part of it, but justice is never vindictive. The word "vindictive" implies malice or revenge.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, (Mr. Carpenter,) to strike out the words, "and not of vindictive justice," and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move to strike out the whole section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, (Mr. Burleigh,) to strike out section 24, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I desire to offer an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, offers an amendment. At the end of section two add the following, "But this shall not affect the power of the legislative Assembly to provide for the punishment of offenses by death."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to section 24, the Clerk read section 25 as follows: Section 25. Persons of Foreign birth or residence shall have the same right as native born citizens to acquire, purchase, possess, enjoy, convey, transmit and inherit mines and mining property, and milling, reduction, concentrating and other works and real property necessary for, or connected with the business of mining and treating ores and minerals. Provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to infringe the authority of the United States to provide for the sale or disposition of its mineral and other public lands.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau sent up an amendment.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, offers an amendment to section 25, as follows: "Aliens who are, or who may hereafter become bona fide residents of this State may acquire, inherit, possess, enjoy and dispose of property, real and personal, as native born citizens."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I hope this amendment will not prevail. I think if it should do so it would defeat the purposes for which this section is inserted. The object, as I understand it, and one of the great objects to be secured by admission to Statehood will be this privilege, that is, the privilege of disposing of mining property to non-residents of this country. It is a well known fact that we have engaged in this business already considerable foreign capital, and more will be invested when it is known that the restrictions that now hedge these investments are removed by the admission of the State into the Union; and the experience of every mining man will bear me out in the assertion that it is a great benefit to the country, particularly to the State of Montana and adjoining States here. Therefore, some such clause as was reported by the Committee permitting the investment of foreign capital, regardless of where the investors may reside or whether they are citizens or not of this country, should be adopted. My observation has led me to the conclusion, that where there has been a dollar taken out of Montana Territory before the Act of Congress prohibiting the investment of foreign capital, there have been four or five dollars invested here, and we would certainly be very foolish to prohibit anything advantageous to the people of the Territory in that measure. For that reason, I am opposed to the adoption of the amendment, and hope it will not prevail. I know it will not suit the mining people of this Territory.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I think that is an innovation on the Constitution, the making of which we are hardly prepared to adopt. There is not another State in the Union that has such a provision, with the exception of one or two. This is copied exactly from the Constitution of the State of Colorado, and it is the most liberal constitution in that respect of any of the States of the Union. Now, gentlemen, here we go in this section, and allow persons of foreign birth or residence the same rights that citizens of the United States possess. Why, natural born citizens, who have come here and declared their intentions have hardly the same privileges as we are giving now to persons in Europe. There is no objection to foreign capital being invested here. But if we allow such a provision as this to be entered here, why the whole capital of Europe may be invested in our lands, or in our mining property here and be owned by them. Foreign capital is invested in corporations here as the laws are now. These stock companies are formed, and there is no prohibition whatever in regard to the investment of foreign capital. Corporations, can be formed as they are in Nevada under corporation laws. The general corporation is formed in Europe and the capital is invested there, and then for the purpose of investing it here, a corporation composed of citizens of the United States is formed, and the capital is re-invested here. And I think it is eminently proper that persons of foreign birth who are not aliens, who have come here to become bona fide residents of Montana if they desire to invest their money here, should be protected; that they should be protected when they come here to reside with us and to invest their property and means. Now, a man going from this country to Europe would have no such privileges as are here given, and so I say it is an innovation, which I do not think the people of Montana are prepared to sanction, because it does not give, as a gentleman has asserted, any additional rights to persons to invest foreign capital here than what there are now.

The President: The question is upon the Substitute offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, (Mr. Whitehill.)

The Clerk read said Substitute as follows: Substitute for Section 25. Aliens who are, or who may hereafter become bona fide residents of this state, may acquire, inherit, possess, enjoy and dispose of property, real and personal, as native born citizens.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, (Mr. Whitehill,) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Choteau moves to amend Section 25 as follows: Strike out all of second line after "inherit," all of line three and that portion of line four commencing, and ending with the word "minerals" and insert in lieu thereof, "real and personal property."

Motion seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: It seems to me we are making a departure here that is not warranted by experience. Although I am in favor of the section that has just been adopted, that will give foreigners the right to develop mining properties. I am opposed to any provision that will provide that foreign corporations may invest in real and personal property outside of that. I do not think that it is for the interest of our State, and in fact none of the States of this Union, so far as I am able to understand contemplated anything of that kind. This would place our lands at the disposal of foreign corporations; it would place our real estate here at the disposal of foreign corporations; and in fact, before we would really understand the situation we would have a condition of things here in which our own people would be vieing with foreign corporations for supremacy. We would have our lands under the influence and control of foreign corporations, and we have fair samples of the greed with which foreign corporations are trying to create investments of this character to day. Throughout the Southern States and Texas, where the laws allow them to buy up large tracts of land at their discretion, they have taken advantage of those laws, and there are large tracts of land owned and conlrolled by foreign corporations to-day upon which there are herds of cattle raised. They are not citizens of this country, and it seems to me, that this departure is not warranted, and the people of our country would be opposed to it.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: My idea in offering that amendment to section 25 was for the purpose that in case a railroad composed of foreign capital wished to build into the territory, that they could acquire a road-bed. That was the only reason I had for striking out. I do not see why we should not allow foreigners to acquire other property outside of mines.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: A railroad company would have to organize under our laws to have a right of way, anyway.

The Chairman put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Choteau, (Mr. Conrad,) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I desire to offer an amendment to that section.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers a motion to amend Section 25, by striking out the words, "persons of foreign birth or residence" in line one and inserting instead the word "aliens."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Why not go farther, and strike out the word "native born," because an adopted or naturalized citizen has the same right as a citizen; so that it would read, "aliens shall have the same right as citizens."

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I accept that amendment.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 25, the Clerk read section 26 as follows: Section 26. That the people have the right peaceably to assemble for the common good, and to apply to those invested with the powers of government for the redress of grievances by petition or remonstrance.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I would like to be excused for the remainder of the afternoon.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentleman from Choteau will be excused for the remainder of the afternoon.

There being no amendments to Section 26, the Clerk read section 27 as follows: Section 27. That no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

There being no amendment to Section 27, the Clerk read Section 28 as follows: Section 28. That there shall never be in this State either slavery or involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted.

There being no amendment to Section 28, the Clerk read Section 29 as follows: Section 29. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise.

There being no amendment to Section 29, the Clerk read Section 30 as follows: Section 30. The enumeration in this Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny, impair, or disparage others retained by the people.

There being no amendment to Section 30, the Clerk read Section 31 as follows: Section 31. No armed person or persons or armed body of men shall be brought into this State for the preservation of the peace or the suppression of domestic violence except upon the application of the Legislative Assembly, or of the Governor when the Legislative Assembly cannot be convened.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of Proposition No. 1, and on that I call the previous question.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Clerk will call the roll, and the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll, and the vote stood as follows: Ayes, Aiken, Bickford, Brazellon, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Conrad, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillelte, Goddard, Graves, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Loud, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Meyers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schndt, Stapleton, Toole, J. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Witler, Mr. President.—66. Nays. Robinson.—1. Absent. Conrad, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Kohrs, Luce, Muth, Webster,—8.

The President: There are on the adoption of Proposition No. 1, 66 votes in the affirmative, and 1 vote in the negative. The motion is carried, and File No. 1 will now be referred to the Engrossing Committee, to be properly engrossed, and referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that the Convention take a recess until eight o'clock this evening.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, I move we adjourn. I will state that a number of Committees want to be in session this evening, and it will expedite the work of the Convention.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, (Mr. Collins,) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Convention stood adjourned until Wednesday, July 24th, 1889.

SIXTEENTH DAY

Wednesday, July 24th, 1889,

Morning Session

The Convention was called to order at ten A. M. by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The gentleman from Jefferson, Mr. Bullard, was called away professionally, and desires to be excused.

Mr. Buford of Madison: I ask that Judge Luce be excused, as he is still indisposed.

The President: If there be no objection, these gentlemen will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Durfee of Deer Lodge sent up petition.

The President: The Petition of Citizens of Deer Lodge County relative to Sunday Law will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Petition of Citizens of Deer Lodge County relative to Sunday Laws.

Philipsburg, Montana, July 18, 1889.

To the Honorable Delegates of the Constitutional Convention of Montana, Gentlemen, sirs. We, the undersigned, citizens of Deer Lodge County, and Territory of Montana having the interests of the Commonwealth of the future State of Montana in view, do hereby pray and petition your honorable Body to grant favorable consideration for the better observance of Sunday in the interest of laboring persons, and people generally, and the promotion of morals; and that we most earnestly solicit calm and deliberate consideration of the important questions involved, carefully guarding against any influence manifestly antagonistic to the protection of all religious societies in their views, customs, usages and rights as pertain to disturbance of worshippers, or the orderly condition of society.

(Signed) G. W. JENKINS, and 67 others.

The President: If there be no objection this petition will be received and referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Provisions.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: I have a protest from Dawson County Inhabitants against the passage of the Conrad Resolution, and ask that when it is read it may be referred to Committee No. Ten.

The President: The Protest from Citizens of Dawson County will be read.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I understand that is a protest against the passage of the Conrad Resolution. If so, I ask that the reading be dispensed with inasmuch as the Conrad Resolution was voted down yesterday.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: It may have some influence on the judgment of the Convention afterwards. I ask that it be read.

The Clerk read as follows: "We, the undersigned, citizens of Glasgow, Montana, do earnestly and respectfully remonstrate against the insertion of the Conrad clause in the constitution of Montana in regard to the requirement of a taxable valuation of three million of dollars in all new counties hereafter created, for the following reasons:

First, That the present county seat of Dawson county is at Glendive, more than one hundred miles from this place, and can only be reached by rail by traveling a distance of nine hundred miles by going to Helena and thence by the Northern Pacific Railroad, or by going to Fort Buford by stage, a distance of more than two hundred miles.

Second: Glasgow contains a population of four hundred inhabitants and is situated near the geographical center of the northern part of Dawson county on the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railroad, which has two hundred and nine miles of road-bed in said county. It is desired by all that the present county of Dawson be divided at the Missouri River, and that the coming seat may be located at Glasgow at the next session of the legislature, as the people living in this county north of the Missouri River have nothing in common with those south of said river, and it would be very unjust to us to incorporate such a clause in the constitution of the State of Montana, thereby forcing us to submit to the present inconvenient and expensive condition of affairs for years perhaps, or until an assessed valuation of three million of dollars may be attained.

That this arbitrary and unjust clause may not be inserted is the earnest desire of our citizens; and your petitioners will ever pray.

(Signed) A. J. McMILLAN, and 65 others.

The President: If there be no objection this remonstrance will be received and referred to Committee No. Ten, on City, County and Town Organizations. It is so referred.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow sent up Report from Judiciary Committee.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee on Judiciary, to whom was referred Resolution by Browne of Choteau, herewith return, have directed me to report that they have examined the question referred, and are of opinion that the Enabling Act of Congress provides for a General Election to be held, before admission, to fill all the offices, both State and County, provided for by the Constitution, but that such provision is not mandatory, and that this Constitution has the right and power, in its discretion, to provide that all or any State, District or County officers provided for by the Constitution, shall be elected at such time and for such terms as may be prescribed, or, to provide that any District or County officers now holding their offices under the laws of the Territory, may continue in office under the Constitution until such time as may be prescribed. Your Committee are of opinion that the whole matter is within the power of the Convention to regulate.

(Signed) W. W. DIXON, Chairman.

The Clerk read the Resolution of Browne of Choteau referred to as follows: Resolved that the Committee on Judiciary of this Convention be instructed to consider and report whether the Enabling Act of Congress provides for a General Election to be held before admission to fill all the offices both State and County created by the Constitution.

The President: If there be no objection this report will be received.

Mr. Browne of Choteau sent up a report.

The President: The report of the Committee on City, County and Town Organizations will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee No. Ten, have had under consideration the subjects pertaining to City, County and Town Organizations, and have instructed me to report the following articles, and recommend that the same be incorporated into, and become a part of the Constitution.

(Signed DAVID G. BROWNE, Chairman.

"Article on Municipal Corporations and Offices.

Section 1. The several counties of the Territory of Montana, as they shall exist at the time of the admission of the State into the Union, are hereby declared to be the counties of the State until otherwise established or changed by law.

Sec. 2. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to remove the county seat of any county, but the same shall be provided for by general law; and no county seat shall be removed, unless a majority of the qualified electors of the county, voting on a proposition at a general election vote therefor; but no such proposition shall be submitted oftener than once in four years, and no person shall vote on such proposition who shall not have resided in the county six months, and in the election precinct ninety days next preceding such election.

Sec. 3. That the Legislative Assembly shall provide by general law the manner in which a part of any county may be stricken from such county and added to another county; or formed into a new county.

Sec. 4. In all cases of the establishment of a new county, it shall be held to pay its ratable proportion of all then existing liabilities of the county or counties from which it is formed, less the ratable proportion of the value of the county buildings and property of the county or counties from which it is formed.

Sec. 5. When any part of a county is stricken from one or more counties and attached to another, the county to which such part is attached shall be liable to pay the ratable proportion of such part of all then existing liabilities of the county or counties from which such part is taken, less the ratable proportion of the value of the county buildings and property of the county or counties from which such part is taken.

Sec. 6. When any county formed from contiguous territory taken from older counties, or when any county to which territory shall be added taken from an adjoining county, shall fail to pay the proportion of indebtedness of such territory to the county or counties from which it is taken, then it may be lawful for the county from which such territory has been taken to recover from the county so failing to pay, by action at law, the proportion of indebtedness for which it shall be liable, as provided in the two preceding sections.

Sec. 7. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the subdivision of the several counties of the State into townships, districts or precincts, of convenient number and size.

Sec. 8. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by general laws for the organization and classification of cities and towns. The number of such classes shall not exceed four; and the power of each class shall be limited by general laws, so that all such municipal corporations of the same class shall possess the same powers and be subject to the same restrictions. The Legislative Assembly shall also make provision, by general law, whereby any city, town or village, existing by virtue of any special or local law of the territory, may elect to become subject to and governed by the general law relating to such corporation.

County Officers.

Section 9. In each county there shall be elected three county commissioners, who shall compose the Board of County Commissioners, and who shall hold sessions for the transaction of county business as provided by law, any two of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The board shall elect one of its members chairman.

Sec. 10. The term of office of the County Commissioners shall be four years, except as otherwise provided for in this Constitution. At the first general election provided for by this Constitution there shall be elected in each county three County Commissioners. The one receiving the highest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election in 1896, the one receiving the next highest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election in 1894, and the one receiving the lowest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election in 1892, and each shall hold his office until his successor is elected and qualified. A vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners shall be filled by appointment of the Governor.

Sec. 11. There shall be elected in each county the following officers: One County Clerk, who shall be Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners, and ex-officio recorder of deeds; one Sheriff, one Treasurer, who shall be collector of taxes; one County Superintendent of Schools; one County Surveyor; one Assessor; one Coroner; one Public Administrator. Persons elected to the different offices named in this section shall hold their respective offices for the term of two years; except that the county officers elected at the first general election provided for in this constitution, shall hold their offices until the general election in 1892, and until their successors are elected and qualified. Vacancies in all county, township and precinct offices, except that of County Commissioners, shall be filled by appointment by the Board of County Commissioners, and the appointee shall hold his office until the next general election.

Sec. 12. No person shall be eligible to any county office unless he be a qualified elector, nor unless he shall have resided in the county at least one year next preceding his election.

Sec. 13. The Legislative Assembly shall provide for the election or appointment of such other county, township, precinct and municipal officers as public convenience may require, and their terms of office shall be as prescribed by law, not in any case to exceed two years, except as in this Constitution otherwise provided.

Sec. 14. The compensation of all county, township and precinct officers, except as in this Constitution otherwise provided, shall be as prescribed by law.

The Clerk also read report of said Committee as follows: Mr. President, your Committee on City, County and Town Organizations, to whom was referred "extract from Proposition No. 7" introduced by Mr. A. R. Joy, beg leave to report that they have had the same under consideration, and respectfully return same with the recommendation that it be passed.

(Signed) DAVID G. BROWNE, Chairman.

The Clerk also read the further report of said Committee as follows: Mr. President, your Committee on City, County and Town Organizations, to whom was referred Resolution No. 6, introduced by Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone, beg leave to report that they have had the same under consideration, and respectfully return same without recommendation.

(Signed) DAVID G. BROWNE, Chairman.

The President: Both of these Resolutions referred to in the reports of the Committee will take the usual course, and be placed on file, to be considered in Committee of the Whole, with the report of the Committee to which they were referred. If there be no objection the report of the Committee upon the subjects pertaining to City, County and Town Organizations will be referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered printed.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I offer the following report, and ask that it be considered in connection with the majority report of Committee No. Ten.

The President: The minority report offered by part of Committee No. Ten will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Minority report of Committee on City, County and Town Organizations. Mr. President: A part of your Committee on City, County and Town Organizations, having under consideration Resolution No. 6, introduced by Mr. Goddard, beg leave to report back the same, and recommend that it be incorporated in our Constitution.

(Signed) ALLAN R. JOY, L. ROTWITT, W. C. GILLETTE.

The President: This report will take its place with the majority report, and be considered in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up a resolution which was read by the Clerk as follows: Resolved, that nothing contained in this Constitution shall be so construed as to deprive the General Assembly of power to authorize municipal corporations in incur such indebtedness as may be necessary to procure an ample supply of water for such municipality; provided that such water supply shall be under and controlled by said municipalities and the revenues derived from the same applied to the payment of the debt.

The President: This resolution will be referred to Committee No. 7, unless otherwise directed by the Convention.

Mr. A. J. Burns, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up a resolution.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. A. J. Burns, offers the following resolution.

The Clerk read as follows: Mining Bureau. Resolution by A. J. Burns of Lewis & Clarke. Section 1. There shall be established a Mining Bureau and office of Commissioner of Mines, the duties and salaries of which shall be prescribed by law. When said office of Mining Commissioner shall be established, the Governor shall with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint thereto a person, known to be competent, whose term of office shall be four years.

Sec. 2. The General Assembly shall provide by law for the proper ventilation of mines, the construction of escapement shafts, and such other appliances as may be necessary to secure the safety and health of the workmen therein.

Sec. 3. The Legislature may make such provisions from time to time as may be necessary for the proper and equitable drainage of mines.

Sec. 4. The Legislature shall provide that the science of mining and metallurgy shall be taught in one or more of the institutions of learning in the State.

The President: If there be no objection, the resolution will be received and referred to Committee No. 13.

Mr. Meyers of Yellowstone sent up the following Resolution, which the Clerk read as follows: Resolution. Resolved that no person holding an office of profit under the United States, and commissioned by the President, shall, during his continuance in such office, be eligible to be appointed, hold, or exercise any office of profit under this State.

The President: If there be no objection, this Resolution will be received and referred to Committee No. 13.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, under the head of general orders, I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of general orders.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Toole), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to inquire if there is not a special order for eleven o'clock.

The President: I think it was two o'clock this afternoon. There was a special order for yesterday at eleven o'clock for the consideration of File No. 1. There is no special order for consideration at this hour today.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I think the records will disclose that on the day before yesterday, the Article on Education was made the special order for eleven o'clock, and that of the Right of Suffrage for two o'clock.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President it is not the Article, but the Resolution relating to School Lands. I understand that is the special order today for eleven o'clock.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not remember of any such order being made, and under the previous Resolution passed by the Convention, this Resolution would be taken up in connection with the report of the Committee on Education, no subject having been more carefully considered by that Committee than the matter of the School Lands.

The President: The Clerk informs me that there is no record of any special order for today. Hence, the motion offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge is before the Convention that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole. I believe the question has been passed upon. I will appoint Major Maginnis Chairman of the Committee.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Committee have under consideration section 13 of Proposition No. 26. Article on Judiciary. The Clerk will proceed with the reading.

The Clerk read Section 13 as follows: Sec. 13. Until otherwise provided by law, said districts shall be constituted as follows: First District, Lewis & Clarke County; Second District, Silver Bow County; Third District, Deer Lodge County; Fourth District, Missoula County; Fifth District, Gallatin County; Sixth District, Jefferson County; Seventh District, Custer County; Eighth District, Beaverhead and Madison Counties; Ninth District, Park and Yellowstone Counties; Tenth District, Cascade and Meagher Counties; Eleventh District, Fergus and Dawson Counties; Twelfth District, Choteau County.

Mr. Joy of Park: I would like to offer an amendment to Section 13.

The Clerk read the said amendment as follows: Amendment to Section 13. Strike out in fifth line "and Yellowstone Counties" and renumber the subsequent districts.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: Do I understand there is a motion pending?

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask for information. It is my recollection that when the committee had this matter in hand the other evening, that we were considering an amendment offered by Mr. Collins of Cascade. My memory may be at fault.

The Chairman: The Chair was not present at the time.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Perhaps I can explain this matter, I have an amendment which I offered, and which I will send up to the Chair. First, there was an amendment offered by Mr. Hickman of Madison to strike out the word "and" in the fourth line, and then there was a substitute offered by the gentleman from Cascade which read as follows: "Until otherwise provided by law, each county in the State shall constitute a separate judicial district."

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the amendment to the amendment, on which the vote will be first taken.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw the amendment offered by myself.

The Clerk read the Substitute of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, as follows: "Until otherwise provided by law, each organized county in the State shall constitute a separate judicial district."

The Chairman: The motion to adopt is before the Committee.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Judiciary had provided twelve districts. I thought that if the Committee, in their wisdom, saw fit to divide this great State into twelve districts, that it would be in the interest of good government, and in the interest of economical government that four more districts should be created, and that each county should be made a district. I believe so still. I believe that if you divide this State into twelve districts, it should be divided into a district for each county in the Territory. I believe, if that is your policy, that in doing away with the office of Probate Judge, and the Clerk of that court, and the extortionate fees for probate and civil business in that court, that it will be economy to make four more judicial districts. The cost of the present system, with even twelve districts, amounts to about $54,000. Make four more districts and it will amount to about $60,000. That is an enormous sum of money, and if any gentleman in this body will propose an amendment consolidating those districts into six or seven or eight, I will be willing and happy to withdraw my amendment; but if you divide them into twelve districts, I say it should be divided into sixteen, and give each county a separate district. If you divide it into six, seven or eight districts, then I would withdraw my amendment and be in favor of more compact division.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I hope the gentleman will not withdraw the substitute. I am heartily in favor of the substitute, as it has been proposed. I have advocated that proposition time and again, and I think when this Convention comes to calmly and clearly consider this proposition, that they will come to the same conclusion. Now, there is only one objection that has any force to it whatever, and that is, that apparently we are incurring what seems to be a great expense. It staggers some of the gentlemen of this Convention when it is figured up, and it is shown that this judicial system will cost, by giving one judge to each county, about $66,000 per annum. Now, I think that when you take into consideration the whole system, and the expense which will be cut off by that, that it will be seen that this rule is less expensive than the system which we have now in force in Montana Territory, and then we will have all the advantages. Now, under our present system, there are sixteen judges in Montana, Probate Judges, who are receiving some compensation or other. They are being paid; they have work to do. In addition to that, there are four district judges, making at the present time, twenty judges in Montana Territory, and I presume they are all doing something, and all earning what they are paid. Now under the present system, as proposed, with one judge in each county there will be sixteen judges, and three supreme court judges, which will make nineteen judges, whereas, under the present system we have now twenty judges. Then, the only valid objection that can be made to this is, that these nineteen judges will cost about $66,000. I have not figured up what it costs at present, but I have no doubt that it costs a sum very nearly that amount under our present system. Part of these four district judges cost the Territory nothing; they are paid by the Government of the United States; and some of the probate judges are paid only by fees. But that comes out of the people. It may not come out in the way of taxes, but the fees that these judges get, and the salaries which are paid to the district judges by the United States, I have no doubt, amounts to almost as much as what is proposed in this judicial system. Now, this we have virtually adopted, the California system, that provides for a judge in every county. They have abolished the Probate Court, and that is a very important court in this Territory. In the county in which I reside we have a Probate Judge, and a Probate Clerk, who receives a salary of $100 a month. I have no doubt the cost of the Probate Court in Silver Bow County, and in Lewis & Clarke County is more than it is in Deer Lodge County. I have no idea of what its cost is in other counties, but here we are assuming the work now that the sixteen judges are performing and all the different clerks, and that expense is all incorporated in these judicial salaries. Now, that has been found to work to perfection in California. I was living in California when this system was adopted there, and I know that the principals, the litigants, and all classes of people felt that a load had been taken off their shoulders when that Constitution had been adopted, notwithstanding the assertion of the gentlemen here that its constitution was a conglomeration of nonsense; and I will admit that at the time Dennis Kearney, and the "sand-lot" orators had sway in San Francisco, that many things were done that perhaps are now justly criticised. But in regard to this proposition of the judiciary, that was a proposition that was gotten up, and a system that was framed and formed by the best legal talent in San Francisco, and, I believe, that is equal to Montana, or any other State in the Union. Now, the Chairman of that Committee was one of the ablest lawyers in San Francisco, and in reply to the objection made by the gentleman from Madison when he says that that is the most expensive system that has ever been organized, that owing to that system California has 10,000 cases on her calendar, I will say that I have read and I will ask leave to read four or five lines as to what Mr. Wilson, the Chairman of that Convention, said, in introducing the present system which we are now acting upon. He said, in referring to the business of the old court, a court which was organized very much as the courts of this Territory are now under our present system: "The business of the Supreme Court of the State of California is, I think, larger than that of any Supreme Court in the American Union,—larger than the Supreme Court of any other State." Now, this was from a speech made ten years ago. The report made to the Convention by the Clerk of the Supreme Court said that "during the four years past there have been filed in the court some 2,057 cases, making an immense calendar for that time." The Supreme Court did decide during that time some 2,216 cases. Now, that was in a period of three years, and the gentleman has well said that since then the amount of business in the California courts has greatly increased; but he charges that to the judiciary system, whereas everybody knows that the population of California has trebled since that time, and that is only in about the same proportion that the cases were increasing in those courts before. So, I say that the objection to this system amounts to nothing. And if we are to have a good judicial system, I believe in making it so that the litigants in each county can be justly represented. Now, we have introduced in this provision a proposition, or a section, or a sentence which provides that one-half of the salary of each judge shall be paid by the State. I believe that is a fair and just proposition. The Judiciary System is not a county system, which will be uniform throughout each county. Now, I venture to say that if any other proposition than this is adopted it will be unfair, for I can demonstrate to the minds of this Convention that there will be an unjust tax in regard to the support of the judges. Now, under this system, we will take the county that has, we will say, $4,000,000 of taxable property. The judge of that county will be paid, we shall say, $4,000 per annum. That requires a tax of one mill on the dollar. One mill on the dollar, where there is property of $4,000,000 in value, will pay a salary of $4,000. Now, take a county that has $8,000,000 of taxable property, and that county will only have to pay for its judge one-half a mill on the dollar. Now, is there any reason why a gentleman who lives in Dawson County, or we will say in Jefferson County where the taxable property, I believe, is $4,000,000—is there any reason why a citizen living in Jefferson County shall be taxed one mill on every dollar for which he is taxed, whereas in Silver Bow County the citizen is only taxed one-half of one mill for judicial purposes. I say there is no justice in any law which will provide a discrimination in the taxes for the same support. Perhaps that will come a little harder on the gentlemen who live in the more populous counties, but I say it is an equitable and a just mode of taxation. I cannot see any sense in arguing why a man living in Dawson County shall be taxed more for the privilege of having good courts than he shall be taxed in Lewis & Clarke, or Silver Bow, or Deer Lodge Counties, and I say the only way you can arrive at this, so that it will be just and right to the citizens of each county is to adopt this proposition as it is, and even that is not right. I say to make it fair and just and equitable the whole tax of these judges should be paid out of the State Treasury. Look at Dawson County. Why, even under any system the man in Dawson County will have to pay, if the judges get $3,000 and the taxable property is $1,000,000—the citizen of Dawson County will have to pay three mills on every dollar to get his judge. Now, I say it is not fair, and that this proposition approaches fairness nearer than anything that has been presented to this Convention. Now, in regard to the working of this system. I will venture to say that there are no two counties of equal population that are joined in a judicial district that will be at all satisfied with it; that before there has been a second election in any one of these counties there will be petitions coming into the Legislature for the purpose of asking that they be separated. I happened to live once in a judicial district where there were two counties that were represented in the judicial convention, and although here in this Convention we have made no arrangement yet as to how the judges will be selected, I think there is no doubt but that they will be elected by a vote of the people, and that they will not be appointed by the Governor. The Governor might avoid the difficulty which I propose to demonstrate will rise and that is just this. I presume that the selection of judges will be by a political party. The party will nominate a judge for that position in each district. Now, I say in districts where there are two counties that have about an equal population, that the delegates from each county will go into a judicial convention, or some convention for the purpose of selecting this judge. Each county will have—think of it!—each county is equally represented, and those delegates will stay there until doomsday fighting for their own man unless the question is settled in some way, which I say will not be proper in the selection of candidates for that office. Now, I say I lived in one district of two counties, which were equally represented. One of the counties very generously decided to give to the other the right of selecting a judge, and there was no trouble. They had a gentleman who was eminently fitted for the position, and the other county conceded that he was a proper man; but they had candidates in that county who would have been very glad to have taken the nomination. And it was understood, and that arrangement was made, at the next regular election the other county would have the right to make the nomination. I happened to be a delegate in both of those Conventions; in the first one when the arrangement was first made, and also in the second one. When the two years came around and another judge was to be selected, the gentleman who had held the office knew that delegates were to be sent to a judicial convention men that were not bound by the action of any former convention, and they came in and presented a candidate again. The county which claimed that it was their turn very properly had a gentleman whom they desired for judge, and they wrangled and wrangled and quarreled, and for two days they balloted to select a judge. No judge was selected. They went home to their constituents, new delegates from each county were sent, and they came together, and they parted after thirty or forty attempts to nominate a candidate without any success until it was proposed that one member from each delegation should go out behind a haystack and toss up a half dollar as to who should be the judge. Now, that is what you gentlemen are proposing by uniting counties in this convention where they are nearly equal. You are proposing, and you will adopt a gambling proposition to select your judge, and I say that is not right. I say to you when you come to consider the fact that there will be no greater—and I think that can be clearly shown to this Convention—that the expense of this whole system will not be greater than it is now. Now, under the present system, where we have one judge in each county, I will guarantee that to the County of Deer Lodge this system will be a saving of $15,000 a year on one item. I am told by the County Commissioners of Deer Lodge County that they pay $1,700 a month for the support of the prisoners in our jail. A great majority of those prisoners are kept there, are bound over to appear before the Grand Jury, and a few are held for the serving out of terms for misdemeanors. But there will be more than $1,000 a month saved to the County of Deer Lodge under this system which we propose to inaugurate, and so although it may appear that a larger tax is levied, and it will be—if we are going to form a State Government we have got to make these offices and pay for them; you will get no support from the Government of the United States—and there will be apparently a larger tax for State purposes. But when you come to cut down expenses in county taxes, they will not be so large. I apprehend that in organizing this State, at the present rate, we pay two mills on the dollar, that is, pay into the treasury. Now, if we are going to carry on government offices, there have got to be executive officers, and I believe in paying good salaries. I believe in selecting men who can perform the duties creditably. I do not believe in this idea of saying, "make a salary of $1,000 and you can get a man to fill it." I do not believe that is the proper method of selecting officers. Now I am in favor of even larger salaries than are provided for in this Constitution, but after talking with the more conservative members on the Judiciary Committee, I was perfectly satisfied to leave them as they are. And I will say right here that I believe that most of the gentlemen that were on that Committee when this proposition was adopted, were in favor of each county having its own judge, provided each county wanted one; they were in favor of letting these counties, where they desired it, to be united, and in that way saving a few dollars. But the only question with the members on the Committee was, that to make the salaries higher and to make more districts would give the people a chance to say that the lawyers were making these districts for their own benefit. No, I do not believe there is an idea in the minds of any solitary man on the Committee of that kind; I think all were inspired with motives of honesty and honor in organizing a system which they thought would be for the advantage of the people, and if lawyers should be benefitted why not them as well as anybody else. If they should receive more business, I think it is proper enough lawyers should receive their benefits. But, I say, that that idea never entered the heads of any members of that Committee. And so, I think when this matter is fully discussed from all standpoints, I do honestly believe, that every member of this Convention will say that this amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade is the best and will be the most serviceable to the people, and I strongly support the proposition of the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: I have been listening with a good deal of interest to the eloquent speech of the gentleman from Deer Lodge; yet I am of the same opinion still that the substitute offered by the gentleman from Cascade ought not to be incorporated in this Constitution. I came here to attend to the business of the people of Meagher County the same as I would attend to my own individual business, and if I can have the same service done, and done right, for $3,000 that I can have done for $2,000, I certainly would do it; and I am perfectly satisfied that three of the smaller counties can be united in one judicial district, and the judge would be competent to attend to all the business in those three counties just as well as one. The substitute that I have offered there to Section 13, is based upon the population of these several districts, taken from the reports of the auditor and treasurer of this Territory. I find that in Lewis & Clarke County in 1888 there was a vote of 6,001; and Silver Bow County 7,225; and Deer Lodge County, 5,400 and something; in Missoula, 3,600. Now, I believe that those four counties are entitled to a judge on account of the vote polled in 1888. Now if you will take the vote of Deer Lodge, Jefferson and Madison, and put them all together, they are not equal to the vote of either Lewis & Clarke or Silver Bow Counties. If you will take the vote then of Meagher, Gallatin and Park, you will find that those three are not equal. You may take Yellowstone, Custer and Dawson, and they are not equal; they are away below. Well, then, you have Cascade, Chouteau and Fergus, and that is only 4,400; and it divides up in that way. Now, Missoula, it is true, is the smallest, being only 3,600, but being situated in the extreme Western portion of the Territory, we could not well join it with another county. This makes eight judicial districts, and I think one judge can well attend to all the business in any one. As regards the State paying for half of these salaries, I can look at that in no other light than that of a man putting his hand in his left-hand pocket, or putting it into the right-hand pocket to pay a bill. We have indirectly to pay it. It is true, there is a little advantage to these counties that pay a large amount; but now take Dawson County, where there is a vote of 400 and something. There is Custer of 900. Now, both county seats being located on the line of the railroad, so that you can go from one county seat to the other on the railroad, I think that one judge can attend to that district; and that substitute that I have offered there to section 13 is made with the view of facilitating the getting from one county seat to another, and is based upon the vote of 1888, so as to get at the average of the business to be done in each district.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to occupy but a very few minutes in reply to the gentleman from Deer Lodge. There were one or two propositions advanced by him that do not seem to me to be in accordance with reason. In the first place, from the tenor of his remarks, he seems to indicate that those persons who are opposed to the single county system for a district are also in favor of retaining the probate courts. I do not believe that there is a man on the floor who advocates the consolidation of those districts who is in favor of retaining the probate courts, and therefore insofar as the salaries are concerned, our system is the same as his. Where we differ is in the distribution of them. He wants to distribute this money to three or four judges where we want to distribute it to one. We want to distribute it to eight judges throughout the State. He wants twelve when eight will do the work. Now, there is another proposition about it. It is an easy thing for gentlemen to rise up on their feet here and declare that a certain system is an economical system; it is another thing to demonstrate it. He has absolutely failed in every particular to show a single item of saving. Let us see from what sources expenses are made in the management of courts. In the first place, there is the salary of the judge. By our system we have a saving there. In the second place, there is the payment of the Sheriff's fees. In our system, we are on exactly the same footing. The third, the payment of jurors; our system is on the same footing with his. Witnesses are in the same condition. Therefore, there is but one item left, and that is the question of the payment of mileage to judges. I have heard it asserted here in private conversation by members of this convention that the mileage of judges going between the two or three counties which may be situated in a district, would equal the salary of the judge. Why, gentlemen, it is absurd to say a thing of that kind. In the first place, if you put three counties in one district, and they are properly distributed with regard to their geographical location, there will not be a greater distance than 500 miles between the farthest county seats of the respective counties. That being the case, that would make 1000 miles travel for the judge for each term. Supposing there are four terms a year; let us admit there are five; there are 5000 miles to be traveled by the judge. Now, as to mileage, the law allows 15 cents per mile; let us admit he will be paid 20 cents per mile; there you have $1000 mileage. Now is $1000 equal to $3000? If it is, then the gentleman's argument holds good; if it is not, then his argument is fallacious. Now, upon the question of this argument about the State paying half of the salary, why, it is silly to make an argument of that kind, to say that it does not afterward come out of the people. Who furnishes the money that goes into the state treasury? Why, the taxpayer.

Gentlemen of the Convention we are not here to confer a favor upon the people of any county. We are here to confer equal benefits and equal burdens upon every citizen of this great State, and when a gentleman gets upon the floor here for the purpose of saying that he proposes to confer a special favor upon the people of some particular district as against some other district, I say he is advocating a doctrine that is pernicious and is opposed to the very principles upon which our government is founded and upon which all of our institutions are controlled. I belong to one of the smaller counties myself and our people would reap a benefit; but, gentlemen of the convention, I do not believe in it as a matter of principle, and although it may be a benefit to our people, I shall oppose that kind of a system. Now, as to the question that was raised here by the gentleman from Deer Lodge as to the difference which might possibly arise between the members of different conventions who had met to nominate men to the various judgeships, I do not suppose it is necessary to reply to it at all. It had no more application to the question than if he had quoted a Fourth of July oration or the Sermon on the Mount. I am opposed to this system of creating more districts than are necessary. Let us, as I said the other night, furnish sufficient districts to suit the present conditions; then furnish an expansive system whereby the Legislature can provide additional judges whenever the demands of the people require it.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I wish to inquire if an amendment is in order at this time.

The Chairman: No sir.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I desire to say on behalf of the judiciary committee that there was a good deal of difference between them in regard to the division of the State into districts. The proposed section reported here was suggested and reported not so much really as a recommendation of the Judiciary Committee, but as a basis upon which the Convention might act in finally fixing the division of the State into districts. Now, so far as I am concerned, and I think I represent the sentiments of the Judiciary Committee, I would be very glad to see this matter of the districts settled so that every county would be satisfied with the place assigned it; but I know that that is impossible. I would be in favor of this system of allowing every county to be a district by itself if it were not for the consideration of what I deem unnecessary expense which would be incurred thereby. So far as I am concerned, I believe the report of the Committee itself provides for more districts than are necessary. There are twelve in number according to this report. I think myself that eight, or at the outside nine, are all that are required; and I agree substantially with what I understand to be the substitute proposed to be offered by the gentleman from Meagher as to the constitution of the districts and the counties which it is proposed to put together. Now, we must consider this thing from a general point of view. It is not only with reference to the interest and convenience of particular counties, but it is with reference to all the people of the State who are to be affected at least in the matter of taxation by what may be done in the arrangement of these districts. Now, I have no doubt that even in the smallest county in the territory it would be a saving over the present system to allow that county to have a judge. In the saving of the probate judge's salary and in the saving of other expenses that are now incurred, I think the county would at least lose nothing. But that is not the proposition here. I mean to say that the county could take itself half of the salary which it would be required to pay without any loss to itself; but the other half has got to be paid by the State if that provision in this article as reported is to be adopted; and as to that, it seems to me it is necessary to consider whether or not that can be saved. As has been well said here, it seems to me a proposition so self-evident that it is not necessary to argue the fact, that if you can get the same service as well performed for $3000.00 there is no necessity of paying the sum of $9000.00 for it. Now, I take it, Mr. Chairman, that we have got to come to a realization of this fact, and we may as well look at it right now as at any other time. We have got to watch as carefully as we can every provision in this constitution to see that no unnecessary expense is incurred in the support of the State government. We are going into a new and necessarily more expensive system than we have been accustomed to and we must guard every question that comes up against any unnecessary expense being imposed upon our state, because that expense has got to be met by taxation which takes the money directly from the people. Now, it seems to me that to propose to provide a judge for each county when there is no business in that county to require it, when that judge in two or three months in the year could do all that is necessary to be done and the rest of the time would be idle, is not only incurring an unnecessary expense, but it is a bad precedent. I believe in paying every person a fair salary for his services, but I would require him to do work in return. I do not believe in giving any man a sinecure; I do not believe it would be good for the judge. Let a judge in one of these counties dispose of his business in sixty days and let him loaf the rest of the time and he would become in the course of a year so demoralized that he would not be qualified for the office; he would not have employment enough to keep him in good mental health; he would retrograde. And what is the use of employing a judge to do such a small amount of work when he can with a saving to the State and with more benefit to himself, perform the same duties in three counties. It seems to be entirely unnecessary to incur such a useless expense. Now, I want to see this judicial system have a fair trial. I do not want to see it burdened down at the start with so many and such unnecessary expense as that the people will throw it aside, attributing to the system what would properly be attributed to its administration, neither in the judicial departments nor in any other.

Now, you take this matter with regard to the salaries. Here are half of the salaries provided to be paid by the State. As I said before, the county may come out even on paying its half but for that half paid by the State there is a contribution levied on every taxpayer of the state. It makes no difference to the taxpayer whether he pays so much in county tax or so much in state tax or whatever else you may call it, it all comes out of his pocket, and the man in Dawson county will pay just the amount of state tax that the man in Lewis and Clarke county will. Here are three counties which might be put together in which one judge can attend to all the business. He will be paid, say $3000. Now, it is proposed by some instead of that to pay $9000. There is a saving, putting this in one county, of $3000 to the state alone besides, it will be a saving to the county. In one case, the county will pay $1500; if there are three counties, it will be in proportion which would be $500 each. There is a saving to the state in the same way; it is a saving in both ways; and certainly it seems to me a very extravagant and unnecessary idea to leave these counties separate whatever convenience it may lead to. Of course, there are conveniences which are nice and pleasant and that we like to have, but we all know that in our own private affairs, it is a rule, I believe, that we all have to have things that are not exactly what we would like but what we are able and can afford to pay for. This judicial system proposed here, with a judge for each county at the salaries proposed would make over $50,000 for district judges besides $15,000 for Supreme Court judges. Under the proposed arrangement, $40,000 would be paid by the state. Well, now, just for the single item of judicial salaries in one year there would be an expense to the state, let alone the counties which we need not consider, of $40,000. Now, would not the people have a right to say that for the administration of one department of government that was a great burden for a new State to assume? When they looked the matter over and found there were three judges appointed where one might have done the service, would not the people be inclined to say, "You gentlemen, in creating such a system as this may have had in view the rights of the people and the saving of taxation, but you had more regard to the convenience and prejudices and wishes of certain smaller counties than you had for the interest and concerns of the people of the state."

I hope, Mr. Chairman, that this amendment to make each county a judicial district will be defeated; and as I said before, I am in favor substantially, if I understand the matter, of the substitute which I believe has not but I think is intended to be proposed by the gentleman from Meagher county.

Mr. Hickox of Silver Bow: I understand there has been an amendment sent to the desk. I would like to have it read.

The Chairman: The clerk will read for information the amendment of the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Parberry) which, however, is not in order at the present time.

Mr. J. R. Toole: Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask if a motion to refer this section would be in order.

The Chairman: I do not think that motion would be in order at this time. The Committee would have to rise.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Where doctors disagree, a layman, I suppose, should not presume to tread. I have been very highly entertained and edified by the controversy we have had over this section. We heard the other evening about the musical bray of the Rocky Mountain donkey; we heard about having to accept one of two horns of an unmentionable name; we heard about mandamuses and other profane things, but I rise to my feet to emphasize if I can what has been said by the gentleman from Meagher—Mr. Parberry, the gentleman from Gallatin—Mr. Hartman, and the gentleman from Silver Bow—Mr. Dixon—in turn, and from a business man's standpoint I want to say that I feel we had better take a conservative view of this matter. Most generally, I can heartily endorse any proposition offered by my friend from Cascade—Mr. Collins, but in this matter I feel that he is not up to the usual standard of his excellent judgment. Now, unfortunately, the impression is getting abroad that we are sitting here creating offices for the office seeker, and I think we had better be a little careful lest we give color to this impression. I, for one, do not believe this is the sentiment of this body. Nevertheless, we have heard mutterings of a distant storm in that direction. Now, I believe that one of these amendments should be adopted. I am free to confess that I am not quite clear as to which one would be the better to adopt, but I am certainly in favor of the adoption of one of these amendments making either seven or eight districts in lieu of the original section; and I, for one, was pleased to hear Mr. Dixon, the chairman of this committee, mention that in his judgment we can safely adopt a fewer number rather than a larger number; and it does seem to me that the argument advanced by my friend from Gallatin—Mr. Hartman—the other evening and today is unanswerable.

I have heard several members who are members of the legal profession and who have an accurate knowledge of the courts where they practice, say that there is not enough work in the districts as cut out in this report of the Committee to furnish employment for these judges, and that they would have to go fishing or do something else to occupy their time. Now, I submit to you, gentlemen of the Committee, that we are not here for the purpose of furnishing men employment that they may have time to go fishing. As a business man I can find very little time for such amusements, and I do not believe our constituents will endorse us if we, for the sake of satisfying a little local pride—and I do not speak disrespectfully when I say this, but I know that the temptation is strong in that direction, to gratify a little local pride that "our county"—Park County, if you please—may be set off and made a judicial district. I know it is something to be able to say when we go home to our constituents "See we obtained for you a district."

Now, then, let us set aside this little local pride and legislate for the entire State, and saying this I heartily endorse what Mr. Dixon said in this direction, and I do hope that one of these amendments will prevail, and without yielding the floor for the moment, I would like to ask for the reading again of that amendment as offered by Mr. Goddard.

The Clerk read the amendment for the information of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I believe, Mr. Chairman, all things considered as I understand the geography of the territory and the needs of these respective counties, that the substitute as offered by the gentleman from Meagher—Mr. Parberry—is the better one, and until I have been convinced to the contrary, I shall support his amendment.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, when the judiciary report was read and it was stated that this Territory or State was to be districted into twelve districts, it seemed to me then that they had made a very fair and liberal division in this matter; but since listening to the discussions that have been had upon this floor and the information derived from learned gentlemen from various sections of the territory—by Col. Callaway, Mr. Hartman and others—that in these various counties which they represent, a judge might dispose of all the business in the county in a few months and have the rest of the time to go fishing, I am clearly convinced that the number mentioned by the report is entirely too large, and hence I hope the amendment offered by this gentleman will not prevail. I am in favor of one of the amendments that have been offered; I have offered one myself. I am in favor of cutting it down to at least nine districts, and I believe that the administration of justice can be thoroughly effected by cutting this State into nine judicial districts or perhaps less. I doubt if less will accomplish the purpose, for the reason, I believe, that the district justices have jurisdiction in probate matters; but I think it may very properly be cut down to nine districts and thereby save the salaries of seven district judges in the State, which will amount to at least $30,000, one-half of which, I understand, is to be paid by the State. Now, I am in favor of saving six or seven districts and taking some of this money and paying these judges that shall preside in the remaining districts better salaries, and thereby procuring better services for the State than would otherwise be done by allowing each county to have a district and a judge. You will be unable, in my opinion, for the salaries provided in some of these counties, $3300 or $3500, to get competent men to take the positions, and I do not believe in providing places for fledglings from some law school, or putting men upon the bench to dispense justice in this State that are incapable of doing it. Hence I shall oppose the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: When I proposed the substitute I did it with some knowledge of the business of the several counties which were grouped in judicial districts. For instance, in the counties of Yellowstone, Custer and Dawson, I think I have sufficient knowledge of the business of those counties to be advised on that subject, and I undertake to say that any good, energetic judge who can be selected from some of those counties in that district could perform all of the duties of the judge of that district and have plenty of time as has been said, to go fishing or to play "seven-up" behind a hay stack, as I have heard it suggested by the gentleman from Deer Lodge. Now, in relation to Cascade, Choteau and Fergus, the same proposition is true there. I do not believe that any of those counties has had a term of court lasting over two weeks, and admitting that each of those counties would have a two weeks term of court at every sitting, the judge's time would not be occupied more than half of the year, and the same I believe would be true in Gallatin, Meagher and Park, and also in the district which is composed of Jefferson, Madison and Beaverhead. In arranging these counties, I have had regard to the convenience of getting to and from the county seats of the several counties forming the districts. It will be convenient in the district in which I live for a judge residing at Miles City or even Billings or Glendive, to reach all of the county seats in his district by rail, and in the fifth district, composed of Choteau, Cascade and Fergus, that is true with reference to Cascade and Fergus, or Cascade and Choteau; and as a matter of fact, the mode of travel to Fergus county would be just as convenient from Choteau as from any other point. It is the same with the seventh district, composed of Jefferson, Madison and Beaverhead. There is a railroad now being constructed from Gallatin city to Butte which will I believe reach some point over in Madison county. Pony or some other place there which is about forty miles from the county seat and which will be a convenience in that respect to the judge. Beaverhead county can be reached by way of Butte over that new railroad which will be constructed before any term of court is held in that county. So far as convenience is concerned, it seems to me that the proposition which I have made here is the best. I entirely agree with the gentleman from Meagher (Dr. Parberry) in relation to the districts he has mapped out in his proposition, with the exception of one or two. I believe, that all things taken into consideration, the geography of the country, facilities for travel etc., it will be found that the proposition I have submitted will be more convenient to the judges; and so far as the mileage is concerned, I do not understand that any provision of the constitution or the judiciary act as reported by the judiciary committee, contemplates any mileage for the judges; and in view of that fact, I would be in favor of paying these judges a larger salary than has been reported. These judges having a district of three counties ought to have a salary of $4000, the same as these other counties. While I do not believe the amount of business in the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th districts would amount to as much as Lewis & Clarke county or Silver Bow County, yet I believe the judges would be kept busy masmuch as they would have to travel considerably to reach their county seats; and I believe in that case they should have the same salaries as are allowed in Silver Bow and Lewis & Clarke counties. Now I heartily concur with what has been said by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, and his colleague, Mr. Rickards, and others, in regard to the expense of this matter. I have recently returned from eastern Montana and have talked with my constituents in that part of the territory not only in my district but in the district which is represented by the worthy gentleman from Park county, and I believe it is the sense of the people of those districts that this Convention shall form districts composed of two or three counties, or a sufficient number of counties to give the judge something to do. I believe, as the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) said, it will make a better judge of a man if he is kept busy. His mind will be occupied; he will have something to think about; and he will be a better judge. Take any lawyer in this territory and put him upon the bench and furnish him only business enough to occupy half of his time, and at the end of the term of his office he will neither be a judge nor a lawyer; he will be a loafer and nothing else. Now, I am not in favor of encouraging loafers among lawyers; there are enough of them now. (Laughter) Now, my friend from Park county has some reason, I apprehend, for wishing his county to have a separate district, but I do not believe his constituents down there will carry him out in the proposition he has made to this Convention. I do not say this with any intention of reflection upon the integrity of the gentleman, but simply upon his pride in this matter. Now, if he is so anxious to be a county to himself, I am in favor of attaching him to the Crow Indian Reservation for judicial purposes. (Laughter)

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that the Committee do now rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IX. CONVENTION

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order

Mr. Magnus of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole has been in session, has had under consideration the article on judiciary, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that they had under consideration the article on judiciary. The Committee reports progress and asks for leave to sit again. If there be no objection, leave will be granted.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that the Convention do now take a rest until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh), the same was declared carried and the Convention took a rest until two o'clock P. M.

Wednesday, July 24, 1889.

Afternoon Session.

The Convention was called to order by the President at 2 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, I move that the Convention do now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole and resume the consideration of the report of the judiciary committee.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. A. F. Burns of Lewis & Clarke: I would like leave of absence until to-morrow evening.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke will be excused until to-morrow evening.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I would call the attention of the Convention to the fact that there is a special order for two o'clock.

Mr. Magnus of Lewis & Clarke: I would suggest that the special order be postponed. I think it would be better to dispose of these various subjects while the attention and interest of the Convention is upon them. The action of the Convention in going into Committee of the Whole on the judiciary would simply postpone the special order.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and the same was declared carried.

The President: Will the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Magnus, kindly resume the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Magnus of Lewis & Clarke, in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The motion before the house is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins). The Clerk will read the substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute for Section 13. "Until otherwise provided by law, each organized county in the state shall constitute a separate judicial district."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I happen to have the honor to be placed on the judiciary committee, and I concur fully in the statement of the worthy chairman of that Committee that the recommendation of the Committee in regard to the division of the districts was regarded rather as a suggestion than as a positive recommendation to the Convention for its consideration. While I confess that I was partial, and am still partial, to the system of making each county an independent judicial district, and believe it would be in the interest of economy, I did not come to this Convention for the purpose of setting up my own ideas or my own will against that of the majority of the Convention. What I want, and always have wanted of this Convention, is that it should calmly and deliberately determine upon one thing which I am set upon, and I am willing to let all subordinate questions yield to that paramount principle, and that is that we have a government of the people, a government for the people, and a government by the people; a government which shall secure the greatest amount of protection to life, liberty and property, and guarantee the greatest measure of happiness to the people. If I get that, I will be satisfied. I have no idea that there is a gentleman upon the floor of this Convention who differs with me in regard to this abstract proposition, but there will be a difference of opinion in regard to the necessary measures to carry it into effect. I have advocated the creation of each separate county into a judicial district from the fact that I thought it would be a great step in the direction of economy over the present system of territorial government; but as has been suggested by my friend from Meagher county, and by the worthy chairman of the judiciary committee, it may be that we can go a step farther. The first object of a judiciary at all is to provide for the adjustment, the settlement of all matters of litigation. I think that principle should be held closely in mind by every member of the convention. We want to provide a system that will give us a speedy and an adequate remedy at law in our courts of justice, and nothing should be allowed to interfere with that. Now, I am told, in some of the counties of this territory—I won't vouch for it, but I give the information as I get it—I will take Missoula county for instance—that there has not been a civil case tried there for over a year or two, and there are two or three hundred cases on the docket. Missoula county is connected with several other counties in the administration of justice. I am told that in Silver Bow County it is the same. I presume it is in consequence of the great amount of criminal business that the court has to attend to. I am also informed that in some of these other counties whose dockets are overloaded with civil business, that there have been no civil cases of any kind tried. Now if this be so, it is a strong argument in favor of dividing our districts in such a way that a speedy adjudication of the matters in controversy in our courts will be assured. I know that in our county there are some twenty cases on the docket that have been held there since 1883. I do not say it is the fault of the judiciary in all cases, because I can cite instances where the parties have not been ready to proceed with the trial. We have had five or six judges since those cases have been put on the docket, and it is fair to presume that those gentlemen who have been sent here by the government to dispense justice to the "benighted inhabitants of Montana" have not been fishing or playing "seven-up" behind a hay stack as has been suggested here. I believe they are as honest men as were ever sent into any country. Of course, we will have a constant immigration of lawyers as well as other people into this country. It reminds me of the man who said, I think we will have a better condition of things because ranch eggs are coming in. Of course, I can pretend that they will be superior in point of legal ability. Now, if eight districts are sufficient and eight judges sufficient to transact the business of the district courts here and bring our record up to the present time and wipe off the docket all these old cases, that is all I want. I do not want men appointed to office here who are to go off nine months in the year and become demoralized by having nothing to do. I take it, there is no honorable member of the profession who would do that, and I do not think there is any danger of them becoming demoralized by not having to take care of business. I take it that men who are on the bench find enough to do in looking up authorities and studying over their decisions, so as to relieve as far as possible the docket of the supreme court of the territory. If the measure which I have been partial to does not meet with the approval of the majority of this Convention, I will most certainly second and support the measure of my friend from Meagher county (Dr. Parberry). We will leave it in the hands of the legislature and if the legislature finds that eight judges cannot do the business, they shall have the power to increase those judges. Now, these are my views stated fairly and squarely; and so far as the popular clamor of the people is concerned, I care nothing about it. My constituents sent me here not at my request, not at my own bidding, to do what I thought was right, and I will do my duty after my own measure and according to my own conscience, and I will undertake to be responsible to them. I hope the matter will receive the deliberate consideration of the Convention, and that we will not provide one more district or one more judge than is absolutely necessary for the full and faithful administration of justice in the districts of this territory.

The question was called for.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The next amendment is the amendment of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) to strike out of the fifth line "and Yellowstone county" and re-number the subsequent districts.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) and the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The next proposition before the Convention is the proposition of the gentleman from Meagher county (Dr. Parberry) for which the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) offers a substitute. The gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard) also offers a substitute. I suppose they should be read together.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, speaking for my own county and speaking with a partial knowledge at least of the needs of Missoula county, I will say with reference to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Meagher county, that it seems to fit the wants and necessities of our section better than any other. We have a county which if joined with Deer Lodge would make a judicial district having a larger number of inhabitants, a larger amount of taxable property and a larger volume of legal business than any other district in the territory. It is impossible, or at least impracticable for our county to be joined with Jefferson in a judicial district. We are situated on the western extremity of the territory in a place where it is almost impossible for us to be joined to any other county for judicial purposes, except it be to Deer Lodge. I am reliably informed by the representatives from Deer Lodge county that they have a sufficient volume of judicial business to engage the attention of Deer Lodge county. I think, taking into consideration the present condition of our docket, that by the time the judge would catch up with the business now upon the docket, that the growth of Missoula county would warrant us in asking for a separate judicial district; and inasmuch as it is in the contemplation of this constitution that the legislature shall have authority to enlarge the number of districts or change the boundaries thereof, it seems to me it would be the part of wisdom at this time to ask that Missoula county be made a separate judicial district. This I believe, is the position taken by the gentleman from Meagher county, and I certainly desire at this time to support the amendment offered by him; and I support it not because I think in time perhaps every county in the territory will not be a judicial district, because I believe with the growth of our population, with the growth of business, it will become necessary in time to have a judicial district for each county in the state. I am also told by one of the members of our board of county commissioners who is a member of this body, that during the past year in Missoula county it cost the county in the neighborhood of $6000, to pay the board of prisoners in the county jail. If this is true, we can save at least the amount that would be allowed a district judge, in that item alone, by having a speedy trial of these cases that are delayed from time to time in the courts of the county. I believe that so far as Missoula county is concerned, it will be a measure of economy, and it would be the part of wisdom to make it a separate judicial district.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the gentleman what the condition of the docket is in this county.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I am not prepared to say. I know that there are a great many civil cases on the docket, and there are at this time in the county jail twenty or twentyfive prisoners charged with felony. These men are there at the expense of the county at the present time.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I would like to hear the substitute of the gentleman from Meagher read.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, when I offered my amendment, I had not heard this read. I therefore withdraw my own amendment as this suits me better.

The Chairman: That will reduce the propositions before the Convention to two.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I beg to say that my motion embodies almost the same proposition as that of the gentleman from Meagher county (Dr. Parberry). I am willing that the proposition which I presented joining Missoula and Deer Lodge counties shall be amended so that those two counties shall be separated and that each of them shall have a judicial district; and if the amendment of the gentleman from Meagher contemplates that, I will withdraw my amendment.

The Chairman: The Committee will vote upon the proposition offered by the gentleman from Meagher county Dr. Parberry.

Mr. Joyce of Jefferson: As I understand that proposition, it includes the county of Jefferson in one of these districts.

The Clerk read the proposition for the information of the gentleman.

Mr. Joyce of Jefferson: Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the substitute which is offered by the gentleman from Meagher because in the first place, I believe the county of Jefferson is entitled to have a district judge; that it is just as much entitled to have this district judge as any other of the districts which have been substituted in that report. The county of Jefferson is now the fifth county of the territory in population, according to the last vote, according to the vote of the election last fall, and it really has a much larger population than is shown by that vote. But leaving that out of consideration, the county of Jefferson has a taxable property greater now than the county of Missoula. We will have before this year is ended $500,000 or $600,000 more of assessable property from the railroads that are now being built in the county. I think that the county will be abundantly able to support a district judge, and not only able to support a district judge, but I believe it will save the people of that county expense in having a district by themselves. It seems that a great many people look upon Jefferson county as one of the smaller counties of the State, but it is now about the fourth county in population and about the fourth county in wealth in the Territory, and I think that when we do away with the probate courts of this territory, we should give to the county of Jefferson a judge. I had an idea that when we assembled here, it was for the purpose of establishing a better government than that under which we now live, and I also supposed that the purpose of establishing courts of justice was to administer justice, and not to save expense to the people. Of course, we should be as economical as possible in adopting the system of courts, but there are other matters to be considered besides the mere cost of administering justice. We have been now for sometime in Jefferson county in a district composed of three counties. We have never had in that county any justice. I have lived there for over two years and a half. There have been six terms of court in that county since I have been there. They have never been able to try any civil causes in that county. Now, I believe that the object of establishing a court of justice is to give a guilty man who is charged with a crime a speedy trial and conviction, and not to keep him in jail at the expense of the county; and to give to an innocent man who is charged with a crime, a speedy trial and an acquittal. Neither of these things can be had now in that county as it has been, and as it is at present, under the present judicial system. I believe, moreover, that when a man has a civil right that has been injured, that he should have a speedy redress for the injury that has been done him. We have never had there any redress at all. There has only been in the last eight years, as I have been informed, one term of court in the county where there have been any civil cases tried to amount to anything. At the last term of court, we had a three weeks term. The whole of that time was taken up in the trial of criminal causes. There were then on the docket civil cases which would have taken, according to my computation, at the least six weeks, and as I have been informed by other gentlemen, even longer than that, say two months or ten weeks. Those cases were not touched at all; we simply tried the criminal cases on the docket at that time. Now, I believe that the litigants in that county have a right to have their cases tried, and I believe we should not only consider the expense to the county but we should consider the rights of people who have cases in the district court; and I do not believe that if this system is adopted here which puts Jefferson, Madison and Beaverhead counties into one district, that we will be any better off than we have been under the present system. If we have got to pay for our district courts, then I want a court that will administer justice, and we cannot get it under the present system; and I do not believe that we can get it if you put those three counties into one district. We are now in a district which has three counties. That district has one district court and three probate courts. We cannot now—I speak only so far as my own county is concerned, with which I am perfectly familiar—we cannot get any justice in that county. Now, I say if you are going to abolish these courts and place us in a district where we will have only one court to take the place of four courts, that we will be still worse off; and if we are not going to be any better off than we are now, then I prefer remaining as a territory and have Uncle Sam pay for our justice such as we get. That will be about the effect of the arrangement proposed by the gentleman from Meagher county. I believe that this system which has been proposed here by the judiciary committee will be a satisfactory system to the people of this new State and I believe if we have one judge in the county of Jefferson that we will save expense to the people of that county. The arguments which have been used before the judiciary committee and before the Bar Association which passed upon this same question here last week were that by having a system similar to this system of Superior Courts, as it is called in California, or which we call District Courts, and which is the same system practically that has been in operation in Pennsylvania for the last one hundred years, that we would have a speedy remedy to right our wrongs; that we would save expense to the counties by adopting that system as well as save expense to civil litigants that have cases before that court. I did not come here favorably impressed with that system. I believed in having about six district judges and the probate judges; but after hearing the arguments—and they were arguments, some of which were made by gentlemen who have got up here today and seemed to be in favor of reducing still further the districts which have been reported by this Committee—after hearing their arguments in favor of this so-called California system of giving to each county in this territory a judge, I felt that it would be the proper thing to do. It seems to me, however, that it is the sentiment of this Committee of the Whole that would be too much; and it was the sense of the Judiciary Committee; but I believe that the system which they have reported here will be inexpensive and it will be the best system that we can adopt. A great many of the gentlemen who have spoken here seem to think that the object of a court of justice is to save people money. I do not think so. I think it is the object of a court to administer justice, and if we have got a system here that will administer justice at no greater expense than we can necessarily avoid, we should adopt that system. I am in favor of adopting the report of the Committee here especially as it refers to my county. I believe that we will save a great amount of expense. The gentlemen of this Convention do not seem to think that when we are creating as it is true, twelve district courts, that we are abolishing sixteen probate courts. We have now four district courts and sixteen probate courts, making twenty courts. We propose now to organize simply twelve courts, that is, we are cutting off eight courts. Now the cost of those courts, if we had county courts, would amount to at least $30,000 and the balance of that $54,000 which these twelve courts would cost is no more than we would have to pay the district judges if we adopt a system of district judges and probate courts. Now, if we are going to abolish the probate courts, then I would not be in favor of adopting the system which has been proposed here by the gentleman from Meagher county. As I have said, under the present system, we cannot get any justice in our county. If you are going to abolish the probate courts, we will still be worse off than we are now; and if we cannot have a probate court in that county, we ought to have a district judge who can sit in that county. It would be economical and in the interest of justice. There are a great many cases coming up where a speedy remedy is necessary. For instance, injunctions, writs of habeas corpus, and other writs of that character. Under the present system if this plan is adopted as proposed by the gentleman from Meagher county, some of those counties in that district are going to suffer in the administration of justice. If we have a judge in Jefferson county, the other counties are going to suffer from it. They are going to go over to Jefferson county every time they want a writ of injunction or every time they want a writ of habeas corpus, and all that is going to cost a great deal of money. By having this system with a judge in Jefferson county, allowing the other two counties to make the other district we would save that expense. I believe, further, that that system would save a great deal of expense in criminal cases. There are a great many cases that come up in the justice and probate courts where a man upon some charge of misdemeanor is convicted. He has a jury trial which the county has to pay for, and they have to pay the costs of the witnesses which he produces. In nearly every case in my county where a man is convicted in a case of that kind, he takes an appeal to the district court. That case all comes up again. The consequence is that the county has to pay the cost of trying that criminal case twice. There are two sets of jurors and two sets of witnesses, and it would only take two or three cases like that in a year to more than pay the difference between the judge's salary such as they would have to pay as a county by themselves, and the salary they would have to pay a judge in connection with these other two districts. When we come into this new State, I would like to see a better government. I know that the administration of justice in our county has been defective; that we have not had a court there in my recollection—and as I have said before, in the last eight years, as I have been informed by lawyers who practiced there before—we have not had a court there which would try the civil cases at all. Now, I believe that those people are entitled to some rights. I believe that when a man is wronged, he is entitled to have that wrong redressed, and I do not see how we can do it under the system proposed by the gentleman from Meagher county. I believe we are just as much entitled to have a judge in Jefferson county as in Missoula or any other county in this Territory, because every man is entitled to have justice, and we cannot get justice under the system which is proposed.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. Chairman, I am in perfect accord with the gentleman who has last spoken upon this proposition, and I want also to endorse the statements of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill). Now, it is not a question, and for that matter I do not think that any gentleman on this floor, up to this date, has any reason or room to boast to his constituents about what he has accomplished here and it does not look now as though he was going to have. Now, I am not particular as to what county the county of Park shall be attached, but I am anxious that some arrangement may be entered into by which we can clear up our dockets every term and that justice may be administered under our constitution without denial or delay. The gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard) has suggested that we be attached to the Crow Indian Reservation. The gentleman from Yellowstone knows more about the Crow Indian Reservation than I do, and in view of the fact that he and his people for many years have been joined to the Crow Indian Reservation for all other purposes I expect they might just as well stand that racket for judicial purposes.

Now, Mr. Chairman, it has been suggested here that in all of these counties they never have a term longer than two weeks. I want this Committee to understand that we have never had a term of court for more than two or three weeks at a time, so that our civil cases have been accumulating from time to time until now we have about sixty cases on the docket, and I have been also informed by the judge who presides upon that bench, since I have been engaged here upon this floor, that at the coming term which meets there in September, a notice has been served upon us in advance that nothing but criminal cases will be disposed of at that term. Now, I say, connect Park with any county that you please so that you provide for a system whereby we can clean up all of our civil business, so that we may not be holding over from year to year. I think it is a safe statement for me to make that I have four or five clients now with important cases upon the docket who would almost be willing of themselves to contribute enough to pay a year's salary to a judge if they could only have those cases tried and determined at once; it has already cost them the price of this year's crops; and if the proposition is to put the same number of counties or nearly that number in each district—nearly as many as we have now—we will be no better off. I want to call the attention of this committee to one fact that has not been referred to yet, that if we abolish the probate system we will be worse off, as my friend from Jefferson suggested, than we are now. That probate court is established with certain civil and criminal jurisdiction, something that goes beyond the jurisdiction of a justice court. Now, if we are only to have a justice and a district court, it will work a hardship. A person brought up for a misdemeanor which is punishable by imprisonment for more than ninety days is beyond the jurisdiction of a justice court and that man will have to go to jail and lie there three or four months until the district court meets, and then his case will be heard and determined, and he will serve out his imprisonment after that. It is a hardship in that respect, and it is a hardship upon every citizen of the county, because they will during all that time have to pay the expense of keeping these prisoners in jail. Then there is the intermediate jurisdiction of the probate court of $500, which will be done away with and I say our district courts will be more than overcrowded. There will be nearly double the business, and I am satisfied that under the arrangement contemplated by this amendment, the condition of our docket will remain as it is now and it will take from a year and a half to two years to dispose of the civil business. The expense of the probate court this year in Park county is $2,800. It is proposed to pay the district judge $3,000. Now, that alone would not amount to anything to the people of Park county, and I am in favor, Mr. Chairman, if the probate court is to be done away with, I am in favor of engrafting here in this constitution that the various counties shall pay for their own court, and that no part shall be paid by the state. Let the counties pay for their courts. I say that when gentlemen come up here and state the condition of their affairs and show conclusively that they need more judges and more terms of court, that this Convention ought to be willing to give it to them. Park county does not ask that the State shall pay half of the expense of her court; we are willing to pay for the administration of justice; we only want arrangements made by which we shall have that justice. I am in favor of making that amendment, that each county shall pay for its own judge.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers a substitute to the pending amendment which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute for Section 13.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman I regret very sincerely that I was not present this forenoon to hear the discussion upon this question, but from what I have heard this afternoon, there seems to be an inclination in favor of having a judge in every county. Now, I believe that if that matter is fairly considered it will become perfectly apparent to everyone that that number of judges is not required and I will support the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Meagher county which provides for eight judicial districts with a judge for each district. I believe that that number of judges can do all the work that is to be done. If we take into consideration the fact that heretofore we have had but four judges who have been required to hold two terms of the Supreme Court a year which have taken at least two months in the year, in addition to their regular duties as district judges and that by this proposition we double the number of district judges, and that they have nothing to do with the work in the Supreme Court, but that each judge attends to the duties in his own district the year round, I believe that notwithstanding the fact that the probate courts are to be abolished and the work of those courts thrown into the district courts, that every bit of it can be done by eight judges in the state. Now, the argument of the gentleman from Jefferson that they have not had a civil case tried for the last eight years, and his further argument that it will take six or seven weeks to do away with the accumulation of eight years' business is to me the strongest kind of indication that that county does not need a judge. His own argument is conclusive. If a judge can dispose of the work in that county, the accumulation of eight years, in six or seven or eight weeks, I submit there is no good reason and it is no good argument why there should be a judge in that county. Now, so far as the business in the eastern part of the territory is concerned, I am satisfied that one man can perform all of this work in Dawson, Custer and Yellowstone counties. I am not able to speak from a knowledge of the condition of things so well as to the other counties. I believe we should have a sufficient number of judges to do all the work and to do it as speedily as possible. The argument of the gentleman from Park that it will save a large amount of costs that are now required in keeping persons in jail, and for witnesses, and that sort of thing, does not obtain for this reason, that we propose to have four terms of court in each county. Those persons would have to be held if there was a judge for every county because in the districts where a county composes a district, there is simply provision for four terms of court in that county. Now, if we shall provide that there shall be three counties in one district, that judge shall be compelled to hold twelve terms of court, but as the business will be much less than it is in this county or in Silver Bow county, he can certainly readily attend to it. Now, the probate business, that is, strictly speaking, probate matters that would have to be performed by the judges, is not going to take any great amount of time. Most of the work in the probate courts of estates and matters of that kind, is done by the clerk anyway, and I believe that on the first two or three or four days of each term of court all the probate business there is can be disposed of in the district court; that there can be a two or three weeks term four times a year in each county, and that in less than twelve months the docket of the district court of every county in this State will be cleaned up. Now, it is a matter that I do not believe individual counties should be permitted to have their entire say in, or that this Convention should be controlled by the wishes of any particular county, for the reason that it is proposed that the State shall pay one-half of the expense of these judges;—and I think that is right because the criminal business in each and every of these counties is fully one-half of what business is done, and criminal business is State business and should be paid for by the State. So if it is to be paid for by the State, then unless the representative or representatives from a certain county can show that their condition of affairs is such as was indicated by the gentleman from Missoula, that they actually need a judge to do the work there—and from his statement I believe they do—and thus amendment of the gentleman from Meagher I understand makes that a separate district—unless the members from those counties can show that there is sufficient business to warrant having a judge for the county the year round, I do not believe that they should be allowed to have them. I believe the eight judges can perform the work there is for the present, and if in two years from now the legislature deem it necessary to increase that number, it certainly can be done.

Mr. Joyes, of Jefferson: I only wish to allude to one remark of the gentleman from Custer. He says that in the discussion of this question by me that the fact that I stated here that there were six or eight weeks' business on the docket after all this time shows that we do not need a judge in Jefferson county. Now, these cases which are on the docket now in Jefferson county are nearly all new cases; the old cases have not been tried; they have simply been dismissed and settled up without coming to any proper adjudication because they could not be brought to trial. Every time some man jumps the mining claim of another and a suit is brought, the man that owns the claim, even if the other man has got no possible show of ever winning the case, has got to pay the jumper, and has to encourage blackmail and robbery in order to get justice. He cannot bring his case up and try it. He knows that if he brings his case before the district court it will be put off from time to time and from year to year, and all that he can do is to pay this robber and get his case dismissed and his title quieted so that he can dispose of his property and do something with it. And these cases that are now on the docket are cases, nearly all of them, which have come up within the last year. These old cases that have been accumulating for years have been settled up in some manner unsatisfactory to all the parties and disposed of; and I do not believe that this same system which is proposed by the gentleman from Meagher will give us any better justice than we have been having in the past. I believe that if it is the sense of this Convention that Jefferson county ought not to have a judge—I think it ought to have, and that it is just as much entitled to one as these other counties—but if this Convention thinks it is not entitled to one, then I think some other arrangement should be proposed besides that mapped out by the gentleman from Meagher. I believe that would be unsatisfactory to the people of our county; that it will cost them more, and that they will not have any more chances for getting redress for wrongs than they have now. The business has been increasing all the time within the last two or three years, and the business there now would warrant having a judge there all the year, in my opinion.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I do not desire to take up the time of this Committee and shall not do so for any great length of time. I simply wish to make an observation with reference to the amendment which I have offered to section 13. This districting of the state of Montana into judicial districts is a question of the utmost importance. The main object to be had in view, and to be held in view, is not the question so much of expense, but, as has been properly suggested by some of the gentlemen present, to secure an efficient and speedy administration of justice; and this is the object which should govern every one of us in deciding this question here today. Now, the gentleman from Missoula objects to coupling that county with any other county in a judicial district. Upon listening to the reasons adduced by that gentleman, I was willing to withdraw my motion which coupled Missoula county with Jefferson county, and I am willing so far as I am concerned—and I believe it will meet the views of my constituents—that every county in this State shall have a judicial district, if it shall be deemed necessary to secure a speedy and efficient administration of justice; and I am also willing so far as I am convinced by the evidence that has been adduced here by these gentlemen from these different counties to accede to their demands and wishes whenever I believe they are correct. I do not believe it is necessary to give every county in this State a separate judicial district, but I would say that if the county of Missoula is entitled to a separate district, I believe that to couple three counties together, for instance, Jefferson, Madison and Beaverhead, as has been proposed, would be to make the districts entirely disproportionate. I am convinced from what I have heard from the lips of the gentleman from Jefferson, and from my experience in these matters, that he is correct, and that to couple these three counties together would work an injustice to all of them. We have heard it stated that it has been impossible to secure justice in the county of Jefferson, and I believe the gentleman to be correct when he says that the people of his county will be still subject to injustice if they are coupled with two other counties. Now, I have looked this matter over carefully, and I have drawn up an amendment which couples not more than two counties together, leaving the larger counties to constitute a single judicial district, and I believe that the object which we are all seeking will be accomplished. If it shall be found in a year hence that these districts are not sufficient, it is within the power and the jurisdiction of the legislature to create other districts.

Mr. Cardwell, of Jefferson: I do not desire to take up the time of the committee, but I do say that I heartily support the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher county (Dr. Parberry). I do not think that Jefferson county requires a separate judicial district. I hope to see the substitute offered by Dr. Parberry passed on any other substitute that is in the shape of economy.

Mr. Meyers, of Yellowstone: I desire to say one word, that is, that under this substitute of the gentleman from Meagher county, it seems to me that justice can be fully distributed in these various districts, and I will add that if it becomes necessary to form another judicial district, that the Legislature meets almost immediately after the adoption of this constitution, and if it is demonstrated that it is necessary they should have another district, then it will be very easy for the citizens of Jefferson county to secure a separate court. When we come to make up the estimates for running the state government per annum, we find that it will take about $320,000 to run the state government. The judicial system will consume about one-seventh or one-eighth of that amount, under this resolution if adopted. We find that the taxable property from the best information obtainable for the present year will probably reach eighty millions of dollars within the state. The Financial Committee will recommend that the taxes levied by the State shall not exceed three mills on the dollar which would produce a revenue of two hundred and forty thousand dollars. The balance of about eighty thousand dollars to keep the State running for one year would have to be made up from licenses and other sources. Now, it seems to me that we ought to start off from the bottom round of the ladder, start a judicial system at the very least, with the fewest number of judges that we can possibly get along with and conduct the business of the State properly; and if after an experience of one or two years, we find that we can increase the number, then we can proceed to increase them. Let us not start off at the top of the ladder and descend. Hence, I think, that the resolution of the gentleman from Meagher (Dr. Parberry) is nearer the right point to start at than any other that has been introduced, and that it would be wise on the part of this Convention to adopt that resolution and make that as a beginning. If we want to advance afterwards, why, we can create new districts, and even, if necessary, give each county a court.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) and a vote being had, the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question is now on the substitute of the gentleman from Meagher (Dr. Parberry), which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read the said substitute for the information of the Committee.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I offer an amendment to that section, that Jefferson county be added to the schedule proposed by the gentleman from Meagher (Dr. Parberry) as a separate district to be known as number 9.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill), and a vote being had, the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now recurs upon the substitute of the gentleman from Meagher (Dr. Parberry).

The Chair put the question on the said substitute of the gentleman from Meagher (Dr. Parberry), and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I desire to amend by making Deer Lodge the second judicial district and Silver Bow the third. It is a matter of no importance to the other counties, but I do that for the reason that ever since the territory has been organized that has been the second judicial district, and as a matter of the name and tradition, I desire to have the name retained.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would suggest to my friend from Deer Lodge that under this constitution, the language of the Scripture applies,

"All old things have passed away and behold all things have become anew." Laughter

The motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I hope this motion will not prevail. Silver Bow county has always been in the second judicial district ever since the county was created, and it was the first county seat of what is now Deer Lodge county; and if either one of the counties is entitled to the distinction, I think it is Silver Bow county.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson) and a vote being had, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge sent up an amendment which the Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 15 by striking out of line 1 the words "writs of error" at the beginning of the section and after the word "the" and before the word "decisions," insert "judgments, decrees and."

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, those words "writs of error" under our practice, are now obsolete, and under all the systems where the code practice is in vogue, there is no such thing known now as writs of error. The words have crept in there, I think, without proper consideration by the judiciary committee. The Committee took the old constitution, which was virtually taken from the Colorado reports. There they had writs of error, but in California, in New York and in this Territory, and in all the Territories that have code practice similar to ours, there is not such a thing known as writs of error. I ask any attorney in Montana if he could now under our practice code, get into the Supreme Court of this Territory by means of a writ of error? You might as well have added to Section 22 or Section 23 "Writs of error and appeals shall be allowed from justice courts" as to have a writ of error from our district courts now under our practice. Formerly, where common law practice and equity practice were separated, writs of error were taken upon questions of common law and appeals on questions of equity. Now in the sections which we have adopted and recommended, you will observe in Section 28 that there is a clause which provides that there shall be but one form of civil action and law and equity may be administered in the same case. Now, we have provided that there shall be but one form of action, and that both of those systems are incorporated in one; and under our practice we have to get into the Supreme Court by appeals and not by writs of error; so that under our law, and under all the code laws, this writ of error is not a correct term and I will ask any attorney in this convention again, if it would be possible for him to get into the Supreme court by a writ of error. So I say that that word writ of error should be stricken out and the words "decrees and decisions" inserted. These are the words that are used in the New York practice for providing for the review of cases in the Supreme court on appeal. There may be some attorneys that will argue that the words "decisions" covers it all, but I do not think so and so I have amended it to conform to the practice.

Mr. J. K. Toote, of Lewis & Clarke: In the absence of the chairman of the judiciary committee, I simply desire to make one observation. The argument of the gentleman from Deer Lodge evidently proceeds upon the theory that the practice which now obtains in this Territory will ultimately obtain in the State. The last legislative assembly of this Territory provided for a Code Commission charged with the duty and responsibility of reporting to the first legislative assembly of the state of Montana a code. I do not know and cannot tell what kind of a code may be presented by the Code Commission, or what the legislative assembly of the state will adopt, but certain it is, however, that if they do not provide for taking cases to the supreme court by a writ of error, those words cannot possibly do any harm in the constitution. If they remain there, it will be within the province of the legislative assembly to provide that method of getting cases into the supreme court of the state. If they are stricken out, it will be impossible to do so. It strikes me as a member of the judiciary committee, in the absence of the Chairman, that the words ought to remain there. They cannot possibly do any harm.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend Section 23, so that it will read "Writs of errors and appeals shall be allowed, &c."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: Now, Mr. President, if it is proper that those words should be in the other section because we do not know what the Code Commission is going to do, I say it is proper that they should be added here, "writs of error and appeals shall be allowed from justice courts," because we know no more about what this Code Commission will do about justice courts than about district courts, and to be consistent, I move those words should be inserted.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to inquire of my friend if he ever knew a code in any State of the Union, or any system of practice which authorized a writ of error from a justice court.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I say that under the other section that there is no such thing known in Montana as writs of error, and I am sure that the California system will be adopted by us, and if so, it introduces an obsolete word in the wording of the section, and has just as much force here as it has in the other section.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment to Section 29.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) offers the following amendment. Strike out of Section 29 all of section after line 10 and insert the following: "$1000 per annum each." To which the following amendment is now offered.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 29 of article on judiciary as follows: Strike out all of that part of said section after the word "each" in the 10th line, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Until otherwise provided by law, the salaries of the several district judges shall be $1000 each per annum." Offered by Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone.

Said motions were both seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I offer an amendment to Section 29.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: The only difference I can see between the two amendments, is that one reads "per annum each," and the other reads "each per annum."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Collins of Cascade sent up an amendment.

The Clerk re-read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) as follows: Strike out of Section 29 all of section after line 10 and insert the following "$1000 per annum each."

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I do not think that if we adopt this amendment, it will make that section intelligible.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: There is another amendment pending which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: I move to amend by striking out "$1000" and insert "$3500." Offered by Mr. Collins of Cascade.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: I would like to ask if that would include mileage?

The Chairman: It is not apparent on the face of the amendment.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: The inquiry has just been made as to whether these salaries were intended to cover mileage. I think that is an important question to be settled because, possibly, if mileage might not be allowed, the salary might in some cases be considered small; if mileage were allowed, it might in some cases be very large because the mileage received without much outgo of money might be very large. Therefore, I think the question of mileage ought to be settled here while the salaries are being fixed. The next section says, "No officer shall receive any compensation for or on account of his office except the salary provided by law." That might or might not be held to cover mileage, but in this age of public conveyances and public conveniences for traveling—the age of passes, &c.—I think this question ought to be settled when we fix the amount of salaries to be paid so that we can vote intelligently with reference to the compensation. A judge might receive $5000 and his mileage in fact might bring it up to $6000; or if he did not have mileage it might reduce it $500 or so; and for the purpose of passing upon that question, if an amendment is in order, I will offer one.

The Chairman: The gentleman's amendment is not in order at this time.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I think there is another question that lies back of the wise suggestion of my friend from Lewis & Clarke county, and that is whether he makes the suggestion as to mileage with the view that it is possible that these generous railroad corporations may furnish all the judges with passes and whether they are to credit them up to the State or not. If not, why, there should certainly be some provision made for their actual traveling expenses, to say the least.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I hope the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade will not prevail. Now, $3500, as proposed by his amendment, is not sufficient compensation and will not induce a competent judge to run for that office. I do not believe that any district in this State will be able to procure a competent judge even for $4000. Now, there is no economy in cutting down the wages or salary of the man who occupies so important a position as judge of a district court. It is very important, on the other hand, that we get the most efficient and competent lawyers in the territory to accept those positions. The days of "carpet-bag" rule will be forever abandoned, and while we have had some of the most excellent gentlemen here under territorial administration we know that we cannot get competent native talent, as a rule, to accept these positions. Heretofore, we have had to accept those that were sent out here by the different administrations at Washington, because lawyers do not get such fees in the East—the cost of living is less—and a man will come out here and accept a position from the State that would be refused by our local lawyers. I am in favor of putting good lawyers into these positions, men who are competent and men who are efficient; men who have excellent ability and who will perform the duties of their office in a capable and prompt manner. We know very well that a judge may delay the business of a court to such an extent, even in one session as to absorb several times the amount of his salary. We have a State here with a capital of over a hundred millions of dollars, and I protest against the state of Montana offering to put men upon the benches of this state and pay them the paltry sum of $3500. I believe in economy; I believe in retrenchment wherever we can retrench and save the expenditure of money in every way possible; but I believe it is a mistaken policy; I believe that it would be penny-wise and pound-foolish to attempt to select men and induce them to take the bench in this state on that salary. Gentlemen who have been in business know full well that in order to get good help we are obliged to pay good wages, and it is impossible, in my opinion, to get lawyers in this Territory to accept those positions who are capable of administering the duties of that office, at the salary named or contemplated in the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I do not take exactly the same view of it that the gentleman from Silver Bow does. In the first place I would like to have $5000 lawyers on the bench in the nisi prius courts. If the gentleman in his own business affairs has an important case to try he might find a lawyer to attend to it for $250, but he would not be likely to employ him but rather would employ one that he would have to pay $500 or a $1000. He has the selection; and if we could select in the same way so far as our judiciary is concerned, I would say Amen to it; I would say increase the salary above even $4000. If we can get $5000 men on the district bench it would pay the State of Montana to have $5000 men there instead of $2500 or $3000 men. But that is not the thing. We cannot select our judges on the same basis as you business gentlemen can employ your attorneys. We have in Montana Territory, and always have had on the bench in the first place $2600 men until about eight years ago Congress increased it to $3000. How many eminent gentlemen have there been in Montana in the last twenty years who have been willing to sacrifice themselves for $2600 and $3000 a year for those positions? Now, then, sir, if these gentlemen are willing to sacrifice themselves for that price, and some of them have been very competent and good men on the bench, and so competent that they will in all human probability go upon the bench again—then if they are $3000 men we are going to get them for $4000. Those who go upon the Supreme bench will probably be men who have accepted these positions for $3000. If we can carry it out in practice as in theory I would be in favor of pulling the salaries up to a price where we could secure the most competent men; but I am so well satisfied that we cannot do that, that I believe we would be giving a higher price than the men themselves would ask for those services—in other words, that we will get $3000 men for whom we will have to pay $4000. For that reason I support the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade. Not, sirs, but what I believe some of them would make less money than that, they can make no more because the salary on the bench of $2500 is equivalent to $4000 in practice, because a man's expenses will run up to that much. So, taking all these things into consideration, I am disposed to support the proposition of the gentleman from Cascade, not but what I believe in paying $4000 and even $5000 to men on the bench; it would pay to do so—it would pay to have men of that caliber as are judges on the nisi prius and Supreme benches; but if we can get them for less, then let us not pay more than they ask themselves.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I would like to see the gentleman carry his argument to its logical conclusion and introduce a resolution not to pay over $1000. I am satisfied we can get judges for $1000 if we have a mind to accept that kind of talent.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I think that an increase of $500 over the amount paid at present is entirely sufficient for the beginning of our expenses as a state. Now, if the gentleman from Silver Bow had the selection of the men to serve as the judges of the County courts and the Supreme courts, and had the power in him to compel those people whom he selected to serve, I would be heartily in favor of paying them $4000, $5000 or $6000. But we cannot get the material to serve in those positions. The lawyers who make salaries ranging from $10,000 to $20,000 a year will not take those positions even at $5000 or $6000, and we have found by past experience that gentlemen who are entirely able and capable of filling the positions will fill them with salaries running from $2600 to $3000. It seems to me if there is anything in this word economy that has been preached here, that here and now is the time to strike at the root of extravagance and begin at economy; and we can only do it by making the salaries of all of our officers not only judicial but all others, not low, but so reasonable that we will get the best talent obtainable for the positions.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: This is a very important question and I hardly agree with some of the arguments advanced. I believe we will get exactly what we pay for in the way of judges, the same as in any other positions. I believe that we pay our money and take our choice. I believe if we pay $3000 we will get $3000 men; if we pay $5000 we will get $5000 men. Now, take the gentleman from Deer Lodge. I know myself from what I have heard him say a great many times that if he gets a very small fee he takes a very small interest in the case. (Laughter) He neither does himself nor his client justice when he gets a very small fee. Now, Mr. Chairman, we work exactly upon the same principle. If you give him $4000 or $5000, he will take more pride in doing his work—more pride in filling that position—more cheerfulness, and he will feel that he is being paid for what he does. You give a man $4 a day and he will do more than a man to whom you give $3, and I believe the same rule will apply to the judges. I believe now that the best thing we can do for the people of Montana is to give $4000. I am in favor of more than that, but that appears to be the motion before the Convention, and I am in favor of decidedly of $4000, and I therefore hope the substitute of Mr. Collins will not prevail. The gentleman from Deer Lodge County maintains that we will get the same talent for $3000, as if we paid $4000. Now, then, Mr. Chairman, we will shut out a certain character of men, because they are $3000 and $4000 and $5000 men; when you pay $3000, you shut out all those who are not willing to work for that but there are men who work for that, and as my friend here says you can get men to work for $4000. You get the character of men you pay for. You can get men to fill these offices for $4000; I have no doubt about it at all. But we cannot afford to have poor judges. It is for the interest of everybody that we should have good judges. It will prevent the accumulation of the Supreme court business if we have good msi prius judges—men who study up their cases before deciding them, and by so doing avoiding unnecessary appeals to the Supreme Court. But if you get men who are incompetent or men who do not believe that they are sufficiently paid, the result will be that the Supreme court will be crowded with business just as it is in California; and the way to avoid that is to get good, competent msi prius judges who will do the work well and who will satisfy everybody that their rulings are correct. As I said, that will cut off unnecessary appeals, and I hope the motion will not prevail.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I just desire to say a word in reply to the gentleman from Cascade. It occurs to me that his argument in favor of economy is rather inconsistent in this, that he labored here strenuously to have a provision put into this constitution for a judge in every county making sixteen judges. The Judiciary Committee reported a judicial system with twelve judges. At twelve judges with a salary aggregating from $3000, up to $4000, as reported in the report of the Committee that cost to the state for the salaries of those judges would have been $41,500. Under the present system if the judges are paid $4000, each the entire amount of their salaries is $32,000. Now, I submit that that was one of my reasons for favoring the cutting down of the number of judges, so as to get good men to do the work and then increase the salary and put them all on an equal footing, so that there might be no gradation among the judges. I should think one district judge ought to stand on the very same footing with, every other district judge, and it appears to me that $4000, for such material as we ought to be able to put on the bench here is certainly very low compensation.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. Chairman, one word in reply to the remarks of my illustrious and beloved friend Mr. Middleton. In advocating the necessity of able and efficient judges I agree with him fully, but he made one remark that horrified me and that was this—that judges like all other men would work for the pay they got, if a judge was paid a small salary he would shirk his duties—he would not do any more than he was paid for. Now, if we elect a judge we want an honest man, and it is perfectly abhorrent to every sense of justice to think that a man who is elected to the district court who swears to do his duty to the fullest extent would purjuee himself, I cannot believe any such thing.

Mr. Joyes of Jefferson: I merely desire to say in regard to the cost of these judges, that the gentleman from Custer says it would come to $41,000. According to my calculation it would amount to $39,500. Now, it is proposed to abolish three of these districts, or rather to provide only for nine instead of twelve and give them $4000 apiece after we have decided that in the interests of economy we have got to cut off these districts. Now, it is proposed to give the judges $4000, a piece and I do not see where the economy comes in; that will cost at nine judges $32,000. We only save then about $7,500, by striking off these other four districts. I do not think that that is economy. I believe the proposition of the gentleman from Cascade to pay them $3,500, is sufficiently liberal. I believe that if we are going to act here upon the principle that we should have an economical administration of justice, then we ought to adopt the proposition of the gentleman from Cascade and not the one of the gentleman from Silver Bow, that we pay them $4000. We are losing in efficiency and speediness in the administration of justice by adopting this system. Now, gentlemen here seem to have been very well satisfied with the system of district judges which we have had here for so many years. We have got able and learned judges for $3000 a year, who transacted the business not only of the district court but of the Supreme court of the state, and I do not see if that is so why that should not apply with equal force to this same proposition. If we can get good judges as they say they have done then I do not see why we cannot get a district judge that would be satisfactory for $3500, per year instead of paying him $4000. I think that we should not adopt this proposition to pay $4000, a year. We should adopt the proposition of the gentleman from Cascade to pay $3,500, per year, if we really mean it when we say we are reducing these districts from twelve to nine in the interest of economy.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Again I find myself compelled to disagree with my good friend Mr. Collins. Now, I think Mr. Clark sounded what may be said to be the key-note of the state government, and that is we want efficient men, and I believe if we need efficient men anywhere it is certainly on the bench—men who by reason of their legal ability and character and standing command respect, so that when a man goes into court he may feel that he will get justice. Now, it is too often the case in some of our lower courts, and any one who has had any experience will bear me out in the assertion, that we feel that it is just a toss up of a penny which way the case will go. We know that they are not competent to weigh the evidence, neither by experience nor education. Now, I believe in the matter of a district judge that certainly we should have the very best talent obtainable, and I believe if you place the salary at a living figure there will be men who will make some sacrifices to accept that office because it carries with it certainly a great deal of honor, and having come from the bench—stepped down from the bench—it gives men a certain standing and prestige in a community that they did not have before. But if you fix the salary as Mr. Collins proposes it seems to me you place it beneath the dignity of the best men in the legal profession. And right on this point I want to say that I have made up my mind so far as in my power to establish a schedule of salary for all of our state officers that will command men of ability and character. I believe it is economy to do so—as Mr. Clark well says economy in this direction as in every other avenue of life. And one other point I want to call your attention to; the matter needs no argument and I just simply want to call your attention to it. We are fixing the salaries as I understand it which cannot be changed at the next session of the legislature, or at some succeeding session, but in order to change this grading of salary it will necessitate a change in the constitution; am I not right? (A member: No.)

I am not right; but in any event we are fixing the salaries to remain for some time at least; and I for one, as I said before, believe in fixing the salary at such a figure that we will command the very best talent in the profession.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: It seems to me that the key-note has not been struck yet; if the judges were to be appointed by the Governor then the argument would hold; but we have the right to elect our judges, and we all know that the race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong but the best rustler gets ahead of us all. (Laughter.) And how often will it be and how often has it been that the poorest and most incompetent man has been elected; and I hold that if talent such as we have had to represent us here for the past twenty years—people generally have been satisfied with it—it has been the average talent in the Territory—and if they refuse to act for us now there are plenty more back in the States that will come out here; and I do say that while I am in favor of paying a competent judge and paying him well, there are two sides to the question, and those who have to pay the fiddler have a right to dance once in awhile. (Laughter.) If it were left to a vote of the people of this Territory I am sure they would not pay over $3,500, and I am sure they would get good judges. I would like to see this mileage question settled one way or another before we take a vote on this.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I believe that judges are hired the same as you can buy merchandise or any other commodity. I do not believe the gentleman from Jefferson (Mr. Joyce) will take issue with me on that proposition. I believe he is a smoker, and I do not believe when he goes into a cigar store he buys two cigars for five cents. If there is a box of cigars which he can buy at the rate of eight for a dollar, and another box alongside of it which he can purchase fifteen or twenty for a dollar, I believe he would take the eight for a dollar. It is the same way in the selection of judges—the same way in buying any article of merchandise. Now, so far as the salary is concerned it is not too high at $4000. It has been said that it is impossible to get a good lawyer to leave his practice and take to the bench for less than $4000; and I am in favor so far as the mileage question is concerned, of leaving that matter as it is unless it is in doubt; and if the matter is deemed to be in doubt on that proposition, I am in favor of making it definite by allowing the judges mileage in addition to the $4000. Now, so far as the constituency of the gentlemen in this convention is concerned, I do not believe that the majority of the voters of this Territory desire cheap judges and cheap decisions. We have had enough of that in other states and other territories. I do not know about this Territory but I do know, as well as every lawyer who has practiced at the bar of this Territory, that you cannot get good, competent judges to take the positions for less than $4000. Now, in regard to the instance that my friend from Meagher County cites with reference to importing judges from the States; judges are like other articles of merchandise which come out here from the States—there is a great deal of freight on them, and all character of merchandise commands a higher price in Montana than it does in Minnesota or the other states, simply because they have to pay a higher rate of freight. The same rule would apply to judges. I am not in favor of returning to the old carpet bag system of importing judges or any other officer to fill the offices of the new state of Montana, and I am decidedly in favor of the proposition of $4000, and on this question of mileage I am in favor of allowing the judge mileage.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I dislike to take a position contrary to that of the Judiciary Committee in this matter, but the more I have heard of the arguments presented here to-day, the more it seems to me that at this first election, the first two years provided for under this constitution that $3500, ought to be a sufficient salary for the payment of these judges. We will have to submit our work to the people of this Territory for ratification, and if we desire to meet with popular favor we have got to be circumspect so far as the amount of taxes are concerned which are to be entailed upon the people. Now, it is generally understood and believed that any sort of a constitution that is granted by this Convention would be ratified by the people of this Territory. It is barely possible that we may be deluding ourselves in that respect. As has been suggested here, the judges of the district courts of the Territory of Montana, four in number, have transacted the entire business of this Territory, and in addition to that the business of the Supreme Court of the Territory, holding two terms annually, they have done this for a salary of $3000 a year. We now propose to make eight districts—to subdivide that business up between eight different judges. In addition to releasing them from this large amount of business—of one-half of the amount—we have taken away from them the business of the Supreme court of the state, leaving eight judges to attend to the business of the district courts and an independent tribunal to attend to the business of the Supreme Court. By the method proposed by the gentleman from Cascade we will have saved $4000; of course it is not much, but if we save it all along the line as we proceed in the formation of the constitution, it will be of that much benefit to the people of the future state of Montana. I think it is worth something outside of a money consideration for a man to occupy the honorable position of a district bench in this state during its formative period for the first two years. The constitution provides that these salaries shall exist until otherwise provided by law. It requires no change in the constitution to regulate these salaries; and I believe after hearing the discussion of this matter that $3,500, per annum is enough.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: The Committee of the Judiciary discussed this matter at some length. The proposition originally offered was a much higher rate than what is now proposed. If I mistake not I was the mover of that resolution in the committee. It fixed the salaries of the judges at $3,000 per annum. I will ask the members of this Convention to look over the history of their country and see if they do not find that the gentlemen who occupy the Supreme bench of the United States receive very much less salary than many of the practicing lawyers. It is not simply a matter of dollars and cents, Mr. Chairman, but the gentleman who goes upon the bench has a reputation to sustain. I know, that in Massachusetts, Kentucky, Illinois, I might even say Montana to-day, that it is a matter with them of public duty; it is a matter of reputation; it is something to them to go into history with their decisions; not that they have so much pride in simply occupying the positions, but that they can in the course of the administration of justice leave a name in history that is of more value than the mere matter of pride in holding the position. You take the judges of the Supreme Court of the United States to-day and perhaps any one of them will make more money at the practice of his profession than on the bench. There are men who have gone down in history that were distinguished as lawyers that were willing to accept the positions, and I believe now that there is one matter, Mr. Chairman, in the discussion of this question that we have somewhat overlooked. It is not a matter of demagoguery, but this question is really a matter of dollars and cents to the people of Montana. We want to be careful in beginning this state government and give at least an example to the people in the matter of economy. We are here to-day as the representatives of the sovereign people of Montana, to formulate a government that they will approve of, and to lay down the foundations of a system that they will vote for; and if we put in our constitution those things that they object to, it will so much weaken the beginning of our state institutions. My opinion is that we can get the very best talent in Montana, as perhaps we have to-day upon the Supreme bench, at $35000 a year. These gentlemen now occupying the position are certainly worthy of our respect; they are the equal of the average lawyer, certainly, of the Territory of Montana; and I see no reason why we should burden ourselves with unnecessary taxation. Of course I want to see the office dignified. The reason I was opposed to the proposition of the gentleman here of having one judge for each county was that we cannot get gentlemen of that learning and integrity that would give that distinction and standing to the courts that we could by adopting the different system that has been adopted so far in the committee. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the amount proposed by the gentleman from Cascade is sufficient compensation for a good lawyer in Montana to warrant him in accepting the judgeship. I think we would have no trouble in getting gentlemen to take that amount, and we will have on our district benches judges for whom, if we cannot be proud of them, we will have at least utmost respect.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: Just one word. The remarks of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) might be misleading in this, that he states, or rather suggests, that when eight judges are appointed or elected instead of the four that are now administering justice in this Territory, the work would be divided up, and that they would only have half as much to do. Now, we must take into consideration that the calendars in every district court are behind. In Silver Bow County, I think for more than a year the civil cases have been behind—at the last term of court I believe they only reached three or four civil cases—and justice is being withheld by reason of the dockets being so far behind. So I take it that when the state shall elect district judges, they will all have plenty to do, and as much as they can do. As to the question of economy, as suggested by the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Callaway) I believe that the people of this Territory simply want to get value for their money; they are simply economical when it is prudent or judicious to be so. They do not desire to get an article except it be the very best. Every merchant in this Territory knows that he can only sell the very best merchandise in this country. He does not bring a piece of shoddy goods out to this Territory because he knows nobody will buy it. Now, I take it the people of this Territory are anxious that they shall get the very best services possible in the administration of judicial affairs, and with all due deference to the gentlemen upon the bench in this Territory—they are able lawyers and faithful and competent public servants in every respect—but I say that considering the responsibility of the position which those gentlemen occupy, that the salaries that they now get are not commensurate with the duties and responsibilities of the position. I believe that the people of this Territory are in favor of securing the best talent. If this question is to be placed on the score of economy, then we can get lawyers here for $1000, or $1500 a year; but we do not want that kind of men. Let us pay good prices and get good services; and if it were necessary to get the best talent in the Territory to pay even $10,000 a year, I believe it would be better for the Territory on the score of economy alone.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to say simply a word. I am satisfied that for a district judge in Lewis & Clarke County of the required ability to satisfy the people, he should have a salary of $1,000 a year. He may have more work to do than the judges of other districts, for a judge holding the position he will on the bench can do nothing else. Now, it is not the amount of work by which the salary is to be measured, because all of his time is taken so long as he can do nothing else. It is the quality of the judge. One district needs just as good legal ability as another; and therefore if you have a district system or a county system—a judge for each county—there ought to be just as able a judge in Dawson County as in Lewis & Clarke, although he would not have one-tenth of the work to do. Therefore I see no reason for making a distinction in salary; and if the salary in Lewis & Clarke or Silver Bow should be $4000, I know of no reason for making it less in any other district; but I do desire that whatever the salary shall be, it shall cover every dollar that goes into the judge's pocket as salary or emolument of any kind.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I will ask the indulgence of the house for a moment or two. I have heard a good deal said on the floor here today about the ability we should get in the judiciary; that is very true, we often have a diversity in different kinds of ability. Some had the ability to draw their salaries; some again have had the ability, as the report goes, to get away with more bad whiskey than most anybody else could; some again had the reputation for playing higher stacks of blue cheeks than another. Now, if that is the kind of ability we get I am opposed to paying for it; I think that the gentleman from Cascade has fixed the salary about right, but there is one point that I would like to see fixed before we go further, and that is the point in regard to paying mileage. Now, some of our judges—and I want to say that some of them had the ability to get away with more mileage than any other person ever known or heard of—the reason I object to a judge going into another county as a district is this, our county seat is sixty-five miles from Bozeman; our district judge has been residing at Bozeman. At the last term of court he brought in a bill against our county for six hundred and thirty-four miles from Bozeman to Virginia City and back. Now, that was just the reason why I wanted mileage included in this salary so that they cannot draw it. I do not care what they fix the salary at, whether $3500 or $4000, but I want to cut off this little perquisite. Six hundred and thirty-four miles from Virginia City to Bozeman and back. Sixty-five miles is what the starouters get. Now, our county commissioners cut off fifty miles for his going around by the way of Garrison and up to Dillon, when he could have gone up by the way of the Montana Central and saved fifty miles. I will vote for the proposition of the gentleman from Cascade because I believe we can get as good ability for that as for any other.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: The Judiciary Committee upon a thorough investigation of this matter decided that two judges should have $4000, one judge $3500 and eight judges $3000. Now, certainly $3500 would be a very high compensation for all the judges, and the members of the legal profession who have spoken here all favor this report recommending a compensation of only $3000, for a majority of the judges. I believe that if this section passes and the next section passes that the construction will be that there will be no mileage. I do not see in the world how a judge can receive any mileage under a reasonably fair construction of the succeeding section.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I am a little surprised at the course of this discussion. The very gentlemen who are opposed to this salary and who are moving for a reduction I have heard boast of the resources of Montana, boast of a $100,000,000 of taxable property here, boast of her rich agricultural resources, boast of her mines, the richest in the world, boast of the pure air of Montana and the rich grasses that make the beef and the wool grow; and yet now they are coming in here and quibbling about a few dollars to pay to good officers. Now, I lived in one state—perhaps some of my friends here may call it a rotten borough—but I will say that in that state there are people just as good as the people in Montana, as intelligent, as cultivated people, and at the adoption of the constitution of that state there was taxable property only of about forty millions of dollars. Here we boast of one hundred millions. In that state there were three Supreme judges at the first election, and my recollection is that there were nine district judges. The salaries of the Supreme judges was $7000 a year, and scarcely a district judge had less than $4000, and some of them as high as $7000. Now, if Nevada with her population could pay such salaries—and I will say for them that the Supreme court decisions of Nevada which are now printed are respected everywhere, and I cannot say as much for the Supreme court decisions of Montana; for if you are to believe some of the criticisms which I have heard lawyers of Montana make they are some of the meanest decisions ever written—and yet that is the character of judges you want to force upon us now. I am in favor of higher salaries and I do say that $4000 and $5000 is not too much to pay our judges, and if you do that we will have decisions of the Supreme court of Montana which will command as much respect as the decisions of the Supreme court of Nevada.

The Chairman put the question on the amendment, and a division being called for, the motion was carried by a vote of 32 to 29.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The amendment of the gentleman is not quite german to this portion of the section.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I offer the following amendment.

The Chair: The Clerk will read the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: This is to settle the question of mileage or no mileage.

The Clerk read as follows: To be added to section 29: "No state or judicial officer shall in any case receive or be paid any mileage or any sum for traveling expenses except upon filing vouchers showing the amount claimed for mileage or expenses of traveling which have been actually paid by him, accompanied by affidavit that it was necessary in the discharge of official duty to travel the number of miles charged for."

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: A person receiving mileage can receive no more than he has actually paid. He cannot speculate on his mileage. That does not provide for mileage at all. It only limits the amount received in case mileage is provided.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It seems to me if this matter is carefully considered that a provision should be made for mileage. Now, take it in the districts where the county constitutes a district there would be no necessity for traveling at all; the court will be at the county seat. Take it in other districts composed of three counties, where the judges are required to hold four terms of court in each county, his actual necessary traveling expenses will be considerable, and there certainly should be a provision inserted here. I am in favor of the proposition of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that it should not be in the nature of mileage but in the nature of the actual necessary traveling expenses; but it seems to me in a district where the judges must necessarily travel from one county to another, that in order to make their salaries equal to those where they have no traveling at all that there should be some provision for the actual necessary traveling expenses.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: The point is simply this, that in no case a person shall receive back more than he pays out.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and a division being called for the motion was carried by a vote of 40 to 9.

The Chairman: The question now recurs upon the original amendment of the gentleman from Yellowstone as amended by the action of the Committee, which is to strike out and insert. The question is to strike out after certain words and insert the salary of $3,500.

The Chair put the motion on the amendment of the gentleman from Yellowstone, and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the amendment to the section of the gentleman from Custer.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend section 29 by inserting after the words "Supreme Court" at line 3, the words "and the District Judges"; also strike out all the words after the word "state" in line 4, to and including the word "taxation" in line 8, so as to read: "The salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court and the salary of each District Judge shall be paid by the state."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to say here in support of that motion that I believe it to be perfectly right and proper for the state to pay out of its treasury the salary of all the judges. I take it that all these judges, both the judges of the Supreme and District courts, are state officers. It is apparent to everyone, and a well known fact, that in the administration of justice, more than one-half of the time of our district courts is taken up in the trial of criminals for offenses against the laws of the Territory. It is also well known that the Territory is compelled to pay its officers, such as sheriff, clerk of the court and others; it is compelled to pay the witnesses and the jurors, which amount to a great deal more than one-half of the whole expense of the court. The United States has been paying the judges of the Territorial districts their salaries, and I see no good reason why the salaries of these judges should not be paid out of the state treasury. True, it will be said it makes no difference. It is like putting the hand into one pocket and taking out money and putting it in the other. I do not look at it in that way; but even if I did these men are officers provided for by the constitution, and in the strictest sense of the word are state officers and their salaries should be paid out of the state treasury by warrants drawn therefrom. We have in our small county enough to pay for punishing criminals for offenses against the laws of the state. There is no reason why we should saddle the whole expense, or even one-half of it; and I think it is an act of justice to the counties—it will simplify the method of procedure and method of doing business to provide here that these state officers in common with other state officers should be paid out of the state treasury instead of the treasury of the different counties. It will simplify the manner of doing business. Here where we have three counties in one district we have got to divide it up and send around to the different counties and collect the pay for the attorneys and judges. I think we should not be incumbered by any such burdensome method of doing business, and for that reason I have offered this amendment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. Chairman, I believe the judges should be paid by the state for another reason, that the matter of their salaries should be as far removed as possible from the people they are serving. It is certainly a state office. There cannot be any doubt about that, whether they are within the boundaries of a county or within the boundaries of four or five counties; and it seems to me it would add dignity to the court itself to remove as far as possible the matter of paying the salaries from the people of the county. Now, another consideration is this: in some counties of Montana the warrants are worth only 60 or 75 cents, and in other counties they are worth par. I believe it would be better, better for the officer himself, better for the state and better for the system, that the state should pay all the salaries.

The Chairman: The effect of the amendment which has been read would be to strike out of the section the words "In effect that the counties shall pay portions of the salaries of the judges, and that the state shall pay the entire amount of the judicial salaries."

The Chair then put the question, and a division being called for the motion was carried by a vote of 38 to 16.

Mr. Joyes, of Jefferson: I desire, Mr. Chairman, to move to strike out the word "five" in the 9th line and insert the word "four"; so that the line shall read: "Judges of the Supreme Court shall be paid a salary of four thousand dollars per annum each."

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: After the adoption of that amendment, Mr. Chairman, it will be necessary to strike out of the section all after the word "state" in line 4 up to and including the word "taxation" in line 8.

The Chair: The motion now is, in line 9 strike out the words "Five thousand dollars per annum each," and insert the words "Four thousand dollars each."

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend that by inserting the words "six thousand dollars."

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The Chair will follow the custom in Legislative bodies in making appropriations and put the question on the smallest sum first.

Mr. Joyes, of Jefferson: I desire simply a word upon that proposition. We have decided here that the district judges shall receive only $3,500 per annum. Now, I believe that these district judges will have a great deal more work to do than the judges of the Supreme court. I know that in the district—I don't remember the number of it—but the district constituting Jefferson, Beaverhead and Madison, that that judge is going to have a great deal more to do than any judge of the Supreme court, and I think that if $3,500 is a reasonable amount to pay the judge of that district or any other district in this Territory, then $4,000 is enough to pay a judge of the Supreme court. Now, we know that we have had able judges as judges of the Supreme court of this Territory, Congress has only paid them $3,000 per year. Those judges not only attended to the duties of judges of the appellate court, but they also attended to the duties of the district judges, and there were only four of them where we will now have eight. I do not believe that the judges of the Supreme Court will be occupied more than two months out of the entire year, and I believe $4,000 will be a large salary for the amount of work they will have to do; I believe in the interests of economy, as we are now about to start out on this state government, that we should look after all these matters: we should keep down all these expenses, and we should not pay several thousand dollars a year where there is no necessity, and where we can get judges to do the work for less and just as good judges, too. We have got now an able Supreme court in this state and we are only paying $3,000 a year; and I believe that if $3,500 is just and commensurate for a district judge, that $4,000 will be plenty for the Supreme judges. That is as much as they get in a great many of the states of this Union where they have more to do than in this state, and I think the amendment I have proposed here ought to be adopted.

The Chairman stated the amendment.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment for the reason assigned by the gentleman from Jefferson County. I do not believe the labors of the Supreme court judges for a number of years yet to come will require over three or four months' work at the farthest; that would be amply sufficient. When the first constitution of Montana was framed five years ago the salaries of the Supreme court judges in that constitution were fixed at $3,600. Now I do not see any reason why a material change should occur from that time to this, where the cost of living has very materially decreased from that time to this, and the work and labor now would not be much more than it was then; and I think that $5,000 to the Supreme judges and $3,500 for the district judges, considering the amount of labor to be done, is not in proportion. I think $3,500 is amply sufficient for the district judges; it is equivalent to $4,000 to the practicing attorney. There is no expense whatever attached to it. I think we have as competent men on the bench now as we will in all human probability have on the Supreme bench of the state; and when we find those men willing to work for $3,000, I believe to give them one thousand dollars more would be a liberal and fair salary; it would not be parsimonious and in connection with the honor of the position we would secure competent men on the Supreme bench.

The Chair put the question and a division being called for the motion was carried by a vote of 32 to 31.

There being no further amendments to section 29, the Clerk read section 30, as follows: "No judge of the Supreme or District Court shall accept or receive any compensation, fee, perquisite or emolument for or on account of his office in any form whatever, except the salary provided by law."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move to insert after the word "fee" in line 2 the word "mileage," so that it will read "No judge of the Supreme or District court shall accept or receive any compensation, fee, mileage, perquisite or emolument for or on account of his office in any form whatever, except the salary provided by law."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I wish to offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer offers the following amendment which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Add to section 30 the following words: "together with actual necessary traveling expenses incurred in the discharge of official duty."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I understood the former motion was to add the word "mileage." It is not in the nature of mileage; it is actual traveling expenses.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Will the gentleman kindly define the meaning of the words "actual traveling expenses"?

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. Chairman, the expression "actual necessary traveling expenses" certainly ought to place the board of county commissioners, or whoever it might be that would audit the accounts, in a position where they would be able to determine the nature of the claim. The general acceptance of the term, I take it, is the distance actually traveled and the amount actually paid for that travel. It occurs to me that this convention does not want to provide a limit whereby certain of the district judges will be compelled to pay out perhaps three or four or five hundred dollars a year out of their salaries in order to get to the different places where they are obliged to hold courts; and it seems to me perfectly right that any public officer whose duty requires him to travel should be reimbursed for what he actually pays out. I am not in favor of a mileage prescribing a certain number of cents per mile; but he should be remunerated for what he actually and necessarily pays out in traveling from place to place in the discharge of his official duty.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I take a somewhat different view of this matter from what the gentleman from Custer does. It appears to me that the amendment which the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offered and which was adopted, left the whole matter to the Legislature, and I think that is the proper place for it. Now, what "actual expenses" mean should be defined, in my judgment. One man might think it necessary for him to have four or five drinks of whiskey or a dozen of cigars that another man might not think necessary; and I think it ought to be left to the Legislature. There are quite a number of members here who are strictly opposed to having anything come into the constitution that can safely be left in the hands of the Legislature, and I am one of them now in favor of leaving this matter to the Legislature. I think the grounds are already well enough covered.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer and the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to section 30, the Clerk read section 31 as follows: "Section 31. No judge, or clerk of the Supreme court, or of any district court, shall act or practice as an attorney or counsellor at law in any court of this state during his continuance in office.

There being no amendments to section 31, the Clerk read section 32 as follows: "Section 32. The Legislative Assembly may provide for the publication of decisions and opinions of the Supreme Court."

There being no amendments to section 32, the Clerk read section 33 as follows: "Section 33. All officers provided for in this article, excepting Judges of the Supreme Court, who shall reside within the state, shall respectively reside during their term of office in the District, County, Township, Precinct, City or Town for which they may be elected or appointed."

There being no amendments to section 33, the Clerk read section 34, as follows: "Section 34. Vacancies in the office of the Supreme or District Court or Clerk of the Supreme Court shall be filled by appointment, by the Governor of the State, and vacancies in the office of County Attorney, or Clerk of the District Court and Justices of the Peace shall be filled by appointment by the Board of County Commissioners of the County where such vacancy occurs. A person appointed to fill any such vacancy shall hold his office until the next general election, and until his successor is elected and qualified. A person elected to fill a vacancy shall hold office until the expiration of the term for which the person he succeeds was elected."

"There being no amendments to section 34, the Clerk read section 35, as follows: "Section 35. No Justice of the Supreme Court or District Judge shall hold any other public office while he remains in the office to which he has been elected or appointed."

There being no amendments to section 35 the Clerk read section 36, as follows: "Section 36. A cause in the District Court may be tried by a Judge pro tempore who must be a member of the bar, agreed upon in writing by the parties litigant, or their attorneys of record, approved by the court, and sworn to try the cause; and in such case any order, judgment or decree, made or rendered therein by such Judge pro tempore, shall have the same force and effect as if made or rendered by the court with the regular Judge presiding."

There being no amendments to section 36, the Clerk read section 37, as follows: "Section 37. Any Judicial officer who shall absent himself from the state for more than sixty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to offer the following amendment: After the word "bar" in the second line insert the words "of this state"; so that it shall read "a case in the district court may be tried by a judge pro tempore who must be a member of the bar of this state, &c."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I move that in section 9 the word "cause" be stricken out and the words "civil action" inserted therefor. I will just say that the word "cause" is rather ambiguous. It may be held that this includes a criminal action, whereas the plain intent of the section is that it should be limited to civil actions.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I move to insert in section 37, after the words "shall absent" that after the word "shall" and before the word "absent" the word "voluntarily" shall be inserted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared lost by a vote of 115 to 19.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I had an amendment to offer to section 16, at the time it was passed but neglected to put it in.

The Chair: The gentleman can go back by unanimous consent.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I object.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to offer an amendment to the first section defining the jurisdiction of the court.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke wishes to go back to section 1.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I object.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I supposed it was always in order.

The Chairman: No sir, the rule is that after paragraphs are passed they shall be considered adopted.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move the Committee do now arise and report progress with the amendments.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I wish to offer a section to be added to it and numbered section 38.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the section as offered.

The clerk read as follows: Section 38. No Judge of a district court nor of the Supreme court shall after the first day of July, 1890, be allowed to draw or receive any salary unless he shall take and subscribe an affidavit before an officer entitled to administer oaths that no cause in his court remains undecided that has been submitted for decision for the period of ninety days."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I am opposed to that motion. I know that it is incorporated in the California constitution, and from all I can learn it serves no good purpose whatever. I would rather trust to the honor of the judges to write and file their opinions and let them take their own time to it. I have never seen any cause for such a resolution, in all the experience of my life.

The chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to offer an additional section.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers the following additional section.

The Clerk read as follows: "Section 39. The House of Representatives shall have the power of impeachment by a vote of a majority of all the members elected. The Court for the trial of impeachments shall be composed of the President of the Senate and the Senators, two-thirds of the whole number elected being present. On the trial of any impeachment against the Governor the Lieutenant Governor shall not act as a member of the court. No Judicial officer shall exercise his office after articles of impeachment shall have been preferred to the Senate until he shall have been acquitted, and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the Senators elected. Judgment in the case of impeachment shall not extend farther than to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust or profit in this state; but the party impeached shall be liable to prosecution and punishment according to law."

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I object to the introduction of it.

The Chairman: On what ground?

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: On the ground that it is parliamentary law that you cannot put in as a substitute an additional section for what is really an amendment. This is really an amendment to Section I, and it is simply put in here under the guise of a different subject. It is not germane.

The Chairman: The Chair will be obliged to overrule the objection of the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I heard it argued here the other day, and I believe the gentleman from Cascade himself made use of an argument that struck me with some force, and that was so far as this question of impeachment is concerned it ought to be removed from political bodies. It is provided in this section that the impeachment shall be laid with the Senate, and I quite concur with the suggestion. But it seems to me that the amendment proposed by my colleague from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) puts this matter into the hands of the House of Representatives, which is the popular body, and which is more than likely to be a purely political and one-sided body as compared with the Senate of the State, which under the constitution for in all probability we will adopt the provision which has been reported from the Legislative Committee providing that certain senators shall hold over so that they do not all go out at one time and so that in all probability there would be at least a portion of the senate of the state which will hold over for the period of two years, and would not be subject to the criticism of representing any particular political excitement that might be on at the time of the impeachment. I think if it is desirable to relieve this from a political body as much as possible, so that it will not be controlled by political considerations, that this power of impeachment ought to rest with the Senate instead of the House of Representatives, a body which is elected every two years complete.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: It is the custom, and in all constitutions the impeaching body is the lower branch of the legislature. It is so in the United States government; it is so in every state. The senate sits as the court. Sometimes the judges of the Supreme court sit with the Senate. But this resolution removes it as far as possible from political influence by requiring a vote of two-thirds of the Senate to remove from office, although a majority of the House may prefer charges.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I misapprehend the scope of the amendment.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I merely want to call the attention of the Convention to the report of the Committee on legislative departments. There is a provision reported which I think exactly covers the case.

Reading "The House of Representatives shall have the sole power of impeachment. The concurrence of a majority of all the members shall be necessary to an impeachment. All impeachments shall be tried by the Senate, and when sitting for that purpose the senators shall be upon oath, etc. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall preside. No person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the senators elected."

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: As it has been reported by the committee I will withdraw my proposition.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I wish to offer an amendment as an additional section.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I object to any amendments going in. I will state that I do it for this purpose, because we are wasting a large amount of time in going over this thing in the Committee of the Whole, and in going over it again in Convention, as if it had never been gone over in the Committee of the Whole. It is a strange proceeding and in violation of all parliamentary usages. The Chairman of this comnittee offered an amendment to the rules, and the committee have not reported back, and we are consuming so much time. We go over all this thing in the convention again.

The Chairman: The Chair would hold that the Committee of the Whole was instituted in parliamentary bodies for the very purpose of affording the very widest scope to amendment and debate, and it holds that this section is in order and germane to the proposition.

The clerk read the section as offered by the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Hickman) as follows: "Section.....No court established by authority of this constitution shall have jurisdiction to hear, try or determine cases of divorce when the cause of complaint shall have originated outside of this state nor unless both the parties to the action were residents of the state at the time the cause of action occurred."

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the committee do now arise and report.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 21, being the article on Judicial Departments and have made certain amendments thereto. They beg leave to submit the report and the amendments to the Convention.

The President: You have heard the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole on Proposition No. 21 and if there be no objection the chairman will be allowed the requisite time in which to make a report.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move we do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move as an amendment the Convention take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. Fields of Park: Before that motion is put I would like to ask leave of absence until Friday at 4 o'clock.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused.

The Chair put the question on the motion to adjourn and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 14.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move to amend that we take a recess until 8 o'clock.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Madison and the same was declared carried and the Convention took a recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

Recess.

Evening Session, 8 p. m.

The Convention was called to order by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that the Convention take up the consideration of Proposition No. 21, as reported back from the Committee of the Whole.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Clerk has not yet made his report from the Committee.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I will withdraw my motion then.

Mr. Joy of Park: I move that this Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 14.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I hope that will not be done. The clerks have the material that we have been working on all the afternoon and we can go on and finish the Judicial schedule to-night.

Mr. Joy of Park: I withdraw my motion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole on the Article on Judiciary is now ready to make his report.

The President: The report of the chairman of the Committee of the Whole on Proposition No. 21, will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole beg leave to report that they have had under consideration Proposition No. 21, and return the same herewith with the accompanying amendments, and recommend that as amended the proposition do pase. Section 13 is amended to read as follows: "Until otherwise provided by law said districts shall be constituted as follows: First district, Lewis & Clarke County; second district, Silver Bow County; third district, Deer Lodge County; fourth district, Missoula County; fifth district, Beaverhead, Jefferson and Madison Counties; sixth district, Gallatin, Park and Meagher Counties; seventh district, Yellowstone, and Dawson Counties; eighth district, Choteau, Cascade, and Fergus Counties."

Section 29, is amended by inserting the words "and the district judges" after the words "supreme court" on the third line.

Also by striking out all of the words after the word "state" on the fourth line to and including the word "taxation" on the 8th line, so as to read "The salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court and the salary of each district judge shall be paid by the state."

Also by striking out all the section after line ten and inserting the words "thirty-five hundred dollars per annum each."

Also by adding thereto the following: "No state or judicial officer shall in any case receive or be paid any mileage or any sum for travelling expenses except upon filing vouchers showing that the amount claimed for mileage or expenses of travelling have been actually paid him, accompanied by affidavit that it was necessary in the discharge of official duty to travel the number of miles charged for."

Section 36 was amended by inserting after the word "bar" in line two the words "of this state."

Also by striking out the word "cause" on the first line and inserting in lieu thereof the words "civil action."

Signed MARTIN MAGINNIS, Chairman.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. President, Section 30 was also amended. After the word "tee" the word "mileage" was inserted on the recommendation of the gentleman from Custer.

The President: If there be no objection the clerk will make the correction.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I now move Mr. President, that Proposition No. 21, be put upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will proceed to read by sections. If any amendments are desired to be offered they will be considered from time to time as we proceed.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, in talking with a member of this Convention from Jefferson County I have come to the conclusion that I desire to renew the motion which I made in the Committee of the Whole to amend by striking out the word where it occurs in creating the district as composed of the Counties of Beaverhead, Jefferson and Madison—to strike out the word "Jefferson" and create the ninth district out of Jefferson County.

The President: That will be in order as the clerk reads the section.

The Clerk read section one of Proposition No. 21.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I arise to a parliamentary inquiry. Ought not the first action of this Convention be to take action upon the amendments recommended by the committee of the Whole

The President: It is proper, I presume, to consider the amendments, but the sections will be subject to amendment in Convention.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I think, Mr. President, that the motion I made was to take up the bill and adopt it as amended, and that would cover the ground.

The President: The Chair did not understand that the gentleman's motion covered the proposition to take up and adopt, and it is very properly suggested by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that some action ought to be taken.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: The first duty is to act upon the amendments submitted by the Committee, either as a whole or separately, and either to adopt or reject them.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Then I move that the report of the Committee of the Whole be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Will that have the effect of including the amendments?

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Yes, as I understand parliamentary usage.

The President: The Chair then understands that the motion of the gentleman will comprehend the adoption of all the amendments as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer and the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will now proceed to read section by section and the sections will be subject to further amendment.

The Clerk then read sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: There is a mistake in section 8, that I think was corrected before.

The President: To what line does the gentleman from Silver Bow allude?

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: Line 7. The Clerk read the word "members" which should be "numbers".

The President: If there be no objection the Clerk will make the correction.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers an amendment to Section 8 as follows: Amend section 8 by inserting after the word "years" in line 9 the words "after the first election as herein provided the judge oldest in commission shall be chief justice of the court, and if there be more than one commission of the same date, the court may select a chief justice from the judges holding the same."

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: The section seems to be in doubt as to who shall act as chief justice after the first election; that provides that the member holding the oldest commission shall be the chief justice.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I hardly think this amendment is necessary. The section provides that the chief justice first elected shall hold his office for three years; then a successor to him may be elected, and that seems to be as simple and as good a way as the one proposed by Mr. Winston. I do not think there is any ambiguity about it as to who will be the chief justice.

The President: The chair desires to state that there is no second to the amendment, and nothing before the Convention.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I second the amendment.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: It simply says that the chief justice, and in case of his absence the judge having the shorter term shall preside in his stead. I cannot see that it says there that the member who is elected for the shortest term is the chief justice. It seems to me it leaves it in doubt. That question was brought up when this section was discussed before.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: The section reads that the chief justice shall after the first election be elected for the term of three years, but there is no provision as to who his successor shall be. At the end of the three years it is understood one of these associate justices might be the chief justice, and that evidently needs some correction. I have not examined it carefully. It evidently leaves the matter in doubt, and I believe if it passes just as it is there will be ambiguity in it. I think the amendment as presented by the gentleman from Deer Lodge fully covers the case, and if it does change it, it simply provides that the man having the shortest term of office will go in as chief justice, and at the next election instead of electing a chief justice there will be a new judge. As it is now there is ambiguity.

Mr. Middleton of Custer called for the reading of the amendment.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I do not think there is any ambiguity in the section as reported by the committee. The matter was discussed in the committee and I think the understanding was that the chief justice should be elected for the term of three years, and the other judges one elected for five years, and the other for seven; the understanding of the committee was that thereafter at the expiration of the term of office of the chief justice a chief justice should then be elected for six years. So far as I am personally concerned I concur in the report of the committee, although I believe it to be the better ruling, as indicated by that amendment, that the oldest judge or the one whose commission dates back the farthest should be the chief justice. I know the rule in Michigan, where the judges are elected for eight years—four judges, one every two years—is that during the last two years of the judge's term on the bench he is chief justice; and I rather like that system; I presume that is the substance of that amendment; though so far as there being any ambiguity in the report of the Committee I do not think there is. The intention was that the chief justice should be elected by the people as chief justice to succeed the one who is elected whose term is fixed for three years.

The Chair put the question on the amendment and the same was declared carried.

The President: The clerk will read the section as amended.

The Clerk read section 8 as follows: "There shall be elected at the first general election provided for by this constitution one chief justice and two associate justices, who shall constitute the judges of the supreme court, and they shall hold their office until their respective successors are elected and qualified. The terms of office of said justices shall be designated on the ballots at the time of their election. The chief justice shall at said first election be elected for the term of three years, and said two associate justices one for the term of five years and one for the term of seven years; and after said first election one justice or more, if the legislative assembly shall increase the number to five shall be chosen every two years and the terms of said additional justices shall be fixed by law in such manner that at least one of said justices shall be elected every two years. After the first election as herein provided the judge oldest in commission shall be chief justice of the court, and if there be more than one commission of the same date the court may select the chief justice from the judges holding the same. The chief justice shall preside at all terms of the supreme court, and in case of his absence the judge having the shortest term to serve shall preside in his stead."

There being no further amendments to section 8 the clerk read section 9 as follows "Section 9. There shall be a clerk of the Supreme Court, who shall hold his office for the term of six years, except that the clerk first elected shall hold his office only until the general election in the year 1892, and until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be elected by the electors at large of the State, and his compensation shall be fixed by law, and his duties prescribed by law, and by the rules of the Supreme Court.

There being no amendments to section 9, the clerk read section 10, as follows: "Section 10. No person shall be eligible to the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, unless he shall have been admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the Territory of Montana, be at least thirty years of age, and a citizen of the United States, nor unless he shall have resided in said Territory or State at least two years next preceding his election.

There being no amendments to section 10, the clerk proceeded to read section 11, as follows: "Section 11. The District Courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases at law, and in equity, including all cases which involve the title or right of possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, and in all cases in which the debt, damage, claim or demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy exceeds fifty dollars; and in all criminal cases amounting to felony and all cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for; of actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer; of proceedings in insolvency; of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; of all matters of probate; of actions of divorce and for annulment of marriage, and of all such special actions and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for. And said courts shall have the power of naturalization and to issue papers therefor in all cases where they are authorized so to do by the laws of the United States. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in such cases arising in justices and other inferior courts in their respective districts as may be prescribed by law and consistent with this Constitution. Their processes shall extend to all part of the State—provided that all actions for the recovery of, the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real property shall be commenced in the county in which the real property, or any part thereof, affected by such action or actions, is situated. Said courts and the judges thereof shall have power also to issue, hear and determine, writs of mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, injunction and other original and remedial writs, and also all writs of habeas corpus, or petition by, or on behalf of, any person in actual custody in their respective districts. Injunctions, writs of prohibition, and habeas corpus, may be issued and served on legal holidays and non-judicial days.

There being no amendments to Section 11, the Clerk proceeded to read section 12, as follows: "Section 12. The State shall be divided into judicial districts in each of which there shall be elected by the electors thereof one judge of the District Court, whose term of office shall be four years, except that the district judges first elected shall hold their offices only until the general election in the year 1892, and until their successors are elected and qualified. Any judge of the District Court may hold court for any other district judge, and shall do so when required by law.

There being no amendments to Section 12, the Clerk proceeded to read Section 13, as follows: "Section 13. Until otherwise provided by law, said districts shall be constituted as follows: First District, Lewis & Clarke County; Second District, Silver Bow County; Third District, Deer Lodge County; Fourth District, Missoula County; Fifth District, Gallatin County; Sixth District, Jefferson County; Seventh District, Custer County; Eighth District, Beaverhead and Madison Counties; Ninth District, Park and Yellowstone Counties; Tenth District, Cascade and Meagher Counties; Eleventh District, Fergus and Dawson Counties; Twelfth District, Choteau County."

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge sent up an amendment, to Section 13.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers an amendment to section 13 as follows: Amend Section 13 by striking the word "Jefferson" out of the Fifth District where it occurs, and the word "Meagher" out of the Sixth District where it occurs and add the "Counties of Jefferson and Meagher shall constitute the Ninth District."

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move to amend by inserting "and Cascade" in the proper line.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade will please send his amendment up in writing. The Chair understands that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade does not in any way conflict with the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and as they are separate propositions the question will be upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

The motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I can see no good reason why that change should be made. According to this apportionment we find that Jefferson County has a voting population of only 2500 and that Gallatin has 1700 and Park 1700; and the argument adduced here by the gentleman from Jefferson County if it proves anything it only proves that the judges that they have had have been derelict in their duty. Now if the judge had only three counties to attend to he certainly could give them four months each, and the whole argument proves this that the judges probably or somebody else, whoever it was, had not done their duty; and they now have the privilege of electing a judge who will attend to his business and finish up the docket. If we start in to assume this debt and pay all the judges, why we will all want a judge—we will all want a district. Now, it is only a short time until the legislature meets and this certainly can do no harm where it is. Railroads are being built, our counties are being developed, and it may be that we will all need a district each. We expect to have a population double what we have now as soon as our mining districts are opened up. But I do not see the necessity of changing the present arrangement until we actually need the change and then the legislature can provide for the growing wants of the different counties.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I withdraw my amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade withdraws his amendment. If there be no further amendments to Section 13 the clerk will read section 14.

The Clerk read section 14, as follows: "Sec. 14. The Legislative Assembly may increase or decrease the number of judges in any judicial district: Provided, That there shall be at least one judge in any district established by law, and may divide the state, or any part thereof, into new districts: Provided, That each be formed of compact territory and be bounded by county lines, but no changes in the number or boundaries of districts shall work a removal of any judge from office during the term for which he has been elected or appointed."

There being no amendments to section 14, the clerk read section 15, as follows: "Section 15. Writs of error and appeals shall be allowed from the decisions of the said district courts to the Supreme court, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law."

There being no amendments to section 15, the clerk read Section 16, as follows: "Section 16. No person shall be eligible to the office of Judge of the District Court unless he be at least twenty-five years of age, and a citizen of the United States, and shall have been admitted to practice law in the Supreme Court of the Territory or State of Montana, nor unless he shall have resided in the State or Territory at least one year next preceding his election. He need not be a resident of the district for which he is elected at the time of his election, but after his election he shall reside in the district for which he is elected during his term of office."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have an amendment to offer to that section.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers to amend section 16 striking out in line 4 as follows: "He need not be a resident of the district for which he is elected at the time of his election."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: That matter was very fully discussed and considered in the Judiciary Committee, and I hope the amendment will not prevail. It is a notorious fact that in many of the counties, and I presume it may be said in some of these districts as they are provided for, that there may not be such material as the people desire to put upon the bench, and the section as it stands now leaves it so that it is in the power of the people to elect such a lawyer from any part of the Territory as they may deem a proper and fit person to fill that office; and I believe that the people should have that privilege. There are several counties that are comparatively new; they have little or no material—in fact no material worthy of being considered competent or fit to put upon the bench; and I submit that the matter was fully and carefully considered and that the Judiciary Committee were unanimous on that proposition that it should be in the power of the people in any one district to elect a judge from anywhere in the Territory; provided however that from the time of his election he shall then become and remain a resident of the district during the term of his office.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I regret exceedingly to take issue with my friend on this matter. I know the consideration he has given to the subject, and I know it was talked over before the Judiciary Committee; but a different condition of things existed in the Judiciary Committee when this provision was inserted; it was provided that there should be twelve districts; andasmuch as Custer county was made a separate district and Dawson county a separate district—(Interrupted)

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: No; no.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Well, some other county; I will say perhaps Yellowstone or some other county. We looked around and we could not see quite as good material as we wanted established in our county (laughter). But since then there has been a change. There has been a consultation; we have now attached to Custer County, Yellowstone and Dawson Counties: We have certainly ample material there, and I am certainly opposed to sending out a dragnet all over God's heritage to get material to fill these positions. If we cannot get material to make judges I am in favor of disorganizing our county and attaching us to some other county. I expected to support the bill as it came from the committee, but it has been changed. As I said before, I dislike exceedingly to take issue with my friend. I know he is a lawyer and a good lawyer. I know he is a man of deliberation, great soundness of judgment and one of the most conscientious men in the country; but still he is likely to be mistaken like myself and others.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: If I may have the indulgence of the convention for a moment to reply to the gentleman, it is true that a change has been made in the number of districts. The report of the Judiciary Committee provided for twelve judicial districts. The article as it stands now provides for eight; but in my judgment there are districts now that are not any better off than they were when we provided for twelve. Now, the gentleman, my colleague from Custer, is a lawyer, and I am inclined to believe a candidate for the judgeship—(Interrupted (laughter)

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I deny that.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: And he would represent to this Convention that he represents the sentiment of the voters of that district. I submit to the convention that I do not believe he does. I believe it is the right of the people in that district, or any other district, to have such material on the bench as can be procured in the state of Montana. Individually, I was opposed to judges being elected at all. I believe that not only the district court but the Supreme court judges should be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate of the state. I believe it would insure a safer and better class of judicial officers than can be obtained by the voice of the people; but that did not seem to be the judgment of the committee, and I concurred in their perhaps more mature judgment than mine. But the action of the committee and its judgment seemed to be unanimous that the people should have the right to select judicial material from wherever it could be had within the Territory of Montana; and although it may be true, as the gentleman suggests, that in the counties of Dawson, Yellowstone and Custer there is such material as the people there desire to put on the bench, I submit if there is not, that the people should have the right to go outside of that district and select their judge from the city of Helena or anywhere else that they can find a lawyer that they believe is a fit, competent and proper person to put upon the bench. For those reasons I hope the amendment will not obtain.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I am willing to leave this argument here to be determined by the Convention.

Mr. Brazleton, of Deer Lodge: I am not a lawyer; I am simply a Methodist; but I would suggest that if these counties have not legal talent enough to take care of their own judicial interests, that we make another requisition on Minnesota. (laughter)

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: This matter reminds me very much of a Democratic convention that was held in Deer Lodge in the early days. When the Bear Town delegation put a candidate for sheriff in nomination, Johnnie O'Rourke arose and said: "I am not acquainted with the gentleman." One of the delegates arose and said: "I have a letter from him and he says he will leave Ireland in two weeks, and will be here before the day of election." (Laughter)

That is the way it is with these judges; they might want some gentleman living here or in Butte City for a judge, provided he was elected he would go down to the district where they have no lawyers and proceed to draw the salary.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the previous question upon the pending amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I hope the gentleman will withdraw his motion. I desire to offer an amendment, not to make a speech. It seems to me the section ought to be amended.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I will withdraw in favor of an amendment but not a speech.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend by striking out on line four the two words in the latter sentence so that it shall read "He shall be a resident of the district for which he was elected at the time of his election," and strike out all the balance.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I accept that amendment.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I trust the amendment will not prevail.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I arise to a point of order. There can be no debate.

The President: The question pending before the Convention is that the main question be now put. The gentleman offering that motion yielded for the purpose of offering an amendment. That amendment has been accepted by the gentleman who moved the first amendment, and the question now is, shall the main question be now put?

The Chair put the question and the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now before the Convention is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

The Clerk read the amendment.

The President: This amendment was accepted by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I call for the ayes and noes.

The ayes and noes were called.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: In explanation of my vote I wish to say that I am positively against carpet-bagism; I am against putting it in our constitution; so that I shall vote "yes."

The President announced the vote stood as follows:

Ayes—Aiken, Brazleton, Breen, Buford, Burlingh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Collins, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Gibson, Haskell, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Marion, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Mulh. Reek, Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President.

Noes—Bickford, Browne, Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Gaylord, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hartman, Hatch, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Knowles, Kanouse, Loud, Maginnis, Marshall Mayger, Middleton, Myers, Parberry, Robinson, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Watson.

Ayes: 30. Noes: 39.

Absent: Bullard, Field, Hammond, Luce, McAdow, Webster.

The President: The Clerk will read section 17.

The Clerk read section 17 as follows: "Section 17. The District Court in each county, which is a judicial district by itself shall always be open for the transaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days. In districts where two or more counties are united, until otherwise provided by law, the district judges shall fix the terms of court, provided that there shall be at least four terms a year held in each county."

There being no amendments to section 17, the Clerk proceeded to read section 18, as follows: "Section 18. There shall be a Clerk of the District Court in each county, who shall be elected by the electors of his county. The Clerk shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as other county officers. The duties and compensation of the District Clerk shall be as provided by law."

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I desire to offer an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Myers) offers the following amendment to section 18: Strike out the words "other county officers" in line 3 and insert in lieu thereof "the district judges."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone and a division being called for the motion was carried by a vote of 40 to 13.

The Clerk read the section as amended as follows: "Section 18. There shall be a clerk of the District court in which county he may be elected by the electors of his county. The clerk shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as the district judges. The duties and compensation of the District Clerk shall be as provided by law."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to ask what is the meaning of this. Shall the office be for two years or shall it be for six years?

A member: Four years.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: The first term will be three years.

There being no further amendments to section 18, the Clerk read section 19 as follows: "Section 19. There shall be elected at the general election in each county of the state, one County Attorney, whose qualifications shall be the same as are required for Judges of the District Courts, except that he need not be over twenty-one years of age, and whose term of office shall be two years. He shall have a salary to be fixed by law, one-half of which shall be paid by the state and one-half by the county in which he is elected; he shall in addition to said salary receive such fees as may be provided by the Legislative Assembly and shall perform such duties as may be required by law.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment to that. I have not got it prepared, but it is to strike out that part of the section commencing with the word "elected" on line 5; strike out these words: "he shall in addition to said salary receive such fees as may be provided by the Legislative Assembly." If the Chair will permit me a moment I will write out the amendment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, while we are waiting for this amendment I would like to suggest to the Judiciary Committee that this officer is not elected at the time that other officers are elected. Is that the intention of the committee?

The President: Will the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee answer the question of the gentleman from Cascade?

The Chairman of the Judiciary Committee was temporarily absent.)

The President: The gentleman from Custer offers to amend section 19 by striking out after the word "elected" in line 5 the following words "He shall in addition to said salary receive such compensation as may be provided by the Legislative Assembly."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I think every lawyer in the house who has ever filled the office of a county or district attorney will agree with me that it is the worst system of compensation in the world that allows fees to a county attorney. I believe he should have a fixed salary, and should receive no other perquisite or compensation whatever. I have known in my brief experience, many times of county attorneys being accused of prosecuting actions and making complaints, and all that sort of thing for the fees that were in it, against persons against whom a complaint never ought to have been made; and if you permit the Legislature to authorize the payment of a single dollar in fees you will place the county attorney in a position where those accusations can be made against him regardless of how groundless they may be. I have in my own experience spent three days in the trial of a case in the Probate court that if I had procured a conviction would only have paid five dollars in fees and yet I was accused after having obtained a conviction of having made that complaint and prosecuted that case for the five dollars fees that were in it. I believe Dr. Burleigh will bear me out in this position. He is the present county attorney down there and knows how that kind of thing operates. And in view of the fact that we have seen fit in this constitution to practically abolish the grand jury, and throw the entire matter of information and complaint in the hands of the county attorney, it is important it seems to me that he should be placed where accusations of that kind cannot be made against him. And for those reasons I believe that the hands of the Legislative Assembly should be not to such an extent that they cannot at any time provide for a county attorney receiving a single dollar for fees, but that they shall fix such salary as they deem that officer should have and he should have nothing but a salary.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I agree fully with my friend in what he has said in regard to the effect of this fee system; but not for the reasons which he assigns. Now, we are all a little sensitive—I suppose some more so than others—and I think it likely that my friend is a little more sensitive than I am; his skin is a little thinner than mine. Now, while I do not believe the system is right, I do not care a continental what he says about me in that respect. If I do my duty I do not care a cent what anybody says.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I agree with the gentleman as to all criminal matters. I do not believe there should be any fees in criminal matters. But there may be a great many duties assigned to a county attorney in civil matters, and in those cases I think there ought to be fees. There may be suits for the collection of taxes, and that will be imposed upon the county attorney, and in such cases as that they ought to have a reasonable fee. In prosecutions I am satisfied that the rule that the county attorney should not have fees ought to prevail. I have known myself where county attorneys have not only been accused of prosecutions on account of the fees that they could make out of them, but the accusations were true: (laughter) and for that reason, I think that temptation ought to be removed; and I think if the gentlemen feel that the Legislature would not be prudent about that matter, the best thing would be to adopt a plan by which county attorneys shall receive extra compensation only in civil cases.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I will accept that amendment if the gentleman offers it.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to ask the gentleman from Silver Bow one question, and I hope it will not be considered offensive. Has the gentleman ever been a county attorney?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I have sir.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Well, then, of course I have nothing else to say. (Loud laughter)

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I know the position that the gentleman from Custer is in and the temptation he is subject to. (Renewed laughter)

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I was very sorry to see the gentleman accept the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow and I will have to insist upon a division of the question. I believe that a district attorney should receive no fee in either civil or criminal cases. The county attorney is the attorney of the board of county commissioners, and under the present system of laws he is the attorney of every other county officer. If you allow him fees in civil matters he will charge a good round sum for every little advice he gives, and he will see that the county officers or the board of county commissioners or some remote justice of the peace will ask him quite often for opinions. I believe it is as bad for a county attorney to charge a fee in a civil case as in a criminal case; in fact, it can be made worse; and I hope that the first amendment of the gentleman from Custer will prevail—that they be salaried officers, and that there be no fees attached to them. The Legislature will certainly give the gentlemen plenty of salary for the services that are performed.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: With the consent of the Convention, I will allow my amendment to stand and let that be voted upon and if that fails then I will move the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The President: The question is then upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer as first stated, striking out in line 5 after the word "elected" the following words: "he shall in addition to said salary receive such fees as may be provided by the Legislative Assembly."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to see the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow first voted upon, so that if that fails I would like to have the privilege of voting against the whole thing.

The President: The amendment is included in the first amendment, unless the gentleman asks for a division.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I withdraw my request for a division of the question.

The President: Then the question as placed before the convention shall be upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow that in all civil cases the county attorney shall receive such fees as may be provided by the Legislative Assembly.

The Chair put the question on the motion and the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon the amendment of the gentleman from Custer.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Custer and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read the section as amended.

Mr. Loud of Custer sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Custer offers the following amendment: Amend section 19 by striking out the words "except that he need not be over twenty-one years of age" on line 3.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion on the amendment of the gentleman from Custer and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Browne of Choteau sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Choteau moves to amend section 19 by inserting the following in line 4 after the word "years": "except that the county attorney first elected shall hold his office until the general election in the year 1892."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I do not understand the amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Do I understand that the county attorneys now holding office, unless they are decapitated, hold until December of the next year? Now, what construction would that put on the officers now in office? If it means to throw out all the county attorneys of this Territory now, I am opposed to the amendment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: It does not have that effect.

The President: So far as the present officers are concerned, it would have no effect upon them. It states that the county attorney first selected shall hold office, &c. It would not comprehend anyone who has been elected in the past.

Mr. Browne, of Choteau: My amendment was that he should be elected at the same time with all other county officers.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Choteau and the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to section 19, the Clerk read section 20, as follows: "Section 20. There shall be elected in each organized township of each county by the electors of such township at least two Justices of the Peace, who shall hold their offices, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, for the term of two years. Justices Courts shall have such original jurisdiction within their respective counties as may be prescribed by law, except as in this Constitution otherwise provided; Provided that they shall not have jurisdiction in any case where the debt, damage, claim or value of the property involved exceeds the sum of three hundred dollars.

There being no amendments to section 20, the Clerk read section 21 as follows: "Section 21. Justices Courts shall not have jurisdiction in any case involving the title or right of possession of real property, nor in cases of divorce, nor for annulment of marriage, nor in cases in equity; nor shall they have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, certiorari, quo warranto, injunction or prohibition, nor the power of naturalization; nor shall they have jurisdiction in cases of felony, except as examining courts; nor shall criminal cases in said courts be prosecuted by indictments; but said courts shall have such jurisdiction in criminal matters, not of the grade of felony, as may be provided by law; and shall also have concurrent jurisdiction with the District Court, in cases of forcible entry and unlawful detainer."

There being no amendments to section 21, the Clerk read section 22, as follows: "Section 22. Justices Courts shall always be open for the transaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days."

There being no amendments to section 22, the Clerk read section 23, as follows: "Section 23. Appeals shall be allowed from Justices Courts, in all cases, to the District Courts, in such manner and under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.

There being no amendments to section 23, the Clerk read section 24, as follows: "Section 24. The Legislative Assembly shall have power to provide for creating such police and municipal courts and magistrates for cities and towns as may be deemed necessary from time to time, who shall have jurisdiction in all cases arising under the ordinances of such cities and towns respectively; such police magistrates may also be constituted ex-officio justices of the peace for their respective counties."

There being no amendments to section 24, the Clerk read section 25, as follows: "Section 25. The Supreme and District Courts shall be courts of record."

There being no amendments to section 25, the Clerk read section 26, as follows: "Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general, and of uniform operation throughout the State; and the organization, jurisdiction, powers, proceedings and practice of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, shall be uniform."

There being no amendments to section 26, the Clerk read section 27, as follows: "Section 27. The style of all processes shall be 'The State of Montana' and all prosecutions shall be conducted in the name and by the authority of the same."

There being no amendments to section 27, the Clerk read section 28, as follows: "Section 28. There shall be but one form of Civil Action, and law and equity may be administered in the same action."

There being no amendments to section 28, the Clerk read section 29, as follows: "Section 29. The Justices of the Supreme Court and the Judges of the District Courts shall each be paid quarterly a salary, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. The salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be paid by the State. One-half of the salary of each district judge shall be paid by the State, and the other half shall be paid by the county, where only one county is included in a Judicial District; and where more than one county is included in a Judicial District, the said other half of said salary shall be paid by the counties included in said district, in proportion to the amount of assessable property in each of such counties according to the last general assessment for taxation. Until otherwise provided by law, Justices of the Supreme Court shall be paid a salary of five thousand dollars per annum each. Until otherwise provided by law, the salaries of the several District Judges shall be as follows: That of the Judges of the First, Second and Third Districts, Four Thousand Dollars per annum each. That of the Judges of the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Districts, Three Thousand Dollars per annum each. And that of the Judge of the Ninth District Thirty-five hundred dollars per annum."

Mr. Middleton of Custer sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Custer offers to amend section 29 by striking out the word "four" in line 9 thereof as amended in the Committee of the Whole, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "five."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move the previous question.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer be adopted. The question before the Convention now is, shall the main question be now put?

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I arise for information. If the main question is put, does that preclude the possibility of this amendment being offered?

The President: No sir. The amendment has been previously offered.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: The effect of that amendment would be to give five thousand dollars a year to the Supreme Judges.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade and the same was declared carried.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Custer.

The ayes and noes were demanded.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes—Bickford, Brazleton, Burleigh, Cooper, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Hartman, Hatch, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Mayger, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwill, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—30.

Nays—Aiken, Breen, Brown, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Courtney, Dyer, Eaton, Gaylord, Graves, Haskell, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kohrs, Loud, Maginnis, Marriion, Marshall, Mitchell, Parberry, Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Watson, Witter—39.

Absent: Bullard, Field, Hammond, Luce, McAdow, Webster—6.

The motion to amend was lost.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I have a second amendment which I will send up. I move its adoption.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Craven) offers the following: Amend section 29 by striking out on line..... the words "thirty-five hundred dollars" and inserting in lieu thereof "four thousand dollars."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Joyes, of Jefferson: I demand the ayes and noes.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. There is another amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill)—"until otherwise provided by law the salaries of the Supreme Judges shall be four thousand dollars."

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: As it is now it is fixed irrevocably—if there should be a desire to increase the salaries it would require a constitutional amendment.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke. "It shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall be elected."

The President: The question now before the Convention upon which the ayes and noes will be called is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Craven) to strike out the words "thirty-five hundred dollars" and insert "Four thousand dollars."

The Clerk called the roll.

During the call of the roll, the Clerk was interrupted by Mr. Eaton of Park, who said: Mr. President, I arise to a point of order. Our rules are that no person shall vote upon any proposition in which he is personally interested. I believe the lawyers are directly interested in this measure, and I think none of them should have their names called. (Laughter)

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: On the suggestion of the gentleman from Park I desire to be excused from voting on the proposition.

The President: According to the rules anyone desiring to be excused from voting will have to make that excuse before the roll is called.

The Chair announced the vote as follows:

Ayes—Brazleton, Cooper, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Hartman, Hatch, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Mayger, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Reek, Rotwill, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—27.

Nays—Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Brown, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, E.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Courtney, Dyer, Eaton, Gaylord, Graves, Haskell, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Kohrs, Loud, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mitchell, Parberry, Ramsdell, Robinson, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Witter—42.

Absent: Bullard, Field, Hammond, Luce, McAdow, Webster—6.

The amendment was declared lost.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would like to enquire what was done with the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill). I did not hear that put.

The President: That amendment is next in order. The gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill) moves to amend section 29 by inserting the words—the motion does not say where—"until otherwise provided by law the salaries of the said judges shall be four thousand dollars."

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I call the attention of the Convention to the fact that at the end of line 8 the same words occur—"until otherwise provided by law the judges of the Supreme court" &c.

The President: That was stricken out in the Committee of the Whole and the amendment adopted.

The amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Joyes, of Jefferson: That's the motion we just voted on.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: We voted on that proposition.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The gentleman from Deer Lodge, as I understand, virtually moves to restore the words stricken out in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: That's all.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge and the same was declared carried.

The President: Are there any further amendments to be offered to section 29? If not, the Clerk will proceed to read section 30.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I desire to call the attention of the Convention to section 19 that was passed over. I think we have made a mistake. It reads in this way: "There shall be elected at the general election in each county of the state one county attorney whose qualifications shall be the same as are required for judges of the district courts except that he need not be over twenty-one years of age." Now, I submit that according to that, if he was ten years old he might be elected to the office of county attorney, or twelve or thirteen or any other age. I desire to submit an amendment to that.

The President: If there be no objection the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow will be entertained. The gentleman (Mr. Stapleton) offers to amend section 19 by striking out the words "need not in line 3, and inserting after word "be" the words "must be".

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Does that amendment contemplate that he must be twenty-one years of age and that he cannot be any other age?
Laughter

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I think the word "shall" would be a better word than "must."

The President: The section will read then "There shall be elected at the general election in each county in the state, one county attorney, whose qualifications shall be the same as are required for judges of the district courts, except that he shall be over twenty-one years of age."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Stapleton) and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: Mr. President, before proceeding to section 30, I would like to call the attention of the Convention to section 29. There will be a conflict between that section and section 30.

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: There is no necessary conflict.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge called for the reading of section 29.

The Clerk read section 29.

There being no further amendments to section 29, the Clerk read section 30 as follows: "Section 30. No judge of the Supreme Court or District Court shall accept or receive any compensation, fee, perquisite or emolument for or on account of his office in any form whatever, except the salary provided by law."

There being no amendments to section 30, the Clerk read section 31 as follows: "Section 31. No Judge, or Clerk of the Supreme Court, or of any District Court, shall act or practice as an Attorney, or Counsellor at Law in any court of this State during his continuance in office."

There being no amendments to section 31, the Clerk read section 32, as follows: "Section 32. The Legislative Assembly may provide for the publication of decisions and opinions of the Supreme Court."

There being no amendments to section 32, the Clerk read section 33, as follows: "Section 33. All officers provided for in this article, excepting judges of the Supreme Court, who shall reside within the State, shall respectively reside during their term of office in the District, County, Township, Precinct, City or Town for which they may be elected or appointed."

There being no amendments to section 33, the clerk read section 34, as follows: "Section 34. Vacancies in the office of the Supreme or District Court or Clerk of the Supreme Court shall be filled by appointment, by the Governor of the state, and vacancies in the office of County Attorney, or Clerk of the District Court and Justices of the Peace shall be filled by appointment by the Board of County Commissioners of the County where such vacancy occurs. A person appointed to fill any such vacancy shall hold his office until the next general election, and until his successor is elected and qualified. A person elected to fill a vacancy shall hold office until the expiration of the term for which the person he succeeds was elected."

There being no amendments to section 34 the Clerk read section 35, as follows: "Section 35. No Justice of the Supreme Court or District Judge shall hold any other public office while he remains in the office to which he has been elected or appointed."

There being no amendments to section 35 the Clerk read section 36, as follows: "Section 36. A cause in the District Court may be tried by a Judge pro tempore who must be a member of the bar, agreed upon in writing by the parties litigant, or their attorneys of record, approved by the court, and sworn to try the cause; and in such case any order, judgment, or decree, made or rendered therein by such Judge pro tempore, shall have the same force and effect as if made or rendered by the court with the regular Judge presiding."

There being no amendments to section 36, the Clerk read section 37, as follows: "Section 37. Any Judicial officer who shall voluntarily absent himself from the state for more than sixty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office."

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: The word "voluntarily" as read by the Clerk was stricken out this afternoon. The word as suggested by the gentleman from Custer was voted down.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I understand it the other way, that the word "voluntarily" was put in.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: It was stricken out.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I stand corrected then.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of Proposition 21 with the amendments.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, if the gentleman will withdraw the motion for a moment, I have an amendment to Section 30.

The President: The gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) offers to amend section 30 after the word "salary" in line 3 by inserting the following words "and such mileage as may be."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: If I may have a moment to explain, there seems to be a clause of limitation in section 30 limiting the Legislature to the matter of such salaries as it may fix, and tying its hands as to the matter of allowing mileage notwithstanding the amendment as offered by Gov. Carpenter to the section before. My amendment would make it read "No Judge of the Supreme or District Courts shall accept or receive any compensation, fee, perquisite or emolument for or on account of his office in any form whatever except the salary and such mileage as may be provided by law."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I now renew my motion on the adoption of Proposition 21 as amended.

The President: There is a new section offered by the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Parberry) which reads as follows: "There shall be no divorce granted by the courts of Montana except where the cause for divorce has occurred in this state when both parties to the suit are—" (interrupted)

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I arise to the point of order that it is not in order to introduce an amendment at this stage of the proceedings.

The President: The Chair rules that it is in order. Is there a second to the motion?

The motion was seconded.

The President (reading): "There shall be no divorce granted by the courts of Montana except where the cause for divorce has occurred in this state, and when both parties to the suit are present in court." It is moved and seconded that this section be added to File 21.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: My object in introducing that section is simply this. I have listened with a great deal of satisfaction to the able arguments adduced by the honorable gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) in regard to the witnesses being brought face to face with the accused. In this matter I would say that it probably belongs more properly to the Legislature than to this convention, but for twenty years we have been legislating, and I see no such provision as that on our statute books. It is a fact well known to everybody here that it has been more than once in this Territory that men have left their wives in other states and in other nations and have come to this Territory and have brought any accusation against their wives that they saw fit. Now, the wife has no opportunity of coming here, probably no financial means, and knows nothing about a suit. Now, I think it is high time, inasmuch as they are not allowed to vote and they rely upon us to protect them by passing such laws as will give them protection—it is nothing but right that a female should have the same right that a male has to protection in this case. A man has no right to come from Ohio, Kentucky or New York and leave his wife and family there and bring any accusation against her that he sees fit, and when she has no opportunity of defending herself, and probably never hear of it. And I say that inasmuch as the Legislature has failed to recognize this matter in all of its legislation, it is nothing but right we should incorporate it in our constitution.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I would like to have the proposed section read again.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I hope that will not prevail. I believe that it would be much better to leave it to the Legislature than take it up in this Convention. It is surely a matter of pure legislation. The Legislature is able to take care of its own affairs, and I can see that there may be cases where great injustice might be done by a thing of that kind; for instance, where the husband would desert his wife in some state or where a wife would desert her husband and the deserted party came here afterwards that would exclude them entirely from ever getting a divorce, because you can never get them into court, and there is no way of getting them into court if they do not desire to come. There would have to be personal service or publication of notice, and in either case the parties are not bound to come into court. Under that condition of affairs it would be impossible to procure a divorce. If a man should desert his wife in Washington Territory and he should never return to her and she should leave her home in Washington to reside in Montana it would be impossible for her to ever get a divorce, and that would surely be very wrong. If a man in Idaho should be cruel to his wife and leave her and she would come here and make this her home, she would have no redress whatever. She might commence her suit and have publication of summons, but unless he came into court, according to this section, she would be unable to get a divorce. I know a great many private divorces are obtained but I think this is going to the other extreme, and I think it should be left to the Legislature.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I have had considerable practice in matters of divorce, and I think the object of the gentleman's section as proposed in this case is about right, but it certainly would be a hardship in one respect, and that is wherein you would require both parties to be in court. I therefore move to amend the proposition by striking out all of the section after the word "state."

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Meagher be amended by striking out all of the words of that portion of the amendment after the word "state." The Clerk will read the amendment as proposed to be amended.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: I will call the attention of the Convention to the fact that if there are two people in this State inclined to have a cause for divorce all they would have to do would be to go outside of it and go set free.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I trust this Convention will vote the whole proposition and amendment down. From the way the Convention is swinging in certain matters I would be rather inclined to favor the proposition shown me a moment ago by a legal gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County providing that there shall be no legislative assemblies in the State of Montana whatever, but that this Constitutional Convention shall meet biennially. It seems to me to be assuming the functions of a Legislative Assembly, and legislating everything out of sight. Now, in examining a distinguished authority—that is to say, the only work in the United States on that proposition—Mr. Jameson, a distinguished lawyer of Chicago, on constitutional conventions, where he quotes authorities and lays it down that a constitutional convention has no power to legislate; that work belongs to the legislative branch of a government entirely, and should not be brought up in a constitutional convention, and whatever the courts declare legislation in the work of the constitutional convention the courts will strike that out. Now, then, there are many questions that it is difficult to determine whether they fall within the province of the constitution or are legislation, but wherever they do, and they reach the courts, the courts will declare them void, and that the convention has no power to enter upon such ground. Now, then, this proposition that is before this convention at the present time appears to me clearly and unmistakably as falling within the line of legislation. A divorce is purely an equitable proceeding and it belongs to the powers of courts of equity, and it belongs to the Legislature to prescribe for what cause divorces shall be granted. As to the residence of the parties and everything of that character, it is peculiarly within the province of the Legislature. That being the case the proposition with the amendments is something beyond our province and should be voted down.

Mr. Conrad sent up a substitute for the amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Choteau (Mr. Conrad) moves to amend by substituting the following: That no divorce shall be granted on the ground of desertion unless said desertion actually occurs in the state of Montana or in the Territory before it became a state.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move to lay the original proposition and both amendments on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that Proposition 21 be now adopted and become a part of the Constitution, and on this I demand the previous question.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to suspend the rules and recommit this to the Judiciary Committee. It is full of imperfections brought about by indiscriminate amendments, and I think it ought to go back to the Committee. The chairman of the Committee will bear me out in the suggestion, I think.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: The amendments have been amended so that no one can tell what they mean; the section in relation to the Chief Justice and the section in relation to the county attorneys especially. There is one provision that says the judges shall have mileage on filing certain affidavits, and another section says they shall not have mileage under any circumstances. The only care I have about the matter is that the language and idea may be expressed in such shape that anyone reading it hereafter can form some conception of what they mean; because if there are any inconsistencies, particularly in judicial matters, and people cannot find out what is meant, the first thing they will say is that the lawyers themselves made it ambiguous in order to make contentions and give them a chance to have lawsuits. I therefore would like to have an opportunity to put the amendments in at least intelligible shape.

The President: The question is upon the proposition to recommit to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I think the motion was on the adoption of the previous question.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: That motion was withdrawn.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I renew it.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I thoroughly endorse the views of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Dixon) and the mover of this proposition, the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole). There has crept into this a lot of nonsensical verbiage that has destroyed the original matters so thoroughly and well digested and considered by the Judiciary Committee. It has been done thoughtlessly by men who have had less experience, by men who have given it less thought than the Judiciary Committee did, and it has placed the whole matter in a position where I think it ought to go to the Judiciary Committee to be corrected.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move an amendment to that, that it be re-committed to the Judiciary Committee with instructions to amend as the views of the Convention indicate, and it is understood that there shall be no new matter introduced into the article.

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I accept that amendment.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would ask that when the Judiciary Committee return it that they report if it will be subject to go again through the Committee of the Whole and through all the processes we have put it through today. I think it would have to take that course unless the rules were suspended.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: It does seem to me that it is well for us to stop a moment and consider whether in this matter we are establishing a precedent that we can follow. Now, I do not wish to speak disrespectfully, but why should the Committee on Judiciary have any more rights or privileges than any other committee in this body, and if, after considering a proposition of this kind in the Committee of the Whole, it comes up on final passage and a motion to recommit prevails, why should not any committee ask the same privilege? Now, I think the principle wrong, and I shall vote against the proposition to recommit this committee.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: If the proposition is merely to correct the language, why, then, let it go like any other proposition from this Convention to the committee on phraseology and revision, and when it finally comes up before the Convention, the Convention can act upon it. I undertake to say if the Convention adopts this amendment that every other committee whose propositions may be unshaped by amendments will want the same privilege, and we will stay here till snow flies in January before we form a constitution.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, we had better stay here until snow flies if that is necessary to adopt a constitution that is intelligible. It seems to be the judgment of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee that that is the situation so far as some of these articles are concerned, and I think he is entitled to some consideration in matters of this kind.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I have kept out of this discussion all day, because I thought it was in the hands of good people—people competent to manage it. I desire to say one word now. I followed those amendments with a good deal of agony, I might say, and I can see now that there are some imperfections so glaringly inconsistent that a man can see them with his eyes shut; one, notably, where the chairman of that committee states that one section provides that there shall be mileage under certain conditions and another provides that there shall be no mileage under any circumstances.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to have the gentleman tell me where those two sections are in the report?

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Sections 29 and 30.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: There is nothing of the kind.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I have not got the amendments here, Mr. President; but section 29 was previously offered by Gov. Carpenter.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: The section proposed by Gov. Carpenter does not provide that mileage shall be given to any officer. There is no such provision adopted by the convention.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: If permitted, I will say this much: That I am willing to admit that the men who have come here—business men and men following other avocations in life—are not competent to take this thing up after it has been passed by sixteen of the legal lights of the Territory and men who are competent and should be competent by reason of a life-long training upon matters of this kind, and to take a thing from their hands, hash it and rehash it and then let it go into the constitution. I believe that when the constitution comes to be incorporated it will be found there are inconsistencies in it, and I think it is proper and right we should defer somewhat to these gentlemen who are qualified by reason of their intelligence and by reason of their positions at the bar—positions that require brains, intelligence and qualifications such as make first class men—honest, honorable, straightforward and intelligent people. I believe they are better qualified, particularly in relation to matters concerning the judiciary, than others. I say it ought to be referred to them, and if it comes back here again, if I get a chance, I shall move it be adopted without debate.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: In relation to this matter, I would say I do not favor the recommitment of it, and in my judgment I do not see that any of those propositions do conflict, as stated by these gentlemen on the floor. I do not get up here to pretend to be a judge of the law at all, but I think I can understand the English language. I differ with my friend from Deer Lodge (Mr. Toole) when he says this was hashed and rehashed. I do not think there were any amendments offered by any one except those whose profession is that of lawyers, and I think perhaps some of those gentlemen understood why they were offering the amendments. I do not get up here to discuss the legality of it, but I do say that those two sections which are said to be conflicting are not conflicting, and I certainly do not favor the recommitment of this proposition. If you recommit to this committee you have a right to recommit to any committee.

Mr. Magnus of Lewis & Clarke: I have the most profound regard, as every one has, for the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and I would be glad to submit this to the Judiciary Committee; but we cannot do what the gentleman from Deer Lodge county proposes to do, to place this in the hands of the committee. There is no rule that you can adopt that wont make it subject to the decision of the majority of this convention; and indeed that is what the majority of this convention, fit or unfit, were sent here for. I say this without any feeling, because on every vote, with the exception of the reduction in salaries, I have voted to sustain the report as it came from the hands of the Judiciary Committee. But I am satisfied, and the only reason I enter my protest is, that it will only result in delay and still not do any sort of good.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I just desire to say a word. If the gentleman from Silver Bow, or any other gentleman upon this floor, thinks that I have, or that any other member of the judiciary committee has, any particular pride in having this report adopted, he is entirely mistaken. There have been some amendments offered of which I do not entirely approve, but that is another thing. The only object I have in relation to this matter is not to sustain the report of the Judiciary Committee. Whatever compliments may have been paid to them by gentlemen on this floor, I can say for them that they do not claim any superior wisdom in this convention, nor do they claim any favors of this convention; and if gentlemen are willing to adopt this report as it stands, all I wish to do is to disclaim on the part of myself and my friends the responsibility of it; and I certainly shall reserve for myself the privilege of voting against an incomplete, contradictory and entirely unsatisfactory article in the constitution. My only desire was to have this recommitment in order that it might be put in shape; that was all. If the committee are able to get, from these amendments, at what the intention of the convention was, I shall certainly be very glad to get at it. I have no feeling whatever about it. I want the majority of the convention to rule; but I want to say that if this matter is placed on its final passage now, so far as I am concerned, I shall vote against it.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I desire to make a suggestion here which seems to me will let us out of all this trouble and save time; and that is, that we do not take a final vote upon the adoption of this proposition to-night, but that the convention adjourn and give an opportunity for gentlemen to-morrow morning, after having examined the matter, to come in here and suggest such amendments as may be necessary to remove any apparent ambiguity here in the different sections of this bill. It may be done, it seems to me, without referring the matter to the committee again. It will save a day or two of time, it will save going over it again in the committee of the whole and going over it again in the convention, and I agree fully with my friend, Mr. Magnus, that there is no other way to get it before the convention if we recommit it; and it seems to me, if we let the matter rest until tomorrow for the chairman of the Judiciary Committee and the honorable gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to come here and make such suggestions by way of amendments as may be necessary, that we can then acquiesce in the amendments that are suggested, make the proposition all right so that there will be no inconsistencies in it, and take it up and pass it; and I therefore make that suggestion, and that the convention do now adjourn.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I am willing to accept the amendment. I think that will answer the purpose. There is no sort of personal feeling about this matter. We simply desire to put this instrument in some proper shape. I wish the gentlemen of the convention to feel some just pride, especially if it is done properly. It is the charter of liberties of the people of this State. It is not like a political platform, made by a political convention, to be disregarded as soon as promulgated; but it remains there permanently just exactly as we adopt it. Therefore we ought to be very particular about it, especially where defects and imperfections have been called to the attention of the convention.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: We are here, as I understand it, to make a constitution for the State of Montana. This is not ordinary legislation. The child unborn, I hope, will be sitting in the legislature of this State when this constitution will still be in force in Montana, unamended; and I do not care what committee it may be, if they have not perfected their work, or if the convention so amends it as to confuse it, I would like to see that matter referred to the committee for revision.

The Chair then put the question on the motion on the reference of said proposition to the judiciary committee for the purpose of reporting back any necessary amendments, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer renewed his motion to adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion to adjourn, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The convention adjourned until Thursday morning, July 25th, 1889; at 10 A. M.

SEVENTEENTH DAY

Thursday Morning, July 25th, 1889.

The Convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The clerk called the roll.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Cauby asked to be excused for the day. He is unavoidably detained.

The President: The gentleman will be excused if there be no objection.

The chaplain offered prayer.

The clerk read the journal of the previous day.

The President: Under the head of General Orders, the convention may proceed to the consideration of the General File. What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move that the convention do now resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 14, General File No. 12.

The motion was seconded.

The chair stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I have no objection to the convention going into the Committee of the Whole on any proposition, provided there is any use in so doing, or unless there is some positive rule of this convention requiring it—and I do not understand that there is any rule requiring that these proceedings shall be submitted to a Committee of the Whole. Unfortunately, the way we are situated, the rules of this convention and the action of the convention, are in violation of what I have always understood to be the rules of deliberative bodies; that is, that a matter is submitted to a committee of the whole for amendments, and that when the committee of the whole has acted upon it and returned it to the body, then in that body the only action that can be taken on it under all the rules I have read, is to adopt the report of the Committee of the Whole, or reject it. Now, our rules as incorporated here and acted upon are in violation of that principle, and in the committee of the whole we have gone over these different propositions as the committee reported them. With all these amendments, these propositions have gone back into the convention, and we have traveled over the same ground again and used up double time, with the members paying no regard or attention whatever to the action of the Committee of the Whole. It seems to me that double action upon these matters, so far as amendments are concerned, is useless and a waste of time; and unless there is some positive rule requiring us to go into a committee of the whole, I do not see any use of it, because these amendments all go into the body of the convention, and it seems a waste of time.

The President: The chair would state that according to rule 26 all propositions and resolutions of the convention shall be submitted to a Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: If that is the case, then it is useless to oppose going into the Committee of the Whole.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Cooper of Gallatin to the chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin in the chair.

The committee was called to order.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move that we take up Proposition No. 14, General File No. 12.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The clerk read Section 1 of Proposition No. 14, as follows:

Proposition No. 14.

Article on Rights of Suffrage and Qualifications to Hold Office.

Section 1. All elections by the people shall be by ballot.

There being no amendments to Section 1, the clerk read section 2, as follows:

Section 2. Every male person over the age of twenty-one years, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all the general elections: 1. He shall be a citizen of the United States. 2. He shall have resided in the state one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote, and in the county, town or precinct such time as may be prescribed by law.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I desire to offer a substitute for Section 2.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I desire to offer the following amendment.

The chairman: The gentleman from Missoula offers the following amendment which the clerk will read.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I would like to ask if there is not a resolution on file to be considered with this section, offered by the gentleman from Park.

The Chairman: What is the number of the resolution?

Mr. Joy of Park: Resolution No. 12.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Mr. Chairman, I move that Proposition No. 14 be considered, and that subsequent to such consideration, we take up any other proposition on file pertaining to this subject.

There being no second to the motion of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Eaton), the clerk read the substitute offered by Mr. Bickford of Missoula, as follows:

"In all elections not otherwise provided for in this constitution, every male citizen of the United States, or those who have declared their intention to become such, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have resided in this State during the six months immediately preceding such election, shall be entitled to vote. Provided no idiot, or insane person shall be entitled to the rights or privileges of an elector. The rights and privileges of an elector shall be forfeited by a conviction for any crime which is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary. The legislature shall have power to confer upon women the rights and privileges of electors to vote in any or all elections."

Mr. Joy of Park: Mr. Chairman, I would like to hear Resolution No. 12 read.

The clerk read the amendment offered by Mr. Hartman of Gallatin to said section, as follows: After the word "law" on line 5 of said section 2, insert: "And he shall be able to read and write the English language. Provided that nothing in this constitution contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right under existing laws of this Territory at the time of the adoption of this constitution."

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the substitute for Section 2 offered by myself.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Marrion of Missoula sent up an amendment.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment as presented by Mr. Hartman of Gallatin.

The motion was again seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula—Mr. Bickford—be adopted.

Mr. Marrion of Missoula: If my substitute is in order, I would like to have it read.

The Chairman: The gentleman's substitute is not in order.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I only wish to say a few words in support of the amendment offered by myself. Now, Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me that one of the most important questions which we have to determine—

(interrupted)

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order. There is a resolution, as I understand, that has been offered and is on the General File with this proposition. A member of this convention has risen to his feet in his place and called for the reading of that resolution.

The Chairman: The point of order is well taken. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read the resolution of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy), being Resolution No. 12, as follows:

RESOLUTION ON SUFFRAGE.

"Every male citizen of the United States above the age of twenty-one years, who can read and write the English language and who has never been convicted of treason or felony, and who shall have resided in this State one year and in the city, county or district where he may offer to vote for six months next prior to any election, and no other person, shall have the right to vote in this State. Provided, That nothing herein shall disfranchise any person who was a qualified voter at the time of the adoption of this constitution."

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: There does not seem to be any material difference, Mr. Chairman, between the resolution offered by the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy), and the amendment offered by myself. The only difference is, that I attempted to get the words in more concise form; that is all; and so far as the spirit and intention of that resolution is concerned, I am in accord with it, and there is controversy between us. But it does seem to me that this question is one of the most important ones we have to deal with, and one that we should deal with more conservatively than almost any other that comes before us. The life and health of man is absolutely dependent upon the character of the blood that courses through his veins. That is a truism. A nation's prosperity, a State's welfare, as surely depends upon the character of its citizens. Now, in our State and National governments the influence of the citizens is so much greater than it is in a despotism that the importance of this question becomes extraordinarily prominent. Our opinions are not abstract ideas; they are forces. They become potent factors in determining governmental policies. And therefore it behooves us to see to it that those persons who take a part and help shape the policy of the government are competent to act intelligibly; and therefore I have inserted in this amendment the clause, "And who shall be able to read and write the English language." As has been well said by some member upon this floor, a vote is but the expression of an opinion. The character of the opinion and the effect that will be given to it through the medium of that vote depends upon two qualities: first, the inherent qualities of mind and heart in the individual voter; and, second, the cultivation and direction of those qualities through the instrumentality of education. Now, the first we cannot control in the individual himself, but we can declare that unless the individual possess those qualities he shall not exercise this right. The application and cultivation of the second may be encouraged by us through wholesome legislation. The amendment operates as such an encouragement. Now, then, furthermore, I desire to say that for the purposes of our State government, of our National government, the primary objects of education are to make good citizens. I believe this problem should be solved with a view to extending the greatest liberty to the individual citizen and voter consistent with the welfare of the state, but that that proviso should be one of the most important that should enter into our considerations and deliberations; first, the safety of our institutions; for by the indiscriminate application of the right of suffrage to persons irrespective of their qualifications, we imperil not only the peace of home, the purity of families, but we menace the very foundations of government itself. I would not, if it were in my power, do an act or utter a word that would abridge the rights or privileges of a fellow man; but I do say that it behooves us as members of this convention, and as citizens of this great commonwealth, to take a stand against the scum, the criminal classes of foreign nations. I desire to say that some of our very best citizens have been born upon foreign soil. To them and their kind we should extend, every one of us, the right hand of fellowship; but, Mr. Chairman, the United States government by no legislation at all, by reckless negligence and by failure to enforce its legislation, have opened the doors and invited to our shores the Anarchists, the Nihilists and the Socialists of foreign nations, and we have had a recent exhibition of the effect upon our civilization in the Glan na Gael organization; and I pretend to say it should be the aim and duty of every member of this convention by his vote, as far as in him lies, to say that not one of that class shall have voice or vote in the affairs of this State. I freely admit, as I have said, that very many of our better class of citizens were born upon foreign soil, but they have not come here alone; the same ships that brought them to the land of liberty have brought with them these fiends to destroy liberty. And therefore it becomes our duty at this time to place a safeguard against such class of voters. I believe that the success of this state depends in a large degree upon the character of its citizens. I have therefore introduced the educational clause in it. The other clause, it seems to me, provides for the maintenance of all of the rights possessed by voters at this time, provided that nothing in this constitution contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right under existing laws of this territory at the time of the adoption of the constitution. I hope that the amendment will prevail.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, after listening to the eloquent address delivered by the gentleman, I am free to admit it is audacious on my part to address this assembly. I shall make no effort, however, to make a speech, but I feel constrained by a feeling that pervades me to make a protest against the arguments of the gentleman. I think, notwithstanding the eloquence of that address that it lacks force. I fail to see one solitary argument in it. Now, the very people he claims that are dangerous to our civilization, I think you will all agree with me, are pretty well educated people, and I fail to know of any part of our country where harm has ever come to the country by illiterate persons having the right of suffrage. Now, I believe in the most unlimited liberty that is compatible with the welfare of our country, and I really think, sir, that the number of common schools in our country today is such that we need never be very apprehensive of illiteracy being so great in this country as to overcome the influences of education. I am opposed to the substitute on that ground. I am opposed to it because it is not in the spirit of the times. Now, I really think that the indication of the times is for more liberty in behalf of the people rather than a restriction of the present liberty which they enjoy. If I thought that there was any danger to befall Montana or that Montana's welfare would be injured in any way by the adoption of the section as introduced by the committee, I should certainly withdraw my vote; but, notwithstanding the eloquence of the gentleman, I fail to feel any apprehension whatever on that point. I think it would be decidedly wrong at this day for us to adopt that amendment. The section as introduced by the committee meets with my approbation. As I said, the substitute of the gentleman is not in the spirit of the times. We are not afraid of the illiterate voters of this country dominating over the intelligent vote. I also think, sir, that it may possibly work a hardship in some cases. We have in various parts of this country, and possibly in Montana, men who have much interest in the welfare of the state who are unable to write their own names. They are holders of considerable property, and are just as much interested perhaps as a person who can write his name. And if we pass this substitute we would deprive such persons of the right of suffrage. I cannot understand the consistency of that. Now, I do think this, that we go a great deal more on the innate qualities of our associates and fellow men than we do upon their literary qualities or characteristics. It is not according to the degree of education they possess that we judge men. I have, at least, never so judged my fellow men, my associates in business, or the acquaintances I have met in the various paths of life; and I think so it is with this suffrage question. Some of the worst criminal classes of this country, some of the most hardened enemies our country possess are not the illiterate, but on the other hand these exceedingly sharp fellows who are well up in political trickery, and in all kinds of knavery, and all these other things that are acquired by education, and which only educated people can acquire. Now, sir, I am positively opposed to this amendment.

Mr. Joy, of Park: It seems to me that the idea which the gentleman presents in favor of his own resolution bears more upon mine than upon his own. Now, in the first place, upon the question of conciseness I want to call the attention of this committee to the fact that my resolution, as it stands, covers more ground and uses less words than that introduced by the gentleman from Gallatin Mr. Hartman. I say it covers more ground, and the very ground he speaks of. The very dangers he refers to of these foreign societies, dangerous people from abroad and the criminal and other dangerous classes, is not provided for in his resolution. Now, I have said in my resolution "every male person over the age of twenty-one years who has never been convicted of treason or felony," and that has not been touched upon in any of the other resolutions. I think that is a very proper provision. That would shut out the very class of people that the gentleman from Gallatin refers to, and I trust that this resolution as offered by myself will prevail. I do not suppose that there is a member upon this floor who is more willing and even anxious that all citizens and voters of the State of Montana will be able to go to the ballot box and cast an intelligent vote, and that is all this resolution seeks to enforce. It stimulates more intelligence in our politics; it is more elevating in its tendency and effect; it disfranchises no person who is now a voter in this territory or who may be at the time of the adoption of this constitution. I know it may be urged by some upon this floor that there are men, able gentlemen, smart business men, who are unable to read and write. That I know to be true. I have had business relations with them, and I know it is true. But they are not disfranchised by the resolution. They will continue to be voters as long as they stay in Montana. Now, I say that those coming from abroad will have ample time before they are allowed to vote under any circumstances—they will have ample time after they come here to become useful citizens; they will have ample time to learn to read and write their ballot. It has been suggested by the gentleman from Silver Bow Mr. Courtney that these dangerous people, anarchists, nihilists and socialists &c. are educated people. Now, that is true as to the leaders. Those who are the leaders of those societies are educated, beyond question, but the most of them are ignorant people, who are swayed by a handful of leaders that are educated and understand our institutions. I hope, Mr. Chairman, that this proposition will prevail. This provision has been introduced into the constitution of other states, particularly in the State of Missouri, recently, and it is an advance step, I am glad to say, in that state. I am glad to say it has been introduced in both of the new states of Dakota. I notice one of the tests was that the voter should be able to read the declaration of independence. That goes beyond what we expect here, and the only challenge we exact as a test will be that when a man goes to the ballot box he will be obliged to stand up there and read his ballot, if he is challenged on that ground; and further, he is obliged to take a pencil and write that ballot, if he is challenged on that ground. I am in favor of stimulating a man to cast the most intelligent vote. The voters are the masters, and the officers are simply their servants, and I say the voters should be as intelligent as their servants. Now, in view of the fact that Mountaineers have in all ages and times been noted for their courage and patriotism, I see no objection to adding intelligence to these virtues, and I trust this resolution will prevail.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I must say that I differ somewhat from the gentleman from Gallatin Mr. Hartman in his ideas, and that further I think that the address he delivered to this convention was more fluent than practical. I claim that to require that qualification of a person that it is not in accordance with the requirements of a man to become a citizen of the United States. I claim that as long as you admit a person to be a citizen, that person has a right to have some say in the making of the laws of the country. Further, I claim that there are people in Montana today that cannot read and write, that cast as honest a ballot, as intelligent a ballot, as those who can read and write. My experience in that respect was this, that I have seen men that were smart and intelligent that cast their ballots for the men that paid them; and on the other hand I have seen men that could not read and write, that a man could not approach for the purpose of buying them. Now, if you go and give the right of suffrage to men who live here now who cannot read and write, it is wrong to deny it to others who come in afterwards. It is not in accordance with the liberties that are accorded to American citizens. The gentleman from Gallatin goes on to call in question the Clan ne Gael and other secret societies, which I know nothing about, but from what I can read of them, I claim there are intelligent people among those men, and some of the most respected citizens of the country are members of the Clan ne Gael Society today, according to the reports of the newspapers. This constitution has nothing to do with those societies. By depriving the people who can neither read nor write the English language of the right of suffrage you do an act that has no bearing whatever upon those societies, and that argument is entirely irrelevant to the proposition and it is only placed here before the convention for the purpose of having some influence in helping the proposition through. I certainly oppose the proposition, and think it is not right to deprive a man of his vote simply because he cannot read and write the English language. The gentleman from Park County goes on to say, "we only require of him to read the ballot; that we don't go as far as to ask him to read the declaration of independence." I claim that a man who can read and write certainly can read the declaration of independence. I certainly do not favor the amendment. I do not think it is just or right. As long as you admit a man who cannot read and write to the liberties of citizenship, you should not take away from him one of the first rights of his citizenship. There are some that do not cast an intelligent ballot while there are others that do, and if you deprive certain men from casting their ballot you certainly do wrong to them. There are honest people in that class of men who cannot read and write, and I think you will find that there are quite a number of people in Montana that can read and write and speak the English language fluently, that should never be allowed to cast a ballot.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, an intelligent vote is the best guarantee of the perpetuity of our popular form of government, while ignorance is the bane of liberty and of all those principles of government which are so dear to the heart of every American citizen. The education sufficient at least to cover the requirements of this bill is within the reach of all, and if any man has not sufficient intelligence to learn to read and write or if he possess such intelligence and has not the inclination to learn, he is totally unfitted to exercise the functions of a free, intelligent and progressive American citizen. All such voters having no opinions of their own and being easily influenced by others are a standing menace and danger to the public welfare. This question should not arouse any partisan feeling whatever, for it is deeper, wider, higher and of infinitely more importance than the mere temporary success or failure of any particular party or parties; for parties are but the means to an end, subject to constant changes, while the principles of liberty, equality and human rights upon which our government is founded, and which it is the object of this resolution the better to preserve and defend, we trust shall live forever. Our American franchise is not a right co-equal with the inherent right to life, liberty and property, but is a political privilege granted on certain conditions and within certain limitations, which conditions and limitations can be extended or curtailed in the wisdom and at the discretion of the law-making power. So that this resolution is really constitutional. It has no retroactive effect; it disfranchises no man who is now a voter; it infringes upon no man's inherent right; it works no hardship to any person; its object and its purpose is to make it possible to secure a more intelligent expression of opinion upon questions of public importance, and to throw additional safeguards around the purity of the ballot. It seems to me that it should meet the approval and receive the hearty support of every true American citizen. (Applause.) And when we shall have so revised our election laws that the franchise shall include all the virtue and intelligence and exclude all the vice and ignorance of the people, we will be nearer the political millennium than any people ever before attained. If the magnificent temple of liberty which we are erecting is to be builded upon solid and enduring foundations, then I hope this bill will pass. (Applause)

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I have listened with a great deal of pleasure to the remarks of two gentlemen upon this floor; one is the gentleman from Gallatin County (Mr. Hartman), the other, I believe, from Silver Bow (Mr. Sargent), and while I agree with them fully in regard to the desirability of education being disseminated throughout the masses of this country, and that every voter shall be educated not only to such an extent as to be able to read and write his own name, and perhaps the declaration of independence, but in all the useful arts and sciences and mechanic arts, yet I take the thing as I find it. Such is not the condition of the American people; neither can it be for years to come. Now, I was especially delighted, yes, more than that, electrified, with the splendid dissertation of my friend from Gallatin County (Mr. Hartman) upon this subject, and when he spoke of the exercise of the right of suffrage intelligently and safely being based upon education, it occurred to me that it was moral education quite as much as intellectual. Now, take the instance of the man in Massachusetts who goes up to vote and he is challenged, and why? Because when the ticket is handed to him he cannot write his own name. What would you say to having a man of that kind rejected who had lost his right arm in the service of his country, and who had lost his left arm, and never had acquired the habit of writing with his toes? (Laughter) Would you go in and disfranchise that man because he had been out and imperilled his life on the battlefield of his country and sustained an irreparable injury? "He must not only read and write" is the language of the resolution, and I have known scores of men, so far as my recollection dates back, some years, who not only fought upon the bloody fields of the first revolution under Washington, but in the war of 1812 and 1815 under Scott, the wars of Mexico under Scott and in the late rebellion, who could not fulfill the requirements here. And those men were doing patriotic service for their country when my young friend from Gallatin county was "mewling and puking in his mother's arms," and before the gentleman from Silver Bow County had gotten rid of the necessary nether garments which go with the discomforts of infancy. I say plainly that no power in this convention nor on earth can induce me to go and record a vote against those men. He says rascals come from the old country. Well, now, those rascals that come here cannot only write their own names, but they too frequently write the names of their neighbor. (Laughter) It would need high-wrought, patriotic, down East Yankee culture to make an American citizen such as this gentleman would delight to see, and that may come perhaps just about the break of the millennial dawn. Now, I say I am opposed to this whole thing. I think the report of the committee goes quite far enough, and if the millions of pure men here who are intellectually educated and morally educated cannot stand off a few whelps who come in here to prostitute our political institutions, we had better surrender and go back into barbarious life again.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I am opposed to this amendment. It confines the intelligence of the country to the men who shall be able to read and write in the English language. We who read and write the English language do not possess all of the intelligence that exists in this world of ours. We have intelligent Germans and intelligent Frenchmen and intelligent Scandinavians, as we are accustomed to call them, who can read and write well in their native languages, and who are intelligent people. We have today German newspapers published throughout the United States, which discuss public matters as intelligently as do our newspapers published in the English language. We have papers published in the Scandinavian language which discuss public matters well, and there are often papers published in the United States published in the French language, and these discuss public matters. Now, you wish to shut out all men who have not learned the English language as though all there was about liberty was in the English language. I agree with two of the gentlemen from my own county, who have said that the danger to American institutions today is not from men who cannot read and write. The danger to the institutions of today is that men do not feel sufficiently the responsibilities that rest upon them as American citizens. When there are found six hundred or seven hundred voters that can be purchased for the paltry sum of three dollars apiece, every one of whom can read and write the English language, I say there lies the danger. Our revolutionary sires were not an educated people, but they were lovers of liberty, and wherever you find a man imbued with liberty, with the principles of liberty, he is a patriot in this land of ours, I care not whether he can read and write or not. Reference has been made here to the anarchists. What has been said about them is true; that as a rule they are educated and well educated people; but they are a people that have grown up under the tyrants of Europe until they have come to protest against all governments. They believe that all government is a species of tyranny. They are what might be called semi-insane upon that question. But where do we find in this land of ours ignorant men banding themselves together. Nowhere. It is these men of intelligence that have visionary notions in regard to government. We have, by an amendment to the constitution of the United States, enfranchised and made voters the largest number of ignorant people that ever existed in any country. The government has not gone to pieces from that action on the part of the national government. I know that directly the national government did not make these people voters, but the effect of that amendment to the Constitution was to make them voters. And so I am opposed to this qualification here, which says that they shall read and write the English language. Men come to the United States who are advanced in years. There are a great many communities in the United States where the language of the country from which the immigrants come is still spoken. It is the language of that part of the country. You will find throughout Iowa, Illinois and Ohio and in the German settlements generally that they still speak nothing but the German language; and yet a friend of mine who fought on the side of the confederacy said it seemed to him that he saw more Germans upon the battlefields of the south than men of any other nationality. These men when it came to the question as to whether this government should be preserved went out in thousands, and I am opposed to any restriction of the kind that would narrow their rights or privileges as proposed in this bill.

Mr. J. R. Toole, Deer Lodge: The first question that presents itself to my mind in connection with this is, what is the cause, or what is the demand, or what is the present condition of circumstances that demands anything of this kind. Does the history of Montana, does our political history demand that we should enact such a clause as this in our constitution? Have the people of Montana, our citizens who have honored us by sending us here, have they been consulted? Are they a class of people that we desire to dispense with? I take it not, sir. I take it, sir, looking at the matter from a common sense point of view, in the light of our past experience, and our history, that there is no demand for anything of this kind. We have on the floor of this house two gentlemen who, since Montana had a history almost, have represented us in the highest office which it was in our power to bestow, and I take it that in this mountain country west of the Mississippi River, or east, if you will, throughout the territories, in any of its confines, there never have been men more ably and intelligently and nobly and more satisfactorily to the people of the territory represented their constituents, than these men did. And looking around in our county offices, upon every office in the gift of the people, and every office that might be in the gift of the people prospectively in our state, I ask, does the condition of affairs here demand anything of this kind? It sounds very well in theory, but does our practical experience demand this step? If we take history for it, does our history bear us out in the assertion that for the last one hundred years the tendency has been to extend the franchise instead of curtailing or limiting it? Does not the history of the world show that men have crept gradually onward in the progress of the franchise? There was a time, as was demonstrated here the other evening, when the franchise was limited to but the very few, and after a hard struggle it was extended so that men who had property qualifications were entitled to the privilege of electors, and after years the fight went on until that limitation was removed and the citizen irrespective of property qualifications was placed in possession of the ballot, and today we have the most liberal laws in relation to that matter of any nation on the face of the earth. I ask the gentlemen of this convention now, does not our history in the past eighteen years bear us out in the assertion that we are on the right track? I think we are all proud of Montana. My knowledge of the history of Montana and of the people who have administered the offices is a matter, I think, of which I am commen with every other citizen of Montana may justly feel proud. We should all congratulate ourselves on the fact that all our offices from the Justices of the Peace and Constables up to the highest office have been administered honestly and conscientiously and have been filled by men who were a credit to the commonwealth. Where you permit people to come to the country here, and then make them feel in their hearts that they are not of us, that have interests that are identical with ours, and yet that may have no voice in the enactment of laws or in the machinery of government, I say that is working a hardship. I believe this resolution is not in accordance with the times. I believe that the experience of the past does not bear us out in introducing anything of this kind into our constitution. I say our officers heretofore have been men of whom we might well be proud, irrespective of political color or party feeling, and I say the course we are pursuing here is the proper one. I hope this amendment will not prevail.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Of course, it would be a grand thing if all men could be wise and virtuous and good; it would be a grand thing if all men could be educated; but I agree with the gentleman from Yellowstone in thinking that when that ideal republic exists that was so beautifully pictured by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Sargent), where all who participate in the franchise will possess these qualifications, it will exist upon those Elysian fields, upon the rivers of time where the powers of the universe will sit at the ballot box and only angels will canvass for the suffrage of their constituents. (Applause) As has been well said, this republic was founded by men who were illiterate, but who were lovers of freedom. As has been said the descendants of those people in many states of this union still do not read or write the English language. As has been said those descendants were as brave as any people in defending the rights and the honor of the country. And, Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen, it is not the ignorant people who come from abroad who threaten our institutions. The gentleman from Park was mistaken when he said that only the leaders of the anarchists are educated; that their followers are ignorant people. Those people come from lands where education is compulsory, and I undertake to say, and I say it without any derogation to this convention, that in the matter of reading and writing, in the study of the philosophy of government, in acquaintance with those theories upon which philosophers have advocated the establishment of governments, in the number of languages which they can read and write, not only the English, but many others, that this convention could not compare with an ordinary club of anarchists. No, Mr. Chairman, it is not that that makes good citizens. I know, sir, that there have been some ignorant people come from abroad; there have been many people who could not read or write the English language; but we must remember that it is that immigration that has made this country great; it is that immigration that is making this country great today. Compare the States that are inviting immigration from the old world; compare Wisconsin with Maine; compare Iowa with North Carolina; compare any new state whose life blood is continually reinfused by the immigration of people from the old world with any state that has no immigration, and see how the comparison stands; in prosperity, in education, in advancement, in wealth and in everything that goes to make great communities. Sir, although these people, these anarchists did violate the peace at Chicago, who were the men that stood against them, and put them down? Did you ever read the names of those policemen that were killed? Did you ever read the list of that police force that stood up and put down that anarchistic demonstration? They were nearly all foreigners; they were nearly all adopted citizens; and I undertake to say that many of those who stood up that day to defend the government and the country did not possess the qualifications of education that the anarchists did. Why, if there was any place in the world where a proposition of this kind would be unwise, it would be here. The census shows that we have the smallest percentage of illiteracy of any state or territory in the union; and I call the gentlemen here to look around among their acquaintances, and I direct their attention to one thing. The men who have made the greatest successes in this territory by their intelligence, by their will, by their character, and their force, have been men whose early opportunities were such as would scarcely bring them within the limits of this provision. I do not want to call any names, but I could call them. I know also that some of the men who have planned the greatest enterprises, built the greatest works, might perhaps be ruled out on a purely educational test if it was carried too far. Neither the greatest soldiers nor the greatest leaders or captains of industry are always the most scholarly men. Mr. President, there is another matter. In the resolution of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy), he would shut out everybody that was convicted of treason or felony in any other country. He ought to be careful before he does that. There are countries where treason and felony do not mean what treason and felony do in this country. That would have shut out De Kalb, that would have shut out Kosciuszko, that would have shut out Kossuth, and Carl Schurz, one of the most intelligent men of this country, and Frank Sigel, who made such a grand reputation in our wars—all these would have been deprived of the franchise if our citizens had made treason and felony in other countries a bar against being received into citizenship of America. (Applause) Gentlemen, the people of Montana are on the right course. They have governed this territory well with the qualifications of suffrage that they now have, and I trust that not on account of any beautiful theories or arguments will we advance a step in the wrong direction and narrow the rights, and the liberties and the privileges of our people. (Applause)

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I am in favor of this clause and I hope it will pass; and more than that, if I only knew there would be but one vote registered in favor of it, that vote would be mine. I know the condition of the men of this territory and the voters of this territory. I apprehend, as well as the average man that has been around amongst them. There are some men that do not know what they are voting or who they are voting for; they have not enough intelligence if they did know, to understand the difference between principles or between men, and these men will go on election day and cast a ballot that is the equal of yours. It is not a pleasant thing to contemplate. Now it is claimed that the followers of the anarchists are ignorant. That is true; it must necessarily be true, for if they were educated, if they were able to see the folly of their ways, they would not be following the wild lead of some crazy idiot from across the ocean; and if these men were able to read and write they would not be ready to believe every word that is told them during the excitement of a campaign; they would look for the records of the men, and it would not be the best talker, but the man with the best principle, regardless of his political convictions, that would receive their ballot. Mr. Chairman, and gentleman, we have here, or we will have here in Montana, thanks to the efforts of the members of last winter's legislature, a ballot system in operation this fall which is called the Australian secret ballot system, and if it was not for this coming election and for fear that the judgment of the people would rise up in defense of Mr. Kennedy, I am willing to say that that bill would have been killed last winter. I have seen foreman around among their men handing them a ballot and furnishing teams to take them to the polling place and saying how they should vote that ballot. I have seen that done in the territory, although I have only been five years in the territory; and if we have men that have little or no intelligence, and that will vote as their employers say, they can give them a list of names and say to the voters "take this and cross these names, or if you don't we have no use for you here"—I say that if these men have little or no intelligence they will be subject to the mercy of their employers and will not vote according to their own convictions, and it will be just the same as it is now, and the protection of the Australian Ballot System will be a farce. I say, gentlemen, give us an intelligent vote, or give us none at all. I know that we have papers edited and published in the German, in the Swedish and in different languages, but at the same time these men that are publishing these papers have the brains to print them in the English language, and I believe in building up an American and not a German or a Swedish, or an Irish, or a Scandinavian republic. Take the United States. Our fathers, they claim, were uneducated but at the same time when they drew up the declaration of independence and the constitution of the United States, it was not the ignorant men in the thirteen colonies that sent representatives to draw up that declaration or the constitution of the United States; they were intelligent people, and they sent the very best talent they had, and it was a credit to their judgment that they did send such talent as was sent there. If these men will reside in our territory five years, or even one year, before they become voters, and if they are too lazy to learn to read the English language or write in that language, I say they are not fit to say who shall govern me or you, or that their vote or his vote shall be the equal of mine for the purpose of passing laws for my government, or any other man that is interested in the welfare of the country. For that reason I say give us that substitute, so that we shall have an intelligent qualification for voters and do away with this condition of affairs. As it is now, the average voter says "Mr. somebodyelse" or "Mr. so-and-so, told em this was a good man, and I am going to vote for him, and at the same time they do not know, and never would know his record. I admit that Montana has been well served in the interest of Montana since she has been a territory, but at the same time we do not know but what some of the men that were left at home would have served the territory of Montana just as well as those that were elected. The ignorant voter is liable to vote for a bad man as well as a good man just the same. Now I say give us an intelligent qualification and let us do away with some of the evils of our present system of elections.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: For God's sake, where are we drifting. [Laughter] It seems to me that this proposition in the resolution offered by the gentleman from Gallatin is the same thing, or practically the same thing, as the one offered by the gentleman from Park. It seems to me this proposition considered in a convention organized here for the purpose of framing a constitution for a free people one of the most preposterous propositions I ever heard of. My little knowledge of the history of these United States from its foundation down to the present time, is that we have what is known as a republican form of government, a government for the people and by the people. Now, to say, sir, that because a man cannot write and read the English language he does not belong to that class of the people that the constitution of the United States mentions, seems to me absurd. It has been well said here that a ballot, a vote, is simply an expression of opinion. Can it be possible that because a man cannot read and write the English language that he cannot express an honest, intelligent moral opinion? I say that that expression of opinion is based presumably upon, or should be based upon his moral conscience, regardless of what his qualifications are as to education or property. I presume the next provision will be to require a man to be a millionaire, and we will have a government in Montana for the aristocracy and not for the people. Why; there has been no argument advanced by the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) or the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) that can, it seems to me, indicate to the mind of any intelligent man that there are any reasons for this proposition. The gentleman who offers this resolution is an educated man, a man learned in the law. The other gentleman from Park occupies the same position. They are men from whom we would expect an intelligent expression on any proposition or principle, but I candidly believe that both of those gentlemen at this moment are acting under temporary aberration.

[Laughter] and I don't know but it would be wise for this convention to appoint an inquisition de lunatico inquirendo to see whether or not it is safe for those men to be at large. [Laughter] According to my observations, some of the most intelligent people, some of the best friends I have had, some of the best business men, some of the most successful business men, were men who could not read or write the English language. Here we have a vast territory of millions of acres of arable land, sufficient to furnish farms for hundreds of thousands of people. We have mountains, and mountains of ore yet untouched and unworked. We are forming presumably a new state, and in order that it may become what we want it to be, we should certainly open the gates to every intelligent man, whether he be a German, an Irishman, a Swede, or no matter where he comes from. Why, as has been well said here, many of the most intelligent and thoroughly educated men we have in this country, some of them right here in Montana, come to this country after they have passed, perhaps, middle age, thoroughly educated in their own language, and they never do learn to read or write the English language. They have to work perhaps for a living, and they have not time nor the inclination to do that sort of thing. As has been well said also, those men read the papers; they know what is going on in this territory, in its political and in all its affairs, although they may not derive that knowledge from a perusal of matter printed in the English language. They know the history of matters and things just as well as the man who can read the primer or write his own name in the English language. It is a surprise to me that men of such intelligence should attempt to spring such a proposition as this upon this convention. I cannot believe that the intelligence of seventy-five men will ever permit any such thing to go into the constitution of the State of Montana. Why, submit a constitution to the people of this territory with that provision in it, and I will take the stump and borrow money to get a living, while I am doing it, and try my best to prevent its ever being adopted by the people of the State of Montana. It would be an outrageous thing, and I do not believe that when it came to go before the people that any intelligent, honest, upright man that believed in a republican form of government, that believed in a government by the people, for the people and of the people, would ever say that he would cast a vote to adopt that constitution. It is a fanatical idea; it is all nonsense. Why mention was made here of socialists and anarchists and the Clan ne Gaels and all that sort of thing. Study up the history of the Haymarket riot in Chicago, and you will find the most educated and intelligent men, not only at the head of that affair, but the entire body of them connected with it. Would they be ostracised under this provision? No, they can vote; but a poor honest man, whom circumstances and conditions did not permit to be born in this world where he had an opportunity of getting an education, and who has lived perhaps either in this country or some other until he is thirty or forty years of age, and comes here with a family with sufficient means to establish some little business, or perhaps open up a farm out here on the prairies—he attends to his business, he reads the papers in his own language, but he is prohibited from casting the expression of his honest, intelligent opinion upon public men and public affairs; and yet you say that the anarchistic, socialistic rascal, educated in the ways and the tricks of modern times and in the English language, as well, can go and cast his vote at the polls, and the other man shall be forever ostracised in the state of Montana. It is an outrageous thing to contemplate. It is anything but republican in idea, and I cannot believe that the intelligence of this body will ever permit such a contemptible proposition to be embodied in the constitution of the State of Montana.

Mr. Joy, of Park: The gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) who has last spoken, has made one good point, and that is that it would be a good idea to appoint a commission of lunacy to examine the heads of this convention, including particularly the head of the gentleman from Custer. Laughter and applause.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Three-fourths of the virtue and half of the intelligence of this country are excluded altogether from the ballot, and it excites no comment and no protest on the part of the gentleman, but he works himself into a sort of rage over this proposition. I am not profoundly impressed with the sincerity of the convictions of the gentleman who has just spoken, and although he may suggest that those who favor this substitute are proper subjects for a commission de lunatico in-quendo, I would say on their part that they have not placed themselves in the ridiculous position which he has done in saying that those who favor this proposition making a limited educational qualification necessary, which is within the reach of all, every person in the United States—that they are hable to follow it up with a millionaire qualification, which is only within the reach of few at best. I say that a proposition of that kind is an insult to the intelligence of this convention, and is an impeachment of the common sense of the man who utters it. Applause. This provision is in the interest of education, and every man here favors education; and if a man finds it is necessary that he shall learn to read and write before he can exercise the franchise, it will be an inducement for him to do so. It really disfranchises no man. It is in the interest of good government, and I hope it will pass.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I wish to say for a friend of mine here who happens to be raised in Germany—Interrupted.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I believe I will call for the rule requiring that no man shall speak twice on the same amendment until all the other members of the convention who wish to shall speak.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: If you try that on me you never speak twice on a question again. You have violated that rule more than any other man in the convention.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I call for the rule on the gentleman. Under the rule of the house no man can speak twice until all the other members have expressed their views if they so desire.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I will ask for the reading of that rule, I do not know where it is found.

The Chairman: It does apply to the committees of the whole.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I only wish to say this: my friend here from Deer Lodge, Mr. Kolrs, estimates that there are five thousand German newspapers published in the United States; that the German population of the country read them because they can more intelligently understand American affairs published in their native language than they can in the English. A great many of these people cannot read and write in the English language, who are considered classical scholars in the German language. Now, this would disfranchise all such people as that, and I am opposed to it.

Mr. Brazleton, of Jefferson: I would just like to ask these gentlemen who have so ably defended this clause if they lived in Florida instead of in Montana would they advocate the same measure.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Yes, I would. I think it is a good thing anywhere. I want you to distinctly understand that there is no party question in it. It seems to me that if a man cannot rise on this floor and express an opinion upon matters without being charged with party feeling, that it is high time we were placing a limit on this thing. I pretend to say no man has gone into this thing with more sincerity than I have, and I have advocated it, and I believe it to be a good question.

Mr. Schmidt, of Silver Bow: I offer an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Park.

The Chairman: The gentleman is not in order. We are disposing of an amendment to an amendment now.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I would like to say that I have been a very good listener this morning on this question, and I have heard nothing that convinces me yet but that the resolution that has been offered by the gentleman from Park, Mr. Joy, or the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, is a good resolution. I hope it will pass.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not wish to engage in any extended remarks, my sentiments having been so well expressed by many of the speakers who have preceded me, but I wish to say that language, whether written or spoken, is only a medium for the transmission of ideas. I do not care about the medium, but I do stand for the quality of the idea: I do stand for patriotism, I do stand for honor, for honesty and morality. I care not how the tongue may stammer, I care not about the language which those virtues speak. I am not here today to aid the gentlemen in the erection of any barriers making a distinction between citizens who come to this country after the adoption of the constitution and those who have previously resided here. Let any man come from any foreign country he may, provided he comes with his heart full of patriotism for American institutions, and if that man be a man of honesty and morality he has my right hand of fellowship. (Applause)

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I desire to ask how many amendments there are pending now to this resolution.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Missoula offered an amendment. The gentleman from Gallatin offered an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Clarke, of Silver Bow: I would inquire of the Chair if the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula was not in the form of a substitute, and that the only amendment besides that offered was by the gentleman from Park.

The Chairman: The Chair is of the opinion that the gentleman from Silver Bow is correct.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Then, as I understand it, there is but one amendment offered to the printed copy. According to the rules, then, it is my opinion that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow is in order, according to rule eighteen of Jefferson's Manual, that whenever there is a motion made to strike out and insert, which is contemplated by the substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula, the question shall be considered as two questions for the purpose of amendment, and that portion which it is intended to strike out shall take precedence and the friends of that measure may offer amendments to it, and until they are satisfied with it, or until it is rejected, as the case may be.

before the question upon striking out shall be considered, so that I believe that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow being only the second amendment to the printed copy, as it now stands, is in order.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I desire to call attention to rule forty-one, which provides that a substitute shall be deemed an amendment and treated in all respects as such. Now, although the gentleman from Missoula offers his substitute under that name, it should, under our rules, be treated as an amendment, and the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin should be treated as an amendment to the amendment. We now have two amendments before us, and that is all that can be admitted under parliamentary law.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I should like to ask the question whether the resolution I introduced here a number of days ago is now pending.

The Chairman: The Chair understands that the resolution offered by the gentleman from Park is being considered as a part of Section No. 2 of General File No. 12, which is now under consideration.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I would state that that is contrary to the ruling of this convention. Heretofore the report of the committee has been acted upon and treated and disposed of first. Then these propositions reported adversely have been taken up and acted upon.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: Mr. Chairman I move that the Committee rise and ask leave to sit again.

Motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, if this question is debatable I just wish to say this, that now, since we have discussed this question, it is the proper time to take a vote.

The Chairman: The gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Richards of Silver Bow: I offer an amendment, Mr. Chairman, that when we rise we ask for more time to consider the proposition now before us.

There being no second to said motion the Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead (Mr. Witter), and a division being called for, the vote stood thirty-five in the affirmative to thirty-three in the negative.

The Chair announced that the motion was carried.

IN CONVENTION

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration General File No. 12, and beg to report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the committee of the whole reports that said committee has had under consideration General File No. 12, and have made progress, and desire leave to sit again. If there be no objection leave will be granted.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move that we do now take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Convention took a recess until 2 P. M.

Thursday July 25, 1889.

Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 2 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Upon taking a recess the convention was engaged in the consideration of General Orders. The Committee of the Whole asked leave to sit again. What is the pleasure of the convention.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: If there be no objection the committee on irrigation would like to report.

The President: Is there any objection to receiving the report of the committee on irrigation?

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move you sir that this convention resolve itself into a committee of the whole and continue the consideration of proposition No. 14.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: Do I understand there is objection made to receiving the report of the committee on irrigation?

The President: No, sir. There is a motion before the house.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) and the motion was declared carried.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Cooper will resume the chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin in the chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The question before the committee is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman).

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, according to rule No. 22 a resolution should be limited to one subject. Now the resolution offered by the gentleman from Gallatin I believe contains two subjects. First it provides that a voter shall be a citizen of the United States, and also puts in a test or qualification of a voter as to whether he can read or write. I would ask that these be divided and acted upon separately.

The Chairman: The Chair is of the opinion that the subject matter of the amendment is germane to the question under debate.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: Mr. Chairman, the discussion of the proposition offered by the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) has assumed somewhat of a large range, and I wish to say now that I have almost been upon the fence half of the time. I am in favor of the proposition of the gentleman from Gallatin to erect a higher standard as a qualification for voters, but I do not think at this period of our progress in the history of Montana that we are quite ready for it. I think that perhaps his speech and the speech of the Honorable gentleman from Silver Bow as a matter of education was worthy of all this day's session of this constitutional convention. I would be in favor of a proposition of that kind provided, that it should not take effect immediately. The chief objection, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of this committee, that I have to the adoption of this proposition at this time, is that we are a new country. We have not yet two hundred thousand people. We are desirous of having more laborers. Have our country settled up, and there will come in the progress of immigration here, I hope within five or ten years at least enough to make a million inhabitants. This proposition is that it shall take effect when this constitution is adopted. It shall not affect any citizen a resident of the state of Montana at that time. But, gentlemen of the committee, it will affect every one else who will come thereafter, who cannot read and write in the English language. Now, you know as well as I, that there are a great many very good people, worthy citizens and patriots, who are likely to come to this country. Take the instance that the gentleman from Custer illustrated, and under the technical provisions of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin these men will be disfranchised. Mr. Chairman I had a little over four years experience in a controversy that we had here within the memory of most of the members of this convention. Of the company that I took into service in that controversy there were eleven men who could not write their own names, but if I remember distinctly the services of those men, they were as brave and true and as patriotic as any one. I do not believe that the mere matter of being able to read the constitution of the United States in English, or write a name, should be a distinctive qualification for citizenship, and I say in connection with this statement, that I would like to see the standard erected higher than it is now. But do that, gentlemen, with your common schools, and do that in the interest of the nation in a way not to say that we propose now at this time to say, that those who have not had the advantage of education heretofore shall in this young and progressive country be subjected to such a test. In reading history, Mr. Chairman, I think the most of these gentlemen are familiar with the fact that when the barons of England went to King John and with sword in hand demanded of him Magna-Charta, the liberties of England, the basis upon which the declaration of independence was made, and following that the constitution of the United States of our fathers a little over one hundred years ago—If you gentlemen will go and examine that old Magna Charta you will find that not one-half of the petitioners could sign their names, but were compelled to sign them with a cross. And going back a little over history again, take the revolutionary war. How many of our fathers—and I say Mr. President, upon this occasion, that we are not indebted to God Almighty so much for the blessings of liberty, as to the men who worked and fought for the liberties of this country—if we had depended upon the great Father, in whom I believe, for the blessings of liberty, and had not our ancestors and forefathers of the revolutionary war taken their swords and muskets in hand, we would today be sitting under British rule. As an instance of history, at the battle of the Cowpens, Colonel Washington, who was a cousin of the father of our country met Colonel Tarlton and signally defeated him; and in Tarlton's retreat from the Cowpens, Washington fought with his sword in his hand struck him a blow in the shoulder that left a scar there that he carried to his grave. A few days after Tarlton's retreat and disaster he was dining with a lady in the state of South Carolina who was intensely loyal and true to the cause of human freedom, but she was polite. She entertained Colonel Tarlton at her table, and in speaking of the battle of the Cowpens, Tarlton was very much disgusted with his defeat and he said to this lady, "why I understand that that fellow cannot even write his own name," "well", said the lady, "Colonel, at least he can make his mark." Laughter and applause.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I have been very much interested in this discussion, but have only a word to say. Theoretically I am in favor of this amendment. I would like not only to have every voter possessed of the qualifications proposed in this amendment, but of many other qualifications and virtues. But practically, I fear its operation if it should become a part of the fundamental law. Reference has already been made to the exclusion of many persons who are men of intelligence and standing who would be prevented from exercising the right of suffrage on account of physical infirmities. I may add still another class, and that is the blind of America, who are perhaps the most intelligent and self-supporting class of the whole country, without an exception, as a class. There are several objections to the practical operation of such an enactment. So far as forfeiture or adopted citizens are concerned I have not any doubt but that there would be scarcely one of them but that in two years would be able to prepare a ballot to comply with all the regulations of the territory; and, further, I have that confidence in the genius and ingenuity of the American citizen to believe that whether he could read or write or not, he would find some one to get his ballot into the box in the way he wanted it. There is another objection as to the classification of persons, in reference to those who would be here at the time of the adoption of the constitution and qualified voters at that time, and those who came afterwards. That would lead to constant and continual contention and turmoil at every election to be held at the polls for the next twenty years. Further it seems to me that there is under the present Australian System which has been adopted an incentive to education almost as great as that which would be required by the adoption of the educational qualification, for in many cases the person who could not read and write would be ashamed to betray his ignorance at the polls. For these reasons, which are a few of the objections which I can see as to the practical operation of the law, I am opposed to the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I had not intended to take any part in this discussion, but it appears to me that it is really necessary to do so. I am satisfied that this amendment is clearly in conflict with the articles of the constitution of the United States, or that a portion of it at least is. Your amendment provides that this educational qualification shall not interfere with any one who is a voter and has heretofore been a voter in the territory of Montana. Well, the, Mr. Chairman, it will then be supposed that people who come here afterwards, who can neither read nor write, would be excused from voting. People who happen to be fortunate enough to move into the territory at the present time could forever hereafter vote whether they could read or write or not; and it would then be a question as to whether certain persons were citizens of Montana territory at the time of the adoption of this constitution. Now, you must see Mr. Chairman, that that discriminates against the same class of persons residing in other states; that is, we provide that people living in the territory of Montana at the time of the adoption of this constitution who can neither read nor write can vote for all time, and in the same instrument we provide that those who reside in any other state or territory who cannot read nor write, who may come here hereafter, shall not be entitled to vote. Now, we have a provision in the federal constitution which reads like this "the citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities as citizens in the several states". Now I am perfectly satisfied that this amendment is in direct conflict with that provision of the constitution of the United States. Of course, that does not bear upon the main question. If you say that all parties, whether living in the territory of Montana at the time of the adoption of this constitution or living some where else, who can neither read nor write shall not be allowed to vote, of course that remedies this defect, but unless you do that, unless you include everybody now residing in the United States who may come here hereafter, then it is liable to this objection. Now, Mr Chairman, so far as I am personally concerned, outside of this objection, I would be in favor of this amendment, if I thought its practical working would be in accordance with the theories advanced here, and if the gentlemen advocating this measure can convince me that the effect of it will be that the evil which they desire to remedy will be reached and eradicated, I will gladly and cheerfully support this amendment; but I do not believe that it will. I suppose the evil they intend to meet is to exclude all the ignorant, vicious and criminal classes from voting. Now, they should be excluded and I am decidedly in favor of excluding them, if the ingenuity of this convention can provide any means by which they can be excluded. But this amendment will not do that, Mr. Chairman. I venture to say, and I venture to ask this convention if it is not a fact, that you take the army of France, which infests every state and territory in the United States today, and I will venture to say that four hundred and ninety-nine out of every five hundred can both read and write, and a great many of them can read and write in a half dozen languages. Now, so far as I am concerned, I would not have any of those men vote, and on the other hand, I believe education does not consist alone in learning to read and write. Everything we do is a matter of education; it is not known as education, but it is education in fact. You take these young men for instance. One when he is quite young is put by his parents at a trade; he learns to be a good carpenter, blacksmith or cooper, or learns any useful trade; he puts in his time and his talent and works at it day and night; he gives his whole time and attention to it; he never goes to school, but he learns his trade well and works at it. He becomes an honest, industrious, striving, law-abiding citizen, accumulates property, obeys the law, pays tax, is ready to shoulder his musket in support of the institutions of the country, and by every act and every deed and everything he does, is supporting the institutions of the country, thoroughly patriotic in every respect; thoroughly imbued with the future of the United States, believing in it in every regard. Now, it so happens that he has put in his time learning this trade. He has never gone to school, never learned to read and write. Now, take the other young man who never learns any trade, never learns anything by which he can make a living, but he does go to school, and he does learn to read and write, but he learns nothing else. Now, the one is a self-reliant, law-abiding, self-supporting man, whom the community might well be proud of, and you shut him out and say he shall not vote; the other is entirely worthless, no good to himself or anyone else, but he has learned enough to comply with the requirements which this test provides, and consequently he can vote. Now, there is a picture of the two parties. Every tramp in the country can vote, but the very men who are the foundations of the society upon which we so much plume ourselves, the law-abiding citizen, who makes a living for himself and his family, who is never arrested for any crime and who helps support the government in every way he possibly can, you shut out. Now, if there is any way, as I have said, by which you can shut out this criminal class and these dissolute people who have no possible means of support, and who do not vote except for what they can sell their vote for, if you have any possible means by which they can be shut out, I am heartily in accord with it. But I do not believe this substitute will do it. If you say that every young man that has no visible means of support shall not vote, you will come nearer to it. I believe it is almost impossible, indeed impossible, to provide any means by which you can exclude the class of people you desire to exclude, and allow the people you want, to vote. I am opposed to this amendment for this reason, that it will not affect the thing you are trying to do. One reason is that it is in conflict with the constitution of the United States, and the other is that it does not accomplish what we want to.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, the question before this committee for consideration today is a very interesting one, and one upon which much may be said for and against. I have listened with a great deal of interest and pleasure to the discussion of this question this morning, and I believe that what is to be said or may be said in favor of this proposition has been thoroughly and well said; but I doubt whether or not the reasons adduced by these gentlemen are sufficiently comprehensive to warrant them in taking the ground upon which they stand upon this question. I doubt very much as to the breadth of the proposition upon which they stand. I do not believe in confining the right of suffrage to such narrow limits. I believe that in the exercise of suffrage it should be as broad and as wide and as liberal as is consistent with the institutions of this country, and I am not one to believe that the institutions of this country or the liberties of this State are to be endangered or in any way menaced by extending the right of suffrage to the few men that may be found within its confines who are unable to read and write the English language. I appreciate, I think, as fully as anyone the advantages of education; I appreciate the importance of encouraging education; and so far as this proposition may be an inducement to anyone to learn to read and write the English language, it is a good one; but I doubt the propriety of exercising such a penalty upon the misfortune of not being able to read and write. Now, to be unable to understand the language—to read and write the language—is a misfortune, and I don't believe that a misfortune of this kind should be visited by such a penalty as that. I am in favor of withholding the right of suffrage from foreigners coming to this country until they have lived here a sufficient length of time to enable them to acquire the rights of full citizenship. I am in favor of this proposition because I would have those men have sufficient time in which to study the institutions of this country, to become familiar with our laws and our language, if it may be, but having fulfilled these requirements so far as a knowledge of the institutions of this country is concerned, and having an intelligent view of the condition of things so far as that is concerned, if by reason of circumstances—by reason of financial circumstances or physical inability or other reasons he be unable to acquire a knowledge of the language, either to read or write it, I do not believe we should deny him the right of suffrage for that reason. The reference the gentleman from Jefferson made to the question of forcing these men to vote, I do not think has a direct application to this measure. If men in this territory have been compelled to vote against their wishes—and I do not deny that this has been done in several instances, and the rights of human liberty have been thus abridged, and I may say trampled upon—I submit to you that I do not believe that the man who exercises that influence stops to enquire whether or not that man can read and write the English language, nor do I believe that it would make any difference if a man can be thus unduly influenced to exercise his vote in the interest of his employer. I do not believe that the fact of his knowing or his not knowing the English language will have anything to do with the matter. There are reasons which are nearer and more potent than that; which affect perhaps the question of the loss of his situation. As I understand it, the exercise of this provision is only to extend to those who may hereafter become citizens of this territory, and that it is not to extend to those who may be here when Montana enters the union of States. Now, I submit to you the question of whether or not that is correct. Is it proper or right that a man from accidental circumstances should be deprived of the right of suffrage? Is it republican, as is required by the enabling act by which we are framing this constitution? Is it proper that we should have here one class of men who by reason of accidental circumstances should be extended the right of suffrage, and another class of men who in all respects are equally qualified should be deprived of that right? Differences would arise likewise as to the question of determining whether this man who claims the right to vote happened to be here upon the day when Montana's constitution was submitted and ratified by the people of this state. I say that this proposition as it is now before this committee and this convention, presents insuperable difficulties, and there is not sufficient importance to be attached to the proposition that a man shall be able to read and write the English language to entitle him to the right of suffrage, to entail upon us the consequences of the adoption of the proposition, which may even endanger this constitution. Hence, I am in favor of the main proposition and that this amendment shall not prevail.

The question was called for.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, in order that we may get a direct vote and save as much time as possible, I move that all the amendments to the report of the committee be laid upon the table and indefinitely postponed. We will get at it more accurately.

The Chairman: The gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Then I withdraw my motion.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I am satisfied there are a good many people here who do not desire to vote either one way or the other on this proposition as it stands. There are a number of questions involved, and by dividing them they can vote as they see fit on them. Therefore, I ask that the motion be put, and these questions be divided and separated so that the members may vote upon each one.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I think now that we have had this bill under consideration ever since we met this morning, and have discussed it in pretty thorough shape, that it should be submitted to the House. If any of the members desire to make any distinction as to the provisions of this bill, they have a right to do so hereafter. I do not want to see this discussion prolonged, and I think it is nothing more than just that the bill be submitted to us in order that we may vote on it now.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I would ask for the reading of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Clerk read the amendment for the information of the gentleman.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move you, sir, that that amendment be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford), and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Joy, of Park: If another amendment is in order I desire to offer one.

The Chairman: There are two amendments on the table now. The question now is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I call for the reading of the amendment.

The Clerk read the said amendment, being the substitute of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, for the information of the committee.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, it will be observed by the members of the convention that the substitute offered by myself contains several propositions, differing somewhat from the original proposition introduced by the committee. To the first proposition I propose to say nothing; in other words, I do not propose to argue before this convention the propriety of conferring upon those persons who have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States the right of suffrage, nor do I propose to argue the proposition contained in the substitute concerning the persons or idiots or insane persons having the right to vote, because I think that is covered by section 8 of the proposition presented by the committee. However, the proposition which I do propose to discuss before the convention is the last contained in the section which I offered, and that is that the legislature shall have the power to confer upon women the rights and privileges of electors to vote in any or all elections. In the first place it must be remembered by the members of this convention that in proposing for the people of this territory a constitution that we are creating a fundamental law: one which, so far as we are concerned, is intended to last for all time. It then becomes our duty to weigh carefully every proposition that is submitted here as bearing upon the future welfare of the people of this territory, and of the territory itself. The right of suffrage has been discussed to a considerable length here this morning, and very ably discussed from many standpoints, but it has not been discussed from the standpoint of woman suffrage. While I am not at the present time in favor of conferring upon the women the right of suffrage, while I am opposed to the conferring upon them the right of suffrage, it is their own fault it is so. The reason is because they do not avail themselves of the privilege of suffrage at the time when it is conferred upon them; but I do say in this connection that the right of suffrage is just as much a natural right to the women part of creation as it is to mankind. I say then that this proposition, or the right perhaps of suffrage, is either a natural right which comes to us in the same way that the right to live, to breathe and to exist comes, or it is a right which is conferred upon us by the state in which we live. Viewed from either of the standpoints mentioned, it is still a right which should be conferred upon the women; viewed in either way it is a right which belongs to them, because they are just as capable of exercising the right of suffrage as mankind is, just as capable of discriminating so far as voting is concerned as are the men. In the early days of this country, as was argued here this morning, the right of suffrage was universal so far as men were concerned. They all voted. Very soon there was enacted a law in the Colonies, and the law remained upon the statute books for a period of about thirty-three years, which conferred the right of suffrage only upon male citizens residing in the Colonies over the age of twenty-one years and who belonged to some particular church. It was discovered that this disfranchised about three-fourths of the men residing in the Colonies, and this restriction was removed. Following along down the line of history, we find that the different states in the Union have prescribed certain restrictions as to the right of suffrage, and while at the present time there are only two states in the Union which provide that there shall be an educational qualification for voters—the states of Massachusetts and Connecticut—we find that the other states have had just such a provision in the constitution. At the present time the right of suffrage is extended almost universally to the male part of the population, those over twenty-one years of age and residing a certain time within the limits of the particular district in which they seek to vote. That being the historical view of the matter, very briefly stated, we find that in 1866 there was established in the United States what was known as a woman's suffrage association. This was the immediate outgrowth of the fact that about that time there was enfranchised in the south nearly one million voters who before that time occupied a position of servitude, who had been slaves in fact. At that time the argument was advanced and urged by the people of this country with every appearance of reason and fairness that if the government of the United States was about to enfranchise a million voters of the ignorant classes, that it was only fair that this reform should go one step further and enfranchise the women. They said "we are superior to the negroes; we can cast a more intelligent vote than the negroes; we can cast a ballot that will reflect the sentiment of this country better than the persons who have just come from a state of servitude," and that argument, I think, has never been refuted to this day. But the movement, commencing as it did in the eastern states, did not find a very wide-spread encouragement, and in fact it has been growing very slowly from that time down to the present time. I think we can gather from the pages of history the fact that this movement inaugurated as it was at that time has been gaining ground and has been gaining in public favor from that time down to the present. If it is true then that the sentiment in favor of woman suffrage has been gaining ground, if we find from the signs of the times that the sentiment is gaining favor, ought we not in our constitution to make a provision which will make it possible for the Legislature to confer the right of suffrage upon women, if in the future it becomes the prevailing public sentiment that they should have the right to vote? (Applause.) I believe that to be the correct argument and the correct position in this matter. I want to take as conservative a position as is possible. I want to confer no right but what would be justified by the sentiment of the people of this great territory of Montana, and at the same time I want to loosen every bond, every thread, which would bind us to the traditions of the past, if it is found that that thread ought to be severed. Now, sir, in the state of Massachusetts in the year 1878, we find by reference to history that the republican convention of that state in that year recognized upon the floor of the convention Lucy Stone and Mary A. Livermore, the first women who ever in the history of the United States appeared upon the political arena in a convention of politicians. We find that in 1878 the republican platform—the general platform of the republican party—recognized this in their platform as a principle which should receive at the hands of the republican party a fair consideration. We find then that from that time on there has been organized in this country a political party known as The Woman's Rights party. It has grown so far as to place in the field a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, and notwithstanding the fact that the lady who was placed at the head of that ticket did not see fit to go to the polls and cast her vote in favor of herself, still we know that the lady who was the candidate of that party was worthy of the esteem of every American citizen, not only because she was a woman, not only because she was possessed of the qualifications of a voter, not only because from her education and experience she could cast a ballot which would reflect credit upon any American citizen, but also because of the fact that she took an interest in these matters, and should under all natural laws be entitled to cast her vote and to have her views in the administration of public affairs reflected. Then we find, tracing the movement a little further, that in many of the states and territories, or at least a few of the states and territories, the right to vote has been conferred upon women. We find that the right has been conferred upon women to vote in the state of Kansas in municipal matters, and in matters appertaining to the schools. The reports which come to us from Kansas concerning this right and the exercise of it by women demonstrate the fact that it has been wisely used. We find that in those municipalities where the women have taken an active part in the management of municipal affairs that they have in a measure at least purified the administration of public justice, and I have here, sir, in the Helena Journal of July 24th, 1889, a letter from Mrs. Humphrey referring to woman suffrage as it affects the people of Kansas. The letter is to Hon. Judge Morris. She says, "Yours in which you ask an opinion upon the subject of woman's suffrage &c. has been received.

"In reply I would say that personally I have not been accounted among the enthusiastic advocates, much less an agitator in behalf of woman suffrage, and hence my opinion," etc.

That is the substance of the letter, Mr. Chairman, and I need not refer further to that. Enough it is to say that in every place where the right has been conferred upon women it has been for the good of the polls. It is not a fact that the fears of those who oppose the measure are realized, nor are the hopes of the friends of the movement entirely realized. It is not true that by going to the polls the woman is degraded to the level of the man, nor is it true that on the other hand the difficulties that present themselves to every honest American citizen are entirely done away with. It is not true that the ballot is purified to any great extent by the presence of women, nor is it true that she suffers from any contaminating influences which she finds at the polls. Therefore, taking this conservative view of the matter, and believing that as the framers of a fundamental law, as the persons who sit here for the purpose of saying what the rights of our citizens shall be for perhaps years to come, I say that this right should be conferred upon the Legislature. The Legislature is quick to respond to any public sentiment which may grow in this direction; the Legislature is quick to respond when it is found that the sentiment of the people is in favor of conferring a right; the Legislature can, under the provisions of the substitute which I have offered, proceed to confer upon women the right to vote in the same way that men have that right, and if in their discretion, if in their judgment at some future time they should believe that women should have the right to vote, I believe they should have the power to confer upon them this right. Not long since I saw in a paper published in Washington Territory that our sister territory was struggling with this same question. It was there stated that on account of the Seattle fire it was impossible to present a petition which contained the names of twenty-five thousand people who asked of the constitutional convention of Washington that this right be conferred upon women. Now, this is in a territory, mind you, gentlemen, where the right of suffrage has been conferred upon women; this is in a territory where they have tried the experiment, and found that it does not militate against their institutions. This is in a territory where two or three years of experience has shown them it is wise to confer this right upon women; this is in a territory, too, where the Supreme Court of the territory has decided that the law under which women were allowed to vote was an unconstitutional law. And so it is, in every stage of the march and progress of this movement from the year 1868 down to the present time there have been difficulties encountered which would have appalled any less courageous persons than the ladies who have this movement in charge. There have been difficulties which have seemed almost insurmountable; there has been the selfishness of mankind who desire to control the political affairs of this country; there have been the prejudices which have grown up on persons from their infancy to manhood, and become a part of them; and in the face of all those difficulties I say that the sentiment of the people of the United States has been growing steadily in favor of woman suffrage. It has been growing in favor of woman suffrage for the very reasons that have been urged here this morning, and for that matter against the proposition introduced by the gentleman from Park, and the gentleman from Gallatin. They have urged against it, or they have urged in favor of this, that the women are not among the criminal classes. It is proposed in this proposition, No. 14, that the criminal classes shall be excluded from the right of suffrage, or at least that that portion of them who are so unfortunate as to go within the walls of the penitentiary. There is an argument right in that one fact in favor of woman suffrage, that it is almost impossible for the opponents of the movement to overcome, because it is shown by the statistics of this country that not one-tenth of the criminal classes come from the woman's side. There is a further proposition. They say that the criminal classes are not entitled to the right of suffrage because they are the enemies of the very laws that are enacted. They say that the criminal classes shall be excluded from the right of suffrage because they infringe these laws, and so far as that is concerned, if it is a guide in framing this constitution, then we should confer the right of suffrage upon women. But I am not arguing that question. I am simply arguing the proposition of allowing the Legislature to provide the means by which women can vote. I am arguing a proposition by which the women of this country can, if the public sentiment warrants it in the future, go to the polls and vote as any other American citizen. There are so many reasons that might be urged in favor of this proposition that it is impossible within the limits of the time I feel I have to speak to the convention to urge them all upon you. I feel that every man who has a wife, every man who has a mother, every man who has a woman friend that he respects, should vote in favor of this proposition, because he owes it to them. I believe he should vote in favor of this proposition because by so doing he will add one ornament at least to the bright crown of the state of Montana. (Applause) I believe, sir, that it will be a step in the onward march of progress. I believe it will be a step in the march of political progress, of which no man in this convention will ever be ashamed. I believe, sir, in arguing this proposition or any possible substitute, that every member of this convention will do himself justice and will do his constituents justice, and that they will approve all that he does; that they will be proud of him as a man, liberal enough in his convictions to allow him to vote as he thought proper in the interest of progress, in the interest of good government; and in the interest of nothing more nor less than an act of simple actual justice. (Applause)

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: While I concur in a great deal that has been enunciated by the gentleman who has just taken his seat, it appears to me that he has not been as circumspect in selecting his text as my old friend, John Dickey, was in Pennsylvania. He had been employed to preach for a congregation, and was nearly starved to death with the promises they had given him of support. John was a man of large proportions, with a wonderful appetite, and nothing made him suffer so much as to go hungry; and he took for his text one Sunday morning the saying of David: "And I said in my haste that all men are liars"; he said, "but, my dearly beloved hearers, if David had lived in this day and generation and been pastor of this congregation, he might have made the announcement at his leisure." So I say my friend is not as circumspect as old John Dickey was. Now, while I endorse every word he says in regard to woman suffrage, I think he has introduced it in the wrong time. I want this matter of suffrage to come up during the latter days of my existence when I can put myself upon record without any embarrassment or any sense of gratitude. If he thinks more of the ladies than I do and have for the last fifty years, he is a wonderful man—a very wonderful man (laughter), and I say here I want the question proposed fairly and squarely. And I thought when he got up here in the face of this fashionable audience that he was a good deal like old Adam in the Garden of Eden when he tasted of the forbidden fruit. God took his cane and walked around there in the garden—I don't know whether He had a cane, but He took something anyhow—and said “Adam, where are thou?” and Adam came out from under a bush—or whatever they had there in the Garden of Eden—and then the Lord went on and told him what he had said about the tree of life and the garden, and the old coward got up and said, said he, “the woman tempted me.” Now, I don’t want any excuse of temptations or anything of that kind. I want the man who is in favor of female suffrage to introduce a negative and independent proposition, and so help me God, I will support him. (Applause) When I come to consider the matter as I have for many years, I think it is right. And why not? Where did I get my intellect from, what little I have, but from the good mother who bore me? Where did I get my consolation from when I had the colic in infancy? It was from the spoon, and from the little package of medicament containing catnip, peppermint or pennyroyal. When I was sick on my bed who consoled me? My mother. Who taught me what little I know of the world to come. That mother. She gave me every inspiration that has ever tended to ennoble me however much I may have held it off. She gave me my intelligence, my education, and everything, and for me to turn around now and say she shall not be allowed the same rights I enjoy would be sacrilege and would merit the reprobation of Heaven as it would of men on earth. And I say to my friend if he will bring a proposition up here that is fair and square—I am not going around looking for popular clamor or popular fame or anything of that kind—but if he will bring that proposition up fairly and squarely, I will support it if I die in my tracks. (Applause)

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the question ought to be divided, and I therefore move a division of the question. There are two or three independent and separate propositions, and some of them I would like to support and others I am opposed to, and for that reason I would like the question divided.

Mr. Marron, of Missoula: I would like to call the attention of the Chair to Rule 41.

The Chairman: The gentleman’s substitute will be in order as soon as the substitute of the gentleman from Missoula is disposed of. The question is upon the substitute of the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that the question be divided, so that the vote may be taken on the separate propositions contained in the substitute and so that the proposition first to be voted upon will be as follows: “In all elections not otherwise provided for in this constitution, every male citizen of the United States, or those who have declared their intention to become such, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have resided in this state during the twelve months immediately preceding such election, shall be entitled to vote.”

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I desire to offer an amendment to strike out the words “or those who have declared their intention to become such.”

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that to strike out those words would bring us back to the original proposition No. 14.

The Chairman: I think the gentleman’s motion to strike out is out of order until the section is perfected.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I desire simply to offer that amendment before the question is put.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Is an amendment in order now to the original section itself?

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clark: I would like to have the proposition read before voting upon it.

The Clerk read the same.

The Chairman: The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I rise to a point of order. I understand that there are two amendments to the section under consideration. Any member, as I understand further, has a right to call for a division of the question when a motion made under such circumstances, that is, with two amendments pending, does not take the course of an original motion; and therefore an amendment under those circumstances to that motion must be ruled out, there being two amendments already pending.

The Chairman: There is but one amendment pending. That question has been divided. The amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow is to the first division.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I simply wish to say that I understood the Chair to say that you ruled out the amendment of the gentleman from Park on the ground that there were two amendments pending.

The Chair: That was the original motion, but the amendment to the amendment has been voted down.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I offer an amendment to the original motion.

The Chairman: It is out of order. There are three other amendments.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to know what we are voting on.

The Clerk read the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) for the information of the gentleman from Custer.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It does not seem to me that that amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow should be made. The qualification of requiring a man to be a full citizen of the United States, which would require him to have resided somewhere in the United States for at least five years, and have taken out his first and second papers, does not seem to me to be conducive to that kind of immigration that we want to have. I believe that a great deal of the foreign immigration that will be likely to come here, if we have a constitution under which they can become citizens without living here pretty nearly one-third of a lifetime is such that we should extend the hand of welcome and say to them "As soon as you are in this territory twelve months and have declared your intention to become a citizen you shall have a voice and vote in our elections." I do not believe that it is desirable in the interests of a new state as sparsely settled as this is at this time, and of such vast territory, to make that sort of qualification. I am opposed to the amendment. I think the original proposition as it stands is correct.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Is not there an amendment submitted by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Marrion?

The Chairman: His is a substitute.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I ask that it be read for information.

The Clerk read the same for the information of the committee as follows: Substitute for Sec. 2. Sec. 2. Every male citizen of the United States and every male person of foreign birth who may have declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States according to law, not less than one nor more than five years before he offers to vote, who is over the age of twenty-one years, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections by the people; First, he shall have resided in the state one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote; Second, he shall have resided in the county, city or town where he shall offer to vote at least sixty days immediately preceding the election.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I called for the reading of that because that is the proposition I propose to support when the time comes. I do not believe we can afford to be more liberal than the rest of the new states around us. Minnesota, Dakota, and our new sister, Washington, have all incorporated provisions that persons who have declared their intentions shall become citizens of the territory. I fully concur in the line of argument made by Judge Knowles the other day in speaking of that class of our people, how their lot is cast with us, how they are out here helping us to develop a new country, to develop its resources, and that they have a common interest with us. He was speaking at that time of the advisability for subjecting them to military duty. I believe that the rights and privileges of a citizen should go with the obligations of a citizen, and I am in favor of making them citizens of the new states. At the same time I am aware of the abuses of naturalization that have been practiced in the territory, having seen voters manufactured upon election day by hundreds, and district and county clerks leaving their offices and going about seeking whom they might naturalize, instead of waiting in their offices for people to present themselves. Now, the proposition offered by the gentleman from Missoula—Interrupted.

The Chairman: I would say that that proposition is not pending.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I know it is not pending, but I am speaking to it.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I think the gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Well, I will speak to the proposition pending and declare my preference for the one that is to come. Now, in the first place it provides that a man shall not be a voter under one year after he has declared his intention. He not only must reside in the territory a year, but he must have declared his intention at least one year before he offers to vote; and it also provides that that declaration of intention shall have no force or effect until five years after it is made. To show that a man is in good faith he must perfect it in five years and become a full citizen. With these precautions I would be in favor of extending the right of suffrage to the class of people therein embraced. If I were living in an old and settled state, I might take a different view of it, but I look upon it that we are all here in a new country; we all have the same ties, common hardships and common dangers, and we are all engaged in the work of developing and building up the resources of this country; and I believe that all who are so engaged should have an equal right in expressing their will as to the conduct of public affairs.

Mr. Clarke, of Silver Bow: I desire to say a word. I do not agree with the gentleman that anyone coming into the United States from any country, no matter what his qualifications may be—and as a rule we know a great many are ignorant people—is entitled to the privilege of suffrage in one year. I do not believe that a man can sufficiently understand this country—as I remarked in a speech recently—I do not believe that he can understand the institutions of this country, understand its laws and its people sufficiently to enable him to vote intelligently upon any subject; and I do not believe that any man coming from a foreign country to the United States should be allowed to cast his vote and have it operate against the vote of any of the people of the State of Montana, within one year. I believe that a residence of five years here in the United States is necessary to qualify a man thoroughly to exercise the right of suffrage. Now, this question of naturalization, as every gentleman here present knows, has been made a matter of barter and exchange. There has never been an important election taken place in this territory but that upon the day of election or within a few days preceding it, hundreds and I may say thousands of men have been brought down to the offices of the Notaries Public, not voluntarily and of their own accord, because they were to become citizens of this great country, but because some politician wanted their vote and said to this man and that, I will pay the expenses of your naturalization papers if you will go down and take them out. What has been the result? Hundreds and hundreds of those men took out their naturalization papers, and some of them probably sold their votes to the politicians and exercised the right of suffrage, and what has been the result of it? I believe that there are thousands of those people in the territory of Montana today who have never completed their papers and become full citizens of the United States; and if the law required them to take out their last papers and become full citizens of the United States, these men would have an inducement to become full citizens of the state or of the United States. As it now stands, these men are without their first papers today, and even if the provision that is mentioned by the gentleman from Missoula in his substitute should be adopted, when the five years expires they will simply go back and renew their intentions to become citizens of the United States in order that they may vote. I do not like to take up the time of the committee, but these are a few of the reasons I have in my mind for the conviction and hope I have that there shall be a qualification of full citizenship in this State, and full citizenship of the United States to entitle a man to vote in the state of Montana. (Applause)

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I trust this amendment will prevail. I would like to call the attention of the gentleman to section one, which has already become a part of the constitution reading "The Militia shall consist of all able-bodied male citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years." This would certainly be very unjust and very inconsistent to allow a man all the privileges of the ballot and to exempt him from military duty and I trust that this amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow will prevail.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I desire, sir, at this time to accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula. I think that the provisions contained in it are wider and more reasonable than those contained in my own provision. I believe that it will subserve the interests of the people and the voters of this territory better than the first part of the proposition which I offered myself and therefore I desire at this time to endorse the substitute for my own amendment.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to make one remark on the subject before it goes to a vote. I dislike very much to consume the time of the convention but it has been the custom, it has been the law, that a man who came over here in good faith and filed his intention to become a citizen of the United States should enjoy the right of suffrage; and it has been held, sirs as one of the cardinal democratic principles of this country—and I may be regarded as a queer one to talk democracy here, but I have had it in my heart for a great many years, and I announce it now as lying at the foundation of my political faith—but these men come here and what do they do? They are required by the constitution and laws of the United States to remain here five years before they can come into full citizenship. Are they exempted from taxation? Not at all. As soon as they acquire a dollar of property, after having declared their intention to become citizens, they are liable to taxation. Are they exempt from military duty? Not at all. They are required to go out and leave their homes and shoulder their muskets and go out in the defense of the liberties of their country. Now, for a mere obstruction, to ignore these fundamental principles of citizenship on account of a mere imaginary technicality—for that is all it is—and ostracise these men from participating in the affairs of the government, is an outrage that would disgrace the Empire of Russia or the Dominion of Turkey.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I just wish to say one word. If the proposition that the gentleman states be true there are twenty-seven states in this Union that have disgraced themselves by enacting laws requiring full citizenship as a qualification to vote.

Mr. Magnus of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman nearly all of those twenty-seven states did that in the earlier days of this republic, and before these naturalization laws were thoroughly discussed. You cannot find it in a new state.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I differ somewhat from my friend here from Custer. I do not think it right or just for a man to come here from another country, and before he learns the ways and customs of the country, and before he is identified with the country, the people or anything else, to allow him to take out his first papers. I had to wait here twenty-one years before I could vote, and I was born and raised in the country. Now, I think when a man comes from a foreign country that he should expect to learn the ways of the country. I hope it will prevail. I do not think it is right or reasonable that a man should be allowed to vote before he knows what he is voting for. I have seen men that had been in the country for several years—I mean they had been in the country long enough to become citizens—and they had never even taken out their first papers; but they happened to be working for some corporation that wanted their vote, and they went up like so many cattle to suit the favor of their employers.

The Chairman: I would like to ask the gentleman from Missoula if he did not accept the amendment of his colleague?

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I accepted the resolution of the gentleman from Missoula to the first part of the proposition which I offered as a substitute for section 2.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I rise to a point of order. My point of order is that the gentleman from Missoula introduced the motion. It was certainly moved to amend that on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow. That motion to amend having been introduced, it is utterly beyond the power of the gentleman from Missoula to accept any subsequent amendment offered by any gentleman without the unanimous consent of this convention.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I should have raised this point of order myself but I supposed the gentleman from Missoula was accepting my amendment all the time. (Laughter)

The Chairman: The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: There may be a little difference in the phraseology of these two amendments, but the effect is the same; the effect of both is to give those who have declared their intentions to become citizens of the United States the right to vote, and to that I am opposed. It makes no difference who introduced it; whether it was introduced by Mr. Marrion of Missoula or Mr. Bickford of Missoula, or whether the gentleman accepts it or whether he does not accept it; I am opposed to both of them. My friend, Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, in discussing this question, says that men who have declared their intention to become citizens are not exempt from military duty. Well, now, I believe this convention has provided that none but citizens of the United States shall bear arms or shall be subject to military duty in the state of Montana.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Citizens of the state.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: It is quite true the constitution has not been adopted. The convention thought otherwise and they have exempted these men who have declared their intention to become citizens from military duty in the state of Montana.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I think the article reads "Citizens of the State."

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I do not think I am mistaken. I think that men who have declared their intention, the way the constitution is so far, are not subject to military duty. Now, my friend, Dr. Burleigh, again argues that because they pay taxes they should be allowed to vote. Now, there is nothing in that, Mr. Chairman, for the reason, he says, they are obliged to be here one year before they can vote. Now, during that one year they have property, and they pay taxes. Now, we have good and wise and beneficent laws of the United States providing that the people of all nations and all climes shall come here and become naturalized, if they so desire. The laws provide how that shall be done, and then when they shall first declare their intention to become citizens, and after having resided in the United States for the term of five years that they may then apply for and receive their full papers, and from that time they become full fledged citizens of the United States, subject to all the duties and liabilities and responsibilities of citizens and to every other duty and to every other responsibility. Now, as long as they are not citizens of the United States they are citizens of the country from which they came, it makes no difference where they came from. The mere fact of coming here and declaring their intention at some future time to become citizens of the United States does not divorce them from their allegiance to the country from which they came. They are just as much citizens of that country after they have declared their intention as before, and it is only by getting out their full papers and renouncing all allegiance and fidelity to the foreign state or potentate that they cease to be citizens of the foreign country and become citizens of the United States. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, we have the spectacle of men who are still citizens of a foreign country, who owe allegiance to that country, who are subject to all the requirements of that country the moment they go back there—the moment they put their foot on foreign soil—we have the spectacle of their coming to this country, and then the next day after declaring their intention, whether they can speak our language or know anything about our institutions and in one year from that time they can vote. I do not believe in that, because I do not believe they can learn or understand anything about our institutions within one year. The fact is that an American citizen, or a man born in America, naturally imbibes the spirit and intention of our institutions; he imbibes them with his nourishment from the time he is born, and he understands more about it at the age of ten years than any man can possibly understand who has only been here one year; and if he will learn the duties of an American citizen in five years he has done exceedingly well, and he has given considerable attention to it if he learns it in five years, if he gets to understand the spirit and intention of our institutions, because they are so radically different from those under which he was reared, and so entirely different from all the laws he has known, that it takes him a long time to understand it. And therefore I say that a citizen of another country should not be allowed to vote or help run the institutions of America. I am perfectly willing that when they have complied with the laws of Congress, and after they have become full-fledged citizens that they shall vote. They are not even subject to jury duty. A man is called upon a jury and is asked whether he is a taxpayer; he says "yes"; then he is asked whether he is a citizen of the United States and if he says he has only procured his first papers he is excused from duty. He is not liable to military or jury duty but he has all the privileges of an American citizen without any of the responsibilities of an American citizen, and I do not believe they should have more privileges than we have ourselves. An American citizen is subject to military and jury duty. These men have the same privileges; they can vote and their property is protected by the laws; they have the same protection without the responsibility. Now, while I am willing, when they have complied with the laws of Congress, to give them the same privileges that we have, I am not in favor of giving them any more. These gentlemen who are in favor of giving them the privileges of citizenship within one year's time are in favor of giving them more privileges than an American citizen has. They give him all the privileges without casting upon him any of the responsibilities. Now, Mr. Chairman, there is no country in the world where an American citizen can go and declare his intention to become a citizen of that country and be allowed to vote. The fact is that we are doing more for these people than they ever do by us in any of the countries they come from and it does appear to me that even citizens who are foreign born and who have been in this country long enough to understand the spirit and intention of our institutions must know by their own experience and must understand that a man is not sufficiently acquainted with the spirit and intention of the institutions of the United States to cast an intelligent vote in one year after he comes here. If there is any doubt about it in his mind, if he will go down to Castle Garden in New York and see them as they land there—see all the criminals of the whole world landing there at Castle Garden, and then think that these people can vote in one year after they get here, he will soon get an understanding of the question. The fact is, we are making of the United States a Botany Bay for the whole world and making it an asylum for all the halt and the blind and all the lepers, and then you turn around and say that these people, with all their crimes, who are sent to the United States—you want to make them in one year's time after declaring their intentions full-fledged American citizens who shall help to run our institutions and shall say who shall hold our offices; and one vote of this kind can kill the vote of the best man in Montana territory—a man who has made a lifetime study of the spirit and intention of our institutions and knows what is best to be done, and the man who is doing the best he can for America and for her sons and daughters—his vote is neutralized by the vote of one of these people who have been here only one year and have declared their intention to become citizens. I do not think it is right, and therefore I shall vote against it. (Applause)

Mr. Magmuis, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not like to trouble the convention more, but I wish to say a few words in reply to my friend from Silver Bow. Now, it has been the law in this territory from the beginning, except one term, when the Legislature changed the qualifications of voters, and as my friend from Missoula said, Judge Knowles opened a special term of court, in order that the men should not get out a license. Now, my friend from Silver Bow says that when a man declares his intention to become a citizen he is still subject as a citizen to a foreign power. If Bismarck, the chancellor of the German empire should undertake to force the view of the naturalization laws which my friend has enunciated—if England should again try to do it—if France or any other country should try to do it, we would have a repetition of the spirit that showed itself when Colonel Ingraham threatened to open his guns upon the Austrian frigate because they attempted to take the body of Martin who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States. The party especially to which he and I belong—and I do not bring this in as a party question—fought a war upon that very issue in 1812, and prosecuted it to a successful conclusion; and after it was over maintained that high standard that a man who had declared his intention of becoming a citizen of this territory should be protected by the Stars and Stripes wherever it floated, in every quarter of the globe. The American people have held to that doctrine from that time to this, and consequently the argument of my friend in that respect certainly must fail. Now, if we adopt this constitution in the way it is reported from the committee, we will disfranchise men who have voted in this territory and who have voted for the gentleman, who voted for me, and who voted for every member who sits on this floor—men who cast their votes that we might come here, that we might make this constitution, who will disfranchise them by our act in this convention. Do you think it is right and wise to do that? Do you think it is right and wise to be less liberal, as I said, than all the states around us? The matter is taken verbatim from the constitution of Missouri, of Minnesota, of Iowa, of Nebraska, and Kansas, and Illinois, and of all these new states. It is true as my friend from Silver Bow [Mr. Clark] said that twenty-seven states of the Union have a different clause in their constitution, but nearly all of those constitutions were made long ago, and to the most of those states immigration has rarely come—has not gone in there to build them up, to swell their resources and to help them become great states. They were finished communities and had no need of this help. Now, I thought I heard a stir thrown out that a man advocated a principle like this because he expected to get these people to vote for him. Now, if I know anything I know that the tendency will be against the party I belong to and the principles that I advocate. I know that in advocating this thing I am advocating the principle that is in favor of the continued supremacy of my own opinions, of my own party in this territory, for the character of the new immigration, Scandinavian immigration that comes here, that they naturally fall on the other side of the political line. So it cannot be said that I am not disinterested at least in advocating this proposition, but I think it would be unwise for us to depart from the liberal policy that the territory has always held to. We have been driven from it once and were driven back to it under press of popular opinion and in response to such an outraged cry as has never arisen upon any question in this territory, as I well remember. We cannot afford to be less liberal than the states around us, with whom we are competing for immigration, and I hope the convention will take the wise and liberal view and adopt the proposition made by the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Stapleton, has said to this convention all that it is necessary to say upon the proposition now pending. I do not arise to add anything to this argument. My friend who has just taken his seat has made a statement as to history. It is proper enough that these matters should be called up and discussed. Mr. Chairman, the war of 1812 was fought for the purpose of carrying out the same view proposed in this amendment.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Will the gentleman allow me to correct myself or rather to make myself more explicit? The war of 1812 was fought against the right of search by English cruisers who desired to search American vessels that they might impress men who become citizens of America in order to serve upon their men-of-war.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I beg to correct the gentleman again. I think that was not the proposition. That war was fought upon the principle that they had no right to search American ships to seize those who had become citizens of the United States who had at one time been subjects of England—not those who had declared their intentions to become citizens. I think I am correct in that. And another thing, Mr. Chairman, I admire a gentleman who belongs to a party, and I know that my friend is conscientious in his views—his beliefs—as to the greatness of that party, its glory and history; but at the time of the war of 1812, there was no democratic party. Laughter nor was the President of the United States at that time in office elected by the democratic party.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this amendment, and when I think that half of our own native born people are disfranchised and a large percentage of the other half are forbidden the right to vote until they are twenty-one years old, I fail to understand why members are so sensitive about the proposition that foreign-born residents shall remain in our country long enough at least to acquire some liberal knowledge of our institutions before being permitted the right to vote. Our American youth, as everybody knows from, the advantages of our schools and the general diffusion of knowledge which prevails in this country, are familiar with our history and public affairs at the ages of seventeen and eighteen years and are fully qualified to vote intelligently, but the law says they shall not vote until they are twenty-one years of age. Now, I think that everyone will admit that the average American youth of seventeen or eighteen knows at least as much, and has at least as good a knowledge of our institutions and loves our country at least as much as the average foreigner who comes and lands on our shores and in a few months takes out his naturalization papers and perhaps cannot speak a word of our language. If we could discriminate between intelligent voters, intelligent foreigners who take out their papers in good faith against those who are not, it would not be so bad. To the intelligent voter from whatever land or clime, who comes here and takes out his papers in good faith,

I say all hail and welcome and I would make his probationary period which he should serve as short as possible. But every member of this convention knows that a great many foreigners never think about taking out their naturalization papers, but on the eve of election they are sought out in the devious saloons by committees of some one or other of the political parties; they are taken up to the court and there they declare their intentions—God save the mark!—the Judge might as well read an extract from Sanscrit for all they know—but nominally their intentions are declared. The real and only intention in the whole transaction, and that is not declared publicly, is the intention of the committeeman to secure that fellow's vote. (Laughter) But the farce goes on: the naturalization papers are issued; the committeeman pays for them, and the poor, ignorant dupe goes out of the courthouse a full-fledged voter. I say that by that act the proud name of an American citizen is insulted and degraded, labor is endangered, and justice bows her head and weeps for shame. (Applause) I believe that every man who sells his vote, and every man who buys it should be disfranchised, and should be forever forbidden the privileges of an American citizen. (Applause) I think the duties of citizens to the government are reciprocal. If the government grant privileges to a citizen and protects him in his life and property, the very least that the citizen can do is to acquaint himself a little with the principles of the government upon which his liberty depends. Now, it often happens that these men who are hired to take out their papers vote once or twice afterwards as they are told, and then perhaps wander to the ends of the earth and never become citizens at all; but as long as they do vote, their vote counts just as much, Mr. Chairman, as yours or that of any member of this convention. It discriminates unjustly against our own native-born people and in favor of this very class. Now, I do not think there is any discriminating unjustly against making a citizen. If when the foreigner takes out his first papers he has the full right to vote, why the necessity of taking out second papers? The very fact that second papers are required is proof that the act of naturalization is not complete, and that the benefits which it confers do not and should not vest until the act is completed. I believe it is a proper safeguard which the country exacts to compel a man to show his good intention and give him time to become acquainted with the institutions of our government, so that when he becomes a citizen he can take an intelligent part in all public affairs. I think the proposition is in favor of a better government and in favor of a higher and more intelligent government and I am in favor of it. (Applause)

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Upon this question of suffrage it is about time we had the courage of our conviction. So far as I am concerned I am certainly in favor of the amendment proposed by my colleague from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, and had I my way I would make that seven years instead of five. For fifteen years I have watched this question of naturalization within the territory of Montana. Just before every election comes off in my county—and I suppose all counties are like Silver Bow—there are at least one thousand persons coming there and declaring their intention to become citizens of the United States. The records show that less than five percent of them ever perfect that declaration. If this question could be divided in such a way as to permit certain foreigners to vote, I would be in favor of it. Take, for instance, the Germans or the Irish, when they come to this country, as a rule, they burn the bridges behind them and become as good citizens as we have. On the other hand, you take other foreigners, notably the Italians, they come here and declare their intentions and as quick as they accumulate $150 or $200 they go back to Italy and that is the last you see of them. In the meantime, if he has an opportunity to sell his vote for a couple of dollars, he is on hand, and I believe that the youngest page in this body is today better entitled to vote than fifty per cent of the foreigners who land at Castle Garden. This question is a question that is coming up all over the United States. I feel that any foreigner that comes to this country, takes out his first papers and declares his intention, who lives here and finally becomes a citizen, as I am, or any other citizen of this country, should be allowed the privilege of taking a part in the affairs of the government. But you take for instance this race of Italians I speak of. Only a short time ago four or five hundred of them were imported from some place, I know not where, into Silver Bow County to work upon the Butte Short Line Railroad. They had been there but a short time before the contractors came from the Denver & Rio Grande and took them away down there. If we had had an election here they would have voted here; and been down in Colorado in time to vote again there. They have administered to them the oath that you renounce forever allegiance to any foreign state, prince or potentate whatever so help you God, and then they are as good American citizens as any other citizen who is born and raised in this country, and their votes are the equal of the most intelligent of our people. A friend has called my attention to a little article here which voices my sentiments. (Reading "It is somewhat uncomfortable to reflect that a citizen of intelligence, property, good moral character, and a keen sense of the responsibilities and dignities of his duties as an American citizen, may have his ballot offset by an Italian Lazzarone, exuding garlic at every pour of his otherwise unpleasant body, whose intelligence does not equal that of the monkey for whom he grinds the organ, and upon whose sense, industry and honesty he depends for his maintenance and macaroni.") Laughter and Applause.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Missoula offers an amendment. The question on that amendment is divided. To the first division of that question the gentleman from Silver Bow offers an amendment. The question is now on the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: Before voting I would call for the reading of the section with the amendment.

The Clerk read same.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow. Mr. Clark, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of fifty four in the affirmative to seven in the negative.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I have another amendment to offer to the first division.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would ask if the amendment offered by Mr. Marrion of Missoula is not now in order.

The Chairman: It is not in order at the present time. The question is divided.

The Clerk read the amendment for Mr. Collins of Cascade as follows: I move to amend by striking out the word "Male" and insert after "person" "without regard to the sex".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty five in the affirmative to forty-three in the negative.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I have a substitute that I wish to introduce in place of the amendment.

The Chairman: The Chair is of the opinion the substitute would be out of order.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I sent up an amendment half an hour ago. Mr. Joy of Park: I would like to inquire if an amendment would be in order to this subdivision.

The Chairman: Yes sir.

Mr. Joy of Park: I would like to offer one.

The Clerk read the amendment offered by Mr. Joy of Park as follows: "Amendment to Sec. 2 Subdivision 1. Insert after the word "years" in linethe words "who has been convicted of felony or treason against the United States."

The Chairman: The Chair is of opinion that that would better apply to the second subdivision of this question.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the first section.

The Chair: The question is on the first subdivision of this substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula.

The Chair put the question on the said subdivision and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read the second subdivision as follows. "Provided no idiot or insane person shall be entitled to the rights and privileges of an elector."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to inquire of the gentleman who offers this amendment by what criterion or standard this status is to be judged, because it might be that half or nearly half of this convention would be ostracised under that provision (Laughter) I would like to have some standard fixed.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that that is practically two propositions and should be treated as two propositions: that is, first that an idiot or lunatic should not be permitted to vote. The other is as to the matter of the convict or person who has served a term in the penitentiary; that is a separate and distinct proposition. I move that that be stricken out entirely for the reason that section eight of the proposition is practically the same thing.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I do not want to pose in this convention as a friend of the criminal, or of those persons who have been sentenced to the penitentiary and served a term for crime, but it does seem to me that where our legislature enacts a criminal statute fixing certain penalties for the commission of certain offenses that that penalty when paid or performed should purge the individual so far as the state is concerned of the crime for which he served. It does not seem to me that it is desirable, or the part of wisdom, to have a law or a constitutional provision that will disfranchise a man forever after serving a term of say six months in the penitentiary. The man presumably is put there for the purpose of being reformed. He may have seriously and from the bottom of his heart repented of his crime. The offense for which he was convicted and for which he served that term might perhaps be a technical offense, one that you would from a moral point of view not say was a serious crime, and still by that sort of provision in the constitution you place that man in a position where he is deprived of the benefits of citizenship—those rights and liberties which we as free and independent citizens prize so highly. And it seems to me that a provision of that kind, places that individual where he will as soon as having served his term of sentence continue to be a criminal and perhaps perpetrate some much more serious offense than that for which he served that sentence by reason of feeling that he has been branded for all time to come in the state of Montana against casting his vote on account of that service in the penitentiary. I do not believe that that should be the intent. I do believe that all persons should be punished for crime. I do believe it is competent and proper to leave the matter in the hands of the legislature, to say that for this offense you shall serve five years, that for that offense you shall serve twenty years, and that for a capital offense you may be hung; but to say, if you serve six months in the penitentiary you shall forever after that regardless of how frivolous a matter you serve that term for, be disfranchised in the state of Montana, and we will place you in a position where you cannot have the rights of citizenship—where all you can do is to continue to be a criminal the rest of your life—I submit, Mr. Chairman, that that is not reformatory; that its tendency is vicious. The argument that I attempted to make the other day when a similar question was up practically a portion of it bears upon this same subject. I do believe that men so far as possible when convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary should be reformed—should be placed there under such surroundings and influences as would tend to make them better men, as would tend to make them repent of the wrong they had done, and as would tend when that term of sentence expired to make them go out into the world and be again men worthy of being considered as citizens, notwithstanding the fact of their having served that sentence; and I do not believe, Mr. Chairman, that we want to put that in our constitution. I move you that it be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I desire, Mr. Chairman, to concur with the gentleman in his views upon this subject. We have, I believe, adopted or incorporated into this constitution a provision which comprehends that justice in this state shall be reformatory in its nature and not vindictive. Now, the object of a sentence to the state's prison is to punish the criminal and I believe that when he has gone within the prison walls and served out that time, that he has in the eyes of the law fully expiated his crime. I believe that when that criminal is set free and those striped garments are cast off, and the shackles from his feet discarded, that he ought not to be sent forth into the world with the mark of Cain upon his brow, that every man may point to him with scorn and say, "there goes a criminal". But my opinion is, that you ought to place that man in such a position again in society that he will be encouraged to take new lines and go forward and have every encouragement to try to make a man of himself. You disfranchise him. At every election the question is brought to his notice, and his neighbor will question him as to his privilege of voting, and at every turn there is an infamous brand set upon that man that tends to discourage him; whereas it should be the object of the law rather to encourage him and try to make a man out of him, that he may go forward and try to forget himself in the world. But, if you put this provision in the constitution, and there is nothing to encourage a man after he has been disgraced in that way, and after he has fully expiated his crime within the prison walls of the country, then there is no inducement for him to go out in the world to begin life anew and to endeavor to reform himself.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: That is a very good sentiment to be expressed by these gentlemen; but I do not think it works well in practice. Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not in favor of any criminal voting, and as I expressed myself here once before to-day, if we had a way of knowing who are the criminals and who are not, I would be in favor of shutting them out before they were convicted at all. If we could have it so that we could know who are the thieves and inborn villains, I would never allow them to vote. But, as we have no means of knowing who are the criminals and who are not until after they are convicted, I say that after they are convicted and after the Commonwealth has paid an attorney to defend them after the Commonwealth has paid for the privilege of establishing their innocence and after it has paid for the attorney and witnesses on both sides, and after they have had a fair and impartial trial, they are decided to be criminals, I say that that should forever shut them out from voting. Now, there are two classes of people; one are the honest, upright, hard working and law abiding people, and the other are the criminal classes. They are divided into those two classes. One is always ready to obey the laws in everything, and the other is always seeking how he may evade them. My friend, Mr. Clark, talks about these men after they have served a term in the penitentiary going back and becoming useful citizens. They go back to the slums with a little more cunning, with a little more doggedness, a little more determination to obey the law, but never determined to lead an honest and upright life. I say that after we have discovered those people, we should never let them go, and I would be in favor right now, if we had any means of doing it, of inserting a clause in this constitution that no man belonging to the criminal classes should ever cast a vote in the state of Montana; but as we have no means of knowing who they are, we have to wait until they are convicted by a jury; because after you allow them to vote they just as much belong to the criminal classes as they did before, and their whole object is to elect judges who will be inclined to be lenient with them, and it very often happens that, in these larger cities particularly, they succeed in putting in some of their own crowd, and running the city government to suit themselves. That often happens in New York and in other large places. We have seen some specimens of it in Butte. When the time comes to vote you see them go forth from the slums the very first ones. The business men may be too busy to get out to register or vote, but if you are down around the slums you will always see them coming out early in the morning. You will see them coming out and registering; you will see them ready to sell their votes; and these are the men now that my friend Mr. Clark wants purified by sending them to the state's prison, and wants them to go out and sell their vote and repeat the same thing over and over again. After serving a term in the penitentiary I venture to say they are not purified, they are if anything a little worse. It never makes an honest man out of a thief. He slinks back where he came from, and that is where he naturally belongs, and he would not be at home with good, honest, law abiding people, and therefore I say that his vote should never be allowed to offset the vote of those people.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: It occurred to me while these gentlemen were speaking here that they hardly manifest the right kind of spirit, and one gentleman's heart quite seemed to be chilled to the frailties of human nature, as appeared by a remark which fell from his lips. Now, it occurred to me when he was animadverting upon the remarks of his colleague from Butte that he had forgotten the teaching of that great and good man who was on earth nearly nineteen hundred years ago. When a certain sinner was brought before him and accused of a crime which I will not name, after listening to the accusation he got down and wrote on the ground, and when he got up the accusers had disappeared. Said he "Where are the accusers? They have fled". Then he turned to the sinner and said "Go thy way and sin no more". That is the spirit which enters into the whole administration of the criminal law in this world, or should be, and because a man happens to be sent to the penitentiary or convicted of a felony, perhaps of treason, or of sedition or rebellion against the government which he regards as oppressive in his own conscience, he should not be assigned to eternal damnation either in this world or the next for it. There should be a space left for repentance, and that is the foundation upon which our penitentiaries are established. Now, suppose a man here commits a crime—I may say suppose a brother or a son of my friend—of course nothing of the kind will happen, and I do not know as he has any brothers or sons, and I don't care whether he has or not, it doesn't affect the illustration. Suppose he happens to be convicted of a crime, perhaps unjustly. The court administers the law and he is consigned to the penitentiary for six months or a year, which would be the period for a felony. We look around and say, what was the nature of that crime? What is crime made up of? Is it made up of a criminal act or a criminal intention? Now, suppose he is sent to the penitentiary. The poor boy goes there. He repents in sackcloth and ashes. He says I went with my companions, I fled away. He has a good education. He has had the instructions of his father from Silver Bow County, the philosophic and other teachings to make him a man. He gets out and says "I have atoned for my offense. I have satisfied the penalties of the law. I can now go home, for my mother has forgiven me, my brothers will forgive me, my sisters will forgive me, and they will embrace me when I get back, but my father has put a clause in the constitution which says that I shall be branded as a villain all the days of my life." (Laughter and Applause).

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: There are two views expressed with reference to this matter, and it occurs to me that both of them are extreme. One of them is that the man who is convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary ought never to be restored to his civil rights; the other is that he shall be. Now, it seems to me that the proper ground upon which to place this proposition is that the individual should be restored to his civil rights and to his vote if he shall have been pardoned by the proper authority. It often happens—it does happen whether often or otherwise than an innocent man sometimes gets into the penitentiary and it happens that the public, acting through the chief executive of the state, interposes his pardon; and I think it will not be claimed by the gentleman from Silver Bow or from any other section of this territory that when the fact is known that a man is innocent and the executive have interposed the authority and the strong arm of the law to release him, that he ought ever afterwards to be disfranchised as a citizen of the United States. And again, I think an amendment ought to be added to it—these words ought to be added to the amendment "Unless pardoned for the offense for which he was convicted". It may happen, in the line of argument pursued by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, and others, that a man who has been convicted upon testimony which was true, and the guilt admitted, or upon a plea of guilty for that matter, after having been sentenced to three or four or five years, as Dr. Burleigh says, and having served that term of sentence he has repented of his crime and desires to lead another and a better life. In that kind and character of case it ought to be left to the executive to say, after having conferred with the Warden of the penitentiary and others in authority, just before the close of the term, of that individual—it ought to be within the power and authority of the Governor to intervene and interpose the executive clemency by means of a pardon. If that was done it would be left to the Governor to discriminate between the kind of individuals who are likely to be well disposed towards the government and who will be likely to make good citizens of the United States, and the other class, whom it would be better to disfranchise, and not leave him to pardon indiscriminately and restore anybody and everybody to their civil rights. So that there are two classes of cases which would be benefited by this amendment which I suggest. One would be the innocent man, and the other would be the citizen who is well disposed towards the government, and for him there would be some possible show in the future. I propose this amendment.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I am opposed to putting any part of that in Section 2, in reference to persons convicted of offenses of any kind. I think the committee have made the best disposition of that question. Section 9 reads "The legislative assembly shall have the power to pass laws excluding from the rights of suffrage persons convicted of infamous crime". It seems to me instead of legislating too far in the first sections of this proposition, we might safely leave this branch of it to the legislature. Infamous crimes I take to be those punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary. There are two classes of those crimes. One class involves moral turpitude; another class does not. A man may commit a crime, be sentenced to the penitentiary, and yet be as honorable a citizen as there is in the community. An illustration of that would be a man who considered himself injured when perhaps he was not, but believing that he was, on sudden provocation, committing an assault. He might have committed a dangerous assault in the heat of passion resulting from what he supposed to be a provocation, and yet that man would come out of the penitentiary as honorable a citizen as there would be in the state. His intentions had always been honorable, and yet he had suffered the penalty of an indiscretion. It seems to me that this question can safely be left to the legislature to provide such rules in reference to the disfranchisement of persons convicted of crime as they think proper, making it dependent on the wisdom of the Governor or providing other regulations in regard to it, and classifying if they choose the different grades of infamous crime.

The Chairman: The motion is to strike out.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I would say to the chair that I do not desire my amendment to be put unless this proposition should pass.

The Chair then put the question on the said motion to strike out and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the substitute of the gentleman from Missoula.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. McAdow of Fergus: The Organic Act which creates our territory empowers the legislature to confer upon women the rights of suffrage. In one of our sister territories, Wyoming, the experiment has been tried for now some twenty years, and from the best testimony that we have, from the judges on the bench in that territory, from the Governor, from prominent citizens, it has been a grand success. Now, Mr. Chairman, I believe that it will redound to the credit of this state if we put a clause in this constitution empowering the legislature to grant the rights of suffrage to the women. We do not want to close the door in the face of our intelligent women. We do not want to build up a Chinese wall that will forever prevent them from the rights of suffrage. I believe, sir, that to place in the hands of women the ballot it will be an effective weapon, for the working girl can say to her employer, you shall pay me the same wages for the same services (Applause). It will place in the hands of the mother an effective weapon to protect her home, her children, and her person from the unjust acts of a brutal husband, if she can say to him "I can vote"; I will cast my vote for an officer that will enforce the laws, that will protect me." In these foreign countries I believe today nearly every one of them extends the right of suffrage either by law or by inheritance to the woman. This republican government is the only country I believe today that prohibits the suffrage from one-half of our people. Now, gentlemen, one of our fundamental principles is that taxation without representation is tyranny. That, sir, is what our forefathers fought for in the revolution. That, sir, is what the tea was cast overboard in Boston harbor for. Now, gentlemen, if we extend the rights of suffrage to the women it will certainly be in accord with that fundamental principle. It has been said upon this floor that government is upon the consent of the governed. Now, I would like to know if women are to be governed and have not a voice in the making of the laws. They are amenable to them; they are brought into court and tried by one-half of the enfranchised citizens of the state. I have heard the expression here that this is a government for the people and by the people. Now, gentlemen, if our intelligent women are not people, what are they? Our fundamental laws are certainly conflicting with what we are doing at present, and I believe, sir, if we grant this right of suffrage to women it will redound to our credit. I think at present it would be proper and right to place in our constitution the right of suffrage for women, but if that cannot be done, I trust there is sufficient liberality among the members of this convention—that liberality for which Montana is noted—not to close the doors and build up a wall against the rights of our women.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would ask the gentleman if he desires to offer an amendment to anything now before the house.

Mr. McAdow of Fergus: I am in favor of this amendment pending.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: For more than a quarter of a century I have studied this question now before the convention in all of its phases. I have heard some of the best orators, both men and women, in the United States speak upon this question, and long ago I have been convinced that we would have a better government, a purer government, based upon better principles of justice, if women were allowed to vote, than our present government. There are, however, some objections to the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow. I would be in favor of submitting a separate proposition to be voted upon by the people, not incorporated as a part of the constitution, because it might endanger it. A vote for the constitution as a body can be taken, and separate propositions as this convention may propose can be voted upon; and if this proposition were voted upon separately by the people, and they are satisfied with it, then it would be incorporated and form a part of the constitution. I believe, sir, that I would rather favor at the polls the proposition offered by the gentleman from Fergus. Yet there are some embarrassments, it is fair to say. I will take this illustration now, that I have made to myself, and I say it frankly to the gentlemen of this convention that in some one of the several standpoints I am satisfied that my wife's vote at the polls would, as a rule, be as good or better than mine; but I would not favor any proposition that would subject her to military duty. The basis of military duty is that of the suffrage. Now it might be—she is a very domestic lady—I don't think she is ambitious to become a military hero at all—I think she leaves that to her husband; but if she should want to raise a military company over there at Virginia and go to some encampment, as they did here last fall, and be subject to the same kind of grub that they furnished here at Helena, that she would have cause for a divorce. Again, sir, she is rather a popular lady, well educated, and it might be that the people of Montana would want to elect her Governor and in that case when I walked along the streets my friends would say "There goes the husband of the Governor". That, Mr. Chairman, would be unjust discrimination. I would not like it. And again it might be that they would want her to run for Congress—to go to the Senate or House of Representatives. I think, Mr. Chairman, that I would oppose that. I think it would be better for her to stay at home and take care of her babies, where she does very well. It would seem to me in that case more appropriate and more accordingly to the eternal fitness of things if I were to go to Congress and she were to take care of the babies, though I am not a candidate. If you will provide in this constitution that she shall have the right of suffrage, but not be eligible to office except as pertaining to school elections, and be exempt from military and jury duty, I will give it my hearty support.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I have not taken up any of the time of the convention or of this committee, and neither do I intend now to take up more than a moment or two of your valuable time now. However, I am always ready to give a reason for the hope that is within me. Now there are some gentlemen on this floor who have the happy faculty of erecting men of straw to see how gracefully they can knock them down. Now I predict that unless there is better material for congressmen and governors on the other side of the house than the side that has just spoken, he will never be the husband of a Governor or the husband of a Senator. (Laughter and applause.) Now, gentlemen, it seems to be in order to tell anecdotes. It is said that during the recent war some one visited that great and good man Abraham Lincoln during the dark hours, and said to him "Mr. Lincoln, I am sure that we must succeed in our cause, because the Lord is on our side." Mr. Lincoln said to him "There is one other consideration that is of more importance to me than that." "ray, sir, what can be more important than that?" Thoughtful and reverent as that great and good man ever was, he answered, "to know that we are on the Lord's side". Now, gentlemen, I am not so much interested in being on the woman's side as I am to have them on our side. [Applause] Now, I shall not attempt to enter into any argument why the right of suffrage belongs to women. I am not as old a man as many of you take me to be. I am comparatively young—younger than my friend from Custer; I have not had as much experience—but I say with pride that ever since I have been able to give this matter any consideration I have been a warm adherent of the doctrine that women should have the right of suffrage.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Will the gentleman allow me to make one remark? I desire to suggest to him that age consists not in the multitude of years but in the manner in which they are spent [Laughter].

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I did not catch the remark but I do not doubt it was good. The gentleman always says good things. Now, gentlemen, I say I have always been a warm adherent of the doctrine, if you will call it such, that the right of suffrage rightfully, if you please belongs to women; but I am that shrewd a business man to know that it is the part of policy that when you cannot get all you want to take what you can get, and I am persuaded that if we should incorporate in our constitution a clause giving to women the right of suffrage, there are ungallant men enough in Montana to defeat that constitution. Therefore I do not stand before you and urge that. This resolution, or rather the amendment now pending, asks a very reasonable thing; it is simply to give us as a state what we have had ever since we have been a territory. Congress gave us that. Has any legislature seen fit to abuse the trust reposed in them by the Organic Act? Has any legislature attempted to anticipate public opinion and force upon our constituency woman suffrage? No. I believe that if we leave this matter just where it is and has been ever since we have been a territory, we leave it in safe hands, and that is all I ask you to do. Now, I confess to you that I am not ashamed—and never expect to be ashamed or apologize to any man or set of men for my adherence to these principles. I say it with pride, that I have taken my wife's hand upon my arm and led her to the polls and voted with her upon school questions. I loved her just as dearly, reposed just as much confidence in her afterwards as I had done before; and I believe gentlemen, that the time will come when all of us who have wives—I wish you all had—will be glad of the opportunity some time—I do not say all times—but will be glad of the opportunity in taking that one by the hand or arm who has borne us children, who has nursed us in our sickness, who has been to us more than all else on earth, to help us knock down into smithereens the machinations of brutal men. [Applause] I say I believe the time will come when we will gladly avail ourselves of that opportunity. Now, when that time comes I would want the women to help us smash the states or do anything else that has been set up against right and decency. I want the legislature to have the power to give them that right; and that is all that I plead for today, and I believe that the good sense of this convention—I make no attempt at flattery, but looking over this body into your faces, I believe I size up this convention right when I say that we will adopt this amendment and leave this matter in the hands of the legislature. [Applause]

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I do not know of any question that has come before this convention in which I feel a deeper interest than the one which is being discussed at present, but it seems to me that the advocates of this proposition have not stated all there is in it. I do not believe if we are to admit the propositions which they present that there is no answer to their arguments. Now I think, if we start out with the proposition that women are entitled to the same privileges that men are, as they assert here, and that the natural rights of women in shaping governmental affairs are the same as men's, that then there is no argument to meet that question. So that I do not believe from my standpoint that the advocates of this proposition state the proposition fairly. There is no question but what two men occupying the same position are entitled to the same rights; there is no question but what two women occupying the same position are entitled to the same rights; but when you come to say that a woman is entitled to the same rights as a man in every respect, I say that that is simply an assertion, and there has been no argument presented here which convinces me. I would gladly vote for this proposition if I believed that the good women of this land, the good mothers, the good women whom we all respect—if I believed that one half of them even were desirous of having this proposition passed, I would gladly support it. But to go back to the proposition I say that it is a law of nature—it is implanted in the human system—it is a law of God you might say—that this difference exists. It is not through any desire of the men to be tyrants over women to prevent them from having their just rights, that I oppose this. I think the men who are opposed to this are animated with quite as chivalric principles as any of the advocates of it, and I am free to say that they would go as far in protecting the rights of women as any men would. I say that when it comes to protecting the married women in her rights of property I will go as far as any man in this convention. I say it is unjust that a lazy loafer of a husband who is married to a woman can take away her property from her should she receive any. I say that that is unjust to the women, and for that purpose and to that extent I will go so far in passing laws that will protect the women in the rights of property as any person. But when it comes to giving the rights of suffrage to women I say we are going against a law—we are setting aside a relation which I say has been divinely implanted, that is the marriage relation. If we are prepared to say now that marriage is a failure, why then I am in favor of giving the women the right of suffrage. If there are to be no marriages I can see no reason why the women should not vote; but so long as this institution is a part of our government—and it is; it cannot be avoided—why then I say that I am opposed to this, because it is the entering wedge which will bring about not woman's elevation, but her downfall. Everybody knows what the history of the Roman Empire was, that during the republic and the consulates the woman's rights were curtailed, and that was the time of their greatest influence; that when in the latter days when wealth and luxury were having full sway there was a law passed that the contract between women and men was simply a civil contract that a man and woman could go together and live for a certain period and at their own option dissolve the civil relation. Now, I have seen it in some of the constitutions, and it is in many of them, that marriage is a civil contract. If that be so, if there is nothing more in this relation than that it is a civil contract, why then it is proper for the women to be divorced at any time they can agree with their husbands. But, is there any person who believes in any such doctrine? The law of selection is implanted in the breast of every man; it is illustrated by the selection of unintelligent creatures. The birds of the air make their selections, and there are certain animals where the male makes his selection and is as true to that selection as any husband is to his wife. Now, I say that woman's influence is exercised in a different way. To be sure she has no right to vote but what home is there in which the mother is not respected? What son is there that will not protect that mother and do everything in his power that she desires; what husband—and I would say in regard to Brother Rickards' proposition that he has been proud to lead his wife to the polls, I would say that if she voted a different ballot, I do not believe he would have so gladly taken her to the polls; and that is just where the trouble comes in. So long as the woman obeys the man and votes as he does, he is glad to take her to the polls, but the instant she refuses to be governed in that vote as he desires, there is where the dissension enters that will cause division—that will cause the downfall of woman instead of her elevation. Now, I say that every man who is opposed to this is just as much in favor of the protection of woman as the men who are in favor of it; for it is said that the man is to the woman as the cord is to the bow; and I say that every person who recognizes this marriage relation is as much in favor of the protection of the women as are those who clamor so much in favor of female suffrage. The woman's cause is the man's; they rise and sink together.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I may not be as well versed, or I may not be as well acquainted in the ways of entertaining this convention upon questions affecting the common welfare of the people as the majority of our speakers here are, but I desire to say that I trust my sense of justice may be as well developed as that of the gentleman from Deer Lodge. He claims that Mr. Rickards' wife may vote his way, if Mr. Rickards lets her. Now I would be willing to wager a new hat that if the gentleman from Deer Lodge has a wife that she will vote every time the contrary way from what he votes and that's what's the matter with him. (Laughter and applause. Looking at this matter from a standpoint of justice, I would like to know the reason why the women are not as well qualified to vote as the men of Montana, but as that is past I will let it go for the present. Now if we were here without an election day coming on us this fall—if we forgot all about that and looked at it from a standpoint of justice I think there would be more than twenty-nine votes registered in favor of woman suffrage, and I think also that we would have had an intelligent qualification required for a voter this fall, and not have the men from Ethiopia or Italy or any other place vote as we vote. I am glad that the time will come when we will have the names of these twenty-nine men that dare to stand up her and say that the interests of their mothers, their wives, and their sisters, are as dear to them as their own interests, and that they shall have an equal right with them in the affairs of this life. The women that are born here and raised here and have a knowledge of the institutions of the country, they can say as intelligently as any of the men what lights they shall look up to. At the same time the penalty is just the same for women as for men, and if she breaks the law of the land she serves her sentence. If she is supposed to obey the law then I say let her vote, and if she is not supposed to obey the law then I say let her not vote. If they are supposed to grow up and become useful citizens, I say then give them the same privilege, and I trust that when we do that this gentleman that stalks around the polls and clasps a bottle of old rye in his bosom, that his business will be knocked in the head. I have seen that done several times in this territory myself. The opponents of this measure claim again that the women do not want to vote. Well, at one of the greatest political meetings that I ever attended in Montana five years ago this coming fall, I heard a gentleman speak and in his opening he said that no doubt the young ladies of Montana would encourage the boys to vote for Mr. So-and-so, because he was single, and was a handsome young gentleman and approved of woman suffrage; but he claimed also that he was a married man, and would request the married women of Montana to urge their husbands to vote for the candidate, as although his wife had never expressed a desire to vote she didn't want him to say she should never vote. Now this question is certainly not a new question, and it is a question which is one of the most important before us. I heard a lady on this floor, since I have been attending this convention, say that it made her shudder to think that the men of her town that she saw marched up to the polls and voted were making laws under which her children were compelled to live and grow up. I am the brother of six sisters. Every one of them is as intelligent, every one as sensible, and all possess a better education than I do, and I am willing to grant the ladies of Montana the right of suffrage, not only in the future at any time if the legislature sees fit to grant them this privilege, but at the present time; and even though this clause is not adopted, I will not get up like a gentleman did her on the floor today and say that if a certain clause he was opposed to carried, he would endeavor to defeat the constitution if he had to spend money in the attempt to defeat it. But, if this clause is defeated, which I have every confidence it will not be, then I say that we that are in favor of it, it is not our duty to go forth and defeat the constitution, but to go forth and send a legislature here that are in sympathy with the popular wish, and not with the ignorant elements of the people of Montana. (Applause)

Mr. Sargent of Silver Bow: I am in favor of giving women an equal chance with men. Placed side by side in every relation of life, she is a safe adviser, a wise counsellor and a true helpmate. If this be true, and I think no one will deny it, then this question involves something more than the justice or the propriety of extending suffrage to women; but our own manhood and our sense of fairness and justice, and that degree of excellence, moral and intellectual, which we have attained is at stake, and will be determined by the way in which we treat this question. The true woman elevates and refines every sphere and adds grace and dignity to every calling in which she engages. In the moral world she is pre-eminent; in the world of society she reigns supreme; in deeds of charity and in works of love she is untiring. In every station of life which man in his selfishness permits her to occupy she fills with credit and honor. But it is said that politics is an exception to the general rule, and is a domain upon which woman should not enter. I fail to see the course of the reason which reaches this conclusion. Man in his supreme egotism and selfishness has unjustly arrogated to himself the sole right to manage and mismanage affairs of state and has denied this right to woman. Our government is but the family enlarged, and in the government of the family woman bears an equal share, she exercises equal judgment, more tact and infinitely more patience than man. If in this small sphere she is a credit and success why should she not be equally successful in a wider field? But it is said that politics is degrading, and that if woman engages in it she will lose some of that charm and grace of manner and men to which man looks up with so much admiration and respect. I fail to see why it should be so. The young man who reaches his majority and assumes all the responsibility of political and social rights, sacrifices thereby not one jot of his ability or integrity of character, neglects no business interests, and swerves not aside from the path of duty which he has marked out for himself in life. And it is not reasonable to suppose that women will devote more time to politics than men, or that she will neglect her family or other duties to do so; and to say that she will sacrifice some of her delicacy is to assert that she is more susceptible to harmful influences than man, which no one will dare assert. There are many positions in public life which, unjustly I think, are made subject to political preferment, which women could fill better than men. As matrons in our reformatory institutions, in our asylums, in our colleges and academies and schools, and in kindred institutions where she can mould her influence to the occasion and tend to elevate the moral tone of such institutions, and to soften and refine the disposition and character of all those that are not hardened, she is unexcelled. To illustrate the prejudice which has always existed against the advancement of women, a few years ago there was not a college in our country where a woman could acquire a higher education, and when the doors of the first college—Oberlin I believe—were opened to the co-education of the sexes a howl of indignation and horror went up from one end of the land to the other at the shocking spectacle of a young lady sitting side by side with a young man trying to gain a liberal education. Today two hundred colleges open their doors to four thousand women who are engaged in friendly competition with men to acquire intellectual light, and liberal education. I dare say, and I affirm that the prejudice which exists to-day against woman's voting is just as senseless and just as unjust as that which existed a few years ago against her acquiring an education; and I believe in a few years to come, when women shall exert a wholesome influence in our affairs, as she certainly will, that you will not be able to find a man who will be willing to admit that he ever opposed it. Applause. I have been asked if I would take my mother and my sisters and my wife, if I had one, to the polls. Most certainly I would, and I think if the average man would take his wife with him and would be governed by her advice, he would come nearer voting right than he ever did before in his life. Many of the best and ablest men of our own and other countries have acknowledged that whatever degree of success they have attained in life they owe to the pure teachings and wise counsels of their mothers. Is it reasonable to suppose that the mother who can train her son to a life of usefulness and honor cannot be trusted to give expression to her opinions through the ballot without sacrifice to her own delicacy and without detriment to public affairs? The idea is absurd and preposterous. But I will not detain you. There are many reasons why I think women should vote. Among them, because her vote will not be a purchasable commodity; because she will not descend to the methods of the ward politician; because I believe of she ever be elected to any convention or legislative body she will not consume the time by introducing resolutions which are nothing but buncombe; because her influence and politics will be on the side of law and order and peace, and on the side of morality and of the purity of the ballot, and that she will be for good government. For these and for many other reasons which might be given I am in favor of her enfranchisement and in favor of giving the legislature the power to grant it in their discretion.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: We have heard the argument of the gentleman from Deer Lodge. He said all that could be said and said it in the right way, and said it in the way that I think every gentleman will admit demonstrates clearly the justice of our position on this matter. We have heard the argument of the gentleman from Silver Bow, and that was put in the same manner. Now, I think if we decide this question upon the logic of the arguments as against suffrage and in favor of suffrage that we would be compelled to vote in favor of universal suffrage. But that is not the question. That has been decided adversely by a vote of twenty-six to thirty-two. A large minority of this convention without speaking upon the cold blooded proposition, without any talk voted for giving women the same equal rights of suffrage that men have. Now, that is passed upon so far as the committee of the whole is concerned, and I hope that this committee after seeing that a vote of a large minority in favor of this proposition will not say that the people of Montana cannot by their representatives and their legislature, legislate upon this matter in years to come. I believe that the small majority of this convention cannot in reason and justice do a thing of that kind. I believe that the people of Montana have the right to say in their future legislation that if the sentiment shall grow in favor of it, that it shall be adopted, and that women shall have the same right of suffrage that men have. This is the question before us now, and I hope that you will not place a constitutional prohibition in the instrument that we are now framing which will forever relegate this question to oblivion. The legislature is the place it belongs to, and if we voice the sentiment of the people of Montana, and if they favor universal suffrage in the ratio by which it is shown here by this vote, this convention does, then probably next year or the following year they may wish to see this question adopted, and then I say the legislature of our State should have the right to voice that sentiment and to give women the right of suffrage.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: Although I am not in favor of woman suffrage I shall vote in favor of this amendment. I believe we have too many ironclad enactments in this constitution already that preclude the possibility of change. I believe that this being a progressive nation and Montana particularly so, that we should lay ourselves open to the evolution of time, and that the fewer ironclad resolutions that we introduce in this constitution on this question the better. As I said, I am not in favor of woman suffrage. The arguments that have been advanced by several parties here in favor of woman suffrage, although they have not convinced me, have placed the matter before me in many new lights. But I know there are arguments and objections that can be brought up on the other side that are fully as convincing. But I am in favor of leaving this whole matter with the future legislature of Montana to use their judgment and obey the will of the sovereign people of Montana.

Mr. Joy of Park: I would like to ask if another amendment is in order.

The Chairman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Joy of Park sent up an amendment which the Clerk read as follows: Amendment to Section 2. The legislature may in its discretion provide that the question of woman suffrage may be submitted to a vote of the people of Montana not oftener than once in four years and if a majority of the votes of the State shall favor such question then equal suffrage shall be extended to women.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: That is a right which the State of Montana will have. It is a right that they would have at any time, and I know of no reason why a proposition of this kind should be presented to this convention at this time, unless it be for the purpose of delay or begging the question. I say, sir, in view of all the arguments that have been advanced on the proposition, and the lack of arguments on the other side, that the amendment should prevail.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I had not thought to speak upon this subject, but the taunt of my friend from Missoula that all the argument has been made on one side and none on the other, has induced me to make some apology for the gentlemen who vote against the proposition. I take no issue with the gentlemen who have eulogized the intelligence and the virtue of women. I fully agree with the gentlemen who said they possessed three fourths of the virtues and more than half the intelligence of the country; I would even increase the ratio. But I cannot see that any argument that has yet been made goes to the foundation of this question. After all said and done the primary element behind all government is force. Why do the majority rule? Let us consider for a moment the philosophy of government and the reason of things. Human society is so imperfect that the rule of forces still prevails and will prevail as long as man in his unregenerated nature occupies this planet. And it is because two men are more powerful and can put down one man, and because three men are more powerful and can put down two men, that the right of the majority upon which governments are founded is now being recognized by mankind. The world has simply made an advance, Mr. Chairman, in one particular. Instead of testing the relative strength of numerical bodies of men pitted against each other on the battle field, they do it at the ballot box; and as the experience and history of the world has taught that the majority can and do and will enforce their views upon the minority, and majority have both wisely concluded not to fight but to count—not to meet each other on the field of battle, but to meet each other at the ballot box, recognizing after all that the majority must rule. Upon this fundamental principle the American government is founded. The conditions of her nature, the limitations of her sex, forever preclude woman from being called upon to enforce the decrees of government. It is admitted even by the gentlemen who favor female suffrage that it is not a natural right, that it is a political privilege bestowed by governments upon its citizens in such manner as shall best tend to preserve and perpetuate and maintain that government against all the perils that threaten human government. First it was exercised by the rich only. It was claimed that the rights of property in a State entitled a man to direct the destinies of that State. That was gradually extended. The qualifications in all property were being made smaller and smaller all the time. And finally manhood suffrage was based on what? It was based upon this principle, that so long as a man is liable to be called upon by the Sheriff, by the Constable or officer of Law, or in the last grand arbitrament of war by the nation itself, to align himself in line of battle in order to enforce the decrees of that nation, that he should be entitled to suffrage. It was the proposition that the poor man's life being as sacred, being as much to him—for what is greater to any man than his own life—as the rich man's property was to him, that he should be made his equal at the ballot box in order to make the laws which he might be called upon to imperil that life to enforce. As I have said, the other sex with all their virtues are forever precluded from coming into those conditions. Suppose we had a State with a majority of female voters, as Massachusetts has today. Suppose that they unanimously should enact a line of law which the minority, the other sex, were called upon to enforce, what sort of a government would you have, or on what sort of foundation would it be based? It is upon this ground that we must maintain the government as it is unless it is going to perish. Why, one of my friends talked about the enfranchisement of the negro during the war—the illiterate negro of the south. From the very moment that the uniform of the United States was put upon the black man and the musket placed in his hands to defend the country, it became evident that he had to become enfranchised. That is what gave the ballot to the negro of the south, that placing in his hands the arms of this government and arraying him in defense of your flag. No man can have a profounder regard for women than I have; but I undertake to say in this informal way, without having thought of this subject—and perhaps I ought not to be so presumptuous as to give my unformed thoughts to so wise a convention—but I undertake to say that woman has her own great sphere in this world. She is the regenerator of humanity. It is hers to perpetuate. She is the educator, the preparer in the school room, in the home and everywhere; and in every station she ennobles and adorns man. Man, on the other hand, has his own proper sphere. It is his to conquer the savage world, to subdue the elements, to build, to conquer, to impress his power upon the material forces of nature, and to combat with all the elements of the world. They are as distinct in their spheres as are the heavens and the earth, and one is as exalted and as ennobled as the other. They were made so by the Almighty Ruler who made this universe, and I do not believe that any body of men can ever by any laws overturn the disposition of the Creator. Therefore, it is in no ungenerous and in no unchivalric spirit that I oppose this measure. I stand not upon those petty objections that have been brought against female suffrage. I believe with the gentleman from Silver Bow that women, if it was their right, would ennoble in a certain sense the ballot. Whether on the other hand participation in politics would do as much for her I very much doubt. I know she is the salt of the earth, but I know also that like that pure and crystal salt she would perhaps be contaminated and regenerated by mixing with the things which it was intended she should preserve. Upon these grounds the vast majority of mankind have based these governments and have maintained and perpetuated the difference between the sexes. There is no man that stands abreast with me in giving to women all equal chances in the career of life—of taking away from her all the shackles that have been put upon her—of opening in science and art and poetry, and in everything, even in the higher employments of government all the avenues which can be opened for her. I do not want to make women, their lives, and their future dependent solely upon the will, the tenderness, or the caprice of man. I know that under the old conditions under which we have always lived, that the women have filled the greatest places in the world. In charitable institutions in our own country today they stand at the head of institutions which take care of more property and administer more affairs than even a State. There are institutions in this country with women at the head of them, that own more property than is assessed in Montana and administer more affairs than any government that we shall frame here to administer. It is not then because I do not understand her capacity; it is not because I underrate her intelligence; it is not because I have not a high appreciation of the innate virtue and character of the sex that saved us all that I take this position. But I take it that in this matter of government she is out of place, that government is—I will go back again and say, is founded upon force, and man is the force that must perpetuate and preserve it and hold it if it is to be preserved; and that they should do, not for their own sake, but for the sake of the women who look to them to perform that part in the economy of nature and of government. But, my friends, I recognize also that if the women of this country wanted the franchise, they would have it no matter who stood in the way. Right or wrong, wise or unwise, we would give it to them. But they do not. An English statesman said that a few grasshoppers in a fence corner make more noise than all the noble herds of British cattle browsing beneath the oaks, and one of our own poets said that the "Shallows murmur when the deeps are dumb," and I undertake to say that if this question should be left as I propose it shall be left—or as I think it should be left, to the vote of the women of this Territory, it will be voted down today—and we have no right to force upon them that which they do not want. Applause. In the State of Massachusetts women can vote at all school elections. While the gentlemen were speaking I took from some statistics here some facts which I shall quote. In that State there are 442,616 male voters and 486,300 female voters eligible under that clause of the laws of Massachusetts. Of these in all the times since that law was passed only 4,219 women registered, and only 1,911 voted. Applause. With all the clamor of all the advocates of this matter in the state of Massachusetts where it is most widely and most clamorously advocated.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Does it say what kind of women they were?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not know. We will take it for granted that they were good women—and the cause that called them out at a certain school election in Boston where certain religious questions were introduced. Now, it is said that women are always guided by the best moral influences. Why, gentlemen, one reason why I have always been afraid of that is that the women might be guided by the preachers and the ministers. Now, I have made a speech in favor of God in the constitution. I believe in religion, although I have not followed it myself. I have been one of those whose faltering footsteps have wandered from the track of faith that shone beneath the Star of Bethlehem over eighteen hundred years ago. But I do believe that the history of all this world shows that the worst government is the theocratic government—a government of priests, a government of ministers, a government of theologians, who least know the interests of mankind, and who of all classes of men are the least adapted to legislate for them. Applause. I believe the influences of other classes of men upon the women would be unwholesome. My old friend Bailey Payton told me once when I was down there in the agony of the rebellion, among the burnt homes and the ensanguined fields of the south, he said, "the devil moved the preachers, and the preachers moved the women and the women got the men into this unfortunate and unholy war." (Applause) So far on the ground of their influence and politics. But, my friends, I undertake to say, and I believe that the lines on which man and woman operate are equally noble, each in their own sphere. I do not believe in this new constitution we ought to bring them together, I do not believe that we ought to make that experiment, and I do not believe that we ought to leave it to the Legislature. I believe that this question of the extension of the suffrage is a question that should be decided by the people of Montana, if it is decided at all. I am willing to vote, if you choose, to have a clause put in that constitution by itself which shall submit this question to the people with the constitution; but I am not willing that the constitution itself shall be made a stalking-horse to carry through a proposition of which only a minority approve and to which a great majority of the men and women of this territory are opposed. (Applause) Consequently I stand here and offer this imperfect apology for the votes of the men who say that we shall neither have woman suffrage in this constitution, nor shall we leave it to the Legislature, or a vote of the people to perfect it hereafter.

Mr. Burileigh, of Custer: I have listened with a great deal of attention to the remarks of my friend from Lewis & Clarke County. He started out with a doctrine something like that of the old preacher who preached the doctrine of predestination to all intents and purposes. Everything was hell-fire and damnation, except to all those who were predestined to be saved; and I felt as though he had got off the track, and then I found he had embraced something of the spirit of forgiveness towards the east. But I say, take the main drift of his argument and it is in perfect accord with the doctrines promulgated in regard to the women during the Roman Empire in pagan days; woman was a useful institution made by the Almighty to subserve the laws, and perpetuate the population, so that the State might not die of ennu. It is precisely the doctrine enunciated in Turkey today in the harem. It is the same doctrine enunciated in this country, or that was enunciated in this country under the influences and the dogmas of that same Star of Bethlehem to which the gentleman refers in such feeling terms—and I was particularly struck with that beautiful illustration of his—during the dark days of the old commonwealth. The doctrine was that woman was created for a purpose, and she had to be the slave of man, to subserve his purpose, to enable him to gratify his unholy desires, and to use as his slave. It is the same doctrine that is enunciated by the Sioux Indians and the Blackfeet and the Flatheads today, when they take their squaws and work them for their own purpose. What do we propose to do? Is it true that God Almighty made woman, and as tradition says, carved her from the rib from the side of man, and made her his equal, and then consigned her to eternal slavery without the hope of resurrection or of freedom of redemption? By no means. You show me that characteristic in God and I will vote then for another God in the constitution. (Laughter) Now, we propose to come in here and profit by the lessons of the past, by the hard austere teachings of the past, by the practices and the teachings of the pagan world. I hope that all our barbarous practices and traditions are fast giving place to a better state of civilization. By the gracious dispensation of God, woman has been made the helpmate and the complement of man, and I propose to extend to her the benefits and blessings of that Being whose advent into this world was heralded by the Magi of the East by the Star of Bethlehem which guided them to the place where the Savior reposed in the manger. I propose and I will do it—I will stand by in defense of the right of women to every privilege which I enjoy under the constitution which she wants and asks for, and I will not withhold one pot or tittle from her. I have a wife; I had a mother; I have sisters; and there is not one of them who is not as thoroughly prepared—as well qualified to exercise all the functions of state, and better, than I am, intellectually, morally and as well physically. I say here that I will stand by that principle which is sought to be incorporated into the constitution, or rather, reserved by the constitution to be extended to the people of this Territory to extend the free and universal right of suffrage to the women of this land wherever they shall see fit to enjoy it. I know it may be unpopular in some districts, but I am not a suppliant for popular favor. I came here to impress my own thoughts and views upon this convention. If my constituents like it, it is well, and if they don't, I don't care. I did not ask their suffrages; they sent me here for better or for worse, as the fellow said—it may be for worse or it may be for better—but I have enunciated my views upon this question and I will stand by them, and I finish as I begun by asserting that I believe in extending the right of suffrage to the women of the land wherever and whenever they want it.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: I did not intend to make any remarks upon this floor but I had a deep feeling or conviction as to my position on this question, and I was exceedingly proud when Major Magnus got up and took the side of the question which he did. I have often times heard of Major Magnus' ability to make a speech, but I avow right here and on this occasion that I am now thoroughly convinced of his powers and force of eloquence. A gentleman got up a few moments ago and said that all the arguments was on his side. I can return the taunt now, sir, and say with every reason that for arguments upon which to base a position on this question, I think, sir, that we have the better side. Now, with all the eulogies that have been offered upon women in these speeches I heartily concur. I believe they possess all the virtues and all the intelligence the gentlemen have claimed for them. I believe they exert an influence on the world that is for good. I believe the great men of the world have attributed to their mothers the foundations from which they imbibed their greatness. But, sir, I take my position from this standpoint. I look around the world today and I find that here in this country women occupy a position equal to that occupied by them in any country in the world. I don't know that the men of this country are imposing upon the women. If it should be indicated to me that the men were imposing upon the women of this generation, my sympathies would go with the women; but, if I understand the way things are being run, it does seem to me that if anyone has the better of it, it is certainly the women. I don't know what privileges a man can enjoy in this country that is not extended to women save that of suffrage, and I don't know that that would make women any better. If that conviction could be removed by any of the arguments that have been adduced here in favor of woman suffrage, possibly I would not occupy that position just now; but I am frank to say with all due respect to the gentlemen on the other side that there was very little solid argument adduced by them. Now, sirs, I say to you that I have a deep conviction upon this question. I shall certainly vote against the proposition—not, I do not think, through any antipathy for women but just simply because I think that the women of our country are transcendent over those of any other country, and that they are attaining their position by the liberal conditions under which they live, and by the manner in which our country is treating them. And if it could be proved to me beyond peradventure that women should occupy a higher sphere by reason of suffrage, then I would simply go over to the other side. But speaking, as I sincerely do, I believe that women have the best of the question as it is, and I am thoroughly satisfied that I am not occupying an ungallant position when I say that I am willing to let them have the better of the question, and I am not willing to impose upon them the responsibilities of suffrage.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I do not wish to enter into any discussion of the question of female suffrage; as that is not the question now before the convention, but simply to make a few observations as pertaining to the subject of the amendment upon which we are now acting. It has been said that women do not care to have the right of suffrage. Now, this may be true. It may be that they lack the progress made in this movement for the last fifty years, as stated by the gentleman from Missoula. It may be owing to this fact, but we have no means of knowing what the wishes of the women are on this subject, and until we endow them with the privilege of suffrage so that they may make their views heard substantially, we never will know what are the wishes of the women of this Territory. I am in favor of giving to women everything that they want, upon the principle that I have the utmost confidence in their intelligence and their ability to decide what shall properly belong to them as citizens of the State, and upon this proposition I am in favor of leaving open the way in this constitution whereby, if it be demanded in the future, or if the women come forward in the future, although they may not have the privilege of voting, they may find some way of making their influence felt, and demand that the right of suffrage shall be extended to them. I believe in making the way open, and not hedging around them the impossibility of ever obtaining these rights if they should so desire them. Now, it is said that women are so constituted physically, and the cares of home and the duties of society are such that it disqualifies them from exercising this right of suffrage. Now, if this be the case, I am willing to leave it to the ladies themselves to judge upon this matter. It is said the women may not want to vote. We have thousands of men in Montana today who do not want to vote unless they can get three dollars apiece for their vote, and I venture to say that if you extend the right of suffrage to women that you will never find them going up to the polls and selling their votes. It is also said that women by their association with men in the performance of his right of suffrage at the ballot box may become contaminated. I say that the position of the women today is higher and nobler than it ever has been, and that it is still advancing; that we have given them everything except this right of suffrage; and I have this confidence in them, that in consequence of their commingling with men in the affairs of the State and exercising the right of suffrage instead of their being contaminated by that influence, on the other hand, they will elevate and bring men gradually, if it is possible to do it, to their high level. Hence, I say that while it may not be expedient to adopt this plank in the constitution today, I say that it is impracticable to submit it to the voters of this Territory in connection with the constitution, because if this is any evidence of the feeling today upon the subject in the Territory, it will inevitably be voted down, and then we will have to face the impossibility of its ever being brought up again except by a constitutional amendment. I can see no objection to the clause that has been proposed by the gentleman from Missoula to leave a way open so that if in the future the women of Montana desire to exercise the right of suffrage that that privilege shall not be withheld from them. (Applause)

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I desire to engage the attention of the convention for just one moment in regard to this subject, and commencing, I will say that "Peace hath its victories no less renowned than war." I deny the proposition advanced by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County that the right of suffrage originates with mankind because they have power to enforce their dictates by the arbitrament of war. I say that force has nothing to do with suffrage whatever. If the argument of the gentleman should be followed to its final conclusion, the only result we can arrive at is that John Lawrence Sullivan is the only man in the United States who is competent to vote at the present time. (Applause) The arbitrament of war is not the criterion. I say that according to the argument of the gentleman advanced here upon this floor that the right of suffrage should be granted to the people of this country by the criterion of intelligence, by the criterion of honesty of men and love of country, by all those criterions by which we judge of the fealty of a man towards the country which we all love. I say that the physical force of man has nothing to do with it. It is their ability to choose between the right and the wrong. So far as the women of this country are concerned, when it comes to a question of war, I want to say that if the women had their voice in the affairs of this nation in 1859 and 1860 that the Civil war would never have taken place; that their sense of justice, that their sense of right, that their wisdom would have been such that the war would have been avoided; and although I was so young at that time as not to be able to engage in the struggle, I say that in view of the light of subsequent events that if the women of that day had had their voice in the elections of the country, that their calm judgments would have prevailed over the passions of men. I say, sir, that when you take the arbitrament of war, the power to enforce the dictates of politics or the mandates of a country, as the criterion by which you are to be guided in the bestowal of this right of suffrage, that you take a false position; that there is absolutely nothing in it, because then you go to the argument of physical force and not of mental superiority. It is a matter of pride with the people of the United States that within their limits, within the limits of this country, women occupy a higher and nobler and a better sphere than they do anywhere else. We point to it with pride because it is an evidence of our advancing civilization. We know that in China when a man becomes the father of a daughter that he is in doubt whether he shall consign it to the river or rear it. We say that that is an evidence that that man is a heathen. When we look at the Oriental countries and see the position that women are there placed in, we point with pride to our own free institutions—and we say, look at the advanced plain, the high elevation upon which the women of America stand. It is a curious coincidence that the Isle of Man was the first place to bestow upon women the right to vote, but it is nevertheless an historical fact. If we are self-respecting men with love of country in our hearts we shall put in this constitution the provision which I have offered to this convention. I say it is right, not only because it is the spirit of the progress of the age—I say it is right to put it in here, because this convention does not contain all the wisdom of the State of Montana; and although we may at the present time possess opinions of our own, yet subsequent to this time there will be people who will have some opinions as well as to right and wrong, and they should have some opportunity of expressing those sentiments in the Legislature of Montana.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I move that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Before we vote, just as a matter of privilege, I would say that one of the members cannot attend the night session and cannot vote upon this question.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: A great many friends of the measure are not in the hall.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: A great many friends against the measure are not in the hall.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson), and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of thirty in the affirmative to thirty-five in the negative.

Several members called for the question.

The Chairman: The question comes up on the adoption of the fourth subdivision of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula to Section 2 of Article 12.

Mr. Collins of Cascade called for the reading of the subdivision.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: It seems to me that this matter will bring the whole thing to a solution. I think the committee had better rise and take a vote.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. Chairman, I insist that my motion be treated properly and take its course.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now comes up on the original proposition, being the fourth subdivision of Bickford's substitute for Section 2.

The Chair put the question on the said subdivision of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford), and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-nine in the affirmative to thirty-four in the negative.

Mr. Bullard, of Jefferson: I move the committee do now rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Jefferson (Mr. Bullard), and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: Mr. President, the committee of the whole have had under consideration General File No. 12. They have made some progress and ask leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the committee of the whole reports that the committee of the whole have had under consideration General File No. 12, that they have made some progress and ask leave to sit again.

Mr. Marrion, of Missoula: I move that the convention take a recess until eight o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer that the convention adjourn, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The convention stood adjourned until Friday, July twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine at ten A. M.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

Friday Morning, July 26th, 1889.

The convention was called to order at ten A. M. by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The Chair desires to state that Mr. Parberry of Meagher desires to be excused. If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Gillette was called away on business and asked to be excused for the day.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the Journal of the previous day.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I have a report here which I wish to submit by request of the Chairman of the Committee on Irrigation.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Committee on Irrigation will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee Number Twenty-four on Irrigation have had proposition No. 20, introduced by Luce of Gallatin, on Irrigation, under consideration, and have instructed me to return the same without recommendation, as the substance of the same has been incorporated in the report of the Committee on Irrigation.

Signed PARBERRY, Chairman."

The Clerk also read as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee on Irrigation have instructed me to make the following report and ask that the same be incorporated in the constitution.

Signed PARBERRY, Chairman."

Article..... Section 1. The water of every natural stream not heretofore appropriated is hereby declared to be the property of the public, and the same is dedicated to the use of the people of the State, subject to appropriation as hereinafter provided.

Section 2. The right to divert the unappropriated waters of any natural stream to beneficial uses shall never be denied. Priority of appropriation shall give the better right as between those using the water.

Section 3. All persons and corporations shall have the right of way across public, private and corporate lands for the construction of ditches, canals and flumes for the purpose of conveying water for domestic purposes, for the irrigation of agricultural lands, and for mining and manufacturing purposes and for drainage upon payment of just compensation.

Section 4. The General Assembly shall provide by law that the Board of County Commissioners in their respective counties shall have power, when application is made by them by either party interested, to establish reasonable maximum rates to be charged for the use of water, whether furnished by individuals or corporations.

The President: If there be no objection the report of the Committee on Irrigation will be received and referred to the committee on printing with instructions to be printed.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: The Chairman of the Judiciary Committee is unavoidably absent this morning and requested me to present the following report.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President: Your Committee on Judiciary to whom was referred back Proposition No. 21, Article on Judicial Departments, to report in proper form certain amendments to the same which had been adopted in convention, herewith report back said proposition with the accompanying amendments, which they recommend be adopted as part of said proposition. Some of the amendments adopted to some of the sections make them conflicting or at least uncertain, so that it has been difficult to determine in such instances what the intention of the convention was in adopting such amendments; but, so far as they could, your Committee have endeavored to express what seemed to be desired and intended by the convention. The references to sections and lines are to the printed copies of the proposition. All of which is submitted:

Signed W. W. DIXON, Chairman.

Amend section 1 by inserting "a" after the word "as" in line 1.

Amend section 8 so as to read as follows: Sec. 8. There shall be elected at the first general election provided for by this constitution, one Chief Justice and two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court. At said first election the said Chief Justice shall be elected to hold his office until the general election in the year 1892 and one of the Associate Justices to hold his office until the general election in the year 1894, and the other Associate Justice to hold his office until the general election in the year 1896, and each shall hold until his successor is elected and qualified. The terms of office of said Justices and which one shall be Chief Justice shall at the first and all subsequent elections be designated by ballot. After said first election one Chief Justice or one Associate Justice shall be elected at the general election every two years, commencing in the year 1892 and if the Legislative Assembly shall increase the number of Justices to five, the first term of office of such additional Justices shall be fixed by law in such manner that at least one of the five Justices shall be elected every two years. The Chief Justice shall preside at all sessions of the Supreme Court and in case of his absence the Associate Justice having the shortest term to serve shall preside in his stead.

Amend section 11 by striking out the word "or" before the word "possession" in line 2 and inserting instead the word "of" and by adding "s" to the word "action" in line 13 and by inserting the word "held" after the word "person" in line 18.

Amend section 13 so as to read as follows: Sec. 13. Until otherwise provided by law the Judicial Districts of the state shall be constituted as follows: First District, Lewis & Clarke County; Second District, Silver Bow County; Third District, Deer Lodge County; Fourth District, Missoula County; Fifth District, Beaverhead, Jefferson and Madison Counties; Sixth District, Gallatin, Park and Meagher Counties; Seventh District, Yellowstone, Custer and Dawson Counties; Eighth District, Choteau, Cascade and Fergus Counties.

Amend section 18 by striking out the words "other County officers" in line 3 and inserting instead the words "the District Judge," and also by striking out the word "District" in line 3 and inserting instead the word "said."

Amend section 19 so as to read as follows: Sec. 19. There shall be elected at the general election in each county of the state, one County Attorney, whose qualifications shall be the same as are required for a Judge of the District Court, except that he must be over twenty-one, but need not be twenty-five years of age, and whose term of office shall be two years, except that the County Attorneys first elected shall hold their offices until the general election in the year 1892, and until their successors are elected and qualified. He shall have a salary to be fixed by law, one-half of which shall be paid by the state and the other half by the county for which he is elected, and he shall perform such duties as may be required by law.

Amend section 20 by striking out the word "as" in line 5. Amend Section 27 by striking out the letters "es" at the end of the word "processes" in line 1.

Amend section 29, so as to read as follows: Sec. 29. The Justices of the Supreme Court and the Judges of the District Courts shall each be paid quarterly by the state, a salary which shall not be increased or diminished during the terms for which they shall have been respectively elected. Until otherwise provided by law the salary of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be four thousand dollars per annum each, and the salary of the judges of the District Courts shall be three thousand, five hundred dollars per annum each.

Amend Section 30 by inserting in line 2 after the word "fee" the words "Allowance, Mileage."

Amend section 36 by striking out the word "cause" in line 1, and inserting instead the words "civil action." Also by inserting after the word "bar" in line 2 the words "of the state."

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move you, sir, that the report of the committee be received and adopted and that the bill as adopted by the Judiciary Committee be read at length, the rules suspended and the bill placed upon its final passage.

Motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will read the amendments. The convention will first pass upon the amendments that are offered by the Judiciary Committee. Then if any other amendments are offered they will be received.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend section one by inserting "a" after the word "as" in line one.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. J. K. Toole) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend section 8 so as to read as follows: Sec. 8. There shall be elected at the first general election provided for by this constitution, one Chief Justice and two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court. At said first election the said Chief Justice shall be elected to hold his office until the general election in the year 1892 and one of the Associate Justices to hold his office until the general election in the year 1894, and the other Associate Justice to hold his office until the general election in the year 1896, and each shall hold until his successor is elected and qualified. The terms of office of said Justices and which one shall be Chief Justice shall at the first and all subsequent elections be designated by ballot. After said first election one Chief Justice or one Associate Justice shall be elected at the general election every two years commencing in the year 1892 and if the Legislative Assembly shall increase the number of Justices to five, the first term of office of such additional Justices shall be fixed by law in such manner that at least one of the five Justices shall be elected every two years. The Chief Justice shall preside at all sessions of the Supreme Court and in case of his absence the Associate Justice having the shortest term to serve shall preside in his stead.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the amendment to section 8.

The motion was seconded.

Nays: None.

Absent: Brazleton, Dixon, Gillette, Middleton, Field, Goddard, Myers, Buford, Gaylord, Graves, Gibson, Luce, Parberry, Webster—14.

The President: The motion to adopt is carried, and Proposition No. 21 becomes a part of the constitution of the state of Montana. The Chair is in receipt of a report of the Committee on Finances of the State. It is very lengthy and unless there is a desire to have it read it will be referred to the printing committee to be printed. It is so referred.

The report of the Committee on Finances which was referred to the Committee on Printing was as follows:

ARTICLE

Revenue and Taxation.

Section 1. The necessary revenue for the support and maintenance of the state shall be provided by the Legislative Assembly which shall levy a uniform rate of assessment and taxation, and shall prescribe such regulations as shall secure a just valuation for taxation of all property, except that specially provided for in this article. The Legislative Assembly may also impose a license tax, both upon persons and upon corporations doing business in the state.

Sec. 2. The property of the United States, the state, counties, cities, towns, school districts, municipal corporations and public libraries shall be exempt from taxation; and such other property as may be used exclusively for agricultural and horticultural societies, for educational purposes, actual places for religious worship, places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, and institutions of purely public charity may be exempt from taxation. The Legislative Assembly may, in its discretion, exempt from taxation other property in addition to that herein specified, but all exemptions shall only be by general law.

Sec. 3. All mines and mining claims, both placer and rock in place, containing or bearing gold, silver, copper, lead, coal or other valuable mineral deposits, after patent shall have been issued therefor by the United States, shall be taxed at the price paid the United States therefor, unless the surface ground, or some part thereof, of such mine or claim, is used for other than mining purposes and has a separate and independent value for such other purposes, in which case said surface ground or any part thereof, so used for other than mining purposes, shall be taxed at its value for such other purposes, as provided by law; and all machinery used in mining, and all property and surface improvements upon or appurtenant to mines and mining claims which have a value separate and independent of such mines or mining claims, and the annual net proceeds of all mines and mining claims shall be taxed as provided by law.

Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall not levy taxes upon the inhabitants or property in any county, city, town or municipal corporation for county, town or municipal purposes but it may by law invest in the corporate authorities thereof powers to assess and collect taxes for such purposes.

Sec. 5. Taxes for city, town and school purposes may be levied on all subjects and objects of taxation, but the assessed valuation of any property shall not exceed the valuation of the same property for state and county purposes.

Sec. 6. No county, city, town or other municipal corporation, the inhabitants thereof nor the property therein, shall be released or discharged from their or its proportionate share of state taxes.

Sec. 7. The power to tax corporations or corporate property shall never be relinquished or suspended, and all corporations in this state or doing business therein shall be subject to taxation for state, county, school, municipal and other purposes, on real and personal property owned or used by them and not by this constitution exempted from taxation.

Sec. 8. Private property shall not be taken or sold for the corporate debts of municipal corporations.

Sec. 9. The rate of taxation of real and personal property for state purposes in any one year shall never exceed three (3) mills on each dollar of valuation; and whenever the taxable property in the state shall amount to one hundred million dollars ($100,000,000) the rate shall not exceed two and one-half (2½) mills on each dollar of valuation; and whenever the taxable property in the state shall amount to three hundred million dollars ($300,000,000) the rate shall never thereafter exceed one (1) mill on each dollar of valuation; unless a proposition to increase such rate, specifying the rate proposed and the time during which the same shall be levied shall have been submitted to the people at a general election, and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election.

Sec. 10. All taxes levied for state purposes shall be paid into the state treasury, and no money shall be drawn from the treasury but in pursuance of specific appropriations made by law.

Sec. 11. Taxes shall be levied and collected by general laws and for public purposes only. They shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax.

Sec. 12. No appropriations shall be made nor any expenditure authorized by the Legislative Assembly, whereby the expenditure of the state during any fiscal year shall exceed the total tax then provided for by law and applicable to such appropriation or expenditure, unless the Legislative Assembly making such appropriation shall provide for levying a sufficient tax, not exceeding the rates allowed in section nine (9) of this article, to pay such appropriations or expenditure within such fiscal year. This provision shall not apply to appropriations or expenditures to suppress insurrection, defend the state or assist in defending the United States in time of war. No appropriation of public moneys shall be made for a longer term than two years.

Sec. 13. The State Treasurer shall keep a separate account of each fund in his hands, and shall at the end of each quarter of the fiscal year report to the Governor in writing, under oath, the amount of all moneys in his hands, to the credit of every such fund, and the place or places where the same is kept or deposited, and the number and amount of every warrant paid or redeemed by him during the quarter. The Governor or other person or persons authorized by law, shall verify said report and cause the same to be immediately published in at least one newspaper printed at the seat of government, and otherwise as the Legislative Assembly may require. The Legislative Assembly may provide by law further regulations for the safe-keeping and management of the public funds in the hands of the treasurer; but, notwithstanding any such regulation, the treasurer and his sureties shall, in all cases, be held responsible therefor.

Sec. 14. The making of profit out of public moneys, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, by any public officer, shall be deemed a felony and shall be punished as provided by law; but part of such punishment shall be disqualification to hold public office for a period of not less than ten years.

Sec. 15. The Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor and Attorney General shall constitute a State Board of Equalization; and the board of county commissioners of each county shall constitute a county board of equalization. The duty of the state board of equalization shall be to adjust and equalize the valuation of the taxable property among the several counties of the state. The duty of the county boards of equalization shall be to adjust and equalize the valuation of the taxable property within their respective counties. Each board shall also perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 16. All property, except as in this section provided, shall be assessed in the county, city, town, township or school district in which it is situated, in the manner prescribed by law. The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in this state shall be assessed by the state board of equalization, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts.

Sec. 17. The word property, as used in this article is hereby declared to include moneys, credits bonds, stocks, franchises and all matters and things (real, personal and mixed) capable of private ownership; but this shall not be construed so as to authorize a taxation of the stocks of any company or corporation when the property of such company or corporation, represented by stocks, is within the state and has been taxed.

Sec. 18. The Legislative Assembly shall pass all laws necessary to carry out the provisions of this article.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula sent up report of the committee on printing. The Clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee on Printing etc, have examined Proposition Nos. 14, 23 and 24 and find the same have been correctly printed.

(Signed) CONRAD, Chairman.

Mr. Browne of Choleau sent up report of the Committee on City, County and Town Organizations.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President: Your Committee on City, County and Town Organizations to whom was referred petition from citizens of Glasgow, Dawson County, protesting against a clause being inserted in the constitution fixing a limit of three million dollars or more of assessable property for the creation of new counties, beg leave to report that we had under consideration the resolution introduced by Mr. Conrad pertaining to this matter, and reported same without recommendation.

(Signed) DAVID G. BROWNE, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection this report will be placed on file and referred to committee of the whole.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I am desirous of making a couple of reports which, if in order, I should like to present now.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and subjects will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President: Your committee on miscellaneous subjects, to whom was referred a petition of the citizens of Deer Lodge County, relative to the Sunday law, respectfully report that the same proposition has been previously acted upon adversely by the committee, who see no reason for incorporating the subject in the constitution. We have sufficient faith in the people represented in the Legislative Assembly to entrust to their care the establishment of order and justice, to the end that all citizens may equally enjoy the best results of good government. Having agreed to leave this matter in the hands of the people and their representatives, we recommend that the petition be laid on the table.

(Signed L. H. HERSHFELD, Chairman.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning this report.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the report be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President: Your committee on miscellaneous subjects etc., to whom was referred proposition No. 25, by A. J. Burns, concerning the establishment of a mining bureau and the office of a commissioner of mines, beg leave to report that in their opinion it would not be wise to incorporate into the constitution the matters suggested in said proposition. We find that the laws now in existence amply cover the subject, and therefore recommend that proposition No. 25 be not adopted.

(Signed L. H. HERSHFELD, Chairman.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: I move the adoption of that report.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead (Mr. Witter) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: Are there any other reports of standing committees?

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move you that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the further consideration of proposition No. 14, General File No. 12.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Cooper of Gallatin to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Chair will state that the Committee concluded its labors last night while under consideration of Section 2. The substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Marrion, is now in order, to which there is an amendment pending offered by the gentleman from Jefferson; Mr. Breen. The question now is on the amendment of the gentleman from Jefferson.

The Clerk will read the amendment.

Mr. Marrion of Missoula: Will the Chair kindly instruct the Clerk to read the substitute first?

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the substitute.

The Clerk read as follows: "Substitute for Section 2. Sec. 2. Every male citizen of the United States and every male person of foreign birth who may have declared his intention to become a citizen of the United State according to law, not less than one nor more than five years before he offers to vote, who is over the age of twenty-one years, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections by the people."

The Clerk also read amendment to Section 2 of Article on Suffrage, offered by Breen:

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I thought the whole business was disposed of yesterday.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I would like to know in what respect this substitute differs from what we voted on yesterday.

The Chairman: The Clerk can read the section as it now stands amended.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, is a substitute in order at this time?

The Chairman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I desire to offer one.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin offers the following substitute which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Every male person of the age of twenty-one years or over possessing the following qualifications shall be entitled to vote at all general elections: First, he shall be a citizen of the United States; Second, he shall have resided in the state one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote, and in the county, town or precinct such time as may be prescribed by law; provided, first, that no person convicted of a felony shall have the right to vote, unless he has been pardoned by the proper pardoning power; provided Second, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right at the time of the adoption of the constitution.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I second the substitute.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Before the question is put I would call for the reading of the substitute offered by Mr. Marrion of Missoula. I am informed by Mr. Breen, who introduced an amendment yesterday, that his amendment was not intended to refer to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula, and therefore that it might perhaps at this time be considered as having been passed upon.

The Clerk read the substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marrion).

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, it strikes me this substitute was practically disposed of yesterday on the motion of Mr. Clark of Silver Bow to strike out the words "or those who intended to become such". It strikes me we are wasting valuable time.

The Chairman: The question is upon the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me there is a little difference of opinion as to what proposition we are voting on.

The Chairman: The question before the house is on the substitute of the gentleman from Missoula. Mr. Marrion. To that the gentleman from Gallatin offers a substitute. The question is on that substitute.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: I ask for the reading of the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Clerk read the said substitute.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I call for a division of the question, because there is one part of that I am willing to vote for, and the other part I am not.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I feel much the same way, and I call for a division of the question.

The Chairman: The question will be divided.

The Clerk read the first division.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: What I desire is the separation of that last clause.

The Clerk read the first of the last two provisions of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Will the Chair kindly have that first division read again, so that we may know just exactly what we are voting on?

The Clerk read as follows: "Sec. 2. Every male person of the age of twenty-one years or over possessing the following qualifications shall be entitled to vote at all general elections: First, he shall be a citizen of the United States; Second, he shall have resided in the state one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote and in the county, town or precinct such time as may be prescribed by law; provided first, that no person convicted of a felony shall have the right to vote unless he has been pardoned by the proper pardoning power.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Now, Mr. Chairman, permit me to ask, is all of that that the Clerk has just read considered as the first division now to be voted on?

The Chairman: The Chair so understands it.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I move to strike out all that part "provided he is pardoned for a felony". I think that Section 9 may provide such laws excluding certain persons from the right of suffrage, and it seems to me preferable to leave it that way.

The Chair put the question on the said first division of the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin, as read by the Clerk, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty six in the affirmative to thirteen in the negative.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the second division.

The Clerk read as follows: Provided Second, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right at the time of the adoption of this constitution.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: Now, that comes under the objection I made yesterday, that it is in conflict with the constitution of the United States, that it provides qualifications for voters and allows men to vote who are in this territory at the time of the adoption of the constitution, and if they are outside of this territory they cannot vote.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I believe thoroughly in the point my friend made yesterday on the educational clause, that under the constitution which gives the same rights and privileges to citizens of one state which are given to citizens of other states, that I do not think that would be constitutional. It is different when it applies to foreigners, not coming from any particular state, but from a foreign country.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I do not think the provision referred to applies to a case of this kind at all; that is, that they should guarantee the same rights to the citizens of this state that they enjoy in other states. That, I think, if you will look at it, applies to the term citizen; and in relation to the other provision I do not think this a matter that will come in under that. I am very sure that that says that the citizens of the state shall have the same rights and immunities as the citizens of the other states.

A member: That is what it says.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Then it doesn't apply, because these parties are not citizens.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: I think I am clearly right. The citizens of each State shall be entitled to no more privileges and immunities than citizens in the several states. That is on page 14 of the Revised Statutes of the constitution of the United States. It is not the one Judge Knowles has spoken of at all. He speaks of the 14th amendment, and I am not speaking of that at all. I think if my friend will look on page 14, Article 5, Section 2, he will become satisfied I am right. I am willing to submit this to every lawyer present on this floor, and if I am not right I shall not urge it. I am well satisfied, however, that I am right.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Now I would ask Mr. Stapleton—(reading) "The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the several states". Now, in Oregon, they have a law at present that those who have simply declared their intentions to become citizens are citizens of Oregon. Now, if they are entitled to that privilege there, then when the citizen of Oregon comes here, who has simply declared his intention to become a citizen, he can vote here, because he is a citizen of Oregon; and it seems there are some fifteen states that have the same privileges; and if they are citizens of the State of Oregon or of these fifteen States, who have simply declared their intention to become citizens then if they came here and are entitled to the same rights and privileges and immunities as the citizens of those states, then they are entitled to vote; and I think it is perfectly proper for us to provide here that those who have exercised the right of suffrage up to this time shall still have that right.

Mr. Durfee of Deer Lodge: I think that almost every State has a law something like this. I remember some years ago that I resided in

New York State and was a voter there—a citizen. I went to the State of Maryland and was there during the presidential election. The laws there required a residence in the State for one year before a man could vote. Consequently I was not allowed the privilege of casting my ballot, because I had not been a resident of the State of Maryland for one year. Now, under this privilege spoken of by Mr. Stapleton, I had the same right as the citizens of Maryland to vote.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I think it is clear that we have this right. I am very sorry indeed to see the convention go behind the old laws of the territory. I think it would be shameful for this constitution to call upon a man to vote for its adoption and then disfranchise him after he had voted for it.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I want to say that my understanding has been that the clause referred to by the gentleman from Silver Bow has always been construed not to apply to the right of suffrage or political rights—the right to hold office—but all fundamental rights of property and person. Why, under the old state of things, in some of the States negroes had a right to vote, but in the South we know they were never allowed to vote, and I think that question has always been understood and decided by the courts not to include political rights, rights to vote or rights to hold office or things of that kind, but personal security rights, and rights of property. Rights to hold property and dispose of property and rights of that kind are included in the provision of the constitution of the United States referred to by the gentleman from Silver Bow; but political rights have always been held not to be included.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: Irrespective of propositions of that character I do not see any objection to making this whole thing harmonious, as if by a vote of a majority of this convention we have decided as to qualifications of voters, that they must be citizens of the United States. Now, if that is the correct and proper rule, I do not see why we should make an exception to that and make those who have heretofore been declared by the laws of Montana Territory voters, to-wit, those who have only declared their intentions to become citizens. I do not see any reason for making an exception to that class of men. If it is the policy of the State to allow only citizens of the United States to vote, I do not see why we should not carry that principle clear through. It is no legal right conferred on those who have declared their intention only to become citizens of the United States, to vote; it is no vested right that they have, because we have allowed them to vote at Territorial elections, it is no vested right that they have—no right that they have, that we cannot take away from them and change under the State Laws of Montana. Then, if it is the policy of this State to allow only citizens of the United States to vote rather than those who have declared their intention to become citizens, I do not see why we should not make that thing consistent all the way through, because the territorial laws have in my judgment wrongfully allowed those who have declared their intentions to become citizens to vote. Unless they have a vested legal right in that matter, which cannot be claimed by any lawyer, and I do not believe that they have, I do not see why we should not make that thing harmonious, even so far as those who have enjoyed the right to vote under territorial laws—those who have declared their intentions to become citizens. So I am in favor of that proposition. I want to vote on this proposition separately from the other.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I am opposed to that portion of the amendment under consideration for the reason that it destroys the effect of the first provision of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, which is that all persons shall be citizens of the United States before they shall be entitled to vote. Now, the object of that provision in the constitution is for the purpose of shutting out these foreign people who emigrate to this country and have not sufficiently educated themselves upon the institutions of our country to vote an intelligent ballot. That is the very object of the first part of this amendment. Now then, sir, there are hundreds, and I may say thousands of persons residing within the territory of Montana who have declared their intention to become citizens, who, I believe, will never become citizens of the United States; and under that latter provision they would be entitled to vote at every election; and it seems to me that that element is just as dangerous as the element which would come here hereafter. If there is any reason for the first part of this proposition requiring that every person should be a citizen of the United States, it should apply to those people who live in this territory at the present time and have declared their intentions to become citizens of the United States, as well as those who are to come hereafter. For that reason I am opposed to the second subdivision of the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin County, inasmuch as it destroys the effect or the first part of the section.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the gentleman, can we disfranchise those who are already voters?

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I believe we can, and in connection with that I would say that the Organic Act under which the territory of Montana is created has fixed the qualifications of voters. We have met here to form a constitution by which we shall be governed hereafter, and I believe it is within the province and the scope of the authority of this convention to define what the political rights of citizens shall be—to define what their qualifications shall be as voters and I believe that this convention has the right to say that a person shall be a full citizen of the United States before he shall be allowed the right of franchise, just as much as they have to say that he shall have the same rights and privileges that he now enjoys under the territorial laws.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: In answer to the constitutional question raised by Mr. Stapleton, I desire to read from Mr. McCrary on Elections, "Sec. 3. The right of suffrage is not a natural right, nor is it an absolute, unqualified personal right. It is a right derived in this country from constitutions and statutes. It is, as we have seen, regulated by the States, and their power to fix the qualifications of voters is limited only by the provisions of the fifteenth amendment to the constitution, which forbids any distinction on account of "race, color or previous condition of servitude", and by the general power of the Federal government to regulate its own elections" Huber vs. Riley, 53 Penn. State, 112, and some other cases.

Now, each State has the right to fix the qualifications of its voters, and there is no limitation except the fifteenth amendment of the constitution which forbids any distinction on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I think it would be a very unfortunate step for this convention to take, to disfranchise the voters who have been voters in the territory under territorial laws. In the first place it would be an act of injustice to them, for this reason: all persons who have come here and taken out their naturalization papers have come here with the presumed knowledge that they would be entitled to vote upon their filing their declaration of intention to become citizens. But, leaving out the question of the injustice of depriving them of the right which they have heretofore enjoyed, I believe it would be an act which would imperil the very adoption of this constitution itself, for every one of these men will be empowered to vote on the adoption or rejection of this constitution, and State officers of the State election, and do you suppose they are going to the polls and cast their vote in favor of a constitution which disfranchises them. If so, you are reckoning without your host, and I pretend to say that if we fail to pass this proviso clause, that the constitution itself will stand a fair show of being rejected.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I undertake to say that whether the constitution itself stands a fair show to be rejected if we do this thing, it ought to be rejected, and I would feel like taking the stump in this territory and advocating its rejection from one end of it to the other, if we should do an injustice of this kind. The men who came here and under our laws have been invested with the franchise—the men who will meet you when you go back home, and who will say "we voted to put you in that convention and now you ask us to vote for the adoption of this amendment which disfranchises us." It is right and proper to make a distinction. Why, we have a great example in the foundation and formation of the constitution of the United States. You all know that no person except a native born citizen is eligible to the office of the Presidency, but the fathers of the country, recognizing the right of those who were there at the time, who helped to fight the revolutionary war and who helped to adopt the constitution, and who voted for its adoption placed this provision in it "No person except a natural born citizen or citizen of the United State at the time of the adoption of this constitution shall be eligible to the office of President." I am sure there is an example great enough and illustrious enough for all of us to follow it, without the charge of inconsistency being urged as it has been urged by my friend from Deer Lodge.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I understand the policy of all republican governments has been to extend and not to restrict the suffrage—extend it in proper cases and never take it away where it has been given; and I think our action should be prospective and not retrospective. Where suffrage has been extended to any class in this territory I think it should remain there so far as those people to whom it has been extended have the right to exercise it; but prospectively, so far as the qualifications of voters in the future are concerned, we have a perfect right to fix those qualifications, and to place such restrictions upon that right as we think should be proper. That seems to me to be the spirit of our institutions, and absolute justice as well.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: I merely submitted a legal proposition to this convention, and I put it on legal grounds. I did not say it was right to disfranchise these people, but you must see at once the condition we put ourselves in. Now, when it comes to voting upon this constitution there will be thousands of people in Montana Territory who never have been voters who never have been possessed of the right of voting at all. Those people you say can vote for all time; you say a man that has declared his intention, it makes no difference whether in Montana Territory or anywhere else, if he happens to step over the line into Montana Territory the day before, then it never becomes necessary for him to become a full-fledged citizen; it never becomes necessary for him to take out his final papers, but for all time he is a voter in Montana Territory. Now, Mr. Chairman, the man who is so unfortunate as not to come until the day after, and who has declared his intention, he is shut out from voting until the five years have expired and until he has become a full-fledged citizen. Then you must see that it becomes a question of when a man came to the Territory. Here are two men living side by side; one of them goes to the polls and votes simply because he came into the Territory the day before the adoption of the constitution; the other was so unfortunate as to come into the Territory the day after. So the qualification is dependent upon when a man came to the Territory. Now, I believe that we must make our election laws, whatever they may be, uniform. Now, Mr. Chairman, if we have a right to say that a man who happens to be in Montana Territory at that day and who has declared his intention to become a citizen, shall vote, then we can go further and say we can except such and such states, and we can disfranchise for the time being the citizens of other States. We can say for instance that a man that has lived in the State of Illinois before he came here, can vote. We can pick out the different states and say that a citizen of that state can vote when he has declared his intention. Now my friend has read from McGrary on Elections. There is nothing in that that goes to contradict anything that I have said. We are making qualifications of citizenship that should be uniform. We make the qualification at the time the man happens to put his foot into Montana Territory. Now, Mr. Chairman, I like the spirit that is evinced by some of these gentlemen. They say this constitution should be rejected, and they go further and say that if a majority of this convention are in favor of this provision, that so far as they are concerned they will go outside and will spend their time and money and work against the adoption of this constitution. Now, Mr. Chairman, if that is the spirit—Interrupted.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I said I would feel like doing it.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: Well, I am very glad I misunderstood the gentleman and I apologize to him; because if that is the spirit, and because if men cannot have this constitution to suit themselves, they are going on the outside to work against its adoption, then it appears to me we had better quit, because then we would not be fit to enjoy the rights and privileges of statehood. Now there are a class of citizens who have taken out their first papers as they are called, but who have never taken out their second papers; but if you pass this law you force them either not to vote or to become full-fledged citizens and to take out their papers. There are thousands of the people in the Territory today that are doing that very thing, and every term of court they are called on to serve on jury duty and they laugh about it and say that they are not going to take out their papers for the reason that they don't want to assume jury duty.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: It seems to me that the argument that has been advanced by the gentleman who has just taken his seat would nullify the Chinese Exclusion Act. That was made dependent upon the mere accident of coming into this country on a certain day. Any Chinaman who did not come in on a certain day was excluded by the laws of this country, and I believe it will not be denied by any man in this convention that if the United States has the right to exclude any class or sect, they have the right by the same law or the same precedent to disfranchise anybody; for it is a truism that the greater includes the less, and according to the argument advanced here we would really nullify an act that has been incorporated in the Constitution of the United States. As regards the fairness of this act it seems to me that it cannot be classed in the category at all. We have been elected and sent to this constitutional convention by perhaps three or four thousand men whom by our acts in this convention we would disfranchise; in fact the whole history of constitutional conventions and conventions of a deliberate nature, have been not to disfranchise men that were in the country at the time of the passage of the act, but to grant them full and uniform rights with those people and those classes whose rights were unquestioned; and it seems to me as regards fairness and justice, the proposition is not to be considered.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: There has been something said here in regard to those who have simply declared their intention to become citizens, that they will always remain so; that they will never become full citizens of the United States. The disposition in our time is to enact laws that will preclude foreigners from holding real estate in the United States. The class of people that are organized into laboring organizations are having their influence upon the legislative assemblies throughout the United States upon this question. They are demanding that none but citizens of the United States shall hold its real estate. I believe that this is the law in this Territory at this time. We will go into a State organization with that law upon our statute book. Now if any alien who has simply declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States expects to transmit his little home or his property or anything of that kind or his real estate to his heirs he has got to become a citizen, and that fact alone is going to force every man who is in the Territory at this time who has simply declared his intention to become a citizen, to become a full citizen of the United States; and I believe all of them will become full citizens of the United States. And these citizens who have remained here in the Territory, helped build up its institutions, paid the taxes of the country, supported our schools, and who by virtue of the Organic Act of the Territory and the laws of the Territory, have simply been entitled to exercise the privilege of suffrage, that is simply a privilege, not a right, and I believe that at this time they should not be denied this privilege. They came in here to vote upon the adoption or rejection of this constitution; they are part of the people. When we put into this Constitution of Montana Territory, "We the people of Montana Territory adopt this constitution," why they are a part of this people, and then the very minute they come in here to adopt the fundamental law, to exercise a greater right than the right of electing officers after the adoption of that law, why, shall we disfranchise them? Shall we say that they are not entitled to vote after that? I hope that this amendment will prevail. I hope it will be put into a little better language than it is so as not to show an apparent verbal conflict, but it ought to be, in substance, adopted.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I differ somewhat from the arguments that have been adduced here in favor of the amendment, for several reasons. One reason is, the argument advanced yesterday on the proposition that every person should be a citizen of the United States. Some of the men who advanced that proposition yesterday argued today in favor of the proposition of creating a class here who are not citizens and who can remain here and enjoy all the privileges that citizens do. They give those people every privilege that a citizen has, and yet those people are excused from jury duty, they are excused from military duty, and from every duty of a citizen of the State. Is there anything to compel a man to become a citizen if it is only necessary for him to take out his first papers in order to exercise and enjoy all the rights of a citizen with the exception of transferring real estate. Now there are quite a number of this element in Montana who have no real estate and probably never will have. These people have no object in becoming citizens at all, therefore I think we should treat everybody alike. Those that are here the same as those that shall come. For that reason I certainly oppose the amendment.

The question was called for.

The Chairman: The question is, to strike out the second subdivision of this section.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I have listened to the arguments pro and con upon this proposition, and I must confess that some of the features of the amendment or substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin County I like and some I do not like. But here is a proposition that I do like, and as there may be someone here who has not read it recently, I will call the attention of the convention to it, and then make a few remarks, and then sit down. It will be found in the compiled laws of the Territory on page 923, Section 1007 "All male citizens of the United States above the age of twenty-one years, and all male persons of the same age, who shall have declared their intention of becoming citizens, and who under existing laws of the United States may ultimately become citizens thereof, shall be deemed electors of this Territory and be entitled to vote for delegate to congress, and for territorial, district, county, precinct and municipal officers provided they shall have resided in the Territory six months and in the county where they may offer to vote thirty days next preceeding the day of election." Now, sir, I believe that that is a wise provision: I believe it is a just provision: and I believe it is a provision that might safely be transmitted from our territorial state of existence into that of a State. To require men to become full-fledged citizens before they can exercise the right of suffrage here provided they were not here at the adoption of this constitution, is going a little further than I am willing to go in fairness and in all justice in dealing with my fellow men. For instance you take a man in Massachusetts who came from England; he has been there perhaps six months; he sees an account of the wonderful natural deposits of gold, silver, lead and copper in Montana; he may have been there a year; he has taken out his first papers; he comes to this country and discovers that here is a place for him to invest his millions in developing the rich minerals of this country. Supposing he should come out here and invest considerable in property here, and he finally comes across this clause in the constitution which says that inasmuch as you have not been here five years and taken out your papers, you shall not have any voice or vote in the manner in which your property shall be disposed of here or shall be taxed. Now I say that is not fair. It is not dealing justly with these men for the reason that we have just extended to them an invitation to come out here. They look at the laws of Montana as they are today and say "we have all the privileges we want under existing election laws". When they get here they are met with a different proposition; and we say to them "Why, we have changed our laws since then and you cannot exercise the rights of a citizen". It looks a good deal like the invitation of the spider to the fly to walk into its little parlor and get entrapped. I do not believe there is any danger to the free institutions of this country by allowing them to come in here and settle down and become citizens immediately. Most men are not inclined to violate the law, but to keep it; most men are not inclined to tear down the fabric of free government, but to maintain it. That has always been the sentiment and that feeling seems to be "growing with our growth and strengthening with our strength." While as I said before, I like some of the provisions of my friend's substitute, I am opposed to the whole of it if it is all classed together. If it can be separated and disintegrated, then I will vote for some part of it and against the rest. But it does seem to me that the statute that I have just read must commend itself to every man that is not a candidate. I wont vote for a proposition here that undertakes to ostracise men who come to this country in good faith although they may have settled in Pennsylvania or South Carolina or Texas, and take a snap judgment on them. I do not believe in the doctrine. It is not the system under which this country has grown up from a few colonies to a population of sixty millions of people who can now boast of a government that would dwarf a dozen empires like that of Macedonia, which sent out its conquerors to the world with a great deal of intelligence. I believe in that system which has caused us to grow and prosper as no people ever prospered before, and I tell you we want to make haste slowly in these forward, imaginary steps of reform where we run against the rights of the people who are to come here and help us maintain the integrity of our Union, populate it, develop it and make it a mighty empire.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow sent up an amendment which the Clerk read as follows: Amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin. "Provided that every person who has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, in order to enjoy the right of suffrage, shall perfect his citizenship in five years from the date of the adoption of this constitution".

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I will accept the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: My object in offering the amendment is that I am opposed to disfranchising anybody, if it can be avoided, who has had the right of suffrage in this Territory, and to whom as the gentleman has well said the members of this convention probably owe their seats. I still adhere to the original proposition that every man who shall be entitled to the right of suffrage in the State of Montana should live here five years before he is entitled to vote; but it does seem to work a hardship upon the people who are enjoying that privilege here now. I will admit that many of them are not entitled by moral considerations to the right of suffrage. We cannot take any cognizance of that qualification, and in order to avoid this seeming difficulty, I think by restricting the right of suffrage to these people who are now enjoying it, to the limit of the time in which they may acquire citizenship, it will only be doing them an act of justice.

The Clerk reread the substitute of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) for the information of the convention.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: That would disfranchise for the five years.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: If the gentleman will reduce that to proper form I will accept the amendment.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move that the committee do now rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) I believe has written an amendment which probably is better than mine.

The Clerk read the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) as follows: "Provided that after the expiration of five years from the time of the adoption of this constitution no person except citizens shall have the right to vote."

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of this amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The Chairman: The motion that the committee rise was carried.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I beg pardon; I did not know that the Chair had put the proposition.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, the Committee of the Whole have under consideration General File No. 12 and have made some progress and ask leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that the committee have had under consideration Proposition No. 12, have made some progress and ask leave to sit again. If there be no objection leave will be granted.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move we take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move to amend by making it three o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment of the gentleman from Missoula Mr. Bickford and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until three o'clock.

Friday, July 26th, 1889. Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at three o'clock.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I would like to be excused from sometime this afternoon until Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I would like to be excused until Monday noon.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I beg to be excused after this afternoon until Monday at four o'clock P. M.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I ask leave of absence until Tuesday at two o'clock.

Mr. Brazleton, of Jefferson: I ask leave of absence until Tuesday at two o'clock.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that the convention be excused.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I ask leave of absence from today after the adjournment until two o'clock Monday.

Mr. Browne, of Choteau: I would like to be excused until four o'clock Monday.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I would say, Mr. President, that all the gentlemen living on the Montana Central and also those living on the Northern Pacific wish to go home and cannot get here until four o'clock on Monday; and I would suggest that when the convention adjourn it adjourn until four o'clock instead of two.

The President: The gentleman from Beaverhead County, Mr. Knippenberg, desires me to state that he wishes leave of absence for the present.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I desire to be excused until three o'clock on Monday.

Mr. Marrion, of Missoula: I would like to be excused from today until Tuesday at two o'clock.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move that when we adjourn we adjourn until four o'clock on Monday.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that when we adjourn we adjourn until nine o'clock tomorrow morning.

The President: There is a motion before the convention that when the convention adjourn it adjourn until four o'clock on Monday. An amendment to that is moved that when we adjourn we adjourn until nine o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Custer Mr. Burleigh and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-seven in the affirmative to twenty-seven in the negative.

The President: The convention will not vote upon the original motion.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I move that the convention do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question is now on the original motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow Mr. Warren.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Would an amendment be in order at this time?

The President: Yes sir.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move that when we adjourn we adjourn to meet at ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The President: The motion is not in order.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move that when the convention adjourn it adjourn to meet at 9:30 tomorrow morning.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the said question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order. Have not the ayes and nays been called for on the original motion?

The President: The gentleman rises to the point of order that the ayes and nays being called for on the original proposition, the amendment was not in order. That would be true if the roll had been begun, but the Clerk had not commenced to call the roll.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move that the convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 14.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Chair would like to make a statement. It has been the express desire of quite a number of the gentlemen of this convention that they secure a photograph in group of the members of this convention, and an invitation was given by some photographer in the Pittsburg Block to take the photographs of the members of this convention free if they would give him a sitting. My attention has been called to it, and I have been requested to ask the members of the convention to go there and have their photographs taken.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I desire an excuse for my colleague, Mr. Gibson, until Monday at four o'clock.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. J. K. Toole), a vote being taken the same was declared carried, and the convention resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole for the consideration of general orders.

The President called Mr. Cooper of Gallatin to the chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin in the chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: When the committee rose it had under consideration the second subdivision of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, which is a substitute to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula. The Clerk will read the substitute.

The Clerk read the subdivision of Mr. Hartman's substitute to Section 2. Provided second that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right at the time of the adoption of this constitution.

The Clerk then read the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) to the said substitute as follows: "Provided that after the expiration of five years from the time of the adoption of this constitution no persons except citizens shall have the right to vote."

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, that amendment is accepted.

The Chair then put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of forty-three in the affirmative to eight in the negative.

The Chairman: The question now is upon the adoption of the clause as amended.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move its adoption.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Durfee of Deer Lodge called for the reading of the clause as amended.

The Clerk read same.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Before that is put I desire to say that I did not understand that Mr. Clark's amendment was in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read the clause as amended as follows: Provided second that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right at the time of the adoption of this constitution. Provided third that after the expiration of five years from the time of the adoption of this constitution no persons except citizens of the United States shall have the right to vote.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: It seems to me that the language is a little conflicting.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Deer Lodge if that amendment does not in turn give to any person who is not a citizen of the United States or who has declared his intention to become such a right to vote under the laws of the state for the period of five years.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: It undoubtedly does.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer the following. I offer it as a substitute.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers a substitute which the Clerk will read. Is this a substitute for the entire proposition as submitted by Mr. Hartman and amended by Mr. Clark—in other words, for the whole section?

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Yes sir.

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for section 2 as amended by the amendments of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark), "Every male citizen of the United States above the age of twenty-one years and every male citizen of the same age who has declared his intention of becoming a citizen, and who under existing laws of the United States may ultimately become a citizen, and who for one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote has resided in the state, and who has resided in the county, city, town or precinct such time as may be prescribed by law, shall be deemed an elector of this state and entitled to vote at the first general election after the admission of this state into the Union, and thereafter full citizenship of the United States, in addition to the qualifications above provided shall be necessary to constitute such elector. Provided that no person convicted of a felony shall be denied the right to vote if he has been pardoned therefor."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to ask if there is not an amendment pending—the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula. Mr. Marrion?

The Chairman: The Chair understands that the gentleman from Missoula offered a substitute. The gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) offered a substitute for the substitute. Then that question was divided. We are now adopting the second subdivision.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I thought we had adopted that. Mr. Marrion's motion is now in order.

The Chairman: Not until the second subdivision is disposed of.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I thought the Chair had decided that was adopted and then Mr. Toole offered this substitute.

The Chairman: The amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke was adopted, but we have not taken a vote upon the original question as amended.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Under the Enabling Act for the foundation of the state of Montana all persons who are qualified electors under the laws of the Territory at this time become qualified electors for the purpose of voting on this constitution. This amendment proposes that all persons who are qualified electors of the Territory now, even those who are citizens and those who have declared their intention to become such, shall be qualified to vote at the first general election held after the admission of the state into the Union, which will be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, eighteen hundred and ninety-one. Thereafter in order to vote it shall be necessary that the party be a full citizen of the United States and possessing the same qualification, one year's residence in the state. The next general election after that would be in November, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, which would give from this time until that time for those persons who are qualified, to become citizens of the United States. It occurs to me that there is no other method by which we can make this general in its application so far as full citizenship is concerned without violating some principle of the constitution. I want to see the men who are entitled to vote upon this constitution and who have been voting in this Territory for years—I want to see them secured the right to vote under general elections by the laws of the state; but I cannot see very well how you can divide it up without requiring full citizenship of the people who have been here all these years and at the same time requiring full citizenship on the part of those who are not residents of the Territory at this time. My inclinations are that way, and I am very much like a gentleman who introduced a bill in Congress and succeeded in getting it passed by that Congress. The President sent for him and told him it was unconstitutional. He told the President he had as much respect for the constitution as anybody else, but he did not allow it to stand between himself and his friends. I feel very much like that in this matter. It may be some hardship to some person who has not resided here a sufficient length of time to vote at the second general election, but I think it would probably take in four-fifths of those people.

Mr. Eaton of Park called for the reading of the section as amended for which Mr. J. K. Toole's substitute was proposed as a substitute.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer called for the reading of the substitute of Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke.

The Clerk read the section and the substitute.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, it strikes me that we have voted on this first clause about over enough. We have decided here about half a dozen times that nobody should be a voter except those persons residing in the Territory. As I understand the gentleman offers this as a substitute for the entire proposition. We voted on this proposition half a dozen times and we have adopted it twice. It is about time we knew where we were.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: There was a suggestion made here that by the adoption of the proviso of Mr. Clark that we admit every person who during these five years comes in to vote just as soon as they declare their intention. Now, I cannot see the force of that at all in construing the different provisos of the section together. There is no better rule of construction than that all the terms of it should be taken together. Now, then, "He shall be a citizen of the United States" is the first clause of it. That taken in connection with the proviso that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right at the time of the adoption of this constitution is the only limitation placed upon the separate provision that he must be a full citizen. The second clause says that after five years those persons who have declared their intention to become citizens must be full citizens. I do not see the force of the gentleman's remark, that this admits any person during the five years except those persons who are voters at the time of the adoption of the constitution of Montana, and then if they complete their full citizenship within the five years they are full citizens and entitled to vote under the clause. But how it admits anybody else after he comes in here I do not see. It must be all construed together, in order to give effect to it at all.

The Chairman: I would like to ask the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke if his substitute is intended to be a substitute for the entire. If so, his substitute is then not in order.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Very well, let it be withdrawn.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: In prescribing the qualifications of voters I think either part of this second subdivision ought to be stricken out; that the part affecting convicts ought to be stricken out or else the part affecting idiots and insane persons ought to be stricken out. Either both ought to be in or both out.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: That does not seem to me to express, if I understand it, correctly the views that I entertain upon this proposition, which, if I understand it correctly, are embodied in the substitute offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County, Mr. J. K. Toole. My idea of this thing is about this, that a person exercising the elective franchise should be a citizen of the United States. It should stop right there but for the fact that many delegates have urged the proposition that it would be unfair to disfranchise those who have declared their intention of becoming citizens, so far as this coming election is concerned. Now, I have no objection so far as this coming election is concerned.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The first general election is beyond the reach of this convention. The Enabling Act provides that every person now qualified shall be voters.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: The gentleman, I think, is mistaken in that. Our Enabling Act reads as follows: "At the elections provided for in this section the qualified voters of said proposed states shall vote directly for or against the constitution" etc. That says "qualified voters" of said proposed states. Now, then, we have it in our power to prescribe the qualifications of voters. This amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County provides that all persons who are now qualified voters shall vote at this first general election. That meets my views of the proposition,—that they shall be entitled to vote. Everyone who is a qualified voter under the present existing laws of the Territory of Montana should be entitled to vote at the first coming general election—at the October or November election whichever it may be.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: My amendment refers to the first general election after the admission of the state into the Union.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Then I would change it so as to allow those voters who are voters at the present time to vote at the election on the first day of October, or the first general election in November.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, that is entirely beyond the reach of this convention one way or the other.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: We have the right, I claim, and it is not inhibited by this Enabling Act, to prescribe the qualifications of voters.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: This constitution has no effect until after its adoption.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Reading: "The qualified voters of said states shall vote." Whatever qualifications we may prescribe for qualified voters would give them the right to vote or not to vote at any election. Then I say it would be unfair to those who have declared their intention to become citizens not to allow them to vote at any election this year. After that until the next general election ensuing, after this year, it gives those who wish to become citizens of the United States an opportunity to do so, and if they do not see fit to become citizens of the United States they should certainly not vote. I cannot see anything unfair in that proposition, and there is nothing illegal in it.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me from the reading of this amendment that we are providing here who shall be voters in this Territory for the next five years. After the expiration of five years we admit an amendment here that allows only citizens of the United States to vote regardless of whether they are citizens of Montana or not. I call the attention of the gentlemen of the convention to that fact, and I think the amendment requires another amendment to it.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I call the attention of the gentleman to subdivision two of that section, "he shall be a resident."

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of this substitute as amended.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the subdivision as amended.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the subdivision as amended and a division being called for the same was declared adopted by a vote of thirty-eight in the affirmative to nineteen in the negative.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I believe my substitute is now in order.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: What has become of the substitute of the gentleman from Missoula?

The Clerk read the substitute of the gentleman of Lewis & Clarke (Mr. J. K. Toole).

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Yellowstone offers a substitute for the motion.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: The only objection I have to this substitute for this section is that after one year, or at the next general election after the adoption of this constitution, citizens of this Territory who are now enjoying the elective franchise will be disfranchised. Now, I cannot see any particular reason why they should be allowed to vote at one election and then have the franchise taken away from them. If this motion prevails that will be the result of it. As I understand it they will be allowed to vote at one election and then thereafter will be disfranchised. Now, the particular objection, if I understand the sentiment of this committee, is that those people who are now enjoying the right of suffrage in Montana should not be disfranchised at all. I think that there are very considerable reasons why men who are now enjoying the right of franchise should not have it taken away from them. I understand from the remarks of the gentleman from Deer Lodge that he may have a misconception of the naturalization laws, although he ought to be better informed on the subject than I am. He argues that if a man does not complete his citizenship, we shut him out. Now, as I have said, a man who has declared his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States two or three years ago may not be able to complete that citizenship; but by running along two or three years he will be able to do so; and certainly at the end of five years every man who now enjoys the right of suffrage in Montana Territory and would be allowed to vote in the formation of the state would have the privilege of completing that citizenship. Then, I say if he does not do it, why, shut him out; give him a chance up to five years and then don't let him vote any more. But under the adoption of the amendment which I offer to Mr. Hartman's amendment, which has been voted upon and adopted, it precludes no one after the adoption of this constitution from voting if he comes in and declares his intention of becoming a citizen, and that is what I want to get at.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me that this amendment should not prevail, for the reason that the section as now amended expresses clearer the sentiment as expressed by this convention than the substitute offered. It requires that voters shall be citizens except those who have the right to vote now, and those who have now the right to vote who are aliens shall not be prevented from voting for five years, giving them ample time to become citizens, after that time none but citizens shall have the right to vote. It expresses in the clearest language, it seems to me, the sentiment that is expressed by the convention in the votes that have been given. I think this amendment might be improved, but it would probably be at the expense of some of these provisions which clearly express the sense of the convention.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: If I thought it meant that, I would support it, but I think it clearly means not only what the gentleman says, but it goes further and says that if a man shall come here in four years from this time and declare his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States that he would be entitled to vote. It does not apply only to those who are here now, but it goes further and authorizes any person who comes here within the period of five years and declares his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States to vote at any election. Now, I would like, with the consent of my second, to strike out the words "first general election" in that and insert "second general election." Whenever "first election" occurs insert "general election." That will give three years and about eight months, or nearly four years, in which to perfect citizenship.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me that the honorable gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is entirely mistaken in the construction of this matter. It gives no person who is an alien and who has declared his intention to become a citizen a right to vote after the period of five years from the adoption of this constitution unless he is a voter at the time of its adoption. If he comes here after that time and is an alien he will not be a voter and cannot vote after five years. It seems to me that a reading of it will convince any member of this convention that it is perfectly clear and plain.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. J. K. Toole).

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I believe there are twenty-six letters in the English alphabet and some sixty thousand words in the English language. Now, this is an important matter, and if there is any obscurity in the gentleman's method of expression here that can be removed by the use of those words and those letters, I would like to have it done. This is one of the most important matters so far as affects the present and the future of this state that can possibly come up. It is far-reaching in its results, and I do not think that we had better hurry a matter through here that is going to remain in obscurity. I hope the gentleman who offered the last substitute will, if there be any obscurity, remove it so that we may act understandingly and know just exactly what we are voting for. I am in favor of the sentiments he puts forth here. I do not believe in restricting it so much as some other gentlemen do, but whenever the proposition comes up I would like to have it so plain and unmistakable that we can adopt it.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. J. K. Toole), and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the section as amended.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I think that the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula to the section is still pending. We have not had a vote on it.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I call for the reading of the amendment.

The Chairman: The substitute was adopted.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: It was never up for adoption. It was offered as a substitute to this section.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I think the convention should have an opportunity to vote upon the amendment as presented by Mr. Marrion. I call for a vote on it.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Marrion.

The Clerk read the said substitute of the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I rise to a point of order. My point of order is this, that at the session of the committee yesterday and, as I understand it, at the session of the Committee of the Whole this forenoon, we decided that the qualification of an elector shall be first, that he shall be twenty-one years of age, and next he shall be a citizen, and then we decided an amendment as given in this fourth clause. Now, my point is this, that a motion to insert the word "may" will not be in order, nor a motion to insert "not less than nor more than twenty-one"; or a motion "that he shall become a naturalized citizen," simply because we have passed upon that already; and the only way by which it can be brought up again in this committee is by a reconsideration. I remember distinctly that Mr. Warren on yesterday made a motion that the qualification of an elector shall be that he is a citizen, and after a great deal of argument, that was passed. That was the view of the committee. Now, I claim that upon that same proposition again that we cannot vote except by a reconsideration. If you do vote upon this proposition over and over again there is no telling how long we will sit in committee upon this one section; there is no limit to the time. But when we agree upon a proposition and adopt it by a direct vote, certainly I do not think it is in good parliamentary order to have someone else get up and move that same motion in a different way unless the whole matter is reconsidered.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I believe that it is the rule that after all means to change the text of the section are exhausted, that then a motion to substitute for the amended text is in order.

The Chairman: The Chair decides that the point of order is not well taken.

The Chair then put the question on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Missoula and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend the section by adding after the words "persons convicted of a felony," "no idiot or insane person." I do this for the purpose of perfecting the section. If you put one in you should include the other; otherwise the section is not perfect.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I would like to ask what is the object of the gentleman's motion? Is he going to disfranchise the members of this convention? (Laughter)

There being no second to the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter), the Chair put the question on the adoption of the section as amended, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read section 3, Proposition No. 14, as follows: Section 3. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the state or of the United States, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of the state or of the United States, nor while a student at any institution of learning, nor while kept at any alms house or other asylum, at the public expense, nor while confined in any public prison.

There being no amendments to section 3, the Clerk read section 4, as follows: Section 4. Electors shall in all cases, except treason, felony or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at elections, and in going to and returning therefrom.

There being no amendments to section 4 the Clerk read section 5, as follows: Section 5. No elector shall be obliged to perform military duty on the days of election except in times of war or public danger.

There being no amendments to section 5, the Clerk read section 6. Section 6. No soldier, seaman or marine in the army or navy of the United States shall be deemed a resident of this state, in consequence of being stationed at any military or naval place within the same.

There being no amendment to section 6 the Clerk read section 7, as follows: Section 7. No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state, civil or military, who is not a citizen of the United States, and who shall not have resided in this state at least two years next before his election or appointment.

There being no amendment to section 7, the Clerk read section 8, as follows: Section 8. No idiot or insane person shall be entitled to vote at any election in this state.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I desire to call attention to the fact that there is a discrepancy between section 7, the last word in the second line of the section, and the report of the Judiciary Committee as to the qualifications of candidates for District Judge. The Judiciary Committee's report provides that District Judges shall reside in the state at least one year. This is a general clause that all civil or military officers shall have resided in the state at least two years. I therefore think it is necessary to strike out, and I move to strike out "two" and insert "one."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to section 8, the Clerk read section 9, as follows: Section 9. The Legislative Assembly shall have the power to pass laws excluding from the rights of suffrage persons convicted of infamous crimes.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move to strike out the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to turn back to section 8 and insert so that it will read as follows, "No idiot or person adjudged to be insane." I make that as a motion.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I object to that for the reason that there are a great many insane persons kept in private houses whose friends will never let them go to an asylum, it is supererogation.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I oppose the amendment for the reason that no person is insane in law until he is adjudged to be so. Consequently

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I withdraw the amendment.

There being no further amendment to section 9, the Clerk read section 10, as follows: Section 10. The Legislative Assembly shall pass laws to secure the purity of elections and guard against abuses of the elective franchise.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I have an amendment to offer to the section.

LEOPOLD F. SCHMIDT	SIMEON R. BUFORD	CHARLES S. HARTMAN
THOMAS JOYES	WALTER M. BICKFORD	WILLIAM MAYGER
	HENRY R. WHITEHILL

The Clerk read as follows: Insert after the word "pass" in line one as follows: "a registration and such other laws as may be necessary."

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I trust that the amendment will not prevail, because, if it does, as I understand it, it will fix upon the state of Montana forever the registration laws, whether future legislation shall deem it wise or not, after having tried the experiment. We are now preparing to try the experiment of the registration laws, and if this amendment is adopted, whether those laws prove to be salutary or not, it will fix them upon the state of Montana forever. Therefore, I am opposed to this amendment.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move to amend by striking out the word "shall" and inserting "may."

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: The Legislature would have the power now to do that. The courts have construed that word "may" to be mandatory.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me that this amendment limits rather than increases the obligation of the Legislature under the section. The section says, "It shall pass laws to secure the purity of elections."

The Chairman: The question is upon the amendment to the amendment to strike out the word "shall" and insert "may".

The Chair put the question on the said amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow [Mr. Clark], and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow [Mr. Warren].

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: In connection with this matter, I desire to say this, that the first election ever held under the laws of the Territory of Montana in which we will have a free ballot and a fair count will come off on the first day of October next. I see nothing in this amendment that any gentleman can take exception to. It is something that nearly every state in the Union now has. That amendment simply says that the Legislature shall pass a registration and such other laws as may be necessary to secure the purity of elections. I feel so far as I am concerned that it is about time in the history of the state of Montana that we should vote our sentiments and have that vote counted.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: I really think that the people of this Territory are desirous of having honest and pure elections, but it does seem to me that the report of the committee is ample and that this amendment is unnecessary. While I believe in having a pure and honest ballot, I shall vote against this amendment.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I trust that this amendment will be voted down. We have already adopted a provision, or there is one here, that the Legislature shall pass such laws as will secure the purity of the ballot. I take it, sir, that it will be wrong to commit the state of Montana forever and irrevocably to any system of registration. It has been suggested by the gentleman who preceded me, that Montana for the first time in her history will have a free ballot and a fair count. I think, sir, that he reflects upon the good name and reputation of this Territory when he makes that declaration here, whether it be designed for political or other purposes. It is a reflection, sir, which I am here and now in my seat ready to deny. It may be, sir, that in elections of this Territory, there has not been that purity of the ballot which the people of the Territory had a right to demand; but that it has been up to the standard and in keeping with the states of the Union nobody will deny. We have now, sir, a system provided of registration in this Territory which will be inaugurated, we hope, for the first time within a month or two from this date, and it is the first registration that will have occurred in the history of the Territory. It may or it may not prove a benefit to the people of the new state, and may or may not aid in securing that purity of the ballot which every good citizen wants to see. But that we shall say in this constitution that the people of the state shall enforce a registration system, is, in my opinion, wrong. It may be, sir, that after this election is over the people of this state will be satisfied with that system, or they may be utterly and completely disgusted with the entire proceedings.

I believe, sir, in the virtue and in the integrity of the people. Upon that principle, I believe government is and ought to be based; and although this convention so far as the integrity and the intelligence of its members is concerned compares favorably with any like body that has ever assembled in this Territory, I do not believe that it possesses the combined wisdom of the land. Let us leave something for the people of the state of Montana to do. As I suggested here the other day to a friend upon this floor, I was almost inclined to introduce here a provision into this constitution that instead of biennial sessions of the Legislative Assembly, that it should be provided by law that the constitutional convention should meet biennially for legislative purposes. It will answer the purpose just as well, if we propose to descend into every detail of legislation and anticipate for one hundred years, if it may be, what shall be necessary, not only to secure the purity of the ballot but all of the details of legislation necessary to run and secure the state government. I believe in lodging the power with the people of the state and putting in the constitution no provision except such as appears to be absolutely necessary, and such safeguards around the interests of the people as have been well established by years of experience and observation. Outside of that, sir, I would commit all other matters to the people. I am willing now as I have ever been to submit to the voice of the people of this territory, and as I will be, to the voice of the people of this new state whatever shall be necessary to secure life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness and the protection of property; and I think, sir, that we shall make a grave mistake if we insert the proposed amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow into the constitution at this time. Let us have at least one trial of the registration system before we are committed unalterably to it.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: In voting upon this proposition I desire to suggest this for the consideration of the members who are familiar with the continental principle, as I am, and that is that all political power is inherent in the people; that when the people get together to create and form a constitution they delegate to the government just such power as they see fit and no more, and all power not delegated to the Federal government is reserved to the people. In the formation of the constitution of the United States "It was the states and the people respectively," but here it is reserved to the people; and when they have once delegated this power it is gone beyond their reach except by an amendment to the constitution by which it is regained, or by revolution. I recollect once having a conversation with Mr. Lincoln during the stormy days of the Republic when he spoke of this question of constitutional power, and he turned around to me, depressed in spirits as he seemed a great deal of the time, and said, "Doctor, the safest place to repose political power is with the people." I have never seen the time that the people were not willing to surrender it for the public weal, for the safety of the nation, or the protection of the people; and I am a little chary about sticking everything in here, because every act of ours in creating this constitution is a surrender of the sovereign power of the people. Now, I say that down as a fundamental principle; but it has seemed to me sometimes while we were here, that instead of being here to perform the work of statesmen, we were here to perform some culinary art on the day before Thanksgiving, and that is to stuff everything we can into the turkey regardless of anything but satiating our desires and satisfying our appetites. Now, I agree with my friend from Lewis & Clark County who has just spoken, that the provision reported back here, in my judgment, is as far as the people ought to go. There may have been flaws; there may have been votes purchased and everything of that kind, but is it not safer to leave this power with the people and rely upon the good sense and the virtue of the people to correct these derelictions in the future. Why, if he represents the Democratic party in all of its grandeur, I am here as one of the humble members of the Republican party; yet I believe that the doctrine which is enunciated in that section of the report of the committee goes quite far enough. I want to leave that matter in the hands of the people. This registration law is an experiment, and I am afraid it is going to be a very expensive one; but if it guards the ballot box, preserves its purity and gives men a right to prescribe a government of their own in an honest and efficient manner, it is worth all it costs. I believe for the present it had better be left in the hands of the Legislature, which means to leave it in the hands of the people, and when the representatives of the people come up here to recognize the sovereign power of the people, if it is deemed desirable and just, it will be made a permanent law. I do not want a law here like that of the Medes and Persians, which shall be irrevocable. I want to leave something, yea, everything open to the exercise of the popular will excepting that which is absolutely necessary to establish a government here and run its machinery without any oscillation or danger of a falling or tottering semblance.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I think it was very conclusively settled during the session of the last Legislature that the sentiment of the people of Montana was thoroughly in favor of registration laws. That was discussed thoroughly in the papers during the session of the last Legislature, and the registration law was finally passed in obedience to the demand of the people, regardless of politics. I have nothing to say against the mode of conducting elections in Montana. I believe they have been as fair as they are usually in states where there is no registration law, but I am in favor of registration laws because I believe under such laws we can have fair elections. This is sought to be put in the constitution for the reason that where the constitution is silent on the subject the Legislature cannot pass registration laws. Now, I desire to quote a case in Wisconsin where the courts have decided that where the constitution prescribed the qualifications of voters without requiring registration, a statute which adds an enactment that no person shall vote except in accordance with the provisions of the act, is invalid. Now, there is a decision of one of the highest courts of the state, deciding that unless a provision is in the constitution that the legislative enactment passed for that purpose is invalid, and for the purpose of settling this question and the dispute, we might as well face it right here. I think the unanimous consent almost of the voters of this state is that we should have a registration law, and unless we embody such a provision now in this constitution, I say that then we are forever shut off from passing a registration law.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: If that be the law—perhaps it is—I take the position that the gentleman does, that I do not desire to see a constitution passed here which will forever prohibit us from passing a registration law if the people of the new state shall deem it necessary for the protection of the ballot. I want to avoid that just as much as I want to avoid the proposition of passing it unalterably and for all time. Therefore, to meet the views of the gentlemen, I now move to amend the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow by striking out the word "shall" and inserting the word "may."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to move an amendment to that "the Legislature shall have the power" after the word "shall."

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, made that motion, and it was voted down.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I rise to a point of order. If it has been voted down it cannot be renewed.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: The law read by the gentleman from Deer Lodge does not apply in this case. We have got upon our statute books a registration law. In our schedule we will provide that all laws now in existence shall be laws under the state, so that if we had no registration law in existence in Montana today and there was nothing in our constitution which provided for registration then this law might be applicable. All the courts of this state might so rule; but as we have a registration law, certainly there is no necessity for putting anything else in the constitution in regard to it. The law will be in existence while Montana is a state unless repealed by the Legislature. So I do not see the necessity of this. If registration is in the interest of fair elections, if the people want it, it will remain on our statute books forever; if they do not want it, they should have the right of striking it out.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I wish to say that the schedule will be that all laws in force in the Territory that are not in conflict with this constitution, and not all laws in force, will become a part of the laws of the state; because there are a great many which might conflict with the constitution; and hence it will only be such as do not conflict with the constitution. If the decision read by the gentleman from Deer Lodge should apply to the constitution that we adopt, then if that prohibits a registration law, why, this registration law will be repealed; that will be the effect of it. It is only a question as to whether that is in conflict with the laws or with the provisions of this constitution. Without that decision I would have thought that there could have been a law passed for the registration of voters notwithstanding this provision of the constitution. The courts may take that view, that having said that citizens and certain other parties who have declared their intention to become citizens were entitled to vote that they could not add an additional requirement, and that is that they should be registered. But I think that most states that have a registration law have just such provisions in their constitution as we have in ours. This Legislature will have general powers of legislation. It will not be like the Congress of the United States, which has only specific powers of legislation. There they are confined to legislate upon specific questions that are delegated to them as a legislative body; but the Legislative Assembly will have a right to legislate upon all rightful subjects of legislation except where limited by this constitution.

The Chairman: The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh).

The Chair put the question upon the said amendment of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read section 11 as follows: The Legislative Assembly may pass laws allowing women the right to hold any school district office and vote at any school district election.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke sent up an amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade also sent up an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend section 11 by striking out the word "may" and inserting the word "shall" in line one. The Clerk also read as follows: Amend line two by striking out the word "district"—so that it will read: "The Legislative Assembly may pass laws allowing women the right to hold any school office and vote at any school election."

The Clerk also read as follows: Amend section 11 by adding after the word "district" wherever it occurs in line two, the words "or municipal" (offered by Mr. Collins).

The Chairman: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Women have had the right to vote in school elections for a number of years under the laws of the Territory. Women have also had the right to be candidates for a county office under the laws of this Territory. This constitutional enactment or section takes away part of the rights they have had before. Now, I believe that instead of taking away part of those rights we should add some to them. We have decided not to add fully to them; we have decided not to give the elective franchise to them, but certainly we should not decide to take the powers in this line that they have away from them. The municipal elections of Montana are held separate and distinct from the general elections. Great reforms in the municipal laws of the Territory are needed, and everyone who has given this matter any consideration or thought believes that by infusing new blood into these elections—by allowing the women to vote—those reforms will occur, and that if they have the right to vote it will be a blessing to the towns of Montana. Any school elections where women have voted, and where the votes of women have predominated, has been a reform in the right direction. Every school district of Montana, be it in a town or in the country, where women have participated in the elections, have been benefited by their views and their votes. The great things to be reformed in our Territory and in every state in the Union are municipal ordinances, and I claim that as good citizens, the male inhabitants of Montana who have now the privilege of exercising the elective franchise should take one step—a small step in advance, and give women the right to exercise their influence for good in the government of our cities and villages. I hope that this will pass, not that we shall give them the right, but that we shall delegate it to the Legislature to give it to them.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I believe I can endorse all the gentleman from Cascade has said in this matter. We heard a great many speeches here the other day. This amendment that I make here is to transfer into the hands of women the right to vote at an election for school office in the state of Montana. It does not only go as far as the county offices, but it takes in as well the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction and that was what was intended to be covered by the amendment that I sent to the Clerk's desk. I think from the number of gentlemen that spoke upon woman suffrage the other day in regard to civil government, that some of them ought certainly to support this amendment.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me that that amendment goes to this extent that the State Superintendent of Public Instruction is elected at the general election, and to vote for that officer would be to vote at the general election; and to allow them to vote at municipal elections and also at state elections would be to allow them to vote generally. It is the same question that was decided yesterday.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-three in the affirmative to thirty-nine in the negative.

The Chairman: The question is now upon the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: I ask for the reading of the amendment I sent up some time ago.

The Chairman: Your amendment has been out of order until this moment. It is now in order.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend section 11 by inserting after the word "hold" in the first line the words "the office of the County Superintendent of Schools or."

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I desire to advocate the amendment offered by the gentleman from Fergus, Mr. Watson, and I desire to advocate it upon the ground of public policy, and I believe that the experience of this Territory will bear me out in saying that where women have been elected to the office of County Superintendent of Public Schools that the system has been improved thereby. I know that in our own county a most estimable lady has occupied the position for one term. She fulfilled the duties of the office to the entire satisfaction of the voters of the county. I believe that the people of Lewis & Clarke County at the present time have placed the charge of their schools in the hands of a lady in whose integrity, in whose ability, and in whose efforts in behalf of the public schools they have the utmost confidence. I believe, sir, that in view of the fact that the experience of the past has shown us that the ladies are fully competent to take charge of this department of the public service that we should as members of this constitutional convention extend to them the same right that they now have under the laws of the Territory. It is only by a consideration of the events of the past that we are enabled to imbibe wisdom for our guidance in the future. Therefore, I say that if it has proved a satisfactory course in the past in this Territory, if we are satisfied with the laws as they now stand, this amendment should certainly prevail. I hope that the members of the convention will take into consideration the fact that the ladies have fulfilled the duties to which they have been elected to the entire satisfaction of the people of this Territory.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I am happy to put in one word for the amendment. Women have been eligible to school district offices and to the office of County Superintendent of Schools, and I am opposed to taking away any of the rights that they have enjoyed. I am therefore, in favor of the amendment.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment of the gentleman from Fergus, Mr. Watson, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula sent up an amendment which the Clerk read as follows: "That the first seven words of section 11 be stricken out and after the word "women" the words "shall have" be inserted, so that it shall read as follows: "Section 11. Women shall have the right to hold the office of County Superintendent of Schools or any school district office, and vote at any school district election."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: My object, Mr. Chairman, is only that this convention shall declare that the women shall have the right, instead of saying that the Legislature shall have the power to pass laws giving them the right.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I simply offered an amendment as to this language. If women have the right to hold these offices I do not see who else can hold them. I therefore move to amend "that women shall be eligible to the office of County Superintendent of Public Instruction."

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I accept that amendment.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I have no objection so far as I am concerned to the proposition if it was in the Legislature, but the objection I have to it in the constitution is that it does not properly form a part of the constitution. The proper way is for the constitution to declare that the Legislature may prescribe the eligibility to the respective offices, and not for the constitution to declare who shall hold offices, and who shall not. It is trenching upon the functions of the Legislature and I think it is proper for the convention to leave that all entirely to the Legislature.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: We have been doing that for two days.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: It is trenching upon their powers, and therefore I think it should be left to the Legislature as in the original report of the committee, to declare who shall be eligible to the office. So far as the schedule is concerned it is proper enough for the Legislature the first time it can convene, where offices have not heretofore been created to make some declaration respecting that. It would come properly in the form of the schedule; but so far as the constitution proper is concerned I think it has no place there. It is a power which belongs to the Legislative Assembly and should not be in the constitution. That is the only objection I have to it. So far as the principle is concerned I agree with the gentlemen. I believe in the ladies holding these offices in regard to the public schools. I have seen the good results of that. We have quite a number of ladies Superintendents of Public Schools in the different counties, and I have seen nothing but good results coming from it. I am an advocate of it, and have no objections to it.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: "Oh, Consistency, thou art a jewel."

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I think for every single office that is spoken of in this constitution the qualifications are prescribed: The county attorney shall be over twenty-one years of age; a judge shall be of such an age, and reside in such a place; and it seems to me the especial object and purpose of a constitution is to declare not only who shall be electors but who shall be eligible to the different offices; and it does seem to me it is appropriate that the constitution should specify the qualifications for this office.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Mayger.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend section 11 by striking out the word "may" and inserting the word "shall" in line one.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I withdraw that motion. I would like to have the proposition last amended read so that we can understand it.

The Clerk read section 11 as amended.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke as follows: After the words "schools or" insert "or State Superintendent of Public Instruction."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: I desire to say that I think there should be another amendment made in order to carry out the wishes of the convention evidenced by its votes. I desire to amend then by striking out the words "school district" as they are in the three last words of the section, and to insert after the word "election" the words "in reference to schools." As I understand it, you have made women eligible only to school district offices.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: Will the gentleman send up his amendment in writing, that we can get a record of it?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would call the attention of the committee to the fact that section 12 of this schedule is the same as section 3 of the proposition on Executive Departments, that is, it fixes the qualifications for the office of Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, etc., with the exception that the time required is two years instead of three. I notice the gentleman made the same sort of correction in regard to judges, on the former page. Now, I do not see the necessity of repealing the same sections in the constitution, in regard to the officers and having their qualifications enumerated twice. The same observation applies to the succeeding section.

The Chairman: A motion to strike out will be in order.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I move to strike out those two sections.

Mr. Bullard, of Jefferson: We did not know when we acted upon this subject that any other committee would take it up, and consequently we fulfilled only our duties.

The Chairman: The question is now upon the amendment of the gentleman from Fergus, which will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out the words "school district" where they last occur and add after the word "election" the words "in reference to schools."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Would not an election of State Superintendent of Public Instruction be considered "in reference to schools," and would not that give them, as Gov. Carpenter said, a right to vote at any election?

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: I see the point made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and I will amend my amendment so as to cover that part of it.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I will move to strike out section 12, fixing the qualifications of executive officers.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: It seems to me that that would hardly be a proper form. It is scarcely treating the committee right. I move to amend that when the committee rise to report back, recommending that sections 12, 13, 14 and 15 be filed on the general file for consideration with Proposition No. 4.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I accept that amendment, so far as the proposition affecting these different departments is concerned.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, is a motion in order in reference to these sections?

The Chairman: Yes sir.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to move to strike out the whole of these sections and substitute this which I offer.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the substitute of the gentleman from Fergus, Mr. Watson.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out the words "school district" where they last occur and add after "election" the words "in reference to state offices."

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: It does occur to me that this amendment should pass. Now, the office of County Superintendent is voted for at the same time as the other county offices and it will necessitate an additional expense in the matter of ballots at least when we go to elect county officers if we let women vote for any particular office on the ticket and not for all. I see no good to be subserved by the franchise in that respect.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Fergus (Mr. Watson) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: The champions of section 11 have overlooked the fact that they must make a declaration before it can be of any force and effect, and I respectfully suggest that as we made a declaration the other day that a certain thing can be public property without any particular reason for it, in this manner we must make a declaration that woman is a person, before this section can have any validity. So I respectfully request that the gentlemen who are championing this particular question make a motion that a woman is a human being or person in the language of the court, and that she can fill the offices, etc. I respectfully suggest that some of those gentlemen make that motion.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) to section 12.

The Clerk read same.

Mr. Clarke, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of section 11 as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clarke) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read section 12.

Mr. Bullard, of Jefferson: In regard to these sections 12, 13, 14 and 15, it seems to me that the members of this committee on suffrage and qualifications to hold office are willing that these sections should be stricken out in order to save the time of the convention.

The Chairman: The Chair has a substitute for section 12.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order, and it is this, that I made a motion, which was duly seconded, that the subject matter contained in 12, 13, 14 and 15 be reported back by the committee when they rise with the recommendation that it be filed and considered with Proposition No. 10. I renew my motion.

Mr. Duffee, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend by adding sections 16 and 17.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers a substitute which will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for all qualifications of section 12 to 17 inclusive: "No person qualified to vote at general elections in this state shall be eligible to any office therein except as otherwise provided in this constitution, or subject to such additional qualifications as may be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly for city offices and offices hereafter created."

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I will state the reasons why I offer that. The reason why I favor the adoption of that substitute is this. First, as has been stated the provisions of these sections are all provided for in the reports of the several committees—the Committees on Executive Departments, Legislative Departments, Judicial Departments and County Officers. Now, this is the report of the Committee on Suffrage and qualifications to hold office. It is stated who may vote. There is not a qualification stated in this report as to who shall hold office. Everything stated is a disqualification. Now, that states affirmatively who may and who may not hold office subject to these other provisions; and subject to these provisions it provides the general provisions that a person entitled to vote is entitled to hold office. Now, in regard to all the Executive, Legislative, Judicial and County Officers, it is stated that the person is to be a citizen. Nobody is qualified except in a backhanded way; he is qualified by implication, because the constitution does not say he is disqualified. Now, it seems to me there ought to be a provision stating who shall hold office, and this does not make a voter eligible to office except where the Legislature may provide for city officers. There are certain propositions which are submitted in the report of a different committee. Taxpayers are sometimes permitted and authorized to vote on certain propositions. There is a certain qualification as to age. Now, this also gives the Legislature, if new offices are created, the right to fix additional qualifications as to these new offices for the officers; for instance, a mining bureau. You would want some particular qualifications as to the person holding that office, and any other new office, where a qualification in addition to that of simply being a voter should seem to be required.

The Chair put the question on the substitute of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that we now rise.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I have a section here that I would like to offer.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read same.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 13 offered by Collins of Cascade: "In all elections held by the people under this constitution the person or persons who shall receive the highest number of votes shall be declared elected."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I would just add there the highest number of legal votes. (Laughter)

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I accept that. There should be some provision in the constitution or the law, or some place, declaring the person who receives the highest number of votes elected.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I will renew my motion.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: If there is no motion before the committee I wish to move that the committee now rise and report back Proposition No. 14 as amended, with the recommendation to the convention that section 2 as amended be printed.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Why not have the whole proposition printed?

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I will accept that amendment.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I think it ought to be referred to the Committee on Engrossment first and have it properly engrossed. I move an amendment to that effect.

The Chairman: What is the pleasure of the Committee in reference to the motion that was before the house with regard to sections 12, 13, 14 and 15?

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I withdraw my motion.

The Chairman: The gentleman withdraws his motion. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke amends the motion of the gentleman from Park.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I accept the suggestion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) if that is the question.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Missoula moves that the bill be referred to the Engrossing Committee.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move to amend the motion of the gentleman from Park, that it be referred to the Committee on Engrossment.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: You cannot engross anything with any propriety until it has been passed.

The Chairman: The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I hope this amendment will not prevail. I moved the other day that a bill be referred to the Printing Committee and from courtesy accepted the amendment from some gentleman near me that it go to the Engrossing Committee. The result was it delayed the matter a day, and afterwards the convention had to send it to the Printing Committee. I hope this will go direct to the Printing Committee.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park that the subject matter be reported back and printed, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: It has been moved and seconded that the committee do now rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration General Orders No. 12 with the amendments. The committee asks time to perfect its report.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that they have had under consideration File No. 12, Proposition No. 11, and that it has been reported back with amendments, with instructions that it be printed. If there be no objection the report of the committee will be received and adopted.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I now move that the convention adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The President: The Chair desires to state that the time to which the convention adjourns is fixed for 9:30 tomorrow morning.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Before the motion is put I would like to be excused until Monday at four o'clock.

The President: The gentleman will be excused until Monday at four o'clock if there be no objection.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I would like to ask leave of absence until four o'clock, Monday afternoon.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin asks to be excused until Monday afternoon. If there be no objection the request will be granted.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to ask for information how many members of the convention there are who are not excused.

The Chairman: The Clerk will furnish the information to the gentleman if he desires it. The question now is upon the adjournment. The members will bear in mind it is to 9:30 to which we adjourn.

The Chair put the question on the said motion to adjourn and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention stood adjourned until Saturday, July 27th, 1889, at 9:30 A. M.

NINETEENTH DAY.

Saturday, July 27th, 1889. Morning Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 9:30 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke sent up a report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

The President: The Chair is in receipt of a report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to say on behalf of the committee that Mr. Parberry of Meagher was not present to sign the report which he intends to do as soon as he returns. I presume he can have that privilege. He agreed to have the report signed and presented on his return. I presume it will be in order for him to sign it when he returns.

The President: The report may be ordered to be printed. Does the Chairman of the committee desire the report read?

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: No sir; it is rather voluminous.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I would like to defer making the report of the Committee of the Whole until Monday. I did not have time to examine it thoroughly.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be allowed to make his report on Monday.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move you that the convention resolves itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering Proposition No. 18, General File No. 17.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. J. R. Toole) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair will appoint Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow begged to be excused.

The President then called Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: What is the pleasure of the committee on Proposition No. 18?

The Clerk will read section 1.

The Clerk read section 1 as follows: Article on state institutions and public buildings. Article Section 1. Educational, reformatory and penal institutions, and those for the benefit of the insane, blind, deaf and mute, and such other institutions as the public good may require shall be established and supported by the state in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I have an amendment to offer.

The Clerk read the same as follows: Amend section 1, line two by inserting the words "soldier's home."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of section 1 as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to section 1, the Clerk read section 2, as follows: Section 2. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the state, but shall at its third regular session, after the adoption of this constitution provide by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the state at the general election then next ensuing, and a majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election, the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the state at the next general election; Provided, That until the seat of government shall have been permanently located, as herein provided, the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman: I move to amend section two by filling in the blank the word "Anaconda."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move to amend the suggestion of the gentleman by inserting the word "Billings."

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: If there is an amendment in order I move to amend by inserting the words "Butte City."

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I second the amendment.

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson: I move to amend by filling in the name of "Boulder".

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: The first motion was to fill the blank; that is not an amendment because it is an ellipsis that had to be filled. The first amendment offered was to insert the word "Billings" and then "Butte". So that there are only two amendments now pending, as I understand it.

The Chairman: The Chair would be under the impression that the first amendment put to the house would be to amend "Butte" by inserting "Boulder."

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: In order to get this thing into shape, I move you that that blank be filled by the word "Anaconda."

Mr. Browne, of Choteau: I offer an amendment that the words "City of Fort Benton" be inserted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The Chair is unable to see how the Chair is going to accept the amendment.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I believe the only way would be to have a vote and then when that decision is reached to receive the amendment.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, the first amendment offered was that the blank be filled by the word "Anaconda." If there was no other amendment offered that would be the question. Then the gentleman moves to amend that amendment by striking out Anaconda and insert Billings. That made two propositions pending the convention, and we hold that those are all that are properly before the convention until a vote is taken. It seems to me very clearly then according to the mode of procedure heretofore that the first question is to insert Billings in the place of Anaconda. Then the question would come up as to Butte and the other places, it seems to me. It certainly is a fair motion to say how a blank shall be filled. That is the first motion that was made here and it is in order. Then the first amendment was to insert Billings instead of Anaconda, and I understand the mode of procedure has been that there shall be but two propositions before the convention at the same time.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman on this point of order I desire to say a word. The gentleman from Missoula takes the position that the filling of the blank by the insertion of the word Anaconda is in the form of an amendment, and that only two amendments can prevail; but I contend that the filling of the blank is not an amendment. Here is the report; they have left this word out. Now, that is in the form of a motion. The gentleman from Custer offers an amendment that the word Billings be substituted. That is the first amendment. The gentleman from Silver Bow moves to amend the first amendment by inserting the word "Butte" and that is the question now before the committee upon the motion made by the gentleman from Silver Bow, to substitute "Butte" instead of "Billings."

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I understand there is a positive rule of parliamentary law on this question of filling blanks, and while I am not dogmatical upon the proposition, I remember as stated by the President of this convention that when it comes to filling blanks one proposition after another is not an amendment but they stand upon separate and distinct propositions, and the vote must be taken in the order in which they are proposed. Hence, if I am correct about that, the first proposition would be the filling of the blank by the word "Anaconda."

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order. My point of order is this, when a member rises to his feet and raises a point of order, is it debatable?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move that this matter of filling the blank be free-for-all, and that the convention vote upon it by ballot, and keep on voting until the place receiving the majority of votes is voted upon, and that that place receiving the majority of votes shall fill the blank.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Now, I hope that we shall endeavor to go on with this constitution and not go into a matter of this kind, which is bound to end in child's play. I do not think that the people who sent us here, any of us, had any question of this kind in mind, that it was the business of this convention to locate either the permanent or temporary capital of this state, and I hope that the good sense of the convention will obtain and that we will not mix up either the making or the adoption of this constitution with anything of that kind, which we all know belongs to the people of Montana to settle. It is for them to say where the seal of government of the new state shall be located. I hope, Mr. Chairman, that we will so amend this section that the words "At its third regular session" will be stricken out, and the section be amended so that the Legislature at its first, second or third session will have full power over this matter and submit the same to the people of Montana. I do not think we ought to bring it into this convention; and at the end I hope all after the words "general election" will be stricken out. The seat of government of the Territory is fixed by law, and as soon as you have placed it in the power of of the Legislature and the Legislature submits it to the people, it can either be removed or changed. Now, we cannot waste our time on this matter, and after all, I fancy that is the conclusion we will come to. I hope we will not waste our time this morning in this frivolous sort of way.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that there is nothing now in the law that fixes where the first Legislature of this state shall meet. There is no obligation so far as I understand it in the Enabling Act or any other law that requires the capital to be at Helena or any other point until this convention decides that question.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The Enabling Act says, it shall meet at the seat of government.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: The convention.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Yes, and the Legislature. And, Mr. Chairman, the laws of the Territory prevail under that Enabling Act until they are repealed by the constitutional laws of the state. I do not think this constitutional convention should make any reference to this thing except to place it in the power of the Legislature to attend to the matter. Now, I ask unanimous consent of the convention to offer the following amendment.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I object. My amendment has been ruled out of order.

Mr. McAdow, of Fergus: I move that the committee do now rise and that the Chairman be instructed to report Proposition No. 18 back to the house for their immediate consideration. I make this motion in the interest of time because this Committee of the Whole has taken up a great deal of our time, and I can see no benefit from it.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Fergus (Mr. McAdow) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 17 in the affirmative to 37 in the negative.

The Chairman: The Chair will submit the amendment of the gentleman from Custer which is to insert "Billings" instead of "Anaconda."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, in support of my motion I desire to say a few words only. If the capitol is to leave Helena and is not to be located permanently on wheels, I think Billings is the most desirable location for it in the state of Montana and for the following reasons: In the first place, it is a beautiful location. It is a place where a gentleman can go and stand erect upon both feet and look up towards heaven with all the ease necessary, instead of being compelled to stand on one foot and put the other one against the side of a hill. [Laughter] Another reason is, that they have beautiful water there, the finest in the world, and there is no inducement, no incentive, no necessity for a man resorting to a whiskey shop to slake his thirst for fear of being poisoned with the water that percolates down through the poisonous soil and the guts and gutters of the country. Another reason is, that it is located upon the banks of the beautiful Yellowstone, whose crystal waters flow past there, carrying off everything that might be impure and desirable to get rid of. Another thing is, it is not surrounded by pine knots and pine timber, in consequence of which where a conflagration might come, as has been witnessed here recently, men are deprived of the blessings of inhaling the pure air of heaven. Another reason is, that they have there all that is necessary to build a capitol of the most permanent character. They have the finest quarry of stone in the world there, lying in proximity to that town. And while they have not as many buildings as they have in some other localities, for instance in Anaconda or Butte or in Helena, they have time before them. They have a location where they can take the stone from the quarry and build one of the most beautiful capitols in the world. I have looked the country all over. I have been to Butte. I happened to be there last November when they had a visitation of east wind and instead of bringing the fragrant breezes which usually come from the east, it brought the fumes from the smelters and was enough to strangle a man. I recollect going up in the motor in the middle of the street, and although electric lights were burning with all their effulgence yet you could not see a gleam of light from either side of the street. I retired to my bed. I had not been there thirty minutes before I felt that some demoniacal fiend was there injecting boiling lime into my lungs. I went to the Courthouse the next morning and met one or two of my friends who suggested I leave the cow counties and dwell in that city where gold could be obtained by reaching for it, where copper was so abundant that they scarcely knew what to do with it, and the silver-bearing mountains are inexhaustible. I suggested to him—and I admit I was not feeling very well or in the best of humor, for whatever cuts off the supply of air to my lungs has a tendency to irritate my otherwise amiable nature—I suggested to the gentleman that it was a little singular that all the men I had met who had attempted to depict to me the beauties of that country they had omitted its cardinal feature. He wanted to know what it was. Said I the constitution of your atmosphere. Said he, "What is in our atmosphere that you like so much?" "I was not talking about my likes," said I, "but those qualities which should recommend it to a stranger, and especially a citizen of Butte." He wanted to know what it was. "Why," said I, "it is the brimstone in it; it is the antimony in it." "Why," said he, "what is there so desirable about it?" "Why," said I, "nothing especially, but to a citizen of Butte it must be very consoling to know that the transition from this world to Sheol will be so slight that you will never notice it." [Laughter.] Now, as to Anaconda, it has one thing to commend it. It has Marcus Daly's hotel. That is a grand thing, I have no doubt, and if I ever happen to go into that country I will go and take a look at it, for I have heard it is grander in its magnificence than the temple built by Solomon; whether it has an Ark of the Covenant, I don't know, [Laughter] but I presume it has. Now, in regard to other places, I think all of the advantages are inferior to those presented by Billings, and I hope that if there should be any action taken upon this question today that my amendment will prevail. I am certain that while we may be cursed for the present we will be blessed in the future, and coming generations will say, "How wise were the men who could look beyond the blandishments of their time and locate the capitol of this state in such a beautiful place."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move, Mr. Chairman, that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 18 in the affirmative to 32 in the negative.

The Chairman: The question recurs on the amendment of the gentleman from Custer, to insert Billings instead of Anaconda.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of nineteen in the affirmative to twenty-six in the negative.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. J. K. Toole) and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty in the affirmative to thirty-two in the negative.

The Chairman: The question now recurs on the motion to substitute the word "Butte" instead of "Anaconda."

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I do not know that it is necessary for me to say a word in favor of my amendment. To the eloquent speech of my friend from Custer, I will add in addition to the very many good things that he said about Butte that it is literally a city that is set upon a hill and its light cannot be hid by even the eloquence of the gentleman from Custer, nor the smelter fumes that he has depicted here so graphically. In the location, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, of the capitol of Montana temporarily, I am really actuated by a desire that in its location we may fix it at that point where it will be as nearly as possible in the center of the populous districts. Butte City has all of the advantages that any other point that has been mentioned here unless it may be Billings in point of water supply and atmosphere; and it has many other attractions superior to any that have been mentioned. It is as much of a railroad center as any place in Montana, or will be within a few months.

It is accessible. We have as you all know a growing town, a town that has not only made its mark in Montana, but in the history of the nation, and its sun has not yet set. I believe, gentlemen, that in the location of the capitol at Butte City you will serve the best interests of not only Butte City but all Montana. And I do most sincerely hope that the amendment that I have offered will prevail.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the committee now rise. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to make—(interrupted)

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer is certainly out of order. There is a motion before the committee to rise.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I rise to a point of order. There has been no motion put to the house since the last motion that the committee rise.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, if that were the order, the committee would never rise. After any intervening business it is in order to move that the committee rise.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow is out of order.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Craven) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-three in the affirmative to thirty-three in the negative.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I rise now to a point of order and I would like to ask for a ruling from the Chair. After a motion has been made and presented to the house by a chairman and a speech has been made in favor of it, is a motion that the committee rise in order?

The Chairman: It is always in order.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, business having intervened since the last motion, the speech of the gentleman from Silver Bow, I move that the committee now rise. (Laughter)

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I appeal from the last decision of the Chair and I call for a division of the committee.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I rise to a point of order. The gentleman who made the motion, I am satisfied, is aware that no vote on appeal can be taken from the decision of the Chair in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I wanted to say that is one reason why I wish the committee to rise so we can go into convention and decide that point of order.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is out of order.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that we reconsider the vote taken last, that we should rise, in which it was decided we should not rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman is not in order. The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow to substitute Butte City instead of Anaconda.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-four in the affirmative to thirty-three in the negative.

The Chairman: The motion is now upon the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin. The Clerk will please read the substitute.

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for Section 2. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the state, but shall at its second regular session after the adoption of this constitution provide by law for submitting the question for the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the state at the general election then next ensuing and a majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the state at the next general election. Provided that until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the City of Bozeman.

The Chair put the question on the said substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of eighteen in the affirmative to twenty-seven in the negative.

The Chairman: The amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow is in order.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move that the word Helena be substituted.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: There was a motion from the gentleman from Choteau County made quite a while ago.

The Chairman: That motion was ruled out at the time. The question now recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow to substitute Helena for Anaconda.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty in the affirmative to thirty-five in the negative.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. J. K. Toole) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-four in the affirmative to twenty-seven in the negative.

The Chairman: The question now recurs on the substitute of the word "Anaconda" in the blank proposition.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, is there a question before the house?

Mr. Browne, of Choteau: I renew my motion that Fort Benton be substituted.

Mr. Buford, of Madison: I move to substitute the words "Virginia City" for Anaconda.

The Chairman: The motion is out of order. The question is now on the motion of the gentleman from Choteau that the words "Fort Benton" be substituted in place of the word "Anaconda."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Choteau (Mr. Browne) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-four in the affirmative to twenty-seven in the negative.

The Chairman: The question now recurs upon the original motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow to insert "Anaconda."

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I move you that the committee rise.

The Chairman: The question before the house is the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, that the word "Anaconda" be inserted in the proposition.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I have a proposition that I wish to state in relation to this capitol question and I have concluded that this is as opportune a time as I will get. I want to say in the first place that I came here, and my constituents came here, willing to abide by the decision of this convention wherever they may see fit to locate the state capitol, and also willing to accept the verdict of the people whenever it goes before them at an election. I want to present this thing to the members of the convention in a business light. I want to present it in the shape of urging as one of the claims we would put forth in favor of our city of Anaconda, and as a matter of economy to the state, that I have this proposition here to make to this convention, and I am ready to back it up. If it is the will of the members of this convention, and their verdict, to temporarily locate the capitol at our city, we will agree to furnish to the state ample, commodious quarters for all state officers, ample and commodious state officers for the Legislature, free of charge to the state, until such time as the vote of the people shall decide where the permanent location of the capitol shall be. I do not make this in any spirit of buncombe. I am serious and earnest, and ready to back it up in any way that this convention may see fit to require. I think it will make a matter of five or ten thousand dollars to the state and economy is something that has been dwelt upon here a good deal in our deliberations so far, and as a matter it seems to me it ought to be taken into serious consideration by every member of this convention. It is a matter of five or ten thousand dollars a year to the state over any other proposition that has yet been made. I make this in all candor and seriousness and place it before the convention now for their deliberation and judgment and verdict.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: The gentleman is generous and they are able to do it at Anaconda. They have a wonderful city there, but I am stoutly opposed to this convention resolving itself into a begging committee. I think the Territory of Montana is abundantly able to provide quarters for all of its public officers and the Legislative Assembly, and while I commend the generosity of the gentleman from Anaconda, and I know it emanates from a good and generous heart, yet I do not think it would be received by the people of this territory as complimentary or as directly in the course of true economy. I believe in true economy, and we are going to practice it here, and after having resolved upon that course we can certainly afford to pay for our public buildings. I have never been in Anaconda. I do not know anything about it, but I have been as near it as Butte and I got enough of it as far as I travelled. And here, by the way, I desire to make a little one-sided remark for the benefit of my illustrious friend, who said that its lights would not be obscured by the gentleman from Custer County. It is not necessary; they are already obscured by the odoriferous fumes which emanate from its furnaces.

The Chair put the question on the insertion of the word "Anaconda" in Section 2 of Proposition No. 18. A division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty-two in the affirmative to twenty-four in the negative.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Now, Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out in that section all after the words "general election".

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow Mr. Warren and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION

President Clarke in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke reported from the Committee of the Whole.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that the committee has risen and asks leave to sit again.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move that when the convention adjourn it adjourn to four o'clock on Monday.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Durfee of Deer Lodge: Before the convention adjourns I would like to ask leave of absence until Tuesday afternoon.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman from Deer Lodge will be granted leave of absence until Tuesday afternoon. It is moved and seconded that when the convention adjourn it adjourn to meet on Monday at four o'clock.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke Mr. Maginnis and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I move we adjourn.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 18.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question is on the motion to adjourn.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge Mr. J. R. Toole and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty-two in the affirmative to twenty-four in the negative.

The convention stood adjourned until Monday, July 29th, 1889, at 4 P. M.

TWENTIETH DAY.

Monday, July 29th, 1889.

Afternoon Session

The convention was called to order at 4 P. M. by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: At the request of Mr. Dyer of Silver Bow, I would state that it is impossible for him to be here until tomorrow. I ask for him leave of absence until then.

The President: If there be no objection leave of absence will be granted.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer. Mr. Middleton my colleague expected to return today, and requested me to ask leave of absence for him until tomorrow when he will return.

Mr. President: If there be no objection, leave of absence will be granted to the gentleman from Custer.

Mr. Bullard of Jefferson also requested leave of absence for the day, which will be granted if there be no objection.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to present a communication and ask to have it read for the information of the convention.

The President: The communication offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Helena, Montana, July 24th, 1889.

To the honorable members of the Constitutional Convention, Helena, Montana.

The Montana Society of Civil Engineers would respectfully represent to your honorable body that the subject of irrigation is now assuming the greatest importance to all the people of Montana; that in the near future there will be constructed large and extensive reservoirs, irrigating canals and other hydraulic works of great magnitude requiring a great amount of engineering skill and experience, and that the lack of competent professional advice may lead to great loss of capital and life, as has been demonstrated in this territory in the past and more recently in the terrible disaster at Johnstown, Pennsylvania; and the requisite safety can only be obtained through the inspection of the plans for all such works, and the works themselves, by competent engineers. That in other states, particularly in California and Colorado, the office of State Engineer has been created and the incumbent charged with the inspection and supervision of such works. We therefore, would respectfully recommend to your honorable body that a provision be incorporated in the constitution of the state of Montana creating the office of State Engineer, to be appointed by the Governor by and with the consent of the State Senate. We would respectfully suggest that amongst his duties one of the most important should be the examination of the plans of all proposed reservoir-dams; and the periodical inspection of all dams and reservoirs within the limits of the state, in such manner as may be provided. We would moreover respectfully recommend that in case the office is created, the State Engineer should be ex-officio a member of the commission in charge of the state lands.

And your petitioners will ever pray etc. signed B. H. Green, President Montana Society of Civil Engineers.

J. S. Kerri, Secretary.

The President: If there be no objection this communication will be received and referred to the Committee on Irrigation.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, sent up a resolution.

The President: The resolution offered by the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Resolved that all debate in Committee of the Whole shall be limited to five minutes for each member.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move that be referred to the Committee on Rules.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move to amend by adding the words "with instructions to report not later than tomorrow."

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I accept the amendment.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, (Mr. J. K. Toole) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin sent up a report of the Committee of the Whole.

The President: The report of the Committee of the Whole on Proposition No. 14 will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Report of the Committee of the Whole on Proposition No. 14, Rights of Suffrage:

Mr. President: Your Committee of the Whole to whom was referred Proposition No. 14, General File No. 12 on Rights of Suffrage, with Resolution No. 12, General File No. 8 on Suffrage, beg leave to report the same back to the convention with the following amendments which the committee recommend be adopted. Your committee would state that in the amendments offered reference to numbers of lines and sections are such as appear in printed bill.

Strike out all of Section 2 and insert the following: Section 2. Every male person of the age of twenty-one years or over possessing the following qualifications shall be entitled to vote at all general elections. First, he shall be a citizen of the United States; Second, he shall have resided in the state one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote and in the county, town or precinct such time as may be prescribed by law; provided, first, that no person convicted of a felony shall have the right to vote unless he has been pardoned by the proper pardoning power. Provided, second, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right at the time of the adoption of this constitution. Provided, that after the expiration of five years from the time of the adoption of this constitution no persons, except citizens of the United States, shall have the right to vote.

Strike out in line two, Section 7, the word "two" and insert the word "one". Strike out all of Section 9. Amend section 10 by inserting in line one after the word "shall" the words "have the power to" and insert after the word "pass" in same line the words "a registration and such other" and after the word "law" in said line the words "as may be necessary". Amend Section 11 by inserting after the word "hold" in the first line the words "the office of County Superintendent of Schools or". Also strike out first seven words of Section 11, "the Legislative Assembly may pass laws allowing", and insert after the word "amendment" in the same line the words "shall be eligible"; and strike out the words "the right". Strike out Sections 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17 and substitute therefor the following section. Section 11. Any person qualified to vote at general elections in this state shall be eligible to any office therein except as otherwise provided in this constitution, and subject to such additional qualifications as may be, prescribed by the Legislature hereafter created. Insert additional section as follows: Assembly for city offices, and offices. Section 12. In all elections held by the people under this constitution the person or persons who shall receive the highest number of legal votes shall be declared elected.

The committee also recommend that resolution No. 12 acted upon unfavorably in the committee be stricken from the file. The committee further recommend that Proposition No. 14 as amended by them be printed.

(Signed) WALTER COOPER, Chairman.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer. I hope that the recommendation of the committee in regard to printing this report will prevail. It seems to me important it should be printed so that each one will have it on his desk.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I understand from the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole that it has been printed. If that be the case, and in consequence of the absence of Mr. McAdow who desires to offer an amendment to it, and who by reason of his physical infirmities is unable to be here today, I ask that the consideration of the bill be deferred until tomorrow, and I make as a motion that the report of the committee be received and that the further consideration of it be deferred until tomorrow.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I ask unanimous consent to make a report.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Committee on Legislative Departments will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Resolution No. 4, by Watson of Fergus, July 9th referred to Printing Committee, July 15th reported back without recommendation and placed on General File No. 5. July.....referred to Committee on Legislative Departments.

Mr. President, your Committee on Legislative Departments have had the within resolution under consideration and have directed me to report the same to the convention with the recommendation that the same do not pass

Signed J. K. TOOLE, Chairman.

July 29th, 1889.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning this report.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that the report be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I think under the rules that should go further and be considered in Committee of the Whole.

The President: The report will take its course and be considered in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I move that Proposition No. 18, General File No. 17 be made the special order of business for Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend, Mr. President, that a further consideration of Proposition No. 18 be postponed until after the consideration and the final passage of all propositions now pending intended to be embodied in the constitution of the State of Montana.

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move to amend by providing that Proposition No. 19 shall be made the special order for the day after tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that being subject matter entirely different from the original motion the gentleman's motion is hardly admissible in the shape of the amendment. The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that the consideration of Proposition No. 18, General File No. 17 be postponed until after the consideration of all subjects which are to be incorporated in the constitution.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to say a word or two in regard to the amendment which I have offered.

The President: The Chair would state to the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that this being a motion which implies the suspension of the rules, is not debatable, and it will have to be received without debate.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend the motion which I made, Mr. President, to postpone the consideration of this proposition No. 18 until the second day before the time which this convention shall fix for its final adjournment.

The President: If there be no objection this amendment will be received in lieu of the previous amendment of the gentleman. The question then before the convention is that the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge be amended that the consideration of File No. 17 Proposition

No. 18 be postponed until the second day previous to the final adjournment of the Constitutional Convention.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to admit a parliamentary inquiry, does that involve a suspension of the rules? As I understand it, Mr. President, any matter which is placed upon the general file does not come up for consideration in the Committee of the Whole as a matter of course, but is subject to be taken up at the pleasure of the convention or the committee. If this be true and the General Order is not to be taken up for consideration in the order in which they are filed, but that it is subject to the Committee of the Whole for their consideration at their pleasure then I submit that this proposition does not involve a change or modification of the rule.

The President: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman that every proposition which is made a special order requires a two-third vote, and a suspension of the rules.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Does the Chair hold that any proposition which involves the suspension of the rules is not debatable?

The President: That is the rule.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, that the consideration of Proposition No. 18 General File No. 17 be postponed until the second day prior to the day set for the adjournment of the convention and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I now move that Proposition No. 19 the report of the Committee in regard to Legislative Departments, be taken up on Wednesday at 10 o'clock, for consideration.

The President: There is a question pending before the convention. The question before the convention is upon the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge to make General File No. 17, Proposition No. 18 a special order for Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole reported to the convention that they had that file under consideration and asked for further time. I ask as a parliamentary inquiry, will this motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge require a two-thirds vote?

The President: It requires a two-thirds vote to make any proposition a special order for any hour.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend by making this a special order for the third day before the final adjournment of this convention.

The Motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: On that motion I demand the ayes and nays.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: The convention has set no day for final adjournment at present and it seems to me that the amendment is indefinite. It seems to me in addition that the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is not in order.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I believe that that is certain which is capable of being rendered certain, and this convention will fix the day for the final adjournment of the convention before it does adjourn.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that the time will be of such a definite character as may be considered to be in order. If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to make the consideration of File No. 17 a special order for 10 o'clock of the third day preceding the final adjournment of the convention.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I rise to a point of order. The Committee of the Whole upon Saturday had this matter under consideration and the Chairman of the committee was instructed to report to the convention the action of the committee and asked for further time. Now, my point of order is this, that it is in the hands of the Committee of the Whole, and that the action of the Committee of the Whole has precedence. That it is a higher motion than that to make this a special order, and until the Chairman of that committee reports it is not actually before the convention. The Chairman of the committee had only reported verbally, and had not written its final report from the Committee of the Whole, and so the matter is not before the convention at this time.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that the Committee of the Whole is the creature of the convention and subservient to it in every way; that the convention can take action upon any subject no matter what may have been done in Committee of the Whole. The Clerk will call the roll and the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Craven, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Magnus, Mayger, Muth, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.—25.

Nays—Aiken, Bickford, Burleigh, Callaway, Collins, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marshall, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—38.

Absent: Brazleton, Bullard, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Kanouse, Knuppenberg, Marrion, McAdow, Middleton, Webster—12.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon the original motion to make File No. 17, Proposition No. 18, a special order for 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that Proposition No. 19 relating to the Legislative Department be made the special order for Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask before that motion is put, is not this proposition to be filed for general orders?

The President: It has been printed and placed upon the file and is now to be taken up in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: What is the time for which it is asked to be made a special order?

The President: 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I demand the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be placed on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Cauby, Conrad, Cooper, Dixon, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kennedy, Loud, Luce, Magnus, Marshall, Mayger, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson, Witter, Mr. President—38.

Nays—Aiken, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Courtney, Craven, Durfee, Gillette, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Joy, Knowles, Kohrs, Mitchell, Robinson, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston—25.

Absent: Brazleton, Bullard, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Kanouse, Knuppenberg, Marrion, McAdow, Middleton, Webster—12.

The Chair announced the vote, and the rules requiring a two-thirds vote to carry the motion, the motion was declared lost.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 19.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move to amend by taking up Proposition No. 18.

The amendment was seconded.

The President: The question before the convention is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow to the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Aiken, Breen, Callaway, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Goddard, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Joy, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—27.

Nays—Browne, Bickford, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F., Burns, A. J., Burns, Edward, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Gibson, Gillette, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marshall, Mayger, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Rotwill, Rickards, Toole, Jos. K.—36.

Absent: Brazleton, Bullard, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Marrion, McAdow, Middleton, Webster—12.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the amendment lost.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move to amend by taking up Proposition No. 24, Article on Municipal Corporations and Officers.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I withdraw my motion.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of general orders as they appear upon the file.

The motion was seconded.

The President: There is a question pending on the motion offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow to amend the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that has been withdrawn.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the convention go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 10, General File No. 4, on Executive Departments.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. Mr. Maginnis and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The convention is now resolved into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 10, General File No. 4, article on Executive Departments. The gentleman from Cascade Mr. Collins will please take the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Collins of Cascade in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: We have for our consideration Proposition No. 10, General File No. 4. The first section will be read.

The Clerk read section 1 as follows: Section 1. The Executive Department shall consist of a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor and Superintendent of Public Instruction, each of whom shall hold his office for four years or until his successor is elected and qualified, beginning on the first Monday of January next succeeding his election, except that the terms of office of those who are elected at the first election shall begin in accordance with the Act of Congress, known as the Enabling Act, approved February 22, 1889, and shall end on the first Monday of January, 1893. The officers of the Executive Department, excepting the Lieutenant-Governor, shall during their terms of office reside at the seat of Government where they shall keep the public records, books and papers. They shall perform such duties as are prescribed in this constitution and by the laws of the state. The State Treasurer shall not be eligible to his office for the succeeding term.

There being no amendment to section 1 the Clerk read section 2, as follows: Section 2. The officers provided for in section 1 of this article shall be elected by the qualified electors of the state at the time and place of voting for members of the Legislative Assembly, and the persons respectively having the highest number of votes for the office voted for shall be elected; but if no two or more shall have an equal and the highest number of votes for anyone of said offices, the two houses of the Legislative Assembly at its next regular session shall forthwith by joint ballot elect one of such persons for said office. The returns of election for the officers named in section 1 shall be made in such manner as may be prescribed by law, and all contested elections of the same, other than provided for in this section, shall be determined as may be prescribed by law.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: I move to strike out the word "no" in line four. It is a misprint. It does not make sense.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: That is a misprint. We will just strike it out by consent.

The Chairman: If there be no objection the word will be stricken out.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I move to amend in line three after the word "of" and before the word "votes" by inserting the word "legal."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: The words "number of votes" implies legal votes, and cannot be construed in any other way.

The Chairman: The Chair understands that the word vote certainly means a legal vote.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: There has been a suggestion adopted—(interrupted).

The Chairman: There is nothing before the committee. The Clerk will read section 3.

The Clerk read section 3 as follows: Section 3. No person shall be eligible to the office of Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Superintendent of Public Instruction unless he shall have attained the age of thirty years at the time of his election, nor to the office of Secretary of State, State Auditor, or State Treasurer, unless he shall have attained the age of twenty-five years, nor to the office of Attorney General, unless he shall have attained the age of thirty years and have been admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the state, or Territory of Montana, and be in good standing at the time of his election. In addition to the qualifications above described, each of the officers named shall be a citizen of the United States, and have resided within the state or territory three years next preceding his election.

There being no amendment to section 3, the Clerk read section 4 as follows: Section 4. The Governor, Secretary of State, State Auditor, Treasurer, Attorney General and Superintendent of Public Instruction, shall quarterly as due, during their continuance in office receive for their service compensation which is fixed as follows:

Governor, Five thousand dollars per annum;

Secretary of State, three thousand dollars per annum;

Attorney General, three thousand dollars per annum;

State Treasurer, three thousand dollars per annum;

State Auditor, three thousand dollars per annum;

Superintendent of Public Instruction, two thousand five hundred dollars per annum.

The Lieutenant Governor shall receive the same per diem as may be provided by law, for the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, to be allowed only during the sessions of the Legislative Assembly. The compensations enumerated shall be in full for all services by said officers respectively rendered in any official capacity or employment whatever during their respective terms of office. No officer named in this section shall receive, for the performance of any official duty, any fee for his own use, but all fees fixed by law for the performance by either of them of any official duty shall be collected in advance, and deposited with the State Treasurer quarterly to the credit of the state. No officer mentioned in this section shall be eligible to or hold any other public office, except regents of the State University, during his term of office. Provided, however, the Legislative Assembly may provide for the payment of mileage to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General and Superintendent of Public Instruction while traveling within the state in the performance of official duties.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Education have made that, "members of the State Board of Education" instead of "regents of the State University." Consequently the Committee on Executive Departments want it to conform to the report of the Committee on Education.

The Chairman: If there be no objection that change will be made, insert "State Board of Education" instead of "regents of the State University." If there be no objection the amendment will be inserted.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I wish to offer an amendment to the section that has just been read by inserting in the first line at the beginning of the section "until otherwise provided by law."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not know that I particularly care to oppose the motion, but I want the committee to understand exactly what it means. In the Committee on Executive Departments we had under discussion the question as to whether we should absolutely fix the salaries or whether we should leave it at the discretion of the Legislature to raise them or lower them, and the committee decided that we should fix them in the constitution. Now, if I understand the amendment of the gentleman, it provides that the Legislature shall have the power hereafter to fix them. Now, the Committee on Executive Departments, I think, have no opinions to urge upon the committee in reference to it, but will leave it to a vote of the committee whether they shall fix them as we have fixed them in the constitution, or whether they shall be left with the Legislature.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I am in favor of the amendment. I do not believe in making anything so inflexible. Changes and circumstances here within a few years may render the salaries entirely inadequate. I believe they are not sufficient today. Hence, I am in favor of leaving it in the power of the Legislature when Montana shall increase in population and the duties of those offices become more onerous that they may have the power to increase them. I do not look for any decrease because Montana will never go backwards.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: As I have said, the committee has no choice in the matter, but I think that if the amendment prevails there ought to be an additional amendment as a safeguard and that is that the salary of no officer shall be changed during his term. The committee stand in favor of having the salaries as they are in the constitution.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I am entirely in favor of sustaining the report of the committee. I think the compensation is adequate and if any gentleman finds that he can make a little more at something else than he can in serving the public, he can either balance it up with patriotism or love of duty, or he can wait and go at something else. I am opposed to giving any man work against his will, and if he can make any more at any other position let him resign.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: In comparing the article on judiciary, I see that one of the sections in that article fixes the salaries of the Supreme Court and the District Judges until the Legislature should fix them. I see no reason why that rule should not apply to this bill under consideration as well as in the bill on the judiciary. Now, it may be true hereafter that the salaries mentioned in this article will be too large. Then, in order to change them it would take a constitutional amendment. I am not in favor of incorporating anything in the constitution which it may be necessary to change hereafter by a constitutional amendment, which we can just as well provide for in the constitution now. Therefore, I hope the amendment which I have offered will prevail. In relation to the suggestion made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that there should be a provision there that the compensation of the officers should not be increased or diminished during the term of office, I am in accord with that and believe that that should be inserted in line nine of this section.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I would like to know what this amendment is and how the section would read?

The Chairman stated the amendment for the information of the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone. Mr. Goddard and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I move to change in line six the words "two thousand five hundred dollars per annum" to "three thousand dollars per annum."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Reed, of Deer Lodge: Before the motion is put I would like to explain that this office of Superintendent of Public Instruction seems to be a very important office, and I do not understand why there should be any discrimination in providing for the payment of that office. All the others receive three thousand dollars. It is an important office. It requires a man of intelligence and education to fill that office.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I am opposed to that, and for these reasons. I know, sir, that it is very common to distrust every man who has any tendency to interfere with the salaries connected with the public school system, but with all that I believe that the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction is in fact a mere sinecure. It can serve but one purpose in connection with the public schools, in my opinion, after a careful consideration of the position, and that is simply to preserve the harmony in the system and the duties devolving upon the State Superintendent for that purpose are merely nominal, and would not require a month's time in twelve of his time. Now, if that is the case, it is not necessary to attach any importance to that office. So far as the government of the public schools is concerned it devolves upon the efficient work of the County Superintendent. If any man doubts this proposition, with all due deference to the Superintendent of Public Instruction of the Territory of Montana—and I presume it will move along substantially in the same groove under the state government as under the territorial government—let him look around and observe what the State Superintendent has performed with reference to the schools. I know, sir, that there are some of the counties in Montana that have not been visited by the Territorial Superintendent at all; I know in some of the counties where the Territorial Superintendent has been, his offices have been unimportant; he has done nothing more than to give, once a year, a set, stereotyped lecture, and make some few suggestions to the teachers of the schools, of minor importance. He would not be in the county but one or two days in the year, and that was about the extent of the service performed by the Territorial Superintendent of Public Instruction. So far as the efficient working of the public school system is concerned, so far as its efficacy is concerned, it devolves almost solely upon the County Superintendent. He can know but little of the wants of the respective schools except what he obtains of the County Superintendents who are usually as efficient as a State Superintendent. It devolves upon those who are personally present to give a general supervision of the affairs of the schools. The State Superintendent's work devolves upon this corps of officers and not upon his own shoulders. Then, I say that the office of State Superintendent is a matter of very small importance, and a compensation of five hundred dollars would be ample to cover all services in regard to our public school system. In saying all this I do not wish to strike any blow at the public school system, for, goodness knows, I have confidence enough in it, and I would be the last one in the state to strike a blow at the public school system. But while I feel that way, I do not think it necessary to go beyond reason and to attach undue importance to an office that has not that importance attached to it. Hence, I oppose the motion to increase the salary from twenty-five hundred to three thousand dollars, and the compensation should be cut down so that it would not exceed one thousand dollars.

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: I hope the convention will stand by the committee in this matter. There is all the less reason for changing it now that you have already changed the first part of the section. We thought we would make the constitution ironclad so that the Legislature could not raise the salaries, and keep those state officers from lobbying with the State Legislature; but the very act of making that section flexible and leaving the whole thing to the Legislature would seem to indicate that the committee ought not to go any further. The old constitution fixed it at two thousand dollars and we fix it at twenty-five hundred dollars, and I hope the convention will stand by the committee without any further debate.

The Chair put the question on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Reek) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: Now, Mr. Chairman, in line nine, in order to make the section conform to the amendment already adopted,

I move to insert after the word "office" the words "and the salary of no official shall be increased during his term of office." I am sure none of them will have to be cut down.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the gentleman if we have not already in some bill that we have adopted made the same provision?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: It would come in right here, and the Committee on Revision can strike it out in any other place it may appear, as surplusage.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I am heartily in accord with the intent of the proposition, but it seems to me there is no use of inserting it in this article. Section 31, Proposition No. 19, legislative departments, deals with this subject in a general way.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: We have not adopted that yet.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: But it seems to me it is as well where it is. Sec. 31 of the article on Legislative Departments reads: "Except as otherwise provided in this constitution, no law shall extend the term of any public officer, or increase or diminish his salary or emoluments after his election or appointment." It seems to me that that covers the whole thing and is a general proposition.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The committee on revision can strike that out.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke Mr. Maginnis, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend section four by striking out the word "five" after the word "governor" in line three, and insert in lieu thereof the word "three."

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend that by inserting $3,500 instead of $3,000.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I move to amend section 4 as follows: Strike out in line three the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four."

The Chairman: The question is upon the amendment to insert $3,500.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I think that is ample salary for the governor of the new state of Montana, and furthermore, we are not a rich state yet; our assessable property has not arrived at a very enormous sum, and we should not give any princely salaries to our officials; it is unrepugnant and it is impolitic, and I trust my motion will prevail.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I want at this time to enter my protest against any scheme that seems to prevail here to adopt a schedule of salaries that has the appearance of being niggardly. I don't believe in entering upon statehood that we can afford to place the salaries of some of these high offices at such a point that none but the wealthy and the bloated bondholders, as we sometimes speak of them disrespectfully, can aspire to them. Applause I am opposed to that principle. I believe in fixing the schedule of salaries for our state offices we ought to fix them at such a figure that the poorest and most honorable and honest men of Montana can aspire to fill those offices without making a sacrifice. Applause I hope this amendment will not prevail. I hope the original proposition will not prevail. I am in favor of adopting the report as it comes from the hands of the committee, and especially in view of what the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) has already said, that we have already adopted this section so as to leave it in the hands of future legislatures. I think we can safely leave it there, and therefore I hope this amendment will be voted down.

The Chairman: There are two amendments before the committee, one to strike out and insert $3,500, and the other to strike out and insert $4,000. The question is upon the last amendment.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I withdraw the amendment of $3,500, and accept the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin county Mr. Luce of $4,000.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of Mr. Luce of Gallatin, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Joyes, of Jefferson: I move to amend by striking out and inserting $3,500.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Jefferson. Mr. Joyce and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I would like to ask the chairman of the committee what he is going to do with the Lieutenant Governor?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: We provide that he shall receive the amount that the speaker of the House receives.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: Suppose the Governor should be absent from the state?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Whenever he acts as Governor he receives the Governor's salary.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: This is a matter of phraseology the whole thing, but it seems to me in going before the committee this amendment should be made: In line 12 in place of the word "either" I move the words "any one" should be inserted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out all of the proviso, commencing at the middle of line 15.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: If there are no further amendments to section 4, the Clerk will read section 5.

The Clerk then read section 5, as follows: "Sec. 5. The Supreme executive power of the state shall be vested in the Governor, who shall see that the laws are faithfully executed."

There being no amendments to section 5, the Clerk read section 6, as follows: "Sec. 6. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the militia forces of the state, except when these forces are in the actual service of the United States, and shall have power to call out any part of the whole of said forces to aid in the execution of the laws, to suppress insurrection or to repel invasion."

There being no amendments to section 6, the Clerk read section 7, as follows: "Sec. 7. The Governor shall nominate, and by and with the consent of the Senate, appoint all officers whose offices are established by this constitution, or which may be created by law, and whose appointment or election is not otherwise provided for. If, during a recess of the Senate a vacancy occur in any such office, the Governor shall appoint some fit person to discharge the duties thereof until the next meeting of the Senate, when he shall nominate some person to fill such office. If the office of Secretary of State, State Auditor, State Treasurer, Attorney General or Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be vacated by death, resignation or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the Governor to fill the same by appointment, and the appointee shall hold his office until his successor shall be elected and qualified in such manner as may be provided by law."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, in regard to the next section, section 8, it was referred to the Committee on Judiciary, that being the section on pardoning power. I hold in my hand the report of the Judiciary Committee and move that it be inserted as one section—as section 8.

The Chairman: Are there any amendments to section 7?

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: It occurs to me that this section will conflict with some other articles that have been adopted by the convention. In the second line that section provides that the Governor shall nominate, and by and with the consent of the senate, appoint all officers whose offices are established by the constitution. The judiciary act provides for the election of certain officers, and in case of a vacancy, the appointment by the Board of County Commissioners—for instance, a justice of the peace or county attorney.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I beg the gentleman's pardon—"And whose appointment or election is not otherwise provided for." If the gentleman will finish the reading of the section, I think he will find the point is covered.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I would suggest that instead of inserting the words "in this constitution," if the words "in this article" were substituted in the second line, it would obviate a possible difficulty.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I think the section is right as it stands.

The Chairman: If there be no amendments, the section will stand.

Mr. Goodard, of Yellowstone: I merely offered the suggestion.

The Chairman: The motion now is to insert the report of the Judiciary Committee as section 8. The Clerk will read the report.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 1. The Governor shall have the power to grant pardons, absolute or conditional, and to remit fines and forfeitures, and to grant commutation of punishments and respites after conviction and judgment for any offenses committed against the criminal laws of the state; Provided, however, that before granting pardons, remitting fines and forfeitures, or commuting punishments, the action of the Governor concerning the same shall be approved by a Board, or a majority thereof, composed of the Secretary of State, Attorney General and State Auditor, who shall be known as a Board of Pardons.

Sec. 2. The Legislative Assembly shall by law prescribe the sessions of said Board, and the manner in which applications shall be made, and regulate the proceedings thereon. But no fine or forfeiture shall be remitted, and no commutation or pardon granted, except upon the approval of a majority of said Board, after a full hearing in open session, and until notice of time and place of such hearing and the relief applied for shall have been given by publication in some newspaper of general circulation in the county where the crime was committed, at least once a week for two weeks. The proceedings and decision of the Board shall be reduced to writing, and with their reasons for their action in each case, and the dissent of any members who may disagree, signed by them, and filed, with all papers used upon the hearing, in the office of the Secretary of State.

Sec. 3. The Governor shall communicate to the Legislative Assembly, at each regular session, each case of remission of fine or forfeiture, reprieve, commutation or pardon granted since the last previous report, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of remission, commutation, pardon or reprieve, with the reasons for granting the same, and the objections, if any, of any member of the Board made thereto.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of these three sections as one section to be known as section No. 8.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I offer the following as a substitute.

The Chairman: The following substitute is offered.

The Clerk read as follows: The Governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after conviction, for all offenses except treason, and cases of impeachment upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason he shall have power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the Legislature at its next meeting, when the Legislature shall either pardon or commute the sentence, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. He shall annually communicate to the Legislature each case of reprieve, commutation or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of the commutation, pardon or reprieve.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke, moved the adoption of the section. The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, the difference between the original sections and the substitute offered is this: These sections provide for a Board of Pardons; that substitute as offered provides for a pardon by the Governor. That has been the rule that has been in operation in this country from the time of the adoption of the constitution of the United States, with two or three exceptions. Where those exceptions have been tried, as I understand it, they have never worked well. The object of the rule is that this responsibility of pardon must be placed somewhere; there must be some authority accountable for it, and there can be but small accountability where the responsibility is divided between three or four persons. Possibly, sometimes there are too many pardons granted by a Governor, possibly, sometimes, not enough. It may have happened in this Territory that some Governors have gone too far and some not far enough. Possibly they did not know the criminals of this Territory as well as they should have done. But that will be changed by this constitution which we are to adopt, so far as the knowledge of the officials, of the people and criminals of the Territory is concerned. I certainly think it would be unwise. It has not always worked to perfection to change the system, for I think there is no system that will work to perfection, and I think it would be unwise to jump out of the frying pan into the fire—to depart from this well settled rule and try one unknown. Now, that is the chief distinction and difference between the motion made and the substitute offered. They differ in some other minor particulars, but upon this simple question of responsibility and accountability of the official, I think it is almost the universal concurrent testimony of people who have observed the workings of the two different systems in the different states, that the pardoning power should be vested in the Governor, and he should be held to a strict accountability.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I am very sorry to have to differ with my learned friend from Lewis & Clarke County, but so far as the responsibility is concerned, I do not know where there is any more danger in resting it upon the shoulders of four men who are made officers for that express purpose than in resting it upon the shoulders of one. It seems to me there is a greater safeguard. Now, several of the states of this Union, among them the state of Pennsylvania, became so much incensed at the action of their Governors—and they are supposed to be honorable men and men of character—they were so indiscreet with their actions that they were compelled to resort to a Pardoning Board, and did so; and no man can get to be pardoned out of the penitentiary unless the matter goes before the Pardoning Board, who are responsible, reliable and intelligent men, and they recommend it. And it seems to me that the very argument which the gentleman uses as his reason against it may be urged more emphatically in favor of the Pardoning Board. I hope the suggestion of the committee, which, by the way, consumed a good deal of time in examining the authorities of the different constitutions, will prevail.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: There are some differences of opinion in the Judiciary Committee as to the pardoning power, but there were a large majority of that committee in favor of a Pardoning Board, and certainly it seems to me that it is as good a system as any that can be suggested. The pardoning power is one of which great complaint has been made under other systems. Now, this article provides that the Governor may grant a pardon, but he can only do so upon the approval of a Board of Pardons. Opportunity is given to the applicant or person who may be interested in seeking the pardon, and other parties interested may have an opportunity to make argument against the grant of pardon; and every action of the Governor by the approval of the Board will be reported to every session of the Legislature, stating the pardons that have been granted and the reasons given for granting them. Now, certainly, under those circumstances, it seems to me there will be much less abuse of the pardoning power than where it is vested solely without any practical responsibility in one single man. The action must have the approval of three high state officers, and they must only have acted upon proper notice and must be able to give a reason for the action they have taken. I do not see myself how any greater safeguard can be provided, and I think it might be safely said that under this system the Governor could not grant a pardon of his own accord because this Board would be equally responsible with him, and that would be a sufficient restraint upon him in case of any influences being brought to bear upon him personally which might otherwise induce him to grant a pardon upon unwarrantable grounds. No pardon could be granted until the whole matter was considered, and then only upon the concurrent recommendation of the Governor and a majority of this Board.

Mr. Clarke, of Silver Bow: The domain of the one-man power and principle is rapidly narrowing down as the civilization of the century advances, and I venture to say that if heretofore the pardoning power had been vested in three or four men instead of one, and a proposition were made that this be abolished and the pardoning power be vested in the Governor of the state, that it would strike us all with amazement. I do not believe in putting so important a matter in the hands of one man. We may be unfortunate enough to elect a weak man to the office of Governor of the state of Montana, a man who would be governed to a great extent by his prejudices, and a man who might go still farther and be actuated by bad and dishonest motives. We can readily see that in cases where an election would be pending and the Governor could for mere political considerations grant a pardon to some individual belonging to a particular race, or sect, or nationality, thereby securing a large influence in behalf of the party to which he belonged—we can readily see how this great privilege might be abused. I cannot understand why objection should be had, or why any evil consequences could arise by putting this power into the hands of three or four learned men. We know that when a matter of this kind is considered by two or more, that they are more liable to arrive at a just conclusion than one man who is not guided by such counsel. Hence, I am in favor of sustaining the report of the committee, who have, no doubt, given this matter due consideration, and whose conclusions I believe to be correct.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the substitute offered by Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I wish to offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The amendment of the gentleman from Madison will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Insert after the word "state" in line 3, section 1, the words "except for treason and in cases of impeachment."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Before this vote is taken I want to say to the gentlemen of this committee that the only object of that amendment is to insert in this constitution the opinions of the gentlemen who have the honor to occupy this floor, that this convention may place its seal of condemnation upon any one man, or any set of men, who may be, in this country of ours, guilty of raising his hand against the government. The most of the gentlemen who occupy this floor can remember when treason was abroad in our land, a day when the heavens were clothed in mourning and all this broad, good land of ours was filled with sorrowing women and weeping Rachels. We know what that cost us, and while that time has so long passed that we have almost forgotten it, and we are all satisfied that we will never see a day again such as those days were, I desire to see placed in our organic act, now that we are forming a fundamental law for the government of a country that is an empire within itself—I desire that we shall place our seal of condemnation upon him who would be disloyal to the country in which he lives. Mr. Chairman, I trust the gentlemen of this committee will not forget that the crime of treason after due conviction is the unpardonable sin.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison, and the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the proposition of the Judiciary Committee on pardoning power, as one section, to be known as section 8.

The vote was taken and the said motion was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read section 9.

The Clerk read section 9, as follows: "Section 9. The Governor may require information in writing from the officers of the Executive Department upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, which information shall be given upon oath, whenever so required, he may also furnish information in writing at any time, under oath, from all officers and managers of State Institutions, upon any subject relating to the condition, management and expenses of their respective offices and institutions, and may, at any time he deems it necessary, appoint a committee to investigate and report to him upon the condition of any executive office or state institution. The Governor shall at the commencement of each session, and from time to time by message, give to the Legislative Assembly information of the condition of the state, and shall recommend such measures as he shall deem expedient. He shall also send to the Legislative Assembly a statement with vouchers of the expenditures of all moneys belonging to the state and paid out by him. He shall also at the commencement of each session present estimates of the amount of money required to be raised by taxation, for all purposes of the state."

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Right here in this place I deem it necessary to suggest an additional clause which I think will come in very well.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers the following as an additional clause.

The Clerk read as follows: The Treasurer may be suspended from office by the Governor during the recess of the Legislature, and until thirty days after the commencement of the next session of the Legislature, whenever it shall appear to him that such Treasurer has in any particular violated his duty. The Governor shall appoint a competent person to discharge the duties of the office during such suspension of the Treasurer. Ample bonds must be furnished by the person appointed to act as Treasurer.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I think, Mr. Chairman, that that is a provision that we ought to incorporate in our constitution. It is one that would surround the Treasurer and give him no opportunity for any speculations, or peculations, and such authority, it seems to me, ought to exist in the Governor. There are cases in the history of numerous states where a lack of authority of that kind resulted not only in disastrous loss to the state but also in disastrous loss to the bondsmen who went on the bonds of the Treasurer; and it is a protection not only to the state but to all men who are at times compelled by persuasion or otherwise to go on bonds for Treasurers. I see no harm in the amendment, and it may result in a great deal of good.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, it appeared to me as my friend read his substitute or amendment, that it was placing rather an arbitrary power in the hands of the Governor. The committee did not examine that subject, and I would suggest that he withhold it for the present so that we can look at it carefully, with the understanding that when he is ready we can go back to this section.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: That is satisfactory to me and I will withdraw the amendment for the present.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move that the committee do now rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 10, General File No. 4, have made various amendments to the same, and now report back to the convention and ask that further time be granted for its further consideration.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that they have had under consideration General File No. 4 on the Executive Departments. They have made progress and desire leave to sit again. If there be no objection leave will be granted.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the convention take a recess until 8 o'clock, with the understanding that the convention shall proceed with the consideration of this proposition this evening.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion and the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 8 P. M.

Monday, July 29th, 1889. Evening Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 8 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The Chair would state that upon taking a recess at six o'clock the convention resolved upon the consideration of General File No. 4, Proposition No. 10, as the order of business for this evening. If there be no objection the convention will go into Committee of the Whole, and the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, will take the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The committee will resume the consideration of section 9. Are there any further amendments to section 9? If not, the Clerk will read section 10.

The Clerk read section 10 as follows: "Section 10. He may on extraordinary occasions convene the Legislative Assembly by proclamation, stating the purposes for which he has convened it, but when so convened, it shall have no power to legislate on any subjects other than those specified in the proclamation, but may provide for the expenses of the session and other matters incidental thereto. He may also by a proclamation convene the Senate in extraordinary sessions for the transaction of executive business."

There being no amendments to section 10 the Clerk read section 11 as follows: "Section 11. Every bill passed by the Legislative Assembly shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve, he shall sign it, and thereupon it shall become a law, but if he do not approve, he shall return it with his objections to the house in which it originated, which house shall enter the objections at large upon its journal and proceed to reconsider the bill. If then two-thirds of the members present agree to pass the same, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of the members present in that house it shall then become a law notwithstanding the objections of the Governor. In all such cases the vote of each house shall be determined by yeas and nays, to be entered on the journal. If any bill shall not be returned by the Governor within five days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature shall by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not become a law without the approval of the Governor. No bill shall become a law after the final adjournment of the Legislature, unless approved by the Governor within fifteen days after such adjournment. In case the Governor shall fail to approve of any bill after the final adjournment of the Legislature, it may be filed, with his objections, in the office of the Secretary of State."

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge, sent up an amendment to section 11.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers the following amendment: Strike out the word "present" in line 5, section 11, and insert instead the words "elected to that house." Also strike out the word "present" in line 7, section 11, and insert instead the words "elected to."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: The reason I offer that, Mr. Chairman, is because this amendment is in most of the constitutions of the United States, and I think it should be there. There is great danger that there may be too much legislation, and if you put such a clause as that in the constitution it will require but a very few votes to override the veto of the Governor. The house can make such rules and regulations as will compel the attendance of absent members, and if the measure is a worthy one and the Governor should veto it and it fail to pass two-thirds of those elected, why, then, the natural inference is that it should not pass. Certainly six members out of sixteen and eighteen out of fifty should not be allowed to veto the Governor. I think it is a wise precaution that two-thirds of the members elected, instead of two-thirds of those present should be made to override the veto of the Governor. Why we should make it here two-thirds of the members present I cannot see, for the reason that if a measure has not any merit in it and the party should wish to get it through the senate or the house, notwithstanding the veto of the Governor, why, all he would have to do would be to find some pretext to get the members absent, and by six votes in the senate and eighteen in the house have it passed. It seems to me that it would be a very wise precaution to require two-thirds of the members elected to the house to override the veto of the Governor.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to call the attention of the house to the rule in Congress that the two-thirds by which a vetoed bill is required to be approved before it becomes a law has been stated in both houses to be two-thirds of the members present.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The committee have been very liberal with the veto power. We have followed the example of New York to the fullest extent and have allowed the Governor power to veto single items of appropriation bills; we allow him to approve matters after the Legislature adjourned and we provide against what has been called pocket vetoes. Now, of course it requires a quorum to do business in either house, and I think the very argument the gentleman made is against his proposition. It is very easy for a minority or a majority to compel the attendance of a full house, either in a house or senate. I think the proposition ought to stand as it is in the bill.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, the constitution of the United States requires two-thirds of the house; it does not require two-thirds of those present.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: But the construction that has been given to that is that two-thirds of the members of the house means two-thirds of a quorum, or two-thirds of those present.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Winston) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to submit this proposition, which I want to follow section 9.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: We can go back to section 9.

The Chairman: Do you reserve your proposition until later?

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Yes sir.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read section 12.

The Clerk read section 12 as follows: "Section 12. The Governor shall have power to disapprove of any item or items of any bill making appropriations of money, embracing distinct items, and the part or parts approved shall become a law; and the item or items disapproved shall be void, unless enacted in the manner following: If the Legislative Assembly be in session he shall within five days transmit to the house in which the bill originated, a copy of the item or items thereof disapproved, together with his objections thereto, and the items objected to shall be separately reconsidered, and each item shall then take the same course as is prescribed for the passage of bills over the executive veto."

There being no amendments to section 12, the Clerk read section 13 as follows: "Section 13. In case of the failure to qualify, the impeachment or conviction of felony or infamous crime* of the Governor, or his death, removal from office, resignation, absence from the state or inability to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the powers, duties and emoluments of the office, for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease, shall devolve upon the Lieutenant Governor."

There being no amendments to section 13, the Clerk read section 14, as follows: "Section 14. The Lieutenant-Governor shall be President of the Senate, but shall vote only when the Senate is equally divided. In case of the absence or disqualification of the Lieutenant-Governor, from any cause which applies to the Governor, or when he shall hold the office of Governor, then the President pro tempore of the Senate shall perform the duties of the Lieutenant-Governor until the vacancy is filled or the disability removed."

There being no amendments to section 14, the Clerk read section 15 as follows: "Section 15. In case of the failure to qualify in his office, death, resignation, absence from the state, impeachment, conviction of felony or infamous crime, or disqualification from any cause, of both the Governor and the Lieutenant-Governor, the duties of the Governor shall devolve upon the President of the Senate pro tempore until such disqualification of either the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor be removed, or the vacancy filled, and if the President of the Senate for any of the above named causes shall become incapable of performing the duties of Governor, the same shall devolve upon the Speaker of the House."

There being no amendments to section 15, the Clerk read section 16 as follows: "Section 16. The first Legislative Assembly shall provide a seal for the state which shall be kept by the Secretary of State and used by him officially and known as the Great Seal of the State of Montana."

There being no amendments to section 16, the Clerk read section 17, as follows: "Section 17. All grants and commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of the State of Montana, sealed with the Great Seal of the State, signed by the Governor and countersigned by the Secretary of State."

There being no amendments to section 17, the Clerk read section 18, as follows: "Section 18. An account shall be kept by the officers of the executive department, and of all public institutions of the state of all moneys received by them, severally from all sources, and for every service performed, and of all moneys disbursed by them severally, and a semi-annual report thereof shall be made to the Governor, under oath; they shall also, at least twenty days preceding each regular session of the Legislative Assembly, make full and complete reports of their official transactions to the Governor, who shall transmit the same to the Legislative Assembly."

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move to strike out the section just read by the Clerk for the reason that I think it is the province of the Legislature to enact those matters.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that section 18 be stricken out.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I hope that section will not be stricken out. It seems to me the substance of that was offered in a resolution I think by the gentleman from Madison, and was considered an efficient check upon the officers of the state, inasmuch as the Governor should be able at any time to call upon them for an account of the finances, and that it was necessary also that he should have this power in order that he should submit his estimates to the Legislature, which are provided for in another section of the constitution. It seems to me it should stand.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: It seems to me a very wise and indispensable clause in the constitution.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I have had but a moment to consider the section, but it seems to me that it is a matter for the Legislature. The Legislature has control over all these matters, and I do not think we ought to interject at this point what is simply a matter for the legislature to deal with hereafter.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: If the gentleman will notice, in another provision of this constitution, it is provided that the Governor shall submit an estimate of the probable expenses of the State government to the Legislature.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: These reports are made under the laws as they now are. The reports are made by the different officers to the Executive. The law as it stands upon the Statute books to-day provides for all that. I presume the laws will be re-enacted or at least re-amended so as to cover all those things, and it seems certainly as if this section were entirely useless for any proper place in the constitution. To require a Governor to keep a set of books, or any officer to keep a set of books, it comes within the law to say what books shall be kept by the particular officers. These duties are all prescribed by law, not by the constitution.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I would call the attention of the gentleman to section 9. It seems to me that this is fully covered by section 9.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: Inasmuch as I made this motion, I think it proper that I should say a word, although it has been very fully explained by the gentleman from Missoula. Now, if it is proper to enact such a clause as that in the constitution then it would be just as equally proper to put a clause in the constitution in relation to every officer of State and County, defining their duty, for instance, of the County Attorney or the Judge of the District—defining their duties from beginning to end. This section simply defines the duty of the officers of the territory, and in relation to that there is at present a statute governing all of that ground; and I see no reason why anything should be put in this constitution which is purely and essentially a subject of Legislative enactment.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I regret very much that I have to differ with the report of the committee. The gentleman from Yellowstone has anticipated the remarks I intended to make on that proposition. It is absolutely useless; it is lumbering the constitution with material that has no place in it; it is simple legislation, and for that matter not to be incorporated in the constitution.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I am in favor of both of these provisions for these reasons. In the first place these are provisions in the constitution which prescribe the duties of executive officers, and that is within the province of a constitution to do that. In the next place this Section 9 provides what the Governor may do; he may require of these officers a statement. Then comes in this Section 18 that says what these officers must do. They must keep these accounts so as to be able to report to the Governor upon his request. This simply prescribes what the Governor may require, his duties and powers in that particular, and all through in this proposition upon the Executive officer the powers of the executive department are defined and prescribed; and these officers such as are contemplated here are part of the executive machinery of the government. Now there is no necessity for any constitution prescribing what the duties of a District Attorney are; they can say these officers shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law; but it is perfectly proper in a constitution that the duties of the executive department should be prescribed, and I believe that this is in the interest of an honest administration of the finances of the government, and I hope it will be sustained.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard) to strike out Section 18, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 19.

The Clerk read Section 19 as follows: "Section 19. The Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney General, shall constitute a Board of State Prison Commissioners, which Board shall have such supervision of all matters connected with the State Prisons as may be prescribed by law. They shall constitute a Board of Examiners, with power to examine all claims against the State, except salaries or compensation of officers fixed by law, and perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law. And no claim against the State except salaries and compensation of officers fixed by law, shall be passed upon by the Legislative Assembly without first having been considered and acted upon by said Board."

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up an amendment to Section 19.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke moves that the following be added to Section 19 and that subsequent sections be numbered accordingly.

The Clerk read as follows: "The Governor shall have power during the recess of the Legislative Assembly and until thirty days after the commencement of the next session to suspend the State Treasurer from office for gross neglect of duty, for corrupt conduct in office or for any other misfeasance or malfeasance therein. The Governor shall appoint a competent person to discharge the duties of the office during such suspension of the Treasurer, and shall require of the appointee ample bonds for the proper security of the public funds in his possession."

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I move to amend the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke to read "Board of Examiners, as hereinafter provided, shall have power" &c.

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: If my friend will permit me—(interrupted).

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. Magnus of Lewis & Clarke: I want to offer as an amendment to the last line of the last section and as a substitute for the amendment of my friend, the following: The Legislature may provide for the temporary suspension of the State Treasurer by the Governor whenever the Board of Examiners deem such action necessary for the protection of the moneys of the State.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the adoption of that.

The Chairman: The question before the committee is on the adoption of the new section offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield). The amendment of the other gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Magnus) is not germane at present.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Just one word. I do not doubt that this is proper and right, but may it not also be possible that this Board of Examiners may find it necessary to suspend some one else besides the State Treasurer? Should you not in this amendment, or in this section, provide for the suspension of other officers, as well as the State Treasurer?

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I did not raise that question because I did not think it necessary, for the reason that the State Treasurer is the one that is the most important of all the offices. It is the financial office of the State, and it was for the protection of the finances and the moneys of the State that this amendment was introduced. That is the simple and sole object of that. We all expect that we will elect the proper officers, but the temptation exists with the State Treasurer greater than it does with any other officer, and therefore it is simply for that purpose and with that view that this was offered. I think that the more the members take into consideration the wording of that proposition, I think the more favorably they will be impressed with it.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: All I would say is, that I hope the bill will not be passed in its present shape. This amendment is intended to cover what they call neglect of duty. Now the Treasurer of the Territory may have a great many more duties assigned to him than just simply keeping the moneys of the State, and in relation to all other duties, the courts are open, and an officer can be mandamusd by order of the court and compelled to do his duties. But this thing of misappropriating money is something that is frequently done, and it is taken out of the money generally that it is supposed will not be called upon for a long time; and in that particular the mandamus will come always too late; and hence it only appertains to the examination and suspension for misappropriation of public money. Now there is a dispute very often between the executive and a subordinate officer as to what his duties are in relation to everything else but keeping money. I have known of disputes between a Governor and an Auditor and a Treasurer in which the Governor was very arbitrary about the matter when the Auditor and Treasurer were right and the Governor wrong. And who is to determine what these duties are? Who is to determine when one of these executive officers has violated his duty? It ought not to be reposed in the Governor; but upon that one thing of whether any man has misappropriated the moneys in the treasury, there cannot be any dispute about that matter. That is a duty in which there will be no trouble in determining whether a man performs his duty or not.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula. It seems to me that this is one more step in the direction of legislation, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and that by allowing or adopting the amendment that we step one step farther into the woods. It seems to me that we are departing from the line of constitutional enactment and encroaching upon the line of legislative duties. It is a well known principle of law that in the Governor of a State is reposed the executive power thereof and I believe in confining the executive power to the Governor and bestowing upon him the right to see to the enforcement of law. If this amendment should prevail it might perhaps be better for us to enact that the Governor should be the State Treasurer at once and have done with it. I would like to ask the gentleman, who is to impeach the Governor, if the Governor is to impeach the Treasurer of the State? Is it not a fact that when a person is elected to the office of Treasurer of the State that he gives a bond to the people of the State conditioned upon the faithful performance of his duty as such Treasurer? Is it not a fact that the legislature takes the matter as we leave it and prescribes the duties, the regulations, and the rules under which he conducts the affairs of his office? Is it not a fact that the State Treasurer, while he is a creation of this constitutional convention becomes immediately amenable to the laws of the State and to the enactments of the Legislature? Is it not a fact that while we create this office the Legislature prescribes the duties thereof? I say that if the Legislature fails in its duty in the matter of prescribing the duties of the State Treasurer, that it will not be the fault of this convention that it does so. I say, sir, that this is a matter which should be left to the future Legislatures of this State: That we ought not to infringe upon their rights in this matter; that we ought not to attempt in this constitution to do more than we are called upon to do. I believe that the constitution provides in some place that there shall be elected a State Treasurer whose duties shall be such as are prescribed by law. I believe that it provides that his salary shall be a certain amount. That might well have been left to the Legislature. We should always consider that our enactments in this constitution are something that are to be permanent, something that will be everlasting, something that is not to be lightly changed, and only at a great expense to the people of the future State.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I cannot understand myself what good is to be accomplished by this section even if you pass it. The object apparently is to prevent or to put the Treasurer out of office and to give the Governor the power to suspend him after he has misappropriated money. Now, I do not see that we are to be benefited; after he has misappropriated the money he would be very apt to have skipped out. It is too late then to suspend him from office. Surely, after the harm has been done there is not much need for the Governor suspending him from office. I agree with the gentleman who has last spoken, in every State the Legislature provides that the Treasurer must give bonds for the money, and if he misappropriates this money, the bondsmen are there. There must be some person in addition to the Treasurer liable to the State for the money which he handles, and surely I cannot see that any advantage is to come to the people by legislating in regard to it. So for that reason I am opposed to the passage of this section.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: In regard to the difference what is proper in the constitution and what ought to be left to the Legislature, it seems to me that this is a constitutional question. The constitution says that the Treasurer shall be elected by the people for four years. I do not think that the Legislature can pass a law authorizing the Governor to displace him until his time was out, unless the constitution gave him special authority to do so; and it seems to me that if it is proper to make a provision at all that the constitution is the only place where it can be made; that the Legislature can have no authority to say that an officer elected for four years by the people can be displaced for any cause by the Legislature unless the constitution authorizes it especially.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I was about to say that, but my friend has said it so much better. I am trying to keep a clear distinction between legislation and constitutional principles, because we are here for the purpose of granting and restricting the powers of the Legislature. Now I offered my amendment providing that the Legislature may pass a law by which the Governor, upon the recommendation of this Board of Examiners, in case he thinks the State moneys are in danger, may suspend this Treasurer temporarily until the Courts, or some one else, straighten the matter up. It seems to me that is clearly a constitutional enactment.

Mr. Clarke, of Silver Bow: I believe in throwing all the safeguard possible around the custody of public funds. Now it is stated by a gentleman here that the State is protected through the bonds that are required. You all well know, gentlemen and Mr. Chairman, that the men who go upon or endorse a bond, or give bonds for these officials get no remuneration from it whatever. The State requires of an official that he shall give ample bonds to protect the State against loss. Now what will this man do—generally a poor man—who is unable to secure any one to go upon his bond to guarantee the State? It is purely a question of friendship as a rule. Now I believe in placing such safeguards round the custody of the public funds as that the State shall not only be protected but that that protection shall extend to these men who voluntarily go upon the bonds of public officials. It is well known that purloining of money begins sometimes in a very small way; a man may get into bad habits; he frequents the gambling table with the hope of winning; his loss may be small in the beginning but it goes on increasing and he puts his hand into the public till to meet his temporary embarrassment; reverses still follow, and he goes on until he absorbs all the funds in his hands, and then is liable to emigrate to Canada. But in the meantime, before he has proceeded very far in the embezzlement of money his acts may be discovered and there may be time to protect the funds of the State and protect these men who have made themselves liable upon his bonds. Hence I am in favor of the provision. It is a provision that is not going to tread upon any honest man's toes, and I am in favor of placing such safeguards around our public funds, even if it may partake in some measure of legislation, as shall effect this purpose in every way. Hence I am in favor of leaving this provision just as it stands.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: It seems to me that the remarks of my friend from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) lend more to the protection of the security than of the State.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: That is proper.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Now, if a man is elected by the people to take charge of the public funds, of course there is adequate provision to compel him to give security. If he cannot give the security required by law he cannot fill the office, that is very certain; but to incorporate into this constitution a provision that my friend, Mr. Clark, and Marcus Daly and Mr. Sam Hauser and half dozen others of the wealthiest men of this Territory shall be protected as the sureties of the Territorial or State Treasurer, is something I do not believe in; nor do I believe in putting the Territorial Treasurer, or rather the State Treasurer, in the hands of the Governor, any more than I believe in putting the Governor in the hands of the State Treasurer. It is possible that we may elect a State Treasurer who is dishonest and who may get away with twenty thousand or thirty thousand of our money; but if the law is enforced he is required to execute a bond; the state funds are safe, and I do not think there is any necessity of incorporating that clause in the constitution. Again, there are no persons in the world who look out so closely and see that this man does not get into bad habits, does not get to drinking and carousing, as his bondsmen; they look after this fellow and see he doesn't go astray; and I am in favor of making the motion to this effect, that all these amendments be laid on the table or indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Just one word, Mr. Chairman, in answer to the gentleman. I am not in favor of giving any man, as I have stated this evening with regard to the one-man power principle, I am not in favor of placing it in the power of any one man to suspend another from office and disgrace him without cause, but as I understand if the amendment offered by my friend from Lewis & Clarke provides that it shall only be done by the advice of a Board of Examiners, after having been authorized by the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Richards, of Silver Bow: It was far from my thought to provoke all this discussion when I raised the inquiry a moment ago when the Chair was about to put the motion. But I believe that the principle underlying or embodied in this amendment is a good one, and I believe it is the province of this constitutional convention to embody it or engraft it, if you please, in this proposition now under consideration. But I raised the point before, and I raise it again, if it be important why not equally important to throw safeguards around some of these other officers? And I want to ask another pertinent question here. Who constitute this board of Public Examiners?

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: The Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney General.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I want to reply to the inquiry in relation to why the same safeguards are not thrown around other officers. It is for the reason that the other officers do not handle the state funds. We want to throw safeguards around the state funds. It is a very important reason.

Mr. Richards, of Silver Bow: Since this has taken the form of catechizing each other, I beg to ask what are the duties of the state officers?

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Oh, well, the question hardly pertains to that. All the officers may be derelict in their duties, but they cannot all get away with the money of the state.

Mr. Richards, of Silver Bow: I hardly know, but it does seem to me that we will get ourselves into a snarl here unless we are careful.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the section offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield). The Clerk will read the question again for information.

The Clerk read same.

The Chairman: There is another amendment upon the same subject to be added to the last. The Clerk will read that also.

The Clerk read as follows: The Legislature may provide for the temporary suspension of the State Treasurer by the Governor when the Board of Examiners deem such action necessary for the protection of the moneys of the state.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the new section offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield).

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now recurs to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) to be added to section 19.

The Chair put the question.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, called for a division.

A division being had the amendment was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the committee do now rise and report.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: Excuse me for one moment. I want to offer another section.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Choteau offers an additional section to be known as section No. 20.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 20. The Governor shall nominate and by and with the consent of the senate appoint a state examiner whose duty shall be to examine the accounts of State Treasurers, Supreme Court Clerks, District Court Clerks and all County Treasurers and such other duties as may be provided by the Legislature. He shall quarterly, as due, during his continuance in office, receive for his services thirty-five hundred dollars per annum and may receive such mileage, in attending to his official duties, as may be prescribed by law.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to offer an amendment to that, "until otherwise provided by law."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I think that part of it regarding the salary and duties of the examiner ought to be prescribed by the Legislature and not by the convention. I think it had better not go in here at all.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I offer an amendment "that the Legislature may provide."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: That would properly come within the legislative provision. I am in favor of a state examiner, but I think where it ought to go in the constitution is in the legislative section. "The Legislature may provide for a state examiner, etc." I do not think it belongs to the executive side.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I simply wanted to prescribe his duties.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: My friend can prescribe the duties when it comes up in regular order under the head of legislative departments; I will help him to sustain it then.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I am in favor of the principle, Mr. Chairman, as expressed by the gentleman, but I believe it ought to go under the head of legislative departments.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: If that seems to be the sense of the convention, I will withdraw for the present and allow it to go in under the head of legislative departments.

The Chairman: The section is withdrawn.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I now move that the committee do now rise.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would move, Mr. Chairman, that when the committee rise we report this proposition that we have been considering, General File No. 4, Proposition No. 10, back with the recommendation that it do pass.

Motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards), and the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The question now is on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) that the committee do now arise.

The Chair put the question and the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

The President in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole made his report.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that certain amendments have been considered and adopted, with the recommendation that File No. 4 be now passed as amended. If there be no objection this report will be received and acted upon and the Clerk will proceed to read the amendments.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole, to whom was referred Proposition No. 10, General File No. 4, on executive departments, beg leave to report the same back to the convention with the following amendments which the committee recommend be adopted. Your committee would state that in the amendments offered, reference to numbers of lines and sections is to such as appear on the printed bills.

Proposition No. 10, General File No. 4, Section 1. Amend second line by inserting "Attorney General" after "Secretary of State."

Section 2, line 4, strike out "no."

Amend Section 4, Proposition No. 10, by inserting at the beginning thereof the following, "until otherwise provided by law."

The President: We will pass upon the amendment to Section 1 first.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move that we change the phrasing of that so that it shall read, "The Governor, Secretary of State, State Auditor, Attorney General and Superintendent of Public Instruction until otherwise provided by law."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: The motion was to put it in at the beginning of the section.

The Chair put the motion on the amendment to Section 1 and a vote being had the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 2, line 4, strike out "no."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and a vote being had the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 4, Proposition No. 10, by inserting at the beginning thereof the following, "until otherwise provided by law."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that instead of placing those words at the beginning that they shall come in after the words "Superintendent of Public Instruction."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis).

A division was called for and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that in the third line of Section 4 the word "five" be stricken out and the word "four" put in its place.

The President: If the gentleman will wait a moment the convention will act upon any amendments that were had in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 4, line 14, strike out "regent of the State University" and insert "members of the State Board of Education."

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: There is another amendment to that section "and the salary of no official shall be increased during his term of office."

The Chair put the question on the amendment to insert "members of the State Board of Education" in place of "regents of the State University," and a vote being had the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: In line 10, add after the word "office" the words "and the salary of no official shall be increased during his term of office."

Mr. Loud, of Custer, moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Loud) and a vote being had the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Line 12, Section 10, strike out "either" and insert "anyone."

Mr. Buford, of Madison, moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Buford) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Line 15, Section 4, strike out all of proviso.

The President: The amendment strikes out all after the word "office" in line 15. What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke, moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Chessman) and the same was declared carried.

The President: These are all of the amendments proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out the word "five" in line three of Section 4 and insert the word "four."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) and the same was declared lost by a vote of 27 in the affirmative to 27 in the negative.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to amend by inserting "twenty-five hundred" instead of "four thousand."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I move an amendment if it is in order.

The President: There are two amendments pending.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I think in the first place that the office of Governor is more of an ornament than anything else. The duties are less than that of any other officer mentioned in this section, and the compensation should be in accordance with the duties performed. The Secretary of State, State Auditor, State Treasurer, or Superintendent of Public Instruction, either one of them, do a great deal more work—two or three times more work, and some of them ten times more work—than the Legislative Assembly will ever impose upon the Governor. The Governor need not remain at the Capitol but during periods when official duties are to be performed. The routine duties of his office can be performed by his private secretary, and I believe that the Governor of the new state of Montana for the present should receive but a nominal salary. When the time comes when we can afford to pay a Governor a bigger salary the Legislature can so provide; but for the present the Governor of our state should not receive more than twenty-five hundred dollars. Gentlemen may say that this is not in accordance with the honor of the office, but I say that the amount of compensation should be in accordance with the duties performed. The man who will hereafter be elected by the people of this great state as Governor will be a man who can afford to fill the position for that sum of money and who will lose nothing by it; and so far as the pay is concerned he can well afford to fill it for that sum as he can for twice or three times that sum. So that we should come down to a straight business proposition and only pay him for the service that he does. There should be no ornament placed around it, and there should be no money paid for the honor of the position. It is almost a sinecure anyhow, and you can wipe it out of existence and not do the state any harm. It is like a great many other things that come down to us from the misty past. We have got it and we will hold on to it but we should only pay for the services that are done.

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: I think the gist of the gentleman's argument was, in the remark he made, that those who are elected to the office of Governor of the state of Montana can as well afford to perform the duties for the sum he mentions as for any other sum. That simply means that nobody but a rich man shall be elected Governor of the state of Montana, and I do not believe that this convention or the people of this Territory want to put a clause in our constitution or want to fix the compensation of this office at such a sum as that it shall make the office necessarily go to some rich man—go to some man to whom, as the gentleman says, it shall not matter to him whether the salary is twenty-five hundred or any other sum. The office of the Governor of the state is the office of the greatest dignity. The Governor represents the state. He ought to be able to entertain and show courtesies to those who come to visit our state and our state capitol. Besides the duties performed by a territorial governor, we, by this constitution, impose very many other duties upon him. It seemed to be the sense of the committee this afternoon that the matter should be left as it is, and while I am willing that the gentleman should move an aye and nay vote upon this, I think it ought to be a fair record and while all the members are present. I believe that is only justice and courtesy. I think that the salary as fixed by the committee which drafted the proposition and as fixed by the Committee of the Whole is about right.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I agree with my friend from Lewis & Clarke County, as I usually do, except that he has not gone far enough. Now, I do not believe that the salary should be fixed so low that none but a rich man can occupy the position. That it is a good deal of a sinecure I will admit, but I will admit that it is a stepping stone to something higher, for instance, to the Senate of the United States or to some other high office, and I think the Governor should have sufficient salary here in the state to enable him to live as a gentleman; to provide all the necessaries for the entertainment of the members of the Legislature as well as the foreign ambassadors. It is very certain that no man can run the office of Governor and take care of his own interests—especially his own political interests—unless he has a salary of ten thousand, and when the time comes, I shall make a motion to that effect.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I am sure that I made myself understood this afternoon when this matter was up for consideration in the Committee of the Whole, but I want to emphasize if I can what Major Maginnis has said, that inasmuch as this matter was decided in the Committee of the Whole it should stand as it is, at least until there is a larger attendance of members. Looking around and seeing the vacant chairs tonight, it seems to me that we are scarcely doing courtesy to the absent members. Of course, you will say that the members ought to be here. I grant that, but it may not have been understood that this matter was to come up for final consideration tonight. Now, touching the remark that my friend from Cascade made, if I understand him correctly, he made the argument or advanced the idea that the private secretary of the Governor could discharge the duties of the office, and that it was not really necessary for the Governor to reside at the capitol. I think it is provided somewhere in this proposition that the Governor when elected to his office must reside at the capital of the state. All of these officers must reside at the capital except the Lieutenant-Governor—the Governor must live at the capital, he must necessarily give up his home wherever he may be. He will be called upon and ought to be able, as Major Maginnis has said, to entertain in a manner befitting his position. I will repeat that he will have to entertain and I believe that he should be in a position to entertain; and I want to say again, as I said this afternoon, that I think the people of Montana are not ready to say that we want any schedule of salaries of these officers to fit only the wealthy men of the state. I want to feel and I do feel in this matter as in every other matter that comes up here for final settlement that we are adopting the constitution here which we shall offer to the people for their support and which we shall ask them to affirm by their vote, which affirmation shall be an endorsement of what we have done here; and I take the broad view, the broad ground that we want in a schedule of salaries of all state officers to see that they are open to every ambitious man whether he be a poor man or a rich man, if he is competent to discharge those duties.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren), and a division being called for, the motion prevailed by a vote of twenty-eight in the affirmative to twenty-six in the negative.

The convention stood adjourned until Tuesday, July 30th, 1889, at 10 o'clock A. M.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

Tuesday, July 30th, 1889. Morning Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 o'clock A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Mr. Gaylord and Mr. Knippenberg desire to be excused today. If there be no objection these gentlemen will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

The President: The convention had under consideration the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole on Proposition No. 10 which business is now before the convention.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I believe that the ayes and nays were ordered on the amendment of Mr. Collins of Cascade to the amendment of Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke when the convention adjourned.

The President: The Clerk will read the amendments as proposed in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The amendments of the committee on the section were adopted and additional amendments were under consideration.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to amend Section 4, line three—interrupted.

The President: The Chair would suggest that the rule is to take up all the amendments reported back by the Committee of the Whole first, and then we can proceed to the consideration of new matters.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I think, Mr. President, the amendments of the Committee of the Whole were all adopted.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move that we dispense with the reading of the adopted sections.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins), and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 8, as amended by the Committee of the Whole.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning the amendment?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move its adoption.

The motion was seconded.

The President put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis), and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 10, line four, by striking out one of the words "he."

The President: If there be no objection, this amendment will be considered adopted.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 11 by striking out the word "present" and insert "elected to that house."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: That amendment was lost.

The President: Yes, that was the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Winston) which was lost.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend line nine by striking out "noes" and inserting "nays."

Thus being merely a correction in the phraseology, if there is no objection it will be adopted.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 19 by adding the following words "the Legislature may provide for the temporary suspension of the State Treasurer by the Governor when the Board of Examiners deem such action necessary for the protection of the moneys of the state."

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: That comprises all of the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move, Mr. President, that on line fourteen of Section 11 the word "fifteen" be stricken out and the word "ten" be inserted, so that it shall read "no bill shall become a law after ten days after the adjournment of the Legislature."

The President: I think it is proper to take this proposition up section by section so that the amendments shall come in their regular order. We will consider the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) when we reach that section. Are there any amendments to Section one?

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I move an amendment to Section 1.

The amendment was sent to the Clerk's desk.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall) offers an amendment to Section 1 as follows: Strike out the following words in lines five and six of the first section "in accordance with the act of Congress known as the 'Enabling Act' approved February 22nd, 1889," and insert the words "when the state shall be admitted into the Union."

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: It means the same thing but is shorter and more concise.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: The section as amended would read "that the first election shall begin when the state is admitted into the Union."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall) and the same was declared carried.

*Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to amend line three by striking out the word "four" and inserting the word "two," so that the term of office shall be two years instead of four.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I do not want to make a talk on the matter, but I wish that my views shall be placed on record. I am in favor of a short term of office for every office in the state, including the office of Governor. If it could be one year it would suit me better than two.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and a division being called for the motion was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 1, the Clerk read Sections 2, 3 and 4.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move to strike out the word "five" in line three of Section 4 and insert the word "four."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield) offers to amend the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) by inserting instead of four thousand the words "thirty-five hundred."

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger), that the word "five" be stricken out and the word "four" be inserted in lieu thereof.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be called. The vote is on the larger amount first.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Do I understand that we vote on the larger amount when an amendment is offered? As I understood the rule it was only when a blank was to be filled that it required the larger amount to be put first.

The President: We seem to have been following that rule. I think the opinion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) is correct, according to Jefferson's Manual; so that being the case we will withhold the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) and vote upon Mr. Hershfield's amendment, which is to strike out "four thousand" and insert in lieu thereof "thirty-five hundred."

The Clerk called the roll and the vote stood as follows: Ayes—Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Gillette, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes., Kanouse, McAdow, Myers, Parberry, Robinson—16.

Nays—Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, Mitchell, Muth, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—51.

Absent—Brazleton, Bullard, Cauby, Eaton, Gaylord, Knippenberg, Middleton, Webster—8.

The Chair declared the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Hershfield) lost.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Mayger).

Mr. Joy, of Park, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be called.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Breen, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Hartman, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Loud, Luce, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Myers, Parberry, Robinson, Rotwitt, Watson—33.

Nays—Aiken, Beckford, Browne, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Cardwell, Conrad, Gillette, Graves, Hammond, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Magnus, Marrion, Mitchell, Muth, Ramsdell, Reek, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—34.

Absent—Brazleton, Bullard, Cauby, Eaton, Gaylord, Knippenberg, Middleton, Webster—8.

The President declared the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Mayger) lost.

Mr. Browne, of Choteau, sent up an amendment.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I wish to renew the motion which I made in Committee of the Whole by inserting after the first part of Section 4 the words "until otherwise provided by law."

Mr. Magnus, of Lewis & Clarke: I think that was adopted.

The President: The gentleman from Choteau County (Mr. Browne) offers to amend Section 4 as follows: Lines 4, 5 and 6, "Secretary of State, thirty-five hundred dollars per annum." That is in lieu of three thousand dollars; "Attorney General thirty-five hundred dollars; State Treasurer, thirty-five hundred dollars; State Auditor, thirty-five hundred dollars per annum." The question will be divided. The motion is on the first proposition to amend line four by inserting thirty-five hundred instead of "three thousand." Is there a second to the motion?

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Choteau (Mr. Browne) and the same was declared lost.

The Chair stated the remainder of the motion of the gentleman from Choteau (Mr. Browne) but there being no seconds to the same the said propositions were not put before the convention.

Mr. Hammond, of Jefferson: I move to strike out "two thousand" in line six of Section 4 after the words "Superintendent of Public Instruction" and insert "three thousand."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: In connection with this amendment, I would like to say a word. Yesterday the same amendment was offered, and at that time the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson) took occasion to make some remarks in connection with this matter, stating that the office was one that amounted to but very little and that the officer would have but very little to do. It strikes me, taking the history of the Territory, that the Superintendent of Public Instruction has had equally as much to do as the Attorney General of the Territory, and has come just as near making his salary; and I think he will under our state government come as near making his salary as the Attorney General. It is a very important position and a position that will probably earn three thousand dollars. I am certainly in favor of the amendment. It strikes me in making a distinction in these offices that instead of grading down educational matters that we should rather grade them up.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I want to add to what has already been said another consideration. We have already stricken out the latter part of this section providing that the Legislative Assembly might give to these officers certain mileage. Now, if the Superintendent of Public Instruction discharges his duties as it will be expected of him to do he certainly cannot do it on a salary of twenty-five hundred dollars and pay traveling expenses. So I believe that the amendment should prevail. A salary of three thousand is certainly little enough considering the expenses incident to the office and the high order of ability required to fill that office acceptably to the people.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Jefferson County (Mr. Hammond) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of thirty-two in the affirmative to thirty-four in the negative.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move that the salary of the Attorney General be placed at twenty-five hundred dollars.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) and the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-eight in the affirmative to thirty-six in the negative.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I desire to offer an amendment to this section to read exactly as the printed proviso reads, except to strike out certain words. It will read this way, "Provided, however, the Legislative Assembly may provide for the payment of mileage to the Superintendent of Public Instruction while traveling in the performance of his public duties."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the said question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of thirty-one in the affirmative to thirty-four in the negative.

There being no further amendments to Section 4, the Clerk read Sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: If in order, I would like to renew my motion to amend Section 11, line 14, by striking out the word "fifteen" and inserting the word "ten," so as to make it read "no bill shall become a law at the time of the adjournment of the Legislature unless approved by the Governor within ten days after the adjournment."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: We took this from the new constitution of the state of New York which provides thirty days. The committee thought the volume of business in our Territory would not be more than half as large.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I think the Governor would have plenty of time. He has nothing particular to do.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clark: I do not think that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer County ought to prevail, and I think that if the gentleman himself will think of the matter and take it under due consideration he will not wish it adopted.

The President: The Chair would state that the question is not before the House.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I just want to say that there are very many matters that accumulate on the desk of the executive of a new state and certainly the time will be too short to give the matters due and proper consideration. I hardly think that my friend from Custer will insist upon that amendment. I think that fifteen days is short enough.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, one of the great troubles and difficulties that the people of Montana Territory, and especially of Custer County and the lower counties here, has been in not getting our laws in time to understand what they are before the next Legislature meets and repeals them and enacts others; and it seems to me that the executive, if he happens to be a business man or a banker or a clergyman, can dispense with some of his other business and examine the statutes, and ten days is ample time for the Governor to look over the entire legislation of this Territory and send the laws out to us. It is a very great inconvenience to parties who are subject to the operation of the law to be in doubt as to what the law is, and I think ten days is sufficient time for the Governor to examine all the laws and put his signature to them.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I cannot appreciate the infinitesimal advantage which the gentleman seems to think will accrue under his amendment. It seems to me that we will economize in time by standing by the report of the committee, and there is no material advantage to be obtained by this amendment.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge, sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers the following amendment: Amend Section 19, line five, by inserting after the word "law" the following words "they shall count the moneys and securities in the state treasury at least once every month."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: My reason for offering that was just this, that there we have added a provision providing that the Governor may remove the Treasurer. I think it is infinitely better to try to keep the money there than it is to remove the man after the money has been taken away.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill) and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the final passage of the file.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and the same was declared carried.

Proposition No. 10, General File No. 4, was then placed upon its final passage.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward, Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Field, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marmon, Marshall, Mayger, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rotwill, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—66.

Nays—None.

Absent—Brazleton, Bullard, Cauby, Eaton, Gaylord, Knippenberg, McAdow, Middleton, Webster—9.

The Chair announced the vote.

Proposition No. 10, General File No. 4, as amended, was declared adopted as a part of the constitution of the state of Montana.

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I would like to enquire if Proposition No. 14 comes up under the head of unfinished business?

The President: That is before the convention under the head of unfinished business, having been reported back by the Committee of the Whole. The Clerk will read the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out all of Section 2 and insert the following:

Section 2. Every male person of the age of twenty-one years or over, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all general elections; first, he shall be a citizen of the United States; second, he shall have resided in the state one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote, and in the county, town or precinct such time as may be prescribed by law; provided first that no person convicted of a felony shall have a right to vote unless he has been pardoned by the proper pardoning power; provided, second, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive any person of the right to vote who has such right at the time of the adoption of this constitution; provided that after the expiration of five years from the time of the adoption of this constitution no persons except citizens shall have the right to vote.

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: In view of the fact that there are some members of this convention that I am sure want to go on record when this proposition comes up for final passage, and that they may have an opportunity so to do, I move that it be made a special order for this afternoon at three o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being had the same was declared lost.

The President: The gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) moves the following amendment in Section 2, line one, after the word "over" the following words, "who can read and write the English language."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would like to have the ayes and nays called on that amendment.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to have the amendment read.

The Clerk read the amendment.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Burns, A. J.; Breen, Chessman, Hartman, Joy, Loud, Reek, Sargent, Warren, Witter—10.

Nays—Aiken, Breckford, Browne, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, E.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayer, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Robinson, Rotwitt, Rickards, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. K.; Toole, J. R.; Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—56.

Absent—Brazleton, Bullard, Cauby, Eaton, Gaylord, Knippenberg, McAdow, Middleton, Webster—9.

The Chair announced the vote and the amendment of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) was declared lost.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to offer the following amendment. In the second line of Section 2 strike out "at all general elections" and insert "for all officers that now are or hereafter may be elective by the people, and upon all questions that may be submitted to a vote of the people." I will do that for this reason. The words "general elections" do not cover the ground. There are simply voters at all general elections; there may be special elections and constitutional amendments submitted by the people which may not be provided for by this language.

The President: This is an amendment to the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend that by simply striking out the word "general" so that it shall read "shall be entitled to vote at all elections."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: The motion which I offered was to cover all questions that were submitted to the people. It is doubtful whether that would be regarded as an election in the general acceptance of the term. "All officers who are elected and all propositions submitted." This is the language used in constitutions where this question has been fully considered, and these words have been decided to cover the ground entirely.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I am a little afraid that in striking out "all general elections" that it might preclude the Legislative Assembly from providing for any question that should go before a municipal corporation—that all persons that are declared electors here might still be or rather would be electors in any municipal corporation, because I doubt if the Legislature of Montana Territory could organize a government that would make the elective franchise any less than is provided in the constitution. While I think the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) would still leave it open to the Legislature to say, upon certain questions in municipal corporations, that they might prescribe what the qualifications of an elector should be. I am not sure but that to strike out "general elections" is to strike out "all elections," and that would preclude the Legislature from curtailing the right of suffrage in any corporation. I would like to hear from some of the rest of the members.

The President: The Chair would state that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) will have to be deferred until the consideration of the amendment offered by Governor Carpenter, as that would be the third amendment.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: It strikes me that the language used in the section as printed is sufficient for the reason that I do not believe that the constitution should go to the extent of making qualifications for electors at special elections, and for the reason further that the Legislature which provides for special elections always provides for the qualification of the voters at all elections, and so far as municipal matters are concerned the qualifications of the voters at such elections are the creatures of statute or legislative enactment. So that I believe in all special elections the Legislature would have the power and authority to fix the qualifications of the voters, and that the constitution should only be confined to general elections.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I would simply say that that language does not and has never been construed to prevent the submission of particular questions to a particular class in municipal elections. A vote of the people and a vote of the taxpayers are two different things. It does not prevent any questions being submitted to them.

The Chair put the said question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Governor Carpenter) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-one in the affirmative to twenty-seven in the negative.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Major Maginnis.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: Is another amendment in order?

The President: Not at the present time.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I hope for the reason that the other amendment was lost that this will be lost also. The Legislative Assembly should have something to say in the matter of special elections and in the matter of municipal elections. The municipal authorities themselves should have something to say in the matter, and if you strike that word "general" out you tie the Legislature hand and foot and the municipal authorities hand and foot. So that I believe that the section as it now reads, so far as this particular matter is concerned, is the best.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I am in favor of the proposition of the gentleman because I am opposed to the Legislature in any election fixing the qualifications of voters other than as they are fixed in this constitution. I am opposed to giving the Legislature the power to empower a municipal authority to fix the qualifications of its voters, or to fix the qualifications themselves. I am opposed to leaving it to the Legislature or the municipality to restrict the right of a citizen of the municipality upon questions that may come up. Although a man might not be a property holder today, he expects to be probably if he is a citizen, and probably will be. He may not be today but he may be tomorrow. I am in favor of the proposition of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark, Major Maginnis.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: When the proposition was made to build the Croton Aqueduct into the city of New York years ago all the taxpayers of that city were opposed to it, and that great enterprise was carried through by the vote of the people generally; and that is what built up the city of New York; and I believe with my friend from Missoula (Mr. Marshall) that it is wiser to leave these matters to the whole people. They may make a mistake once in a while but generally they will be correct. Everybody knows more than anybody, and the allseeing eye is the universal eye, and I am in favor of leaving all questions to the masses of the people.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I offer an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula offers the following amendment: Add to the end of Section 2 the following words "Provided further the Legislature shall have power to confer upon women the rights and privileges of electors to vote in any or all elections."

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman stated the question.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to make the vote upon this amendment a special order for this afternoon at three o'clock, and I will make that motion. There are three or four members of the convention absent who will vote for this proposition, I believe, and I think the convention should allow those persons to be present to vote upon it. They are absent on leave and will be back this afternoon.

The motion of the gentleman from Cascade was seconded.

The Chair put the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) that the consideration of the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) be postponed until three o'clock P. M. and a division being had the same was declared lost.

The President: The question is now upon the motion offered by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford.

The Clerk reread the said amendment.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I do not propose to take up but a moment or two of our valuable time on the consideration of this amendment. I for one hope that we will not again enter into a prolonged discussion on the merits of the proposition as to whether the rights of suffrage shall be extended to women. The amendment offered by my friend, Mr. Bickford from Missoula, is a very plain one. The proposition is a very plain one. It is simply this, shall the legislature have the same power to grant to women the right to vote that they have had ever since we have been a territory under the Organic Act. When the matter was up for consideration before I made this statement, and I make it again, that the legislature having had that power has never abused it; they have never attempted to force, I believe, this question on the people, and I predict that they never will until it has become an open issue and a majority of the State legislature has been elected on that issue. Now the question has been asked me why are you not willing to submit this to a vote of the people? I answer very briefly, simply for the reason that if I read history aright, if I read the signs of the times aright, every proposition that has for its object the elevation of society, the uplifting of man, always has arrayed against that movement the saloon element, and the vicious element of every state and of every community, and I predict that if this could be submitted to our people, our experience would not be unlike that of the experience of other states on this or any other question of a like character. I am satisfied in my own mind that if this question should be submitted, that there is not a saloon within the bounds of Montana but that would be arrayed against it, and for that reason I am not willing to leave it solely in the hands of the people. I believe, Mr. President, that it is safe to leave this right where this amendment proposes to leave it, in the hands of the legislature, and believing as I do that no state legislature will ever abuse that trust, will never force this issue upon the people until the people force it upon themselves—if I may use that expression,—I am content to vote for the amendment and hope it will prevail.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I move the previous question.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I would like to have a word to say. I was absent the other day when this discussion was up.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I believe I was recognized before the demand for the previous question was made, and I think I have a right to be heard.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, has the floor.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I desire to say in support of that the gentleman from Silver Bow has said, that I think this question should be left with the legislature. I do not believe that this constitutional convention is so wise as to look into the future and to mould the course of legislation through all coming time and I do not believe that any fair minded man here, any man who is in favor of human progress, who is in favor of moral development, and moral culture, in favor of elevating the condition of our fellow men, will undertake to force the action of future legislation and make it impossible for them to ever provide that a female shall vote. I know full well that there are men who when they get an advantage, no matter how unholy it may be, for fear that the benign influences of christianity or civilization may dispel everything that they rely upon for their barbarity, cling to that advantage regardless of costs or consequences. I for one am not of that class and I do not believe that it is wise for men to get up, because they may have the numerical strength to-day to close as it were the gates of mercy against the appeals of mankind. It shows a disposition that is not commendable; it shows a species of character that is not to be admired, and it portends evil instead of good to the future. I think it well to leave to the people this momentous question without undertaking to weight it down so that it can never rise again. I believe in leaving the matter just as the gentleman from Silver Bow said, to future legislatures, relying upon the change of circumstances the surroundings and the intelligence of those who are to come after us to mould this thing without putting the seal and signet of death upon it, for that is just what this means.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: This matter has been thoroughly discussed in Committee of the Whole. As was remarked the other day, I have studied this question for a good many years, and I am rather favorable to the proposition of woman suffrage; but I am a conservative man and perhaps somewhat of a foggy. Perhaps I am not up with the times, but I do not want to see anything put in this constitution that is liable to endanger it. I believe sincerely that if this provision goes in you will endanger the adoption of the constitution. Therefore, Mr. President, I have prepared a proposition which I desire to submit at the proper time, and for the information of the convention I will read it. "Resolved that the Committee on Ordinance is hereby directed to incorporate as a part of the article on ordinance the following provision. There is hereby submitted to the qualified electors, the following as a separate provision, and if it receives a majority of all the votes cast at the election for the adoption of this constitution, then such provision shall form and constitute a part of this constitution. The form of the vote of those who may vote for such provision shall be "For woman suffrage"; the form of the vote of those who may vote against such provision shall be "Against woman suffrage". This is the article. "Article—Woman Suffrage. Section 1. The legislative assembly shall have the power to grant to all female citizens of the State over the age of twenty-one years the right to vote at all elections". If it be the sense of the people of Montana that woman shall take her part at the polls with the men, they can vote upon this proposition and adopt it. Now, Mr. President, I have not the want of confidence in the solid people of Montana even taking in the saloon element, that the honorable gentleman from Silver Bow has. Sometimes the people make mistakes, but if they do make mistakes, they, after awhile, right themselves. If we submit this proposition separately it can be voted upon in that way, and if it receives a majority of all the votes cast, then it forms a part of the constitution. And, Mr. President and gentlemen of this convention, this is a very common proceeding. In most of the States propositions that are in doubt have been submitted so as not to endanger the great body of the work of the convention. I hope that we are not here to do vain things. I do not know that I would be entitled to my pay, as small as it is, if I allowed my own conscience and my own sentiments and my ideas of right to say, you have gone there you have kept your mouth closed, and been silent upon those things that you have allowed to be done. Therefore the only and serious objection I have to this matter is that it might imperil the adoption of this constitution. I know that the Enabling Act provides that if the constitution we shall vote upon shall be voted down this convention shall be called together again. I do not believe that any such event will happen, because I am satisfied from the deliberation, from the care, from the industry, from the patriotism that you see demonstrated in this convention every day that the people will approve it. Now if these gentlemen who are so anxious about this thing will submit it separately we can take the sense of the people; and, Mr. President, allow me to say this: there is, in favor of this proposition for woman suffrage, a very considerable following, and it is a very respectable one. It includes the very best minds of the men and women in the Territory of Montana. I laid down the other day my objections to this proposition. I am willing and would vote for, and I say it in all sincerity and honesty, I would vote for the right of the women, of my wife, to go to the polls with me or go by herself and cast her vote as she pleases, for I will say as I said the other day, that I believe that she would be nearer right in the majority of instances than I would, but I do object, and for that reason I would vote against this proposition that she should be liable to all these duties that men have to perform. As was well said the other day by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Major Magnus, this is a government of force. We should not take too many steps in advance. I am very much inclined to fall back upon the proposition that our fathers laid down over one hundred years ago in the adoption of the constitution of the United States, but, Mr. President, at the proper time and when it is germane to the subject, I desire to offer this vote for it as a separate proposition to be submitted to the electors of Montana.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I move the previous question.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow has the floor.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I will withdraw my motion to hear the gentleman from Silver Bow, as I believe he has not had his say.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I was away on professional business the other day when this matter was discussed in Committee of the Whole. In regard to the condition of women and the estimate in which women are held, mankind has made a wonderful progress since the dawn of history. The first we know of women they were slaves, sold and bartered in the market like animals. Jacob had to labor to purchase his wives. In later times amongst the Mohammedans woman is the slave and the plaything of man. She has no soul, no immortality is opened up for her, the black eyed cyrie is to be a solace in the heaven to come. Amongst the Greeks and the Romans the woman was under the domination of the oldest one of her clan or sect. She could not marry except as he dictated. Later in the middle ages she, her property, everything was subject to the domination of man. Who she should marry and what she should do was all under the domination of man. When she inherited property it was put in the hands of a guardian and the guardian dictated who was to be her husband; he pointed out some stalwart soldier or knight if he had much estate that was to be her lord and master. We inherited from our ancestors very much of the feudal laws. Under our system all of the personal property of the woman when she married went to the husband, and the income of all her real estate except such as was deeded to somebody in trust for her. She was under coverture, under the domination of her husband. Gradually we have been relaxing these old laws. Women originally were not considered fit to be educated, and the literature of the world was not written for woman's eyes. Even Shakespeare was written in an age when but very few women could read, and the foul allusions and the smut that has characterized that poet show the lack of woman readers. But women have become educated. They have purified the literature of the world. We have given woman more and more control of her property. In Montana Territory by this constitution we have said that the property of every woman that she has before marriage is her sole and separate property. What does that mean? That she has the right to control that property; its income is hers. She can dispose of it and do with it what she pleases. After marriage you have put in here a clause relating to community property. She has an equal right with her husband. In this country in the last thirty years educational institution after educational institution has been opened to woman. It was only thirty-five years ago when the first colleges in the United States admitted women to an equal right with men in the college course. And what has been the result? Have women been found lacking in this particular? Those women have pressed forward and taken their rank as some of the best scholars in the land, even in some of the colleges women have taken the prizes as mathematicians, and they have nowhere fallen behind; nowhere have they shown lack of capacity to take as high an educational course as their brother. It has been said that this is a government of force. I know in looking to the past, governments are governments of force. Russia today is supported by its army; Prussia is supported by her army; Ireland is only kept in subjection to England by the red coats in arms. I know those things, but the constitution of the United States was not adopted by force. Men made and proposed a constitution to the people of this country and it was adopted in peaceable election. This constitution that we establish here today will be adopted in the same manner. Already instead of the arbitrament of force between nations we have a large class of intelligent citizens in this and other countries who are seeking to establish forces which shall arbitrate questions between nations so as to do away with war; to do away with this great question of force and to submit everywhere to the question of reason, to the question of whether it is right or wrong; and I hope that the day is coming when the question of force will be done away with; when it will be said that government is not maintained by force but by the will of the people; that it is not maintained by bayonets but by the question of what is right and proper; and the people are to decide that by their voices, allowing the majority to control. While women advance in education in this country they have advanced in employments also. But a few years ago a woman was considered after she became of age only fit to sit in the parlor and wait for somebody to come and select her for a wife; but now in the cities, nearly one-half of the clerical force is composed of women, and in such large mercantile establishments as that of Marshall, Field & Co. of Chicago, something over one-half of the clerical force are women, and they bear testimony that in every business they equal their brothers in every particular and are not as dissipated and not as liable to be false to their trusts. In the field of literature women are contributing every day. They are writing as many books that are acceptable to the public as men. In the professions, in the city of Chicago three years ago there were thirty women who were regular practitioners of medicine, regular graduates of the best medical schools of the country. I remember years ago when there could not be a woman admitted into a medical school in the United States, and of those that studied medicine and were really fully qualified to practice, there was not a regular physician that would consult with one of them. I happened to meet one of those ladies, who was a physician in Chicago and I asked her how it was now, and she said that there was no trouble upon that point, that the regular physicians consulted with them the same as they did with their male brethren. In several of the cities there are women who are practicing law and practicing it acceptably; there are women who are conducting business and conducting it on business principles and have an honorable business reputation. In the fields of charity, why take in the mother church, the Catholic Church of this country, and four-fifths, if not nine-tenths, of all the charitable and educational institutions of that church are in the hands of women; I believe nine-tenths of them, of the educational and charitable institutions are in the hands of women. Take in the other churches of the country. Why, here the other day I saw one of the most conservative of religious denominations in the United States, the..... Community brethren had ordained a woman as a preacher. You have had here in Montana Territory in the last few months a woman that has been preaching most acceptably to certain congregations and there has been no cry raised by men as there used to be of old, who quote from St. Paul that women must not be allowed to speak in the church. Men and women have listened to her words. Why, in the political arena in the last campaign Anna Dickinson was employed by the Republican Central Committee of New York in the interest of the Republican party to canvass that State, and no speaker throughout the land had larger audiences to listen to her words than she had. That was in the arena of politics she appeared and not as a woman's rights lecturer. A poor girl, a street sweeper in Philadelphia, rises up and becomes the teacher of men in the world of politics. In the common school systems of the country four-fifths of the teachers are women. I know it was said here yesterday or the day before yesterday that this matter of teaching, the matter of education was a part of the nursery of the country, but the matter of education interests the churches of the land; the matter of education disturbs Bismarck, the matter of education has the consideration of the people of Spain, the matter of education is being agitated in Parliament in England and I tell you that the matter of education is something more than belongs to the nursery. It is a thing that calls for the best and the highest attention and intelligence of thinking men, and yet in this sphere women have almost monopolized that profession. They are teaching and moulding the minds of the young. Now in regard to this matter I know that there are many men in the country who oppose, abuse woman suffrage that are actuated by as knightly principles as ever actuated the Knights of old. The thing is they don't want women to be subject to the rough treatment of men. They would sooner, if it was in their power, make for them beautiful homes and place them there as queens, and they may be able to do that with their wives and their daughters and sisters, but how with the great majority? They must do something. Are they to sit still and with folded hands wait for somebody to come and say to them "will you be my wife?" Are you going to let them exercise their energies and take a part in the affairs of life, and if you are, why not in public affairs? Do they lack in sense? I cannot see that they do. I do not believe that it will make such a great difference as some men think, or that they will reform the world, I believe that perhaps they will have some influence upon public affairs as they have had upon literary affairs. There may be some tendency to purify public affairs. When men have women constituencies, they will not be boorish and rough in public affairs but will be gentlemen—That was the effect upon the literature of the country, and it may have that effect upon public affairs. But they have property, they have lives that need protection; they have liberty that needs protection; they have a right as men to pursue happiness. They have a right to that property, and the object of all government is to protect property, to protect liberty, to protect life and to protect people in the pursuit of happiness. That is the objective government, and that being the objective government why should we not allow them to participate in it? I believe that the women in the United States today upon the average are better educated than the men. There was one matter that I intended to speak of before. In my own community there are some three thousand laborers; they labor from early morning until late at night or from late at night to early morn, and I notice that the women of that community do about all of the business for those laborers. They take their checks and they collect their money; they go and buy the supplies for the family; they keep the accounts of the family; they keep the accounts of the money in the bank. Mr. President, you know that yourself, and I believe they do it as well as any man can do it in the country. Now in regard to this matter I do suppose that the people of Montana Territory have not yet advanced to that point where they are willing to say that women may take a part in public matters but the time may come; public sentiment may change upon that matter. The world is moving. Women have gone from the period when they had no souls and were slaves, to where here in Montana Territory they have a right to their own property, they have a right to half of the community property, where they have the same right to education. You have established a college in this community and they have laid the corner stone of it, and you have provided that women shall have the same right to education in that institution that the men have. When you come down to the public institutions of the country, to the college or seminary that will be established by our college fund, are you going to say that women shall not participate in that, that they shall not have the same rights there as the men? If you make them equal in all other things with men then why exclude them from this right of suffrage? As I have said let the world grow. It has grown up to this and it will grow in the future, and in my judgment the time will come when women will be entitled to this privilege all over this land; and I believe in leaving it with the legislature to say when public sentiment is ripe for that matter that they may allow them to do it; to put it in the constitution so that it will take three-fourths of the people to give them that right. Let it be so that it will be simply a majority of the people who will grant them that right. The majority should govern. I have said what I wish to say upon this. I hope that if we do not succeed today that tomorrow we will succeed upon this question. The world grows; it brightens. Religion is changed, politics have changed, and the views of men are changing; and in due time I believe they will change upon this question.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move you, sir, that we take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until two P. M.

Tuesday, July 30th, 1889.

Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at two P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The convention had under consideration the amendment offered by a gentleman for Missoula (Mr. Bickford) to Section 2 of Proposition No. 14. The question before the convention is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I expect to vote for this amendment, and perhaps will find no better time for explaining my vote than at this time. The discussion of this question is far advanced and I cannot reasonably hope that my opinion will prevail against the superior judgment of this convention, as expressed in the Committee of the Whole. I must confess that I am one of those who have not found it any easy matter to escape the arguments of those who have urged that the right of suffrage should be conferred upon women. The arguments in the main have been fair and if not convincing have certainly been most interesting and plausible, and yet, with my present information, I would not consent to the proposed enlargement of the political franchise, if I were in the legislature, much less to its establishment as on inexorable principle in the constitution. The reasons for denying it now are manifold and obvious. One reason, however, is controlling with me. We are just launching the ship of state. The primary and paramount consideration with us in admission into the Union. We have long cried and clamored for the supreme hour when we might formulate our fundamental law and be received into the family of states. The hour has arrived, and, in my judgment, it is neither wise nor expedient for us to load down our constitution with this much mooted question. Our work must be first ratified by the people before it has any binding force. We should be circumspect and discreet if we desire it to meet with popular approval. Let us leave the matter with the legislature. Later on we can discuss and provide for this emergency in the legislature, if the demand shall be urgent and circumstances shall require it. It was Edmund Burke, one of the wisest and most thoughtful men that ever lived, who said that statesmanship consisted in the science of circumstances. Circumstances may arise in the future when it will not only be policy but statesmanship to allow those who are interested in good morals, law and order to exercise the ballot; but as I have already observed, I do not think the time has yet arrived in Montana. I yield to no man in my appreciation of woman or the proper estimate of her character and influence upon the world. I am not sure that any enlargement of political privileges would be a personal benefit to woman or elevate her in the esteem of the world. She has always performed her part well. I would have her continue in the future what she has been in the past, the mother and minister of those sublime virtues, charity, hospitality and truth, around whom in poetry and in song the prayer and praise of the good shall ever entwine. (App'ause) In her life and history we see a strength and beauty of character that challenges our admiration and stimulates us to a nobler manhood. Memory will ever delight to lift the curtain of material life and view in visions of beauty, Miriam, whom as the pensive and faithful sister of Moses we can see unparaling to that famous law-giver that peculiar knowledge of the needs and wants and feelings of woman which characterize his administration. The law which entwines about the children its protecting aegis; that which secured the marriage rite and elevated that ceremonial to the dignity of a religious institution are but scant evidences of the influence of one good woman, so early placed upon perpetual record. Among them have always been found the originators, the projectors and the executors of enterprises to foster and encourage the sublime virtues everywhere extolled and admired, and yet it is fair to say that their paths have not always been "paths of peace," nor have they been free from heartless persecutions. The honorable gentleman from Silver Bow who has just taken his seat was pleased to dwell upon the memories of other days when women were circumscribed in their personal rights more than they are today. In this I take no delight nor learn a useful lesson. Let us rather turn backward to the dark sward of the past only to pluck the bright characters that lighted up the world with their resplendent lives, and hold them up before the eyes of mankind as examples of the power and influence so majestically and silently wrought by the softer sex. I know that some women are demanding the right to vote and to sit on juries. In this they are not of one accord. I fear that the acquisition of these so-called rights would not bring all the joys they fan would have. A western judge, expounding the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, who was more learned in the facts of a sad experience than in the law, once said that to "sit on a jury" was not a privilege as contemplated by that amendment, but a burden; and so it might prove concerning these coveted liberties which they so "long have sought and mourned because they found them falling far short of the splendid picture furnished by the mirage of the mind, which so intoxicates the vision of its enthusiastic victories." Possibly there may be in the denial of these demands a bit of selfishness on the part of the sterner sex, but if this be so there is also behind it a love "pure, deep and holy, like a religion." Woman has always been the shield and repose of man. In the conflict of life there must be maternalities and reciprocities; life-saving stations and harbors of repose. The cares and perplexities of the most even-tempered individual are multitudinous and multiform. There are some dreary deserts, some cloudy canopies, some mountainous regions in every life. To counterbalance and smooth over these asperities and rugged places man naturally turns to woman. It has been truly said that she is the "keystone to his arch of purity and love." The touch of her warm hand lulls the sleeping babe to rest. The glance of her beaming eye thrills the soul of manhood, and in the golden sunlight of old age she clings with undying affection to the object of her love. Pure and patient at the cradle, faithful and enduring at the cross, she is fulfilling the highest duties and obligations of life and scattering deep and broad an influence upon legislation, civilization, order and morals, which, the ballot in her hands, with its consequent association and certain demoralization could never hope to impress." Applause. In this domain no man of "gentle blood and good breeding" will ever lift a defiant finger. May her course be onward and upward and if the day shall ever come when the manhood of man shall so far depart as to make it necessary to throw upon her the onerous and responsible duties of government, may her voice and vote be as potent for good government as her shining virtue and subdued influence have been in that direction since the dawn of day. Applause. If that time shall ever come I have every confidence in her ability and integrity to perform the duty. History is not wanting in examples of courage, loyalty and endurance on her part. They have led armies, died for the liberties of their countries, suffered the tortures of battle and endured the pangs of hospital experience. Cleopatra, the lovely Egyptian queen, the Maid of Orleans, whose white banner proclaimed victory; Charlotte Corday, the peasant girl who killed a heartless tyrant, and Florence Nightingale, the charity angel of modern times, are niched in historic grandeur, and ages yet unborn will sing the glory of their proud renown. [Applause.] The memory of such as these ought to be considered a rich inheritance, a bountiful legacy. It tells what woman can do, but there should be no halting in the march of men. It is his to be brave and chivalrous; it is his to do and dare; it is his to protect and defend; it is his to provide raiment and shelter, food and fuel, for those who in their tenderness and weakness are still more powerful than man can ever expect to be, but if he fails, if he stifles his manhood and degrades the image of his Maker by his improvidence, by the voluntary impairment of his faculties and by the debauchery of his soul, who will say that woman may not be permitted to try the experiment of administering government. "From every hallowed grave where sleep the just" there comes a voice echoing through time which ought to awaken an approving response in every human breast, demanding of men the performance of the sacred duties of taking care of those who are dependent upon them in the family relation. When this obligation is appreciated and observed, then women will not be forced to the front; then and not till then will this great problem cease to be agitated. Important as this question is considered by some to be, fortified and sustained as it is by the broad principle that our government is based upon the virtue and intelligence of the people and the consent of the governed, supported and maintained as it is by clear head and generous hearts the world over, I am not quite willing to establish it in this constitution; but I never saw the time when I was unwilling to trust the people of Montana with any problem of government. I am willing that this question, with whatever it has to recommend it, shall go to the Legislature, and consequently to the people. It will then become the subject of general agitation. If it has merit it will and ought to survive; if it has not, it will and ought to perish. Having said this much upon the general proposition, I know of no reason why the Legislature composed of the representatives of the people should have its hands tied and be prohibited from future action if it shall be deemed wise and expedient to make this innovation. We are putting too many prohibitory clauses in this constitution. I have confidence in the people. Upon their wisdom our institutions are builded. When we withdraw that confidence and repose, and hedge in every possible exercise of power by a constitutional prohibition, then may begin a suppressed struggle of resistance by the people to the constituted authorities which may grow in volume and strength until the combined forces of the state cannot control its mighty efforts for freedom. In deference to this principle and no other I vote for this amendment. It does not concern me at this time whether woman suffrage is right or wrong. It is purely a matter of principle. In conclusion, I hope I may be able to quote a few sentences from a recent address of a distinguished citizen of the south who, while he was speaking upon a different subject, said some things which made a great impression upon me. While I was wondering what possible danger women could be to the republic and why these gloomy forebodings of the future, so graphically pictured by some gentleman upon this floor, I came across that address. As near as I can recall it, he said: "The struggle for human rights never goes backward among English-speaking peoples. Our brothers across the sea have fought from despotism to liberty, and in the wisdom of local self-government have planted colonies around the world. This very day, Mr. Gladstone, the wisest man that has lived since your Jefferson died—with the light of another world beating in his face until he seems to have caught the wisdom of the Infinite, and towers half human and half divine from his eminence—this man, turning away from the traditions of his life begs his countrymen to strip the crown of its last usurped authority and lodge it with the people, where it belongs. The trend of the times is with us. The world moves steadily from gloom to brightness. And bending down humbly as Elisha did, and praying that my eyes shall be made to see, I catch a vision of this republic—its mighty forces in balance, and its unspeakable glory falling on all its children—chief among the federation of English-speaking people—plenty streaming from its borders, and light from the mountain tops—working out its mission under God's approving eye, until the dark continents are opened—and the highways of earth are established, and the shadows lifted—and the jargon of the nations stilled and the perplexities of Babel straightened—and under one language, one liberty and one God, all the nations of the world harkening to the American drum beat, and girding up their loins, shall march amid the breaking of the millennial dawn into the paths of righteousness and peace. (Applause)

Mr. Aiken, of Silver Bow: I have always been opposed to woman's suffrage, but I believe I will change my mind, as women sometimes do when they marry men to get rid of them. I shall vote "yes" on this question when it comes up. (Applause)

The President: The question before the convention is upon the amendment offered by a gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford).

Mr. Joy, of Park, asked to have the amendment read.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would like to ask if an amendment would be in order?

The President: This is an amendment to an amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole. An amendment will not be in order.

Mr. Conrad, of Couteau: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be placed upon the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Gibson, of Cascade: I have agreed to pair off with my colleague, Mr. Webster, who is absent from this convention by reason of sickness.

The votes stood as follows: Ayes—Niken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Fields, Gillette, Goddard, Haleh, Hickman, Hobson, Kanouse, Knowles, Loud, McAdow, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Rickards, Sargent, Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Watson, Mr. President—33.

Nays—Burns, A. F.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Courtney, Craven, Durllee, Dyer, Gaylord, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kennedy, Kohrs, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rotwill, Schmidt, Stapleton, Whitehill, Winston, Witter—33.

Absent—Brazleton, Dixon, Eaton, Hershfield, Knippenberg, Middleton, Toole, J. R.; paired—Gibson, Webster—7.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) as lost.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would like to offer an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) desires to offer an amendment to add to Section 2 "Provided further that the Legislature is empowered to submit to a vote of the people not oftener than once in four years the question of woman suffrage, and if a majority at any such election shall be in favor of extending the elective franchise to women it shall be so extended."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I think that covers the same ground exactly as the original amendment we voted on. I think it is out of order.
