Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. President, in explanation of that amendment which I have offered I simply want to say this, that it has been suggested around here that the Legislature has that power anyhow. That is the very reason that I have offered the amendment in the form that I have. I think it is proper to make some provision to prevent this being submitted to the people at every election that may come up. I don't think it is advisable to do that, and so I have provided in that amendment that it may be submitted to the people not oftener than once in four years. I think that will be as often as the people will want to vote on that proposition. Now, Mr. President, in relation to this proposition we have heard a great deal about it, and I have refrained from saying anything. The members here present ought certainly to be willing that a majority shall rule. With all that has been said about the chivalry of men, etc., I agree, but I say that when the time gets ripe, when this golden hour comes that we have been promised is about to come, when that time comes, when the people of the state of Montana want the women to go to the polls and vote, and when they are willing to indicate it by their ballots, I will be one of those to vote for that proposition, but I venture to say, Mr. President, that at this time there are not five members of this body who have come to this convention instructed in favor of woman's suffrage. I do not think there are five men here who have been advised by their constituents that they are in favor of this proposition, and who asked them to put that question through. It will be admitted on all sides that if it was submitted to a vote of the people today it would not be adopted. Now, I am satisfied that this body does not represent the people. The people of the State of Montana or the Territory of Montana are not equally divided on this question. It is liable to be the case in the Legislature. The next one that meets may be nearly equally divided on this proposition, or there may be in fact one or two majority in favor of it. That will not indicate that the time is ripe, it would not be the voice of the people. It is not leaving it to the voice of the people. It is leaving it to a little body of men in the Legislative Assembly, and I am in favor of leaving it with the people wholly, so that they may vote upon it as they see fit. That is the object of that amendment which I have offered, and I trust that it will prevail.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow, asked that the amendment be read.

The Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clark: Mr. President, I voted against the amendment just voted down for the same reason that I shall vote against this, because it proposes to take away the decision of this great question, for it is a great question, from the people at any time the Legislature may allow them to vote upon it. I would go back into the arguments pro and con on woman suffrage. I agree with most that has been said by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Knowles) and Lewis & Clarke (Mr. J. K. Toole) today except in one particular. I could not especially agree with my friend, or with the gentleman, Judge Knowles, who pictured the millennium as about arriving, and when he was describing that committee of benevolent old gentlemen who proposed to settle all disputes in this world by arbitration, my mind went across the water where I saw the embattled hosts of Germany with Bismarck at their head, the embattled hosts of Russia, France grappling the issues of the hour with her armies, Austria enrolling every man, and every other country in the world enrolling their citizens in such military strength as never was known before in the history of the world. When I contemplated that vision I did not think that the element of force had entirely disappeared from the government of nations; and while he stated that our constitution was peaceably adopted he forgot to state it was only adopted because our fathers fought for eight long years in order that they might win a victory which would make it possible for them to adopt a constitution of their own. And to show that our own country is not different from any other country, to support and maintain that constitution and the Union that was formed under it, we had the bloodiest war that ever ensanguined the pages of the history of this century. Mr. President when you take the silver dollar out of your pocket and look upon it you will not see the dove, the emblem of the millennium which these gentlemen have so beautifully painted; you will see there the eagle, the emblem of the force of the government, and you will see the talon of the eagle, to show that the supremacy of the government is behind that. It is the emblem of your institutions. I am sorry that this is so, but so it is. And, Mr. President, I was opposed to the amendment that was just adopted a few moments ago for the very reasons almost that were given by the advocates of the measure, among them my good friend Mr. Rickards who said he did not want this question submitted to the people because the saloon element would always be against it. Why if those men, whether they keep saloons or not have a right to vote at all, they have a right to vote on all questions. If we have not the right to disfranchise them, we have not the right to circumvent them. Legislatures like conventions are easily moved; a few glib tongues in the lobby, a few smiles from the gallery, or a few bouquets perchance seem to influence members considerably. (Laughter and Applause.) But great questions like these should not be settled in a moment either in a legislature or in a convention. They should go to the people of the country. Then it will not be a few men only who on the spur of the moment without proper thought will take these questions up, but they will be discussed in books; they will be discussed in every newspaper; they will be discussed in the pulpits and around every fireside, and the people will go to the polls as they ought to do and settle this question as the people have settled all questions in the interest of humanity. I hope, sir, that my ideas and hopes for the growth of the race are as great as those of anybody, and if the time comes when the people of this country in their wisdom, when this element of force is eliminated from human affairs; if the time comes when men do as they ought to do, live in brotherly love upon this earth; if the confederation of men and the parliaments of the world so beautifully quoted by my friend from the speech of Mr. Grady are ever to be established and intellect and justice and virtue will reign supreme, why then let the people bestow the right of suffrage upon everybody. But I am one of those who believe that so long as there is anything in this world that is worth fighting for, men have to be ready to fight for it; at least that has been the experience of the nations up to this time. But now, Mr. President, I am opposed to this resolution because it curtails the power of the legislature. If the people want to vote on this at every election, I say let them do it, and let them decide if the way they want to have it. I am in favor of leaving it to the people of the State of Montana. (Applause.)

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I hope the amendment will not prevail. We have before us proposition No. 18, and in that proposition we have these words "any amendment to this constitution may be proposed in either house of the legislative assembly, and if the same shall be voted for by two-thirds of the members elected to each house, such proposed amendment, together with the ayes and nays" and so on. Now, Mr. President, my good friend from Yellowstone County ought to be attorney enough to know that this proposition or amendment is in conflict with all State constitutions, and that was the reason why the friends of this measure thought it well to leave it in the hands of the legislature. I wish to set myself aright on any proposition. I think the eloquent gentleman who has just spoken has put me in a false light—I am not in favor of disfranchising any man or set of men, I made the statement and I reaffirm what I said this morning that on any proposition like this that has for its object the elevating of man, the uplifting of society, has always arrayed against it the saloon element of this or any other country, and for that reason, recognizing the fact that this element generally control, to our shame be it said, more than one-third of this great commonwealth, we wanted it left in the hands of the legislature where it has been. By a vote of this body that amendment did not prevail, and I hope that this amendment offered by Mr. Joy, inasmuch as it will be in conflict with Proposition No. 28 which I apprehend we will adopt as a part of the constitution, and will be unconstitutional, will not prevail. He knows and we all know that the proposition could not be submitted by a vote of the legislature and I shall vote against the amendment offered by Mr. Joy. One other word—Mr. Joy said a good deal about the time not being ripe for this. That is evident by the vote taken here already, and while there is no disposition on my part to deal unfairly with anyone, seeing that we attempted to pluck this luscious fruit before it was ripe, I am willing now to submit to a vote of this body, and I move the previous question.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I gave way to you and now you want to shul me off.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I beg pardon, I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: No, sir; you have made two speeches on it already, and you can have the benefit of them.

Mr. President: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Park.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I move the call of the house before we proceed to vote upon this question.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Park.

The gentleman from Silver Bow demands a previous question. The question before the convention now is shall the main question be now put.

The Chair then put the said question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The question is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy).

The Chair then put the said question on the motion of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin moves to amend Section 2 by inserting in line two after the word "elections" the following "and at such other elections, and upon such propositions as may be provided for or proposed by the legislative assembly."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: That matter has been considered and voted down.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: This proposition seems to me like the killing of a snake; the tail never dies until sunset, and a joint snake, if you kill them they come together again. Propositions like these don't often die until sunset, and it seems that they are trying very hard to get them together again.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: The question of snakes is not before the house. There is none in my vote. (Laughter.)

The President: The amendment last offered by the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) was voted down this morning as offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke as follows: "For all officers that now or hereafter may be elective by the people, and upon all questions that may be submitted to a vote of the people." The Clerk will now read the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Clerk read same.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that this latter amendment embodies the same proposition as the former. Having been voted upon once the Chair is of the opinion that it cannot be entertained without a reconsideration of the former vote.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I think upon a careful reading of the matter by even my friend who told the snake story it will show that there is some grave error committed here by limiting the vote to those upon whom the franchise has been conferred.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I object to it. I think we have rung the changes on it often enough.

Mr. Marrion, of Missoula, sent up a substitute for Section 2.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula offers a substitute for Section 2 as follows: "Section 2. Every male citizen of the United States and every male citizen of foreign birth who may have declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States according to law, not less than one year nor more than five years before he offers to vote, who is over the age of twenty-one years, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections by the people. First, he shall have resided in the state one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote. Second, he shall have resided in the county, city or town where he offers to vote at least sixty days immediately preceding the election."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I think that is the proposition that has already been passed on by the Committee of the Whole of the house, and I do not think that amendment should go in.

The President: A question passed on by the Committee of the Whole can be considered again in convention.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I think it has been considered in convention.

The President: No sir, I think not.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Bickford, Conrad, Hershfield, Kohrs, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Rotwitt, Toole, J. H.; Winston—11.

Nays—Aiken, Breen, Browne, Bulford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Duffee, Dyer, Field, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goodard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Loud, Mayger, McAdow, Mitchell, Myers, Muth, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Richards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Witter, Mr. President—57.

Absent—Brazleton, Craven, Eaton, Haskell, Knippenberg, Middleton, Webster—7.

The Chair announced the vote and the substitute of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marrion) was declared lost.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) offers to amend by striking out all after the word "power" in line six of Section 2.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Burns, A. F.; Collins, Parberry, Robinson—4.

Nays—Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Burns, E.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dufree, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillelle, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwill, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—64.

Absent—Brazleton, Dixon, Eaton, Haskell, Knippenberg, Middleton, Webster—7.

The Chair announced the vote on the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Schmidt, of Silver Bow, sent up an amendment which the Clerk read as follows: Strike out in line six, Section 2, the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth words.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Schmidt, of Silver Bow: The section would read after amendment that no person convicted of felony would have the right to vote unless he has been pardoned. The amendment strikes out the words "by the proper pardoning power."

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Schmidt) and division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty in the affirmative to twenty-three in the negative.

The President: If there are no other amendments to be offered to the section, the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, which is in the form of a substitute, will be adopted, and the substitute stands adopted as a part of the proposition. We will now pass to the other amendments, if any, offered by the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read as follows, strike out in line two the word "two" and insert the word "one."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out all of section nine in the original printed copy.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 10 by inserting in line one the words "shall have the power to" and inserting after the word "pass" in the same line the words "a registration and such other" and after the word "laws" in the same line the words "as may be necessary."

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 11 by inserting after the word "hold" in the first line the words "The office of County Superintendent of Schools or." Also strike out first seven words of Section 11, "the Legislative Assembly may pass laws allowing" and insert after the word "women" in same line the words "shall be eligible" and strike out the words "the right."

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow, asked the reading of the section as amended.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I want to suggest an amendment to that section. It is not good language to say "The women shall be eligible to vote" and I move to insert the words "and shall have the right to vote."

Mr. McAdow, of Fergus, sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Fergus offers an amendment as follows: Amend Section 10 by adding the following "and the Legislative Assembly is empowered hereafter to extend the rights of suffrage to all citizens of the United States over twenty-one years of age, without regard to sex, provided that women shall not be liable for military or jury duty, nor shall they be eligible for any office, except that pertaining to schools."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: If I understand that correctly it gets right back to the proposition that has been voted down in Committee of the Whole and in this convention enfranchising women for the purpose of general elections. I understand that is the meaning of this amendment. If it is, it is not the proper subject of action by the convention; it is out of order, and under the cover of this one section in regard to the right to hold school office, and to vote at school election reaches back and includes the other—the right to vote generally and at all elections; and if that is the case the proposition is out of order. I desire it to be read again for that purpose.

The Clerk read the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Fergus (Mr. McAdow).

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Yes sir, that was just the very proposition that was voted down in this convention.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I think it is another snake. The other half of the snake was the part the gentleman had in his boots; this is the one he had in his hat. (Laughter)

The President: The Chair understands that the proposition embodying the substance of the former amendment as voted down was in reference to referring the matter to the Legislature. This is a direct proposition to extend the right of suffrage to everyone without regard to sex and hence the Chair is of the opinion that it is so different in character as to admit of its being offered as an amendment.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: I think that was the same proposition that was voted down.

The President: It was voted down in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: If the Clerk will read the proposition, I think it is similar.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I desire to explain to the gentleman who interposed this objection that it is not the same proposition nor anywhere near the same proposition.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I desire to suggest this to the Chair that this section as sought to be amended relates to the right of women to hold office in connection with the public schools and to vote at school elections; that this reaching back and extending for general purposes is not germane to the question under consideration and cannot be incorporated in it.

The President: The Chair holds, unless, as the gentleman from Deer Lodge suggests, there has been a previous question voted down which he is not aware of that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Fergus, is an amendment that may be admitted upon this section generally. He holds the point of order raised by the gentleman from Deer Lodge that it is not germane to this section, is well taken; so that the gentleman's proposition will be entertained if he wishes to offer it as a substitute, or as an amendment to the bill in some proper place. Are there any other amendments?

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I propose, Mr. Chairman, to insert after the word "and" in the second line "shall have the right to." It strikes me that to say women shall be eligible to vote is not altogether proper, and it will read then "women shall be eligible to hold the office of county superintendent of schools in any school district, and have the right to vote at any school district election."

The President: The gentleman from Missoula offers to amend Section 10 by inserting after the word "and" in the second line, the words "shall have the right to."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall) and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I have an amendment to Section 10 that I would like to offer.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) offers to amend Section 10 by inserting after the word "of" in line one the words "superintendent of public instruction" instead of "county superintendent of schools."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: This amendment is intended to allow a lady to become a candidate for superintendent of public instruction. There are a great many men here who favor the elective franchise for women. I am opposed to that, but I am not opposed to allowing them to take this office when they can fill it as perfectly as some of the men. Therefore, I offer this amendment.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 32 in the affirmative to 33 in the negative.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, I desire to amend the section by striking out the words "county superintendent of schools" as they appear in the first line. I will state my reason for it and I think it a very good one.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman's amendment would destroy the sense of the section.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I beg pardon of the convention. I withdraw my amendment. I see it reads in a different way.

The President: The question now is as to the adoption of Section 10 as amended.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of said Section 10, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 11 by inserting after the word "hold" in the first line the words "the office of county superintendent of schools or." Also strike out all of Sections 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 and substitute therefor the following section: Sec. 12. Any person qualified to vote at general elections in this state shall be eligible to any office therein, except as otherwise provided in this constitution and subject to such additional qualifications as may be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly for city offices and offices hereafter created.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I move to strike out that word "person" and insert the word "citizen."

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Hogan) to strike out the word "person" and insert the word "citizen" in line one.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Hogan) and the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read as follows: Add to Section 12 the following: "In all elections held by the people under this constitution, the person or persons who shall receive the highest number of legal votes shall be declared elected."

Mr. Rickards: I move its adoption.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and the same was declared carried.

The President: This comprises all of the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole. Are there any other amendments now to be offered to this file?

Mr. McAdow, of Fergus, sent up an additional section.

The Clerk read as follows: "Additional section to Proposition No. 14, Section 13. The Legislative Assembly is empowered hereafter to extend the rights of suffrage to all citizens of the United States over 21 years of age, without regard to sex; provided that women shall not be liable for military or jury duty, nor shall they be eligible for any office except that pertaining to schools."

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: It seems to me that has been voted on, the right of the Legislature to extend suffrage to women. The changes have been rung on it in two or three different ways.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: If I understand the objection of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, it is that this is the same proposition voted down by the convention. I wish to submit to the Chair this proposition, that the original amendment offered by myself to Section 2 simply provided for the right of suffrage being extended to women by the Legislature. This is a proposition to extend the right of suffrage to them without restrictions placed upon it. I say, sir, that in view of the fact that it is essentially a different idea from that contained in my amendment to Section 2, that this convention should have a right to vote upon the proposition, whether it is carried or not. It places the question before the convention in a different light than that in which it was placed to my amendment.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: I think, Mr. President, it contains the same proposition. It says "Shall not serve upon jury or be liable to military duty," if I understand it, and gives them the right to vote. It seems to me that the same proposition was voted down here in the convention.

Mr. Joy, of Park: In view of the fact that this has been before the house and been voted down a number of times, I move that that amendment be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, called for the ayes and nays on the motion of the gentleman from Park (Mr. Joy).

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Aiken, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Carpenter, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hershfield, Hogan, Joy, Jeyes, Kennedy, Kohrs, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Schmidt, Stapleton, Winston, Witter—38.

Nays—Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, Calhaway, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Gaylord, Gillette, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Kanouse, Knowles, Loud, McAdow, Muth, Myers, Rickards, Sargent, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Mr. President—31.

Absent: Brazleton, Knippenberg, Middleton, Parberry, J. K. Toole, Webster—6.

The Chair announced the vote and stated that the motion of the gentleman from Park was carried and proposition laid on the table.

The President: There is now an amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, as follows: Amend Proposition No. 14, Section 8, by adding after the word "person" in the first line the following: "Nor any person while confined under sentence of a court for any crime."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The Clerk read the section as proposed to be amended as follows: Section 8. "No idiot or insane person shall be entitled to vote at any election in this state; nor any person while confined under sentence of a court for any crime."

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: That would make a man who is simply confined under conviction for a simple misdemeanor, who could not pay $10.00 fine—that would deprive him of the right of suffrage, and I am opposed to it.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: That is just the idea. Confine him in jail and he has not any right to vote whatever.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: You do not say "confined in jail."

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: It reads "Nor while confined under sentence of a court for any crime." If you put in "in jail" it will be superfluous. He ought not to vote while he is in jail; he ought not to vote while he is under sentence.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: He may take an appeal. A man might be under sentence to pay a fine for assault and battery. Some of us here have rather uncontrollable tempers sometimes that might get us into trouble at some time or another. Under this amendment, a person under sentence might give bonds and still he would be subject to the amendment; he could not vote; he might take an appeal from the district court for assault and battery to the supreme court, and for a year he might not be allowed to vote. You might get considerable men in trouble that way.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: If he is under confinement he cannot vote anyhow, but frequently I have known where sheriffs have taken the jail birds out of jail and attempted to have them vote; and this prevents that officer from exercising any influence in elections, and from taking these people from the jail, those who are confined for little misdemeanors, and taking them down and voting them. I think that a person who is under sentence of a court ought not to be allowed to vote anywhere.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me that is provided for in the last words of Section 3: "Nor while confined in any public prison."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Whitehill) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: That comprises all the amendments so far offered. If there are no further amendments, Proposition No. 14 may be placed upon its final passage.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move that Proposition No. 14 be now placed upon its final passage.

The President: If there be no objection, Proposition No. 14 will be placed upon its final passage. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes: Aiken, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrior, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Mitchell, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Rickards, Schmidt, Stapleton, Warren, Wittler, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—61.

Nays—Bickford, Burns, A. J.; Collins, Myers, Sargent, Toole, J. R.—6.

Absent: Brazleton, Breen, Hatch, Knippenberg, Middleton, Muth, J. K. Toole, Webster—8.

The President announced the vote.

The President: Proposition No. 14 is adopted as a part of the constitution of the state of Montana to be enrolled and referred to the Committee on Phraseology and Revision.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I now move you that this convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of file No. 26, Proposition No. 27, article on Revenues and Taxation.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Committee has under consideration Proposition No. 27 Article on Revenue and Taxation.

The Clerk will proceed to read the article section by section.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 27. Article on Revenue and Taxation. Sec. 1. The necessary revenue for the support and maintenance of the state shall be provided by the Legislative Assembly, which shall levy a uniform rate of assessment and taxation, and shall prescribe such regulations as shall secure a just valuation for taxation of all property, except that specially provided for in this article. The Legislative Assembly may also impose a license tax, both upon persons and upon corporations doing business in the state.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: It seems to me that this section involves an inconsistency. In the first place, it provides for a uniform system of taxation. That I take it, is upon property. It then goes on to say the Legislature may impose a tax upon both persons and corporations doing business in the state. Now, with the exception of liquor licenses and licenses for gambling, I am opposed to this system of raising revenue by license, for this reason, that it is not uniform. For instance, you take two men who come into the Territory of Montana here with $100,000 each. One man pursues the occupation to which he was educated and he invests his money in a ranch, buildings, horses, cattle and perhaps sheep. He stays there and attends to it himself. He has an ad valorem tax assessed on his assets and he pays the tax, perhaps two or three per cent on the dollar. Another man comes in who has been raised to a different occupation. He has a like amount of money. He invests a portion in buildings, a portion in merchandise, a portion in a hotel, perhaps, and other industrial pursuits of that kind, and he is taxed precisely the same as the other man, say two or three per cent on the value of his property, and he pays that tax. Well, now, here is the way the system works. If this license system prevails as it prevails at present, while one man pays a tax on his property, that is, what he has, the other man not only pays his tax on his property, but he has to pay a license for the privilege of attending to his business. It is unequal because it required one man to pay taxes upon the property according to its value and the other man to pay the same tax and then taxes his business in addition. It is not republican, it is not democratic, and there should be some system provided by which that should be obviated. I know men in my own and other counties who have brought money in here and invested it in stocks, in farms and in buildings, who are taxed and who pay their taxes. They would come in and put up those improvements; they bring in their stock of goods, and they are not only taxed for the value of the property, but they are compelled to pay a license for the privilege of carrying on the business. It is all wrong, and I think the matters should be changed in order to make it more uniform.

The Chairman: The Chair has indulged the gentleman from Custer so far, but there is nothing before the committee.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move to strike out in Section 1, line 5, the words "both upon persons and" so that it will read "The Legislature may also impose a license tax upon corporations doing business in the state."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask this gentleman, though I am of the same opinion as he, if it is not a fact that his amendment does not cover the ground. The Legislature may also impose a license tax if they please but who are the Legislature going to impose the tax on if they do not impose it upon persons and corporations? I think the principle, Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman is aiming at, is just and proper. In the early history of this and other territories, the license system was a necessity, but I think we have outlived the necessity, and I believe that the license system is radically wrong, and I for one am willing to go on record on that proposition. I believe the entire license system is wrong.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I wish to say but a few words and then I will yield to my friend from Deer Lodge, Mr. Toole. If our state government is bound to have so many luxuries, we must have some money to pay for those luxuries, and that should come from the proper source. If we strike out all license for doing business, it would cut off a very large portion of the revenue of Montana; it would prevent us from licensing saloons, the liquor traffic and everything of that kind. If this amendment were to pass, if I understand it correctly, it would take all license off the shoulders of the business and professional men of the community, and I do not see why all these avocations in life, professional men and men of business, should not help to contribute to the support of the government. If taxes and ad valorem taxes could be made equal, then there would be some reason, but while that cannot be done, I think it nothing but right they should be taxed as always has been done in Montana.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: It occurs to me, Mr. Chairman, that if we should agree upon this amendment to strike out those words, which certainly is something I do not believe it is the purpose of this constitution to accomplish, if I understand the amendment, it would leave the Legislature powerless to collect any taxes or any license from saloons, and I am certainly of the opinion, and I think I am not mistaken, that I do not think it is the intention of this convention to do anything of that kind. I believe, further, that one of the greatest sources of revenue and one of the easiest collected is license tax imposed upon the business and professional men of the Territory, and I do not think the time has come yet when we can afford to do away with this provision that we have for securing revenue. The means of raising revenue sufficient to meet the demands of the new state and the necessary expense that will be incurred in state government is a question that is well worthy of consideration, and while it may be wise some time in the future to abolish this tax, yet my observation of the business of this Territory leads me to the conclusion that the license tax is just and is more readily collected than any other tax. My observation is that the class upon which the license tax is levied in this Territory, as a class, are better able to meet the demands upon them in the shape of taxes than any other class of people in the Territory. As a rule, the farmers and ranchmen are not as prosperous or as well-to-do as the merchant or saloonkeeper or any other man paying a license tax, and I think there would be a great objection to the ratifying of this constitution if this provision should prevail. Certainly, I believe that if we were to make a provision that would relieve saloons from taxation, the constitution of the state would be endangered, for I believe it is the unanimous feeling of the great majority of the people of the Territory that the liquor traffic should pay a good license.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin, sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin offers the following amendment: Insert after the word tax in line 5 of said section the following words: "for the regulation of the sale of intoxicating liquors and other occupations requiring police supervision," and after the word "state" on said line 5, insert "and no license shall be imposed for any other purpose whatever."

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I just desire to say in support of my amendment that my only purpose was to meet the views of my friend from Deer Lodge, Mr. Foote, and that I heartily concur in the views he expressed. I am opposed to the license system, but I believe it is necessary for the regulation of the sale of intoxicating liquors and certain other occupations that the Legislative Assembly should have the power to regulate by license those various occupations. The section as amended will read as follows: "The Legislative Assembly may also impose a license tax for the regulation of the sale of intoxicating liquors and other occupations requiring police supervision both upon persons and upon corporations doing business in the state, and no license shall be imposed for any other purpose whatever."

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I have some very strong doubts as to whether this would not be in violation of the provision of the constitution of the United States. A clause of the constitution of the United States requires that everyone shall be entitled to equal protection of the law. Now, if you select one class of persons for taxation and leave another without taxation, I doubt its constitutionality. I believe that it violates that provision. It does not make an equal protection of the law. I would like to have the gentlemen look that up before they put a provision of that kind in the constitution, discriminating as to persons who shall pay taxes.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I should like to ask the gentleman whether the exercise of police power would interfere with the constitution in that respect.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I do not think it would violate the constitution by the exercise of the police powers. It is a police regulation, and while police power extends to anything that will preserve the order or health of the community, you have selected out certain classes of business here for taxation, calling that the exercise of a police power. Carrying on liquor is a business in every form, and I think that we ought to hesitate before passing that amendment.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, I understand that this system of license originated here at a very early day in the nature of a police regulation. Some gentleman on this floor may remember the fact. I have a friend who came to this country very early in the settlement of Montana, and he informed me that this license tax has its origin in this way: That they were short of whiskey and short of tobacco, and they organized a sort of police force to levy a contribution on all the wagons and teamsters and the pony freights that were going through here, for the purpose of raising the articles, and they enforced it by very extreme measures sometimes where the people refused to give up; and they found that this system of revenue supplied their wants so far as whiskey was concerned, they found that there were a good many other wants that they wished to have supplied in that way, and it finally ripened into a sort of custom, and custom became law; and what we have here is the result of that system of espionage upon the people. Now, if that is the case, I think it ought to be repealed.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I think the gentleman from Custer understands public finances pretty well.

Mr. Colms, of Cascade: I think we will be safe in leaving this matter to the Legislative Assembly. The taxes collected by license in the state of Vermont pay all of these expenses. Taxes collected by license in the state of Wisconsin pay all of the expenses. There is not a single cent of ad valorem tax collected in Wisconsin to pay the expenses of the state. The great state of Pennsylvania collects nearly eight millions of dollars of indirect taxation, and nearly all of the states of the Union which have made constitutions in the last twenty years or which have changed their constitutions collect a large part of their expenses in indirect taxation. The great state of Ohio at its last session of the Legislature passed by a two-thirds vote, I think, in both houses of its Legislative Assembly, an amendment to the constitution providing that a great share of its revenue may be collected by a license tax, and I have been told by a number of gentlemen from that state that that amendment to the constitution will be voted for and carried by a large majority. Experts upon this matter, who have in late days investigated this taxation question, without a dissenting voice, unanimously so far as I can learn, claim that the less ad valorem tax levied, the better it is for the state. Levy your license tax upon natural monopolies; levy your license tax upon all individuals and corporations who are benefited by the state; levy your license tax upon all individuals and corporations that the state benefits, and you will receive not only in this Territory but in every state of the Union sufficient money to run your state governments the year round. It is not necessary that the Legislative Assembly shall levy a tax upon you or me for doing a grocery business or for doing a wholesale business, or for doing any other kind of legitimate business, and I do not believe the people of Montana will do it; but I do believe that a license tax properly collected and as near equally adjusted as possible will almost pay the running expenses of this state today. We have over two thousand miles of railroad in the Territory; we have seven or eight thousand miles of telegraph lines; we have a number of miles of telephone lines; we have other industries in the Territory which can be taxed under this system, and taxed better than under any other system; and we will be making a move in the wrong direction by striking the authority to levy taxes in this manner out of our constitution.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I will withdraw my amendment.

The Chairman: The amendment of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) is withdrawn. The Clerk will read Section 2.

The Clerk read Section 2 as follows:

Sec. 2. The property of the United States, the state, counties, cities, towns, school districts, municipal corporations and public libraries shall be exempt from taxation; and such other property as may be used exclusively for agricultural and horticultural societies, for educational purposes, actual places of religious worship, places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, and institutions of purely public charity may be exempt from taxation. The Legislative Assembly may, in its discretion, exempt from taxation other property in addition to that herein specified, but all exemptions shall only be by general law.

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I have a substitute that I wish to offer for Sections 2 and 3.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer (Mr. Loud) offers the following as a substitute for Section 2 and 3. "All property in the state not exempt under the laws of the United States shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word 'property as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include mines, crops, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things, real, personal and mixed, capable of private ownership; provided, that growing crops, property used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this state, or to any county or municipal corporation within this state, and all buildings together with the lands upon which they are located, so long as they are used for places of public worship or for charitable purposes, and do not exceed $25,000 in value; all cemeteries, etc., shall be exempt from taxation.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I suppose the motive in introducing those two sections was to get at the proposition of taxing mining property. I trust it is not necessary for me to take up much time in discussing this substitute, because there are some very appropriate reasons why it should not prevail. I apprehend, sir, that the gentleman who offered this resolution or this section, and others who may support it, are not perhaps aware of what the condition of the mining interests in this Territory or coming state is or may be. I apprehend that they are not aware, perhaps, that it is an utter impossibility to tax mines and assess them at any value that can be agreed upon by any two persons as to what they are worth. I want to state for the information of the gentleman and others, that my business, so far as I have had a business here, is in that line to a certain extent. I want to state that there are no two men in the same line of business, whether they may be assessors, mining experts or professors of mineralogy, that can come anywhere near agreeing on the value of mining property. Even the world-famed mines, such as the Granite Mountain and the Anaconda, and mines of that class, which perhaps those gentlemen imagine can be assessed upon a proper valuation, I desire to say that I believe it to be a fact that there are no two assessors in this Territory, each one basing a judgment upon his knowledge of those mines, that can come within a million dollars of each other as to what they are worth. There are other phases of this question, too. There are a great many poor men who are making their living in this line of business, and it is a fact that they oftentimes have a property that they may value at $10,000, $20,000 or $50,000, and that might be assessed at that valuation, and nine times out of ten, it is a safe assertion to make, that they are not worth fifty cents. And further than that, there is another and very potent reason, and that is this, that I am satisfied it will defeat this constitution if placed before the people, because the people in the mining counties and people who understand the situation would think it worked a hardship to a large class of people; in fact, the people upon whom the Territory is dependent for its very sustenance. The provision as provided for by the report of this committee is the same that is in force in all the constitutions of the different states where mining is carried on to any extent. In Nevada, Colorado, California and in the state of Dakota; and I want to assert again that there is no question in my mind that if this matter should be incorporated, this section would defeat the ratification of the constitution in this Territory. I trust it will not be necessary for me to go into further details to show up this matter, because I believe it is apparent to the members of this convention who are familiar with mining in all its phases, and who hail from the counties where the mining interests prevail to a great extent. For that reason, I will not take up any more of the time of the convention, believing it is needless for me to do so and believing that this amendment as offered will not be supported by the vote of this convention.

Mr. Loud, of Custer: My object in introducing this was simply this, that on page 220 of the 16th regular session of the Legislative Assembly, a law was passed containing similar provisions to those contained in Sec. 3 of this Proposition No. 27, and as this law will remain in force unless repealed, I cannot see any object or any advantage to be gained by adopting this Sec. 3.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, is Sec. 3 under discussion?

The Chairman: Sec. 3 is not, but the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Loud) offers a section to be called Sec. 2 which is a substitute for Sections 2 and 3.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Loud), and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin, sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) offers the following: Amend Section No. 2 by striking out all of the section after the word "taxation" in line 5.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Sec. 2, the Clerk read Sec. 3 as follows:

Section 3. All mines and mining claims, both placer and rock in place, containing or bearing gold, silver, copper, lead, coal, or other valuable mineral deposits, after patent shall have been issued therefor by the United States, shall be taxed at the price paid the United States therefor, unless the surface ground, or some part thereof, of such mine or claim, is used for other than mining purposes and has a separate and independent value for such other purposes, in which case said surface ground, or any part thereof, so used for other than mining purposes, shall be taxed at its value for such other purposes, as provided by law; and all machinery used in mining, and all property and surface improvements upon or appurtenant to mines and mining claims which have a value separate and independent of such mines or mining claims, and the annual net proceeds of all mines and mining claims shall be taxed as provided by law.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move to strike out the word "net" in line 9 of that section and insert the word "gross."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I wish to offer an amendment to add to Section 3.

The Clerk read the said amendment as follows: "All canals, ditches and water courses constructed for the sole purpose of carrying water for use in mining, irrigating and farming lands," etc.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to ask the gentleman if some great corporation should come into the country and build a mining ditch and collect a great revenue from the people for furnishing water, if they would not be subject to taxation under this?

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: It provides that they shall pay on the net water rental whatever the water rental is.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I was reading lately of an account of the people that owned the ditches that supply the farms in the vicinity of Greeley, Colorado, and the exactions they made upon the farmers there; and of all the species of landlordism and rack-rent in the world, it seemed to me that was the worst. They had a perfect grip upon the people; they charged exorbitant prices for water. I would not be in favor of encouraging corporations of that kind.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I would say, Mr. Chairman, that we have already made the canals and water courses here public property, and they are hable to the control of the Legislature; they can fix their charges; and my idea for introducing this is to get capital to bring out water on the arid lands of Montana. Unless there is some provision of this kind, I do not think they would do it. A person could go to work and spend two or three hundred thousand dollars and bring out water, with no settlers at all on the land, and he cannot see any immediate prospect of a return for five or six years; whereas, if it is provided that he will not be taxed on the net water rental, whenever he gets a little, he will commence to pay taxes; and I believe it is as much of a public benefit to get these arid lands covered with water as it is to develop the mines of this Territory.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would not wish to do anything to discourage capital in any such enterprise, but I hope to see the day come when the systems of irrigation shall be either under the control of the state or of the United States for the purpose of bringing water upon our arid lands; and I understand the Committee on Irrigation has under consideration a memorial to Congress in accordance with the resolution that I introduced, to ask the government of the United States to grant the arid lands, in order that their net revenues may be devoted to the purpose of building canals; and that was to avoid that very thing. Now, we are opposed to landlordism; we don't want any company or any corporation or any individual to own vast tracks of the land on which they may have tenants. But it seems to me that if the companies or individuals or corporations are to own vast water courses, that it would be a species of landlordism of the worst kind, and I do not think that we should favor the principle.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Now, I claim, Mr. Chairman, that instead of fostering the bringing out of water ditches upon our lands by private corporations and by individuals, we should, if possible, stand out and by all means in our power, unite together to bring that water out, and have it brought out by the state or by the government. If there is a monopoly on earth that is grinding, it is the monopoly of a great corporation that owns the water of an arid country. I believe the constitution of the state of Montana should prohibit it, and I believe that thousands, yea, thousands upon thousands, hereafter will say "God bless the people who framed the constitution of Montana." If there is anything on earth that is a curse to a people, it is to allow a corporation or allow a few men to own the country, and you might say, own the people. The instance cited by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis in Colorado is a case in point. The valley around Greeley is as fine a country as there is in this western country. A few years ago it was self-supporting, but those water monopolists have got control of every inch of that water. They first commenced by charging such a fee as the farmers and manufacturers could stand; they commenced raising on that, and their profits were increased until today they do as they did twenty years ago, take everything but the bare substance, and that same policy will be in existence in Montana if you allow this thing to go into your constitution.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I am opposed to the amendment for the same reason, among others, that I was opposed to the word "net" in the previous section. "Net water rentals" simply means nothing. A corporation which has within itself and among its officers all of the knowledge as to the transaction of its business will not probably find much "net" water rentals to pay the taxes upon, nor will the mine owners find any "net" proceeds from their mines to pay taxes upon; but that last matter has been settled, and therefore there is no need of introducing it here again. But this thing of offering bonuses to corporations for the purpose of digging out canals and water ditches in this Territory is a mistake. If there is any money in that kind of scheme, then they will come in and put it in without offering a bonus. And it seems to me that if we intend to show any favoritism or show any preference here by our acts, let it be towards the citizens of the state, and not towards a foreign corporation, for the purpose of bringing capital in here. I agree with my friend from Cascade, Mr. Collins, that these water courses and water system should be under the control of the state, or under the control of the National Government. For these reasons, I am opposed to the amendment.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: Both of these gentlemen that have just preceded me have gone on and said a good deal about these corporations wanting to grind the people with excessive water rates. There was a measure introduced here, I think it has been passed, that water courses, and canals were made public property, and that water rental can be governed by the Legislature; and I do not see what is the use of going on talking about that when it is in the hands of the Legislature to stop them. (Reading) "Water-courses, canals, reservoirs, &c., shall be declared public property."

The Chairman: In the Declaration of Rights they were declared to be a public use.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: Well, it is stated here by the legal fraternity that by doing that the water rentals could be controlled by the Legislature.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I think that is a stretch of construction.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I think there is no occasion to fear outside corporations or outside money constructing canals, any more than constructing railroads in this country. Now, sir, the committee will recollect that there is a proposition—I think it has been adopted by this convention—in the first place, permitting or authorizing the County Commissioners of each county to regulate the tax or rental of water. That is one thing. We have the same law now upon our statute books, that all sale of water is to be regulated by the commissioners of the several counties. The great trouble in this Territory now is not that we have too many water courses, or rather, water course, for the artificial irrigation of our land, but that we have not enough. Some of the most persistent law suits today arise out of the right of priority for the use of water out of some little stream. There never has been any particular litigation that I know of in relation to the waters of a large stream, for instance the waters of the Missouri, the waters of the West Gallatin, or the waters of the Jefferson, nor any of those large streams that are still running downhill and doing nobody any good. Now, if there is any enterprise that I think needs fostering in this Territory, it is that enterprise, which brings out water and reclaims arid land that is now desert and worthless for the very want of water. So long as the regulation of the rental or sale of this water is within the disposition of the Legislature, and within the control of the Commissioners of the separate counties, I apprehend there is no danger of oppression to the people. If we could have this same hold upon other corporations, upon the common carriers of this country, we would be less oppressed than we are now. I am strongly in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Choteau. I think there is no danger to be apprehended so long as the Legislative power of this state has full control of the rents of these waters.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I will say, Mr. Chairman, that if any of these gentlemen are afraid that there will be extortionate water rentals that I will support any measure putting them under the control of the Legislature or County Commissioners. I simply want to encourage bringing out water onto this arid land. We have got sufficient land down in northern Montana to sustain a population of 100,000 people if we had water on the land. We are a little differently situated in Choteau County than my friend from Cascade. He lives in the country where they say it is not desert land, that it does not need irrigation. I believe they have got that fixed by the land office. But we live 42 miles below, and we cannot raise anything unless we have irrigation. (Laughter)

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to offer a substitute to Section 3.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer offers the following substitute for Section 3: Strike out all of Section 3 and substitute the following: The Legislative Assembly shall have authority to pass all necessary laws relating to the subject of taxation.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I hope that substitute will not prevail. I am as much in favor of fostering this mining interest as I am of the canals. I believe they are both essential to the development of the country. Therefore, I shall oppose the substitution of that section.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: We have passed a clause in our Bill of Rights, giving the right of way over ditches and canals and over property of other persons, and calling that a public use. That was intended to foster this question of irrigation. Then, in Proposition 26, which has not yet been passed upon, but is before the convention, there is a provision "that the water of every natural stream not heretofore appropriated within the state of Montana is hereby declared to be the property of the public, and the same is dedicated to the use of the state subject to appropriation as hereinafter provided. The right to divert the unappropriated waters of any natural stream to beneficial uses shall never be denied. Priority of appropriation shall give the better right as between those using the water." Then, at the conclusion of that subject upon irrigation, it says, "the General Assembly shall provide by law that the Board of County Commissioners, in their respective counties, shall have power, when application is made to them by either party interested to establish reasonable maximum rates to be charged for the use of the water, whether furnished by individuals or corporations." Now, that is not passed yet, but I presume that it will be; and that this last proposition in connection with others, I believe, as we say, that it is a "good scheme" to provide that these ditches shall be taxed only upon the net income, leaving it to the County Commissioners to provide what rates they shall pay for the use of water, and certainly any one county will not be too liberal to the company; in fact, it would seem to me, under such a provision as that that there would be some doubt whether any of the companies would make six per cent on their investment; and hence I think that it is a good proposition to exempt where we provide that the rates may be regulated by law.

I believe it is a good proposition to say that these companies shall be taxed only on the net income from their business.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: It seems to me that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Choteau should prevail. We have, at the present time, within the limits of the Territory of Montana, large areas of arid lands, and particularly in the county of Missoula have we such a class of lands. I believe I am safe in saying that there are 75,000 acres of good aridable land within the limits of Missoula County today lying as a barren waste within the limits of the county, returning no taxation, no revenue whatever to the county or to the state, which might, under the provisions, or under the exemptions offered by this amendment, become homes for hundreds of people. It seems to me, sir, that if we desire to have a system of irrigation extended to the different parts of the Territory or the state that we should offer inducements to these people who have money and desire to invest it in this way. In the state of Colorado, while perhaps as extensive a system of irrigation as there is anywhere is at present in use, they have extended some exemptions to the people who have invested their money for the purpose of bringing water upon the arid land. We have at the present time a season so dry that it is going to bring want to many a door in the county of Missoula. The system is imperfect at the present time. It does not extend far enough, and it is only by the investment of large amounts of money in some particular locality that a system of irrigation can be extended so as to be made available to all the people. Now, under the restrictions which have already been passed by this constitutional convention, it seems to me that the rights of the people would be entirely safe—that the rights of people who take water from these companies would be protected entirely, and if the investment did not pay a large amount upon the money invested, at least it would pay a sufficient amount, if exempted from taxation, to warrant these people who have money and desire to invest it in this way, in so doing. We must view this matter from the point of expediency; we must view it from the point of our interests, and if we can by digging an irrigation ditch in any section of the country bring into use a large tract of land by so doing, you add to the taxable property of the state—you make a perpetual fund from which the state draws annually a revenue for the purpose of maintaining the state government. Then, it is simply a means to an end. You create property by exempting one class of property from taxation; you create a taxable class of property by exempting any class from taxation. It seems to me, sir, that the people of this state would be served by exempting such a class of property as this from taxation, if not perpetually, at least for a period of years.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Then, I would suggest that the gentlemen are mistaken is under consideration?

The Chairman: Section No. 3.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Then, I would suggest that the gentleman are entirely out of order. It does not relate to irrigation or anything of that kind. It relates to the subject of taxation exclusively.

The Chairman: The gentlemen are speaking of the amendment of the gentleman from Custer. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer, (Mr. Burleigh,) who offers the following as a substitute for section 3: "The Legislative Assembly shall have authority to pass all laws relating to the subject of taxation."

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to striking out this section, because I believe that it will endanger, or may endanger, the greatest industry we have in the State of Montana. Now, I stand here today as a representative of the mining interests, and I will venture to say that there is no class of men engaged in any industry in this Rocky Mountain country that has a higher regard for integrity or is more disposed to make a fair and equitable return of their property than are the men engaged in the mining industry. They do not propose to evade any of the duties of citizenship; they never have put themselves in an attitude of attempting to evade any of the responsibilities of citizenship in this Territory; but they do contend that the only way to reach a fair and equitable assessment of their values is to base it upon the net proceeds of their mines, in addition to whatever improvements may be found upon the surface thereof, and, as has been said by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Toole, there is no method known to metallurgy, mineralogy or geology whereby, considering all the uncertain circumstances that attend this industry, a fair and equitable value can be placed upon the property they call a mine. Today it may seem to be a bonanza, as the Mexicans say, with plenty of ore in sight, but how many are there here—and there are many men on the floor of this convention who are engaged in this industry—who have had in their experience the beautiful hopes of today frustrated by the stroke of the pick tomorrow? I have seen many mines in the Territory of Montana upon which would be placed what seemed to be a fair valuation by experts in mining that would run up into the thousands—I may say hundreds of thousands sometimes—that have within a very short space of time been entirely dissipated and proved to have been entirely incorrect. Look around among us in the experience of mining men, and see how many of them have come to grief and ruin simply because of a mistaken judgment in placing a valuation upon a mine. I tell you that there is another ground for danger. If you allow a mine to be taxed upon what is supposed to be the value of it, you place a weapon in the hands of every assessor in this Territory to levy blackmail upon every man who may have an interest in a mine. We know how sanguine was the spirit of the "Forty-niners." We know how sanguine every man is who may have an interest in this species of property. We know there are men all over this country who, when they have a prospect, a mere hole in the ground, will tell you if you ask them what value they place on that property, that it is worth $10,000, $20,000 or $100,000. The very fact of such declarations as these will induce the assessor when he comes around to place such valuation upon that prospect, the payment of the taxes of which for one year would bankrupt the owner. I say again that the fluctuations of the valuation of these metals are another fact which will disqualify anyone from placing a proper valuation upon mining property. We have seen it only a few years ago that the price of copper was so low that almost all the mines in the Rocky Mountain country were closed down, and if we do not mistake, the indications are that the markets of the world today point to a worse condition of things that is about to visit the mining industry, so far as copper is concerned. We see silver today at 94 cents an ounce. There are a great many silver mines in this Territory, it is true, that are apparently productive, and are enabled to go on. But, while this is the case, there are hundreds of them standing idle because silver is low, that a few years ago were valued at thousands and thousands of dollars.

I believe that the only fair way to arrive at a just basis upon which to tax this species of property is by taxing the net proceeds of these mines; and I say to you, gentlemen, that in the county of Silver Bow, where I have the honor to live, and in the county of Deer Lodge, where the Granite is situated and where there are other great mines, that the revenues derived from this mode of taxation have been entirely satisfactory to many people who heretofore have been opposed to it. There are forms made out for these men engaged in this industry to sign and make affidavits to, and as I have said, these men are men of integrity and honesty, and the assessor's returns in the county of Silver Bow will show that they have made a fair and equitable return upon their property.

Hence, I am in favor of adopting the report of the committee. That seems to me to be a just and fair proposition.

Four years ago, when the representatives of the people of this Territory met in this city to frame a constitution, this same subject was discussed. There were men in that convention, men of ability, shrewdness and acquaintance and familiarity with public affairs, who stood upon the floor of that convention and denounced this very measure as an unfair, yea, an infamous proposition. I have talked with these same gentlemen not later than a week ago, and one, a lawyer in this Territory, who is honest and qualified to judge of these things, after having experience with it as he has had since, has stated to me that while in the former constitution he believed it was unjust and unfair, that having seen the workings of the system in this Territory, he was led to the conclusion that it was the only fair and equitable method of arriving at the fair and just taxation of the mining interests of this country.

So, I say to you, gentlemen, to whom it may seem an unfair and unjust discrimination in favor of this industry, that if you will study it as we have done, that you can arrive at no other conclusion than that it is the only method whereby the state can secure from this species of property a reasonable and just revenue, and at the same time protect those men, those brave pioneers who have come out here and have made the wilderness blossom as the rose, and opened up these great mountains and brought their hidden wealth to light; yea, I say, it is the duty of the members of this convention to throw such safeguards around this industry as are proper and just; this great industry that is the foundation of almost all the prosperity of this country; this industry that has made possible the building of railroads into this country; that has made this city of Helena, of which all Montanans are proud; that has built up the city of Butte and has made all the valleys and mountains of Montana productive.

I say, gentlemen, let us be cautious how we remove anything from the report of this committee that is going to endanger or jeopardize in any way this great enduring industry upon which our greatest hopes are founded.

The Chairman: The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Custer.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Choteau (Mr. Conrad).

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Before that question is put I would like to say another word or two. This species of property and mining property do not stand upon the same basis. The arguments of the gentlemen from Silver Bow and Deer Lodge indicate that. The labors of this committee show it; and there is no one in this convention or in Montana who can prove with any reason that those two species of property are upon the same footing. If we place a certain exemption upon water ditches, if we only tax them by the net proceeds, then I claim that we should go further and exempt or partially exempt by taxing only the net proceeds of the corporations and persons engaged in agriculture, engaged in manufactures and engaged in stockraising. There is not a solitary difference between the propositions. If the idea of this Constitutional Convention is that only the net proceeds of property shall be taxed, then I say let us place a broad and wide provision in this constitution taxing only the net proceeds of all property in Montana. Certainly if you do not do that, I say it is unfair, unjust and unreasonable, not only to ourselves, but to the people of the state, that we should insert this provision exempting this particular class to a certain extent and not exempting any other class or species of property. The mining property in Montana is fairly and equitably and justly taxed under this report. We not only tax the improvements upon the claims but we tax the surface ground; we tax not only the surface ground and the improvements, but we tax the net proceeds as provided by law. The Legislative Assembly of the state of Montana may levy a one per cent or a ten per cent tax upon those net proceeds. But in this proposition of the gentleman from Choteau to exempt water ditches to a certain extent by taxing only their net proceeds, he does not provide that the tangible property of that water ditch shall be taxed; he does not even go as far as the mining company and tax everything in sight and everything on the surface. Now, I believe in an income tax; I believe in as little ad valorem tax as possible; but if the convention believes in this, if the convention is going to hew its line to this policy, then I say let us put in a general section as to all property. The state of California and the state of Colorado are the two great states of the Union next to Montana that irrigate their lands. The state of Colorado in its constitution has inserted no provision exempting the water companies from taxation, or even providing for their taxation in any particular manner. They stand upon an equal footing with every species of property within that state. The constitution of California does not provide a single word in any way, form or manner as to how this species of property shall be taxed. It is taxed in that state as all other property is taxed. Now, arguments can be brought to bear exempting any species of property. If you exempt this we can bring up the same arguments exempting stock. We have millions of acres of as fine grasses in Montana as there are in the world. We have not got stock enough to eat that grass. There are thousands upon thousands of dollars going to waste every year in Montana by not having horses, and cattle and sheep enough to feed on this grass.

Then, let us provide also hay to feed their stock with in hard winters, so that we can get money into the Territory. Let us only tax the net proceeds, and I will assure you we will get very little taxes.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I want to ask the gentleman if all or any of the industries that he has named are regulated in their sale and production by law. Does the law regulate, or give the power to the Board of County Commissioners to regulate the price the farmer shall get for this property? Now, these ditches that are built to distribute water and sell it are subject under this proposition No. 26 to be regulated by the County Commissioners as to the price they shall get for their commodity. Now, it would be a fact that if you add a tax on these ditches and put it up to such a rate that the County Commissioners in judging what should be charged for water, would have to add so much more to the price of the water, the ranchman would have to pay just so much more for the water for the privilege of farming. It is just coming right around in a circle again. Somebody has got to pay for it. If you put down the water at a low price, the farmers get their water that much cheaper, although the state does not derive the same amount of taxes from it. And it does seem to me that if you want to encourage agriculture here, and the digging of these ditches and if you are going to regulate their price, then they ought to be taxed on their net proceeds.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Every species of property in Montana is regulated by the Board of County Commissioners. The assessor places his value upon it. The Board of County Commissioners meet and equalize it. They may increase or decrease the assessed valuation of that property, so that a county in one part of Montana may pay an assessed valuation upon, say, my farm land at ten dollars an acre. A county in another portion of Montana may pay tax on that land at five dollars an acre or one dollar an acre. The Board of County Commissioners have to regulate all property, so far as taxation is concerned. Now, I will go a step further and say in answer to the gentleman from Silver Bow that this convention, nor the people of Montana should favor the gobbling up of the water of Montana by any company or corporation. I do not believe it is the right policy, and I believe the best place to assert that this is not the right policy is right here in this constitution. The natural waters of this great Territory in the near future will be reservoired; they will be brought out on these great plains, and they will be either brought out by the state of Montana or the government; and I claim as a matter of policy that they should not be brought out by combined capital; that if they are, it is like giving over the control of this great country, with its millions of acres, to corporations; that they will virtually own the land when they own the water, and that they will levy tribute upon these people in this country as they have in every country where they own water. The Board of County Commissioners will be powerless, and the regulations will be of no value so far as the great mass of the people are concerned. We are trying to build up a public sentiment by which the government shall expend millions of dollars in reservoiring water, as this telegram in the morning paper says when that is done you will find your speculators and capitalists following in the trail of those surveyors and owning the water and using it for their own purposes, and not for the benefit of the people. The parties who own the water own the land, and there should be no policy adopted in this constitution that will favor that class of people. The policy, in my opinion, should be to compel the state or the government to bring out these ditches and to own this water.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Choteau, Mr. Conrad, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 15 in the affirmative to 43 in the negative.

The Chair: Are there any other amendments to Section 3? *

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I have an amendment to offer to section 3.

The Chair: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers the following: Amend section 3 by inserting in line 2 after the word "deposits" the words "shall not be taxed before patent but."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: My object in introducing this amendment is that the printed bill is somewhat ambiguous, and it is a question that might be raised, that before patents are issued for mining property they would be subject to taxation, or at least the possessory right. In order to make it plain, and to avoid any question of that kind coming up hereafter, I offered the amendment. It makes it plain that before patent the surface ground shall not be subject to taxation; afterwards it may be.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: If the gentleman will read the section he will see that the land before it is patented is not taxable, unless it might be the machinery or improvements upon any land, patented or unpatented, would be taxable under a proper construction of the law.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge. Mr. Toole, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 20 in the affirmative to 31 in the negative.

There being no further amendments to Section 3 the Clerk read Section 4 as follows: Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall not levy taxes upon the inhabitants or property in any county, city, town or municipal corporation for county, town, or municipal purposes, but it may by law invest in the corporate authorities thereof powers to assess and collect taxes for such purposes.

There being no amendment to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5, as follows: Sec. 5. Taxes for city, town and school purposes may be levied on all subjects and objects of taxation, but the assessed valuation of any property shall not exceed the valuation of the same property for state and county purposes.

There being no amendment to Section 5, the Clerk read Section 6, as follows: Sec. 6. No county, city, town or other municipal corporation, the inhabitants thereof nor the property therein, shall be released or discharged from their or its proportionate share of state taxes.

There being no amendment to Section 6, the Clerk read Section 7, as follows: Sec. 7. The power to tax corporations or corporate property shall never be relinquished or suspended, and all corporations in this state, or doing business therein, shall be subject to taxation, for state, county, school, municipal and other purposes, on real and personal property owned or used by them and not by this constitution exempted from taxation.

There being no amendment to Section 7, the Clerk read Section 8, as follows: Sec. 8. Private property shall not be taken or sold for the corporate debts of municipal corporations.

There being no amendment to Section 8, the Clerk read Section 9, as follows: Sec. 9. The rate of taxation of real and personal property for state purposes in any one year shall never exceed three (3) mills on each dollar of valuation; and whenever the taxable property in the state shall amount to one hundred million dollars ($100,000,000) the rate shall not exceed two and one-half (2½) mills on each dollar of valuation; and whenever the taxable property in the state shall amount to three hundred million dollars ($300,000,000) the rate shall never thereafter exceed one (1) mill on each dollar of valuation; unless a proposition to increase such rate specifying the rate proposed and the time during which the same shall be levied, shall have been submitted to the people at a general election, and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election.

There being no amendment to Section 9, the Clerk read Section 10, as follows: Sec. 10. All taxes levied for state purposes shall be drawn from the treasury but in pursuance of specific appropriation made by law.

There being no amendment to Section 10, the Clerk read Section 11, as follows: Sec. 11. Taxes shall be levied and collected by general laws and for public purposes only. They shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax.

There being no amendment to Section 11, the Clerk read Section 12, as follows: Sec. 12. No appropriation shall be made, nor any expenditure of the state during any fiscal year shall exceed the total tax then provided for by law and applicable to such appropriation or expenditure, unless the Legislative Assembly making such appropriation shall provide for levying a sufficient tax, not exceeding the rates allowed in Section nine (9) of this article, to pay such appropriations or expenditure within such fiscal year. This provision shall not apply to appropriations or expenditures to suppress insurrection, defend the state, or assist in defending the United States in time of war. No appropriation of public money shall be made for a longer term than two years.

There being no amendment to Section 12, the Clerk read Section 13, as follows: Sec. 13. The State Treasurer shall keep a separate account of each fund in his hands, and shall at the end of each quarter of the fiscal year report to the Governor in writing, under oath, the amount of all moneys in his hands to the credit of every such fund and the place or places where the same is kept or deposited, and the number and amount of every warrant paid or redeemed by him during the quarter. The Governor, or other person or persons authorized by law, shall verify said report and cause the same to be immediately published in at least one newspaper printed at the seat of government, and otherwise as the Legislative Assembly may require. The Legislative Assembly may provide by law further regulations for the safe-keeping and management of the public funds in the hands of the Treasurer; but, notwithstanding any such regulation, the Treasurer and his sureties shall, in all cases, be held responsible therefor.

There being no amendment to Section 13, the Clerk read Section 14, as follows: Sec. 14. The making of profit out of public moneys, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, by any public officer, shall be deemed a felony and shall be punished as provided by law; but part of such punishment shall be disqualification to hold public office for a period of not less than ten years.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out all of Section 14 after the word "office" on the third line.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move to strike out the entire section for the reason that it is a matter within the province of the Legislature, and not of this convention.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 24 in the affirmative to 25 in the negative.

The Chairman: The question is now upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Mayger, to strike out all after the word "office" on line 3.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger), and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 14, the Clerk read Section 15, as follows: Sec. 15. The Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor and Attorney General shall constitute a State Board of Equalization; and the Board of County Commissioners of each county shall constitute a County Board of Equalization. The duty of the State Board of Equalization shall be to adjust and equalize the valuation of the taxable property among the several counties of the state. The duty of the County Boards of Equalization shall be to adjust and equalize the valuation of the taxable property within their respective counties. Each board shall also perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law.

There being no amendment to section 15, the Clerk read section 16 as follows: Sec. 16. All property, except as in this section provided, shall be assessed in the county, city, town, township or school district in which it is situated, in the manner prescribed by law. The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in this State shall be assessed by the State board of equalization, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts.

There being no amendment to section 16, the Clerk read section 17 as follows: Sec. 17. The word property, as used in this article, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, franchises and all matters and things real, personal and mixed, capable of private ownership; but this shall not be construed so as to authorize the taxation of the stocks of any company or corporation when the property of such company or corporation, represented by such stocks is within the State and has been taxed.

There being no amendment to section 17, the Clerk read section 18 as follows: Sec. 18. The Legislative Assembly shall pass all laws necessary to carry out the provisions of this article.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move that the Committee do now rise, and report back this proposition, No. 27 with the amendments as adopted. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Loud of Custer: Before that question is put, it seems to me, that section 7 conflicts with section 2. Section 7 provides that the power to tax corporations or corporate property shall never be relinquished or suspended, and all corporations in this State, or doing business therein, shall be subject to taxation for State, county, school, municipal and other purposes, on real and personal property owned or used by them and not by this Constitution exempted from taxation. Now, section 2 provides that the Legislative Assembly may, in its discretion, exempt from taxation other property in addition to that herein specified, but all exemptions shall only be by general law. It seems to me that the last part of the provision in section 2 would be of no use if we adopt section 7.

The Chairman: Does the gentleman wish to make any motion.

Mr. Loud of Custer: I move to strike out the words "this Constitution" in line 4, section 7, and insert "and not by general law exempted from taxation."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Loud, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I would like to ask a question of some of the legal rights in the convention. In section one of the last clause, "The Legislative Assembly may also impose a license tax, both upon persons and upon corporations doing business in the State." I want to know whether this is to be construed here as saying that the Legislature can levy a special poll tax under the provision. I would like some one better versed in the law than myself to explain it.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I would say that as a member of that committee that that matter has been entirely overlooked by the committee.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: This matter did not come up in the committee, but I think that this certainly would cover that. The legislature would have complete authority under this constitution to levy a poll tax. This matter came up, I think in the Constitutional Convention of 1881, and the then chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who is the present chairman stated that the legislature would have authority to levy a poll tax under this provision of the Constitution.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: It seems to me, that the object of this language is for the purpose of levying a tax upon the business and not upon persons and corporations. I presume that is the intention of the committee, and I move to insert the words, "upon business of persons or corporations doing business in the state"; so that it will read "The Legislative Assembly may also impose a license tax upon the business of persons and corporations doing business in the State."

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I would state, Mr. Chairman, that a poll tax is a license tax; it cannot be anything else; and that every person that pays poll tax under the law is paying a license tax.

Mr. A. E. Burns of Lewis and Clarke: That section reads all right. It does not need any change. Reading: "both upon persons and corporations doing business in this State."

The Chairman: The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Goddard.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Goddard, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I move that the committee do now rise and report the amendments.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 27, article on Revenue and Taxation, and have authorized me to report the same back, with the recommendation that the same pass. There are no amendments, except a mere verbal one in the second line; the word "Legislature" should be "Legislative Assembly." That is a verbal error.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that they have had under consideration Proposition No. 27, and instructed him to report the same back with the amendments, which amount to only one or two minor changes. What is the pleasure of the Convention?

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I move that we now take up the proposition for the consideration of the amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole, and place it upon its final passage.

The Motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge. (Mr. Whitehill,) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will read the proposition by sections.

The Clerk read section 1 as follows: Section 1. The necessary revenue for the support and maintenance of the State shall be provided by the Legislative Assembly, which shall levy a uniform rate of assessment and taxation, and shall prescribe such regulations as shall secure a just valuation for taxation of all property, except that specially provided for in this article. The Legislative Assembly may also impose a license tax, both upon persons and upon corporations doing business in this State.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow moves to amend by adding after line 5, "Also to impose a poor and road tax."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I hope this amendment will not prevail. I do not think it is customary in the Constitution of any state to have it specified that a poor tax will be levied on each person. I do not think it right. I think as it stands now it is good enough. The road tax the Legislature can provide for, and I think this is not a Constitutional province.

Mr. Bullard of Jefferson: It seems to me that if this is to be put at all, that it ought to be in after the word "impose"—"The Legislative Assembly may impose" &c.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I accept the amendment.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I do not see what right the Legislative Assembly or any other assembly has to impose a poor tax or a road tax upon any corporation.

Mr. Hurshfield of Lewis & Clarke: That very suggestion was discussed by a number of the members of the Committee, although I don't know that the Chairman of the Committee was present, and we held that it was highly improper to insert a clause of that kind in the Constitution; and that is one of the reasons why it was omitted.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, I think it is just as much out of place to insert the provision here in this Constitution as it would be to put in a goat tax, or a tax on rattlesnakes. It seems to me that it is a matter for legislation only.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Warren, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I want to ask, before we pass to the consideration of Section 2, careful attention to the wording of the last part of Section 1 in line 5, "Both upon persons and upon corporations doing business in this state." Now I believe it has been decided by the highest Court in Montana that a woman is not a person. Should a woman see fit to establish a bank in the city of Helena, would she have to pay a tax under this section? I ask it in all seriousness.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I would make an amendment to that, Mr. President. I move to amend that to read "Any person or thing." (Laughter).

The Clerk read Section 2 as follows:

Sec. 2. The property of the United States, the State, counties, cities, towns, school districts, municipal corporations and public libraries shall be exempt from taxation; and such other property as may be used exclusively for agricultural and horticultural societies, for educational purposes, actual places for religious worship, places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, and institutions of purely public charity may be exempt from taxation. The Legislative Assembly may, in its discretion, exempt from taxation other property in addition to that herein specified, but all exemptions shall only be by general law.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out that portion of Section 2 after the word "taxation" in line 5.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: The reason that I offer this amendment is that I believe that it contravenes the 14th amendment of the constitution of the United States. I think it is an invitation to give the Legislature power to do that which they would not be authorized to do. That amendment provides that citizens shall be entitled to the equal protection of the law. It has been decided I think by as eminent an authority as there is in the United States, by Judge Fields of California, that any exemption which is in itself an exemption of property which does not belong to the State, to the county, city, town or municipality, is in violation of that provision of the Constitution of the United States. There was a case decided by Judge Fields when he was on the Western Circuit. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Court said with reference to it that it was a grave question, and it was not the duty of that Court to pass finally upon that proposition, and that the case then and there could be disposed of on other questions, and they proposed to dispose of it on other questions than that. So that I think it may be fairly said that the authority which is here sought to be given to the Legislative Assembly is against that provision of the Constitution. That case goes further, that railroads, institutions and those things which are supposed to be builded for the dissemination of advantages to the public and the public good might come within the provision, but to authorize generally an exemption from property might violate that provision in the Constitution. I might take occasion to say here that four years ago when I was a member of the Constitutional Convention of the Territory, I opposed the provision which exempted from taxation the mines of this Territory, and I urged then that as one of the reasons for my opposition. It was then put in as an exemption. Here it is put in in a different manner. I introduced a resolution myself which was embodied substantially in this proposition which authorized the taxation of mines and did not release them or work any exemption of them, but it taxed the property at its given value by which it would add over two million dollars to the assessable property of this Territory and yet not be felt by any one in the Territory. I say I do this with justice to myself, having asserted this as one of the reasons at that time for my opposition to that measure. But I went further at that time and stated that I believed that no system was builded upon a better foundation than that which declared equal taxation. But my observation and experience in this matter has demonstrated to me the perfect wisdom and propriety of the proposed article of this constitution with reference to the taxation of mines. I mention this simply in connection with the other matter as illustrating its bearing upon this proposition.

The Chair put the question and the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. President, I offer an amendment to strike out of the second section the words "Actual places for religious worship."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I ask unanimous consent to have the ayes and nays entered upon the Journal upon the amendment offered by Mr. Toole.

The President: It cannot be done except by unanimous consent. If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Mr. President, since the vote was so decisive I object to the vote being taken.

The President: The Chair would state the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula. The amendment is to strike out of line 4 the words "Actual places for religious worship."

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I want to premise what I have to say on that question by saying that I am a member of a Christian church and profess to be a christian, and am a christian, and yet I believe it is wrong to exempt churches from taxation. I believe that it is in violation of the principles of the bill of rights which we adopted the other day, and in violation of the fundamental principles of our country, that is, the separation of church and state entirely. But the bill of rights which we adopted the other day says "No person shall be required to attend or support any ministry or place of public worship." I believe if we adopt this provision that we compel every person to support a place of public worship. By exempting the property of one person from taxation we necessarily increase the taxation upon everybody else's property. A certain amount has to be raised. If the property of one person is exempted of course the property of other persons is taxed that much higher to make up for the difference, and if you exempt church property you must necessarily tax the property of everybody else to support that church. I believe that it is wrong in principle. There may be some people in this Territory that do not believe in churches at all. I do not know that there are, but there may be, and we do by adopting this proposition force those persons, who are citizens of the State perhaps, to support places of public worship in the way I have stated. There may be Jews in this country who have no synagogue in this town for instance. By exempting the property of other denominations from taxation, I say that you force those jews to support places of worship that they do not believe in and do not believe ought to be supported, and you violate the principle of the bill of rights, and in my judgment violate a fundamental principle of our institutions, the separation of church and State. I have made this motion because I believe that it is right fundamentally. I am in favor of churches, but I say let everybody support its own church, and do not force people who are not in favor of churches to support my church or your church. That is my doctrine.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I will say in connection with what has fallen from the lips of my illustrious friend from Missoula County that I am not a member of a christian church (laughter). I would say, though I cannot say it with so much assurance as he has, that I am a christian. What may happen in the providence of God hereafter, I do not know. Men have fallen from grace and men have ascended, but I say this that the force of habit from infancy compels me to differ with him, as much as I regret it, upon this question; and while I would limit the valuation of the property exempted much less than it is in the bill, say $25,000, I am in favor of the proposition. I do not think it is necessary to have a church made up of mahogany and decorated with alabaster and everything of that kind, but I believe in making them respectable places to go and worship according to the consciences of the members and I for one am in favor of exempting church property from taxation and will so vote.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I certainly shall vote against the adoption of this amendment. If the argument of the gentleman from Missoula County is a good one to be sustained he should have stricken out all of lines three and four, for he says what releases or exempts one person's property thereby increases the burden of every other person or persons. Therefore, if his argument is a good one, then I say to be consistent he should include in his amendment all of lines three and four which read like this: "As may be used exclusively for agricultural and Horticultural societies, for educational purposes." Then again "Places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit". Now when the gentleman is consistent enough to incorporate in his amendment these words that I have just read, then I think his argument may have some force, but not until then.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: It seems to me the provisions of this amendment are wise, and that they are progressive ones. The only argument that can be advanced in favor of non-taxation of the church is the fact that it is strictly a moral institution and that it advances strictly moral ideas. That is a good argument and as far as it goes it is logical, but we have also in the limits of the United States and the other civilized countries other institutions that are of a moral character and that have for their sole object the dissemination of moral and intellectual ideas. If you carry this principle to its logical conclusion, in my mind you should exempt from taxation all public and private libraries, all public halls that are used by speakers, and all newspapers that are of a moral character sufficient to warrant this exemption. Laughter. In my mind, there is no institution, there is no living factor today that exerts the moral influence upon the people of this country that the newspaper does. It holds up to the execration of the public mind those who by their failure in public conduct, have neglected their duties and thereby deserve discredit, while on the other hand it holds up to the eulogy and the admiration of the rising generation all those who by strict attention to their duties and their public conduct deserve such eulogy; and in my mind the power that they possess is fully as great as that of the church. When you come down to the cultivation of moral doctrines and beliefs it is not in the church alone that these are propagated. It is in the school. It is at the home; and in fact it is in every avenue of life where men by either word or example can inculcate these beliefs or doctrines. Furthermore by exempting churches when you exempt the rich and the powerful you only use the argument that by exempting the wealthy church property worth, say, a million of dollars, they escape large burdens, whereas its neighbor of a more unpretentious character perhaps may not be worth one tenth of that amount—you necessarily use the argument that the church worth millions is doing much more good in the world than the church which is only worth a thousand. And if there is any logic in the statement it is true in an inverse ratio. I believe that churches are not essential and not advantageous in a direct proportion to the wealth and the influence that they exert. I believe that there is many an unpretentious church made out of huge logs and situated on ground that is not worth scarcely the effort to secure the fee title to it, that is of more worth in a moral sense, that it inculcates nobler principles and nobler examples than some pretentious church in some City with its spires stretching spreading towards the Heavens and its colleges spreading over the earth. I do not wish to say anything that would be considered sacrilegious towards the church. I believe that the church, although I am not a professor of any religion, does good in its sphere. But I believe, considering the condition of our public affairs today, in which taxation is one of the most important economical principles in the administration of governmental affairs, I believe that we should get right down to the root of it, and that all institutions that are not strictly of a public character should pay their pro rata of taxes; and I believe when we reach this conclusion we will have taken such steps in the administration of our economic affairs as will place us on the road to a settlement of those great issues that disturb us today. As I have said before, in questions touching upon this point, you cannot alter the conditions of our government without altering the elementary principles thereof; but I believe that by making taxation universal, and exempting nothing unless it be of a public character, that we shall have taken the first and most important step in regulating our affairs, so that the burdens of taxation shall bear equally upon all—the most important step that can be taken without changing the elementary principles of our government.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: Mr. President, if no other member wishes to say a word, I will only consume a moment or two, in reply to the gentleman of Silver Bow. He did not convince me that I am at all inconsistent. It may be right to encourage agricultural societies and anything that will encourage agriculture, and there is no principle that I know of, either fundamentally declared in our Bill of Rights or anywhere else, that would prevent the State from paying taxes; but I say there is a fundamental principle that does prevent the State from encouraging religious institutions and requiring everybody to encourage them whether they want to or not; and this thing of exempting church property from taxation does force everybody to support the churches, because as I said before that exemption is to be made up by taxation upon citizens. It requires every citizen to pay his money to the support of the church—of any church; and I say it is wrong in principle to require the Jews to support christian churches. We require the infidel to support christian churches; we require the protestants to support catholic churches. It may be there is a catholic church in a place that is worth ten times more than all the protestant churches there, and by exempting it from taxation you make every protestant pay to support that church; and it is for that reason that I say we have no right to do it, because we do not want to mix up church and State. As we have said in our Bill of Rights, the citizen shall not be forced to support any place of public worship. The very same words are used that are used in this section, and I do not think there is any inconsistency. I believe the church is a great moral institution, that it does a great deal to improve the morals of the country. I agree to that; and it is right that we should exempt charitable institutions, and probably agricultural societies, and all that; but I do not see the inconsistency in making the members of each church support their own church.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I cordially agree with my friend that as disseminators of religious views, we would not have the right to favor churches by exempting them from taxation; but he says in his argument that these churches are great moral agencies, and according to that aspect I think we clearly have the right to exempt them from taxation. Now what does that mean? What is the great cost of government, after all? Where does the large proportion of our taxes go? For the punishment of crime, for the maintenance of people in the penitentiaries, for the burdens that are brought upon the State by the violation of morals. That is the great drain upon the resources of the people. That is where our money goes. Now, if the old adage that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure has any efficacy or virtue, is it not a profitable and wise investment on the part of the State to encourage any institution which has a tendency to form the mind of the youth that crime may be prevented, looking at it as a practical illustration. We claim that these churches are moral educators, as means for the prevention of crime and consequently as means of saving money to the State. That is the ground that I cast my vote on.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I am opposed to this amendment. I believe in exempting churches because they are moral institutions. All churches teach morals. They all teach that it is wrong to steal, and to bear false witness, and to murder. If they do nothing else but that, I would say certainly the State should support them. But all churches teach something else besides that. They all have their peculiar religious notions and peculiar creeds that they support, but it is not on that ground that they should be supported by the State. It is only as moral institutions that they should be exempt from taxation and as they contribute to that end, why I am willing to have them exempted. That has been the rule in the past and I have never heard of any great harm happening on account of the exemption of churches but once, and that was an old friend of mine that used to be here in Montana—old man Stone, who said that one reason Ohio went democratic one year was that they had exempted all the churches and they did not exempt all the lecture halls and turner halls and rooms where they had spiritualistic lectures, and the people that attended the exercises in such places as those got mad and voted the democratic ticket and beat the republicans that year. That is the only harm I have ever known to come from exempting churches from taxation. (Laughter).

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall).

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow, called for the ayes and nays.

There being sufficient number in favor of the ayes and nays, the Clerk called the roll and the vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Breen, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Caldwell, Cauby, Cooper, Craven, Hatch, Hobson, Kennedy, Kohrs, Luce, Marshall, McAdow, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rotwill, Schmidt, Watson, Witter,—24.

Nays: Aiken, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gayford, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hershfield, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Loud, Maginnis, Marion, Mayger, Muth, Reek, Rickards, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, Joseph K., Toole, J. R., Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President,—44.

Absent: Brazleton, Brown, Gillette, Knippenberg, Middleton, Robinson, Webster,—7.

The Chair announced the vote on the said motion and declared the amendment lost.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the convention do now adjourn.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Just one moment. Before the words "Place of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit" I would like to put in the word "Hospitals." Hospitals have been built in this town, and I suppose in all our mining towns, and I think if there is any charity that deserves the recommendation of this convention it is that. I move the word "hospitals" be inserted in such a way that it shall apply to hospitals that are not kept for private gain.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. Mr. Maginnis and a vote being taken the same was declared carried on division by a vote of thirty-six in the affirmative and fourteen in the negative.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I now renew my motion to adjourn.

The President: There is an amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Bullard of Jefferson: Before that motion is put I would like to be excused during tomorrow's session.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused. The chair has a telegram from Mr. Brazleton of Deer Lodge County, in which he asks to be excused until tomorrow at 2. If there be no objection, this gentleman will be excused. The question is now upon the motion of the gentleman from Custer that the Convention do now adjourn.

The Chair put the said motion, and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 32 in the affirmative to 27 in the negative.

The Convention stood adjourned until Wednesday, July 31, 1889.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY

Wednesday, July 31, 1889.

Morning Session.

The Convention was called to order at 10 A. M. by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. Middleton is unavoidably detained until tomorrow, and I desire to ask that he be excused.

The President: The gentleman from Custer will be excused. The Chair has a message from Mr. Knippenberg in which he says it is impossible for him to get here for two or three days. If there be no objection he will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

The President: The Chair has received a communication from General Ruger, commanding the Department of Dakota, which, if there be no objection, will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Headquarters of Department of Dakota,

St. Paul, Minnesota, July 25, 1889.

To the presiding officer of the Constitutional Convention of Montana, Helena, Montana.

Sir: I have the honor, in accordance with instructions received from the War Department, to request that the consideration of the Convention be invited to the proposition that a clause be inserted in the constitution of the State of Montana by which jurisdiction shall be reserved to the United States, as provided in Section 8 Article I of the Constitution, over the military reservations of Fort Assiniboine, Custer, Keogh, Maginnis, Missoula and Shaw, heretofore declared by the President.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,

THOMAS H. RUGER,
Brigadier General Commanding."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I have received a copy of the resolution that I believe was prepared by the Secretary of War on this subject, and I will introduce it and have it referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Resolution No. 28, introduced by Maginnis: See.....Jurisdiction is ceded to the United States over the Military reservations of Fort Assiniboine, Fort Custer, Fort Keogh, Fort Maginnis and Fort Shaw, heretofore declared by the President of the United States, provided legal processes, civil and criminal, of this State, shall extend over such reservations in all cases of which exclusive jurisdiction is not vested in the United States, or of crimes not committed within the limits of such reservations."

The President: If there be no objection this resolution, with the communication from General Ruger, will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, in connection with that I desire to say that there has been great difficulty sometimes in regulating the matter of Jurisdiction over grounds purchased by the United States for public buildings. I think the whole thing ought to go to the Judiciary Committee. It is a question of constitutional law. I think it ought to go to the Law Committee of the Convention.

The President: If there be no objections to the matter being referred to the Judiciary Committee, it will be so referred.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke sent up report of committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Report of Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects on Resolution 27, July 30, 1889."

Mr. President, your committee on Miscellaneous Subjects to whom was referred Resolution No. 27 by Meyers of Yellowstone to prohibit persons who hold United States offices from holding office under the State at the same time, have agreed to report favorably on the Resolution and recommend its adoption.

(Signed) L. H. HERSHFIELD, Chairman."

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention concerning this report?

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move it be placed on the general file to be considered in connection with the Article on "Miscellaneous Subjects".

The motion was seconded.

The President: If there be no objection the report will be placed upon the general file to be considered in connection with the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher sent up report of the Committee on Irrigation.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Your committee on irrigation to whom the petition from the Society of Civil Engineers was referred beg leave to report that they have had the same under advisement, and believing that the matter to which the petition refers belongs to the Legislature rather than to this Convention, would report on the same adversely."

(Signed) PARBERRY, Chairman."

The President: If there be no objection the report of the Committee on Irrigation will be received and will be considered adopted.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke sent up report of the Committee on Rules.

The President: The report of the Committee on Rules in reference to Mr. Burleigh's resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolution by Burleigh. Limits of debate in Committee of the Whole to five minutes for each member. July 29, received, read and referred to the Committee on Rules. Mr. President: A majority of your Committee on Rules report the within resolution back without recommendation.

(Signed) J. K. TOOLE, Chairman.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention upon this report?

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I ask that it may be taken up and considered at the present time.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move you that the report be rejected and that the resolution as presented by the gentleman from Custer be adopted by this Convention.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula moves that the resolution offered by the gentleman from Custer be adopted.

The Clerk read the said resolution as follows:

"Resolved that all debate in the Committee of the Whole shall be limited to five minutes for each member."

The motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Kennedy) was seconded.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the intent of the mover of this resolution, whether he means each speech or whether he means the second, third and fourth speeches, bunched together.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I will answer. It was intended that each speech shall be limited to that, but I discovered I made a mistake in offering the resolution. I should have provided that at least three quarters of an hour should be added to the introductory remarks of some members. (Laughter)

Mr. Collins of Cascade: If we pass this resolution, in Committee of the Whole, each member can only speak five minutes and only once. I believe that is gagging us a little too much.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I want to say in connection with this that the Committee on Rules does not seem to be a standing committee, and I was unable to see the entire committee. I saw the members of the committee that were here yesterday in the convention, and I found such a difference of opinion among the members that we were compelled to report this back without recommendation. I do not think it will be wise for the convention to adopt it. It might do to adopt such a resolution and make it applicable to the proceedings of the convention, but in the Committee of the Whole where these matters come up, I doubt the wisdom of the measure. The Committee of the Whole was inaugurated for the express purpose of giving the widest latitude possible for debate, and if we are to have any debate at all, the proper place for it, it seems to me is in the Committee of the Whole. Any reasonable restrictions that are sought to be put upon the members in convention would meet with my approval, but I do not think this resolution ought to relate to the proceedings of the Committee of the Whole.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I fail to see any advantage which this convention has derived from debating these matters in the Committee of the Whole. It is the same body, with the exception of a different presiding officer. These matters are brought up. The propositions are read section by section, debated in committee and adopted in committee; but it is not a finality. When the committee rises the same thing is gone over precisely, and it seems to me a waste of time to go into Committee of the Whole upon any of these propositions at this state of the convention. Of course, these are my individual views. Other gentlemen have a right to differ from me as they do, but it seems to me a work of supererogation after having discussed these matters in Committee of the Whole to discuss them in convention. And while they are gone over serially, as they are in the Committee of the Whole, to go through the same thing again in the convention, it seems to me, is a clear waste of time.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I endorse thoroughly the views of the gentleman from Custer County. We have a curious set of rules here, and unnecessary time is taken up in discussing these various propositions twice. Once in the House would be sufficient, and if we had the ordinary rules that are used generally in legislative houses to limit these amendments and discussions in the House, I would be opposed to this change in the rules; but as we go over each proposition again thoroughly in the convention after it returns from the Committee of the Whole, I do not see any use in the first place of going into the Committee of the Whole at all. It is only by reason of an arbitrary rule that these propositions have to be submitted to the Committee of the Whole, and if we have to go over them entirely in the body of the convention again, I am in favor of limiting the debate somewhat in the Committee of the Whole.

The President: The question is upon the resolution offered by the gentleman from Custer.

The Chair then put the said question and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-five in the affirmative to twenty-nine in the negative.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, there is another report which I have presented—the report of the Committee on Rules.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Resolution by Maginnis, prescribing manner of acting on report of Committee of the Whole. July 27 received, read and referred to the Committee on Rules.

"Mr. President, your Committee on Rules having had the within resolution under consideration, have directed me to report the same back without recommendation.

"(Signed)

J. K. TOOLE, Chairman."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I will withdraw the resolution, as the practice of the convention seems to be settled.

The President: That can be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I ask for the reading of the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Resolved that when the Committee of the Whole makes its report that the same shall be read as a whole; then the vote shall be taken upon the amendments recommended by the committee, and when these are disposed of the report shall be submitted for adoption, rejection or recom-mittal as a single question."

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I move the adoption of the rule.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge—Mr. Robinson—and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 18 in the affirmative to 33 in the negative.

The President: Are there any other reports of standing committees?

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I do not know that I am entitled to offer this resolution at this time, but I offer the following.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Resolved, the Committee on Ordinance is hereby directed to incorporate as a part of the article on Ordinance the following provision. There is hereby submitted to the qualified electors the following as a separate proposition, and if it receives a majority of all the votes cast at the election for the adoption of this constitution, then such provision shall form and constitute a part of the constitution. The form of the vote of those who may vote for such provision shall be 'For Woman Suffrage'; those who may be opposed the form shall be, 'Against Woman Suffrage'. Article Woman suffrage, Section 1. The Legislative Assembly shall have the power to grant to all female citizens of the state over the age of 21 years the right to vote at all elections. Offered by Callaway of Madison.

The President: If there be no objection this resolution will be referred to the Committee on Suffrage.

The President: The next order is unfinished business. The convention had under discussion Section 2 of the Article on Revenue and Taxation, being proposition number 27. Everything was disposed of. The Chair had an amendment offered by Mr. Schmidt of Silver Bow. Mr. Schmidt offers to amend Section 2 by placing the word "Actual" on line 4, so as to read "Places for actual religious worship."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow Mr. Schmidt, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to have consent this morning to reconsider the vote by which the amendment offered by Mr. Toole, the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, was adopted, striking out the last sentence. I move that the vote by which that was adopted be reconsidered.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman moves that the vote by which the last clause of Section 2, beginning at the words "The Legislative Assembly" was stricken out, be reconsidered.

The Chair put the said question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade Mr. Collins, and a division being called for the motion was declared lost by a vote of 18 in the affirmative and 30 in the negative.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I desire to offer the following amendment to Section 3.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is entitled to the floor.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: In view of the result of the last motion, I would like to introduce this as a part of Section 2.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Before proceeding to Section three I would like to offer an amendment to Section 2. To Mr. Hershfield Is yours to Section 2?

Mr. Hershfield: Yes sir.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers to amend Section 2 by adding the following: "Add to Section 2 after the word taxation in the fifth line "The Legislative Assembly may provide that the increased value of land by reason of live fences, fruit and forest trees grown and cultivated thereon, shall not be taken into account in the assessment thereof for taxation."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, our committee was somewhat in doubt at first as to the propriety of inserting that resolution, thinking that the part of Section 2 which was stricken out yesterday by the convention would cover that purpose. Therefore, I thought that as that is an industry which is surrounded by a great deal of difficulty in our Territory on account of the impoverishment of our lands, that these people who endeavor to cultivate their ground, their farms and their homes ought to have that much consideration at least. That was the motive of the introduction of the present resolution, which I trust will be properly considered at the hands of the convention.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would suggest that there be some limit to this. This constitution will stand for 100 years. What is now a barren plain will be one of the most beautiful places in the world by reason of trees. I would suggest to my friend that it be limited to some time.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: It leaves it to the Legislature.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke Mr. Hershfield, and a division being called for the same was carried by a vote of 46 in the affirmative to none in the negative.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to amend by inserting in line 7 "But such exemption shall be by general law."

The President: That clause was stricken out.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: No, the clause with reference to the discretion in exempting other property was stricken out. This amendment of mine comes in after the last word. It has no reference to the amendment by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The President: That clause was stricken out on motion of Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Loud, of Custer, sent up an amendment.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Before any other amendment is offered I ask for information. Was not the motion to reconsider the vote by which this last clause was stricken out—wasn't it carried?

The President: No sir, the motion was lost.

The Clerk read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer as follows: "All taxes levied upon the business of raising, growing or ranging horses, cattle, sheep and other livestock shall be levied upon the net proceeds of the same."

The motion was seconded.

The President stated the motion.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Now, Mr. President, this amendment is just as important and is as much entitled to the favorable consideration of this convention as any amendment that has been offered here. It has been offered by my friend in the best of faith, who believes that he is entitled to have that inserted in the constitution. But it suggests itself of my mind to ask this question: Where is this constitution drifting? Where are we to land? What is to become of us if we go on in this manner when we get through with our labors here? We have placed ourselves in the ridiculous attitude of having surrendered the peoples rights and placed them beyond their control, and having resolved this convention into a legislative body of the very lowest order. Now, I am opposed to the whole system. As I said before, I am aware that whatever is put in this constitution here and ratified by the people is a surrender of the political rights of the people of this Territory, and is placing it beyond their control. I am opposed to the whole system, and while my friend has put his motion in good faith, he has put in here in consequence of precedents established by other resolutions in favor of other interests than the interests which he represents. Now, I say that if those various interests are entitled to the favorable consideration of this convention that the interests which he represents are entitled to the same consideration. I for one am opposed to the whole thing. What is a constitution? It is an organic law. It is the framework for the legislation to fill up. It prescribes the limits beyond which they shall not go. It is a limitation of power and nothing else; and I tell you we are in danger of drifting upon shoals and quicksands here that will run the people. I am afraid that when the constitution comes up for public discussion, and is considered by the people, that there will be gnashing of teeth. There are just as intelligent people in this Territory as there are in this convention, just as good people, just as good lawyers, and they will ventilate this thing and expose all of its defects by the force of reason. I think it is time to call a halt. As old Captain Starbuck said, "It is time to heave the ship to and find out the storm centers and which way the wind blows." We will get ourselves into a position here that is as unenviable as any position that men ever placed themselves in, and we will be stamped as anything but constitutional lawyers and wise constitution makers if we go on as we are doing.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Loud) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, sent up an amendment which the Clerk read as follows:

"Amend Section 3 by adding thereto the following: And the Legislative Assembly shall provide some stringent means to ascertain the actual income. No salaries paid officers of the mining corporations shall be accounted as an expense or deducted from the gross earnings. The levy shall not be less than two per cent of the net earnings."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and a vote being taken it was declared lost.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I move we strike out in Section 3, line 2, after the word "deposits" the following words "after patent shall have been issued therefor by the United States."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I would like to say, Mr. Chairman, that that would exempt mines or mining property from the time of making final proof until patent was issued. I am inclined to think that that is not the intention of this committee. After a man has made his final proof on his property he has a right to own it and operate it, sell it, or otherwise, before patent issues, the same as after patent issues. Any little matter might detain the papers or delay the issue of the patent for a number of years. In my experience in obtaining title to government lands and mineral claims, the time of issuing patents varies from a few months to six years. I have known it to run as far as six years, yet in that time I had actual possession of the property, have sold property and received all the benefit from it. Now, if this section is adopted with those words in it, the eleven words following the word "deposits" on the second line of Section 3, it will have the tendency to exempt from taxation all mining claims, with the permanent improvement thereon, such as buildings that are taxed with the realty until such time as patent may issue. It would be an exemption of property from taxation other than was contemplated I think by the committee that framed and made this report; therefore I hope my motion will be sustained.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I hope the amendment will not prevail. I would correct the gentleman in regard to the machinery and the improvements upon unpatented ground.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I would say that I did not mention machinery. I said the buildings attached to the realty.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I would say under this clause that all machinery and buildings of any kind whatever on patented as well as unpatented ground is taxable the same as any other property in the Territory. There seems to be a disposition in this convention and by some members who are honest enough about it but who do not understand the position of mines to overtax the mines and mining claims. A mining claim is paying as much tax, if not more, at the present time, than any other property in this Territory. As a miner myself I have asked no exemption from taxation, we are willing to pay our proportion, but any other bill or provision except this before the convention now would be a burden upon the miners. As for the taxing of mines before they are patented I do not believe the constitution of the United States would allow such a thing to be done because they belong to the government. A man may have a prospect, without anything at all, and yet he will be taxed upon that prospect, and I do not think it is the intention of this convention to tax a piece of property of that kind. If he improves that property and puts anything on it, that improvement is taxable, which tax the miner is willing to pay. Therefore, Mr. President, I hope this amendment will not prevail.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I think I can explain somewhat the law upon this subject. In an early decision that was made in the Territory, and the attempt to forfeit mining claims that were sold to the Territory, it was decided that the government could do nothing to interfere with this possessory right of mining claims; that it was interfering with the right of the government of the United States in the primary disposal of its soil. It was put in that decision on the ground that the Territory had no sovereignty in this matter. Since that time there has been a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in regard to taxing lands on the lines of these Pacific railroad companies and where they have contracted to sell or give patents to dispose of to these railroad companies, in consideration of their building the railroad, and patents have not issued, they have decided that they cannot be taxed; that the government of the United States still has an interest in those lands.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Have they not decided, Judge, that the title passed to the railroad by the grant without a patent?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I know the decisions of the courts are very peculiar on that point. They decide that it passes to the railroads without the grant, but that when it comes down to taxing them it does not pass them enough so that they can tax them. The decisions are a little peculiar on that. We have a special bill by Congress upon the railroads where they are surveyed. Now, that is a bill that has been passed in the last five years.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: If the gentleman from Silver Bow will allow me to interrupt him a moment, I would ask him if he can explain that peculiarity?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: No sir, I am not exactly lawyer enough to know why the railroads as an actual fact have a grant in present and yet have not a good grant enough to be taxed. I cannot explain it, but that is the decision of the court and we have to abide by it. Then, there is a disposition to hold that the propriety of mining claims and holding them and working them is really a sort of a process of purchasing them from the United States, and until they get title, that they cannot be taxed. Well, with that view the Legislature passed these laws in relation to taxing mines; but in the decision that was rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States in relation to taxing the Comstock mine, which I think was taxed on the net proceeds the same as we tax them here, why, they held that that was subject to taxation and that it was proper. Now, the Comstock mine was not patented. It never has been patented. And yet the Supreme Court of the United States has held that that is proper. So I apprehend that the Legislature of Montana Territory, taking this other view of the matter, thought that they could not tax; while I believe that they can tax this possessory right under this decision relating to the Comstock lode and that mines that are not patented can be taxed the same as patented mines, only it must be so worded that it will only tax this possessory right, that it must not tax a mine as a mine or real property.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Is there any objection to striking out those words?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: No, I do not know that there is, except that we make it in such a way that we tax the whole mine and not tax simply the easement or mining right. I see no reason why we cannot tax in the state these possessory rights just the same as we do after they get a patent.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: There ought to be no inequality about it.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: No sir, I know that that was the reason that the Legislature failed to pass this law, because they did not believe they had the right. If they had thought they had the right they would have taxed the properties, but I believe they can tax unpatented lands if the law is properly worded.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I understand the objection of the gentleman to be that he has no objection to the taxation of mines after the issuing of the final receipt. This, I believe, has been the custom in agricultural districts that, where farmers and people have paid for their lands and got their final receipt, the land is then subject to taxation. Now, I have had a little experience in this matter of mining improvements, and I have some mining property which has been taxed from the time I paid for the property or got my final receipt from the Register and Receiver. This, I believe, is the point the gentleman makes, that the property ought to be taxed from the day it is paid for in the United States land office, and I am of the opinion that he is correct in this matter. My property has been taxed since I received my final receipt. I raised an objection but it was held that it was taxable. The gentleman wants to do away with this long and protracted delay of the Government in the withholding the issuing of patent. The land is practically owned by the person who pays for it. While he has no patent he has the final receipt, and a sale is recognized just the same as though he had a patent. I think the amendment should be so amended, if it could be suggested by some of the mining gentlemen here, that the words "final receipt" be substituted for "patent." I do not think there would be any hardship in the matter one way or the other.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I would say in answer to the gentleman that this bill evidently provides for that. Strike out the words "After patent has been issued by the United States." Then the bill goes on to say "Shall be taxed at the price paid to the United States." The price paid for these mining claims, agricultural or any other claims, is paid at the time of making final proof; that is, the final payment is made then, and the party who makes the final proof and pays the Government price for this land or mining claim, as the case may be, is then to all intents and purposes as much the owner of that property as though a patent had issued for all practical purposes. He can work it; he can sell the mine, improve it, etc. Hence, I claim it may be taxed the same as any other property. That is the rule that obtains in the agricultural districts in the counties in which I have been paying taxes, and I see no reason why it should not apply to mines immediately upon the payment and making final proof and paying the Government price, that the mining claim then should be subject to taxation the same as agricultural lands.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not see how there can be any objection really in striking out those words. Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States and many of the states it has been held that when a final receipt has been issued, whether it be to agricultural lands or mineral lands, or any other public lands of the United States, the party that has that receipt has a perfect equitable title to the land and that the Government retains only a legal title, and that when the receipt is issued that it is then a proper subject of taxation, except in the case which was mentioned by the gentleman from Silver Bow, which is under special acts of Congress granting lands to railroad companies; and the reason for that discrimination grew out of the fact that there was inserted in the bill of provision, which, at the time of its introduction, looked really as if it was done in the interest of the people, but it, as a matter of fact, was done in the interest of the railroad company; and that was that "no patent should issue to any of the lands hereby granted until the sum of ten cents an acre" which was intended to include the cost of surveying, selecting and conveying the land "should be paid to the railroad company." And it was held that until that amount of money had been paid that there was no right to, and that consequently there was no authority for the taxing of these lands. But if these words are stricken out it will leave it so that, by the decisions of the Court as they have been pronounced and exist today, no mining lands or other public lands could be taxed until the final receipt had been issued, and the land paid for, and when that was done they would be subject to taxation just the same as patented land. And I agree with the propriety of the suggestion made by the gentleman from Yellowstone that if we leave the word "patent" in, it will delay the matter at the General Land Office in Washington for four or five years and the mine itself escape taxation for that period of time, that there is no reason why the owner should not be taxed.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Is an amendment now in order?

The President: Yes sir.

The gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin offers to amend the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone by inserting the word "certificate" after the word "patent" in line 2.

The motion was seconded.

The President: Is this offered as an amendment to the section, or as an amendment to the amendment?

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: An amendment to the section.

The President: It cannot be considered then in the light of an amendment, and hence the question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I desire before the vote is taken on my amendment to say that Mr. Dixon has an amendment prepared which I would like to include in my motion.

The President: An amendment to the amendment?

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Yes sir. I would like to include it as a part of my amendment.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I will offer that, Mr. President, as a substitute for the suggestion offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers the following: Amend the amendment by inserting instead the following: "After purchase thereof from the United States." The gentleman from Yellowstone accepts this amendment.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: With the consent of my second, I will move to strike out the eleven words in the second line, and insert in lieu thereof that which Mr. Dixon has set out.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: The amendment contemplates the striking out "After patent has been issued therefor by the United States" and inserting instead thereof "After purchase from the United States."

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the vote being taken was declared carried.

The President: The amendment as amended would include the striking out of the words "after patents shall have been issued therefor by the United States" and insert in lieu thereof "after purchase thereof from the United States."

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: All I have to say on that matter is that it amounts to about the same thing. A piece of land is purchased from the United States and patent issued therefor. Then the language could remain as in Section 3 by adding the word "certificate" after the word

"patent" in Section 2. Then it would read like this: "After patent certificates shall have been issued therefor by the United States, shall be taxed, etc." You cannot tax lands so long as the title remains in the United States, and upon any sale by the United States to a private proprietor or purchaser, a patent certificate always issues therefor, and it has been held that whenever a patent issues, it relates back to that purchase, of course. My amendment covers all the ground. I have no choice as between the two.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment to the proposition.

The President: The gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, offers the following amendment: "Strike out all of Section 3."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Now, Mr. President, I desire to say this, and it is merely a reiteration of what I said before, that I do not believe it is proper for this convention to proceed here in the manner we are proceeding to legislate—usurp the functions of the Legislature. I think this is a matter that should by every principle known to constitutional law, and to other law, be left in the hands of the people to be exercised by their representatives in the Legislative Assembly. I know of no reason which would justify us in legislating upon mines here, prescribing the rules by which they are to be governed or taxed, any more than upon stock, cattle or breeding mares, or other species of property. It seems to me to be entirely within the province of the Legislature. Is it possible there is an industry in this country that is of so precarious a nature that the owners and promoters of the enterprise are afraid to submit it to the people to be determined by them? If so, I would advise all such men to abandon such avocation and pursue some calling which is not of so precarious a nature. I desire to place myself fairly and squarely upon record here, in favor of the exclusive right of the people to legislate in regard to all these matters. I know these mines should be fostered. I believe they should be fostered; and I believe the people will foster them so far as they are entitled to be fostered. But I do not believe that it is the prerogative of the delegates in this convention to descend to legislation, and to take these questions up, and to spend their time upon them. I have been out over the mining district here, and I have seen enough of the vast storehouses of wealth in our majestic mountains here to justify me in the belief that, like every other great industrial enterprise, that the interest should be fostered, for I believe it to be one of the cardinal if not the cardinal interest in this Territory; and everything that has a tendency to promote the public wealth and prosperity should be fostered. Now, I am not one of those who believe that it is necessary to build a man of straw for the sake of knocking him down. I believe the proper place to exercise generosity, I believe the proper place to expend labor, is where nature has done most to invite enterprise, and labor, and money; and I believe in no other country in the world has more been done by nature to encourage the industry, the energy of man, and the expenditure of money to develop its resources than in the mines of the gulches and the summits of these mountains; and I will never be found wanting in aiding to the extent of my power in a just, fair and equitable way, whether it be in the way of legislation or otherwise, in the development of these resources. But I cannot consent, and I will not consent to lend my support to the measures which are advocated to transform this convention, which is met here to frame a constitution, an organic law, the framework of all law, for the people of the great state of Montana, into a legislative body.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin, sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) offers to amend Section 3, proposition 27, by adding thereto the following: "Provided that persons, companies or corporations, who have constructed or may hereafter construct ditches or canals for the distribution and sale of water shall be taxed respecting their business of such sale or distribution, and their property connected therewith, only upon the net income from the sale of said water; provided further that the salaries of any officer or trustee shall not be deducted from the gross income in order to arrive at the net income."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

LLEWELLYN A. LUCE ROBERT E. HAMMOND GEORGE J. REEK
 B. PLATT CARPENTER THOMAS F. COURTNEY
 JAMES E. KANOUSE ARTHUR J. CRAVEN

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I would like to call for the ayes and nays upon that question.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Gibson, of Cascade: Is an amendment to that amendment in order?

The President: Not at the present time.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I simply want to say in reference to this amendment that in my opinion the importance of this matter is not truly and really considered by this convention. Mr. President, I consider this one of the most important matters that has been discussed upon this floor. It is a matter that relates to the future development of this new state. This season has demonstrated that the agricultural interests of this Territory cannot further expand without some improvement, and very material improvement in the way of water ditches and water resources. Every available inch of water in this Territory throughout the agricultural districts has been appropriated and has been used and is now vested property. We all know that home capital is very slow to embark in such enterprises as this and so far as my observation has gone it is to the effect that some inducement must be offered to outside investors to get them to put their money in enterprises of this kind. I have in my mind one enterprise of this kind which perhaps is an enterprise of the greatest magnitude of any that has been put into practical operation in this Territory, or perhaps in all our sister territories. This enterprise has been put through in the county where I live—in Gallatin county. It remained for years partially completed and capital declined to take hold of it because there was a lack of inducements. Now, sirs, I believe if there are any inducements to be offered they should be of a general nature. That is to say, they should be relieved of the burdens of taxation. The farmers themselves undertook to offer an inducement for the construction of this great canal, and what has been the result? The law that is upon our statute books that provides that the County Commissioners shall regulate the price of water has been practically abrogated by the promoters of this enterprise going to the farmers themselves and exacting from them contracts covering a period, I will not say a number of years—perhaps Judge Luce can inform me on that point—but if my recollection serves me right, it is some twenty or thirty years.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: No, eighteen years.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: Eighteen years. Very well. The price agreed upon by the farmers and the contractors in this canal was the exorbitant sum of two dollars per inch, and I undertake to say that in future time, as years go by, that these very people who have agreed to pay this exorbitant price for that water will find that they have got a mortgage upon their property worse than any other that could be invented. For instance, it is conceded by those well versed in irrigation matters that it requires one inch per acre, or 160 inches of water for 160 acres of land to irrigate it properly during the season. Take that view of the situation and those people have to pay $320 per year, which I undertake to say they will find a burden that they can scarcely carry; and it seems to me that to relieve the situation, and to relieve the people who desire these water privileges and are not able to build canals themselves, that some inducement ought to be offered. I believe that this resolution as offered by my colleague from Gallatin will accomplish the object. It will accomplish the object in my opinion and relieve these people. It requires very large capital to construct these canals now. As I have said before, all of the smaller waterways have been appropriated and water now has to be taken from the large rivers, and it seems to me that these large tracts or desert sections of our Territory cannot be reached without some such provision as this—without those canals being constructed. In our county at least one-half of the entire area of the county is a hilly waste, while it is the very finest land, land that is composed of washy and vegetable mold wash from the mountains, which can be converted into a flower garden if proper water facilities could be had. Still, it is so located upon an elevated plane that it would take nearly one-half a million of dollars to get water from either the Madison or the Gallatin Rivers. Now, sir, I am in favor of the adoption of this clause as a part of Section three in some form and I hope it will be in proper form. I would be willing to insert there a restriction that the canals or ditches should be large enough to flow ten thousand inches of water, and I would be willing to say that this inducement should end after the ditch or canal had been in practical operation for a period of ten years. Mr. President, I hope the motion will prevail.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me nearly all the gentlemen who have spoken on this question admit the danger of having our water all taken up by rich individuals or rich corporations. They all admit that, unrestricted, the men who own the water and sell it under these conditions—(interrupted).

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him a moment? I had intended to say in answer to the gentleman from Cascade who stated yesterday that speculators were seeking to appropriate this water, that I fear no danger from that direction; that our laws are such that whoever appropriates that water must go ahead and improve their water rights, and if it covers land and for sale at reasonable price, then I have no objection. But they cannot appropriate the water. They can hold it for twenty days only.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I was going to speak of those who took up the water in good faith. The men who hold the water under these conditions practically own the country, and it seems to me that it would establish a system of landlordism in contrast with which the evils of all other systems of landlordism will be as nothing. Now, gentlemen have said that this clause which provides for the County Commissioners can fix the price of water, will be a practical check upon that and prevent them from absorbing the country and its soil by the privileges that accrue to them from their works. But the gentleman from Gallatin himself has shown how easy it is to avoid a restriction of that kind by their going in advance and making these contracts with the farmers so as to cover a long term of years; that they can practically get around a qualification of that kind and be as oppressive in this country as they have been in Colorado or elsewhere.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I was going to further suggest that it was necessary not only for constitutional but legislative protection to protect the farmers against these speculators and against themselves.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: That is exactly the line of argument, my friend, that I was going to make, because all such questions as these present themselves to a people in two aspects. First, the natural desire of immediate and speedy improvement, and secondly, the ultimate and fatal consequences; and, my friend, a policy which ends sometimes in fatal consequences and becomes a great burden and tyranny upon the people is more often lost sight of in the desire that we all have for quick and speedy improvement of the resources of our country. As the gentleman has well said, it is an extremely grave question, and we ought to approach it in the gravest manner, because I can see that a mistake that we make here may lead to most dire and disastrous consequences to the future of this country, and may raise questions that may be difficult to settle by those who may come after us. I sincerely hope that the government of the United States, or the state even, if it delays our improvement a year or so, will ultimately adopt such a policy that all the supply of water will be under the control of the state, which can do justice to all its citizens, and not under the control of the individuals and corporations which may oppress and impoverish the future agriculturists of this country.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I would like to say a few words. The proposition that the government of the United States will within the next fifty years do anything to provide for a system of irrigation in this western country, and make a public appropriation therefor, I think hardly probable. If we are to look to the state to make appropriations for digging these ditches, then the state must incur a debt, and this debt must be paid by taxation, or else there must be some provision by which there is to be a revenue derived from these ditches to the state. Now, in a proposition that was shown me last night it was provided without a vote of the people that the state could not run in debt more than $100,000 except for defense in time of war or something of that kind. Now, $100,000 will not dig very many ditches of any great size, and hence this state, in my judgment, will not be able to dig ditches so long as that provision in the constitution remains. It provides further that the state may go into debt more than $100,000 by a vote of the people, but my judgment is that when you come down to a vote of the people upon that question there will be so many people that are interested in other pursuits than agriculture that it will be almost impossible by a vote of the people to create a debt for digging irrigating ditches. That will require something more than a selfish consideration; it will require a statesmanship that the ordinary run of people will hardly come up to. And now, in relation to these contracts for water; the law enters into every contract, and my impression is now that every contract that will be entered into for water will be subject to the right of these County Commissioners to provide what the rate should be. If that contract was in excess of the maximum rate that was provided by the County Commissioners, I believe that the party could refuse to pay anything more than the maximum rate. I am not positive in regard to this as a matter of law; but that would be my impression. Now, without any examination upon that subject, a contract in relation to water would have to be made subject to the provisions of the law. In relation to previous contracts, contracts that have already been made in relation to water, it would not affect them. We cannot by virtue of our constitution here, or by virtue of any law, impair the obligation of a contract; but future contracts that are made in relation to water, I believe we can provide for in our constitution. I feel that this is an important matter. Mining interests are variable, but if we can settle up our valleys with a thriving farm population we know that here will be permanent wealth; here will be homes, and around homes will accumulate property that will remain the property of the country. The wealth that is created by mines passes away in the next fifty or one hundred years perhaps, but the wealth of the homes will remain, they will become the permanent wealth of the country, and whatever we can do to foster the agricultural interests of this country should be done.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce).

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out those words in the amendment offered with reference to the salary of the officers, so that it will stand upon the same footing exactly as the exemption of mining property. I refer to the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I accept that amendment.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I call for a division of the question.

The President: The Clerk will read the amendment as accepted by the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 3, Proposition Twenty-seven, by adding thereto the following: "Provided that persons, companies or corporations, who have constructed or may hereafter construct ditches or canals for the distribution and sale of water shall be taxed, respecting their business of such sale or distribution, and their property connected therewith, only upon the net income from the sale of said water."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I am decidedly in favor of a system of irrigation that will tend to develop the agricultural resources of this country, and if it is put in its proper place I shall certainly support it. I desire to state to this convention that I have devoted more attention in the last ten years to the subject of irrigation than to any other subject; and I believe that without it our country so far as its agricultural resources are concerned is worthless. With it it will become one of the most fruitful countries on the face of the earth, especially the eastern part of it. I met, the other day, as I was going from Miles City to St. Paul, Mr. Allison, the Senator from Iowa, Senator Hoar of Massachusetts and Senator Hale of Maine, some of whom had been upon this Committee of Irrigation appointed by Congress, and I had several hours in which to talk to them, and I improved the time. I ascertained from them, although I had heard it before through the papers, that Congress had waked up to the interest of the western country, and especially the subject of irrigation, and had appointed a committee to look into it and see what could be done. Well, now, I talked to them something in this wise. They spoke of the barren character of our country. I told them it was so. It was like a garden, fruitful in all that nature could bestow, but was unproductive because it was not cultivated. They wanted to know what system I would recommend; said I, irrigation. Take the waters of the Yellowstone, take the waters of the Missouri, take the waters of all our rivers, and by a system of irrigation turn them out upon the table lands here and upon the bottoms, and mix the water which God made here for a purpose, with the soil, and we can produce bushels and bushels of oats to the acre. They said that was all nonsense. I said, I have seen it produce here without irrigation in the wet season. Now, said I, what are you doing, gentlemen—because I am in the habit of talking very plainly, and have a peculiar way of expressing my ideas—said I, you wise gentlemen in Washington are appropriating hundreds of thousands of dollars of money every year under the pretext of improving the Yellowstone and Missouri Rivers, to drain those waters out, without giving us the benefit of it. If it was left here a few days longer we would get more evaporation; and, said I, what is the necessity of improving the rivers for navigation? That necessity has ceased. Who wants to improve navigation? The railroads have come and there is no occasion for improving the navigation of these rivers for any purpose whatever. Then, said I, you are draining this water out, and you are sending it out to inundate the valleys of the Mississippi, overflow the plantations there and spread disaster and ruin upon that country. Then what? Then you turn in and after having brought this evil upon it, you appropriate hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars to build up levees, to prevent the very act which you have assisted in bringing about. Now, that is the practical effect of it. Every man knows that. Well, now suppose heaven, in its infinite mercy, would bestow a little sense upon those men in Congress—it is devoutly to be hoped for, although unreasonable to be expected—and those men would wake up to the interests of the northwest here—I will say Montana—and to the interests of northern Dakota, that is capable of supporting a population of ten million of people if a proper system of irrigation can be had there, and the waters that are now going to waste could be mixed with the soil of God's earth to bring forth its increase. Until that thing is done there is no reason for us to hope for a permanent dawn of prosperity. Why, I told Allison, said I, you are as far behing old Rameses II, Monarch of the Pharoahs, who lived four thousand years ago as it is possible for a Congressman to be behind a sensible fellow like that. He saw the mighty inundations of the Nile flowing into the Mediterranean while his lands were parched up and burned; his people were suffering from scurvey and all the evils attendant upon a dry climate, and he reasoned thus to himself, "Here I have my slaves, and I irrigate a little spot here, and it produces wonderfully. I will extend it." And he went ahead, and by making vast reservoirs and canals he economized the waters that flowed down. He canaled and irrigated that whole country, and Egypt became under the magic power almost of that monarch the very garden and granary of the earth. Well now, what is there in the system of irrigation? All that we want, because everything is equally distributed here if we only understood it; if we could have reservoirs here to save this surplus of water when it is flowing from the melting snows to the Yellowstone and the Missouri and distribute it over the most of this ground in the dry season here in summer. Take the Big Horn, the Little Horn, the Powder River, and all these creeks that send down such volumes of water in the spring, and store that up in proper storehouses, in reservoirs, and use it during the dry season of the year, and every inch of this soil can be made as productive as the soil of Egypt was. It would be a very expensive system. It cannot be done without great expense, but it can be done because it has been done. If it could be done by the Egyptians in their country, cannot it be done by Americans in the nineteenth century? It may be said that they had slaves. I have yet to learn that a free man where his interest is involved cannot do as much as any slave either Egyptian or African; and I tell you the only hope for Montana is in adopting a system of irrigation here that will economize the water of this country and use it at the time when we need it in moistening the soil, in order that we may cause the earth to produce its fruits. This committee will be here in a few days. I favor the creation of a committee on irrigation for the purpose of preparing some statistics to lay before these people; and as great wonders have been wrought upon men in the past, and as the scales have fallen from the eyes of the blind in the past, and as those who have lost their sight were permitted to see, it is very possible that the Congress of the United States can go through the same miraculous transformation and see the necessities of the western country. But I do not believe that it is proper to insert this in the constitution. Clothe the Legislature with the power, which means to clothe the people with the power, and if a mistake is made one year the people will not be slow to correct it; they will correct it the next; and they will continue to improve in their intelligence, in their enterprise, until they have discovered the true method of accomplishing this desirable end. But to go and nail it down and to rivet it in the constitution, if it goes wrong, means to seal it up forever and for many years, without the possibility of revoking it. I hope the thing will be allowed to go to the Legislature so that they may consult with their constituents, and the people may have a chance to send men up to the Legislature to ascertain what our best interests are and to promote them.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: In order to give us a further opportunity to pursue the investigation into this matter of irrigation, I move that we take a recess until two o'clock. (Laughter)

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge Mr. Toole, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 2 P. M.

Wednesday, July 31st, 1889.

Afternoon session.

The Convention was called to order at 2 P. M. by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The Convention was engaged in the consideration of unfinished business. The Convention has under consideration an amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin to Section 3.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I desire to offer an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin which I believe he is willing to accept.

The President: The substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow for Section 3 will be read by the Clerk, and if the gentleman from Gallatin is willing to accept it as an amendment it will be entertained, otherwise it cannot be.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute for amendment offered to Section 3, Proposition No. 27, by Luce of Gallatin. After Section 3 add the following: And number the succeeding sections to correspond. Section 4. Ditches, canals and flumes heretofore or hereafter constructed by any person, company or corporation for the sale, rental, distribution or other beneficial use of water shall be taxed upon the annual net proceeds of such sale rental, distribution or use, in such manner as may be provided by law. Provided that the use and price of such water shall at all times be subject to regulation by the Board of County Commissioners or other authority as in this constitution provided; and provided further that this Section shall apply only to the ditches, canals and flumes of such persons, companies or corporations as shall within such time as may be provided by law after they commence the sale, rental, distribution or use of water, make and file in the office of the Secretary of State their duly executed written consent to be subject to and comply with all the terms and conditions of this Section and all provisions of this Constitution and the failure of any such person, company or corporation to make and file such consent shall render the ditches, canals and flumes of such person, company or corporation, subject to taxation in the same manner as other property, without regard to this section, so long as said person, company or corporation fails to file such consent.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I will accept that substitute for my amendment.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I do not intend to occupy but a few minutes in making the remarks which I have to make on this amendment, and what I have to say will also be directed towards the motion of the gentleman from Custer to strike out section 3. It is not encouraging to attempt to say anything in favor of a proposition that is apparently as hopeless in favor of a proposition that is apparently as hopeless and unpopular as the one which I am about to espouse in this convention; but I take it to be that the true rule of taxation shall be that all the property shall bear its just proportion of the burdens of taxation, and that the only exception that should be made thereto are the properties of the United States,

Municipal governments, Municipal corporations, and charitable institutions which we have already provided for. Now I am not discussing the merits or demerits of the amendment which is offered by the gentleman, nor am I discussing the merits of section three towards which the motion to strike out is directed. I am ready to say that if this were a legislative body I would heartily support both of those propositions, but much as I dislike to repeat a proposition which has become familiar by its repetition in this convention, I do not believe that it is within the province of this body, that it is within the prescribed or proper duties of it, to insert anything of this character in the Constitution. I do not think there is a man upon this floor who should be here representing any industry in particular. I believe in the inter-dependence of all industries. I do not think you can strike a blow at the mining industry of this territory but what you cripple every other great industry in this great State, and moreover do I believe that if you extend a preference to anyone of these industries you tend to correspondingly injure the other industries. There is still another way in which to look at this proposition. This Constitution is to be adopted by the people; it is to be approved by them. It is to meet with their ideas of what is right, what is just, and what is proper. It is not a Constitutional industry, nor for the stock industry but for the great people of this great State of Montana. Now I pretend to say that while there is merit in this, is it proper that it should be saddled upon the people as a permanent conditional affair. Mr. President, the purposes of the constitution as I understand them to be are to declare principles with reference to conditions which in themselves are permanent. Legislation may be directed to conditions which are of a temporary character, and then when the conditions which have damaged them have passed away it is in the power of the Legislative assembly to repeal the law which was enacted with reference to them when they were in existence; and for those reasons I propose to oppose the amendment which has been offered and I propose to support the motion of the gentleman from Custer to strike out this Section. As I said before, it is not that I am an enemy to the Section: it is not that I oppose the merits of it, for I do not discuss that, but I do say that if this is adopted the constitution will fix this matter irrevocably by its act, and its effect will be that nothing short of a constitutional amendment can change it. It is directed towards conditions which are of themselves temporary and not of a permanent nature. I am well aware of the fact that any word that I utter will do no good in this convention. The convention has already adopted a certain theory in reference to it, and I have no doubt they will continue in it; but I have felt it my duty at this time to declare myself against making a great statute book out of the Constitution of the State of Montana.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I do not desire to discuss this matter, but merely to state that it is desired to put this matter in relation to ditches in a subsequent section by itself and number it Section 4.

The President: The chair is aware that the member made an error, but intended to correct it. The substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow has no reference to Section 3, and is not offered as an amendment to Section 3. It is stated here "A substitute for the amendment to Section 3." But afterwards states "add the following and number the succeeding Sections to correspond. Section 4." This being the case the question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Custer to strike out Section 3. That motion will take precedence to the consideration of this Section.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to inquire why won't it be in the province of the convention to amend the section and make it as perfect as possible.

The President: It is not an amendment to the section but is matter for a separate section.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: The motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow County is to amend Section 3 by adding to it.

The President: No; it is to make it a separate section and number it Section 4. The question before the convention now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, to strike out Section 3.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes: Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Hartman, Haskell, Hobson, Kennedy, Loud, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Watson—10.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Brown, Buford, Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durlee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Graves, Hammond, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Reek, Robinson, Rotwill, Richards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Joseph K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—59.

Absent: Bullard, Cauby, Goddard, Knippenberg, Middleton, Webster—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared said motion lost.

The President: The question recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, which is to constitute a new section.

The Clerk read the said amendment.

Mr. Gibson, of Cascade: I am opposed to the passage of this section because I believe it is an unjust discrimination in favor of such corporations as are contemplated. If such exemption is made it will be because of the benefit that will accrue to Montana from the construction of these canals or ditches. Now, if this principle is allowed, I cannot see why it should not apply to other corporations in the Territory whose work redounds to the benefit and advantage of this Territory. I cannot see, if that principle is correct, why the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the Montana division of the Manitoba Railroad Company should not be subject to this same exemption. These institutions, these corporations have done vastly for the development and benefit of Montana. The advantages which have accrued from them cannot be estimated, and they will continue to benefit this Territory and develop it. It is a notorious fact that these institutions, these corporations have made no money out of Montana. Their net profits amount to nothing, and I cannot see why, measured by the same principles, these railroads should not pay taxes on their net earnings as well. I cannot see why the iron bridges that span the Missouri River down in Cascade and Choteau County should not be subject to the same rule. These corporations that have built these bridges have conferred and are conferring very great benefits upon Choteau and Cascade Counties and the farming interests of those sections of country. The stock interests are being very greatly benefited, and other interests are being benefited in proportion. In fact, I believe that the men of this Territory who are investing their money in great enterprises generally are benefactors, and if you consider the men who associated themselves together to build canals and ditches in this country, I cannot see why you should not consider the men who are investing their money in the development of the great many other interests of the Territory. I do not believe in the principle. I believe it should be relegated to the people. I believe this question is so vast and so important that you will take care of it, and see to it that the best results accrue in the future. Now, I wish to say here that I am in favor of developing the agricultural interests of Montana. I believe they can only be developed to their fullest extent by the application of this system of irrigation contemplated. I believe the water that flows out of these mountains should be carried over the table lands and into the valleys of Montana, and I think every man is a benefactor who takes out a ditch and causes two spears of grass to grow where one was accustomed to grow. I believe in the agriculture of this country, and I believe Montana will never become a great and prosperous commonwealth until we lay strong the foundation of its agricultural interests. I am greatly in favor of any broad system which will utilize the waters of this country in agriculture; but I am not in favor of this particular measure.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: It has been asserted here upon the floor of this convention that in all probability the United States of America, or the state of Montana, would take into consideration and perhaps into actual operation the control of all the waters of the Territory, and so distribute them that every man shall have his share of them. Now, that is one—if I may be excused by the gentlemen who have introduced this idea here—that is one of the impracticable notions that prevail. While we started as far back as 1878, and only this year was there a junketing tour of several gentlemen to come out and look at us and see if we were still inoculated with the idea of bringing a little water on our land. We have known that ever since the first settler threw down his pack in Montana. It is not a new thing. How are you going to do this, if it is done at all? We have provided in our constitution, as is provided in every other, that private property cannot be taken for public use without compensation. It is in general considered that any water right now acquired is private property as sacred as any other property, as sacred as a farm. Then let us understand how the state, for instance, is to take charge of this system of irrigation and give us one great comprehensive system that is to equalize all these waters and distribute them over the Territory. It is one of those things that no man can find out. Let me tell you the man is not within the sound of my voice now that will ever live to see any such thing. You come in contact with every right, every riparian right and every other such obstacle in the way of success of such enterprises. Whenever this country is made to blossom as the rose, whenever these lands are reclaimed from their dusty, dry condition, it will be by the force of individual enterprise and by private enterprise. Let me tell you another thing. You cannot get together today, as the law now stands, and bring one dollar of capital from abroad into this state to build a big irrigating ditch anywhere. If you think so, try it. It cannot be done. People do not let their money out from a distance. They will not bring it here or send it here to be controlled by County Commissioners. There seem to be obstacles enough thrown around the distribution of water in the fact that the rental of these waters shall be left to the Boards of County Commissioners in the respective counties. This is enough to shut out all foreign enterprise in this matter and all foreign capital. Nobody but our own people will ever do it. Now, I want to call your attention to a state of facts that perhaps was not considered, and that is that the private irrigating ditches now in use have been brought upon all the lands that any private individual is capable or able to bring water to. The other enterprises to come are such as will bring water to vast bodies of land, larger bodies of land. It cannot be done by individual enterprise, or probably by home capital. No one farmer can sit down now and pay fifty to seventy-five thousand dollars to bring out an irrigating ditch to irrigate sixty-five to seventy acres of land, however desirable it may be. Farmers have heretofore joined together, four, five, six, eight or ten of them, and have brought water out and put it upon their respective farms. Now, consider one moment this state of affairs. Suppose that the ten men go into operation to bring out water over ditches for ten pieces of land. Without that water not one of those pieces of land is worth a cent. I will show you land all over this Territory in the same condition year after year which is entirely worthless without water. Then they go to work at an expense of five thousand dollars apiece and bring out this water and reclaim this land. The aggregate expense is fifty thousand dollars. The land, when reclaimed, each tract is worth ten thousand dollars apiece. Then you have a tract of land that will be worth to the Territory one hundred thousand dollars by the combined operation of these same men. What will you do? The proposition that now stares me in the face if this is voted down is that the assessor may come and assess this one hundred thousand dollars of property, assess it as he assesses every other species of property, and it is right enough. But it has been created by one irrigating ditch, and then he goes to this other irrigating ditch and he takes that also. That is the proposition now before this convention. I cannot see that there is any wisdom in such a proposition. If there is anything that should be fostered it is the agricultural interests of this country, and I do not want to see the agricultural interest of this country fostered to the detriment of any other interest; but I undertake to say that when you foster that interest in this way you add to every other interest, because you can stretch your eye out here through the valley of the Gallatin, if you please, the best irrigated valley today in Montana, and you will see thousands upon thousands of acres of land that are not worth one cent in their present condition; and on the other hand, you may cast your eye upon any stream and you will see thousands upon thousands and millions of inches of water running to waste and doing nobody any good. Oh, gentlemen tell me that after a while the state will take these up in great reservoirs and distribute them. It will never be done by us while your son, or your son's son, or your grandson's son lives. Let us take care of ourselves today. The great foundation of our wealth is agriculture. I would not give much for the industry of mining or any other industry in this country if it were not supplemented and supported by this interest of the agriculturist. You must not forget that the production, or the conducting of water upon land, creates something new. It makes that green and lovely and beautiful to the eye and useful to man that was before a sage brush patch. Why, you could not picket a mule over night and get enough to sustain him to carry you five miles the next day. All this land may be made as green as the valley of the Nile, as my friend said this morning. That valley, gentlemen, where old Heroditus, the Greek, was cast away and found a new kind of life and new civilization that the Greeks had never heard of before, and old Heroditus went back and told the Greeks of the new god, the eloquent god, and that was the god of water. Water was the great creator and great regenerator in his day, and it is the same today. Give us water today in Montana and we will give you a garden; we will have more water and less whiskey, let me tell you. Wait until the United States, or the state of Montana, takes care of this proposition, and you will have dust flying in your eyes forever, as you have had it here this summer. Look at the spectacle of gentlemen now who have valuable stock, and valuable blooded stock in this Territory, purchasing hay from eastern states to bring to Montana. We can store up all these waters in reservoirs or dams, and there is enough for all reclamation there can ever go on for the next fifty years, to say the least; but we want nothing of this kind; nothing will ever come of it; and I do say I cannot understand how any gentleman in this convention can vote on this third section here aye, and nay for the fourth section proposed by the gentleman from Silver Bow. Mr. President, gentlemen, only reflect one minute. Think of the immense irrigated lands of China. Those are the greatest irrigators on the face of the earth, and every man irrigates there for himself, and I want to correct my old friend from Custer when he tells the convention that old Rameses II built dams and reservoirs up there. They took it out of the Nile. They had the simplest kinds of methods for raising the water while it was high, carrying it in buckets, and every other way they could get the water. When you put water upon arid lands you can safely rely upon the most valuable crops. Irrigation is more reliable than rain. Irrigation cannot possibly be carried on in any country where they depend upon rain; irrigation must be where they depend upon irrigation, because in other countries where the rains descend you may irrigate and then down will come a rain on your crop and destroy it. But the climate of this country is such that you can depend always on irrigation if you can get the water. Now, gentlemen, the question is whether you will have these millions of acres of land that cannot be reached in any other way except by the combined capital of men of your own territory—because that will be the kind of capital employed—or whether any party who is willing to put in his money here and create one hundred thousand acres of land by constructing a ditch that will cost him one hundred thousand dollars will be taxed out of existence for his ditch, or whether he will encourage that man to come along with his ditch and make this new land and add it to the Territory—add this new life, and put us in a condition that whenever we get a drought as we have this year, the next ordinary season we may not be compelled to go down to Nebraska to buy our hay, or to Dakota, or any other place, to buy our wheat.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I am surprised that the gentleman should have so far misapprehended the tenor of my remarks as to suppose that I was opposed to any system of irrigation; but it was in the manner in which it was to be conducted, carried on, that I objected; that is, by legislating it in the convention here and putting it in the constitution. Now while he was talking he made a great many broad assertions, and I imagined at first that I was in a trance, and that something like the thunders and the lightnings of Sinai were passing around my head; and I wondered, in that condition if, when the thing was over and he got down into the presence of the Golden Calf, if he would snatch the tablets of Moses and destroy them, or whether it was true that he, like Elisha of old, had fallen heir to the mantle of wisdom that had fallen from the shoulders of Elijah when he was about crossing the Jordan. Now, he has gone on here to state what he knows about agriculture and irrigation, but he has given us no evidence that he knows anything about either of them. I doubt whether he is a farmer; I doubt whether he irrigated at one time more than six inches of land (laughter); if he has, he has failed to say where it is, and how it was, and where it was done. I am as much in favor of irrigation as he is, and I believe in the advantages of it as much as he does. I believe that without irrigation here upon a broad and comprehensive scale that this Territory can never prosper as an agricultural district; but I did not wish to see men come in here and labor, and toil, and at last find themselves in the clutches of a corporation that for the use of the water would wring everything out of them except the very staff of life. It is not to be supposed that men engaged in the business would kill the goose that lays the golden egg entirely, neither is it to be supposed that the men who embark in this system of irrigation will so utterly prostrate the people who do the labor as to prevent them from getting a profit out of them. But I tell you that the man who puts his faith in corporations is a fool, and he will find that he has got into meshes from which he will never extricate himself. I hope this matter will be fostered by the people of Montana, but I do not believe this is the proper place to put it; and therefore I introduced the amendment which so ingloriously found its way to the tomb of oblivion here. But I believe it is right. I think that when the people come to find and understand the workings of it that you will sustain the action of the few men who voted to strike it out.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: The importance of this question of irrigation is understood by all. The increase in our population will be largely accelerated or retarded by the manner in which this matter is treated. The question is so large and so complicated that it seems to me that any resolution which we can paragraph here will fail to reach its object, and that there is danger, as stated by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke this morning, that we will make some mistake. It seems to me that we would not make a mistake if we would introduce a section in this proposition something like this, that the Legislature at its first regular session shall appoint a commission to consist of, say, three civil engineers, who shall make a thorough and exhaustive survey of the water and of the arid lands of the state, the estimated cost of building these ditches, and submit a report to the Legislature for a grand comprehensive system of irrigation for the whole state. Our Senators and Representatives have been instructed to request Congress to make an appropriation to help build this system. If no action is taken by Congress, then the Legislature of the state might submit it to the vote of the people for their ratification or rejection. The question is so important and interests every individual so much that I believe they would consider it; and I do not think we can get at it in any other way. I remember reading a speech of our late delegate in Congress, J. K. Toole, in which he stated very clearly and concisely and comprehensively the great benefits that had resulted to nations of antiquity from irrigation, and the necessity of Montana adopting a system of that kind. I think that was ably and well stated, and that it is something worthy of our consideration. The trouble is, we do not know exactly what we want. We are striking out at random, and until in a manner we can surround the whole question and enclose it comprehensively, I do not think that Montana will ever reap the benefit from irrigation which it should. I therefore am opposed for that reason to any of these resolutions or amendments, and think it should be left to the Legislature to decide in some such manner as I have mentioned.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I thought this matter was settled yesterday in the Committee of the Whole. I was very much surprised to find today that we have got to go over the same ground again. I believe with a number of the gentlemen who have spoken here that this subject is not a fit matter to go into our constitution. I do not believe that we will be acting the part of wisdom by deciding this great question at this time, by saying to the people of Montana that not only now but for future generations, for centuries and centuries to come, or until our constitution is changed, that we have irrevocably and forever settled this water rights question. I believe it will be hasty action if we do it. I believe it is poor statesmanship to do it. This is the most vital subject that can come before us, not only before us but before the people hereafter. I believe the only sensible way of doing this is to do something in the direction of the suggestion of the gentleman from Silver Bow County. I believe it should be viewed from every standpoint, from a scientific basis and from a common sense basis, from the riparian view, from the view of ownership of water, and from all sides. It should be viewed for the benefit of the people at present, and for the benefit of the unborn people who will inhabit Montana. It is such a broad and such a large question that we should not deal with it at this time. It enters into the very basis of our institutions as an agricultural state, and I do not believe that that great question should be throttled here, and now, and forever. If the gentlemen of this convention will only look up the speech delivered by the gentleman who last represented us in Congress upon this subject of irrigation, read that carefully and come into this convention tomorrow and vote according to their views after that, I will say that there is not a half dozen members here who will vote to throttle this question. Now, the state needs irrigation. You can add one hundred fold to everything that has been said in favor of irrigation; you can bring your greatest orator on earth to say it, and then increase the powers of the orator one hundred times more, and he could not say as much for irrigation as I feel. But, feeling as I do upon the matter, thinking as I do, that it was such a serious and vital question, I do not believe that this constitution should here and now stop future views and tie the hands of the Legislature upon it. If you do, then I say go at it in a practical business shape; go at it like a people that feel that this interest is at the very foundation of their existence. Organize irrigating Districts throughout the portions of your State; authorize those irrigating Districts, to take out the water; to issue bonds running for fifty years; put up interest on the bonds; to construct other ditches, bring the water out into those irrigating Districts and own that water not only for the people who live in the district at that particular time but for the generations hereafter to come. Let it be the heritage of the people, as the air above is, or the water that runs in our streams. The gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Cooper, one of the most practical and sensible men in this Convention cited to us today an instance of what irrigation will be in the hands of corporations. Take that same instance and presume that it will cost one-half a million dollars, as he says it has cost, and presume that you will supply five hundred farms, as I presume it will supply twice that many. I will state that the people of California issued bonds on those irrigating ditches at four per cent running fifty years, and those bonds are readily taken in the East. I claim, and I make the assertion, that the great state of Montana, with its vast wealth, its vast resources in every line, in a comparatively short time from the period that it becomes a State will have as good credit as the people of any other State in the Union. If the people of this particular irrigation District that my friend Mr. Cooper speaks of, would combine together and build that ditch at a cost of five hundred thousand dollars, the yearly interest upon it at four per cent, which is the amount paid by the people of California, would be twenty thousand dollars. The annual interest from each of those five hundred farms would be forty dollars. The only tribute from each of those five hundred farms would be forty dollars to pay the interest and the only tribute would be five hundred dollars to pay the principle when it became due. That would be a tribute of sixty dollars from each of those five hundred farmers for the purpose of paying not only the interest, but for the payment of the principal when it became due in full. Now, the gentleman says that the owners of this ditch, this corporation, have built this ditch and entered into a contract for a period of eighteen years at a rental of two dollars an inch, or $320 for each farm. That rental will bring the owners of that computing the supply of each farm at five hundred inches annually, nearly 40%—$160,000 annually. The rental would only be $30,000 if the people of that particular section take hold of the business themselves as a base proposition; they would make a saving of $130,000 a year. While the gentleman was speaking I figured out another proposition. Build an immense canal to cost one million dollars, to supply one thousand farmers. The interest on one million dollars at four per cent would be $40,000, each farmer each year to pay the interest would have to pay forty dollars, and to pay each year as a surplus fund to accumulate a sinking fund to pay the principal when due, $120. One hundred and sixty dollars would be the entire amount of cost that this water would cost him.

If that was in the hands of a corporation, and that corporation charged $320; upon $3,200,000 would be charged $320,000. So that you see we can not deal with the question in a business like way. You must leave it to the Legislature, unless we go to work and resolve ourselves into a Legislative Assembly, and refer it to a committee, and the committee report upon it and bring in a bill, and provide for the various ways and means by which this can be done. Now not only will this corporation get the benefit of the tax on the water, but they will get the benefit of the crude valuation of that land, because when a man or a corporation owns the water he owns the land; he not only owns the land but he owns the people upon it, and that is controvertible. History shows it from the very earliest times, and history also shows that in the early times when so much was done for irrigation, it was done by the State; that when the monopolists of those days in their power and panoply sought to control it and took it from the State and got the revenues for themselves the people became worse than peons, and after a time were swept out of existence. Such will be the case here in the agricultural valleys of Montana. The people will be first ground down and oppressed by their oppressions; in the next place they will become worse than peons and slaves, and in the next stage, driven out of existence. That is my impression of what will become of the people of Montana if you provide a constitutional law which will give one or two men the power to appropriate the water of all the agricultural portions of this great territory. Now I claim that should not be done. I claim it should be done in the Legislative Assembly, and that the Legislative Assembly should hedge that policy in so many ways that for a while the people can toll and hear it; but under this proposition hatched out during this recess there is a change of form. The people of Montana hereafter will not be thankful to the people who vote for this, nor to the people who introduced it. I think it is the most hideous thing in Legislation that can be done. I have the opinion that it will hereafter grind the people more than any other thing that has been thought of in this Convention, and thinking so, I hope that the good sense of this Convention will come forward and relegate it to where it belongs, to the Legislative Assembly, if the people have anything to say the Legislative Assembly will never pass a thing like this; never, sir. And I hope that on second thought the lobbying that has been done in the last twenty-four hours will prove of no avail; and that the monopolists and capitalists who propose to control the waters of our country will be relegated to the rear for a few years yet. This provision provides that only ditches that are built by capitalists shall be relieved from taxation. The twenty ditches, or fifty ditches, or one hundred ditches, as the case may be, which capitalists will construct will not pay a cent of taxes, but the thousands, or you might say tens of thousands of ditches built by the poor men will pay their burden of taxation to support the government, and to support the men who own these big ditches. Those gentlemen do not look with an eye of pity to the tens of thousands who have to make their living, but they are ready to bestow their bounty upon the few capitalists that are to appropriate the waters of this country. I say that if those gentlemen feel that way the convention will not bear them out in it. I have given the subject of mining property a close study, not only at this convention but at the convention of 1881; and I came to the Convention of 1884 prepossessed in favor of placing that class of property in the same class with other property. I thought that it should be taxed just as other property is taxed, but upon an investigation of the subject not only then but now, my candid opinion is that it can not possibly be done; and I say further that mining property under this provision of ours is fully taxed; we tax it for its Government price; we tax it if you put a fence around it for pasturage purposes; we tax it for its farming purposes if you farm it; we tax the house, the works and machinery, and the improvements, and everything around and about it. And not only that but we tax the net proceeds whatever the Legislature of Montana may see fit to provide; they can tax those net proceeds for any amount of money they see fit. Now in this taxation of ditch property you do not pretend to tax anything. You do not tax the franchise which is very valuable; you do not tax the lumber which is employed in the construction of it; you do not tax the improvement; you do not tax the machinery; you do not tax a thing. You let it go scot free. You are going further; you are getting up a sentiment in favor of the Government spending millions of dollars to reservoir your water, and giving a few capitalists the privilege of following after them and appropriating the use of all that money and all that water. I believe sir with the gentleman from Silver Bow County that if we turn ourselves into a legislative body, wise legislation demands that we should send experts out to investigate this question and act upon it after this investigation. If we do not propose to turn ourselves into a Legislative body then let us send this question to the Legislative Assembly where it belongs. In this connection I should like to read what a gentleman who was here the other day, and in whose honor we adjourned for a few moments, says about Legislation in the Constitution. (Here the gentleman from Cascade read the opinion of Judge Cootey.) This is sage advice from a sage constitutional lawyer, and if we follow it in this instance, and in a great many other instances, we will be following in the right direction.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Will not the gentleman concede that by striking out the last part of Section 2 that this thing is cut off entirely from the Legislature?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I was going to say before I got through that that part of Section 2 in my opinion should be left in this provision. If you pass this piece of legislation loosely drawn and only considered for a few moments, you will allow a few people of Montana to get together and organize themselves into an organization and select the very choicest waters of Montana, the waters that will cost the least to bring out upon the tablelands and up-lands, and to give them such a monopoly as no corporation in Montana ever had before; and you will give them that monopoly without paying a cent of tribute to the people for it. All modern legislation in every State in the Union, not only in every State in the Union but even in despotic Russia—and countries governed by kings and Queens—tends to taxing natural property. The Constitution of Montana in this respect will tend to make only monopolists and let them go scot free forever. That is just about the difference. Now I hope this matter will be sent to where it belongs. My friend from Gallatin asked me a question concerning this Section 2. Now I would like to see that amendment stricken out by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke and incorporated in this provision. I think this is a wise provision and I believe it should be incorporated in our constitution. The State of Wisconsin has one of the nicest revenue constitutional provisions in the world, and it only comprises the first line of the half of our first section. Such men as have given this matter thought and study point with pride to the revenue article in the Constitution of Wisconsin. That gives the Legislative Assembly the power to collect revenues from any source they may see fit, and gives them power to exempt such properties as they see fit. I believe you should make this article what it ought to be, what it is destined to be by the committee, after a great deal of consideration. I think that the amendment should be placed back in the section, and I will state that yesterday when the matter was voted down by a few votes, and only a few votes, I rose at once to ask for a division of the ayes and nays, but the President had his attention called to the other side of the house, and Mr. Marshall was recognized, and I think it only fair that the members of the House should allow the Committee to have a separate vote upon this provision of Section 2. I hope it will be allowed.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: This is the first time I have heard that there was any lobbying in this body, and this is the first time that it ever occurred to me that there could be in this bill anything of a monopoly. I do not see how it is possible that all of the evil consequences that the gentleman has despatched here, and depicted with so much feeling and earnestness, can accrue from the passage of this bill. Now, certainly the section of the country that I live in has no particular interest in this measure, and they have no particular interest in building up any body who is to monopolize the agricultural districts of this Territory. I do not know of a gentleman in that section of the country that has any scheme of that kind. Now, I do say that where the price for water with a man who takes a water ditch is to be limited by the County Commissioners, that there can be no monopoly. If anything, the man who builds such a ditch as that will not get enough money out of it. I know gentlemen will say, "Why, they can control the County Commissioners." Gentlemen, men who build big ditches and live away from the community cannot control County Commissioners, and if they had control of them for one year they cannot control them for the next.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: If my friend will allow me just one question.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Certainly:

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Did you ever know of excessive tolls being collected in this country when the fixing of the tolls was left to the County Commissioners?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I never knew they were left to the County Commissioners to fix. I never knew that the contracts or charters were ever let for tolls in this country with any provision of that kind in them.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: The earlier ones were, but the later ones were not.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Well, if you will show me now where there was one that ever amounted to anything, where its charges were regulated by the County Commissioners, it is something that I know nothing of. You take this one that is east from the Little Prickly Pear down upon the Dearborn; you take the Little English Woman out on this road west of here. There was nothing of that kind.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Priests Roads were built and they were regulated by the County Commissioners.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: The tolls were, as I remember, entirely optional with the traveler. He could pay or not, as he pleased.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: What brought this to my mind is that a gentleman and myself were interested in a mine in Idaho, and there the County Commissioners were allowed to fix the tolls. They built a road from Lake Ponderay; they built a road about five miles long, and I think the tolls were about five dollars a load. The County Commissioners were in with the job; that was all there was about it.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: There may be such a thing as corrupt County Commissioners. There are corrupt officials, there is no doubt of it. But the people have the remedy in their hands ultimately about such matters as this; the people ultimately can control. The people that own land that will be irrigated by these ditches are more in number than the men who own the ditches; they have the influence; their influence will be more, and they will control this matter. If this was a business proposition, I would say that it would be doubtful whether they could ever raise any money to build an irrigating ditch in Montana Territory without that provision. But it is thought there would be irrigating ditches built under such regulations as that. Well, now, where there are such regulations as that I think it is but fair to say that they shall be taxed only upon the net income from those ditches. I think that is perfectly fair, and if you go to fixing up anything else and leave it alone in relation to these matters, I think there will be more trouble, and that they will get a bill through the Legislature that will allow these men to charge more exorbitant rates than if you were to put this matter in the hands of the County Commissioners. The County Commissioners are responsible to the people of their county, and they are close to them. The Legislature is not, and as in these large mining counties, they are very little interested in that matter. Now, something has been said about this scheme of surveys. Why, to survey Montana Territory and fix up any scheme at all or any proposition for any grand irrigation here would cost in the first step $50,000. One gentleman here who is an engineer tells me that it would cost double that amount he thinks. And what have you got when you have that scheme? What are you going to do then?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The United States Government has authorized the surveys.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Yes, the Government has authorized the surveys, but for Montana Territory to start in with those surveys, why, it will be a great deal of expense, and there will be no result. Now, the gentleman from Cascade has read here from statistics and made remarks of how much it is going to cost for four per cent bonds, and how much for a sinking fund, but he has left out entirely in that calculation the expense of keeping up and maintaining a ditch, and of distributing, selling and disposing of that water, and that is more than all of the interest, and more than the sinking fund. You cannot turn in and provide for distributing and selling and disposing of this water without a considerable expense. In private enterprises there is nothing of this kind about the interest on the money that it costs to build the irrigating ditch and a sinking fund, and the other incidentals that men will have to pay for. Now, gentlemen, let me say that in relation to all public enterprises of this kind that there are always expenses; that they cost more generally than private enterprises, and they become a public matter, and they get into politics, the same as the great Erie Canal in New York, and they will create infinite trouble. My judgment is in favor of private enterprises for irrigation, if they can be properly conducted. I am perfectly unable to see how this thing is to be such a great and grinding monopoly under the limitations that are prescribed, and I have this to say, that the gentleman who wrote this section and presented it here, and those who consulted with him, myself and Mr. Toole, certainly were not lobbying during this recess. If this gentleman, or any other gentleman, thinks there was any lobbying with Mr. Dixon and Mr. Toole and myself about this matter of drawing up this proposition, they are the worst mistaken men in the whole world. We thought it was a good scheme, to use the phrase of the times, and we were willing to favor it; but if the gentlemen from the agricultural districts do not wish to encourage the bill for private irrigating ditches for the sale and distribution of water under the limitation provided in this constitution, why, we want to assure them we don't want to put it upon them. We are not here to crowd anything of this kind upon them. We only did it because we thought it was good for the agricultural districts, and that it would encourage building irrigating ditches to some extent, and help build up these communities and make them prosperous and happy. There is nobody back of us in this matter; nothing is prompting us here but our idea of doing what is the best for the community; and I would like for every man who lives in an agricultural district to say here whether he wants this or not; and if they don't want it, they will find that we will not vote for it.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move the previous question.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: Mr. President, I have listened to this discussion with some little interest, and while I believe a great many of the gentlemen who have preceded me have spoken upon this question at random, there have been some very good ideas thrown out by the gentlemen nevertheless. I live in a strictly agricultural district. In 1882, a corporation known as the Minnesota & Montana Land & Improvement Company constructed a ditch forty miles long, which is taken out of the Yellowstone River at a point about 39 miles above Billings, and runs the entire length of the valley, which is known as the Clarks Fork Valley, covering thousands of acres. The company owning that ditch purchased from Northern Pacific Railroad Company the old sections below the ditch in that valley. This ditch is supposed to have a capacity of 10,000 inches. The year after the ditch was built, in 1883, the ditch company sold water to the farmers at 75 cents an inch, and the farmers even grumbled at that price; but it was found by the ditch company that they could not afford to sell the water even at that price, and there was a year or two there that the farmers had no water, at least at the lower end of the ditch. The consequence was that their crops were a failure. They put in thousands of acres of oats and some wheat, and other crops, got no water, and they had a failure. The ditch company, for two years, I believe, did not pretend to operate its ditch, for the reason that the heavy rains and the water spouts had broken their flumes down, and it would necessitate the expenditure of thousands of dollars of money to keep it in repair. They even went so far as to petition the Board of County Commissioners at two or three Spring sessions to exempt the ditch and its property from taxation. They undertook to do it, I believe, last year, and at that time the County Commissioners came to me for advice upon the subject, as I was the County Attorney at the time, and I advised them that they had no power to exempt the ditch company from taxation. But contrary to my opinion and my advice they did exempt it. Then the ditch company concluded that they would not operate that ditch any longer. The farmers were there by the hundreds petitioning the ditch company to put its ditch in repair and operate it. The consequence was that the company made a proposition to the Board of County Commissioners to have the right to fix the water rate, that if they would enter into a contract with them to guarantee that they would not lower the rate below $2 an inch for ten years, that they would expend $25,000 upon their ditch in repairing the flumes and bridging the ditch, and furnishing water to the farmers. This matter was discussed pro and con there, and when the farmers thought that they were going to lose this opportunity they came down there by hundreds, as I said, and plead with the County Commissioners to enter into that contract extending over a period of ten years for $2 an inch for the water, and it was finally done. And now that ditch company has a contract with the County Commissioners which I do not think is binding, but at any rate they have a contract with the County Commissioners for ten years that they will not reduce the water rate lower than $2 an inch. So that I believe I have seen the practical working of this matter of irrigation sufficiently to be able to state advisedly that there is not a corporation in the world that can build a ditch, and with the water rates which farmers can afford to pay, make any great amount of money out of it. I know that the manager of that ditch company, Mr. Bailey, stated to the County Commissioners that they had lost money from the time that the ditch was built down to the time they had made the contract, to say nothing about the original cost of the ditch; that the operation of the ditch—that the tolls collected were not sufficient to pay the expense of keeping the ditch in repair. Since that ditch was built there have been two or three other ditches built by private individuals and corporations. There is one down there, I believe, that is about twelve or thirteen miles long. It has a capacity of between three and four thousand inches, which was built by the farmers along the line of the ditch, who finally incorporated, and are today an incorporated company. Each of the persons who had an interest in the ditch took that interest in stock. That enterprise, I believe, is successful. It is a short ditch, and everybody who resides under it and owns any land under it has stock in it, and they bought their stock simply by putting that much work into the ditch with their teams and their hands. But I do not believe that this convention is running up against the snag that the gentleman from Cascade County has shown here. I do not believe that if this provision is allowed to remain in the constitution that it will be detrimental to the interests of the people of Montana, but I do believe that it will encourage the building of ditches in all of this agricultural country, which will redound to the interests of the farmers, and necessarily to the interests of the people of Montana.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of Section 4 as introduced by the gentleman from Silver Bow. If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered upon the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Browne, Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Gaylord, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hobson, Joy, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Whitehill, Winston—39.

Nays: Breen, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Collins, Courtney, Craven, Field, Gibson, Giffette, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hogan, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Rickard, Sargent, Stapleton, Warren, Watson, Witter, Mr. President—30.

Absent: Brazleton, Bullard, Cardwell, Joyes, Knippenberg, Webster—6.

The Chair announced the vote, and the amendment was declared carried.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move that this section be printed, and after the printed copy is laid on the desks it be disposed of permanently. We cannot offer amendments to this section intelligently, and I would like to see it printed before it is incorporated in the constitution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I move you, sir, that the Proposition No. 25 be printed, and the same action had upon it as this last proposition that has just been voted upon.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move to amend the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin that the ayes and nays be called for Section 3.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I accept the amendment.

The President: The ayes and nays were called upon the question of striking it out and as the vote failed to strike out, it is still subject to further amendment, if the convention desires it to remain.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Is there anything pending?

The President: I simply wish to refer this section that has been introduced here as Section 4 to the Printing Committee, according to the vote so referring it, and order it to be printed. There is a motion pending with regard to printing the whole copy.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: In view of this vote by which it was decided that this section just adopted be printed I move that the further consideration of this bill be postponed until that printed copy is placed in our hands.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin that Proposition No. 26 be printed.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Cooper) and the vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of Section No. 3 with the amendments that have been made.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried, and Section No. 3 adopted as amended.

The President: We will now proceed to the consideration of Section No. 4 in the printed copy which will be numbered Section 5.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Mr. President, I give notice that I will move to reconsider the vote by which Section No. 4 was passed.

The President: The gentleman gives notice that he will offer a motion to reconsider the vote by which Section No. 4 was adopted. Notice will be entered upon the minutes.

The Clerk read Section 5 as follows:

"Sec. 5. Taxes for city, town or school purposes may be levied on all subjects and objects of taxation, but the assessed valuation of any property shall not exceed the valuation of the same property for State and County purposes."

There being no amendment to Section 5, the Clerk read Section 6 as follows:

"Sec. 6. No county, city, town or other municipal corporation, the inhabitants thereof nor the property therein shall be released or discharged from their or its proportionate share of state taxes."

There being no amendment to Section 6, the Clerk read Section 7, as follows:

"Sec. 7. The power to tax corporations or corporate property shall never be relinquished or suspended, and all corporations in this state, or doing business therein, shall be subject to taxation for state, county, school, municipal and other purposes, on real and personal property owned or used by them and not by this constitution exempted from taxation."

There being no amendment to Section 7, the Clerk read Section 8, as follows:

"Sec. 8. Private property shall not be taken or sold for the corporate debts of municipal corporations."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move to insert after the word "municipal" the words "or public", so that it shall read, "Private property shall not be taken or sold for the corporate debts of municipal or public corporations."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh), and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 12 in the affirmative and a vote of 24 in the negative.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I understand the objection of the gentleman from Custer was that municipal corporations did not include county.

Strictly speaking, municipal belongs to cities, I believe. If it is necessary, and I do not know that it is, I move to insert after the words "municipal corporations" "or counties", so that it shall read "Private property shall not be taken or sold for the corporate debt of municipal corporations or counties."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I offer a substitute.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers a substitute to Section 9, as renumbered, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Substitute for Section 9 as renumbered. Private property shall not be taken or sold for the corporate debts of public corporations, but the Legislative Assembly may provide by law for the funding thereof, and shall provide by law for the payment thereof, including all funded debts and obligations, by assessment and taxation of all private property not exempt from taxation within the limits of the Territory over which such corporations respectively have authority.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of a substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: We do not need both the words "public" and "municipal" as adjectives qualifying the word corporations. "Public" is the larger word and includes counties, cities, towns, villages and all other corporations instituted for the purpose of public government and the management of some part of the state affairs or some subdivision of the state rather. "Municipal" is sometimes used in its broadest signification to cover everything; but courts now, as I understand it, are often limiting its meaning, perhaps I might say generally, to incorporated cities, towns and villages. If the word "public" is used the word "municipal" is unnecessary, because it is included fully within the meaning of "public" as applied to corporations. Now, I think this section ought to be stricken out, or we ought to go further. It looks like a step towards repudiation to leave it where it is. If the creditor of any municipal or public corporation in the Territory cannot see a way of collecting his money from the corporate company, he will wonder how he can get it at all. Laws may be passed for assessment and payment, but they may be repealed, or they may be defeated. Of course, then they would be part of the contract, but it would make it appear safe to all if a way for the payment was assured. Take the city of Helena, which will have a large debt, and large public debts, but no creditor in the world will want to buy the sewers that are being put in today. He would have no security in them. I think a clause should be put in this constitution that those debts if not paid by the corporate property should be paid by assessments and taxation of all private property within the limits of the Territory over which that public corporation has authority. For instance, the city should have the authority to levy assessments and taxes on private property within its limits, so that the people of Missoula will feel assured that Montana does not propose to have its credit impaired in any way or in any subdivision of the Territory.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 8, the Clerk read Section 9, as follows:

"Sec. 9. The rate of taxation of real and personal property for state purposes in any one year shall never exceed (3) mills on each dollar of valuation; and whenever the taxable property in the state shall amount to one hundred million dollars ($100,000,000) the rate shall not exceed two and one-half (2½) mills on each dollar of valuation; and whenever the taxable property in the state shall amount to three hundred million dollars ($300,000,000) the rate shall never thereafter exceed one (1) mill on each dollar of valuation; unless a proposition to increase such rate, specifying the rate proposed and the time during which the same shall be levied, shall have been submitted to the people at a general election, and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election."

There being no amendment to Section 9, the Clerk read Section 10, as follows:

"Sec. 10. All taxes levied for state purposes shall be paid into the state treasury, and no money shall be drawn from the treasury but in pursuance of specific appropriations made by law."

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Custer offers an amendment to Section 10.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 10 by adding the following: "The Legislature shall provide for an annual tax, sufficient to defray the estimated expenses of the state for each year; and whenever it shall happen that such ordinary expense of the state for any year shall exceed the income of the state for such year, the Legislature shall provide for levying a tax for the ensuing year, sufficient with other sources of income to pay the deficiency of the preceding year, together with the estimated expense of such ensuing year."

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Loud, of Custer: The reason I offer this is that in the Executive Department we have adopted a section that provides that the Governor shall transmit an estimate of the expense of the Government for the year, and also that this provides that there never shall be any surplus in the treasury; at the same time we have a surplus of a little over one hundred thousand dollars. As far as Custer County is concerned, our tax levy is now 28½ mills. For that reason, we do not feel like contributing anything to allow it to remain idly in the state treasury, and this amendment that I have offered is a copy verbatim from one adopted by the state of Texas last year. They had a surplus in their state of two millions of dollars, and they found it necessary to convene the Legislature in an extra session to dispose of the surplus, and also to prevent its occurring a second time, and they adopted this amendment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: This is based on the policy that the Legislature will levy a tax for each fiscal year upon an estimate, but that the rate shall not be any more than is specified in this section, unless it is submitted to a vote of the people. Under the amendment offered by the gentleman the rate can be any amount the Legislature may see fit. So that I think the section as it stands is better than the one offered.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I beg to suggest to the gentleman from Custer that he is guilty of a slight error, probably unintentional, but the surplus in the Territory now at present is about $36,000 or $37,000 dollars, instead of $100,000; and furthermore, this matter has been given considerable attention by the Committee on Finance, which I have the honor to serve on, and we have after due and careful deliberation of this matter—it was not upon a moment's notice, but we studied this matter, and we came to the conclusion to suggest the adoption of this section for the financial interests and good of the state; and I think it would be wise if we adopted the section as recommended by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, asked for the reading of the amendment again.

The Clerk read the same for the information of the gentleman.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: The Clerk read this as an amendment to be added to the section. Is that an amendment to be added, or is it a substitute for the section?

Mr. Loud, of Custer: The intention is to add that to the section.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I do not see any objection to incorporating that in this article; but I should think it should be a new section. It would make that section very long, and it is a subject matter different from the matter treated in the section already; so I think if it is incorporated it should be in a new section. I move to amend that far, that instead of incorporating it in this section it be made a new section.

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I will accept the amendment.

The President: This amendment if adopted will constitute a new section to be numbered 11, and the other sections will be renumbered to correspond.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I am not opposed to the proposition, or the amendment, but it occurs to me that it is somewhat inconsistent with the section that we have just considered: that is, that Section 9, or Section 10, I believe as renumbered, seems to provide a limitation. Then this proposed new section seems to take off the curb and leave on the limitation; and if this new section was made to relate back or referred to the limitation in the section that is here, it would be all right; but there certainly should be some sort of limitation. It seems to me that considering all things these two sections are inconsistent. I may be mistaken about it, but I have heard it read two or three times. My impression is that Section 9, or 10, I think it is, fixes a limitation by which taxes cannot be levied, and that the proposed section permits a tax to be levied according to an estimate without limitation. Now, if that is true, the two sections are inconsistent, and I should not be in favor of the proposed amendment, because I believe that the levying of taxes should be held within some sort of reasonable bonds. The Legislature is disposed as a rule to be governed by about what money it has in the treasury. When the Legislature convened last winter there was about $130,000 in the treasury, and it is particularly apparent that that Legislature governed themselves accordingly, for there certainly was a good deal of extravagance of that Legislature, and as the gentleman suggests, we have today about $36,000 dollars in the treasury, when in the early part of last January there was over $130,000. If that proposed section, as I understand it, takes off this limitation, I certainly should be opposed to it.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Loud), and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 10, the Clerk read Section 11 of the printed proposition as follows:

"Sec. 11. Taxes shall be levied and collected by general laws and for public purposes only. They shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax."

There being no further amendments to Section 11, the Clerk read Section 12 of the printed proposition as follows:

"Sec. 12. No appropriation shall be made nor any expenditure authorized by the Legislative Assembly, whereby the expenditure of the state during any fiscal year shall exceed the total tax then provided for by law and applicable to such appropriation or expenditure, unless the Legislative Assembly making such appropriation shall provide for levying a sufficient tax, not exceeding the rates allowed in Section nine (9) of this article, to pay such appropriations or expenditures within such fiscal year. This provision shall not apply to appropriations or expenditures to suppress insurrection, defend the state or assist in defending the United States in time of war. No appropriation of public moneys shall be made for a longer term than two years."

There being no amendment to Section 12, the Clerk read Section 13 of the printed copy.

"Sec. 13. The State Treasurer shall keep a separate account of each fund in his hands, and shall at the end of each quarter of the fiscal year report to the Governor in writing, under oath, the amount of all moneys in his hands to the credit of every such fund, and the place or places where the same is kept or deposited, and the number and amount of every warrant paid or redeemed by him during the quarter. The Governor, or other person or persons authorized by law, shall verify said report and cause the same to be immediately published in at least one newspaper printed at the seat of government, and otherwise as the Legislative Assembly may require. The Legislative Assembly may provide by law further regulations for the safe keeping and management of the public funds in the hands of the treasurer; but notwithstanding any such regulation, the treasurer and his sureties shall, in all cases, be held responsible therefor."

There being no amendments to Section 13, the Clerk read Section 14 of the printed copy as follows:

"Sec. 14. The making of profit out of public moneys, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, by any public officer, shall be deemed a felony and shall be punished as provided by law; but part of such punishment shall be disqualification to hold public office for a period of not less than ten years."

There being no amendment to Section 14, the Clerk read Section 15 of the printed copy. (Should be the section above quoted on account of renumbering of sections.)

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move to amend Section 15 by striking out the last four words on line 3 and all of line 4.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I do that because I believe that a man who is convicted of felony should never be again qualified to hold public office in the state. The words stricken out are "for a period of not less than ten years."

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I hardly know as one of the Committee on Finance how that crept into our report. It must have been a mistake. The intention of our committee was to eliminate that section and to report a section such as is suggested by my friend from Custer. Therefore I think it is quite proper the gentleman's amendment should be adopted.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendment to Section 15 (as renumbered) the Clerk read Section 16 of the printed copy as renumbered.

"Sec. 16. The Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor and Attorney General shall constitute a state board of equalization; and the board of county commissioners of each county shall constitute a county board of equalization. The duty of the state board of equalization shall be to adjust and equalize the valuation of the taxable property among the several counties of the state. The duty of the county boards of equalization shall be to adjust and equalize the valuation of the taxable property within their respective counties. Each board shall also perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law."

There being no amendment to Section 16, the Clerk read Section 17 of the printed copy as renumbered.

"Sec. 17. All property, except as in this section provided, shall be assessed in the county, city, town, township or school district in which it is situated, in the manner prescribed by law. The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in this state shall be assessed by the state board of equalization, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts."

There being no amendment to Section 17, the Clerk read Section 18 of the printed copy as renumbered:

"Sec. 18. The word property, as used in this article, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, franchises and all matters and things (real, personal and mixed) capable of private ownership, but this shall not be construed so as to authorize the taxation of the stocks of any company or corporation when the property of such company or corporation, represented by such stocks, is within the state and has been taxed."

There being no amendment to Section 18, the Clerk read Section 19 of the printed copy as renumbered.

"Sec. 19. The Legislative Assembly shall pass all laws necessary to carry out the provisions of this article."

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move that proposition No. 27, General File No. 26, with the exception of Section 4, be now placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: If it is not too late I would like to offer an amendment to Section 9 or Section 10 as renumbered. The limitation upon the last amount mentioned is about one mill. Now, at such time as the assessed valuation will be $300,000,000, the interests of the state will be much larger than they are now, and the limitation as placed here has placed the amount the same as it is at the present time. I move to make that one and one-half mills, instead of one mill.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers to amend in line 6 of Section 10 as renumbered, by striking out the word "one" and inserting in lieu thereof "one and one-half."

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Would it not be wiser if we were to allow that to remain as it is, one mill, and if a contingency arises where the expenditures of the state will exceed the limitation, why, then let the Legislature provide for it, which they would have the power to do by the deficiency in the succeeding section. I think it is wise to allow this limitation to remain in the section. It is always better to provide for limiting the opportunities of creating and encouraging indebtedness, and if they have no sufficient funds and it may sometimes be necessary, why, the Legislature can liquidate it by a deficiency.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: The limitation up to that amount is very liberal. For instance, there are $299,000,000 on which the limitation is two and one-half mills as provided in this section, but $300,000,000 has a limitation of one mill. Now, I maintain that one mill is sufficient. Of course, the Legislature does not have to assess the full amount. It is discretionary with them, and the limitation seems so small that it ought to be increased to a larger amount. I think it is a very small increase anyhow, and it is a little disproportionate as compared with the limitation of a lesser amount.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I have no doubt that if you levy ad valorem taxes to defray the expenses of the state that a one mill tax, when the property is valued at $300,000,000 will not be nearly enough to cover the expenses of the state; but if the section was to be amended to suit your view of the case I would reduce it to one-half a mill, in order to compel the State Legislature to collect the taxes in other directions; levy as small an ad valorem tax as possible, and collect as much as possible from license taxes; not on legitimate occupations, but on other business that are now in the state and that will hereafter come in the state. I think very large sums of money can be collected in that way, and so far as the power of the Legislature to collect ad valorem taxes is concerned, I would, speaking individually, rather reduce than increase it.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Chessman) and the same was carried on a division by a vote of 38 in the affirmative to 13 in the negative.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) that Proposition No. 27, with the exception of Section 4, be placed upon its final passage.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would rise to a point of order. I would like to ask how we can proceed to place this bill on the final passage, and omit any part of it, that by vote of this house has been adopted.

The President: As the Chair understands it, the motion was to place upon its final passage all of that portion of Proposition No. 27, except Section 4. The Chair is of opinion that the motion is in order, and that the convention may adopt everything they desire in the proposition, or reject it if they please, as the case may be.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: That is not my point of order, with all due respect to your decision, Mr. President. My point of order is that we have adopted Sections 4, 5, 6, etc., and now they come up for final passage, on a motion to adopt all except a portion of it. My point of order is, can a portion of that be adopted and the remainder ignored without reconsideration of the vote by which it was adopted.

The President: The Chair understands that we have only adopted one or two sections so far. We passed over part of it. Section 3 was adopted by a vote of the convention, but the Chair is unaware that any other section has been adopted except Section 3. Section 4 has also been adopted, but it has been ordered to be printed. The Chair will get the sense of the convention on this by putting the motion. The motion is to place Proposition No. 27, with the exception of Section 4, upon its final passage.

The Chair then put the said motion, and the same was declared carried on division by a vote of 37 in the affirmative to 22 in the negative.

The President: Proposition No. 27, with the exception of Section 4, will now be placed upon its final passage.

The Clerk will call the roll.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I would like the indulgence of the convention a moment to offer an amendment to Section 17 as it is now numbered. I think there will be no objection to it.

The President: The gentleman from Custer desires unanimous consent to offer an amendment to Section 17 as it is now numbered. If there be no objection, the gentleman will be allowed to read his amendment.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: In Section 16 of the printed copy, which I understand is Section 17 now, after the words "equalization" in line 4, I wish to insert the words "in the manner prescribed by law." It seems that there is no provision as to what rate or in what manner the board of equalization shall assess railroads and railroad property. The first part of the section provides that it shall be assessed in the manner prescribed by law, and I think that the same thing is true as to railroad property.

The President: Is there any objection to the consideration of this amendment? It requires unanimous consent.

Mr. Marrion, of Missoula: I object.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I think there ought to be some provision by which that would be ingrafted.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, is a motion in order?

The President: No motion is in order except by unanimous consent.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I will ask unanimous consent to make a motion. I move the proposition be laid on the table.

The President: The motion is not in order.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren).

The Clerk called the roll for the ayes and nays on the adoption of Proposition No. 27, and the vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. J.; Burns, E.; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Field, Gaylord, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Muth, Myers, Ramsdall, Reek, Rotwill, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—54.

Nays: Aiken, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Cardwell, Gillette, Hartman, Haskell, Hobson, Joyes, Kohrs, Loud, Middleton, Mitchell, Parberry, Watson—15.

Absent: Brazleton, Breen, Bullard, Knippenberg, Robinson—5.

The President: The motion prevails and all of Proposition No. 27, with the exception of Sec. 4, which has been deferred for further consideration, is adopted and becomes a part of the constitution of the State of Montana. It will be referred to the Committee on Enrollment.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: If in order, I move that we do now resolve ourselves into a Committee of the Whole for consideration of File No. 16, Proposition No. 17, being the report of the Committee on Education.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I wish to say that my reason for making this motion at this time is that I have a sick child lying at home, and may be summoned there at any moment, and I would like this matter to come up and be discussed in order that it may be disposed of in case I am compelled to ask for leave of absence.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend by taking up the consideration of General File No. 17, Proposition No. 18, Article on State Institutions and Public Buildings.

The President: The Chair entertained a motion similar to that a day or two since, but is of the opinion that it is not in order, for the reason that they are entirely separate and distinct propositions, and one cannot be considered in the nature of an amendment. The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards).

The Chair then put the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chair called Mr. Kanouse of Meagher to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Kanouse, of Meagher, in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 1 of Proposition 17.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Article on Education. Section 1. It shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly of Montana to establish and maintain a general, uniform and thorough system of public, free, common schools."

There being no amendment to Section 1, the Clerk read Section 2, as follows:

"Sec. 2. The public school fund of the state shall consist of the proceeds of such lands as have heretofore been granted, or may hereafter be granted to the state by the general government, known as school lands, and those granted in lieu of such; lands acquired by gift or grant from any person or corporation under any law or grant of the general government; and of all other grants of land or money made to the state from the general government for general educational purposes, or where no other special purpose is indicated in such grant; all estates or distributive shares of estates that may escheat to the state; all unclaimed shares and dividends of any corporation incorporated under the laws of the state, and all other grants, gifts, devises or bequests made to the state for general educational purposes."

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, Resolution No. 8, relating to school lands, was introduced by the gentleman from Gallatin, which is to be considered in connection with this proposition. I move that it be inserted or added to the last line of this section, so that it will read as follows:

"Provided that none of the lands granted by Congress to the state of Montana for the support of common schools, shall ever be sold or granted or disposed of in any manner except by lease, nor shall any moneys arising therefrom be used for any other purposes than for the support of common schools of the state."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would like to hear from the gentleman who moved the adoption of this resolution before time to advance any argument that might be advanced in favor of it is had.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, I believe that it is for the best interest of the rising generation that this resolution as introduced by the gentleman from Gallatin should be adopted and inserted as a part of this constitution. We have in the county of Missoula many valuable sections of school land, and there is one section to which I might particularly refer in the vicinity of the town of Missoula, a section of land which I believe today is worth at the least calculation one hundred thousand dollars, and that section of land would provide more revenue if leased, that is, if let out as an addition to the town of Missoula, and the lots leased for building purposes, than what the entire revenue of the county of Missoula amounts to today with a four mill levy tax, to say nothing about other enormous sections throughout the county. They are just as valuable for agricultural purposes, though not as well or centrally located for building purposes; and in view of this section of land in the immediate vicinity of Missoula, instead of being worth one hundred thousand dollars, will be worth one million dollars, and without taking up any further time or presenting any further arguments, I am willing to submit this matter to the committee.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I offered that resolution, and will state briefly my reasons for it that in some of the states of this Union that have the right to sell school lands they have disposed very freely of their lands and found large accumulations of money on their hands, and appointed, as I understand, committees known as Loan Committees, and those committees, or commissions, rather, have frequently made loans in the state and have loaned on bad security, and the money has been lost forever. I undertake to say that no officer of any Government can get away with real estate, and it is as good an investment as the public schools of Montana can ever have. Now, you take some of these mountain lands, when they cannot be sold or have an appreciable value per acre perhaps, in time they may be leased for grazing purposes and will bring about as much money yearly as they would bring per acre if put up for public auction. There are very few of the school lands today which if put up at auction would bring ten dollars an acre, but some of them will be choice lands that will be sought for by speculators and I think we can afford to hold those lands and take the money that will arise from leasing them in various manners, and apply that to the support of the schools, instead of selling these lands at low prices, and then in order to get your investment perfectly secured lending your money out at a very low rate of interest. I think, considering the danger that always surrounds large sums of money in the vaults of the state and other liability to be diverted or lost in some manner other than that for which they were intended to be appropriated—considering all these things, I think it is safer for us to keep the lands forever and support our schools from the revenue derived from leases.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: There is another consideration which enters into this subject. Now, I find that by looking at the Act of Congress that there have been given for the purpose of supporting public schools five million acres of land; for university, 46,000 acres; and for agricultural college, 140,000 acres; for school of mines, 100,000 acres; for state normal schools, 100,000 acres; reform school, 50,000 acres; deaf and dumb asylum, 50,000 acres; and for educational purposes other enormous amounts of lands. Now, so far as the danger of leasing the land is concerned, there is no question, but if these lands remain where they are there is no danger of their being stolen. It requires a little water brought in contact with the land in order to make them valuable even for mining purposes. Now, the consideration which I wish to impress upon the convention is this, that if these lands are not disposed of, they are not subject to taxation, and here are five millions and a half of acres of land that are to be withdrawn from taxation, and the state is to get no benefit from that; whereas, if they are sold at the price named in the Act of Congress donating them, those lands will become subject to taxation, so far as they are sold, and it will add to the revenue of the state. If they are not sold there will be no such revenue derived from them, and we have to rely upon other methods of taxation. There will be trouble in providing for a safe-keeping of this money. There is no danger of its being stolen and carried off with anything like wisdom in the investment of it. I will venture to say if it is turned over to the state of Montana, if the state of Montana receives it and becomes responsible for it that it will not be stolen. I do not blame my friend from Gallatin County for being suspicious of men, because there has been a great deal of public money stolen, but that is where it was not so well guarded as it should be; and with his assistance, and the assistance of some others here to guide and direct, I have no doubt that all we will have to pray for will be for strength to carry the thing into effect. Hence, I say I think it is unwise to incorporate into this constitution a provision which will prevent the distribution of these lands and the placing them in the hands of private parties where they can become the subject of taxation. Now, I desire to call the attention of the members of this convention to this consideration, which it seems to me is a very important one, a practical one, and one that involves a very great deal of interest to the state at large. I will not consume the time of the convention in adding anything more than calling the attention of the convention to the views which I have expressed here.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I desire to offer a substitute for the resolution.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Your committee predicted and it fully expected a controversy on this question. The advisability of adopting this resolution, though it had not been referred to this Committee but referred to another committee, was duly considered, and I wish that I could have prevailed upon Major Maginnis to take my place in this committee on the floor of this house and present connectedly the arguments that we went over thoroughly in considering this question. I want to call your attention before mentioning any other facts to Section 12 of this proposition, "The funds of the State University and of all the other State institutions of learning, from what ever source accruing shall forever remain inviolate and sacred to the purpose for which they were dedicated. The various funds shall be respectively invested under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and shall be guaranteed by the State against loss or diversion." Now Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of this committee, I want to say for some of the members of the Committee on Education, and for myself, that I went into the committee room, if I had any leanings, leaning towards the idea of leasing and not selling any of our school lands; but the more we went into this subject the more impracticable did it seem. We invited into our committee room the known champions and recognized champions of this theory of leasing public school lands, and after hearing all of the arguments that they had to advance, your committee came to the conclusion that the only safe and practicable method by which this question could be settled would be to leave it in the hands of the Legislature, where your committee have recommended it. Now, as has been said by Judge Luce, under the Enabling Act none of these school lands can be sold for less than $10 an acre. The Enabling Act also provides that none of these school lands can be leased for a longer period than five years, and no larger quantity than one section to one person or corporation shall be leased, so that I think you all must see at a glance that the idea of leasing is an impracticable one. No improvements could be made of the lands; no one would take them on any such lease. Some of the friends of this measure said, let us trust to the magnanimity of Congress to repeal this law and give to us a longer lease, but we considered that we were trusting a very uncertain quantity if we leave this measure for repeal in the hands of Congress. We have nothing to do with what Congress may do. All that we have to do in considering this question is to consider what we may do with the restrictions thrown around it by this Enabling Act. Now Mr. Chairman, I want this Committee, and I believe that they will too, to duly consider one feature of the leasing system, which was dwelt upon and emphasized in the committee room, and that is this, that we enter upon, if we adopt that system, an untried experiment. I have heard it asserted that some of the states have tried it, but no one member of this committee has been able to put his hands upon a document that would verify that statement. Now, if we enter upon the leasing system, we enter upon, as has already been said upon this floor when we were considering another matter, a species of landlordism that is fraught with danger to the commonwealth. In the absence of a system of irrigation, I would like anyone to point out intelligibly how a system of leasing can be adopted by this state. Now in view of these facts presented to you in this dissatisfactory manner, I submit to you that in the adoption of this resolution that has been presented as an amendment you will be tying the hands of the legislature so that if at any time in the future you find that a tract of land can be sold for the minimum price or more, you have tied their hands so that they cannot do it. And I would also ask you to consider how we are to obtain a fund for present needs if we are not to sell this land as the legislature will prescribe. Now I believe, and I predict that after all the argument has been or will be advanced in favor of the adoption of this resolution, or one of like character, that the sober wisdom of this committee and this convention will be that we are to leave it in the hands of the legislature where it properly belongs, so that they may do with it as their judgment shall dictate.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: Before this gentleman sits down I would like to ask him a question. This resolution that the gentleman from Galatin makes provision that none of the lands for the support of common schools can ever be sold. I would like to ask the gentleman how the common schools of Montana are supported now. Wouldn't we be on the same footing as we are now?

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Oh, well, we all understand how the common schools are now. But as a gentleman has said, Mr. Chairman, this generation does not want to assume the obligations of coming generations.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, offers the following as an amendment to the amendment of Mr. Kennedy. "Resolved that the lands granted by Congress to the state of Montana for the support of common schools, and for universal purposes, may be sold or leased in the manner and at such time as may be prescribed by law, provided that none of such lands shall be sold for less than ten dollars an acre."

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I would call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that that is what this bill prescribes.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I simply put the amendment so that the matter might properly come before the convention.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I am opposed to offering any of these lands for sale and briefly will give you my reasons. The gentleman remarks that he wants to know how we could get along if we did not sell the land. I can very easily figure out how we can get a great deal more money by not selling than we can by selling. In the first place the land was given to this state with certain restrictions. One is that they shall not be leased longer than a term of five years; another is that they shall not be sold for less than ten dollars. Now, nearly all the school lands in the state of Montana can be leased for something, and it is very easy for the legislature to make it the duty of the treasurer of each county to offer to the highest bidder the two sections in each county, the sixteenth and thirty sixth sections, giving bond of security for the payment of his annual wealth, and pay it to the treasurer as he pays his tax. Then we have no expense except the little expense of the treasurer's collecting the rent, and he is required to turn it over to the territorial treasurer. Now, here are all those sections that can be leased for twenty five dollars, fifty dollars, one hundred dollars, or two hundred dollars, that cannot be sold under the provisions of this Enabling Act, which would be a source of revenue. Another thing is, if the land could be sold, money is now worth 15, 18 and 20 per cent per annum. The money could be turned around and put out at six or seven per cent under restrictions here, and if offered for sale there are only a few sections that could be sold for ten dollars and more. Now I have maintained that it would be much better to restrict the sale of the land to sections. I know something about this matter, because I have had some experience with it in my section of the country. All through this grazing section in the eastern portion of the country most of the water has been appropriated, but through these sections in certain places there are springs and small streams of water and if you sell forty or fifty acres to any person, or lease it, that will cover all the water and timber, so that the balance of the section is not worth anything to anybody. But it can be leased by sections, and the revenue coming in every year turned over by the county treasurer to the territorial treasurer, so that you can handle it. Now you cannot sell a section of land and take the money and use it; you must put it out, and can only use the interest that comes from that section of land. You can lease it for more money than you can get interest on the money if it is sold.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I have heretofore taken up so little of the time of this convention that I have no hesitancy now in asking your indulgence for a few moments on this proposition. The law implies that one eighteenth part of the area of the territory shall be devoted to the common school, namely, sections 16 and 36 in each township at the time of our admission as a state, provided at that date those sections have not been previously sold or disposed of, and if they had been sold or disposed of other sections are to be selected in lieu thereof under the laws and regulations prescribed by the legislature. This, together with five per cent of the net proceeds from sales of lands made subsequent to the date of our admission as a state constitute the dowry of the common schools. The number of acres thus given to the common school, and also to the various educational institutions of the state have been correctly given. The common school land expressed in acres would be 5,120,000; State University 72 Sections, 46,080 acres; School of Mines 100,000 acres; State Normal School 100,000 acres; State Reform School 50,000 acres; Deaf & Dumb Asylum 50,000 acres; and Agricultural College 110,000 acres. Now what is the condition and character of these lands—and I take it that this convention, or any department of government which it institutes must at least approximate a definite idea of their character and condition before it can intelligently commit the state for years to any definite and unvarying systems for their management. The committee on Education in one of the conventions in the Dakotas saw fit to hire a hall and to hear the arguments of all those who wished to be heard on the question of leasing their school lands, or of selling them; And if they had any difficulty there at all, where it was already known that the school lands as a rule were all perfectly level lands, accessible from all the points of the compass, and watered by the reservoirs in the clouds—if they had any difficulty there at all, you may have some idea of the perplexities which confront you here in a country whose topography is as variable as ours is, where the roads follow the mountains, and the meanderings of water courses instead of the artificial section lines of the surveyor, and where the fall of the land is so imperceptibly connected with the matter of water right. The few weeks to which our conference is necessarily limited and the means at hand will forbid the accumulation of the statistics and facts which would be so desirable at this time, and it remains for future legislation to provide that all of these lands be selected and mapped out, and that the official report be followed as to every subdivision thereof, showing their condition and character, accessibility to roads and water courses, and all the facts entering into their conditions and the valley. As it is known that the land granted to the various educational institutions have been selected except the university lands. These 72 sections were selected a few years ago from the best lands of the state, which were then unappropriated. The selected list was recently approved by President Harrison and now appears on the official file in the Governor's office below; and as to the public school lands it is impossible to tell very much about many of them from the fact that only about 25 per cent of the territory has been surveyed. One of the most experienced civil engineers in the city informs me, at a rough estimate, that that amount has been surveyed and that it did not include the mountains, except as the mountains had been surveyed at the instance of some one in getting mineral patents on mineral locations. Now with reference to leasing the lands I will state that when my labors first commenced on this committee I was in favor of the leasing system, exclusively, but the more and more consideration we gave it the more and more the plans seemed infatigable as an exclusive one. And whence rose the leasing system? In this country above all others, the general sentiment is against landlordism, and the general government in the distribution of its land has sought to give out in small tracts to the actual settlers. The idea had its origin not in the fact that landlordism has any desirable features, but from the fact that most of the states had disposed of their school lands in a very injudicious manner. The state of Iowa sold her lands at a very small figure. The state of Texas I am informed sold lands for less than even one dollar and a quarter per acre, their being no limit on the price, that state not having derived its lands from the government, and so general has been its mismanagement, that when Congress came to pass this Enabling Act it threw a safe guard around the school lands of the state of Montana when it provided that no lands should be sold for less than ten dollars an acre, and that they might be leased for periods of not more than five years; and as Congress did not confine the state to one system or the other, this convention ought not to confine the matter to one system or the other. As has been frequently mentioned the value of land in this country amounts to nothing unless you can get water on it. Will the state build bridges, and make appropriations for the water for its land? It is known that no species of property requires such constant supervision and control as the water rates. In many parts of the country I have noticed that it takes about two men and a shotgun to each ditch, and it is known among lawyers everywhere that no water right is worth anything until it has been christened by at least one law suit. If we go into the water right business, it will be necessary for us to pay for the right of way over the private land of owners to maintain these ditches, whenever they are infringed upon. This would open up a field for jobbery, the evils of which in my opinion would be worse than all the evils of landlordism or rack rent. On the other hand, let the tenant make the first appropriation of water; when you come to lease again, all the waters of the creek will be appropriated. Nobody wants this school tract unless they can get the water right with it. The first tenant refuses to sell his water right for love or money. The consequence is that when you come to lease the land a second time, in your endeavor to preserve this land for posterity you have practically given it away to the man who is fortunate enough to get the first water right. Again it is a principle that the landlord rents a house or a tract of land, he impliedly gives a right away of the ingress and egress, and so it would be necessary for us to go into the road business and way for roads over the private lands of others. If we do not then the tenant gains and that the expiration he not only owns the water right but the private way as well. Then in reference to the collection of rents. It is stated on all sides that the long term is the only practicable one. The rents then cannot be collected in advance; they must be paid yearly. Upon what shall they be a lien? Not upon the lands, for they belong to the state; not upon the lease hold of the tenant in the land to any practicable purpose, for without the water right this, in many cases, would sell for much less than the rent due. Suppose he has any property; suppose he sublets or assigns his lease and leaves the country. I shall hesitate long, Mr. President, before my voice shall promulgate the doctrine that this state must derive its only benefits from these school lands to the leasing of the school lands exclusively. It means landlordism, it means tenantry, it means notice to evict, it means eviction for nonpayment of rent, it means that the officers of the law shall have heaped upon them the odium that was formally heaped upon the Jewish tax gatherers. Now, I cannot indulge in the hope which seems to come to some with so much assurance, that Congress will readily enlarge the time for which we may lease. Perhaps it will, perhaps it will not. The constitution is no field for experiments and I give it as my opinion for all it is worth that it is poor statesmanship for us to insert a clause in the constitution and commit the state for all years to come to a policy whose practicability is conceded even by its warmest supporters to depend upon a hope which is born of a desire for certain action on the part of the national congress in the future. It seems to me that the best way is to leave this as the committee returned it—leave the matter with the Legislature. Few of these lands will now sell for ten dollars an acre. Many of them will not sell for that for years. Some of them will never sell for it. Let it accommodate the laws to the condition and emergencies as they arise, let it lease the lands which it can not sell and if the system proves burdensome or impracticable it can abandon it. It seems to me that the common people can well be trusted with this matter. No sentiment is dearer in the hearts of the American people than the education of their children, and the establishment of an educational system, whose streams of knowledge will flow out among the people for generations yet unborn, transcending in value the streams crossing these first fields, or the gold in your mines. The fact that none of these lands can be sold for less than ten dollars an acre, and the further proviso that if leased they may not be leased for more than five years, is sufficient guarantee for the future. If all the lands should be sold this would mean a perpetual endowment of fifty million dollars, which put out at four per cent per annum would be a yearly income to be distributed among the schools of two millions of dollars; and the thought is not unworthy in my judgment that we owe as much to the present as we do to the future. It is enough for the pioneers to suffer the deep privations of pioneer life without continuing to support the schools by a direct tax, when they have at least the opportunity to appropriate a part of that from the national bounty. It is the school houses and school grounds that cost. It is this university building and the buildings for the various state institutions, with their equipments and furnishings that cost; and the people of the future, without deriving a bit of benefit from the school lands will not pay as high a tax as the people now are paying, have been paying, and will pay for years to come. In my judgment we should try no experiment in the constitution. We should hold fast to that which we do know. We should be willing to back the common people in this respect and rest assured that they, meeting the conditions and emergencies as they arise, will guard their school interests, sacred as they are to them, much more sacredly than this convention can do it for them, and a great deal more wisely. (Applause)

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I feel deeply interested in this question. In the county which I represent there are something like twenty sections of school lands, and I will here say that I am not committed to either system. There are some arguments that can be advanced on both sides, and an argument of the leasing system which holds out in the future a grand system of building up an almost unlimited fund for the maintenance of common schools and universities I acknowledge is the lawful one; but at the same time it seems to me that it is fraught with some uncertainties and some dangers. On the other hand, I believe that, as the gentleman who preceded me has just remarked, that they hold a duty to the present generation as well as to the future, and if we take into consideration the fact that it has been the policy of this government to develop this country by land grants producing railroads and other streams that had developed the country, I believe we will admit at once that the duty we owe the present generation is an apparent one. The section of country which I represent is not very large. Nearly all of the valuable land is taken. There are some fourteen sections of university land in one body. It is the finest land within the limits of the Flathead country. The country, as I say, being small and having but little capital, the great struggle of the day is to maintain all the settlers of that section in business with no market. Now, if this country was settled up as quickly as possible it would add an additional incentive for a railroad or for the expenditure of capital and would really aid the settlers more, who occupy the country, in securing a market for their products, and it would really redound to the interest of all the people of that country. Now, I say that I am not committed to either system. If the leasing system can secure an immediate settlement, or a settlement in the near future, of these lands without any serious objections, I am in favor of it; but I do pretend to say—(interrupted).

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to ask the gentleman for information, what is his opinion of the practicability of settling up those lands by the leasing system?

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I was just going to remark that it was impracticable on a five-year leasing system. There is no man, in my judgment, that would be willing to take this land, fence it, improve it and dig wells and make other necessary improvements for a five-year lease. It is not long enough to warrant the necessary outlay.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I desire to answer the question. If the method of improvements be simply a matter of contract, and moreover, with a five-year's lease as a matter of contract, would it not be putting each lease on a par?

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: Those questions, I do not think, can be answered until the final action of the committee in this matter. Now, I believe that there are arguments to be advanced on either side, but I would like to see this convention deliberate in the matter. I do not think there is any question that has come up before this convention that is in such an unsettled state as this, and that there has been so little experience with, and I hope that the action, whatever it is, will be cool and deliberate, and that the results in future years will bear us out in our action. It has been stated by the gentleman that just preceded me that there is some odious aspect of landlordism, and I believe that every American or every man that is identified with the interests of American institutions within these halls, have verified that statement. It carries in its connection the idea of eviction, of forcible collections, and I say that if we must build up an institution of landlordism that in the future years will overshadow all others, and that may boast of its hundreds of millions of dollars in the treasury at the expense of a tenancy, established throughout this country that is poor and needy and that will often be evicted from their homes and be made the creatures and subject to rack rent, I say that this interest had better be limited and never reach its proper state of improvement than to reach it at the expense of a tenantry and citizens of this country.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: There is a single suggestion that has not been made, and that is that this school land in this Territory is good for nothing in the world but the timber that is on it; that it cannot be leased unless you give the lessee the right to cut off the timber; and it would be worth nothing when the timber was cut off. It would sell now though with the timber on it for a very good price. I know a quarter section of land that is well timbered that is worth, or said to be, $25 or $30 or $40 per acre, but for leasing it is worth nothing. So, if we say no land shall be sold, it seems to me it would not do. The lands ought to be classified. Some lands ought to be sold now, other lands ought to be retained; some lands ought to be leased, for they cannot be sold for any other purpose than for grazing purposes; and it does seem to me that the proper mode is in leaving it to the Legislature for a while, and let them sell what ought to be sold, and lease what ought to be leased, and retain what it is necessary to retain.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, the Chairman of the committee requests me as one of its members to dwell upon a few facts that were omitted. As my predecessor in the argument has said, I went into the committee freely disposed towards this leasing system, although from the first the idea of establishing a landlord and tenant system was somewhat repugnant to my opinion; but as we went on step by step, we saw further and greater objections to it. We considered it in almost every possible light. First, we considered it from the standpoint of a purely leasing system; then we considered it as a system of selling half the land and leasing the other half; then of selling only a portion of the lands and forever retaining the rest. And, after fully discussing it in nearly all its aspects, and listening to arguments presented by the people generally from outside, some of them the ablest advocates of the leasing system, all of the committee, with the exception of one gentleman, whose opinions indeed are of very great weight, concurred in the report that we had better leave this whole matter to the Legislature. With the limitation of ten dollars an acre placed upon it by Congress, it operates as a considerable limitation. If all those lands could be sold, and none, I think, could be sold for less than that—if we could sell all those lands for that price tomorrow, we could put into the treasury of the state $54,860,800, on which the interest at four per cent would be $2,194,432. The tax that the state would derive from such land at that price would amount at two mills on the dollar in each year to $109,721. Now, all these things want to be taken into consideration. Very likely some of those lands, not many of them perhaps, can be sold for ten dollars an acre; others cannot. Then we wonder if we should not provide that exceptional sections such as those mentioned by the gentleman from Missoula in the beginning of the debate where lands were near towns, and there they could be divided into lots and ground rents collected for them, should not be excepted in this constitution from the general proposition. But the more we thought of it, the more we came to the conclusion that the restriction made by the government was at least large enough to prevent the waster of the lands, and that we had better leave the whole subject to the Legislature and the people of Montana to deal with in the future as they saw fit. Now, the gentleman asks, why should we not keep all those lands and all the revenues for posterity and why should we not maintain the public schools as we do now, by taxation upon ourselves. I think my friend, the Chairman of the committee, made that argument in saying that the burden of education added to all the other burdens of a new community—the openings of roads, the building of bridges, the erection of school houses, and all that kind of thing, comes pretty hard upon the first settlers, and upon their immediate successors, and we did all this for the benefit to future generations who ought to share somewhat in the burdens. Now, the first people of the Territory came from other states, and are generally educated, and what might be called the dark period of a state comes generally in the first or second generation—and if I had time I could dwell upon that to show the committee the reason why I have come to that conclusion—but you are familiar with the western states and know them. The bright men from all these states were the men who first went to new countries and to a new state. After that comes a sort of a period of Simerian gloom, as it were, and after that again, as the state grows in wealth and endows educational institutions, it proceeds to take rank in the front lines of enlightened communities. So that the hard period could bridge over the period generally succeeding the admission of a new state. That is the period that wants to be provided for; that is the period when a little money to build schoolhouses and to educate the people is worth more than at any other time; and while I have the very kindest regard for posterity, I would be very unwilling that this generation and the succeeding generation would take all these burdens upon itself and not see that they are equally distributed. Consequently, the committee having viewed this from almost every possible point of view, came to the conclusion that the wisest thing we could do would be to leave it to the Legislature of the state, only in the constitution provided that the funds should be so invested that the funds themselves and the interest should always be guaranteed by the state, and never could be diverted or wasted or put away. I would be very glad indeed to hear from other gentlemen of the committee.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I desire to withdraw the amendment that I offered, as I see now the report of the committee fully covers the ground of the substitute which I offered to resolution No. 8.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I would like to ask a question of the gentleman from Missoula in regard to timber land. We will say here is a sixteenth section of timber land and admit it would bring $40, or $20, though there are comparatively few of these sections that you can sell for $10. Now, all this is worth is what you can get out of the timber. If you lease it to the highest bidder and give him five years, he certainly has a right to have everything on it, as he would pay as much for the lease as he would if he bought it; and I cannot understand to save my life how we are to get a direct advantage when we can only use interest here. Now, we know that the people in this Territory are paying ten, twelve and fifteen per cent for money, and to sell, as you can see, and put it out at four or five per cent per annum and only use the four or five per cent is something that I cannot understand.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: We do not provide that we shall sell or that we shall lease. We leave that to the people.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I am not going to make a speech on this subject, I simply want to make a few observations. I have no doubt the gentlemen who composed the Committee on Education have given this subject full thought, and they are gentlemen who are amply capable and qualified to do this, and I believe that they have arrived at the best conclusion that it is possible to arrive at, concerning this very important question. There are many difficulties in the way of leasing property that have been pointed out by these gentlemen who have preceded me. The difficulty of getting water upon the lands of this country is one of the greatest, and I believe that it will be a very difficult matter to induce any tenant to go upon these lands and improve them for the tenure of five years. I do not believe that you will get men to undertake to do that, and hence I believe that the time is too short. If it had been extended to twenty years or over it might be that this proposition might be considered the most advisable. But with the short lease to which we are restricted by the Organic Act creating this state, I do not believe the system of leasing is practicable, and upon general principles I am opposed to the system of leasing. So far as the future character of our citizens is concerned, we owe something to the state in securing a character of citizens that will be permanent and will be freeholders, men who own their property, and as I understand there are about five million of acres of land here, one-half of which is, I believe, susceptible to cultivation and settlement. Now, instead of building up a system of landlordism, as some of the gentlemen have said here, and getting the system of tenantry in this country, men who have no permanent abodes—the birds of passage, we might say, that are led to abandon this land at any time—I believe that it is an injudicious system. I believe in extending such inducements to men as will anchor them down and make them good and permanent citizens of Montana. We owe a great deal, as the gentleman has said, to the present generation. There are men and women in this Territory who were born here, who had advantages in the way of education, and they contributed largely towards opening up and building this country, and we believe are now raising children. I believe in granting to the present generation some advantages, and I believe in getting out of this system some advantages for the people who live today and the children that are now born, hence, I believe that the conclusion that has been arrived at by this intelligent committee is correct and I will support the report of the committee.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of resolution number 8 as part of Section 2 of Proposition No. 17.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the said resolution No. 8 and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 3 of the proposition.

The Clerk read Section 3 as follows:

"Sec. 3. Such public school funds shall forever remain inviolate, guaranteed by the state against loss or division, to be invested, so far as possible, in public securities within the state, including school district bonds, issued for the erection of school buildings, under the restrictions to be provided by law."

There being no amendments to Sec. 3, the Clerk read Sec. 4, as follows:

Sec. 4. The Governor, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Secretary of State, Attorney General shall constitute the State Board of Land Commissioners which shall have the direction, control, leasing and sale of the school lands of the state and the lands granted or which may hereafter be granted for the support and benefit of the various state educational institutions, under such regulations and restrictions as may be prescribed by law."

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke moves to amend as follows:

Add to Sec. 4: "Provided that whatever disposition is made of such land preference shall be given to residents thereon who, prior to July 4, A. D. 1889, in good faith entered upon and made valuable improvements upon the same."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects have a subject in their report that covers that.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: If the gentleman is correct, I will withdraw my motion.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: In the first line before the words "Attorney General," I think the word "and" should be inserted.

The Chairman: If there be no objection, the Clerk will be instructed to insert in the presence of the committee the word "and". The Clerk will read Sec. 5 of the proposition.

The Clerk read Sec. 5, as follows:

"Sec. 5. The interest on all invested school funds of the state, and all rents accruing from the leasing of any school lands, shall be apportioned to the several school districts of the state, in proportion to the number of children and youths between the ages of six and twenty-one years, but no district shall be entitled to such distributive share that does not maintain a public free school for at least three months during the year for which distribution shall be made."

There being no amendments to Sec. 5, the Clerk read Sec. 6, as follows:

"Sec. 6. It shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly to provide by taxation or otherwise, sufficient means, in connection with the amount received from the general school fund, to maintain a public, free, common school in each organized district in the state, for at least three months in each year."

There being no amendments to Sec. 6, the Clerk read Sec. 7, as follows:

"Sec. 7. The public free schools of the state shall be opened to all children and youths between the age of six and twenty-one years."

There being no amendments to Sec. 7, the Clerk read Sec. 8, as follows:

"Sec. 8. Neither the Legislative Assembly nor any county, city, town or school district, or other public corporations, shall ever make, directly or indirectly, any appropriation, or pay from any public fund or money whatever, or make any grant of lands or other property, in aid of any church, or for any sectarian purpose, or to aid in the support of any school, academy, seminary, college, university or other literary, scientific institution, controlled in whole or in part by any church, sect or denomination whatever."

There being no amendment to Sec. 8, the Clerk read Sec. 9, as follows:

"Sec. 9. No religious or partisan test or qualification shall ever be required of any person as a condition of admission into any public educational institution of the state, either as teacher or student; nor shall attendance be required at any religious service whatever, nor shall any sectarian tenets be taught in any public educational institution of the state; nor shall any person be debarred admission to any of the collegiate departments of the university on account of sex."

There being no amendment to Sec. 9, the Clerk read Sec. 10, as follows:

"Sec. 10. The Legislature shall provide that all elections for school officers shall be separate from those elections at which other state or county officers are voted for."

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move to strike out that section. I do not see that it means anything.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I was opposed to the section in committee and on time; but it means this, that the school elections shall be separate from the general elections.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I hope this motion will not prevail. As Major Maginnis has just said at first he was opposed to this section, but after duly considering all the arguments in favor of and against it, it was the unanimous judgment of the committee to recommend the adoption of that section. Now, I do not believe that there is anyone here but certainly has seen and now feels the importance of removing as far as possible the election of school officers from that of a general election; and that is the object of this section. We not only believe it is wise, but we believe it is necessary to place in the Organic Act, or rather our constitution, that the Legislature shall provide for separate elections for school officers, believing as we do that the election of school officers should not take place at the time of the election of municipal officers and county officers. I cannot see any reason for the motion of the gentleman for striking out that section, and I can see every reason for retaining it as a part of this proposition.

Mr. Joy, of Park: Whatever might have been the unanimous opinion of that committee if that still remains that that provides that the election of all school officers, whoever they may be, must be separate from the general election. Now, the gentleman who has just taken his seat argued here on the floor the other day that that was one of the offices that a lady might fill—(Interrupted).

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Will it meet the objection of the gentleman if the words "school district officers" are inserted in there?

Mr. Joy, of Park: That will be acceptable.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the section be amended by inserting the word "district."

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, moves to amend as follows:

Amend Section 10 by inserting the word "district" after the word "for" in line 1.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Would not "school district" be better than "district school"?

Mr. Joy, of Park: Mr. Chairman, that amendment having been presented and seconded, I will withdraw my motion to strike out the section.

The Chairman: If there be no objection the gentleman from Park will be allowed to withdraw his motion to strike out the section. The question will be upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, to insert the words "school district officers" in lieu of the words "school officers" where they occur in the section.

Mr. Hammond, of Jefferson: It will be necessary then to strike out the word "other" before the word "state". I move to amend by striking that out.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I will accept the amendment to strike out the word "other."

The Chairman: The amendment having been accepted, the question will be upon the adoption of the section as amended by the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Chair put the question upon the adoption of the said section as amended, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 10, the Clerk read Section 11, as follows:

"Sec. 11. The general control and supervision of the state university and the various other state educational institutions shall be vested in a State Board of Education, whose powers and duties shall be prescribed and regulated by law. The said board shall consist of eleven members, the Governor, State Superintendent of Public Instruction and Attorney General being members ex-officio, the other eight members thereof shall be appointed by the Governor subject to the confirmation of the Senate, under the regulations and restrictions to be provided by law."

There being no amendment to Section 11, the Clerk read Section 12, as follows:

"Sec. 12. The funds of the state university and of all the other state institutions of learning, from whatever source accruing shall forever remain inviolate and sacred to the purpose for which they were dedicated. The various funds shall be respectively invested under such regulations as may be prescribed by law and shall be guaranteed by the state against loss or divergence. The interest of said invested funds, together with the rents from leased lands or properties shall be devoted to the maintenance and perpetuation of these respective institutions."

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I would just like to inquire of the Chairman of the committee whether the change in the present age of the school children was made intentionally from four to six years. It is four under the existing law, and now it is six to twenty-one.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Yes, the committee changed the law. We concluded that six years was the proper age.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I just made the suggestion, as something was said the other day about a kindergarten system.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move that when the committee rises they report Proposition No. 17 back with the recommendation that with these slight amendments they do pass.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Kanouse, of Meagher: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 17, have made certain amendments which are incorporated in the printed copy which I hold in my hand, and with such amendments they have directed me to report the same back to the convention with the recommendation that it do pass.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that he has been instructed to report back Proposition Number 17 with the amendments and a recommendation that it so pass.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I move that the convention take under consideration Proposition No. 17, General File No. 16, on its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Reek) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move that the rules be suspended, that the proposition be read as a whole, and the ayes and nays be called.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, before that motion is put, I would like to ask if it is the sense of the convention that Section No. 11 should pass without amendment. That Section 11 provides for a Board of Education consisting of 11 members, and it seems to me that it should be reduced to about 7; about five would be appointed ones, and the Governor and the Superintendent of Public Instruction would comprise the other two. Seven, it seems to me, would be plenty.

The President: The Chair would inquire from the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke if it was contemplated by his resolution to put this upon its final passage without receiving any further amendments?

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Yes. Act upon the amendments as reported by the Committee of the Whole only.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: In answer to the gentleman from Cascade, the reason that we fixed the number at this number was that ordinarily they make regents of the state university generally to consist of twelve or nine. Now, we held that the educational interests of the state would be subserved, and that the university and the different schools would run better, each in its own orbit, if they were to be under one single management, and consequently instead of having these various boards, we decided to have this one board to consist of eleven members which I do not think it too many, because two would be elected one year, two another, and two the sixth year, being eight members, and then the three members who are ex-officio in all would constitute the board.

The President: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke that the rules be suspended and that the consideration of the amendments offered by the Committee of the Whole be taken up, and that Proposition No. 17 be placed upon its final passage.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move you that the amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole to Proposition 17 be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The President: The Clerk will read the amendments.

The Clerk read as follows: In Section 4 insert the word "and" after "Secretary of State" so that it will read "Secretary of State and Attorney General."

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and a vote being taken, it was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: In Section 10 insert the word "district" after "school." Strike out the word "other" in line 2 after the word "which." So that the section shall read "The Legislature shall provide that all elections for school district officers shall be separate from those elections at which state or county officers are voted for."

The Chair put the question on the said amendments, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The proposition will now be placed upon its final passage, and the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brown, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rolwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Joseph K.; Toole, J. R.; Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—62.

Nays: None.

Absent: Brazleton, Breen, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Callaway, Conrad, Dyer, Hickman, Knippenberg, Muth, Warren, Webster—43.

The Chair announced the vote.

The President: The motion prevails and Proposition No. 17 as amended is adopted and incorporated as a part of the constitution of the state of Montana. It will now be enrolled and referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move that we take a recess until 8 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move to amend that we do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 32 in the affirmative and 23 in the negative.

The convention stood adjourned until Thursday, August 1st, 1889, at 10 A. M.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

Thursday, August 1st, 1889. Morning Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: There is a note from Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow, stating that on account of illness in his family he was obliged to go home. If there be no objection he will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the minutes of the previous day.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: Mr. President, I desire to ask what committee the communication from General Rugar was referred to.

The President: The Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I would like to offer a resolution and ask that it be referred to the same committee.

The President: The gentleman from Choteau offers the following resolution which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Resolved that all Indian reservations within the state of Montana shall be under the jurisdiction of the United States Court."

The President: If there be no objection this resolution will be received and referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge, sent up a proposition.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers a proposition relating to water rates.

The Clerk read as follows:

Proposition as to water rates, offered by Robinson, of Deer Lodge. "That priority of date of the appropriation of water shall be forever inviolable, and vested rights so acquired shall never be disturbed; that such rights to the use of all water in the state, except as to such water that has heretofore been or may be acquired by damming or reservoiring the same shall be usufruct, and extend to such and so much as the owner thereof may have actual use for, and for such length of time as he may have actual use for the same. That the Legislative Assembly of the state shall enact such laws as may be necessary to carry the foregoing provision into effect."

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that this proposition properly applies to Committee No. 15 on mining, water and water rights, and it will be so referred to the said committee if there be no objections. The consideration of the additional section to Proposition No. 27 is now in order. Does the convention desire to take any action upon Proposition No. 27, reported back from the printing committee?

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the consideration of Proposition No. 27 be postponed until the afternoon session.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 28 in the affirmative to 24 in the negative.

The President: Is there anything further before the convention under the head of unfinished business?

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: In connection with this matter, I think perhaps this capitol question will come up, and speaking in behalf of those who favor the removal of the capitol, we desire a full convention. We want a full and fair discussion of this matter, and I make the motion that next Wednesday morning at the morning session it be made a special order.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I presume this would require a two-thirds vote. It was suggested by a good many of the members of this convention that it might be well to postpone the consideration of this topic. It is a proposition that is likely to create some discussion, and probably create some loss of time, and those of us who take some interest in the matter certainly have no desire to resort to any dilatory tactics or in any way to interfere with the progress that the convention is now making in its work. We have no desire to resort to the devices or ingenious methods of the parliamentarians. We simply wish that when the matter comes up it will be disposed of in the shortest possible order; and I would say, at the request of a great number of the members here, that we are in favor of acceding to the motion before the house, and think it best, all things taken into consideration, that the matter be left over, or made a special order of business for Wednesday at ten o'clock, when we can meet here and in as speedy and effective a manner as possible, dispose of it according to the wishes of the members of this convention.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I ask for leave of absence, for the day at least, for my colleague, Mr. J. K. Toole, who is ill at home.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentleman will be excused. The convention has now under consideration General Orders.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move you that the convention do now resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole to consider Proposition No. 19, Articles on Legislative Departments.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would suggest that the Chairman of the Committee is not here. Cannot we take up something else?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I move we go into the Committee of the Whole on general file.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Aiken, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, being a member of the Committee on Legislative Departments, I think that perhaps should be laid over until Mr. Toole, the Chairman of the committee, can be present.

The President: Does the gentleman insist on his motion?

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I am perfectly willing to defer to anything that is reasonable in the matter, but it seems to me that the consideration of this matter in the Committee of the Whole, which can afterwards, and, as a matter of fact, is considered in the convention and subject to amendments after being reported back from the Committee of the Whole, would place the Chairman of the committee on this department in a position where he can advocate either the proposition as it stands or to propose amendments as they are, and I insist on the motion.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would only say that it is the usual custom in parliamentary bodies that the Chairman of the committee to whom it is referred has the management of it on the floor and in the house. I think it would be discourteous to my colleague to take it up at this time, and if there are any other files or schedules ready, I hope the gentleman will withdraw his motion and take up something else.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I will withdraw the motion on the understanding that it will be made the special order for ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Will the gentleman just withdraw it, and he will certainly find that there are no obstacles put in the way of its consideration tomorrow.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I shall insist upon the motion.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: In this connection I do not know how much personal influence can be brought to bear on this motion or its decision. Of course, the Chairman of the committee being sick, perhaps something ought to be allowed in that case in the way of postponement, but the consideration involved in this legislative department as it is reported by the committee render it imperative on my part at least, and so far as my vote goes, to object to any disposition of the question which will bring up the report of that committee, in the extreme last days of this week, or any other week. There are certain reasons for it. The absence of members and other matters; and while I am not disposed to insist upon the present consideration of this question, I am absolutely opposed to the postponement to a day fixed at the extreme part of the week.

The President: Does the Chair understand that the gentleman withdraws his motion?

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: No sir.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Under the circumstances, the Chairman being absent and perhaps sick only for today—(interrupted).

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: This is the only day Mr. Toole has been absent from the convention. He has been as regular an attendant as any gentleman on the floor.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I would suggest to the gentleman from Custer that we can take it up tomorrow.

The Chair put the question on said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 26 in the affirmative to 31 in the negative.

The President: The question before the convention now, is upon the motion of the gentleman from Custer, that the convention do now resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of General Orders.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair will appoint the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. J. R. Toole, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

The motion was seconded.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge, in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move that we take up Proposition No. 28, Miscellaneous Subjects and Future Amendments."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I should think that a postponement of this subject would be judicious, because that committee is liable to have many other subjects to consider before the adjournment of the convention, and probably it would be wiser to postpone that and take up some other subject, because something may arise at any time that will be referred to that committee, being a Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

The Chair put the question of the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Proposition No. 28, Section 1.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Section 1. Members of the Legislative Assembly and all officers, executive, ministerial or judicial, shall before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe to the following oath or affirmation, to-wit: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support, protect and defend the constitution of the United States and of the state of Montana, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of according to law and the best of my abilities." And no other oath, declaration or test shall be requested as a qualification for any office or public trust."

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer offers to amend Section 1 by adding the words "So help me God" after the word "abilities" on line six.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: This matter was very carefully discussed in our committee, and we have concluded that it would create considerable discussion on the part of gentlemen who would probably object to that way of affirmation, and it is an affirmation adopted by nearly all the states of the union, we concluded it would be better to leave it the way it is.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: It seems to me that it is a step in the wrong direction. It was only two years ago that nearly all the state constitutions contained this proviso, and by the urgent solicitation of a large portion of the people of this country this section was stricken out, so that the civil affirmation is equivalent to the words "So help me God," and I think if we inspect the lights of a large portion of our people who have conscientious scruples in objecting to this form of vote, that we will leave it out.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: As long as we have God in the constitution, I do not see any objection to it. I shall vote for the amendment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I do not see how those words can add anything to the dignity of the oath, more particularly when there is only one form of oath or affirmation. If you give us two forms in our constitution, it is all right; but if you leave those words out, it seems to me that adds dignity to the solemn words. The words "I solemnly swear (or affirm)" are sufficient. A great many people affirm, and if they do, the words "So help me God" are not in accordance with the affirmation. It seems to me it would be a great deal better to leave it just as it is.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: If there is any one thing that people as a rule adhere to, it is the superstitions imbibed in childhood, if we may term that, and whether you may call it superstition or education, the matter of the form of the oath has been handed down to us from ages past, with the concluding words "So help me God," so that I believe it has become a part of the being of a majority of the people of this country; and to say that an oath by a large number of people that did not conclude with the words "So help me God" would have the same binding force and effect upon the minds or consciences of those persons, seems to me unreasonable. Now, so far as the matter of swearing or affirming is concerned, it is true that perhaps there are a few persons who object to taking an oath in the usual and ordinary form where it concludes with the words "So help me God." But in my observation and experience around courts for over fifteen years, I have never met or known but one man who when he was called upon to take an oath said that he would affirm. As a rule, not only in majority but nearly all persons do not hesitate to take the ordinary oath as prescribed by law, concluding with the words proposed by this amendment. Some of the remarks that have been made, to a large class of persons, undoubtedly sound sacriligious. Those words can certainly injure no person who takes an oath, and so far as the matter of an affirmation is concerned it need not conclude with those words. "Affirm" is inserted in here in a parenthesis, and an affirmation usually concludes with the words "under the pains and penalties of perjury." So that if a person was called upon to take an oath and said that he preferred to affirm by reason of conscientious scruples or convictions, I do not understand that if this amendment were adopted as proposed, that he would be bound to take the oath concluding with the words "So help me God" or even any of the words that are proposed there. Now, it seems to me that this amendment ought to obtain. I believe that I know persons that if you struck out of an oath the words "So help me God" would consider they were taking no oath at all; they would not consider that they were bound to tell the truth. And in view of the fact that perhaps ninety-nine per cent of all the persons who will ever be elected to office under this constitution, at least I should hope the percentage would be that large—will be persons who believe in the existence of a Supreme Being, and will not hesitate as officers of the state of Montana to take an oath concluding with the words "So help me God." It seems to me this amendment should prevail.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I would ask the gentleman who has just taken his seat why he has such a wonderful regard for the past ages, and I am sorry to see him obstruct the wheels of progress by his regard for these old institutions of the past. I said a few moments ago that this was progressive, and I believe that the progress in this manner in the last few years bears me out in this statement. In our last election certain citizens of New York City objected to the form of oath in that state, and not being allowed to be sworn by the judges of election had a written injunction issued from the superior court of that city forcing the judges of election to allow them to be sworn. And, according to the argument and the admission of the gentleman who has just taken his seat, that perhaps there is one person out of one hundred in the state of Montana that might object to this form of vote, it is here for that one person that I stand in support. I believe that that one person which he has admitted dwells within the limits of Montana, is entitled to support and defense in this constitution, and I believe that if we shut them out in this matter, that we have worked on them not only a hardship but we have abridged the liberty which we have so ably attempted to defend in this Organic Act. I am not in favor of it. I do not believe that it will be working any hardship upon the people that would subscribe to the form of oath which he has advised here, but I believe on the other hand that a majority of them would be in favor of it, and so far as a binding course of oaths is concerned, have we not all of us seen in courts of justice, and in other capacities, men holding their hand up and swearing before their God to certain facts, and in a few short days, or in a few short weeks, have not certain circumstances transpired that demonstrated them to be perjurers? So far as a form of oath goes, I would believe a man who, standing before a judge or a notary with the full dignity of a man, with truth shining upon his eye, makes and subscribes to any form of affirmation or oath, I care not whether it is hedged in by all the provisions he attempts to circumscribe to it here, I would accord that man as much respect for his oath and as much recognition of it as the man who subscribed to some form of oath that has been handed down from the dusty ages of the past.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I heartily endorse all that has been said by my colleague from Custer County, and while there may be but one person in all the United States who is in favor of recognizing God in the oath or binding the consciences of men by referring to a Deity, I can say that there are three representatives of Custer County who repudiate the situation taken by my young friend from Missoula, and I am ready to say that there are not only three representatives here but that there are ninety-five per cent of our citizens who would not hold us guiltless if we fell into his turn of argument. When he speaks of the folly of following the examples of the past and going back amidst the dusty pages of the past, I say to him that I am slow to leave the pages of my childhood, and I am slow to leave the examples left us by the great men and the patriots and statesmen and lawgivers who went before, and I believe they are not to be repudiated by any stripling or any hoary-haired man who has the audacity to get up and by his protest upon the floor of this convention defy the Almighty—for it is nothing else than a defiance. It suggests itself to my mind, the old question which we have all heard, and I would ask him "Upon what meat has this our Caesar fed that he has grown so great," that he has undertaken to become the moral censor of these God-fearing people. I am in favor of adhering to the old forms of oath that has existed since the foundations of justice were established and that comes down to us from the ages of the past where law and justice had their origin. If a man thinks his conscience won't allow him to appeal to the Almighty, let him affirm. There is ample provision for it here, but this oath has become a part and parcel of the common law of this country, and if you undertake to strike it out here, so far as officers are concerned, you have got to strike it out in the courts of justice, and everywhere else. I for one am in favor of the amendment offered by my colleague and shall support it.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Loud, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: In line six I see there is a clerical error. The word "requested" should be "required," and I would like to have the word "required" substituted for the word "requested." I so move.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question upon the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 1, the Clerk read Section 2, as follows:

"Sec. 2. All officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by the Constitution, and all officers whose office and duties may be hereafter created by law, shall be elected or appointed as may be provided by law."

There being no amendment to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3, as follows:

"Sec. 3. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets in this state."

There being no amendment to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4, as follows:

"Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall enact suitable laws to prevent the destruction by fire, from locomotives on railroads, or from any other cause, of the grasses and forests upon lands of the state or upon lands of the public domain, the control of which may be conferred by Congress upon this state and to otherwise protect the same."

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I move to strike out Section 4 for the reason that it is legislation, and has no business in this constitution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: I hope the motion will not prevail for the reason that I cannot see very much legislation in this matter. It just simply says that the Legislature shall enact suitable laws, and it seems to me it is the purpose of this constitution to indicate some of the laws that the Legislature shall enact.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I only wish to say one word in relation to this matter. If it is proper to have such a provision in the constitution as Section 4, then it would be proper to have a provision in there that the Legislature shall provide for the punishment of misdemeanors, for the punishment of crime of burglary, murder, petit larceny, grand larceny, and every other crime that is known to the statute; and if it is proper to put such a provision as that in the constitution, it would be proper to put a provision in, in relation to trespassing of animals, and every other unlawful offense known to the statute. We have enough of these matters in the constitution now which are simply legislation and nothing else, and therefore I am in favor of striking out of every provision in this constitution anything which smacks of legislation. Certainly this is simply and purely legislation, and has no business in this constitution.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I hope this will not be stricken out. I think it is a wise provision and a wise thing particularly at this time when our country is all on fire, and in almost every case is occasioned from the very causes to which this section directs attention. There is no legislation in it; it is not legislative. It simply points and directs the attention of the Legislature in this matter. It says that they shall pass suitable laws, etc. I think in our Territory where there are such large stock interests, this matter should be covered by proper statute, and it may go for years unless the attention is directed to the matter by this constitution.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: So far as the proposition itself is concerned, that is embraced in Section 4. It is all right and correct enough, but the only objection to its remaining in here is simply that it falls in what is generally designated by lawyers and writers as the police power of a state. Whenever a state Legislature is clothed with that—with the police power of the state—then it is understood what that means and what it extends to. Then in legal parlance all that is embraced in this Section 4 falls clearly within the police power of the state. Hence, it is not necessary for the constitution to go into every subject matter that belongs to the police power of the Legislature in detail. It is not necessary to go into this any more than it would be to go into a thousand other things that we might enumerate that the Legislature can act upon. It is not necessary to direct their attention to this in particular any more than it is to any other of a thousand different subjects of Legislation that might be embraced in the constitution; and if we follow them up one by one and direct the attention of the Legislature to all these various subject matters, we would have our constitution pretty near as large as Webster's unabridged dictionary. So, this being unnecessary in here, I am in favor of striking it out.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a tie vote of 30 in the affirmative to 30 in the negative.

There being no further amendments to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5, as follows:

"Sec. 5. The Legislative Assembly shall enact liberal homestead and exemption laws."

There being no amendment to Section 5, the Clerk read Section 6, as follows:

"Sec. 6. No perpetuities shall be allowed, except for charitable purposes."

There being no amendment to Section 6, the Clerk read Section 7, as follows:

"Sec. 7. All county officers shall keep their offices at the county seat of their respective counties."

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move to insert after the word "officers" "except as otherwise provided by law." This section as it reads would make it obligatory on the county officers to have their offices at the county seat.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me that ought to remain in, that the office of every county officer should be at the county seat. This does not require his residence to be there.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I withdraw my amendment, with the consent of my second.

The Chairman: The gentleman withdraws his amendment.

There being no amendments to Section 7, the Clerk read Section 8, as follows:

"Sec. 8. All officers shall hold their offices until their successors are elected and qualified. The term of all officers elected, except as otherwise provided in this constitution, shall commence on the first Monday of January following their election."

There being no amendment to Section 8, the Clerk read Section 9, as follows:

"Sec. 9. In the disposition of the public lands granted by the United States to this state, preference shall always be given to actual settlers, and the Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for carrying this section into effect.

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I move to amend Section 9 in line 2 by inserting the word "thereon" after the word "settlers."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Loud) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendment to Section 9, the Clerk read Section 10, as follows:

"Sec. 10. No railroad or other transportation company, or any agent, officer or employe thereof, shall grant free passes or tickets, or passes or tickets at a discount, to members of the Legislative Assembly, or state, or county, or municipal officer or officers, and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket by a member of the Legislative Assembly, or any such officer or officers, shall work a forfeiture of his or their office, and the emoluments thereof, and any railroad or other transportation company violating any provision of this section shall forfeit to the state one thousand ($1,000) dollars for each and every violation thereof, to be recovered by an action of law."

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I desire to offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Madison offers the following amendment: Amend Section 10 by adding thereto "it shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly at its first session under this constitution to enforce this provision by appropriate legislation."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Section 10 as read is almost an exact copy of the constitution ratified by the people five years ago this fall, and it is well known that no more popular proposition was submitted to the people of Montana and received such general support as that one provision. Now, the only object of the amendment is this. In discussing the matter among the lawyers they are of the opinion that the Legislature would let this alone—in other words it would be practically an inoperative provision. In the state of Missouri they have the same provision exactly, and I am informed by gentlemen in that state that that provision of the constitution is violated every day; that notwithstanding that men would go and hold up their hands and say that they would protect the constitution, yet they would travel all over that state with passes in their pockets. Therefore, I want to make this provision ironclad. When it requires as a matter of duty that the Legislature shall at its first session enforce what has been ratified by the almost unanimous vote of the people of Montana five years ago, I want to put it in such a way that the Legislature will not shrink from its duty. If they do, there will be somebody to have something to say.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move to strike out Section 10.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: It seems to me that we could get at this matter a little more squarely by adding an amendment something like this—I appreciate the course of what my friend from Madison County says but I think he has not enough of the right remedy to prevent fraud or perjury, to temptation, and it seems to me that if this amendment read something like this: "Every railroad or other transportation company shall grant free passes or tickets to the members of the Legislative Assembly and to every other state, county or municipal officer, etc., regardless of fear or affection, hatred, malice or ill will" that it would strike to the root of this thing and cure it. If we put the railroads and other companies in this situation and compel them to pay tribute to these public officers, and help support them, it seems to me it would be a step in the right direction; and then when these men came to the seat of government require them to account for their railroad transportation. Of course, I am not going to insist strenuously upon it.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to support the gentleman's motion. (Laughter.) This is not a laughing matter. It is a serious proposition. These companies have use for all the sheriffs and deputy sheriffs and other officers along their line all the time, and we have a great example in this matter from the fact that when the Congress of the United States framed the Interstate Commerce Act this question came up as to how the members should be debarred from accepting any privilege from railroad companies, and the Congress settled it by declaring in the law that the companies should furnish that transportation. If we are going to legislate on this subject at all, I do not think we can do any better than follow the example of that illustrious body in accordance with whose act we are sitting here today.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: When we are dealing with railroad corporations, we are dealing with rather dangerous engines; we are dealing with no ordinary artificial persons. The proposition submitted by the gentleman is very nice in theory, but I have always held this, that whenever any proposition coming before any legislative body affecting railroad corporations, that they can always see their way around perfectly well; they lie back and watch the Legislature amuse itself all it wants to upon their propositions, because they see, under the advice of the best counsel that we have, that the proposition is entirely harmless to them, and they are willing for a legislative body or convention to amuse itself with it all it wants to for a plaything. But whenever a proposition is suggested and under the advice of their counsel they see the possibility of harm made to them, then, sir, they invariably step in and say to that body "No sir, that shall not go through," and unless the members of the deliberative body are made of such material that they are like handling a stubborn government mule—unless they have that firmness in them, allow the railroad corporations invariably to handle that body, and it does not own itself. In one time, sirs, in ten would a legislative body own itself when besieged by railroad corporations. It is speaking badly of humanity; it is speaking badly for the independence of these deliberative bodies, but we must look at facts as they stare us in the face. Now, this proposition suggested would be very good, if it could be carried into effect. It would be a good change that the railroad corporations would desire us to amuse ourselves with; but as a legal conundrum it appears to me that so far as all the railroad companies in the state of Montana that have been constructed, that this proposition would fall harmless, for the reason that it cannot be enforced. We cannot go into our constitution and impose new terms and conditions upon these railroad corporations who have received their authority to act under the government of the United States. We have no power to impose these conditions upon them. Therefore, any provision of this character that we seek to engraft in our constitution would be laughed at by the railroad companies, if it was intended to work an injury to them. For that reason, I am opposed to the amendment, and I am in favor of the plain proposition that is contemplated in Section 10 as the report of this committee. I am opposed to this amendment sought to require them to furnish free transportation to a certain class of individuals or officers, for the reason that it cannot be enforced.

Mr. Buford, of Madison: I would like to ask if this has any bearing upon our Stock Inspectors that pass over the road. If so, I am in favor of striking out the section.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I am a little bit surprised at the animus of my venerable friend from Deer Lodge County. If there is any one county in this convention that has stood pat from the beginning to this time attempting to hold matters of legislation out of this fundamental law that we are trying to enact that venerable gentleman certainly has been one of them, and I have felt with him in that matter. There are a thousand and one things that might creep into this constitution that are matters that are the subject of legislation, but to take them as fundamental propositions or as becoming parts of the organic law of Montana, they certainly are out of place. Now, there is a law almost verbatim with this Section 10, or at least, such a law has been attempted to be enacted by the Legislature several times. I believe it never was enacted. But consider for a moment the situation. Here we are as delegates representing the people, coming here and tying the hands of the people, by reason of legislation that indicates upon its face that the people have not confidence in their fellow men; in other words, by a kind of legislation wherein I said to myself I have not the confidence in myself as a public officer, and consequently I will tie my hands behind my back for fear that I might steal something, or for fear that some railroad company might give me transportation from Miles City to Helena, and by reason of that transportation of probably ten or twenty dollars, I will be expected to violate my oath as an officer and not treat that corporation fairly and squarely upon its merits the same as an individual. The railroad companies and corporations of this state are a part of us. Without the existence of railroads Montana would not be much today, and to say that because you offer me a ride in your conveyance that it is going to influence me so that I will come in here as a member of the Legislature or a Judge of the Supreme Court, or occupy any other official capacity, and by reason of your having given me a ride, say that I would decide a matter in your favor regardless of the merits of the question, seems to me to indicate that the people have not confidence in themselves. I do not believe there is any clamor for anything of the kind. I have no hesitancy in saying that I have ridden more than once on free transportation, and I do say in addition to that that it never had any more influence on me than if I had paid my fare.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Are you not an attorney of a railroad corporation?

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I never was the attorney of a railroad corporation, thank God, in my life. I have succeeded in making a bare living without being the attorney of any corporation.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: As the mover of this amendment, I wish to ask a question. I will ask the gentleman whether he came into the convention with a pass in his pocket or not?

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Whether I came into the convention with a pass or not I do not consider as any of the gentleman's business. Laughter and applause. I came here not as the representative of any railroad, not as the representative of any labor organization, not as the representative of any locality, to do what seemed in my judgment to be right in the interest of the people of the whole Territory of Montana. I have taken an oath of office to support the constitution of the United States, and to perform those duties faithfully to the best of my knowledge and judgment, and for any gentleman to stand upon this floor and to say that he himself or any other person now a public officer in the state of Montana, or hereafter to become such, would stoop to favor a railroad corporation or a stage company or anything else by reason of having been given a free ride, certainly impugns to himself something that I do not desire to take to myself. If the honorable gentleman from Deer Lodge were one of the Supreme Judges, or was a District Judge, as he is very likely to be—and I think he will make a very good one—and some attorneys who had a case to try before him invited him to dinner, invited him to the hospitality of his home—does he pretend to indicate to this convention that that would influence him as the Judge in favor of that attorney's cause or the client? Is it not practically the one and the same thing? I believe that the railroad companies and the stage companies, and all those concerns, have a right to exist, and have a right to the same kind of treatment that other companies and corporations and individuals get, and no better. I believe that there should be such legislation as would, even in the shape of police legislation, require and enforce the performance of their duties as they should be performed. I believe that that same sort of thing should apply to individuals. But to say that because, as the gentleman has suggested, that perhaps I rode from Miles City here on a pass, I am standing up here as an advocate of railroads, standing up here and placing myself in a position where by reason of a ten dollar ride or a twenty dollar ride, I would violate my oath, and do for that company what I would not have done had it not been for that pass, I think is carrying the matter to the utmost extreme. The gentleman has suggested that the constitution framed and adopted by the people five years ago had that provision in it. I am not aware of that fact; but let me say this to you, that the actions of this convention thus far have indicated that no convention on the face of the earth that ever preceded it had any intelligence to compare with this convention. The constitution of the United States, that great article that has stood for more than one hundred years with hardly an amendment, with no legislation in it, is cast aside as no criterion to be governed by here, and for the same reason the constitution of five years ago has hardly been given consideration, although that constitution was very far from running in the same line as the constitution of the United States. It seems to me that we are here for the purpose of enacting fundamental law, of simply placing certain checks upon certain officers, and perhaps upon certain questions of legislation. Outside of that the Legislature has and should have full and absolute power and control over all these matters; and to say that we should vote in favor of such a section as Section 10 of that bill, tying the hands—not only tying the hands of the Legislature but compelling them according to the gentleman's proposed amendment, to enact such laws as would enforce the provisions of this section, indicates that the gentleman has not confidence in himself—indicates a weakness in the case I have cited, that if I invited him to dinner at my house he would be so softened and mollified in my favor that he would do anything for me even to the extent of violating his oath—that if I gave him a ride in my carriage, although I have no carriage, that I would have him to stand and fight for me and violate his oath. I do not believe that that kind of thing should go into this constitution, and I certainly will support the motion to strike it out. It is legislation, vicious legislation.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: The unintentional confession on the part of the gentleman in his effort to strike out this section that legislative bodies have attempted to pass laws something similar to this section, and have failed, should in my opinion arouse the convention to the necessity of adopting this very section, and I trust that such will be the result.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I understand the motion before the committee is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Madison.

The Chairman: No sir; there is a motion of the gentleman from Gallatin to strike out Section 10.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I would like to suggest to the Chair that a motion to amend takes precedence of a motion to strike out. That is a very well settled principle of law. The friends of a measure have a right to perfect it in every way they can before it is stricken out.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I understood the proposition to be voted on was the amendment of the gentleman from Madison.

The Chairman: The amendment of the gentleman from Madison is to add to Section 10 the words "It shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly at its first session under this constitution to enforce this provision by proper legislation."

Mr. Watson, of Fergus: I have only one word to say upon this subject. The committee in considering this subject had but one thing in view, and that was this: That while they might have differed in regard to the necessity, the absolute necessity of that law, in order to preserve the purity of legislators and public officers, they had no doubt as to the desire of the people of Montana that such a provision should be enacted in the constitution, and hence they have presented the article.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: As the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, has well said, the friends of the measure have a right to perfect it so that it takes precedence of a motion to strike out; but as this proposition has taken somewhat of a wide range it would perhaps not be improper for me to respond to some of the gentleman's remarks, particularly the remarks of the gentleman from Custer. I have no disposition to impugn the motive of any man. Perhaps I am not so strong in my convictions as the honorable gentleman who poses here as a man who does not need the protection of the law in this respect. Mr. Chairman, this is not a new subject in Montana—and one word in reply to the honorable gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Major Maginnis. This history of legislation in controlling railroads has a life of more than thirty years. I remember, sir, as a member of the Illinois Legislature in 1869, when the first bill was introduced for the purpose of controlling the railroad in the state of Illinois, there were eighty-five members of the House and twenty-five of the Senate. At that time the growth of the railroads had checked the entire state. They simply proposed to control them as against unjust discrimination, and in that legislation every railroad attorney in the state, every member of the Legislature who was a railroad attorney, and every officer voted consistently in that Legislature against the proposition. You know, gentlemen, as the member from Deer Lodge has well said, that they will allow conventions and legislatures to amuse themselves, but whenever there is a proposition that they do not want to pass they finally step in and say "It does not go." I do not want to impugn the motives of any gentleman here, but you can look around yourselves, and I think you will find the majority of those men who go for this measure are in no way connected with a railroad company. I well understand the meaning of the honorable gentleman from Custer, Dr. Burleigh, in making fun of this measure so as to defeat it. Well now, we pass on a little further, gentlemen. We find that the state of Wisconsin did manage to get a bill through both houses of the Legislature controlling the great corporations of the state of Wisconsin. You know, gentlemen of this convention, that it is literally true that the rich in this country are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer. Why? It is because of the trusts that are formed of capital, because of the great aggregations of wealth by which they have been enabled to ride down the poor man and stop his earnings. I admire a man that, by his intellect, his industry and attention to business, his economy, acquires wealth and uses it in this broad land of ours, but I do not propose to give my vote for the increasing of the power of corporations anywhere in the United States. And, gentlemen, I remember this fact distinctly, too, that in the former convention that I have named of a little over five years ago, I stated without fear of contradiction that every man in that convention who was connected with railroad matters as employees or attorneys voted against the clause that the people ratified by more than fourteen thousand majority in the Territory of Montana. So that when we come down to ask ourselves, when you gentlemen go home and have reported that you have defeated this measure that I say is one of the most public ones that is before the people—go and ask them and they will tell you it is so—if you are here to defeat their will, then meet them when you go home. I say this is a proper subject for this convention to act upon, to lay its hands upon the Legislature and restrain them. What are we here for but that? We are here for granting them power to do certain things, and then where danger lies restraining them from it. I do not believe in the proposition that because a measure is proposed, that throws restrictions around corporations and great powers, that is to impugn any man's sense of justice, or his conscience or uprightness. And let me warn you again, gentleman. We have here two great trunk lines running through the Territory of Montana, one 822 miles long, another one nearly as long, and just as true as you are born the results of the influence of those corporations will be felt. It is the experience of all men here that when you come to organize your state government and when you come to elect your senators, your Governor, Chief Justice and other officers, those corporations will come very near controlling the politics of Montana. They have always done it, and will continue to do it. Why, it is within the memory of everybody who has occasion to read the newspapers that each party, be it said to its shame, has made exertions to capture the railroad vote, and they have on one side or the other succeeded in doing it on every occasion. I say this provision can do no harm. I know the railroads won't support it. I know they do not like it now. I know they laughed at the members of the last convention when they went to insert that provision there; every soul of them voted against it. And so it is today. Having said that much, gentlemen, and believing that this amendment is right and will prevail, and that this provision will go into the constitution, because it cannot do any harm but may do good, I shall vote for the amendment.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire by way of explanation to suggest to the consideration of my illustrious friend from Madison County that if he thinks for one moment that I made the suggestion which I did by way of a verbal amendment here for the purpose of diverting the attention of the convention from the true question presented, or for the sake of making sport, he is wonderfully mistaken. I can only account for his conclusion on the ground that he seems to be unwell; whether he is troubled with a chronic dyspepsia or some mental aberration, I do not know, but he was never further from the anchor of God's truth in his life before. I believe that if the amendment that I suggested is adopted, that it will have the effect of preventing all this corruption and bribery and everything of that kind that is charged here, and will bring these men to their senses, and I know that when my honorable friend from Deer Lodge County—my honorable friend and my patriotic friend—comes to look the thing fairly in the face, he will come to the same conclusion that I have arrived at. Now, so far as the friendship of the railroad company is concerned, especially the Northern Pacific, no man who knows my history will accuse me of it. I think I can venture to say that I have brought more suits against the Northern Pacific Railroad Company for damage to stock and property than any other attorney in the Territory of Montana. I was the first man, I believe, to ever bring suits against them to compel the specific performance of their contracts with the poor settlers of the Yellowstone Valley, and I venture to say that I have fought those suits for the last five years, and they are still pending without any sign of yielding on my part; and I am the last man in the world who ought to be accused of friendship or partiality to railroad companies, or doing anything outside of my duty to protect them. I did not suppose that the radical measure which I introduced here would be adopted. There are some things which come sometimes with such overwhelming force that people cannot comprehend them at once. Occasionally a great movement in the right direction is comprehended and adopted at once, but as a general thing it goes over and becomes discarded property, and finally men take it up by installments, and at last adopt the whole thing. But my objection to this clause is the argument that I have urged here twenty-five times at least on this floor, that it savors of a species of iniquitous legislation, which has no place in this constitution. Now, I will repeat again here that this constitution is the creature of the people; that all sovereign power to make the laws and enact laws resided in the people of this Territory. They adopt this constitution, and whatever they insert here is a delegation of power to the government, and can be exercised in the manner prescribed by the Organic Act. Now, this power is in the people; how is it to be exercised? It is to be exercised by them at the ballot box and by their representatives in the Legislature who are sent up to represent them, simply because they are too numerous to represent themselves. It is the sovereign power of the people, and all that you put in here is the mere curtailment of that power which is inherent in the people, and for that reason I shall vote against the amendment.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentlemen from Madison (Mr. Callaway) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 30 in the affirmative to 32 in the negative.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I should like to ask the Chair whether the motion to strike out made by myself was declared out of order?

The Chairman: Yes.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I desire to renew it at this time.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I have an amendment to the section.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I have an amendment to that section if it be in order at this time.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Goddard, offers the following substitute for Section 40: All railroads in this state shall grant annual and trip passes to all state officers and members of the Legislative Assembly, and for the purpose of carrying this provision into effect the Secretary of State shall furnish all railroad companies doing business in this state a list of such officers. (Laughter)

Mr. Clarke of Silver Bow: As the amendment contemplates striking out the section and substituting another I would suggest that the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow would be in order.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I desire to offer an amendment to the section as it stands.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow desires to amend by inserting after the word "Officers" in line 3 the words "newspaper Editors."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I rise to a point of order. It seems to me there was a motion made and seconded to strike out the section.

The Chairman: That motion is now before the House.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order. It is a well settled principle of parliamentary law that has never been disputed and cannot be disputed that whenever a proposition is before a deliberative body, that before a motion to strike any section out can be entertained, that a motion to amend and perfect it is in order.

The Chairman: The Chair so rules, but there are no amendments that the Chair is aware of.

Mr. Buford, of Madison: I have an amendment.

The Chairman: Is it the desire of the gentleman from Yellowstone to have his amendment put?

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow, called for the reading of the amendment offered by himself.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Before these amendments are put I would like to have the point of order determined. I agree with the gentleman from Silver Bow that if there are amendments pending that the motion to strike out is not in order, but at the time this motion was put and seconded there were no amendments pending and the committee is entitled to have that motion put before any amendments can be entertained that were subsequently offered.

The Chairman: The Chair decides that a motion to amend takes precedence if presented. The gentleman from Silver Bow now moves to amend by inserting after the word "officer" in line 3 of the section the words "Newspaper Editor."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: In connection with this matter, it strikes me that the newspapers and newspaper editors have a greater influence on the people than any legislative assembly. They can get up and discuss any proposition, and if you want to protect the people, I think this ought to be directed to the newspapers as well as to the legislators.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to suggest that the gentleman also include printer's devils.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow Mr. Warren and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move that the committee do now rise and report.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I now desire to renew my motion to strike out Section 10.

Mr. Buford, of Madison: I would like to have my amendment read.

The Chairman: There is an amendment offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Myers, which takes precedence. Insert after "officers" in line 3 "except Sheriff, Deputy Sheriffs and Stock Inspector."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Myers) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Madison, Mr. Buford, offers to amend Section 10 of Proposition No. 28 by striking out the words in the third line "State or county, or municipal officer or officers" and insert therefor "Members of the Judiciary Committee."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison Mr. Buford and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke Mr. Mayger and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, if a substitute is in order, I would like to offer one.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I suggest that the motion to strike out would be in order now.

The Chairman: The Chair decides that a substitute or motion to amend takes precedence of the motion to strike out. The gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, offers the following substitute for Section 10: "The Legislature shall have power to pass all laws necessary in order to prevent railroads and other corporations or persons operating transportation lines in this state from issuing passes to state, county, municipal or other officers thereof."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I would be opposed to that for the reason that the Legislature always has that power.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, offers the following substitute for Section 10: "The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the total prohibition of the issuing of free passes or tickets of discount by railroad corporations or any other common carriers to any state officers, to any member of the Legislative Assembly or to any county or municipal officer, and shall impose suitable penalties for violation thereof."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I move the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and a vote being taken it was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question before the committee is to strike out Section 10.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I fully agree with the gentleman from Madison that this measure which was adopted by a former convention and submitted to the vote of the people of the Territory was one of the most popular measures and received the heartiest endorsement, and I believe that today if we adopt this provision which has been reported by the committee that it will meet with the hearty concurrence and approval of 90% of the people of Montana. Now, I do not wish to put myself in the attitude of being hostile to railroads and other corporations. I know the advantages of these corporations to the people of this state. I know that the railroads in this country that have threaded our valleys and brought cheap merchandise to our doors and taken away our mineral have been of incalculable advantage to this state. But for them, hundreds of mines producing untold wealth today in this country would not be opened; but for them, these cities which stand as an honor to the Territory would be but mere villages; and I am opposed to throwing any obstructions in the way of provisions in the constitution or in the Legislature that would discourage them in the least; but on the other hand, I am willing and desirous that their interests shall be promoted in every consistent way. Now, I do not believe that the adoption of this section in the constitution is going in any way to impede the legitimate operation of any of these corporations. We know that it requires a certain amount of cost to operate a railroad in this country, so much per mile as generally reckoned upon. Now, the principle that was contemplated by the resolution of the gentleman from Custer, that we should make it obligatory upon the railroads to carry all the officers of the state, would involve a free transportation of several thousand men almost daily over this country. Do you undertake to say that this is fair and just? That these railroads should be compelled to carry these officers numbering thousands in this Territory—and that will travel frequently when they get free passes all over this country—is that a fair and just proposition? The proposition has been discussed in the legislative halls of the nation, and they have come to the conclusion that it is an iniquitous measure for corporations to grant free passes, and they have excluded them. The operations of the Interstate Commerce Law do not extend to another state. We have corporations here that are local, and usually they have become local in their nature, and they may grant passes to anybody within the limits of the state. It is only in traveling from one state to another that the operation of the national law takes effect. Now, as I remarked, it costs these railroad companies a certain amount of money to transport these people. It is not fair that they should be compelled to do this for nothing, and you may be assured that in making their estimates for the cost of operating their roads when the system of free passes is in vogue that they will have calculated about the amount of money that they will lose in that way, and they will tax it onto your merchandise or your freight in the way of ore. Does any gentleman suppose that the railroads of this country are working for nothing, or going to give value for nothing? Why, the very fact of the railroads desiring to extend these passes to members of the Legislatures, and I may say, most of the conventions, for I believe that every member of this convention has been tendered a pass by the time of its convening—do you undertake to say that they do this without a purpose? It is not well understood that the railroad people are about the smartest people we have on the face of the earth, and know as well as anybody the weakness of human nature? These matters unconsciously have an effect and a bearing upon members of the Legislative body when it comes to pass laws which might be inimical to the railroad company. I know before this Inter-State Commerce bill went into operation that there were men in this Territory that were shipping merchandise and ore and mineral and other articles of transportation, for which they were paying the railroad companies hundreds of thousands of dollars per annum, and yet those men were not offered a free pass to ride over the roads, but in a convention or legislative or any other political body these passes were distributed freely to men who probably never paid a dollar a year for transportation except indirectly. Now, is it not patent to the minds of everyone that the railroads have an object in view in distributing these passes? Don't they know when they give a pass to a man that rides over the railroad—and I will say that the dinner question is no comparison to it whatever; a dinner costs nothing, but a pass on a railroad would cost from ten to one hundred dollars. Don't they know that the moment they give that pass to a man he feels under obligation to the railroad company, and that everything else being equal all questions that come up before the Legislature he will give the benefit of the doubt to the railroad company in all probability, and in many instances there will be considerable stress upon the elasticity of the conscience. Now, I am opposed to striking out this measure. I believe in putting men beyond temptation, and I believe we should throw such restrictions about legislation and about judicial departments, and about the public departments of the State of Montana as will tend to preserve the purity of men in office, and try to avoid if possible any undue influence in legislating upon questions that affect these corporations.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: I am in favor of striking out this section, for I think we are getting beyond all the bounds of propriety and decency in telling the Legislature what it shall or shall not do on all questions which shall come up before it for its consideration, and every resolution of this kind introduced into this convention is a direct reflection upon the intelligence and the probity of the men who will be sent here to make our laws. I know a gentleman from the country said to me the other evening, in language not quite as classical as that in which Judge Cooley expressed the same idea to us here yesterday, but it was quite as forcible and as earnest, for I think he had been imbibing a little freely from some of the Helena hydrants—he said "Don't legislate too much; leave a little for those who come after you!" He says "If you seventy-five fellows up in that convention think you monopolize all the intelligence of Montana you are off your base." I agree with him fully, and I merely wish to say that if the people of Montana cannot be trusted to make our laws and haven't sufficient intelligence, honesty and courage to do their duty without being told by this convention, then our boasted intelligence is a farce, our liberties are held by a slender thread, and our popular form of government is a total and absolute failure.

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: I wish to enter my protest before that motion is put. I am not in favor of striking out that section, and I do not wish by my attitude to reflect upon the honesty and intelligence of our people. The only opposition against this measure proceeds from the fact that it is legislation. Now, I am purposed to go extensively into legislation, but I do say right here that in all that is universally admitted to be good, you may call it legislation if you please, but I am certainly in favor of it. Now, this section is not original in our constitution. It found a place in the constitution of 1884. We also find it in the constitution of California. We find it in all these modern constitutions. Why was it put there? Simply because the experience of legislators saw fit to insert it, and deemed it a wise measure, and I certainly think myself that if it is inserted here it will serve a very useful purpose. Now, I have no antipathy to railroads. I do not wish my action to be so construed. I recognize the good they have done in this country, but I do unhesitatingly say that any measure that has for its purpose the purity of legislation, the welfare of the people, will always have my voice and vote in its favor, if I can comprehend it properly. Now, with my understanding of this measure I am heartily in favor of it, and certainly shall vote against the resolution to strike it out.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: As the proposition now recurs upon the motion to strike this out, it resolves itself into the question of whether or not a railroad company or transportation company shall be entitled to issue free passes to state and county officers. It comes up squarely now before this committee. I desire to say in behalf of this proposition that is embodied in the report of the committee, and in opposition to the motion to strike this Section No. 10 out—I desire to say a word in answer to some of the arguments introduced by some of the gentlemen in favor of striking it out. In the first place, they must stop and consider that all men are not strong and fixed in their purpose of right as these gentlemen who have advocated it undoubtedly are. Those gentlemen, I dare say, in tracing back over the history of their lives, cannot call to mind an instance where they have been caught in a weak moment or where they have ever betrayed any weakness. They are acting upon that principle. They have implicit faith in their own strength of character, implicit faith in their ability at all times to resist temptation, at all times to stand erect and never be warped by any consideration of wrong. Those gentlemen are strong and fixed in their moral purpose of uprightness. They are so formed and fixed in that that they do not see why other men should be weak, or should ever totter. All men are not alike in their natures. There are men who are strong at one hour of their lives, and will be caught in a moment of weakness in another and totter and fall. It is for the protection of that class of men, sir, that we seek to engraft this in our constitution. Those who are in favor of striking this section out do not need such a section to protect them, because their own fixity of purpose and firmness of character is a sufficient guarantee at all times. They have no weaknesses; they are always right, those men. Then I say this section is not for the purpose of protecting them, but it is for the purpose of protecting those who are not so strong and firm. It is for the protection of men who have their weak moments and who will vacillate at times. It is for that purpose that this section is offered. Now, that, it has been reasoned from another standpoint that it seems to me is entirely wrong, and that is this. It has been argued by a gentleman in favor of striking this out in a way that would leave one to infer that those favorable to the section were hostile to railroads, that they were fighting railroads. I cannot see how it is to be tortured into such a construction as that, simply for the reason, if the railroad companies intend to be honest, if they do not seek to influence state and county officers, it is for their protection to keep from issuing a large number of passes—it is a protection against the bums of the country. If their purpose is honest, if they do not seek to influence men, if it is so implied bribery, if, I say, they had nothing to gain by issuing those passes, then I say these people stand as the friends of the railroad and transportation companies. If that is the idea of it, that they have no sinister design except what appears on the face of it, then I say we are seeking to protect them from issuing passes and being imposed upon by a lot of men who do not wish to pay their fares. If the railroad companies have to pay their tax to the government, and meet their obligations, why, let us make all and every one who rides upon their roads and their cars, pay tribute to them. If they do, then we are not hostile to the railroad company. We stand as the friends of the railroad companies against the assaults and attacks of those men who desire to strike that out. That seems to me to be the rational view of it. But the position the friends of this measure take on this Section 10 is that there is a sinister design on the part of transportation companies to influence these weak-minded men who belong to legislative bodies in particular as affecting their interest. That is the whole theory upon which it is argued, that there is a covert meaning in issuing these passes, that is to say that they will attempt to influence political bodies and officials in their favor. It is understood that nothing pays these transportation companies so well as the passes they issue, that they get much larger pay in the end for haunting men free of charge than they do where they receive the ordinary fare. Why, then, sir, upon that same principle, there is one of the best published magazines in the United States—probably the largest, if not the largest corps of writers in the United States—adopted that view of it, prohibiting their corps of writers from accepting any free transportation from any steamboat or railroad in the United States.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: What magazine?

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: It is Harper's Magazine. The corps of writers that belong to the Monthly, the Weekly, and the Bazaar. They prohibit any of their corps of writers from accepting a pass or transportation from any company whatever. The reason for doing that is this: that it is human nature that the spirit of gratitude should go out from those who receive favors to their benefactors. Their object is to leave their writers free to criticise everything they think is wrong, upholding what they think is right. They desire their corps of writers, in traveling over those railroads or steamboats, if they see a public abuse, they desire them to speak fully of it, speak freely and criticise justly everything in connection with it because if it is understood that a man, a writer, is riding over the lines of any railroad, transportation company or steamboat company, free of charge, they feel a certain obligation not to criticise harshly or speak or write of them as they would if left entirely unframed. My remarks have no application to the strong moral will of those men who are seeking to strike this out, because they are a superior class of men and it is not necessary to impugn their motives; but I am speaking in behalf of the weak mortals. Now, I say, those people, the Harpers, have good motives for refusing to allow their writers to accept passes for those reasons. Then, if as a business policy they apply that test to it, why should not we consider the same proposition in the same light here. I say that the railroads use this system for the purpose of influencing legislation; that is the whole and sole purpose of it, and I will ask every gentleman who is in favor of striking this out, how many of you have paid your own fare over the railroad to this convention. I imagine even some of the stern and sturdy ones who cannot be influenced, that they have come on passes, as firm as they are. I say, then, let us not trust legislatures too far. It is all right in theory, but practice oftentimes has a marked difference from theory. If all men were as they should be, if they were models, as my friend from Custer, true men, then we would not insist very strongly upon this proposition, but we would trust them in danger because we would know that their purity of character and uprightness would be a guarantee against their falling by the wayside. But all men are not so. We have seen examples or legislatures, sir. I have. I can call to mind instances of it, that, when legislation affecting railroads has been submitted to a fair and candid vote, where they were sure the vote would have been the three to one against it, where the measure was kept swinging for two weeks under one specious pretext or another, they would keep hammering at it until they would get a majority of votes for it, and some of them would be caught at it. Now, these are not such men as my friend from Custer, but they were of the weak, vacillating kind. Why, sir, more than that, I remember when a certain measure affecting a certain railroad was being considered in the Legislative Assembly of this Territory, there was one day when the members were bitterly opposed to it, but they were invited to a champagne supper when the Governor of Montana and a lot of railroad magnates and the Governor were there. They were weak minded men. It flattered them to be with that class of men. Now, I say that it is a dangerous thing to allow this system of passes, whenever a champagne supper, to my certain knowledge, wooed them right over to those corporations. And let me say, gentlemen, upon this proposition, whenever these questions are involved, whenever a man waivers, whenever he hesitates a moment, wherever he changes his feelings, that change is just as certain and sure to go to the corporations as the sun is certain to set down towards the west. It is absolutely certain, I have never known an instance where a man who was voting his sentiments, whenever he made any change at all, I have yet to learn where a man changed and turned against railroad corporations. Then, with these facts staring us in the face, it is not well for our future protection, to place it beyond the temptation of man. I see no impropriety in incorporating this provision in our constitution. It will save us a great deal of trouble. It will save us from ourselves at some time unexpectedly. For these reasons, sirs, I am opposed to striking out this section and in favor of retaining Section No. 10 in our constitution. As a matter of faith not because the Legislature cannot take care of itself. If these legislators were all gentlemen of the stability of character of my friend from Custer, they would be all right, but all men are not so, and I admire my friend from Custer and the class of men to which he belongs—I admire them for their traits of character; but, speaking for a different class of men, and weaker minded men, I think we should engraft this in the constitution. Sir, for these reasons, I am in favor of Section 10 and opposed to striking it out.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I have just one word to say in regard to the gentlemen paying their fares to this convention. I will say that I paid my fare here and I am in favor of striking out that section, because it is pure legislation.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: The debate on this question is getting a little monotonous, and if it is kept up, I think it will leave nobody to talk to.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move the committee do now rise and report.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) and the division being called, the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty-five (35) in the affirmative to a vote of twenty-seven (27) in the negative.

IX CONVENTION

President Clark: In the chair, the Convention was called to order.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. President your Committee of the Whole having had in consideration Proposition No. 28, have made progress, and ask leave for further time in which to make report.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, reports that the Committee have had under consideration Proposition No. 28 and ask for further time in which to make report.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I move we take recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clark: I move to amend by making it three o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Hershfield) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of taking recess until two o'clock.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Thursday August 1st, 1889.

Afternoon Session.

The Convention was called to order by the President at two o'clock P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The Convention, upon taking a recess had under consideration General Orders.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I now move, sir, that the Convention reconsider the vote by which Section 4, Article on Taxation was adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I listened to the argument made the other day upon this proposition—(interrupted).

The President: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman, that the question to reconsider is not a debatable question.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the Gentleman from Madison (Mr. Callaway) and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 35 in the affirmative to 19 in the negative.

The President: The question is upon the original proposition now before the Convention. The Clerk will read Section 4 and then the gentleman from Lewis & Clark will have the floor.

The Clerk read Section 4 on the Article of Taxation and Revenues as amended.

The President: This proposition now remains as though no action had been taken upon it, and it requires a motion to bring it forward.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that the Section be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, if this proposition which it is proposed to insert in the Constitution would in any manner interfere with any plan now passed or projected upon the part of the United States, or with any plan which might be proposed or projected upon the part of the State of Montana, I should not be in favor of this convention having anything to do with it. But it has no such purpose. It was never destined that by the insertion of this in the constitution of the State, that the United States or that the State of Montana should in any way be interfered with in any proposed plans. This proposition is not in the interest of any canal or ditch company, but it is in the interest of the settlers of the State of Montana; it is in the interest of those people whom we have invited here to make homes, to settle up this country, and if possible to reclaim arid regions and make them productive, so that not only the land but the crops upon it, may respond and bear their just proportions of the public burdens of the state. It is to protect us against the ditch companies, against their extortion in the charges for the use of water; it is to prevent a Canal Company or Ditch Company from discriminating from the citizens of this state. I say that we will sell water to one individual and refuse to sell it to another, so that we charge one man a given price for the water and charge another a different one. Now, if I have my way with reference to this matter, I believe that I would desire that the Government of the United States would take charge of the whole question of irrigation in these arid regions; that it should not only build the reservoirs, but that it should provide for keeping the reservoirs and the ditches in proper repair, and provide the necessary officers for the equal and just distribution of that water. I would rather see that, and see the homestead law repealed, and all of the land laws repealed, so far as these arid regions are concerned, and that the land which is now unproductive might be put upon the market and sold for the highest price. If this was done, in my opinion, men who now, by means of private capital are enabled to claim land to build homes and make farms, would be able to build and for a lesser amount to purchase the lands of the United States and have them all ready in a condition for irrigation. I believe that the amount, the increase, and the sale of lands by the United States, would more than justify the expenditure upon their part; but I am very much like the gentleman from Silver Bow (Judge Knowles) with reference to this matter. I think it may be said that it will be long in the future before the United States will ever commit itself to such a policy as this. I know enough of the agitation of the question to know that it will take years before the thing is finally consummated if indeed it ever will be, and that for many years the most that can be expected will be that the government will make the necessary surveys and locate the sites for the reservoirs and reserve them under the land laws of the United States. Now I say that this proposition which is proposed here, is in the interest of this territory; that it is an invitation to the settlement of what are now the arid lands of this country. Can it possibly injure anybody? Without it—without the provision which is here made, which brings these people directly under the control of the state by declaring it to be a public use, and under the control of the purchase price of the water and its use generally, not into the hands of the Board of County Commissioners—for it seems that the gentleman from Cascade and the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke have grave apprehensions that the County Commissioners could not be trusted in this matter; but it puts it in the Board of County Commissioners or such other officers as this constitution shall provide. Let there be a board, if you please, whose exclusive duty and authority it shall be to look after and control this matter. Without it what have you got? You have a statute which authorizes the appropriation of water by anybody for any useful purpose, and with no sort of restriction on it, except that the Board of County Commissioners may regulate its price. Here, we establish by a constitutional provision, that this shall be a public use, that we shall not only have the right to regulate the price, but that we shall have the right to go further and say, "You shall make no unjust discrimination by selling to one individual and refusing to sell to another." We protect ourselves, not only against extortionate rates of corporations, that would engage in the construction of those enterprises, but we provide a protection in the other respects which I have mentioned. How is it going to interfere with the state? How is it going to interfere with the government? Does the gentleman from Cascade believe with such restrictions as these placed upon them that corporations are going to rush in here at a rapid rate and appropriate all of the waters of the great streams of this territory so that the government will have none when the time comes? I take it that corporations, like individuals, transact business from a business standpoint, and that they are not going to be so swift to avail themselves of the benefit of a statute which is now made in their interests but in the interests of the protection of the people by submitting themselves so readily to these constitutional provisions; because this article provides that before they shall have the benefit of taxation upon their net proceeds that they shall file with the Secretary of State, in binding form, a written consent that they accept the provisions of this article, as well as the other provisions of this constitution. Now, if it is in the power of the people of the state, by an officer delegated with the duty of controlling this matter, to protect themselves against these corporations, I take it that the corporations themselves are not going to be particularly anxious to avail themselves of the benefits of it. If I thought that under the constitution of the United States, that it would be possible to exempt this property absolutely from taxation, I would be willing to do it, not that it would benefit the concern itself, but that, by reason of that, it would stimulate an enterprise in this country which would bring into existence new values, new interests and new properties which, so far as the taxation of them is concerned, would more than equalize and smooth over any equality there may be, by reason of this exemption. Without it, millions of acres of land in this territory, as has been frequently stated by the gentleman upon this floor, are perfectly barren and useless and respond in no sense whatever for the payment of taxes. But, if the water can be brought here, if corporations are willing to avail themselves of the benefit of this, which I doubt very much, the result of it would be, that every time a farm is created, every time a crop is raised, a new value, a new product, something is brought into life which will help to bear the burdens of taxation. Our condition, sir, is an anomalous one. We happened to be in a section of country, admitted by everybody to be an arid region. We cannot rely upon rain fall for producing our crops. It is a proposition staring us in the face, and admitted by everybody that we have got to provide for it by some method or by some means. As I said before if this proposition interfered with the State in any way, if it interfered with any plan or project on the part of the government I would be opposed to it but it is entirely consistent with everything that may be claimed both on the part of the state and the general government in this respect. I was somewhat surprised to see the zeal and energy with which the gentleman from Cascade opposed this matter. I fail to see in his argument a single reason or justification for it; why he was so zealous in his opposition to it, when he characterized the proposition which was presented as something which had been hatched out here during the recess by somebody. As was said by Judge Knowles, it was simply an effort to present something in what was conceived to be an acceptable form of this convention. I take it I am willing to make the declaration anyhow, whether it be true or not, that I give the gentleman the same credit that I do every other member of this convention so far as the propositions which are submitted here are concerned, that he has an "eye single and warm and devoted heart" to what he considers to be the best interests of the people of this state; so far as any lobbying or anything of that kind or character is concerned, it was never known or ever heard of, unless it be that I was taken for a lobbyist myself sitting so far behind here, as was suggested to me by Judge Dixon yesterday. I think Mr. President, that this amendment ought to be adopted. It can do no possible harm, and in my judgment will be an invitation to settlers to come and utilize the waters of this country and reclaim the arid lands.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I have no desire to take up the valuable time of this convention in attempting to make any talk on this subject and, if the provisions in Section 2, or rather the last line of Section 2 read thus:

"The Legislative Assembly may, in its discretion, exempt from taxation other property than that herein specified, but all exemption shall be by general law." If that section had not been stricken out from Section 2, I imagine there would be no strenuous efforts here on the part of a few individuals to secure the adoption of this Section 4.

The remedy which we have would be to go to the Legislature and ask them to exempt such property as ditch property, reservoirs and canals, etc. together with such other property as might be deemed advisable at the time. But, as that chance was cut off, and the Legislature is prohibited now by the constitution and the State of Montana from entertaining a proposition of that kind in my judgment it becomes absolutely necessary to have this provision adopted in the constitution. I have no fear of corporations—interrupted.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I would state that it is my intention to insert in the Article on Miscellaneous Subjects that part of the section that was stricken out, when it comes before the convention again.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: If I understand the rules, after we have once acted upon a matter, it is barred from further consideration, except by unanimous consent, and, as we are on this now, I think we ought to adopt this section, on the score of forbidding the Legislature the privilege of exempting property. Now, we all know the trouble with this country for a number of years. People who are familiar with the geography of this country and the innumerable water courses and the sources of supply of this quantity that flows down these water courses at certain seasons of the year know that there is no such thing as monopolizing the quantity of water provided that storage houses or reservoirs are constructed for the purpose of preserving that water as was so ably discussed by my friend Dr. Burleigh yesterday. Now, it is a known fact with people who have had any experience with ditches, with a very few exceptions, in this territory, that it is dead capital. They know that there are very little returns from any of the ditches, save and except in the creation of property. They render themselves less valuable for what they produce. The products enlarge our markets, feed our stock, etc., and in that way become valuable to the state. But as an investment there is no inducement, and hence it becomes necessary, in order to induce people to invest money in this kind of speculation that they shall be benefited in some way, or at any rate exempted from the burdens of taxation to a certain or limited extent. Ditch Companies are forming over the country, combinations of farmers and ranch men, for the purpose of conducting water through their land. They form a stock company of $10,000, $20,000, or $25,000 perhaps more, or less; they go to work and construct their ditches; they do the work themselves to a certain extent and construct their ditches and flow this water on to their lands. It is a corporation, it is true. They have a system and a superintendent, and it is conducted the same as any other corporation, by a manager. Now, if their property is to be taxed as other property is to be fixed, with reference to its cost or its value as it might be sold to combinations of a similar character who might desire to use the water, I undertake to say that it would be stopped and for many years prevent the construction of these ditches and canals; but, on the other hand if they did not have to pay their tax, then this capital that came in many parts of the country to construct these ditches and reservoirs for the storage of water would thereby very materially increase the agricultural products of this country. And as this matter of reservoirs and storage of water is being discussed and being developed, being as it were forged into some kind of form, I think that people who have an inclination or desire in that direction should be encouraged. I am satisfied from the information that I have been able to gather from gentlemen on this floor and from talking with one of the members of this Congressional Committee who is in the city at the present time, Senator Plum, that by a little effort on the part of the people in the arid districts which I am satisfied will be made, that it will be no trouble to secure from the government ample grants for reservoirs and the construction and the right of way over the government lands—the use of government lands for these reservoirs—and that it will be no trouble to secure a grant sufficient to cover all lands required for that purpose from the government of the United States. Senator Plum, of Kansas, says that from information and representations made to him, that he is satisfied that is the proper procedure at the present time. Now then, if the government will take that much interest in it—the government of the United States—that it will grant these lands for reservoirs, it seems to me that the people of Montana should not hesitate to provide some means whereby the capital invested in these reservoirs and ditches necessary to conduct that water from these reservoirs on to the land should not be burdened by taxation, at any rate not further than suggested in that Section, that is to tax the net income of those companies and ditches. It is a plain proposition that it should be the net income of those ditches. I doubt if there will be any net income to tax in many years; hence it will operate as an exemption; and hence it is a question whether it is advisable to do so or not. In my judgment then, it is absolutely necessary for the agricultural districts, the stock growing districts along the base of the Rocky Mountains in the eastern part of the territory, and also in some sections of the western part, that some sort of provision of this kind be adopted or that the clause in Section 2, be restored. It seems to me that this fully covers the ground and will be satisfactory, and I hope that the general motion to lay this proposition on the table will not be carried, but I hope that it will be put upon its final passage and become a part of the constitution of the State of Montana.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: This is a matter that I suppose every one feels a deep interest in. I do not believe we have a more important question coming before this convention and it is a matter of such great importance that I am not in favor of taking it up now, and am not in favor of finally passing it at all at this time. Now, when the members of this convention were elected, there was no thought upon the part of the people that they were going to pass upon a question of this character. This is purely Legislation. I think there is no lawyer in this hall, that will not admit that is a matter purely of legislation, and, therefore, it is and ought to be left to the Legislature. Everything that it is proposed to do by this Section can be done by the Legislature.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: Have we not already tied the hands of the Legislature by refusing to allow them to exempt property from taxation?

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: Possibly, and I am in favor of that, Mr. President. I am not in favor of allowing the Legislature to exempt property from taxation. The principle is that all property should pay its just and proportionate share of taxation, and the only reason that we exempt any is because it is a public benefit and this would not be a public benefit even on the premises upon which the gentlemen have argued in favor of the proposition in this Section. It could not be a matter of general and public interest to Montana. It would only affect locally part of the people, for instance, on the Missouri; that would only affect after all, a small section of the country and, therefore it is not of general interest to the people of Montana, and I would not be in favor of exempting from taxation. But what I was going to say, is this. That this is something being agitated this year on account of the very dry season which has caused a great deal of talk about building large ditches and reservoirs and in doing everything that possibly can be done to better the irrigation of the lands of this arid section. Now, they have only begun to agitate this question, because before this year there has been water enough for everybody and this has been a very vexed question. Now, if we leave this to the Legislature, the people will have time to talk it up and know what they want and perhaps all the Legislators then who are elected to the Legislature to pass laws, will know what the wishes of their constituents are on this subject, because it will be made an issue and in that way can reflect the wishes of the people. Now, this convention is not in a position to do that. The fact is that this is Legislation and we have not had sufficient time to consider it to know what the final result ought to be. Now I say that that Legislature can do everything connected with this matter that is necessary and I am not in favor of exempting them from taxation so far as that is concerned. Why, Mr. President, look how things have been conducted heretofore and there has been no cause of complaint. There were no grounds for any. A man goes out on the arid plain that is worth nothing almost, at least for the government price. He goes to work at his own expense either by his labor or by the expenditure of his money and digs a ditch from some creek or some river and throws the water upon that land and in that way makes it productive. Now, Mr. President, that land was not really worth anything although he paid a dollar and a quarter an acre for it; but he only pays that because he knows that he can get this water upon it. Now, by digging this ditch and running it upon this piece of land, it makes it productive. He raises all the cereals and all the things that can be raised in this latitude and in that way he makes it worth $10, $20, $25 and $50 an acre. When the assessor comes around, he assesses that property for whatever the value of it is, which was made by this ditch. Now, I ask if a man is not paying taxation on his ditch. Everybody can see that, because it is not only by virtue of that ditch that he has made this property worth $40, $50 and $60 an acre or whatever it is worth.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I would like to inquire if through this section in any manner, it would affect the price of the land, made more valuable by the building of these ditches and reservoirs? We do not propose to exempt the land. It is only to exempt the ditch on what it pays on the net proceeds.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: My answer to that is, Mr. President that you allow companies and individuals to go to work and build a ditch. They sell their water for a certain price and are exempted from taxation and they make that land productive that was not productive before. Now, the people that buy that water, who pay two dollars an inch, or whatever they pay for it, they are the men who pay the tax on the enhanced value upon that land. Suppose that land is made valuable, who pays the tax? Is it the man who buys the water and who makes use of it, or is it the man who owns the ditch and sells the water? I venture to say it is the man who buys the water and who makes use of it to cultivate his land who pays all the additional taxation. Now, I say Mr. President, taxes fall where they should not fall, at least they should be divided and, if you make the ditch pay anything it will not be necessary for the land to pay all the taxes. But the way you propose is that the land should pay all the enhanced value and the ditch itself shall not pay anything whatever. Now, I believe that money, in whatever business it is, should be taxed, tax all alike and the man who puts his money in a ditch should pay a tax on it the same as the man who puts his money in a farm. I do not believe it is right to exempt the ditch. Now, one of the arguments that has been used here by my friend Mr. Toole and others was that this can surely do no harm. Now, I think it might possibly do a great deal of harm. I say that we have not had time to reflect upon it. People do not know what they want today. But, what they say is that we are so tying up the hands of a company or corporation who want to build a ditch that they will not accept the terms, proposed here. Now, if they will not accept the terms what are we passing the section for? What benefit is to be had by it? We want such a law as will be just and equitable between the men who own the ditches and the men who own the land, and, if the argument is worth anything at all and they tell you that we are passing a law and we are trying to pass a law that no one will accept this is just as objectionable as the other is. If the terms of this section are so harsh that no one can build a ditch under it and live, we have no right to pass it at all, because that is an unjust discrimination against some one and I do not care which horn of the dilemma you take, it is wrong to incorporate this section of the constitution. Now, I believe that we should leave this to the Legislature, that the people may reflect upon it and know what they want. I do say that this is Legislation and I hope this motion will be sustained and this matter will be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I must say that I am considerably mystified upon the question, of what is Legislation and what are legitimate constitutional provisions, from what the gentlemen say. Now, we consider that it is perfectly proper in this constitution to have an article upon the subject of taxation, and to provide how property shall be taxed. And then we have provided a special mode in which mining property shall be taxed. Now, that is all legitimate, and perfectly constitutional. It belongs to the constitution. In my judgment it is not legislation at all. Then, we come down to this matter. The gentleman says this can all be left to the Legislature, for the Legislature to do just exactly what they have a mind to, on this subject. Well now, if we do not make a special exception in relation to these water ditches and provide an amendment that they can be taxed in this way, I would like to know how you are going to tax them any different from any other property, you are bound down here by the rules you have made here and you have struck out this clause that they may exempt other property than is specified here in this constitution. Now, what we are doing today is just simply providing a rule of taxation, and if you leave it under the general rule it has got to be taxed under the general rule. There is another matter. Now I know each Statute provides that corporations taking out water to sell, that it may be regulated by the County Commissioners. But how about companies or persons? Perhaps when a person incorporates under the law and accepting the provisions of the corporation law they may be found by that provision in our law, but if you make any provision in your constitution in this matter can you go to a man and say, "here, you own this water; you have appropriated it: it is your water and you are selling it here but we will provide by law that you shall sell it for just a certain price or will put this matter in the hands of the County Commissioners." Can you go to a merchant and do that? Would you say that was in the province of the legislative power to go to a merchant and do that? If you can go to a merchant or go to a farmer and say what he shall sell his products at, a certain price, why, you should go back in this matter to the days of the old sumptuary laws which prescribed what a man should wear and what he should get for his silver and what he should give for the food he ate and drank. Now, a good many gentlemen that stand with me in this matter really do not care very much about this law except as we believe it would be for the welfare and prosperity of the agricultural interests of this Territory, and so far as that has been concerned, we have been in favor of it. We would like to see every section of Montana prosper. Whatever is the prosperity of one section of the country is our prosperity, because we are all Montanians. If they prosper down by Great Falls, the people of Butte take pride in that because that is a part of their country and the idea of selecting out here certain sections of the country and saying that we shall not provide in any way for the prosperity and development of that country, because that belongs to a little section of country where we do not live, and because we are providing for the special development of the agricultural regions and not of the mining regions? Why, gentlemen, I have no thought of taxing the constitution in that way. If we can fix up a constitution to make the agricultural portions of Montana prosperous, I would like to do it. I would feel that, as a Montanan, I was doing my duty and that it was not a local matter—that it was for the good of the whole Territory—that all parts of it should flourish and prosper. There are a great many things that have been said about this matter that I do not comprehend and understand and I cannot comprehend or understand how any man in the agricultural sections of this territory would be opposed to this law unless they think that by allowing in a constitution that these ditches should be taxed only on their net income, and providing that the rates allowed would be a grinding monopoly upon the people, that they should be fixed by the County Commissioners, &c.—I cannot see unless they think that that is serving in the same way, and that these ditches should just be put on the same basis as other property. If they are all of that opinion, why, they know more about their section of country than we do and I am in favor of letting them have their way. Now, I think I have said all I will ever say upon this question.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I hope the motion of the gentleman of Cascade to indefinitely postpone this proposition will not prevail. Perhaps if I lived in a section of the country similar to that in which the gentleman lives, that enjoys the reputation of being the peach belt section which requires no artificial irrigation, I might perhaps stand in the same position in which he does. But, unfortunately, I come from a section of the country which it has pleased Professor Hayden to style "the Egypt of America," Gallatin Valley. We cannot raise very much there without irrigation and that is one reason why I am advocating this proposition and because our people want to have work and demand some relief. Of course, they do not say what they want but I have studied this matter myself thoroughly in all its different phases, and I am willing and free to say that this is the only proposition that has come to my mind that would give them any relief. I am very much astonished to hear the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Stapleton, a gentleman so learned and capable of understanding all the wants of this territory—I am astonished to hear him say here that a matter of this kind would not be of general benefit. I ask him and ask every gentleman if the importance of the mines of this Territory is not of general benefit; if the importance of the stock interest of this Territory is not of general benefit and also if the importance of the agricultural interests does not redound to the general welfare of this whole commonwealth. It seems to me to be a plain proposition.

That where there is a proposition of importance in one portion of this Territory that it ought to be grasped and it ought to be encouraged by men who are here representing different industries. It seems to me that we are here representing only the industries of Montana, the good and welfare of Montana, and I hope that this proposition will receive the consideration of this convention and that they will vote against the motion of the gentleman from Cascade to postpone indefinitely. I want to say that I appreciate and our people will appreciate the efforts upon this floor of disinterested gentlemen from the mining sections of this Territory, and we will not forget them. I am glad to see them take a broad and expansive view of this question, and say they are for the general interests of this territory.

Mr. A. J. Burns, of Lewis & Clarke: I think it would be perhaps well to have corporations build ditches and canals for the purpose of irrigation, but they would only take up the profits in this Territory and would leave the matter in a worse condition for some future time. We have in this Territory some twenty million acres of arid land and, according to the best information that I could get, there would be only three million acres of this arid land that would be irrigated by private means or private operations. The balance of that would be left either unirrigated or the state would have to irrigate it by some other means. Now, I do not believe in letting outside capital come into this Territory for the purpose of taking up all the best waters in the state and leaving the state hereafter or the United States to take up the difficult and expensive ways in the future. For that reason I am in favor of this proposition.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Of this proposition at the outset I was disposed to think that all the provisions there should be put in the constitution as to the matter of exemption was simply to provide that the Legislature might enact reasonable exemption laws, and I regret sincerely that I was not present to hear the discussion of this section when it was under consideration before; but having listened to the discussion today and having given this matter some little thought and being to some extent familiar with the condition with a portion at least, of the lands of this territory that are susceptible to irrigation, I am disposed to favor the adoption of this section. I had the pleasure on last Saturday of riding down on the train from here to Miles City with Senator Stewart, Chairman of the Irrigation Committee, and when we were passing down through the Yellowstone Valley from Livingston all the way to Miles we were approaching and touching upon the Tongue River Valley, and that gentleman was elated and surprised that there were so many hundreds of thousands of acres there that were susceptible to irrigation without any reservoir system, but simply by means of ditches, from the fact that the fall of the Yellowstone River is sufficient to take out a ditch anywhere and carry it round along eighteen or twenty or perhaps fifty miles so that you could put the water on the table lands one hundred feet above the river at this point. Now, it has been suggested here by Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow, that it is because this is a particularly dry season that this matter is agitated at this time. I submit that all of those lands in that valley and the Tongue River Valley, and so far as I know in most of the river bottoms and valley of this Territory, are practically worthless lands without some means of artificial reclamation. Now, then, those lands can be reclaimed by means of ditches, and it is a demonstrated fact that the inherent properties of the soil on the two rivers that I mentioned, are such that with a sufficient amount of water it will grow any kind of products and grow them in abundance. If those lands can be made productive and valuable by means of irrigation, is it not wise for us to provide as a fundamental proposition and make it a part of the constitution that any person or company or corporation who will come in and go to work and construct a ditch that will render those lands more valuable, render them more productive, and hence place them where they will bring in great revenues to the counties and to the state—is it not desirable to hold out such inducements as we can, can there be a stronger inducement held out than thus making it a constitutional provision? Now, it is true that in a sense it savors of legislation perhaps more than of fundamental law, but, if you will take into consideration this fact that an irrigating ditch when once established is a permanent thing or presumably permanent, that there is nothing so uncertain as a Legislature—this Legislature will build up and in the next one or two years hence will tear down; this Legislature will provide exemption laws and the Legislature two years hence would repeal them, that no person or corporation would feel justified in coming in here under these circumstances, even if that were held out to them as an inducement by reason of a law on the statute books, for fear that very law might be repealed at the next session. And, in order that we may enact something that the people can rely upon, in order that these arid lands may be reclaimed, in order that all portions of the Territory may be treated alike in this matter, it seems to me that this is a wise provision. Now, from what information I have, I would have felt disposed to oppose, if I had been here, the matter of exempting mining property from taxation, although I am not prepared to say that the provision of this proposition which was adopted relating to the matter of the exemption of mines was not right—it may be a proper incentive to capital and investment and to the development of the mines in the Territory, but, if it is an incentive, should it not be certainly an incentive in the agricultural district of this state that the persons may have such inducements as we can hold out to them to come in here and construct and maintain these ditches and render these lands valuable, for, as a matter of fact, they are practically valueless now except as for grazing purposes and not very valuable for that for on the river bottoms there is very little grazing for cattle anywhere. And, in view of those facts, I am disposed to think this section as it stands is a good one and should be incorporated into the constitution.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I dislike to trouble the convention on this subject and will only do so in a few short words. The whole debate of this subject shows that is it purely a legislative proposition. The facts and figures that have been arrayed—the arguments that have been arrayed on this side—are facts and arguments that should have been made in a Legislature and not in a convention, and I will preface my proposition primarily by saying that I am in favor of leaving this whole matter with the Legislature and people of Montana. Gentlemen say that we have repealed a section in the constitution which gives the Legislature that power. The constitution has not passed from the hands of this convention. There are other schedules to which such a proposition will be germane, and if it is deemed wise by the convention, I am in favor of placing such a provision in the constitution as will allow future Legislatures to consider this matter in a manner such as we cannot. The question of exemptions is a dangerous and ticklish one at best; it is one upon which the people who bear the burdens of a country are rightfully sensitive and outside of charitable and educational institutions themselves, only exemption from the ordinary methods of taxation provided for in this constitution, for I deny that the section in regard to the taxation of mines is in any way an exemption of mining from taxation. It brings us simply to the fact, whether we make this property exempt from taxation. Now, my friend, Mr. Toole, for whom I have the greatest respect, says he wishes it were possible to exempt it forever by the laws and the constitution of the United States.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Not forever.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: That was what I understood.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: If it were possible to exempt property under the constitution of the United States from taxation, I would be very glad to do it until these lands were reclaimed.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Now, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that if there is any kind of property that ought not to be exempted from taxation, it is ditch property. You take a man that has a manufactory. He employs a certain number of men; a great many people are at work all the time; the expenses are great; the incomes are very little over the expenditures generally. But take these ditches when once built. I know that the gentleman will say that the repairs to these ditches are always a continual tax upon the company. So they are.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I want to ask you gentlemen if it is not a fact that the creation of these ditches creates the property. There is no property there until the ditches are built, and that creates what property there is.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I will go on to meet that. Of course, however, as the gentleman from Yellowstone showed the other day, the keeping up of repairs to these ditches was a great tax. So they are when they are built in a flimsy way. But let these ditches be properly dug; instead of temporary flumes, let them have masonry flumes such as have been constructed in other countries. Then where are the expenses of these companies? These valuable franchises which you do not tax exist and they have a revenue without any great burden on their part, as the old formula goes, "as long as grass grows and water rolls." And it does seem to me, after all, that of all the species of property in the world, that that is the species of property that ought to bear its reasonable share of taxation. Nor do I agree with my friend in saying that it would be a good thing to repeal the homestead laws and let the people build these ditches.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: The gentleman misquotes me again. I said the land laws of the United States, except the homestead laws.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I am very glad to have the correction made, because I know that my friend always has been and always will be in favor of the rights of the people. I have seen circumstances which demonstrated that fact to me, and consequently, I was astonished when the declaration came from him that he would be in favor of wiping out the land system of the United States, which is making homes for hundreds today. Why, Mr. President, I need not dwell upon the evils which this proposed system of landlordism and rent would imply. The word is full of examples of it. The early gardens and granaries of this world, the very cradles of civilization were countries that were irrigated. These ditches were built by the people. Kings and monarchs and nobles finally got hold of these franchises—these water rights—not only of Egypt, but in Assyria and Mesopotamia, and they tax the people out of those lands which were once the gardens and granaries of all the world, blooming like an Eden, the very cradle of civilization of the human race and their barren and desolate fields are baking in the sun today. I have a hope that there will be no personal feelings about this matter. I do not care whether any corporation wants or does not want it so. We stand on larger grounds and look to the future. It is in the discussion of systems and their effect upon posterity that this convention ought to be engaged. I say, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, it would be no benefit to the settler to invite him here on any false theory, to get his home under water from one of those corporations, and when he had reclaimed that land and built his orchard and made his home, to have him evicted because he could not pay his water rates: his life wasted and he sent out a vagrant and a beggar from the country. I do not overdraw the picture, I am talking experience. I have read about its effects in Colorado and New Mexico. The President of this convention himself gave me an instance last evening which came under his own eyes in Arizona; and, my friends, it is only to avoid these dangers that I seriously ask the convention to pause before it goes into this matter of restricting, for this is a matter of legislation and should be left to the people and legislators of Montana to look after by and by. Why should we exempt these big ditches, the property of corporations from taxation, when we do not exempt the little ditches. Gentlemen say it will do no hurt. Will it do no hurt to gobble up all the water, so that when these states or the United States come along they will find all these priority rights ahead of them, and they cannot engage in any general system of irrigation?

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I understand this covers all kinds of ditches for sale, revenue or distribution, or any kind of use.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: It will interfere with the United States by taking up those water rights, because many of these little rivers like the Bitter Root, the Teton and Marias, from Gallatin and others can be completely appropriated by the companies before either the state or the United States could get a chance to outline any policy in this matter. Now, the proposition of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Sargent, was treated rather calmly about having a survey. I think the Legislature ought to have all the information on this subject possible before it acts and after United States has made these surveys, our people will have the information derived from that source, and it will give our future legislators all the information that they desire upon this question. Mr. President, I hope I am not unnecessarily importunate. It is because I regard this as a dangerous experiment that I stand here against friends who are as dear to me as any in this convention, and whose convictions are strong on the other side and opposed to it. I find that the gentlemen from the agricultural counties are divided upon it—clearly divided upon it. I talked with a gentleman last night who represented farmers in the very oldest and first settled valleys in this Territory and he told me they were against it.

And as the agricultural people are not united in favor of this proposition and as there is a division on it, why not let us so fix it that future legislators can amend it and not shut them off by the action of this convention—not approaching the matter here now, if the Government of the United States does grant these lands for reservoirs—if they come on and make these reservoirs, shall we turn over the results and the money of the whole people of the United States to any kind of person or corporation for his own gain. It seems to me that the argument made by my friend is right against the proposition that he would wish to have incorporated in this constitution. The very fact that the Government has taken hold of this matter—the very fact that a liberal spirit—(interrupted.)

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I think if the gentleman will allow me, that he is entirely out of the line of this section that was adopted. I infer from his argument that he expects men to come out here and inaugurate a system of irrigation and use the water of these smaller streams and the various streams throughout the country. I do not contemplate that this is the object of this matter, the authorities simply make a beginning to demonstrate that the reservoiring or the system of sewerage water—the sewerage system is practicable and will induce people to combine in inaugurating a system of sewage water.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I think I understand the reason of it, Mr. Chairman. The United States has a vast lot of land here that belongs to the United States. For years and years that land has been characterized as valueless—as of no value to the Government. Now, the Government of the United States, like any other sensible proprietor of property, wants to find out if that land is really valuable or if by any system or means it can be made valuable, and, Mr. Chairman, it is demonstrated to the satisfaction of Congress that it can be made valuable. What will be the next step of the Government of the United States? We have here millions of acres, that belong to us. We can get no revenue from them; there are no settlers upon them. Will it pay us to make a small expenditure, a small outlay in order that we may derive a large revenue from all this property? That will be the next question that will present itself to the Congress of the United States, and may we not hope that the practicable, broad and wise minds there will meet it with a liberal answer? Or, suppose they choose not to do it themselves? Suppose they say to this state, here, you take these Government lands. The Government will be the gainer if you populate them—if you raise crops and plant orchards and build houses on them; now, you take these arid lands; we will transmit them to you by a bill; in that bill we will put certain restrictions upon them so that you can never waste them or throw them away, or give them away to anybody, and we will allow you to take these lands and pledge the revenues that you derive from them to the support of canals, to be under state management and state control. And I undertake to say that such a system of irrigation covering all the valleys of this Territory—so comprehensive that it is beyond the conception of the imagination of gentlemen who have not thought much about it, so wise that it will do justice to everybody under it, so economical that every farmer and settler can profit by it, not only now, but for all time—can be carried out without any expense to the state or without its becoming obligated for any kind of indebtedness except that which the land irrigated will pay. But whether this be so or not, whether my ideas will be correct or not—whether this be just my dreams as the dreams of other gentlemen have pictured it—I do not undertake to say, and you gentlemen must know it, that this whole question is out of place here, and that we should relegate it to the Legislature and provide that the coming Legislature should deal with it.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I am profoundly surprised that such morbid sensitiveness should be developed at this particular time tending towards legislation. It seems to me that before Article No. 3 was passed, this morbid sensitiveness had not developed itself, and I must say right here that outside of the few gentlemen from the agricultural districts who are honestly and conscientiously opposed to it at this moment on material grounds, there are certain gentlemen from the mining sections who seem to oppose it on selfish grounds. And, further, coming from an agricultural section, I supported them in their efforts on behalf of the article that just passed in relation to mines, and I say right here in this convention, and I identify men who showed me to the contrary, that mining property is not bearing its proportion of taxation. Now, it seems to me, that if the representatives of the mining districts have secured this just and wise provision that they should have the courtesy and liberality to support this measure providing for means by which the lands that are now arid and of no use to the country shall become valuable to the state. Now, the dangers that would follow this provision have been declared in very flowery language. Why, if our forefathers in times past saw fit to subsidize the building of railroads that would develop our country, why should we not help the building of any other industry that will develop our country. I venture to say that the Northern Pacific Railroad, when it was first built in this country, had a more absolute control over the destinies of these people than any ditch or any 100 ditches ever built in Montana will ever receive.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Would you be in favor of the Government, or the state, or the county subsidizing any railroad now?

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: No, I would not, because I think they have outlived their usefulness, but there was a time when it was only fit and proper and there is a time today when it is only fit and proper to encourage these irrigating ditches. And, further, it has been said here that it exempts a certain class of property, and that it is a dangerous precedent to establish. I think that it will be admitted by anyone that the large increase in taxable property which will necessarily follow the inauguration of this system refutes any argument that can be adduced in that direction. Now, I do not wish to say anything that is disparaging to mining; coming, as I do, from an agricultural section, I look upon all the industries in the Territory of Montana with liberality and due regard, and I would not lend my vote or my voice to anything that might restrict or limit the growth of any industry. What I believe is that if there is an industry within the Territory of Montana that deserves the consideration of this Territory, it is the agricultural interests. If there is one industry that is prominent, that tends to develop and ennoble mankind, it is agriculture. It is only when mankind assumes the cultivation of agriculture and leaves off the garb of the savage, that he tends in a civilized direction. You have today a mining plant that is blooming in prosperity. Everything is rustle and bustle around and you are making money and everybody is imbued with the zeal inspired from the desire to accumulate money. Ten years hence, it is, perhaps, out of existence and it only lives in the memory of the men. It is not so with agriculture. The very fields that fed the hosts of Hannibal are today filling the granaries of that country as they were eighteen hundred or twenty-two hundred years ago. The Island of Sicily, although it is not as fertile today as it was in the early days of history, is still going through the routine of producing and sending its supplies into the granaries of Italy. It seems to me that if we give this question due consideration, that certain men of the mining countries who have gained their proposition—have passed it beyond the danger of being recalled—should at least give this a favorable consideration. There may be some dangers connected with it. In fact, I do not think there is any question of importance that has been introduced in this country but there are some dangers connected with it, and I think this argument is far-fetched and is a forced argument; and that it is an argument made here to conceal other and ulterior motives. And although the section that I represent will not be materially affected in this direction, I would like to see the motion passed, as I believe it will be of great advantage to other agricultural portions of Montana.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I should have been perfectly willing to have allowed this proposition to pass without any comment on my part if it had not appeared to me to have been a misstatement and misrepresentation of both its provisions that has been so persistently made, that it looks as if it were made purposely. All that I desire for this proposition, so far as I am responsible for it, is a fair consideration of the bounds it involves, without any oratory or rant about matters that have no connection with it. What is the proposition contained here? Does it give to any corporation or to any person an inch or a drop of water that they do not have without it? Does it give to any person or any corporation a monopoly or an opportunity of monopolizing water that they do not have without it? Point it out to me, if it does? Where is it? It provides nothing whatever in regard to the appropriation of water. It leaves that just exactly where it stands now and where it always has stood under the laws of this Territory and under the rules and decisions of the courts. What is the use, then of gentlemen coming her and talking about monopoly and giving corporations the right of landlordism and rack-rent? What has that got to do with the proposition. Why, a man cannot take an inch of water that he could not take without it. It gives no man a right that is not open to everybody; it gives no corporation a privilege that will not be open to anyone in existence now or that will hereafter be created. What then, is the object of this provision when you throw aside all this talk that has nothing to do with it and come down to a sensible consideration of it. It is to encourage, so far as we can, something that is admittedly needed in this country—that is the distribution of water over this country by means of irrigation ditches. We give to no man or corporation which may go into that business a single privilege; on the contrary, we restrict him. To say that this is for the benefit of corporations—when it gives them no right whatever and only gives them a certain privilege when they comply with certain conditions which will be more favorable to the people than to the corporations,—it seems to me is useless chatter. If we want irrigation we should encourage it so far as we reasonably can. As has been well said here, the small streams of the country have been taken up. Something more now is required. The thing has got to be gone into on a large and expensive scale, and it is because it is beyond the reach of single individual enterprise, that it seems proper to encourage those to some extent who are willing to invest their capital in such enterprises. Now, gentlemen talk about the United States taking hold of this thing. If the United States ever takes hold of it in 10 years, it will be sooner than it does anything else. But that would not interfere with the United States or the state. If it would, I would like to have it pointed out. It interferes with nothing of that kind; it is only intended to give encouragement to a certain extent to persons who are willing to invest their money in the large enterprises which are now required for irrigation, and in return for that will require of them limitations and certain conditions, which, instead of giving them privileges, are nothing but restrictions. We require of them obedience to the provisions of the constitution; that is all that we want of them. We give them this privilege only upon condition that they comply with those restrictions. If they do not choose to comply with them, why, let them go on without complying with them and let their property go on and be subject to taxation as other property is. Now, take the large enterprise in digging a canal. It is uncertain at the commencement whether it will be a success; it is an experiment. Therefore, it would be an object to them until, at least, it was finished and completed, in order that they might be able to judge how profitable an enterprise it might be—it would be an advantage to them to be exempted from taxation. But, when it came to profits, if it comes within this law, then it would have to pay the state what it was able to pay according to its earnings. Now, the gentleman from Silver Bow, who argued this question, says that all the taxes would fall upon the land. Why, that seems to be a curious argument. He says, here is a ditch that makes the land worth $20 or $40 an acre. He says all that falls upon the land. The taxation does not fall simply upon the land. The net proceeds of the ditch must increase and how can you increase the value of that land without increasing the very medium through which it obtained its value? Now, the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke talks about putting power in the hands of corporations to take all this water and to enforce payment of water rates and to eject tenants and to practically own the land. He does not go far enough in his argument. He ought to be opposed to all ditches and all canals and all flumes. How does this affect the case in any one way or the other? Does this give any power of collecting rent?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I am opposed to offering a premium to engage in the business.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: If it is as he says, what has it to do with this matter, because this matter does not affect that one way or the other. This does not enable a ditch company to collect its rent. The gentleman's argument goes too far. It would go to the extent that we should not dig any canals or any large ditches at all, because we might run into landlordism and cause oppression upon the agricultural interests. Well, now, it is a matter that may be considered, but not at all in connection with this provision. As I said before, Mr. President,—because I do not intend to detain the convention longer,—I want a consideration of the proposition upon its merits—not mixed up with all this eloquence and talk about matters that have nothing to do with it. This proposition is just the proposition which it is claimed will have the effect of increasing the number of canals and ditches that are constructed, thereby opening lands to cultivation and settlement—and to that extent it will be a benefit to the country. If the corporations choose to take advantage of his provision, then we say, you must comply with the requirements of the law. If they do not choose to conform with the law, then they can go without its benefit, and they must pay taxes upon their lands and property just as if no such provision was in existence. As I said before, all these matters that are mixed up in this proposition have nothing whatever to do with it, because it does not give a man the right to claim a single drop of water that he would not have without it. It only encourages a person or a corporation and gives him the privilege of putting it under the control of the people, or if he does not, then his ditch property stands on the same basis of taxation as any other.

Mr. Gibson, of Cascade: I believe in confining this question to its merits. I do not believe in indulging in violent language at all in the matter. I believe the question is just simply this: is it necessary to give a bonus to corporations for establishing irrigating canals, etc., in this state? But I think the question is to be narrowed and simmered down to that proposition—it is necessary to grant bonuses to corporations of this character in Montana? I believe it has been conceded upon this floor that no bonus has been granted to any system or any corporation whatever and there has been no intention to offer any except for this. Now, I claim, Mr. President, that there is capital in the United States, and if not in the United States, in London, ready to be embarked in this enterprise. If I am correctly informed the great irrigating ditches of California and Colorado and other territories have been carried out by capital from New York and London. I cannot understand why it should not be the same in this territory. I think it was Professor Adams who said that Montana had all of the water that could be conducted over the soil to the best of advantage, and I believe that this soil of Montana is better and more productive than the soil of any other of the territories. I do not think there is any question about this, and I think it is well understood. Now, I believe, as I have stated, that there is plenty of money waiting to be embarked in this enterprise. I have only to tell you, gentlemen, that down in Northern Montana already a great many of those streams have been taken up to irrigate the country between the Teton and the Missouri Rivers. Why did these men go into the enterprise if they thought it was necessary for their property to be exempt. There are other canals that have been taken up in that section of the country. I say there is ample capital to be embarked in this great enterprise in Montana. The country is full of cheap money. There is no nation on the face of the earth today, in my opinion, that is as well prepared to undertake this great enterprise as the people of the United States, and I do not believe that they would hesitate to take hold of this enterprise. There is one feature of this canal system, this irrigation system, which will commend itself to capitalists, and that is the permanency of that kind of investment. You, Mr. President, may invest money in mines. Those mines after a while are mined out. The products of the mountains will finally yield up themselves, but money invested in these ditches becomes more valuable day by day and year by year, and if the investors in this kind of property do not receive the large income at first which they would like to, the future assures them of large returns for their capital. It is the most permanent kind of property that I know of in the Territory of Montana, and, if I had surplus money to invest, I would put it sooner in that class of property than any other I know of in Montana.

Mr. Lure, of Gallatin: The gentleman who has just taken his seat bases his remarks upon the fact that this constitutional convention has already adopted a provision that the water rentals shall be regulated by the County Commissioners of the several counties. Now, there at once, it seems to me, is objection to gentlemen, whether in this Territory or from New York or London, investing their money to any extent, because it is beyond their control as soon as they do it. Now, you have done that already. There is a blow to the irrigation projects of this state, by saying that the money that might be invested here in canals for the distribution of water over this Territory shall be within the control of County Commissioners; and, on the other hand, is the offset, that there shall be no encouragement at all. Now, those canals that have been built were built without any such constitutional provision as that. Let me tell you that there is no provision in this constitution, nor can there be, restricting, for instance, the rates—the tariff rates—of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company; or the passenger fares of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. That is beyond the control of this constitution and it is beyond the control of the state because there is a charter granted by the United States and it is beyond our control. And so it is with all of these corporations, these great transportation companies, with these great common carriers. There is no restriction upon their right to regulate rates; but upon this one great question that affects the people of the state of Montana I think more than any other one question, you start out with the proposition in the constitution that the money invested in these large canals is within the control of the County Commissioners or within the control of the regulation laws of Montana and not of the people that invest their money in them. Now, that is a singular spirit of inducement to capital to come from London or New York here and build your canals; but as a spirit of offset to that, I think that we should provide that these canals should pay taxes upon their income. Now, it seems to me, that the argument of the gentleman from Silver Bow was to the effect that they never would pay anything. He said they would never pay taxes at all; that if that was the case there would never be any net profit on their income; but if there ever is any great profit in any of these great monopolies that we have heard gentlemen talking about, then that profit is subject to taxation, and until there is a profit, I say that there is no encouragement. I want to say here that there is not one particle of difference between this proposition and the proposition that has already been introduced into this constitution for the taxation of mines. They stand exactly upon the same footing. Do you mean to say to me that the mining interests of this country are of more value than the agricultural interests? It has been well said that these mines will in time pan out, and only the recollection of those places will remain, whereas, on the other hand, if you reclaim a piece of land and get the water upon it, "it is a thing of beauty and joy forever"; it never peters out. Now, if any gentleman can point out the difference between this provision and that by which you propose to tax mines, I would like to have that distinction pointed out, for it is impossible for me to see it. It is not, as has been supposed by some gentlemen here, that this is for the exemption from taxation of those large ditches. They are all treated alike; it does not make any difference whether the ditch is taken out for the sale of water or not. It is for the distribution of water, for any useful purpose for which the water is put, and it protects all alike. It protects a half dozen farmers who combine to take out water and bring it upon their land and could protect one hundred farmers if necessary. Now, down in our country we have a corporation—a corporation of farmers—not capitalists, but farmers—who have taken out a large ditch and they found it necessary to become a corporation in order to manage their affairs; and I say they are entitled to encouragement. They have thousands of inches of water under their control in this section, and it is intended to treat all alike, to foster these ditches whether they are great or small. But the proposition for taking our ditches hereafter will be on a larger scale than ever before, because these small proprietors have done all they can. Now, the question is as to this large tract of land, which can only be reached by combinations, either of farmers or by others combining their forces in corporations,—it makes no difference. In order to reach this water, it will be necessary to have large canals that will be built at great expense, and there is no such thing as a corporation undertaking that work to become a monopoly, or squeezing the life out of the farmer, because there stands the law and the constitution and the Board of County Commissioners to see that no such thing is done.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I expect to vote upon this question when it comes up, and, as is well known perhaps by this convention, I have opposed from the beginning strongly the putting of any provision into this constitution which savored of legislation, so far as I was able to judge. I have also advocated here an absolute system of irrigation which will enable us to develop the resources of our soil from an agricultural point of view, and it may look to some as though, while I look upon this amendment here as savoring very strongly of legislation, that I should vote, and I shall vote upon it, if compelled to meet the matter here. There are two bulls staring me in the face; one, the danger of legislating unduly in our constitution, and the other is of striking a death blow to the interest which I believe is absolutely essential to the development of this state and making it worth while for a man to live here. Now, I want to state a few facts which have come to my knowledge in this matter. There are in Custer County four gentlemen, some of whom were known in this country before they came here, who embarked in agriculture, and I never saw any better agriculturists in any country in my life. One of these men lives on the upper end of the Gallatin Bottom—John C. Gray, who was formerly sheriff of Gallatin County. The next is Mr. Higgins, who formerly lived in Missoula. The next is James Simpson, who went there many years ago, and the next is John somebody. All four of those men stand as well in Custer County as any men in any other county in this Territory. They went there as practical agriculturists and every one of those men have told me that had it not been for their horses and their stock that they would be paupers today. They believed, from the beautiful character of the soil and the climate, that they could sow their seed in the ground and produce and increase, but the result has been that where they have raised a moderate crop once in three or four years and a monstrous crop once in six years, the balance of the time they have failed—utterly failed, in many instances—and the result has been that the increase has not been sufficient to keep them and their families alive, and they have grown poor with this system of agriculture. Mr. Simpson, and perhaps Mr. Higgins, thought to remedy this evil two or three years ago, by sending east and getting machinery to bore artesian wells, for the purpose of irrigating the soil. They failed in that and did not succeed in raising water enough from the bowels of the earth to irrigate any considerable amount of gravel. The result was a total failure, and unless there is some other system adopted, not only have we got to abandon agriculture, but we have to abandon stock raising, and we have got to leave the lower counties and go into some other part of the country to secure means of livelihood. Now, in explaining myself in this way, I regard myself as having to take the choice of two evils, and while this measure does not suit me exactly—I mean the amendment which was offered yesterday by Judge Dixon and which has been considered here by the convention—I shall vote for it; and if that fails, I shall offer an amendment something like this: "All ditches, flumes, canals and other means used expressly for the purpose of irrigation may be exempted from taxation; provided, however, that the Legislative Assembly, shall have the power to regulate the rates for all water used in irrigating purposes." Now, while I am unwilling to surrender this whole thing and subject the people here to the dangers which have been so eloquently and perhaps truthfully depicted by my friend from Cascade (Mr. Collins), it will protect us against those evils, if they really exist, and certainly cannot be objectionable to those who want to turn this thing over to the Legislature to control, and with these remarks I shall cease to consume the time of the convention.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone, called for the ayes and nays.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to say a few words. I would like to state again that in my opinion the basis of this proposition before us is wrong. That in my opinion the argument made upon this proposition by Mr. Dixon, Mr. Toole and Mr. Knowles is upon a wrong hypothesis. Now, I claim that if you pass this proposition, that you will give a premium to parties who go into the ditch business exclusively for sale and that you will give no benefit whatever, directly or indirectly, to the farmers or to anyone else who comes into the business for the purpose of using water themselves. You give this premium, and it is a large premium. This is a great subsidy to the man who invests his money in it as a business enterprise, but it gives not one cent to the farmer who takes his little ditch upon his land, nor one copper to the dozen or twenty or fifty farmers who combine together to get it upon their lands and use it exclusively upon their lands. Instead of that, you compel the farmer or the stockgrower to increase his taxes. Every inch of water that is brought out upon a farm adds to the value of it, and the assessor places that assessed value upon his list. Every farmer that is on the line of a ditch, as was well said by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Stapleton), controlled by these corporations, adds to the value of his farm five-fold, ten-fold or it may be one hundred-fold, and the man who owns that ditch does not help pay one cent of the tax on that increase. The man who takes up that land and makes it valuable pays every cent. Now, that cannot be denied. It is a fact. You may levy taxes upon the man who, by the sweat of his brow, is trying to make a living, and you take taxes off of the man who sells the water that makes the land valuable, perpetually; not for a day nor for a year, but forever. Now, gentlemen are wrong in their argument when they state that this proposition is of equal benefit to all interests and that it bears equally upon all persons. It is not a fact, and if you will read this proposition that is here described you will see it.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I would like to ask you a question. Whether or not, "for the sale, rental, distribution or other beneficial use of the water" does not mean the individual water taken out by the individual farmer?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Certainly it must, but at the same time that ditch is not taxed—the net proceeds are not taxed, but the value of that ditch is placed on the value of their lands and assessed. If the land is only worth a dollar and a quarter at first, it might be worth $20 an acre when it is irrigated. The ditch may not be taxed and will not be taxed, but the land will be taxed at $20 an acre.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Where is a combination of farmers, 10, 20, 30, 40 or 50 or any other number—they take out valuable ditches and construct large reservoirs—if those parties would not be benefited by the law?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Certainly, this combination of farmers would be benefited—benefited immensely, too. But my proposition is that they would be compelled to pay five-fold, ten-fold and perhaps twenty-fold more taxes than they would today and the men who invest the money in the ditch for the purpose of selling that water increases the value of the farm that is occupied under it and does not increase the revenue of the State one single dollar.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: He does if he gets anything for the water—if he gets anything in return for his capital invested, will not the state get its proportionate share of that money?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Certainly, if he gets anything, he is taxed, and the State gets its share of that.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Not in the case of a non-resident.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Probably not in the case of a non-resident, as was argued yesterday, the net proceeds will be very seldom seen and the revenues from the net proceeds will be very seldom heard of. Now, this matter should not be put into our constitution because if it should happen to be a great proposition, as undoubtedly it is, and should happen to be that we are not moving in the right direction and in the interests of the people, there is no way or manner of changing it so far as great corporations and great ditches, that we are now building, or that will be built almost before this constitution is adopted, are concerned. It will be a perpetual contract with those parties, and it seems to me it is giving them a wonderful amount of power not only for the purpose of getting money, but over all the people in the country in which this property is situated. Now, another thing and I am done. Certainly corporations and persons now have the privilege of going out to the streams of this territory and taking them up—appropriating them; but if you do not put a premium upon this business of taking up water by corporations; there will be less of it. If you put a premium upon this matter the people will combine together and form corporations and go out into the highways and buy up all the water in Montana.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: Will the gentleman permit me. They will have to build a ditch. They cannot hold an appropriation of water twenty days.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Certainly; and they will take out the water. There is a great deal of new country in our section. Now, I claim that if you allow a corporation to take this water out, that a bona fide settler who comes after him and wants to settle upon a piece of land cannot get an inch of water. He must buy it. Hundreds and thousands and tens of thousands of settlers below that stream cannot get enough water for domestic purposes unless they buy it.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Does this proposition give a ditch company any water rights that they have not at the present time?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: It gives to every ditch company in Montana a big premium to go out and take up water. It gives them an immense subsidy. They have been doing this thing for twenty years in the counties of Montana without this subsidy; they have taken out big ditches in our section of country; they have taken up ditches in the county that the gentleman lives in; I say that without this subsidy they will continue to take up ditches and that the ditches will not be owned by immense corporations, but by comparatively small corporations and individuals. But if you give this big subsidy or premium amounting to $150,000, upon a ditch that is worth one half million of dollars; nearly $150,000 a year—you are voting away something which you are not here for the purpose of doing and something which you have not the power to do, and something that you should not do.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: As an illustration of how this proposition might work, as the gentleman from Cascade has said that it encourages monopolists, I want to call attention to one condition of things in Beaverhead and Madison counties. Twenty-five years ago perhaps a large class of settlers were located on the lower end of Beaverhead river; they appropriated the waters of the river and have continued up to this year to use those waters. Two or three years ago some companies formed—some corporations—near the head of that river about a mile from Ryan Creek and they took out of the river about 30 miles above the mouth of the river three big canals; and it is a fact that when I came over here, leaving home I think on the 2nd day of July, that the Beaverhead river was absolutely as dry as the streets of this city for 15 miles above the mouth of that river. Now, by the operation of those corporations they have left all the people below without enough water for their stock or their homes. Gentlemen, I say the people below have no remedy. They have been discussing this whole proposition for months. They have raised money to go and consult lawyers. There are a large number of people there, and for one-half of the entire length of that valley, from which the water is taken out, they have no resources. It is a proposition that has not been settled yet as to what remedy they may find. Now as the gentleman from Cascade has said, I am not one to put a premium upon stealth of that kind—upon combinations of capital, to rob the citizens. As usual where these combinations are made, the individual citizens and farmers have practically no remedy. Then I say why let the big fish eat up the little ones. And, Mr. President, without taking up the time of this convention I want to say here now, that I am opposed to all exemptions of any property from taxation. I believe that every man that holds a dollar's worth of taxable property that can be assessed—that the assessor can estimate the value of, should pay equally with other men. The system is wrong. The proposition is incorrect. It is breaking down the very fundamental principle of our government when you propose to make one man pay taxes and allow the other to go free; when one man owns property to say that he shall have a privilege that another man has not. The objection that I have is that when you create these corporations—when you give them the benefit of this system, you are treating them better and giving them more privilege than you do somebody else. Now, so far as the proposition is concerned in Section 3 as to laying down a rule for taxation of mines, I know it is a fact, Mr. President, and I believe every gentleman in this convention knows it as well as I do, that so far as net proceeds of mines in Montana are concerned, they are nothing compared with what the net proceeds of these ditch properties will be. There is a further proposition there, and that is that the net proceeds of mines are only paid by the successful ones, who can afford to pay. But I want to lay down this proposition to the convention that the poor miner and the man who has faith in his business, derive some benefit from it. But, as an illustration of the general working of this system I want to say that a few months ago I was engaged in a law suit in Virginia City and a gentleman whom I knew dealt largely in mines was being cross-examined. The question was upon what the net proceeds of a certain mine were. He testified upon cross-examination upon the stand that he had made about $10,000, in net proceeds. I knew that man realized more than that and I told him so, and I asked him how he accounted for it. Why, I charge the balance for my salary as superintendent of my own mine, said he. That is the practical explanation of it, and when you put this proposition in, as to the net proceeds of these ditches and canals, there will be very little ever gotten out of it. There is no provision in this article which says that the salaries of officers shall not be accounted for and the whole thing, so far as that proposition is concerned, is simply null and void.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I should like to ask at this time, whether a substitute is in order?

The President: Yes.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I desire to offer the following as a substitute to Section 4.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin offers as substitute to the section.

The Clerk read as follows: "Taxation. Section 41. The Legislative Assembly shall be and it is empowered to provide the manner of assessment and prescribe rules for the determination of values for taxation of all property except as in this constitution otherwise provided."

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Callaway: I would like to ask as a point of order if when a motion is pending for an indefinite postponement, if an amendment is in order?

The President: The motion to amend precedes the motion to indefinitely postpone.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would ask a favor: that the Chair reconsider its decision. The motion to postpone is one of the very highest consideration.

The President: I would refer the gentleman to our own rules which govern this matter. "When a question is under debate no motion shall be received except first to adjourn, second to lay on the table, third, for the previous question, fourth, to postpone to a certain day, fifth to commit to a standing committee, sixth, to select a committee, seventh, to amend, eighth, to postpone indefinitely; and these several motions shall have precedence in the order in which they stand arranged." The motion to amend takes precedence to indefinitely postpone, and the motion to indefinitely postpone is the lowest in the order of motions. The question is on the motion to adopt a substitute for the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I hope that substitute will be voted down. I will not say any more.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I call for the reading of the substitute.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: That I think will be very satisfactory.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I think that ground is covered by Section 1 of Proposition 27. "But the necessary revenue for the support and maintenance of the state shall be provided by the Legislative Assembly." I think that covers the ground.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move to lay the amendment on the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I hope that will not prevail. That you carry the original motion with it.

Mr. President: The question is upon the motion of the gentleman to lay upon the table.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I rise to a preliminary inquiry. If the motion to lay this amendment on the table prevails, will it carry the whole matter with it?

The President: It carries the original motion with it.

The ayes and nays were called for.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I understand the ruling of the Chair to be that if this substitute was laid upon the table that it carries the original proposition with it.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to crave a preliminary inquiry. I did not hear what was said. Is this the amendment offered by Mr. Hartman or the amendment offered by Mr. Dixon?

The President: The amendment offered by Mr. Hartman of Gallatin.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: But if that motion prevails it carries the proposition with it.

The President: If there be no objection to the ayes and nays, the same will be entered upon the minutes.

The Clerk read the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Collins, Craven, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hershfield, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Maginnis, Mayger, Parberry, Reck, Rotwill, Sargent, Stapleton, Warren, Watson, Witter, Mr. President—35.

Nays: Bickford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Caldwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Gaylord, Goddard, Hatch, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Whitehill, Winston—37.

Absent: Brazleton, Rickards, Webster—3.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to lay on the table lost. (Applause.)

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I offer an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade offers an amendment.

The Clerk reads as follows: At the end of Section 4, add "Provided that the land which is irrigated by such ditch shall also be subject to taxation on its net proceeds as may be provided by law."

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I rise to a point of order. There is an amendment to the proposition under consideration. Now, this amendment is not an amendment to that amendment. Consequently it is an amendment to the original proposition and is certainly not in order, it not being an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

The President: The amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin is a substitute.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I withdraw my amendment until the proposition of the gentleman from Gallatin is voted upon.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move the previous question on the section and all pending amendments.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I believe I have the floor.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade has the floor.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I only withdrew my amendment for the purpose of allowing the action of the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin. If there is a disposition here to gag the convention then certainly I will not withdraw the amendment, but will insist upon its being acted upon, and after that we can act upon the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin. But it seems to me that this proposition is before the convention and certainly no one has tried to amend it or perfect it. The proposition all day has been to indefinitely postpone. There has not been a single effort made to perfect this amendment, and I will leave it to the conscience of any man if there is not room to perfect it. It is the right of any member of this convention to try to perfect any section and it is a right that should not be infringed upon even by the members of the convention doing something. I have taken up as little of the time of this convention as many of the members of the floor and I have the prerogative and the right to offer amendments to this matter and I suppose to do it; and furthermore I think it is very little and very small on the part of any members of this convention to try to cut off that right that I have. If this thing is carried Mr. President, I am perfectly satisfied; but I want it carried fairly and we want to amend it before it goes into our constitution. I offer those amendments in perfect fairness and in perfect sincerity.

The President: There has been a question raised as the precedence of these motions. The Chair will state that in Jefferson's Manual, page 158 and a copy of which the Chair holds in his hands, it reads, "In like manner, if it is proposed to amend by striking out a paragraph the friends of the paragraph are first to make it as perfect as they can by amendments before the question is put to strike it out." That is the rule that the Chair has been acting under. The Chair desires to do only what is fair, but it requires that the rules be observed.

The Clerk read the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) for the information of the convention.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I know we are getting tired of so much water here, but I cannot see why it is not as fair for one as it is for the other. If the corporations shall have the right to own the water—the exclusive right when they have taken all out of the stream, to the water and only pay taxes upon the net proceeds of their property, why in the name of justice cannot a man who is trying to make a living by the sweat of his brow and who puts in his whole year's hard labor and pays taxes upon that whether he makes a dollar or not—why not let him pay only on the net proceeds? I do not see why if a man has a million dollars he should not pay his full pro rata of taxes and the other man who has five hundred dollars and has worked hard all the year round and has not made a dollar why he should contribute to the man who has the control of his property. I am in favor of exempting one if you exempt the other.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Now, that is just; that is proper; it seems to me a fair illustration of the manner in which this thing has been considered all along. The gentleman asks if a corporation owning a million dollars is permitted to pay taxes only on the net proceeds of the water, what is the reason that man who produces something on the land should not have the same privilege. Now, what Mr. Collins proposes to do by his amendment is to say that he shall pay on the net proceeds, but he does not go further and say that the proposition is—that the Board of County Commissioners shall have the right to regulate the prices of what is raised on this farm. If he does, then he subjects himself to the same restrictions and limitations that are sought to be put on the water, and that is another different matter. It is not similar in any respect.

Mr. Schmidt of Silver Bow sent up an amendment.

The President: The question now is upon the question of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. Schmidt of Silver Bow: I desire to have my amendment read for information.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers an amendment that is out of order at present but will be considered in due time. It will be read by the Clerk for information.

The Clerk read as follows: "Strike out in line 2 of section 4, the words 'or any other beneficial use of water' and insert the words, 'all water for irrigating purposes' so as to read, 'for the sale, rental and distribution of water for irrigating purposes'."

The President: The question now is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Schmidt) to the original section. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Schmidt) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) offers the following amendment which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Section 4 by striking out of line 2, the word 'shall' and insert the word, 'may.'"

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman.)

The Clerk read the said substitute as follows: Section 4. The Legislative Assembly shall be and it is empowered to provide a manner of assessment and prescribe rules for the determination of values for the taxation of property except in this constitution otherwise provided.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I call for the ayes and nays on the substitute of the gentleman.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Brown, Buford, Bullard, Burns A. F., Burns A. J., Burns Edward, Callaway, Collins, Courtney, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Hartman, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Maginnis, Mayger, Parberry, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Sargent, Warren, Watson, Witter, Mr. President—30.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Burleigh, Caldwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Gaylord, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Toole, Jos. K.; Whitehill, Winston—12.

Absent: Brazleton, Rickards, Webster—3.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the substitute lost.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: This is certainly a subject that does not materially concern me or the district which I represent; therefore, I would rather leave it to the members that it does concern directly. But it seems to me that there are some objectionable features about it. Now, I notice that it does not say that the water that is used for irrigation purposes shall be excluded from taxation except on the profits. Now, I venture to say that the whole Missouri River might be turned into an irrigating ditch, and I venture to say that there never would be any net proceeds to tax. On that account I shall oppose the matter.

The President: The question is upon the motion to indefinitely postpone.

The ayes and nays were called for.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F., Burns, A. J., Burns, Edward; Callaway, Collins, Courtney, Craven, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Maginnis, Mayger, Parberry, Reek, Robinson, Rotwilt, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Warren, Watson, Witter, Mr. President—38.

Nays: Bickford, Bullard, Burleigh, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Dixon, Durfee, Gaylord, Goddard, Hatch, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Toole, J. K.; Toole, J. R., Whitehill, Winston—31.

Absent: Brazleton, Rickards, Webster—3.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) to indefinitely postpone, carried. (Applause)

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move that the motion by which the section is indefinitely postponed be reconsidered, and that the reconsideration be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: The gentleman voted aye on the proposition and he cannot make a motion to reconsider.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the vote by which Section 4 has been indefinitely postponed be reconsidered and that the reconsideration be laid on the table.

The President: There being a call for the ayes and nays, if there be no objection they will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Collins, Courtney, Craven, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Graves, Hartman, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Maginnis, Mayger, Parberry, Reek, Robinson, Rotwilt, Sargent, Stapleton, Warren, Watson, Witter, Mr. President—34.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Bullard, Burleigh, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Dixon, Durfee, Gaylord, Goddard, Hammond, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Whitehill, Winston—38.

Absent: Brazleton, Rickards, Webster—3.

The Chair announced the vote and declared that the motion to lay on the table was lost. (Applause)

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Is not my substitute to this section in order?

The President: The Chair is under the impression that all portions of Proposition 27 were passed upon finally except Section 4. That section is indefinitely postponed, hence the Chair is of the opinion that no motion is now germane to this subject.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move that we go into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Miscellaneous Schedule.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge, to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge, in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: Is the Clerk of the Committee of the Whole present? It is desired that the Sergeant at Arms request the Clerk of the Committee of the Whole to attend if he is not present.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I move that this Committee of the Whole recommend that the Clerk be dismissed for dereliction of duty, and I make that as a motion.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Haskell, of Dawson: I understand that the gentleman who usually performs the duties of the Clerk of the Committee of the Whole was requested a few minutes ago to act in the place of a Clerk who was sick. I ask that the convention will take no such step as that now proposed.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: If that is the state of facts, Mr. Chairman, we ought not to be rash in acting upon this matter.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I will state that this Clerk has not been attending to his duty all through this session, and I want to see the clerks brought up to the mark, and if they do not attend to business, let us have them dismissed.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Madison, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question under consideration when the committee rose was Proposition 28, Section No. 10, on the motion made by the gentleman from Gallatin to strike out Section No. 10.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, called for the reading of the section.

The section was read.

The Chairman: The motion is to strike out Section 10.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin to strike out Section 10, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried by a vote of 34 in the affirmative to 28 in the negative.

The Chairman: Are there any further amendments to Section 10?

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up an amendment.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Do I understand Section 10 as stricken out?

The Chairman: Yes sir. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers in lieu of the section stricken out the following: "The Legislative Assembly shall pass laws prohibiting the granting of free passes or the sale of tickets at a discount by any railroad or transportation company to any state, county, district or municipal officer."

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I have a substitute to offer.

The Chairman: The following is offered as an amendment: "The Legislative Assembly shall by proper legislation prohibit any executive legislator or judiciary officer of the state or of any county, or municipal officer, from receiving directly or indirectly from any railroad company or other corporation or common carrier in this state, or use any free pass or free ticket or pass or ticket at a discount and shall impose adequate penalties for any violation of such legislation.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I rise to a point of order, is not this substantially the same as the section that has been stricken out.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I think the gentleman is entirely mistaken. The section was the more objectionable because it provided that any railroad or other transportation company, agent, officer or employe thereof should grant free passes or tickets that might be in conflict with the act granting the charter to the Northern Pacific company which was granted by the Congress of the United States. If you will read this amendment carefully, it provides that no judiciary, legislator or officer shall receive or use such pass.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I think there is more substantial differences between the two propositions, than the one stated. One says positively, without leaving it to the Legislature, that the road shall not grant and officers shall not receive. That is to say that the Legislature shall pass laws. That is the obvious objection which has been made to a great many propositions that this convention is legislating. We do not propose to do that but propose to direct the Legislature how they shall legislate.

The Chairman: The question is upon the question of the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. Fields of Park: I offer the following amendment to the amendment.

The Chairman: There are two amendments already.

Mr. Fields of Park: One is a substitute.

The Chairman: The amendment before the house now is the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

The Chair put the question on the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin. Mr. Luce and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 25 in the affirmative to 31 in the negative.

The Chairman: The question now before the house is upon the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke as follows: "The Legislative Assembly shall pass laws prohibiting the granting of free passes or the sale of tickets at a discount by any railroad or transportation company to any state, county, district or municipal officer."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I suppose the mover means within this state. That is a general sweeping prohibition that would operate in any other state as well as the State of Montana; if the gentleman will amend it so as to make it read, "Shall not receive any pass or ticket from any corporation within this state," it will be better.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: That is what is designed. It might be amended. I accept the amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman accepts the amendment.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I sent up an amendment some time ago and I would like to have it read.

The Chairman: The following amendment is offered, "The Legislative Assembly shall pass laws prohibiting the granting of free passes or the sale of tickets at a discount by any railroad or other transportation company, to state, county, district or municipal officers."

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: Now I move to make use of the amendment that I offered there, commencing at the word "except" and I offer it as an amendment to the section offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. They are purely executive officers and their actions cannot be influenced by passes.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The section would then read, "Except sheriffs, deputy sheriffs and stock inspectors."

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I accept that amendment.

The Chairman: The question before the house is upon the section as amended.

The amendment is accepted by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move that the word "judiciary" be added to the list of officers.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move to add to those officers that have been excepted, "Preachers of the gospel, preachers, sabbath school teachers and members of the Salvation Army."

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I move as an amendment to that that the member from Custer be excepted.

The Chairman: The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: Is this an amendment?

The Chairman: This is the section offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole.

The Clerk read the section as amended.

The Legislative Assembly shall pass laws prohibiting the granting of free passes or the sale of tickets at a discount by any railroad or other transportation company to any state, county, district or municipal officers, excepting sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables and stock inspectors."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, I move an amendment by inserting the words, "within this state."

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I do not think that ought to be included. My idea in drawing that was that I thought perhaps there might be some question in reference to the Northern Pacific Railroad for instance and the section would make a penalty against that road and would leave it to the Legislature to provide in such way as they can legally provide for the enforcement of the penalty whether incorporated in the territory or not.

The Chairman: The question before the house is upon the adoption of this section as read.

The Chair put the question of the adoption of the said section and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 32 in the affirmative to 26 in the negative.

Mr. Joy of Park: I offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Park offers the following as an addition to the section already adopted, "provided that this section shall not apply to persons who hold or were entitled to passes before their election by reason of their employment by any railroad company."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Joy of Park: I want to say in relation to that amendment that there are now officers, one in particular in our county—the County Superintendent of Schools, who has free transportation over the line of road that runs through that county and had it some time before she was elected. Under this provision here that lady would be debarred from holding that office or from holding that transportation, one or the other. For another reason: there are several thousand people in this territory who are connected with the railroads, employed by them day by day, and they are entitled undoubtedly to some representation in this body and it would not be out of order or unusual for some of those persons if they happened to be elected to the Legislature or some office, and I say in that event, some exception ought to be made. I offer this amendment for this purpose.

Mr. Clarke of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I understand that the section adopted provided that future legislatures may provide for the regulation of this business.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: No, it provides that they shall.

Mr. Clarke of Silver Bow: Well, let the future legislatures provide for this.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: It seems to me that that amendment as well as the amendments that have preceded it show the utter absurdity of making any provision in this constitution touching this matter. If the constitution itself is silent upon the question there can be no doubt or question but that it is entirely in the power of the first legislature that meets to enact just such laws as it may see fit in reference to prohibiting public officers from in any way accepting free transportation from any railroad company, or railroad companies from granting them; and it seems to me that these are the very best reasons why the section should not be adopted, but if it is desired to put anything in the constitution that amendment certainly should not be adopted. But strike out the word "shall" in the proposition as it is adopted and insert the word "may" and you have simply said to the legislature that you may do it.

Mr. Clarke of Silver Bow: Also in regard to the proposed change I beg to say that I understand when this matter was under consideration this morning that the gentleman from Custer stated that that subject had been before one or two legislatures in this territory, but that they had taken no action upon it. Now, if you allow them to strike out the word "shall" and substitute "may" it will be at the pleasure of the legislature only and you may rest assured it will not be done.

Mr. Buford of Madison: I move to amend that amendment by inserting after the word railroad, the words "or transportation."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: If I may be permitted a word in reply to the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Clark) I think it is true that this matter has come before a legislature once to my knowledge and perhaps once or twice before that, and action was had upon it. A bill was introduced and died there. Now, I do not understand and do not believe that the gentleman contends that in this convention may be found all the wisdom that ever was or ever will be in Montana, and I believe it is fair to say that the people in electing legislators will perhaps select with more care the persons that they send here to make laws than they did in many instances in sending men here to make this constitution. And it seems to me that it is a matter purely of legislation; it is a matter to be left to the legislature to say whether they will enact those laws or not; but to say to them that you shall enact such and such laws indicates that this convention has not sufficient confidence in future legislatures in Montana to enact such laws as the people may demand and desire. A man comes here or perhaps to Anaconda where the capitol is going to be, as a member of the legislature. A bill of that character is proposed. He puts himself upon record. He goes back to his constituents and is accountable just as much as he is here. I do not believe that this is a matter that should be a constitutional provision at all. It seems to me there is no reason for it and if the convention desires to say anything about it, it should be enough to say that the legislature may do so, without compelling the legislature to enact laws of that character, and particularly of the character of the proposed amendment.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Buford) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chair: The question now is upon the amendment as presented by the gentleman from Park.

The Chair put the question on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Park and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendment to section 10, the Clerk read Section 11, as follows: "Any citizen of this state, who shall, after the adoption of this constitution, fight a duel with deadly weapons, or send or accept a challenge for that purpose, or be aider or abettor in fighting a duel, either in this state or out of it, shall be deprived of the right of holding any office of honor or profit in this state and be otherwise punished as shall be prescribed by law."

Mr. Rotwitt of Meagher: I move to strike out the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question of the gentleman from Magher (Mr. Rotwitt) and a vote being taken same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 11, the Clerk read Section 12 as follows: "All property both real and personal, of the wife, owned or claimed by her before marriage and that acquired by her after marriage by gift, devise, descent or otherwise, shall be her separate property; and laws shall be passed more clearly defining the rights of the wife in relation as well to her separate property as that held in common with her husband and providing for the registration of the wife's separate property."

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out the word "more" on line 3.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move as an amendment to that, that the entire section be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard.)

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: This is as clearly legislation as anything I have seen. The first clause of the section has been on the statute book for twenty years: the second clause is merely advisory and if it does anything it will be to limit and curtail the rights of women. I am in favor of their having equal rights with men in every respect in regard to the transaction of business and in all the convenience of prosperity and the accumulation of property. I am opposed to hampering them in any way and I think this can be safely left to the legislature for their benefit, especially considering the growing feeling in their favor at the present time. Certainly I am in favor of their having all the rights of property and the opportunities for business that men have and of going still further for their protection if necessary. (Applause.)

The Chairman: The question is on the motion to strike out.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: The motion to amend the section has preference over the motion to strike out.

The Chairman: The point of order was well taken. The question is upon the motion to amend by striking out the word "more" in line 3.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Craven) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The motion now is to strike out Section 12.

The Chair put the question on the same motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: In connection with this proposition 28 there was a resolution introduced by Mr. Myers of Yellowstone to be considered in connection with it; which reads as follows: "Resolved, that no person holding any office of profit under the United States and commissioned by the president shall during his continuance of such office be eligible to be appointed to hold or exercise any office of profit under this state."

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I move that that be adopted and be called Section 11 and that the other sections be numbered to correspond.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I move to strike out the words, "commissioned by the President." There are officers of the United States who are not commissioned by the President and who hold important offices—the fourth class postmasters for instance.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that the resolution as read be incorporated in this article and numbered Section 11. To that motion the gentleman from Meagher offers the amendment to strike out the words, "commissioned by the President."

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: The committee had that matter under consideration and if that was acted upon in accordance with the suggestion of the gentleman from Meagher it would prohibit small postmasters all through the country from holding any other office and prohibit them in very many small places from obtaining postmasters at all, and that is one of the reasons I presume the mover of this resolution intended to cover.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I would say to my friend from Missoula that every office, the receipts of which are over a certain amount—one thousand dollars, I think—is commissioned by the President.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Those small postmasters that receive four or five hundred dollars a year could not depend upon their salaries for a living. If the resolution of the gentleman from Custer was entertained it would be difficult in very many places to obtain postmasters at all.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I do not insist upon the amendment in this matter, gentlemen,—I will withdraw it.

The Clerk read the section as proposed by the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Myers) for the information of the committee.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: The only criticism I would make about that is that it would prohibit officers commissioned by the President from holding military offices in this state; in other words, from performing military duties. Now, we have some most excellent gentlemen in the territory of Montana not commissioned by the President, who hold posts in the militia.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: In connection with that resolution it seems to me that it would in many instances work hardship and great inconvenience. Now, I know the matter was considered last winter at the time the registration law was under consideration in the legislature as to the appointment of registration agents and it was found that it would be convenient in many places—most convenient for the people, and could perhaps better be performed by postmasters where it was convenient to have a registration agent at a point where there was a postoffice.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I would say that it would not interfere with them. It would have no effect upon those postmasters. It is only those commissioned by the President and there are only certain ones commissioned. It would not affect that at all.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: I may simply make a statement as to the postmaster of Marysville. He is a commissioned officer under the President. He is now holding the office of Clerk of the School Board of Trustees and I think it is an office created by the laws of the territory of Montana and it would be in violation of this provision if it were passed for him to hold that office any longer.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the section as proposed by the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Myers) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 13 of the printed bill.

The Clerk read Section 13, as follows: "The Legislative Assembly may at any time, by a vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house, recommend to the electors of the state, to vote at the next general election for or against a provision to revise, alter or amend this constitution; and if a majority of those voting on the question shall declare in favor of such convention, the Legislative Assembly shall at its next session provide for the calling thereof. The number of members of the convention shall be the same as that of the house of representatives, and they shall be elected in the same manner, at the same places, and in the same districts. The Legislative Assembly shall in the act, calling the convention designate the day, hour, and place of its meeting, fix the day of its members and officers, and provide for the payment of the same together with the necessary expenses of the convention. Before proceeding, the members shall take an oath to support the constitution of the United States and of the State of Montana, and to faithfully discharge their duties as members of the convention. The qualifications of members shall be the same as members of the senate and vacancies occurring shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the Legislative Assembly. Said convention shall meet within three months after such election and prepare such revisions, alterations or amendments to the constitution as may be deemed necessary, which shall be submitted to the electors for their ratification or rejection at an election, not less than two, nor more than six months after the adjournment of the convention; and unless so submitted and approved by a majority of the electors voting at the election, no such revision, alteration, or amendment shall take effect.

Mr Myers of Yellowstone: I desire in the first line to strike out the word "two thirds" and insert "majority."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Myers) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The following amendment is offered by Mr. Rotwitt of Meagher: amend by striking out on line 3 of section 13 the words "those voting on the question" and insert in lieu thereof, "All members" commencing on line 3 and extending into line 4.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I think the gentleman misapprehends the meaning of this. I think if he will read closely he will see that the section refers to the electors instead of the members of the Legislature.

Mr. Rotwitt of Meagher: I withdraw the motion.

Mr. Myers of Lewis & Clarke sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers the following amendment which is in the nature of a substitute. Section 13. "The Legislative Assembly may at any time by a two-thirds vote of the members elected to each house recommend to the electors of the state to vote at the next general election for or against a convention to revise, alter or amend this constitution as may be provided by law."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: I think, Mr. Chairman that the legislature should be allowed the privilege of stating what this convention should do.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Mayger) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 13, the Clerk read Section 14, as follows: "Any amendments to this constitution may be proposed in either house of the Legislative Assembly; and if the same shall be voted for by two-thirds of the members elected to each house such proposed amendments, together with the ayes and nays of each house thereon, shall be entered in full on their respective journals; and the Secretary of State shall cause the said amendment or amendments to be published in full in at least one newspaper in each county (if such there be) for three months previous to the next general election, for members to the Legislative Assembly; and at said election the said amendment or amendments shall be submitted to the qualified electors of the state for their approval or rejection, and such as are approved by a majority of those voting thereon shall become part of the constitution. Should more amendments than one be submitted at the same election, they shall be so prepared and distinguished by numbers or otherwise that each can be voted upon separately; Provided, however, that not more than three amendments to this constitution shall be submitted at the same election."

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: In line two of the section, I ask to strike out the words "two-thirds" and insert in lieu thereof the word "majority."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I hope this motion will not prevail. It is a departure, it seems to me, from all precedent, and, in addition to that, if it is made so easy to amend this constitution upon every occasion when there is a majority of heads or of tails down, the proposition will be submitted to be amended. I do not think the organic law of the land should be so constituted. I think the provision is a wise one. It is the same or virtually the same provision as in the constitution of the United States, and I think we can do no better than to adopt the matter as it now stands. The members of the former convention thought the same thing and put that provision in.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: My object in offering the amendment was simply that a majority might rule in a matter of that kind. I submit, however, the proposition is entirely in harmony with all our institutions, that a majority should rule. I believe that if we found it necessary to submit the amendment to the constitution, and if a majority of the houses of the Legislature deemed it fit that such an amendment should be offered, I believe it is right that the people of this Territory should have the right to vote upon it; and this is particularly true when you take into consideration the fact that the submission of an amendment to the constitution would incur no particular expense to the State, because it would be submitted at some regular election; it would simply come up when some other election would be before the people.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I should like the unanimous consent to return to Section 4. It occurs to me that this blank form in Section 4 should be filled, and I have prepared an amendment which I should like to have read.

The Chairman: The following amendment is offered to Section 4: By inserting in parentheses, the following words, "the name of his office being herein inserted", after the word "of" on line 5.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Craven), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: In striking out here, I believe that Section 8 ought to be stricken out. I move that that whole section be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: The reason for that is this: that the law provides that all officers elected shall take their offices, and there is one officer, and there may be others—I do not know—but there is one officer at least, the Treasurer that holds on until March under the law, and that is because of the settlement of the fiscal year. The beginning of the fiscal year, under the laws of the Territory, has been made, I think, the first Monday in March, and that is the time the Treasurer makes his fiscal settlements with the County Commissioners of the county, and I do not think he ought to be turned out of office before he makes his final settlement.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Mr. Chairman, there is one other set of officers that would be affected by this, and that is the school district officers. The election of these officers is in May of each year and they are expected to file their bond and take possession of their office within 20 days of the time when they are elected to fill such office.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Knowles) to strike out Section 8, and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 28 in the affirmative to 19 in the negative.

Mr. Bullard, of Jefferson: I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I move that when the committee rise they report the proposition back to the convention with the recommendation that as amended it do pass.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Hickman, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Jefferson, Mr. Bullard, that the committee do now rise.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Jefferson, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 28, have made several amendments and ask for further time to report.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that the committee have had under consideration Proposition No. 28, to which certain amendments have been made, accompanied by the recommendation that the amendments as reported be adopted. The Chairman desires further time in which to prepare his report. If there be no objection, it will be printed.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I move we take recess until 8 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I wish to give notice that at the proper time I shall move to reconsider Section 4 of Proposition No. 27.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that the convention do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried by a vote of 39 in the affirmative to 23 in the negative.

The convention stood adjourned until Friday, August 2nd, 1889, at 10 A. M.

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

Friday, August 2nd, 1889. Morning Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: The Committee on Corporations desires to make a report.

The report of the Committee on Corporations, other than municipal, will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President: Your Committee on Corporations other than municipal beg to report as follows:

Signed G. W. STAPLETON, Chairman.

Article on Corporations other than Municipal.

Section 1. All existing charters or grants of special or exclusive privileges under which the corporations or guaranteees shall not have organized or commenced business in good faith at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall thereafter have no validity.

Section 2. No charter of incorporation shall be granted, extended, changed or amended by special law, except for such municipal, charitable educational, penal, or reformatory corporations as are or may be under the control of the state; but the Legislative Assembly shall provide by general law for the organization of corporations hereafter to be created. Provided: That any such laws shall be subject to future repeal or alteration by the Legislative Assembly.

Sec. 3. The Legislative Assembly shall have the power to alter, revoke or annul any charter of incorporation existing at the time of the adoption of this constitution, whenever in its opinion it may be injurious to the citizens of the State.

Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law that in all elections for directors or managers of incorporated companies every stockholder shall have the right to vote in person or by proxy for the number of shares of stock owned by him for as many persons as there are directors or managers to be elected, or to cumulate said shares, and give one candidate as many votes as the number of directors multiplied by the number of his shares of stock shall equal, or to distribute them, on the same principle, among as many candidates as he shall think fit; and such directors or managers shall not be elected in any other manner.

Sec. 5. All railroads shall be public highways, and all railroad, transportation and express companies shall be common carriers, and subject to legislative control and the Legislative Assembly shall have the power to regulate and control by law the rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by such companies as common carriers from one point to another in the State. Any association or corporation, organized for the purpose, shall have the right to construct and operate a railroad between any designated points within this State and to connect at the State line with railroads of other States and Territories. Every railroad company shall have the right with its road to intersect, connect with or cross any other railroad.

Sec. 6. No railroad corporation, express or other transportation company, or the lessees or managers thereof, shall consolidate its stock, property or franchises with any other railroad corporation, express or transportation company owning or having under its control a parallel or competing line; neither shall it in any manner unite its business or earnings with the business or earnings of any other railroad corporation.

Sec. 7. All individuals, associations and corporations shall have equal rights to have persons or property transported on and over any railroad, transportation or express route in this State. No discrimination in charges or facilities for transportation of freight or passengers of the same class shall be made by any railroad or transportation or express company between persons or places within this State; but excursions or commutation tickets may be issued and sold at special rates, provided such rates are the same to all persons. No railroad or transportation or express company shall be allowed to charge, collect or receive, under penalties which the Legislative Assembly shall prescribe, any greater charge or toll for the transportation of freight or passengers to any place or station upon its route or line than it charges for the transportation of the same class of freight or passengers to any more distant place or station upon its route or line within this State. No railroad, express or transportation company, nor any lessee, manager or other employe thereof, shall give any preference to any individual, association or corporation, in furnishing cars or motive power, or for the transportation of money or other express matter.

Sec. 8. No railroad, express or other transportation company, in existence at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall have the benefit of any future legislation, without first filing in the office of Secretary of State an acceptance of the provisions of this constitution in binding form.

Sec. 9. The right of eminent domain shall never be abridged, nor so construed as to prevent the Legislative Assembly from taking the property and franchises of incorporated companies, and subjecting them to public use, the same as the property of individuals; and the police powers of the State shall never be abridged or so construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals, or the general well-being of the State.

Sec. 10. No corporation shall issue stock or bonds, except for labor done, services performed, or money and property actually received, and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void. The stock of corporations shall not be increased except in pursuance of general law, nor without the consent of the persons holding a majority of the stock, first obtained at a meeting held after at least thirty days notice, given in pursuance of law.

Sec. 11. No foreign corporation shall do any business in this State without having one or more known places of business, and an authorized agent or agents in the same, upon whom process may be served. And no company or corporation formed under the laws of any other country, State or Territory shall have or be allowed to exercise or enjoy within this State any greater rights or privileges than those possessed or enjoyed by corporations of the same or similar character created under the laws of this State.

Sec. 12. No street or other railroad shall be constructed within any city or town without the consent of the local authorities having control of the street or highway proposed to be occupied by such street or other railroad.

Sec. 13. The Legislative Assembly shall pass no law for the benefit of a railroad or other corporation, or any individual or association of individuals, retrospective in its operations, or which imposes on the people of any county or municipal subdivision of the State, a new liability in respect to transportation for considerations already past.

Sec. 14. Any association or corporation, or the lessees or managers thereof, organized for the purpose, or any individual shall have the right to construct and maintain lines of telegraph or telephone within this State, and connect the same with other lines; and the Legislative Assembly shall by general law of uniform operation provide reasonable regulations to give full effect to this section. No telegraph or telephone company shall consolidate with or hold a controlling interest in the stock or bonds of any other telegraph or telephone company owning or having the control of a competing line, or acquire by purchase or otherwise any other competing line of telegraph or telephone.

Sec. 15. If any railroad, telegraph, telephone, express or other corporation, organized under any of the laws of this State, shall consolidate, by sale or otherwise, with any railroad, telegraph, telephone, express or other corporation organized under any of the laws of any other state or territory, or of the United States, the same shall not thereby become a foreign corporation, but the courts of this state shall retain jurisdiction over that part of the corporate property within the limits of the State, in all matters that may arise as if said consolidation had not taken place.

Sec. 16. It shall be unlawful for any person, company or corporation to require of its servants or employees, as a condition of their employment or otherwise, any contract or agreement whereby such person, company or corporation shall be released or discharged from liability or responsibility on account of personal injuries received by such servants or employees while in the service of such person, company or corporation, by reason of the negligence of such person, company or corporation, or the agents or employees thereof; and such contracts shall be absolutely null and void.

Sec. 17. The Legislative Assembly shall not pass any law permitting the leasing or alienation of any franchise so as to release or relieve the franchise or property held thereunder from any of the liabilities of the lessor or grantor, or lessee or grantee, contracted or incurred in the operation, use or enjoyment of such franchise or any of its privileges.

Sec. 18. The term "corporation" as used in this article shall be held and construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having or exercising any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships; and all corporations shall have the right to sue, and shall be subject to be sued, in all courts in like cases as natural persons, subject to such regulations and conditions as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 19. Dues from private corporations shall be secured by such means as may be prescribed by law, but in no case shall any stockholder be individually liable in any amount over or above the amount of stock owned by him.

Sec. 20. That no corporation, stock company, person or association of persons in the State of Montana shall directly or indirectly combine, or form what is known as a trust, or make any contract with any person or persons, corporation or stock company, foreign or domestic, through their stockholders trustees or in any manner whatever for the purpose of fixing the price or regulating the production of any article of commerce, or of the product of the soil, for consumption by the people. That the Legislature shall pass laws for the enforcement thereof by adequate penalties to the extent, if necessary for that purpose, of the forfeiture of their property and franchises, or in case of foreign corporations prohibiting them from carrying on business in this State.

On motion of Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin, the reading of the report was disposed of and it was referred to the Committee on Printing and ordered to be printed.

The President: The report of the Committee on Mining and Water Rights will now be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President: Your Committee on Mining and Water Rights have had under consideration Proposition No. 30 and beg leave to report the same back with the recommendation that it be not passed.

(Signed

J. R. TOOLE, Chairman.

The President: This report will go to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Under General Order of Business No. 4, I neglected to introduce the following:

The President: There is a memorandum of the gentleman from Silver Bow: If there be no objection, it will be read. It is, however, out of order at the present time.

The Clerk read as follows:

Helena, Montana, August 2nd, 1889.

To the President:

Whereas the laws of the United States provide for the collection of duty upon imported lead ores and under the ruling of the Treasury Department Mexican lead ores are admitted duty free when the value of their silver contents exceeds the value of the lead contents; and whereas the prosperity of Montana and the welfare of its people depends largely upon the lead mining industry, which the present ruling is fast destroying; and whereas the claims of our lead ore producers to obtain the protection already afforded them by law have been carefully and exhaustively presented to the Treasury Department and the Treasury Department has made no decision of the question presented and the uncertainty caused by this delay in referring such decisions is almost as detrimental to our interests as an adverse decision would be; and as our ore producers have no authority or statutory right to become parties to such to have justice of our claims decided by the courts:

Now, therefore, it is the sense of this convention that we, having always advocated the protection of American industries, respectfully call the attention of the President of the United States to the fact that the ruling of the Treasury Department debars a great industry of the protection accorded it by law and works great hardship upon tens of thousands of American working men, and we request him to take such measures as will secure an enforcement of the law by the Treasury Department.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning the memorandum?

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the resolution. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move that it be referred to the Committee on Mining and Water Rights, &c.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the petition or resolution be referred to the Committee on Mining and Water Rights. If there be no objection, it will be so referred.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole on Proposition No. 8, General File No. 27, is now ready and will now be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President: Your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 28, General File No. 27, upon miscellaneous subjects and future amendments, and now beg leave to report the same back to the convention with the following amendments, and recommend that as so amended it do pass. Your committee would state that the amendments offered refer to number of liens and section and are such as appear in the printed bill.

Amend Section 1 by inserting the words "So help me God" after the word "abilities" on line 6, and also substitute the word "require" for the word "request" on the same line; and by inserting after the word "of" on line 5 in the blank space in parentheses the words "the name of his office being here inserted."

Strike out Section 8. Amend Section 9 by inserting the word "thereon" after the word "settlers" on line 2. Section 10 is stricken out and the following substituted: "The Legislative Assembly shall pass laws prohibiting the granting of free passes or the sale of tickets at a discount by any railroad or other transportation company to any state, county, district or municipal officer, except sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables and stock inspectors." Strike out Sections 11 and 12.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed

J. R. TOOLE, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection, the convention will proceed to the consideration of the amendments. The report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole will be considered received if there be no objection, and the amendments will be taken up in their order.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 1 by inserting the words "So help me God" after the word "abilities" on line 6.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: I move the adoption of the amendment. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead (Mr. Witter) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: And also substitute the word "require" for the word "request" on the same line.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend by inserting after the word "of" on line 5 in the blank space in parentheses the words "the name of his office being herein inserted."

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 8.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Middleton) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 9 by inserting the word "thereon" after the word "settlers" on line 2.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 10 is stricken out and the following substituted: "The Legislative Assembly shall pass laws prohibiting the granting of free passes or the sale of tickets at a discount by any railroad or other transportation company to any state, county, district or municipal officers, except sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables and stock inspectors."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I move that the substitute for Section 10 be stricken out entirely.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move to amend the amendment by substituting Section 10 as in the printed copy.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The printed copy remains before the convention and is the subject for consideration. The amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole was to strike it out and substitute the amendment as read. There is an amendment now offered to strike out the substitute.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: My motion is to amend the amendment of the gentleman from Custer by substituting Section 10 as in the printed copy.

The President: That, as an amendment, would not be in order, because we have the printed copy of Section 10 before the convention for consideration, and neither of the two motions of the gentleman from Custer can be in order for the reason that the Committee of the Whole offered a substitute as an amendment. The gentleman moves that that substitute be stricken out. The rejection of the amendment would effect the same purpose. Hence, the question now is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that the amendment recommended by the Committee of the Whole be rejected.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I offer a substitute.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Custer to reject the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I hardly think that motion is in order. A vote to adopt the substitute as reported by the Committee of the Whole would have the same effect as a motion to reject it. It would be the same thing.

The President: The motion to reject is a motion that the Chair is not familiar with. The question then would be upon the adoption. The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers to amend by offering a substitute which is in order.

The Clerk read the said substitute as offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, as follows: Section 10. That no railroad company or other public transportation company within this State shall give or sell at a discount any ticket or pass to, or carry any judiciary officer or member of the Legislative Assembly of this State for any less sum or price than charged by said company at the regular fare for carrying passengers. Nor shall any such judiciary officer or member of the Legislative Assembly receive any such ticket or pass, or ride in any car, boat or carriage or other vehicle of transportation for less than the regular fare charged therefor to passengers. And any such company or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall forfeit and pay to the State the sum of one thousand dollars for each such violation, to be recovered in a district court where such violation occurs. And every such judiciary officer or member of the Legislative Assembly violating the provisions of this section shall forfeit such office and be forever disqualified from holding any office of profit or emolument in this State. And the Legislature shall enact such laws as may be necessary to more effectually carry the provisions of this section into effect.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: The reason why I object to this section is that it partakes so strongly of legislation that I do not think it proper matter to be incorporated into the constitution, and especially is the substitute offered by my friend from Deer Lodge very obnoxious indeed.

The President: If the gentleman will indulge the Chair the question will be put before the convention and then the gentleman can have the floor.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the original section, that all the amendments be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The President: There is a motion preceding that,—the substitute offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I call for the ayes and nays on the proposition.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Before the ayes and nays are called on that—(interrupted).

The President: The question to lay on the table is not debatable. The question the convention is now considering is to lay on the table.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I believe I do not exactly understand what we are voting on.

The President: The question is to lay on the table the resolution offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge as a substitute for Section 10.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: As I understand, we are now acting on the report of the Committee of the Whole.

The President: Yes sir; and this is the amendment to the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Does this carry the report of the Committee of the Whole?

The President: Yes sir, so far as that section is concerned, it carries the report with it.

The Clerk called the roll for the ayes and nays on the question of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) to lay on the table the substitute offered by the Committee of the Whole with all the amendments thereto.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Browne, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Cardwell, Chessman, Craven, Durfee, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Whitehill, Winston, Witter—13.

Nays: Breen, Buford, Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Eaton, Gillette, Hershfield, Hobson, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Watson, Mr. President—27.

Absent: Burns, A. F.; Mayger, Rickards, Schmidt, Webster—5.

The Chair announced the vote.

The President: The substitute offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge together with the amendments proposed by the Committee of the Whole and all of Section 10 are laid on the table.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I offer the following to the section.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers the following as a substitute for Section 10.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I rise to a point of order. We are acting upon a report of the Committee of the Whole and Section 10 and a substitute and amendment have been laid upon the table.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to insert that as a new section.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: That would not be in order at this time. It will be in order after the amendments of the Committee of the Whole have been considered.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to have it read for information.

The President: The Clerk will read the substitute offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke for information.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I object.

The President: The reading is objected to. The Clerk will proceed with the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 11.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I call for the ayes and nays.

The Chair put the question on the call for the ayes and nays and there not being a sufficient number to order the ayes and nays, the Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 15 in the affirmative to 16 in the negative.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 12.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, we witnessed some few days ago here a strong effort on the part of the convention to protect women—to give them the right of suffrage—certainly that simply says that they may have the power to protect themselves. The Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects thought that while this convention was willing enough to concede the proposition to them, we would concede to them the right to protect property which they have acquired and which they may hereafter acquire; and I think it is perfectly right and just and certainly the gentleman that voted in favor of granting the right of suffrage to women ought to be gallant enough to sustain this section.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: The gentleman is a little off laughter on his calculations, a very unusual thing for him, but the friends of female suffrage were fighting to have the steps in the hands of the Legislature—the representatives of the people—so that it might be bestowed if necessary; and as this matter of property is left exclusively in the hands of the legislature, I will propose to let it remain there. It is perfectly safe there; that is where we wanted the suffrage question put and if we can put the property question there, it will be perfectly safe. The majority of the people that came here will respect the rights of the ladies and what we have contended for all through is not to restrict but to leave all these doubtful questions that were legitimate in the hands of the Legislature or in other words in the hands of the people. Let the Legislature have ample power to protect the rights of the females in the enjoyment of their property just as they would have if their hands had not been tied.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: I think that this Section 42 ought to be stricken out. The law as it now stands says that females shall have the same right to any property as males, and leaves it right there, without requiring any record of their property. I know of suits in progress now to determine whether the property belongs to the husband or the wife and the main point in this was to require the women to keep a record of their property so that we might know to whom the property belonged, and inasmuch as the last Legislature voted to do that and just left it in such shape that they might have the same right to any property as males, we thought it right to make it obligatory on the part of the Legislature to say what property belonged to married women.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I hope this section will not be stricken out. There is no subject about which there is so much confusion among the lawyers as upon the rights of property, and this section does fix those rights, and it further directs the Legislature to pass laws to determine the rights of property. I think it ought to remain. It may be said that the Legislature will pass laws covering this matter, nevertheless the Legislature has not passed laws on this and now lawyers are all at sea when questions come up regarding what property the widow is entitled to. It has to be decided by the courts before anybody can tell what is the law. There has never been any decision of the Supreme Court of this Territory to tell what it is and I am in favor of the section.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: The section simply calls upon the Legislature to enact such laws as will define and secure to women their property rights. Now, anybody that will examine the statutes of this Territory will observe that the Legislature has intended at least to set out and define and protect those rights and would place women on exactly an equal footing with men so far as their property rights are concerned, and if they have not done that as yet, it is simply an error of judgment and not of intention so that this section will not aid the Legislature in any other respect. They have attempted to do that already and I believe have pretty nearly succeeded in doing it. I believe that the statutes of this Territory at the present time define property in such a way that women's property rights are identical with those of men; and if it be a fact that this does not tend to aid the Legislature in arriving at a mode of particularly and clearly defining these things, of what earthly use is it? The tendency of legislation within the last 40 or 45 years in this Territory has been in the direction of placing the property rights of women on an identical footing with those of men and undoubtedly the tendency of legislation will continue in that way, and legislators to come, so far as their judgment goes, will undertake to define these matters if they are not sufficiently defined now. Now, what is the use of lumbering up a constitution with the provision? It is perfectly safe in the hands of the Legislature and this thing is simply a direction and does not indicate to them how to get at those matters. To my knowledge, the last three or four Legislatures have attempted in the best way they knew how to define these rights and that is all they can do or will do under this provision if it remains. It does not seem to me necessary to have such a provision in the constitution.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: In looking at the constitution on the rights of married women I find that Section 42 here is copied almost verbatim from Section 1432 of the constitution on that subject and it reads as follows: That the property owned by a married woman before her marriage, or that which she may acquire on her marriage, and the increase and use and profits thereof shall be exempt from all debts &c., and provides for the following declaration of a married woman as to her intention of doing business which is covered by this section in this constitution. Now, I have noticed there is a spirit prevailing that in the report that has been made by the committee where they have inserted a section, every member of that committee stands by it because it is simply in there, and they stand by it just simply for that reason—because it happens to be there. Now, sir, I for one am not in favor of legislation in this body. There is not anything in this section except pure legislation, as has been said by other members. This has been provided for by legislation for 20 years and it is safe to say that the Legislative Assembly will carry out the intention of that section without any direction from this convention.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I would like to ask Mr. Goddard to read also Sections 1439 and 1442. It is provided for more clearly in those sections of the constitution. It is already in the laws of the Territory.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I submit that there is not a section there that has any reference to the common property of the husband and wife. This section as we have it here directs the Legislature to provide and define the rights of the woman in relation to her separate property as well as in common with her husband, and I submit that this section here is not provided for in any section of the constitution that the gentleman has read. I think it is proper to allow it to remain if only for that very point. There is more confusion than anything else in regard to what are the rights of her own property.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I doubt very much whether this thing is ever settled very satisfactorily by a majority of this convention here or by a majority of the people here until some radical step is taken in the right direction, and I, therefore, ask to offer a substitute for the section. I think it will provide a panacea for all the ills in this connection and bring us out of the valley of the shadow of tribulation, if not death, and give us this temporary relief.

The President: The gentleman from Custer offers the following as a substitute for Section 12, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: The property rights and political rights of married women shall in all respects be placed upon an equality with the property and political rights of men.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman stated the motion.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: The gentleman from Custer does not come to the point. The law says they shall have the same right to any property that men have. Now, the question is to determine whose property that is. Here is a married man who has horses and cattle and all kind of property, and the wife has the same right to own it as he has. Well, now, I have known a suit brought where the wife claimed the property and it was not on record; and all we want is that the property of the wife shall be placed on record so that you shall know whose property it is. She has the same right to own it, but it ought to be put on record.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move that Section 12 and the amendments offered to it be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: On that motion I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: There being a sufficient number to call for the ayes and nays, they will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I would inquire whether, if the motion prevails, it will lay Section 12 as printed on the table.

The President: Yes sir.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Burns, A. F., Carpenter, Cauby, Collins, Craven, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marriion, Marshall, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitt, Schmidl, Stapleton, Whitehill, Winston, Witter—38.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, E., Callaway, Cardwell, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Gaylord, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Knowles, Kennedy, Kohrs, Mayger, McAdow, Myers, Parberry, Robinson, Sargent, Toole, Jos. K., Toole, J. R., Warren, Watson, Mr. President—32.

Absent: Bradleton, Burns, A. J., Hogan, Rickards, Webster—5.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to lay on the table carried.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move to amend the proposition by striking out in Section 4 the words, "from locomotives on railroads."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren: I move to amend by striking out Section 4.

The President: The motion is not in order.

Mr. Joy of Park: I would like to amend the gentleman's amendment further by striking out the word in the next clause, "or from other cause."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: It seems to me that all these matters are out of order. We are still acting upon the report of the committee.

The Chairman reported that the convention had acted upon the report of that committee.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I understand that my motion is now before the house?

The President: Yes, sir, but there is another motion to amend further by striking out the words, "or from any other cause."

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I undertake to say that the adoption of the amendment to the amendment would possibly defeat the intention of the committee who introduced this section. While the effect of the adoption of the amendment which I propose, I undertake to say would perhaps better carry out the intentions of that committee than to leave that language in. While upon its face such legislation is for the purpose of protecting property from damage, its real effect is to protect corporations from the effects of their acts whether they arise from negligence or accident. For instance in the absence of any such legislation as the convention would here direct the Legislature to enact, the railroad companies are responsible for the stock that they kill, but if in order to protect the stock from being killed, it is enacted that they shall fence their roads why, whenever they comply with that law, they have a prima facie defense against the claim of the owner of the stock. The consequence is that we require some such law as would require them to put spark catchers on their locomotives. Then if the damage is occasioned from fires there is a prima facie defense for them if they show that they complied with the law and they are liable for the damage if there is any. I remember some years ago, when the legislators undertook to enact a law requiring railroads to plough furrows. It was impossible for the owners of stock to prove that there was any negligence on the part of the railroad company, provided the company showed that they had plowed these furrows, in the face of the fact that the railroad company would be responsible just the same as anybody else would, for damage done to property. That is my reason for moving to strike out that language.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I am heartily in accord with the gentleman. Now, I wish to strike out in line 2 the words "from locomotives on railroads", and after the word "any" the word "other"; so that it may read, "The Legislative Assembly shall enact suitable laws to prevent the destruction by fire from any cause of the grasses and forests upon the lands of the state or upon the lands of public domain" &c.

The amendment was seconded.

The President: The gentleman from Park offers to amend the amendment offered by the gentleman from Meagher by striking out the words "or from" and the word "other" in line two of Section 4.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Park and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the motion as amended to strike out the words, "from locomotives from railroads" in line 2 of Section 4, so that the section will then read if amended, "The Legislative Assembly shall enact suitable laws to prevent the destruction by fire from any cause of grasses and forests upon lands of the state."

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Meagher, and a vote being taken it was declared carried.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move to strike out Section 4.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers to amend by inserting after the words "so help me God"—if an affirmation—"under the pains and penalties of perjury."

The motion was seconded.

The Clerk read the section as the same would be amended if the amendment prevailed as follows: "I do solemnly swear that I will support, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States and the State of Montana, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office (here insert the name of the office) according to law and the best of my abilities; if an oath "so help me God" and after the same words in parentheses, if on affirmation, "under the pains and penalties of perjury."

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Now, suppose a man who swore to that oath was a Quaker. Now, if you put that in there, there ought to be no objection to putting a little prayer at the end of the affirmation, that God will help that Quaker to tell the truth, but when you make the Quaker take the affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury, you are making the Quaker a sort of individual.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: If this is not adopted, I submit that the words "or affirm" in brackets should be stricken out.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 20 in the affirmative to 24 in the negative.

Mr. Schmidt of Silver Bow: I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers to amend Section 6 of Proposition 28 by inserting after the words, "reason for" the words "strictly and purely" so as to read, "No perpetuities shall be allowed except for strictly and purely charitable purposes."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I do not see that that strengthens the sense of the sentence at all. It says, "for charitable purposes". Now, no other construction can be placed upon that except for charitable purposes and I think the gentleman's amendment is entirely superfluous, and is just wasting the time of the convention and would not accomplish anything.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Schmidt, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula sent up an amendment.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula also sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula offers a new section to be numbered Section 10, as follows: "No railroad or transportation company or any agent, officer or employee thereof, shall grant free passes or tickets or pass or ticket at a discount to members of the Legislative Assembly or any state or county or municipal officer, and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket by a member of the Legislative Assembly or any such officer or officers shall work a forfeiture of his or their office and the emoluments thereof; and any railroad or transportation company violating any provision of this section shall forfeit to the state five hundred dollars for each and every violation thereof, to be recovered by an action at law.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I offer the following as a substitute for the gentleman's motion.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I offer an amendment to it so as to bring it within the rule. Strike out all except "legislator" strike out "state, county and other municipal officers" and leave it to the Legislature alone.

The motion was seconded.

The President: There is an amendment offered by Mr. Marshall which the Clerk will read. It refers to Section 9. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) also offers a substitute for Section 10. The Chair is in doubt as to admitting this motion. With the exception of the penalty it is practically the same as the one voted down or laid upon the table, which can be read at any time by a motion to take from the table and reconsider; and if we go on allowing motions to be renewed simply by the change of a word, we can keep on indefinitely.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I sent up an amendment to Section 9.

The President: There is an amendment offered by Mr. Marshall of Missoula.

The Clerk read the same, as follows: Add the following at the end of Section 9. "Provided that all school land in the corporate limits of any incorporated city or town within a mile of such limits worth as much as $50 per acre shall be sold in tracts of not more than 5 acres each, and not more than one-half of such lands shall be sold before the year 1895.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move to lay the amendment on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow be adopted. The gentleman from Silver Bow moves to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Out of courtesy to the gentleman, I will withdraw my motion for a moment.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: Mr. President, I consider this matter a very important proposition. There may be many sections of school lands in the territory to which it is applicable but there is one particular section that I do not know of, that it applies to, and I think it would be a good thing to restrict the legislature with regard to the sale of that section. It is Section 16 that lies adjoining the city of Missoula immediately west of the city between Missoula and the new race track, and has been lately established at a large expense—$10,000 or $12,000, and worth now they say or generally estimated at being worth $100,000. Missoula, as we all know, is a growing city. This section is located exactly where, if the city expands, it will cover the section. If it is sold in 40 acre tracts or 160 acre tracts or any other except small tracts, it will go into the hands of rich capitalists—speculators—against whom there can be no general competition in the sales. They will buy it up for purposes of speculation and will sell it out at an immense profit. I believe that the school funds ought to have the benefit of that profit. I believe that selling it out in small tracts and giving everybody—men of moderate means—a chance to buy a home there, will be of infinitely more advantage not only to the city of Missoula but to the school funds. Section 9 provides that actual settlers shall have the preference. The laws of the United States I believe give an actual settler upon a quarter of a section of land the right of preference to the whole quarter section. This by itself may be construed to give a person who has settled upon these school lands the preference to buy the whole quarter section I think myself that the matter is important.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I would suggest to my friend that Proposition No. 23, Public Lands, would perhaps be a better place to put this.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: That has been voted down, I believe.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I did not think this proposition had been acted upon.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: The proposition as to Public Lands was—that lands should not be sold. The Educational Article directs that they shall be sold.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: It leaves the matter to the legislature.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: The proposition upon Education leaves it to the legislature to sell when and how it pleases.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: Sell or lease, either one. The legislature is either authorized to sell or lease as it sees fit.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: Yes, sir, it is entirely within the discretion of the legislature and I think that the report upon Public Lands which says that the lands shall never be sold was virtually acted upon if not directly when the proposition upon Education was acted upon. It may be that this proviso, that I propose, might have come in more appropriately in the same section of the article on education, but it did not come in then, and I think it is proper and it should come in at the end of Section 9. That says that an actual settler shall have preference in the disposition of public land. To what extent shall this preference go? Because he has settled on this public land section, will not be a right to buy 40 acres of it in preference to anybody else, or will not have a right to buy 160 acres if he pays the same price that is offered by anybody else. Now, there are many men who would want homesteads upon these lands adjoining cities who would not be able to buy lands at $50 or $100 an acre as this land is worth, and they would be placed outside of that competition. There would be nobody to compete except rich men; and if it is to be sold in 40 or 160 acre tracts, it reaches out of the competition of hundreds of men who would like to have five acres or less of the public lands adjoining the city, and it seems to me that it is proper that this Constitutional Convention should regulate that matter and not leave it to the legislature, and I propose that this convention shall say that land situated as this is—I do not know how many sections there are in the territory in that situation—there may not be any except this one adjoining Missoula—but it does seem to me proper that this Constitutional Convention should regulate how lands as valuable as this land, in the situation that it is, how it shall be sold by the legislatures and to provide that it shall not be sold in tracts of more than 5 acres, and provide that not more than one-half of it shall be sold in less than 5 years. Half of that, that is reserved, will be worth more than the whole now. But if we give to the legislature the power to sell as it pleases, influenced by any syndicate of rich men that might be formed to buy it up to sell it in 160 acre tracts or 40 acre tracts instead of going into the hands of the settlers, it goes into the hands of speculators.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I desire to say one word on this subject. The report of the Committee on Education has been received and adopted by this convention in which it is provided that the school lands may be sold or leased.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Oh no.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Leased or sold as the legislature may see fit and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the legislature. I desire to advocate the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula if that amendment is intended to allow the selling of not less amount than 5 acres, and I think it is. The fact of the case is that the tract of land referred to by the gentleman has already been settled upon by quite a number of settlers owing to the fact that the town has been growing rapidly in the direction of where this school land lies and if there be some arrangement made by the legislature by which this land could be sold or leased certainly the amendment or additional clause to the section offered by the gentleman from Missoula can do no harm, because it will as he says cut off the speculators from becoming possessed of the whole tract of land and reaping a rich reward in the future. It will allow those persons who are now living upon the land to obtain title to their land and it will result in the greatest benefit to the future state because every house that is built upon that tract adds eventually to the value of what remains of the land not built upon. I believe, sir, that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula should prevail.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I would like to read the other side of the section that has already been adopted in the article on education (reading). The governor, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Secretary of State and Attorney General shall constitute the State Board of Land Commissioners which shall have the direction, control, leasing and sale of the school lands of the state and lands granted or which may hereafter be granted for the support and benefit of the various State Educational Institutions under such regulations and restrictions as may be prescribed by law."

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: If my friend will allow me, he will see that that section applies not only to the school lands but to the other lands of the state and that the part of the constitution which treats on this subject of lands, is Proposition No. 23 on Public Lands which has not come up yet and where everything which we choose to adopt in reference to this matter should come in.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I am not particular as to what part of the constitution it should be provided in.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that this matter be placed upon the General File to be considered with Proposition No. 23, the report of the committee of which Mr. Callaway is Chairman—Public Lands.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Before the matter is put, I call attention of the convention to Section 4 of Proposition 17, General File No. 16 in which it is provided that the Governor, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Secretary of State and Attorney General, shall constitute a State Board of Land Commissioners, which shall have the direction, control, leasing and sale of the school lands of the state and the lands granted or which may hereafter be granted for the support and benefit of the various State Educational Institutions, under such regulations and restrictions as may be required by law. It may be remembered that I offered an amendment to this article providing that the legislature might—or rather, it was an amendment to the Resolution No. 8 offered by the gentleman, Mr. Luce which was considered in connection with Proposition No. 17. The amendment offered was withdrawn upon the suggestion of some gentleman because it was contended at that time that Section 4 gave to the legislature ample power to provide for the sale of and leasing of school lands. Now sir, if this proposition is germane to the subject under consideration I believe that we should take it up and consider it at this time. If it can consistently become a part of Proposition No. 28, we ought to consider it at this time and make it a part of that proposition, and I am willing if it is more germane or more pertinent to the proposition that is here—Proposition No. 23—that it should be considered in connection with that. While discussing that, it ought to be considered by this convention at the same time.

The President: The question is upon the reference to this motion to amend to the Committee of the Whole by considering in connection with Proposition 23.

The Chair put the question on the said motion stated and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The matter is referred to the Committee of the Whole to be considered in connection with Proposition No. 23. There is now an amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to constitute a new section. The number is not given, but that can be arranged, should it be adopted.

The Clerk read as follows: The legislature shall provide for the punishment of any railroad company or other corporation or any officer or employe of any corporation or of any person who shall attempt in any manner to bribe, corrupt or improperly influence any officer of this state, &c."

Mr. Maginnis: I move the adoption of that section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move to add the words "or citizen" after the word "officer."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: I think Sections 42 and 43 in the article on Legislative Departments cover that.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I only intended to offer that as a substitute to Mr. Kennedy's motion which was read out of order I think.

The President: That was withdrawn.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Very well, then, let this be withdrawn.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Offered an additional section.

The President: The gentleman from Park desires to offer a section to be incorporated in Article 27, which reads as follows:

The Clerk read: "No railroad or other transportation company or any agent, officer or employee thereof shall grant free passes or tickets or passes, or passes or tickets at a discount to members of the Legislative Assembly or of the Judiciary, and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket by a member of the Legislative Assembly or such judiciary shall work forfeiture of his or her office and the emoluments thereof and any railroad or transportation company violating the provisions of this section shall forfeit to the state $1,000 for each and every violation thereof to be recovered by an action at law."

Mr. Eaton of Park: I move the adoption of that section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I rise to a point of order. The matter contained in the amendment offered by the gentleman has been passed upon by this convention almost verbatim and it occurs to me that this matter is being prolonged unnecessarily.

Mr. Eaton of Park: In reply to that I simply desire to say that this section as now proposed covers simply members of the Legislative Assembly and of the judiciary, and debar, as regards the former section, all state officers and county officers. It is entirely different from anything that has been voted on before, so far as I know of.

The President: The proposition is materially different in the officers that it embraces. The Chair does not desire to take the responsibility of testing a question of so much importance as this, and does not desire

EDWARD BURNS
LOUIS ROTWITT

ALFRED MYERS
CHARLES S. WARREN
WARREN C. GILLETTE

HENRY KNIPPENBERG

to rule out or rule in any proposition of this kind. It can easily be reached by a vote of the convention as to whether it shall be considered or not. The Chair prefers that the convention shall determine these matters involving these questions.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Park, but I think there is a very important omission. It applies only to members of the Legislature and to members of the Judiciary. It omits the State Board of Equalization who are to assess this property in different counties and omits the County Board of Equalization.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I will accept that amendment.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the amendment and original proposition be laid upon the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. The motion is to lay the proposition of the gentleman from Park and the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke on the table.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Burleigh, Burns, Chessman, Craven, Dyer, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hershfield, Hartman, Haskell, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Reek, Sargent, Toole, J. K., Whitehill, Winston,—29.

Nays: Aiken, Breen, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. F., Burns, Edward, Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Eaton, Gaylord, Gillette, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Marshall, Mayger, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdall, Robinson, Rotwitt, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K., Warren, Watson, Witter, Mr. President,—42.

Absent: Brazleton, Browne, Rickards, Webster—4.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion lost.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and which has been accepted by the mover of the motion. The Clerk will read the original proposition offered by the gentleman from Park as amended by the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The Clerk read as follows: "No railroad or other transportation company or any agent, officer or employee thereof shall grant free passes or tickets at a discount to members of the Legislative Assembly or of the Judiciary, or any member of the State or County Board of Equalization; and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket by a member of the Legislative Assembly or of such Judiciary or any member of the State or County Board of Equalization shall work a forfeiture of his or their office and the emoluments thereof; and any railroad or other transportation company violating the provisions of this section shall forfeit to the state $1,000 for each and every violation thereof to be recovered by an action at law."

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: It seems to me that covers every point that we have been arguing here, except one. The provisions are alright, but it does not provide that the Legislature at the first session after this constitution has been adopted shall enact such laws as will enforce this. It can lie on the legislative desks and they can pass such laws without this. I desire it should be amended in that way: that the Legislature at the first term, after this constitution has been adopted, shall enact such laws as will enforce this provision.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I have noticed that when this convention runs on to legislation, that it takes up a large amount of time in discussion. The fundamental organic law is usually so clear and plain that two or three days in the discussion of a proposition is sufficient. It seems to me that if we had devoted our attention to clear fundamental law we would have been through here two weeks ago. Now, I feel free to say that I regard this section simply as so much buncombe. I impugn the motives of no member on the floor who supports or who has introduced it or anything similar to it, but it seems to me that it is clearly legislation. It has been argued that this section or a section similar to it was held in very high esteem when they voted on the constitution in 1884. I am not aware that that proposition was submitted as a separate proposition. The section, I presume, got about the same number of votes that the constitution in general did. It has been alleged that 90 per cent of the people are in favor of a proposition of this kind. If that is so, is it not entirely safe to leave the matter to the legislators of the future. It does not go far enough. We would provide that any man can have the privilege of the dining car without providing full compensation therefor and the services of the bootblack without paying full compensation therefor. Why, if we give full credence and force to all the propositions of this section, when railroads in the future got to cutting rates, certain officers of the State could not have the same advantages which are accorded to the public. A few years ago, the railroads in Minneapolis or St. Paul sold round trip tickets to Chicago at 50 cents. I understand that gentlemen of the Legislature and the officers of the State would be precluded from the advantages thus offered to the general public. It seems to me that if this is a favorite proposition in the eyes of the people there is no question that they will see that their sentiments are enacted into law. You talk about officers. You do not know that those officers 25 years hence will be in existence. It seems to me purely legislation and matter which can well be left with the people.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the proposition.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I call for the ayes and nays.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to explain my bit in reference to this. I offered an amendment yesterday to leave this matter to the Legislature—give the future legislators the power to pass laws in reference to what is generally considered to be a strong public sentiment in regard to this matter. My objection to this is that it affects all railroad and transportation companies, and, as I said the other day, there may be a very serious question as to whether or not this can be made applicable to a railroad or transportation company, the charter of which was granted by the United States, and I think it better to leave it to the Legislative Assembly. I do not think there ought to be anything put in the constitution as to which there would be any doubt regarding its constitutionality, and, therefore, I shall vote no.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Alken, Breen, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Eaton, Gaylord, Gillette, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Marshall, Mayger, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Robinson, Rotwill, Schmidt, Stapleton, Watson, Mr. President—38.

Nays: Bickford, Brazleton, Browne, Bullard, Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Chessman, Craven, Dyer, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Reek, Sargent, Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter—35.

Absent: Rickards, Webster—2.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the proposition of the gentleman from Park carried.

The President: Are there any other amendments to be offered to Proposition No. 28?

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move that the proposition be placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I offer an amendment to Section 4.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move that the convention do now take a recess until 2 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Madison, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 24 in the affirmative to 37 in the negative.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, offers to amend Section 4 by striking out all of the words "to-wit" in line 3 up to and including the word "abilities" in line 6 and inserting the following: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the State of Montana and that I will discharge the duties of my office with fidelity; that I have not paid or contributed or promised to pay or contribute either directly or indirectly any money or other valuable thing to procure my nomination or election or appointment except for necessary and proper expenses expressly authorized by law; that I have not knowingly violated any election law in this State or permitted it to be done by others in my behalf; that I will not individually receive directly or indirectly any money or other valuable thing for performance or non-performance of any act of duty pertaining to my office other than the compensation allowed by law. So help me God."

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Let me call attention to one error in the printed copy where the word "territory" occurs: it should be "state."

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move that Proposition No. 28 be placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It seems to me that there are so many amendments that it ought to be engrossed before being placed upon its final passage. I move that it be referred to the Engrossing Committee. It certainly should be engrossed before it is read and placed upon its final passage.

The motion of the gentleman from Custer was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I would just like to make a suggestion with reference to this proposition, that it be printed. I think it embraces the miscellaneous subjects and I think it would be very well to have it printed with the amendments and placed on the desks of the members.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, there is a little amendment I desire to offer and I think probably the convention will concur with me, that ought to be placed in this bill. I do not think that it belongs to any other part of our constitution, and it probably belongs here. That is that the legislative power of this State shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation not prohibited by this constitution or the constitution of the United States, whether enumerated in this constitution or not; so as to clothe the Legislature with power to legislate on all proper subjects which belong to the police power of the State. I offer that as a section to be numbered Section 13.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: This motion is withheld for the purpose of amendment. I have six or seven amendments which I propose to offer to this proposition.

The President: The motion to commit takes precedence of the motion to amend.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I am willing to accept the suggestion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and I am willing to amend, and I move that it be referred to the engrossing committee with instructions to engross and have printed.

The Clerk read Mr. Robinson's amendment

The President: Where does the gentleman desire to have this placed?

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I move that it be considered with Proposition No. 19 in regard to Legislative Departments.

The President: Is there a second to the motion to adopt?

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the amendment be adopted. The gentleman from Madison moves that it be considered with Proposition No. 19 with the Legislative Departments in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I was going to suggest that the report of the Committee on Legislative Departments recommends that the legislative power of the State shall be vested in the Legislative Assembly. It seems to me that that would cover—interrupted.

The President: This is in favor of referring to the Committee of the Whole.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Hickman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried, and the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the convention now take a recess until 2 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 2 P. M.

Friday, August 2nd, 1889. Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 2 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move that the convention go into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering Proposition No. 19, article on Legislative Departments.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Chair would state that Mr. Graves desired to be excused this afternoon. If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused.

The Chair stated the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I renew the motion, Mr. President, that I made before the adjournment.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I will withdraw my motion for that purpose.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: My motion was that Article 28 be referred to the Engrossing Committee for the purpose of being engrossed in order to be printed.

The Chair put the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, that Article 28 be referred to the Engrossing Committee and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The question is now that the convention do resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Article on Legislative Departments.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the said gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President conducted Mr. Eaton, of Park, to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Eaton, of Park, in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the first section of Proposition No. 19, Article on Legislative Departments.

The Clerk read Section 1 as follows:

Section 1. The legislative power shall be vested in a Senate and House of Representatives, which shall be designated "the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana."

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I think there was a resolution referred to the Committee of the Whole today in connection to this proposition—Mr. Robinson's resolution.

The Chairman: If it be the pleasure of the Committee that this be considered now, the resolution will be read for the information of the Committee.

The Clerk read Mr. Robinson's resolution as follows: That the Legislative Power of this State shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation not prohibited by this constitution or the constitution of the United States whether enumerated in this constitution or not.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I move you, sir, that that be added to this section, connected by the word "and".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: There is no necessity for putting this provision in the constitution. When you have said the legislative power of Montana Territory shall be vested in the Legislature of the State of Montana, you have said all that is necessary. By that term you have granted the legislative power, whatever that is, and there is no necessity whatever for putting this provision in the constitution. The general rule is that when you are granting to a legislative body the legislative power, in a State constitution, you have granted them the power to legislate upon all rightful subjects of legislation. That term is implied, and it goes to that extent, or so far as it is limited by the provisions of the constitution. The constitution may limit the legislative power, but so far as it is not limited by the constitution it will have that power.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to make substantially the same statement, that whenever the legislative power is vested, it is a matter of course implied that all authority exists there except such as is in conflict with the constitution of the United States and this constitution.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge, called for the reading of the amendment.

The Clerk read the same.

The Chair put the question of the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 2 as follows:

Sec. 2. Senators shall be elected for the term of four years, and Representatives for the term of two years, except as is otherwise provided in this constitution.

There being no amendment to Sec. 2, the Clerk read Sec. 3, as follows:

Sec. 3. No person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained the age of twenty-one years, or a Senator who shall not have attained the age of twenty-five years, and who shall not be a citizen of the United States and who shall not (for at least twelve months next preceding his election) have resided within the county or district in which he shall be elected.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I move to strike out the words "twenty-five" and insert the words "twenty-one" where they occur on the second line after the words "age of."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Myers, of Yellowstone: I simply wish to say, gentlemen of the convention, that Montana has produced the famous race horse "Montana Regent" and the famous race horse "Spokane" and there is no telling what kind of material she may produce in the future.

The Chair put the question of the said amendment proposed for the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Myers, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Sec. 3, the Clerk read Sec. 4, as follows:

Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly of this State until otherwise provided by law, shall consist of sixteen members of the Senate and fifty members of the House of Representatives. It shall be the duty of the first Legislative Assembly to divide the State into senatorial and representative districts, but there shall be no more than one Senator from each county. The senatorial districts shall be numbered from one consecutively to correspond with the number of counties. The Senators shall be divided into two classes. Those elected from districts numbered odd numbers shall constitute one class and those elected from districts numbered the even numbers shall constitute the other class; and when any additional Senator shall be provided for by law his class shall be determined by lot. One-half of the Senators elected to the first Legislative Assembly shall hold office for one year, and the other half for three years; and it shall be determined by lot immediately after the organization of the Senate whether the Senators from the odd or even numbered districts shall hold for one or three years.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I think I ought to make a statement to the committee in regard to this section. I believe it is the only proposition embodied in the article about which there was a difference of opinion among the members of the committee. The committee were not unanimous with respect to it, but there were just enough to report the facts to the committee. They were equally divided, one member being absent at the former consideration of it. And in view of the fact, Mr. Chairman, that the Apportionment Committee were appointed with special reference to the apportionment of the Territory, and doubtless intended to be charged with the responsibility of fixing the number of persons who shall constitute the First Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, as well as the apportionment of the State, and that subject having been committed to that committee in the constitutional convention which met four years ago, I move that when the committee rise it reports this proposition back with the recommendation that it be referred to the Committee on Apportionment and Representation.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I hope this motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County will not prevail. We have been here about four weeks working upon this constitution. This Proposition No. 19 has been considered in committee and reported to this convention for its action—its adoption or rejection. It looks to me as though nothing could be gained but everything lost in the way of time by this reference, and whether it is to avoid action upon the matter now in convention or for the purpose of having it more deliberately considered is a question I care nothing about. It is a matter that has been as fully canvassed as any question that has or will come before this convention, and I believe the gentlemen of the convention are as well prepared to act upon it now as at any other time; and if we are to get through with our labors here in order to submit this constitution to the people for their ratification before the next meeting of Congress, I suggest that we had better proceed with these matters as they come up in their regular order here and not delay them for any purpose whatever. I hope as the matter is before the committee and as it has been considered by most of the members of the convention, that it will now take its regular course and be acted upon by the convention.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: This proposition was reported here July 19th; consequently, it has been on the desks of the members here for about thirteen days, and they are very likely as well prepared to consider this now as they ever will be; and further, I have not heard any request from the Committee on Apportionment that it be referred to that committee, and unless they need it or want it for any other purpose, I don't know why it should be sent to that committee, or recommended to be sent to that committee by the convention. It seems to me that it is proper to go on with this now. This is the proper place for it.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I certainly think that motion should prevail. I think this matter should be referred to the Committee on Apportionment. I think that is what the committee was appointed for, and I think you will expedite matters by doing so. For they will bring in a report recommending the number of Senators that each county shall have in the Senate. Now, so far as time is concerned, I think the time that has been lost would cut no figure in the work we are to do, if we have to stay here all winter. I think the clamor that we are wasting time comes mostly from the men who consume the most of the time of the convention. So I think this matter ought to be referred to the Committee on Apportionment. It is their duty and not the duty of the Legislative Committee.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: As has been suggested by the gentleman from Gallatin, the whole proposition has been here for two weeks, and I presume every member has studied it perhaps more fully than he has any other proposition that has been laid on his table. It certainly is properly a part of the legislative article. The Committee on Apportionment and Representation is the smallest committee of all the standing committees. It has only three members. It has a vast amount of work to do. The matter of dividing the State, in the shape that it is, into fifty or more districts for the purposes of representations is probably the most difficult task that any committee has had to cope with in this convention, and I am satisfied, from what the Chairman of that committee has said to me, that they have enough to do without taking this matter under consideration. It will come back here to the convention undoubtedly in the identical shape that it is now. I have every reason to believe that. Now, why not consider it at this time while we are here prepared to take this legislative article up, it being properly a part of that article and not properly belonging to any other committee or to any other part of the constitution. It seems to me we ought to take it up and consider it now in connection with the rest of the legislative departments.

Mr. Joy, of Park: It seems to me, from the argument made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, that he is in favor of disposing of this now. He suggests that the two committees are uncertain, and suggests what committee this belongs to, and it seems to me we would be no better off and arrive no sooner at the certainty of the thing by referring it to some other committee. It would simply have the effect of delaying this matter and would take two or three days before it would come up again in the Committee of the Whole. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that it is always proper, and a custom that is always followed in every constitution that under the head of the Legislative Departments it shall be indicated of what number the two Houses shall consist—how many members—the same as it does in this case. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this matter to refer this section to another committee will delay it for some time, and I hope the committee will take this matter up now and dispose of it, and I hope we will proceed with it at once.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I think I ought to say to the committee that when this was reported back I had more than one interview with the Chairman of the Committee on Apportionment and Representation in regard to this matter, and was informed by him that the Committee on Apportionment had assumed jurisdiction of the subject; and I came at once to the conclusion that if that committee had gone to work for the purpose of making an apportionment of the State, the most important consideration was, what number of persons should constitute the Legislative Assembly, and if by the action of the convention at this time, or of this committee, they should change the number either of the House or of the Senate, it would necessarily follow—if they should change it from the number agreed upon by the committees as they have agreed upon it—it would necessarily follow that all of the work that had been done towards a proper and equitable apportionment of the State would go for nothing. Simply for that reason and no other, I make that motion.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: As the Chairman of the Committee of Apportionment and Representation, I simply desire to say for myself individually—and I desire to say here that this matter has not been discussed in the committee—that it is a matter of indifference whether this is considered by the committee or not. In a conversation with the Chairman of the Committee on Legislative Departments, when this matter was being discussed by that committee, I told him that I thought they were dealing with a matter that did not belong to that committee. Whatever disposition, however, the Committee of the Whole desires to make of this matter, it is a matter of entire indifference to me. I do not care anything about it one way or the other.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: The argument of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke confirms me in the belief that we should consider this matter now. The committee then would know just what it has to work upon. It seems that that is a question of doubt in both committees, and it should be attended to right now.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would just like to say, Mr. Chairman, that my attention was called when I was speaking before, to the fact that the other constitution that was drafted in 1884 did not provide as has been stated here. I want to correct the gentleman, and anybody that will refer to that constitution of 1884 will notice that in the Legislative Department it is provided how many Senators and Representatives each House shall consist of.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not propose to be misrepresented about this matter nor to make any statement to the committee which is not true. Section 4 in this article is in the old constitution under the head of Legislative Departments and provides that in the first Legislative Assembly the Legislature of the State shall consist of a certain number of persons and afterwards as provided by law, the Senate shall consist of a certain number. Under the head of Apportionment of Representations, Section 47, the matter which we are considering now, as to the first Legislative Assembly it says: "The first Legislative Assembly held under this provision shall be constituted as follows:

The Senate shall consist of the same number of Senators, and the House of Representatives of the same number of Representatives, as the territorial council and the House of Representatives at the time of the admission of the State into the Union, and for that purpose the Council and Representative districts, as then provided by law, shall constitute the Senatorial and Representative districts for the election of Senators and Representatives of the First Legislative Assembly under this constitution."

Mr. Joy, of Park: My only point was that it had come under this head and been so recognized in all constitutions.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, that Sec. 4 be referred to the Committee on Apportionment and Representation and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 32 in the negative to 23 in the affirmative.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend Sec. 4, line 2.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge moves to amend Sec. 4 by striking out the word "fifty" in line 2 and inserting the word "forty".

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I have an amendment to offer.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer offers the following amendment. In line 2, Sec. 4, after the word "fifty" insert the word "five".

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: This amendment is now before the committee, being the amendment of the gentleman from Custer to insert the word "five".

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. Chairman, in connection with the amendment that I offer I simply desire to say this, that in conversing with one or two members of the Committee on Apportionment, I am informed that they find it very difficult to make an apportionment based upon the number "fifty" as provided here, and that to make it upon a basis of fifty-five they find that they can divide the counties up in such shape that in all probability it will be more satisfactory all around, and further that there should be an odd number in case of a tie vote.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, it seems that no committee has had charge of this. This number is quite as satisfactory as any other. Now, if any committee has had charge of this matter, as the gentleman seems to infer, I would like to know the basis of representation.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: 727 to each member. It figures down better and with less fractions. It is more complete and more compact than any other.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I am quite willing to accept the number, but I wanted to know that it had been considered by somebody, and that there was a basis for it.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The question is now on the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, to strike out the word "fifty" in line two and insert "Forty".

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I trust that this motion will prevail. I want to say that we do not need a Legislative Assembly larger than forty members. We have gotten along pretty well with twenty-four, and when we have to assume the burdens and expenses of it all ourselves, I do not see the use of having it more than forty. I think that is pretty liberal. That number would be amply sufficient for any purpose. The expense of fifty-five members is unnecessary. A house of forty members would be just as good a working body as a house of fifty or fifty-five. The expense of it is going to be greater, and it is a useless expense to have any more than that number. If the people were used to it, I would say amen, but I am in favor of limiting it down to forty members. I think that is amply sufficient.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, to insert "forty" in place of the word "fifty", and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move that when the committee rise that it report this section back with a recommendation that it do pass.

The Chairman: According to the rule we have adopted here such motion is unnecessary. When there are no further amendments offered we pass on to the next section.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I would prefer to have a vote taken on my motion.

The motion of the gentleman from Missoula was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 5, as follows:

"Sec. 5. Each member of the First Legislative Assembly, as a compensation for his services, shall receive six dollars for each day's attendance, and twenty cents for each mile necessarily traveled in going to and returning from the seat of government to his residence by the usual traveled route, and shall receive no other compensation, perquisite or allowance whatever. No session of the Legislative Assembly after the first, which may be ninety days, shall exceed sixty days. After the first session the compensation of the members of the Legislative Assembly shall be as provided by law. Provided, that no Legislative Assembly shall fix its own compensation."

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I have an amendment to that section.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to strike out the words "six dollars" and insert "ten dollars" on line 2.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I will state to the committee what amendments I desire to put in there. I am just drawing them up. I desire to amend by striking out of line 2 the word "six" as the per diem of the members of the Legislature, and inserting "five" in lieu thereof. I desire to strike out the word "twenty" and insert "ten", and add to the section after the word "before" "that where passes on railroads have been received by members that those members shall have no mileage whatever. Before they get their per diem they shall make affidavit—(interrupted).

The Chairman: It will be necessary to draw that up and put it as a formal amendment in writing.

The gentleman from Deer Dodge, Mr. Robinson, sent up his amendment in writing.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge moves to amend Section 5 by striking out the word "six" and inserting "five", and striking out "twenty" in line two and inserting "ten"; and inserting after the word "whatever" on line four as follows: "Provided that before any mileage shall be paid to any member of the Legislative Assembly, they shall take and subscribe an oath that they did not travel to the capital on any pass or free ticket."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to ask the gentleman if he will insert one other provision there which will commend it to my consideration, and that is that he shall include in that affidavit the fact that he has not also drank any free whiskey on the trip.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I would ask the gentleman to insert that he shall also swear that the conductor did not fail to collect his fare.

The Chairman: The amendment is divided into three subdivisions. The first will be in line two to erase the word "six" and insert the word "five".

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I think this is about the only proposition which should receive a little consideration, and so far as I am individually concerned, I am in favor of increasing the per diem of the members of the Legislature over the amount reported by the committee. I believe that every gentleman on this floor will admit that the members of the Legislature have not been paid as they should be for their services. They are the law-making power, and they should receive sufficient remuneration to pay their reasonable expenses and not to look to anyone or to anybody for their remuneration. I believe that five dollars a day is not enough. It is as little as the four dollars a day they receive now and ten dollars a day in my opinion is a very reasonable compensation for the services performed. We are getting out of this idea that members of the Legislature should serve for nothing. It is a wrong idea in a republican form of government. That branch of the law-making power should be better paid, in fact, than the Executive or Judiciary for the services rendered, and if we pay them better, it seems to me you will have purer and better laws. There will be less influence to bear upon the few who would be susceptible to influence. I believe that ten dollars a day is a fair compensation, and when my amendment is put before the committee I hope it will carry.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: If the compensation of the members of the Legislature is to be fixed according to the value of the services rendered, I believe that the last two or three Legislatures that have convened should not have had anything, and I do not know but what that rule ought to apply to this convention. I am not in favor of increasing or decreasing the amount of per diem as fixed by this section. I think that six dollars will pay the legitimate expenses of any member of the Legislature. If he wants to indulge in the luxuries of life outside of that, let him pay it out of his own pocket.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: If we have fifty-five members of the House and sixteen members of the Senate, there will be an expense of $126 per day for members alone, and when you come to run out the session to sixty or seventy or ninety days, we will find our Legislatures are going to be rather an expensive luxury. So far as the five dollars per diem is concerned, men do not come to the Legislative Assembly on account of the per diem there is in it. The best men do not come for that purpose. You might just as well say that the men who are here have come here for the four dollars a day that we get. I should think that the members of the convention who have come here for the pittance of four dollars a day would not come any quicker if they got ten dollars a day than they would if they got three dollars a day. It is not the amount of money that induces the best class of men to come. That is not the consideration at all. We cannot afford to pay a higher price than five dollars a day. That would more than pay any man's expenses, depending on how much whiskey he drinks, on the character of the whiskey, or where the capitol is. (Laughter.) Such suggestions as the gentleman from Custer County made are well enough to burlesque and ridicule these things that we are trying to consider, but such suggestions are not compatible with good sense. (Laughter.) No one would entertain such a proposition as that for a moment. It is the correct course for this convention to pursue, and if a convention wants to be carried off by burlesque and ridicule and propositions of that kind, I have nothing to say. I can stand what the balance can. But I am speaking in behalf of and in the interest of the State of Montana. I would like to see a large House, both Senate and House of Representatives, and I would like to see them paid reasonably. If we can draw on the bank on the credit of the State and the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County will foot the bills, I will vote for the higher pay and you can run it as much higher as you like; but as the taxpayers of the State have got to foot these bills, I do not see any reason for raising the number of the Legislature or the compensation so much higher than we can afford. I believe that five dollars a day is enough.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: No doubt it is a laudable incentive that has roused the gentleman from Deer Lodge into activity, but I fail to see the good that is to be derived from these wholesale amendments. The gentleman here at one fell stroke has offered three amendments to this section and I believe that before he is through with this section he will need two or three lawyers to tell him where he stands in the matter. I think if we don't have a care in this matter that we will have to refer back all this matter to the committee, and then all of our deliberations will be fruitless.

The Chair put the question on the first subdivision of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now comes up on the second subdivision which is to strike out the word "twenty" in the second line and insert in lieu thereof the word "ten".

The Chair put the question on the second subdivision of the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The third subdivision is to insert after the word "whatever" on line four the following "Provided that before any mileage shall be paid any member of the Legislative Assembly, they shall take and subscribe an oath that they did not travel to the capital on any pass or free ticket."

The Chair put the question on the third subdivision of the said amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I have an amendment.

The Chairman: There is one amendment still pending. The gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, moves to amend by increasing the per diem to ten dollars per day. The gentleman from Gallatin now offers the following: Amend Section 5 as follows: First, strike out of line five the following words: "after the first, which may be ninety days"; second, out of the same line the word "sixty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "ninety". So that the paragraph in lines four and five shall read "no session of the Legislative Assembly shall exceed ninety days."

There was no second to the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce.

The Chairman: Is there a second to the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade?

The amendment of the gentleman from Cascade was seconded.

Mr. Duffee, of Deer Lodge: I hope that motion will not prevail. I have made a little computation here of what the cost of our State government will be, and I find that, figuring the first session of the Legislative Assembly at ninety days, and the per diem at six dollars per day, and figuring the cost of our Judiciary and the various other State officers, it foots up to $200,340. This does not include mileage. Now, then, I think we have adopted the provision in our article on taxation that the assessment for State purposes shall not exceed two and a half mills on the dollar. Now, then, if the assessed valuation of the Territory is $100,000,000, that would be $250,000 with which to run our State government, and we find that our expenses thus far aggregate the sum of $200,000, leaving us $50,000 for incidentals. Now, where are we going to get the money from to pay for the expenses of our government?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would say also, Mr. Chairman, that the expenses of the State will be about $300,000, possibly a little over, but the revenue derived from the running of it will not all come from ad valorem taxes. We expect to get a good deal of revenue from other sources.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: The gentlemen have left one important item of taxable property out of their calculations. When Montana becomes a State we will have 820 miles of railroad that will be taxable that is not taxed now.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move to strike out in line 5 the words "after the first which may be ninety days," so that the clause will read, "no session of the Legislative Assembly shall exceed sixty days." I will say in support of this that I believe sixty days will be all the time that will be necessary for the Legislative body to act.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Perhaps the reasons ought to be stated why that was made ninety days. It was thought that in view of the fact that the Enabling Act as well as the constitution itself provided that the Legislative Assembly should do certain things in the way of legislation, and that more particularly in view of the fact that the last Legislative Assembly provided for a Code Commission to codify the laws and present them to the first Legislative Assembly, that it will involve a little more time than the ordinary sessions of the Legislature. There are three sub-divisions of the Code that are now in the hands of the Code Commission and should be submitted at the first session of the Legislature, and we thought that this extra time ought to be given on that account.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I will withdraw my motion and modify it. I will move to strike out the words ninety and insert seventy-five.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I think it will be found that the first legislature will have all and more than it can do in ninety days. The Enabling Act and this constitution if it should be adopted will necessitate the change of a great many of the laws that are now on the statute books to conform with the provisions of the constitution. For instance, the change of the Judiciary system as it has been adopted will necessitate another change in the Probate Practice Act and there will be an enormous amount of work to do; that will be undoubtedly more than it will be possible for any Legislature to accomplish in ninety days; and although I am in favor of the ordinary limitation of sixty days I am satisfied that the ordinary Legislature cannot do the work in less than ninety days. And in connection with what the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke said, the entire matter of this Code that will be submitted to the Legislature by the Code Commission will have to be gone over chapter by chapter and section by section, and any person who has ever been in the Legislature can see what an enormous amount of work it is, and what a time it will take to get over it. I do not think the amendment should prevail.

The Chair put the question of the said amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 5, the Clerk read Section 6 as follows:

"Sec. 6. The Legislative Assembly (except the first) shall meet at the seat of government at twelve o'clock noon, on the second Tuesday after the first Monday of January, next succeeding the general election provided by law, and at twelve o'clock noon, on the second Tuesday after the first Monday of January of each alternate year thereafter, and at other times when convened by the Governor. The term of service of the members thereof shall begin the next day after their election, until otherwise provided by law; provided that the first Legislative Assembly shall meet upon the proclamation of the Governor, after the admission of the State into the Union, upon a day to be named in said proclamation, and which shall not be more than fifteen nor less than ten days after the admission of the State into the Union."

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to offer an amendment to that section. On line seven after the word "meet" there ought to be inserted there "at the seat of the government." I move to insert those words.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out the words "the second Tuesday after" wherever they occur in the second and third lines.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I do this for the reason that these words seem entirely incongruous there. It will take a lightning calculator to find out when the Legislature meets. I believe those words ought to be stricken out so that it will read "the Legislature shall meet on the first Monday in January." The only possible objection I can see to this, would be that some one might think it will interfere about being at home New Year's day, but I never knew anything of that kind to interfere with Legislative duty. To make it plain and simple I move to strike out those words.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 6, the Clerk read Section 7 as follows:

"Sec. 7. No Senator or Representative shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office under the State; and no member of Congress or other person holding an office except attorney at law, notary public, or in the militia under the United States or this state, shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office."

There being no amendments to Section 7, the Clerk read Section 8 as follows:

"Sec. 8. No member of either house shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, receive any increase of salary or mileage under any law passed during such term."

There being no amendment to Section 8, the Clerk read Section 9 as follows:

"Sec. 9. The Senate shall, at the beginning and close of each regular session, and at such other time as may be necessary elect one of its members President pro tempore. The House of Representatives shall elect one of its members as Speaker. Each house shall choose its other officers, and shall judge of the elections, returns and qualifications, of its members."

There being no amendment to Section 9, the Clerk read Section 10 as follows:

"Sec. 10. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum, to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may prescribe."

There being no amendment to Section 10 the Clerk read Section 11 as follows:

"Sec. 11. Each house shall have powers to determine the rules of its proceedings, and punish its members or other persons for contempt or disorderly behavior in its presence; to protect its members against violence or offers of bribe, or private solicitation, and with the concurrence of two thirds to expel a member and shall have all other powers necessary for the Legislative Assembly of a free state. A member expelled for corruption, shall not thereafter be eligible to either house of the Legislative Assembly and punishment for contempt or disorderly behavior shall not bar a criminal prosecution for the same offense."

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment, I desire to insert in that section after the word "member" on line four the words "for corruption." They may expel a member for corruption, but I do not believe the Legislature has power to expel a member for anything else.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 11, the Clerk read Section 12 as follows:

"Sec. 12. Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings and may, in its discretion, from time to time, publish the same, except such parts as require secrecy, and the ayes and nays on any question, shall, at the request of any two members, be entered on the journal."

There being no amendment to Section 12, the Clerk read Section 13 as follows:

"Sec. 13. The session of each house and of the committees of the whole shall be open, unless the business is such as requires secrecy."

There being no amendment to Section 13, the Clerk read Section 14, as follows:

"Sec. 14. Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting."

There being no amendment to Section 14, the Clerk read Section 15 as follows:

"Sec. 15. The members of the Legislative Assembly shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, violation of their oath of office, and breach and surety of the peace, be privileged from arrest, during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place."

There being no amendment to Section 15, the Clerk read Section 16 as follows:

"Sec. 16. The House of Representatives shall have the sole power of impeachment. The concurrence of a majority of all the members shall be necessary to an impeachment. All impeachments shall be tried by the Senate, and when sitting for that purpose the Senators shall be under oath or affirmation to do justice according to law and evidence. When the Governor or Lieutenant Governor is on trial, the chief justice of the Supreme Court shall preside. No person shall be convicted without a concurrence of two-thirds of the senators elected."

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to ask my colleague from Lewis & Clarke, Governor Carpenter, whether that is consistent with the provision that went into the Judiciary article.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: There was nothing done with it. I offered an amendment but withdrew it because it was provided for here.

There being no amendment to Section 16, the Clerk read Section 17 as follows:

"Sec. 17. The Governor and other State and Judicial officers, except county judges and justices of the peace, shall be liable to impeachment for high crimes and misdemeanors or malfeasance in office, but judgment in such cases shall only extend to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust or profit in the State. The party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall, nevertheless, be liable to prosecution, trial judgment, and punishment according to law.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: On line two section 17, I move to strike out "county judges" before the word "justices." There are no county judges known to the constitution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 17, the Clerk read Section 18 as follows:

"Sec. 18. All officers not liable to impeachment shall be subject to removal for misconduct or malfeasance in office, in such manner as may be provided by law."

There being no amendment to Section 18, the Clerk read Section 19 as follows:

"Sec. 19. No law shall be passed except by bill, and no bill shall be so altered or amended on its passage through either house as to change its original purpose."

There being no amendment to Section 19, the Clerk read Section 20 as follows:

"Sec. 20. The enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: 'Be it enacted by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana'."

There being no amendment to Section 20 the Clerk read Section 21 as follows:

"Sec. 21. No bill for the appropriation of money, except for the expenses of the government shall be introduced within ten days of the close of the session, except by unanimous consent of the house in which it is sought to be introduced."

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: I have a substitute to offer for Section 21.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Winston, moves to strike out Section 21, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 21. No act of the Legislative Assembly except a general appropriation act shall take effect or go into force until sixty days after the adjournment of the session at which it was enacted, unless in case of emergency which emergency must be expressed in the preamble or the body of the act, unless the Legislative Assembly shall by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to each house, otherwise direct. No bill shall be introduced in either house after the expiration of fifty days from the commencement of the session without the unanimous consent of the members thereof."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: It is simply the section that was in the constitution of 1881, and I was in favor of inserting it as one of the committee when the committee had it under consideration, and I believe it would be well to insert it here. It provides when the law shall take effect except in cases of emergency, and the law as it now stands says that it shall take effect at the seat of government the day it is passed and that there shall be one day allowed for each fifteen miles. People don't know exactly what the difference is between the seat of government and other places. It would give rise to confusion, and it seems to me that it is well enough to provide when these laws shall go into effect, so that everybody will know when they do go into effect. And it is well to insert it here; and as for the section providing that no bill for the appropriation of money shall be introduced after the expiration of fifty days, it is simply the same as in the section, except it says ten days here. It is virtually the same.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: It seems to me there are very serious objections to that clause which says that no bill shall be introduced after fifty days. I understand that the constitution provides that the first Legislature shall sit ninety days.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: In that case, Mr. Chairman, one man could block all legislation after the fifty days, and if it was ninety days' session they would have nothing to do. I am in favor of the amendment with the exception of that part. If the gentleman will make that ten days I will vote for it.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I would say, Mr. Chairman, that as to this matter of the law not taking effect until sixty days after it is passed, the question was very fully discussed in both houses of the Legislature last winter. The law at that time provided that acts should take effect at the seat of government immediately and at other places there should be one day allowed for every fifteen miles of distance, and I believe that was introduced to amend that or rather to appeal it, so that the law should take effect in all parts of the territory as of the date of the passage, unless otherwise provided in the act itself, and there were some two or three substitute and amendments offered in both houses to that, and it finally passed in that shape. I think it would in many cases work a good deal of hardship as it now exists.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: If the gentleman is willing to amend that, instead of having it fifty days, within ten days after the time of the adjournment, I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman for the reason that to make a law effective from and after its passage might work a great hardship. A man might commit an infraction of the law and not know it and life is too short to be figuring out one day for each fifteen miles on an action in court. I believe in doing away with all such trifling complications as that.

The Chairman: If the gentleman will pardon me one moment it was understood that permission was granted to the gentleman to modify his substitute.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: This matter has been left to the Legislature before, and we have had no trouble. There has been no embarrassment and nobody has suffered for want of knowledge of the law; and as this is a matter which belongs purely to the Legislature and has been exercised by the Legislature, it seems to me it should be left for the Legislature. Of course, it is perfectly proper for the Legislature to make any laws that it sees fit, and I don't see any necessity for stopping here to insert it in the constitution.

The Chairman: The substitute as modified reads as follows: "No act of the Legislative Assembly except the General Appropriation Act shall take effect or go into force until sixty days after the adjournment of the session at which it was enacted, unless in case of emergency; which emergency shall be expressed in the preamble or in the body of the act, the Legislative Assembly shall by a vote of two thirds of all the members elected to each house otherwise direct. No bill shall be introduced in either house within ten days of the close of the session without the unanimous consent of the members thereof." It is moved and seconded that this be adopted.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I do not exactly know that I understand that, but it might be that that would conflict with what might be called local option laws; it might be that sometimes the Legislature would want to pass a law which shall take effect upon the happening of some event, such as vote of the people, or pass a law for the changing of a county seat, which shall take effect upon the vote of the people, or by proclamation of the Governor, and I am not sure that that would not conflict with it.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: No; it is less. It provides that it shall be less; it does not provide positively that it shall take effect in sixty days, but still I don't know but that construction might be placed upon it.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I simply rise to suggest that there are provisions in this clause which would be very embarrassing in case of extra session called by the Governor, which sessions are provided for in this proposition. If you cannot introduce any bill within ten days of the close of the session except by unanimous consent, some individual might block the proceedings in every extra session that was called, so that nothing could be accomplished.

The Chairman: The question is on the adoption of the substitute.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the said substitute and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I may be pardoned. I would say that the same objection portends to the matter as it is. It seems the committee ought to take charge of that and see that the difficulty is obviated.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I think that the suggestion that the gentleman makes is a very good one, and I move you that after the word "session" in line two, Section 21, or before the word "session" to insert the words "any regular" and strike out the word "the", making it "any regular session."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Muth of Lewis & Clarke: This section applies only to bills for the appropriation of money and not to bills of a general character, and is inserted here by the committee to obviate the possibility of the Legislature in the last days of its session running through bills for the appropriation of money. It applies to nothing else, but simply to appropriation bills—any bill for the appropriation of money for the expense of government, and it seems to me that it is entirely proper that it should not be changed even to apply as well to special sessions as to regular sessions.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: Extraordinary sessions of the Legislature might be called for the express purpose of appropriating money.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: The clause is a precautionary measure against railroading claims against the state through at the end of the session. It is designed simply to cut off that class of legislation which most frequently comes in just at the close of the session.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 21, the Clerk read Section 22 as follows:

"Sec. 22. No bill shall be considered or become a law unless referred to a committee, returned therefrom, and printed for the use of the members."

There being no amendment to Section 22, the Clerk read Section 23 as follows:

"Sec. 23. No bill, except general appropriation bills, shall be passed containing more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title; but if any subject shall be embraced in any act which shall not be expressed in the title, such act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be so expressed."

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I see general appropriation bills are excepted because it seems to be assumed that there would be several subjects in the bill. That is the view taken here. If those bills are excepted I think it would be well enough to add, and I move to add "except general appropriation bills and bills for codification and general revision of the law," because the question might arise whether the Code bills might not provide different provisions.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: It is moved and seconded that in Section 23 of line one after the word "bills" there shall be inserted the following words "and bills for codification and general revision of the laws."

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 23, the Clerk read Section 24 as follows:

"Sec. 24. No bill shall become a law, except by a vote of a majority of all the members present in each house nor unless on its final passage the vote be taken by ayes and nays, and the names of those voting be entered on the journal."

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: I move to strike out the words "present in" and insert the words "elected to". I do not think that the majority of the members present in each house should be able to pass a bill. There is a provision here that prescribes that when members are absent they shall be brought into the house, and I am certainly in favor of that amendment—striking out the words "present in" and inserting the words "elected to."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Winston, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty-nine in the affirmative to twenty-six in the negative.

There being no further amendments to Section 24, the Clerk read Section 25 as follows:

"Sec. 25. No law shall be revised or amended, or the provisions thereof extended, by reference to its title only, but so much thereof as is revised, amended, or extended, shall be re-enacted and published at length."

There being no amendment to Section 25 the Clerk read Section 26 as follows:

"Sec. 26. The Legislative Assembly shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say: For granting divorces, laying out, opening, altering or working roads or highways, vacating roads, town plats, streets, alleys or public grounds; locating or changing county seats; regulating county or township affairs; regulating the practice in courts of justice; regulating the jurisdiction and duties of justices of the peace, police magistrates, or constables; changing the rules of evidence in any trial or inquiry; providing for changes of venue in civil or criminal cases; declaring any person of age; for limitation of civil actions, or giving effect to informal or invalid deeds; summoning or impanelling grand or petit juries; providing for the management of common schools; regulating the rate of interest on money; the opening or conducting of any election, or designating the place of voting; the sale or mortgage of real estate belonging to minors or others under disability; chartering or licensing ferries or bridges or toll roads; remitting fines, penalties or forfeitures; creating, increasing or decreasing fees, percentage, or allowances of public officers; changing the law of descent; granting to any corporation, association, or individual, the right to lay down railroad tracks, or any special or exclusive privilege, immunity, or franchise whatever; for the punishment of crimes, changing the names of persons or places; for the assessment or collection of taxes; affecting estate of deceased persons, minors, or others under legal disabilities; extending the time for the collection of taxes; refunding money paid into the State treasury; relinquishing or extinguishing, in whole or in part, the indebtedness, liability, or obligation of any corporation or person to this state, or to any municipal corporation therein legalizing, except as against the state, the unauthorized or invalid act of any officer; exempting property from taxation; restoring to citizenship persons convicted of infamous crimes; authorizing the creation, extension, or impairing of liens; creating offices, or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, townships, election or school districts; or authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children. In all other cases where a general law can be made applicable no special law shall be enacted."

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to get the sense of the convention upon this question, line 13. On line 13 after the words "granting to any corporation" insert the words "banking, insurance or loan and trust companies." I move that that be inserted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman moves to amend by inserting in line 13 after the word "corporations" the words "banking, insurance or loan and trust companies," so that it will read "granting to any corporation, banking, insurance or loan and trust companies, association or individual, the right to lay down railroad tracks, or any special or exclusive privilege, immunity or franchise whatever."

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: Banking, insurance and loan and trust companies don't ordinarily lay tracks.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Hershfield, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I would like to ask the meaning of one word that I see in here that I don't comprehend. It is on line 21. The word "legitimation", I want to vote for that if I know what that word means. (Laughter)

The Chairman: There is nothing pending before the committee.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend by striking out that word and making it "legitimatization". As that word is now I don't know what it means.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman moves to strike out the word "legitimation" and insert "legitimatization". (Laughter)

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I had some doubt about the word myself, but Webster defines the word "legitimation" as the act of rendering legitimate. I guess the word as it is is about as proper a word as you can get.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: In line 20, I move to strike out the words "legalizing, except as against the State, the unauthorized or the invalid act of any officer." Now, as a general proposition, it is all right as it is, but in the case of remedies to prevent wrongs, it is often proper and uniform, and therefore, an illegal act of an officer should be validated. Therefore, I move to strike those words out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I think in the same relation the words "or giving effect to informal or invalid deeds" in lines 7 and 8 should be stricken out. I move to strike those words out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not see, Mr. Chairman, how it does any good to strike any particular items out in this enumeration unless you go farther and strike out the last paragraph in the act which provides that "any and all other cases where a general law could be made applicable." In reference to the particular subject the gentleman speaks of, it could be cured by general deed touching all informalities of that particular kind, and so if it could be brought within the meaning of the last paragraph it would be covered whether it is inserted in here or not.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: My desire was to avoid to a certain extent the mischief of the general laws in applying to particular cases. You have got to change the law every time you meet a particular emergency. More mischief is caused by that than by passing a special act.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-three in the affirmative to twenty-four in the negative.

There being no further amendments to Section 26, the Clerk read Section 27, as follows:

"Sec. 27. The presiding officer in each house shall, in the presence of the house over which he presides, sign all bills and joint resolutions passed by the Legislative Assembly immediately after their titles have been publicly read; and the fact of signing shall be at once entered upon the journal."

There being no amendment to Section 27, the Clerk read Section 28, as follows:

"Sec. 28. The Legislative Assembly shall prescribe by law the number, duties and compensation of the officers and employes of each house; and no payment shall be made from the State Treasury, or be in any way authorized to any such person, except to an acting officer or employe elected or appointed in pursuance of law."

There being no amendment to Section 28, the Clerk read Section 29, as follows:

"Sec. 29. No bill shall be passed giving any extra compensation to any public officer, servant, or employe, agent, or contractor, after services shall have been rendered or contract made, nor providing for the payment of any claim against the State without previous authority of law, except as may be otherwise provided herein."

There being no amendment to Section 29, the Clerk read Section 30, as follows:

"Sec. 30. All stationery, printing, paper, fuel and lights used in the legislative or other departments of government, shall be furnished, and the printing and binding and distribution of the laws, journals and department reports and other printing and binding, and the repairing and furnishing the halls and rooms used for the meeting of the Legislative Assembly, and its committees, shall be performed under contract, to be given to the lowest bidder, below such maximum price and under such regulations as may be prescribed by law. No member or officer of any department of the government shall be in any wise interested in any such contract; and all such contracts shall be subject to the approval of the Governor and State Treasurer."

There being no amendment to Section 30, the Clerk read Section 31, as follows:

"Sec. 31. Except as otherwise provided in this constitution, no law shall extend the term of any public officer, or increase or diminish his salary or emoluments after his election or appointment; provided, that this shall not be construed to forbid the Legislative Assembly from fixing the salaries or emoluments of those officers first elected or appointed under this constitution, where such salaries or emoluments are not fixed by this constitution.

There being no amendment to Section 31, the Clerk read Section 32, as follows:

"Sec. 32. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose amendments, as in the case of other bills."

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out Section 32. I see no reason whatever for having this section here.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: The Senators and members of the House of Representatives are the same. Each body has the same interest in all bills, and I see no reason why one house should be preferred to the other.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I do not know myself unless it was in the rule prevailing so far as the Congress of the United States is concerned, and perhaps that also in the Senate, that one-half of the body is continued over from year to year, and that it might be supposed they would have more information respecting the money that was necessary to administer the affairs of government. I do not think there was any consultation about it in committee one way or the other.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-five in the affirmative to thirty-one in the negative.

There being no further amendments to Section 32, the Clerk read Section 33, as follows:

"Sec. 33. The general appropriation bills shall embrace nothing but appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the State, interest on the public debt, and for public schools. All other appropriations shall be made by separate bills, each embracing but one subject."

There being no amendment to Section 33, the Clerk read Section 34, as follows:

"Sec. 34. No money shall be paid out of the treasury, except upon appropriations made by law, and on warrant drawn by the proper officer in pursuance thereof."

There being no amendment to Section 34, the Clerk read Section 35, as follows:

"Sec. 35. No appropriations shall be made for charitable, industrial, educational or benevolent purposes to any person, corporation or community not under the absolute control of the State, nor to any denominational or sectarian institution or association."

There being no amendment to Section 35, the Clerk read Section 36, as follows:

"Sec. 36. The Legislative Assembly shall not delegate to any special commission, private corporation or association any power to make, supervise or interfere with any municipal improvement, money, property or effects, whether held in trust or otherwise, or to levy taxes, or to perform any municipal function whatever.

There being no amendment to Section 36, the Clerk read Section 37, as follows:

"Sec. 37. No act of the Legislative Assembly shall authorize the investment of trust funds by executors, administrators, guardians or trustees in the bonds or stock of any private corporation."

There being no amendment to Section 37, the Clerk read Section 38, as follows:

"Sec. 38. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to pass any law authorizing the State, or any county in this State, to contract any debt or obligation in the construction of any railroad, nor give or loan its credit to or in aid of the construction of the same."

There being no amendment to Section 38, the Clerk read Section 39, as follows:

"Sec. 39. No obligation or liability of any person, association or corporation, held or owned by the State, or any municipal corporation therein, shall ever be exchanged, transferred, remitted, released or postponed, or in any way diminished by the Legislative Assembly; nor shall such liability or obligation be extinguished, except by the payment thereof into the proper treasury."

There being no amendment to Section 39, the Clerk read Section 40, as follows:

"Sec. 40. Every order, resolution or vote, in which the concurrence of both houses may be necessary, except on the question of adjournment, or relating solely to the transaction of the business of the two houses, shall be presented to the Governor, and before it shall take effect be approved by him, or, being disapproved, be re-passed by two-thirds of both houses, as prescribed in the case of a bill."

There being no amendment to Section 40, the Clerk read Section 41, as follows:

"Sec. 41. If any person elected to either house of the Legislative Assembly shall offer or promise to give his vote or influence in favor of or against any measure or proposition, pending or proposed to be introduced into the Legislative Assembly, in consideration or upon condition that any other person elected to the same Legislative Assembly will give, or will promise or assent to give, his vote or influence in favor of or against any other measure or proposition, pending or proposed to be introduced into such Legislative Assembly, the person making such offer or promise shall be deemed guilty of solicitation of bribery. If any member of the Legislative Assembly shall give his vote or influence for or against any measure or proposition, pending or proposed to be introduced into such Legislative Assembly, or offer, promise or assent so to do, upon condition that any other member will give, or will promise or assent to give his vote or influence in favor of or against any other measure or proposition, pending or proposed to be introduced in such Legislative Assembly, or in consideration that any other member hath given his vote or influence for or against any other measure or proposition in such Legislative Assembly, he shall be deemed guilty of bribery, and any member of the Legislative Assembly, or person elected thereto, who shall be guilty of either of such offenses, shall be expelled, and shall not thereafter be eligible to the Legislative Assembly, and, on the conviction thereof in the civil courts, shall be liable to such further penalty as may be prescribed by law."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move to strike out Section 41.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 41, the Clerk read Section 42, as follows:

"Sec. 42. Any person who shall directly or indirectly offer, give or promise, any money or thing of value, testimonial, privilege or personal advantage, to any executive or judicial officer, or member of the Legislative Assembly, to influence him in the performance of any of his official or public duties, shall be deemed guilty of bribery, and be punished in such manner as shall be provided by law."

There being no amendment to Section 42, the Clerk read Section 43, as follows:

"Sec. 43. The offense of corrupt solicitation of members of the Legislative Assembly, or of public officers of the State, or of any municipal division thereof and the occupation or practice of solicitation of such members or officers to influence their official action, shall be defined by law, and shall be punished by fine and imprisonment."

There being no amendment to Section 43, the Clerk read Section 44, as follows:

"Sec. 44. A member who has a personal or private interest in any measure or bill proposed or pending before the Legislative Assembly shall disclose the fact to the house of which he is a member, and shall not vote thereon."

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I wish to offer an additional section.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: I have an additional section to be called Section 45.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Choteau, Mr. Conrad, offers the following to be numbered Section 45:

"The Legislature shall provide for a State Examiner who shall be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. His duty shall be to examine the accounts of the State Treasurer, Supreme Court Clerks, District Court Clerks and all County Treasurers, and Treasurers of such other public institutions as may be prescribed by law. He shall report at least once a year and oftener if required to such officer as may be designated by the Legislature. His compensation shall be fixed by law."

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I move the adoption of that section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The following is also introduced as a proposed section to be numbered Section 45.

"Sec. 45. When vacancies occur in either house the Governor or a person exercising the functions of the Governor shall issue writs of election to fill the same." Offered by Winston.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: In regard to the motion offered by the gentleman from Choteau County I desire to say—(interrupted)

The Chairman: I will say to the gentleman that this substitute or proposed new section last read is now before the house.

Mr. Winston, of Deer Lodge: I think the constitution has previously provided that any vacancy in a state office shall be filled by appointment. There is also an article that provides that when any county office is vacated by death, resignation or otherwise, that the proper parties shall appoint but there is nowhere in this constitution a provision for the filling of vacancies in the Legislative Assembly, and for that reason I offer that section.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Winston, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I renew my motion on the adoption of the section which I introduced, and desire to have it numbered 46.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Now, Mr. Chairman, I desire to say regarding this motion made by my friend from Choteau County that it provides for the creation of one of the most important offices under this constitution. We have suffered immeasurably in a great many ways, and have been greatly inconvenienced for want of an officer of this character, and I think a State Examiner, with duties defined, as defined in this section, should be provided for in this constitution. I am satisfied that it will save the Territory a large amount of money. It will quiet the public mind in regard to public officers, and it will tend to keep the accounts of our public officers straight, if not entirely so, at least more so than they are now.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Mr. President, I believe we should adopt this in our constitution. There is not another officer named in the constitution who has the time even, if the authority was conferred upon him by law, to perform the duties specified. It is necessary that someone should perform those duties, and I hope that the section will carry.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I am very much in favor of that office being created by the constitution. Those states that have a Public Examiner have in a very short time seen the benefit that is to be derived from that kind of an officer. I know in the State of Minnesota when they first enacted the law there providing for a Public Examiner, during the first two years the whole system of accounts in the different counties in the State were revolutionized, and it was found in some of the counties that the accounts were being kept in such shape that no human being could tell how the county stood financially. There was also some such state of affairs in relation to the State officers. I believe it is an office that should be created and a good compensation fixed for it, so as to secure the most competent service that can be had in the State. I do not know, however, that it is a matter that should be added as a section in this proposition, but should certainly be provided in this constitution somewhere.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I would say to the gentleman that I offered a resolution which was referred to the Executive Committee and was by them overlooked. I asked Major Maginnis what action was taken on it, and he said it laid on his desk, and that he had forgotten to bring it before the committee.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to suggest as an amendment, with the consent of the gentleman, to add after the word "law" the words "and such other duty as shall be prescribed by law." The Legislature may provide that he shall do such other duties.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I accept that amendment.

The Chairman: The section is amended by consent so as to read as follows: "The Legislature shall provide for a State Examiner who shall be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. His duties shall be to examine the accounts of the State Treasurer, Supreme Court Clerks, District Court Clerks, and all County Treasurers, and Treasurers of such other public institutions as may be prescribed by law, and such other duties as the Legislative Assembly may prescribe. He shall report at least once a year and oftener if required, to such officers as may be designated by the Legislature. His compensation shall be fixed by law."

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Choteau, Mr. Conrad, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to have the following inserted in Section 26. In line 11 after the word "charter" and before the word "or" insert the following words: "Banks, insurance companies or loan and trust companies," so that it shall read, beginning with line 11, "To minors or other under disability: Chartering banks, insurance companies or loan and trust companies or licensing ferries or bridges or toll roads." I make that motion.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: In looking over this schedule I find there is nothing said in regard to these institutions, and it is very important that the Legislature shall not be permitted to grant special charters for an institution of that kind, but should act under the general law. I think it is quite proper that it should be inserted.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Hershfield, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Marrion, of Missoula: I desire to offer an amendment to Section 30. In line five insert the words "and most responsible" after the word "lowest", and before the word "bidder", so that it shall read "to be given to the lowest and most responsible bidder."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Marrion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I desire to offer an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Madison offers an amendment to Section 4 by adding thereto the words "except interest upon the public debt."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I thought that I could discover where a Treasurer might be hampered in paying coupons upon public debts outside of the State, when he had an agency in New York for paying the coupons there. If they were required to be all paid here it would be a different thing, but if the coupons were there and the interest on the public debt had to be paid there in New York where the bonds were held, or might be paid, then he would not know what amount to have a warrant drawn for.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: The gentleman from Madison is quite correct. The insertion ought to be made and I hope the motion will carry.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Hickman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move you, sir, that this committee rise, and report back Proposition No. 19 with the recommendation that it do pass as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: In line 11, Section 26, I presume the object of the clause in reference to chartering or licensing ferries or bridges or toll roads, was to prevent chartering these companies. Now, the effect of the amendment of Mr. Hershfield, which has been adopted, takes away the effect of the word "chartering" upon the words "ferries, bridges or toll roads," and it reads the way it is now "chartering banks, insurance or loan and trust companies, or licensing ferries, bridges or toll roads." It takes the effect of the words "chartering" from the words "ferries, bridges and toll roads." Now, I move to amend that section by leaving line 11 as it stands in the printed copy and inserting after the word "bridges" these words "chartering banks, insurance companies and loan and trust companies."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: It is Mr. Hershfield's amendment precisely, only it makes a separate clause of it.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: There will be no objection to that. I accept the amendment.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: Of course, the amendment contemplates striking out the words inserted in the original amendment offered by Mr. Hershfield as they were then inserted.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I move you, sir, that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Joy, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 19, and have directed me to report back the same with amendments. I would like reasonable time to prepare the report.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that he has been instructed to report back Proposition No. 19, with the amendments as adopted, with the recommendation that they be passed, and he asks further time in which to prepare his report. If there be no objection this will be granted.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I move you that we now reconsider the vote by which Section 4, Proposition No. 27, was lost.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I rise to a point of order. The gentleman voted with the minority and he cannot vote to reconsider.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: Yes sir, I voted against the measure.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would inquire if the ayes and nays were taken upon the question.

The President: The Chair understands that the vote which the gentleman desires to have reconsidered was the vote by which Section 4 was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would like to see on which side of the question the gentleman voted.

The President: The Clerk informs the Chair that the gentleman voted in the affirmative with the majority.

The question is upon the motion to reconsider.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: On that motion I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the consideration of Section 4, Proposition No. 27, was indefinitely postponed.

The Clerk read said Section 4, Proposition No. 27, being the substitute offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, for the information of the convention.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Chessman, Collins, Craven, Dyer, Eaton, Gibson, Hammond, Hartman, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Maginnis, Mayger, Parberry, Robinson, Rotwill, Sargent, Stapleton, Witter, Mr. President—30.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Burleigh, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Fields, Durfee, Gaylord, Goddard, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Reek, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston—40.

Absent: Brazleton, Graves, Gillette, Rickards, Webster—5.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to lay on the table lost.

The President: The question now is to reconsider the motion by which Section 4 was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Burleigh, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Gaylord, Goddard, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Reek, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston—37.

Nays—Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Chessman, Collins, Craven, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Hammond, Hartman, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Maginnis, Marrión, Mayger, Parberry, Robinson, Rotwill, Sargent, Stapleton, Watson, Witter, Mr. President—33.

Absent: Brazleton, Gillette, Graves, Rickards, Webster—5.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to reconsider the vote carried.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I move that Section 4, Proposition No. 27, be placed on its final passage, and on that I move the previous question.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I do not want to make any speech. I just want to make a suggestion. Three members have gone home today and one yesterday who would like to vote on this proposition and vote upon the side that I would vote upon. Now, if you can settle it now positively and forever, I am perfectly willing to do it, but I think a majority of the convention should settle this, and I make the suggestion that we take the vote on this proposition on Tuesday at 10 o'clock and end it one way or the other.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: There are only five members absent, Mr. President.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I will say, Mr. President, that if this proposition is lost now, I shall say no more about it, and I believe I am the originator of the proposition.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move that the consideration of this proposition be postponed until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The President: The question now before the convention is shall the main question be now put.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Breen, Bullard, Burleigh, Cardwell, Carpenter, Conrad, Cooper, Dixon, Durfee, Fields, Gaylord, Goddard, Haskell, Hatch, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Luce, Loud, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson, Whitehill, Winston—35.

Nays: Aiken, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Courtney, Craven, Dyer, Eaton, Gibson, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Maginnis, Mayger, Parberry, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Witter, Mr. President—5.

Absent: Brazleton, Gillette, Graves, Rickards, Webster—5.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the previous question lost.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move that the further consideration of this amendment be made a special order for Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I would suggest that it be postponed, instead of being made a special order.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I accept that amendment.

The President: The question is on the postponement of the further consideration of Section 4 of Article on Revenue and Taxation until Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move to amend by making it Tuesday.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I have no objection.

The President: The question then is on the motion to postpone the further consideration of the section until Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I desire to ask permission to report as the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole on Proposition No. 19.

The President: If there be no objection the report of the Chairman on Legislative Departments will be received.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I move that the convention now resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 26, General File No. 25, on irrigation.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Hogan, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-eight in the affirmative to thirty-four in the negative.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: I move that the report of the Committee of the Whole be read.

The President: If there be no objection the report of the Committee of the Whole on Legislative Departments will be read.

The Clerk read the said report as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 19, General File No. 18, Article on Legislative Departments, and beg leave to report the same back to the convention with the following amendments, which the committee recommend be adopted. Your committee would state that in the amendments offered reference to number of lines and sections are to such as appear in the printed bill.

Amend Section 4 by inserting after the word "fifty" on line 2 the word "five."

Amend Section 6 by striking out on lines 2 and 3 the words "Second Tuesday after" and on line 7 after the word "meet" inserting the words "at the seat of government."

Amend Section 23 by inserting after the words "bills" in line one the words "and bills for codification and general revision of the laws."

Amend Section 24 by striking out the words "present in" on lines 1 and 2, and inserting in lieu thereof the words "elected to."

Amend Section 26 by striking out the words "legalizing except as against the State, the unauthorized or invalid act of any officer" on lines 20 and 21.

Amend by adding the following to the bill as reported to be numbered Section 45.

Sec. 15. When vacancies occur in either house the Governor or the person exercising the functions of the Governor shall issue writs of election to fill the same.

Amend Section 30 by inserting the word "responsible" after the word "lowest" in line 5.

Section 31 be amended by adding thereto the words "except interest on the public debt."

Amend by adding the following as a new section to be numbered 46.

"Sec. 46. The Legislature shall provide for a State Examiner who shall be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. His duty shall be to examine the accounts of the State Treasurers, Supreme Court Clerks, District Court Clerks and all County Treasurers, and Treasurers of such other public institutions as may be prescribed by law, and such other duties as the Legislature may prescribe. He shall report at least once a year and oftener if required to such officer as may be designated by the Legislature. His compensation shall be fixed by law."

Amend Section 26, by inserting after the word "roads" on line 11 the words "Chartering Banks, Insurance Companies, and Loan and Trust Companies."

Amend Section 17 by striking out in line 1 the words "county Judges and."

(Signed

EATON, Chairman.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I move that Proposition No. 19 as amended be placed on its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The vote should be taken upon these amendments as reported.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that the rules be suspended and the amendments be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the rules be suspended and the report of the committee be adopted.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I think it is a bad way to adopt all these amendments wholesale. I think the better way would be to adopt them separately.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of forty-one in the affirmative and twenty-three in the negative.

The President: The Clerk will read the first amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 4 by inserting after the word "fifty" on line 2 the word "five."

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move the adoption of that amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: On that motion I demand the ayes and nays.

The President: There being a sufficient number to call the ayes and nays, they will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Cauby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Mulh, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Sargent, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K., Toole, J. R., Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—62.

Nays: Carpenter, Chessman, Craven, Hobson, Robinson, Rotwill, Slapleton, Marion—8.

Absent: Brazleton, Gillette, Graves, Rickards, Webster—5.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to adopt the amendment carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 6 by striking out on lines 2 and 3 the words "Second Tuesday after," and on line seven after the word "meet" insert the words "At the seat of government."

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move to amend by inserting "temporary" before the words "seat of government."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Hickman, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question is now on the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 23 by inserting after the word "bills" in line one of the words "and bills for codification and general revision of the laws."

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 21 by striking out the words "present in" on lines 1 and 2 and insert in lieu thereof the words "elected to."

Mr. Joy of Park: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I hope that amendment will not be adopted. It seems to me that if it is adopted it may completely tie the hands of the Legislative Assembly of this State. I can conceive, sir, where it will be possible in the event of a close Legislative Assembly, where parties are equally or closely divided, or upon any other question where there might be a division of sentiment or where the vote was closely divided, that it would be impossible to pass any kind or character of legislation if it did not meet the views of a majority of the members elected. It frequently occurs in the House of Representatives, and it is the well known method by which filibustering is engaged in, by which men sit in the presence of the speaker of the House of Representatives and decline to answer to their names when they are called by the Clerk; and if the gentleman from Deer Lodge or any other gentleman here knows any method by which he can compel a member of the Legislative Assembly to vote upon a proposition when his name is called, I have been unable to discover it. It has been tried in the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States, and so far as my information goes there is no authority discovered by which you can compel men to vote. The result of it would be that it would be in the power of some individuals—a quorum of the majority of the members who were elected—to defeat any kind of legislation. I do not believe that that should be done, and therefore hope that the amendment will be defeated.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I desire to say in addition that it was found absolutely necessary during the thirty-seventh Congress, in consequence of the absence of members from the Southern States to adopt the rule which has been advocated by Mr. Toole, that a majority shall constitute a quorum, and that a majority of that quorum shall be sufficient to transact legislation. Now, I pretend to say here that that is the rule of Congress, it is the rule of every state in this Union, and it is the rule of the British Parliament, and were it not the rule it would be the easiest thing in the world where there is a close majority of two or three on either side for one party to prevent legislation and defeat the will of the legislature. Now, I will read from Bartley's Digest, which is considered authority upon parliamentary law, for the information of the convention.

Now I say here at least that it is in the hands of one party in Congress in the absence of two or three of its members, or in the hands of two or three members of the Legislative body to obstruct the wheels of legislation and defeat the will of the people altogether. I hope this amendment will not prevail. It is not right, and while it is put in there with the best motives, I think if the gentleman had looked back to the history of the causes which influenced Congress to adopt it, I do not think he would have introduced the motion.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: I desire to say that every state in the United States has not the provision as it is in the printed bill as suggested by the gentleman from Custer. There are a good many of the states that have adopted the method which I propose. There was a good deal of discussion on this point when the constitution of California was adopted. I think it will very often happen that men will refuse to vote. You can compel the attendance of them, and they can vote as they choose; but if we allow a majority of a quorum to pass a bill, a quorum would be a majority, and a majority of that quorum would be about one-fourth of the members. Members will be taken away from the house upon some pretext or other and you can pass a bill by one-fourth of the members, and I do not think it is right, notwithstanding what the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County has said. There is no danger in my opinion. It seems to me that there is too much legislation, and certainly if a bill has any merit in it, why you can get a majority of the members of the house for it. I am therefore in favor of the amendment.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I just wish to add a word to what has been said by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke in favor of following the beaten track in this matter. As he says two or three members could break up a legislature in almost any case where there was a close question about a matter, and members by refusing to vote could break a quorum. I do not see how the difficulty that my friend from Deer Lodge speaks of can ever occur. Suppose there is but a few over a quorum in the house at any time, you can always have a call of the house and compel the attendance of absent members. There is nothing more clearly manifest in parliamentary practice than the way in which a minority can defeat hasty action on a bill, and I have seen the chairman of the House of Representatives sit for fifty-six hours in his chair because members refused to vote, and there was no way of compelling them to vote.

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I think we can see a practical example of that right here in this convention today upon this water question. Now there has been a close vote two or three times upon that. There are two or three members absent; some are excused because they are sick; one because his family is sick; and it is impossible to tell how those gentlemen would vote if they were here, on these propositions, and it would stop the passing of the bill. It puts a kind of practical veto upon it. There are men away from this convention today in good faith—two that we know of—and it would put a kind of stop to legislation. Now, the gentleman says we have too much legislation, but the world has gone on without this provision; legislative bodies have existed for centuries without any such provision as this, and there is no great harm in it and no great demand that I have heard, for any such provision.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: A small party of men might defeat the most important appropriation bill and so compel an extra session, if they had any scheme.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: I would call the attention of the gentleman to the different states that have this provision. Illinois and West Virginia and several other states all have this provision, and I don't see why we should not. This is no new thing. It is one of the most important steps in the constitution, and I still maintain that it is a good thing and I hope that the amendment will prevail.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I believe that the rule that a majority of all elected shall vote before a bill is passed is a good one, and I think it would be more particularly good in a Legislative Assembly in a state like Montana which will not have a large legislature—a great number of members. It is almost impossible to compel the attendance of members. If they move the call of the house some one will almost immediately move that it be suspended and that will end it. If members refuse to vote, they can refuse to vote when a majority of those present is required, but I believe it will be in the best interest of legislation in Montana that this motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge be adopted, and that that be the rule in our legislature when we become a state. There can certainly be no harm in it, and we can all see where there can be a great deal of good in it. It is not like an unwieldy legislative body of four or five hundred men where every law should receive a majority of all the electors elected.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment reported by the committee, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty in the affirmative to forty in the negative.

The President: This leaves the action as in the printed copy.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 26 by striking out the words "legalizing except as against the state the unauthorized or invalid act of any officer" on lines 20 and 21.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by adding the following to the bill as reported, to be numbered Section 45.

Sec. 45. When vacancies occur in either house the Governor or persons exercising the functions of the Governor shall issue writs of election to fill the same.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 30 by inserting the word "responsible" after the word "lowest" in line 5.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 34 be amended by adding thereto the words "except interest on the public debt."

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by adding the following as a new section to be numbered Sec. 46.

Sec. 46. The Legislature shall provide for a State Examiner, who shall be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. His duty shall be to examine the accounts of the State Treasurer, Supreme Court Clerks, District Court Clerks, and all County Treasurers, and Treasurers of such other public institutions as may be prescribed by law, and such other duties as the Legislature may prescribe. He shall report at least once a year and oftener if required, to such officer as may be designated by the Legislature. His compensation shall be fixed by law.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 26 by inserting after the word "roads" on line 11 the words "chartering banks, insurance companies and loan and trust companies."

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Loud, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Sec. 17 by striking out in line one the words "County Judges and."

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Kennedy, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: This disposes of all the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move, Mr. President, the adoption of Proposition No. 19 as amended as a part of the constitution of the State of Montana.

The President: There is an amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 4 by striking out the word "sixteen" in line 2 and inserting in lieu thereof "twenty-one".

The motion was seconded.

The Choir stated the motion.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I call for the ayes and nays.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I offer an amendment to that.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers an amendment to strike out the word "sixteen" on line two and insert in lieu thereof the words "twenty-six", and also another amendment to strike out the words "no more" on line 4 and insert "at least," so that it shall read "there shall be at least one senator from each county." Will the gentleman from Deer Lodge accept the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke?

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Yes sir, I accept the amendment with regard to the number of Senators, but not with regard to the other part of the amendment.

The President: The question now is on the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: When this matter came up in the Committee of the Whole I was inclined to say nothing in reference to it, because I was desirous of knowing what action the Committee on Apportionment and Representation would take. I had supposed all along that the number of Senators and the number of Representatives which should comprise the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana would be very material, and necessarily material to the Committee on Apportionment in arriving at a proper apportionment of the Territory—in other words, that that fact must be first settled before anything further could be done. Now, Section 4 provides that there should be sixteen members of the Senate—that there shall be one for each county and no more. I am desirous, so far as I am concerned, and I am confident I reflect the opinion of my constituency, that the representation which is provided for in this section is inherently wrong and inequitable and does not meet the requirements of the provisions of the constitution of the United States which guarantees to every state in this Union a republican form of government. Why, the counties in the State of Montana, whether they contain two hundred inhabitants or two hundred thousand inhabitants, are all placed on the same and an equal footing. What I understand to be meant by a republican form of government is a government where sovereignty is confided to and immediately exercised by the popular will. Will it be contended that in any spirit, that by any rule of fairness, the county of Dawson, which my good friend Mr. Haskell honorably and ably represents upon this floor, with its four hundred voting population will be entitled to the same representation in the Legislative Assembly of this state as the great county of Silver Bow, the great county of Deer Lodge, the great county of Missoula, which is increasing in population and material prosperity and wealth greater than any county in the State of Montana today?—saying nothing about the counties of Lewis & Clarke and Jefferson. What will be said, Mr. President, with reference to this kind and character of representation apportioned first? Will my constituency submit to it? Will the constituency of the representatives of Deer Lodge County submit to it? Will the constituency of these gentlemen from Silver Bow and Missoula and Jefferson lie supinely by and yield submission to such treatment as this? For myself, sir, I say that the people of the county of Lewis & Clarke would not. This is no temporary argument. Are you going to yield up the matter of representation which has been accorded to us upon the principles and theory which have obtained since the organization of this Territory? Are you going to abdicate, I say, our rights and accept this new departure? I repeat, this is no temporary arrangement. We say that the first Legislative Assembly shall consist of this number. If this provision is put into this constitution, this same representation will continue indefinitely and forever, because the sixteen members who go to the first Legislative Assembly and comprise the Senate, that body in conjunction with the House provides for the apportionment of the State of Montana at the next Legislative Assembly; and so this inequality which commences at the meeting of the first Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana will be preserved for all time to come and until an amendment is made to the constitution of the State of Montana. What right, what excuse can any gentleman offer for this upon this floor? Does not he know that he violates every provision, every theory that has been inaugurated and maintained in this Territory since its organization? I believe that two states in the Union—I have been so informed—have made this departure with reference to their apportionment and their representation. I do not know whether this is true or not, but if it be, I apprehend that long ere this they have discovered a prolific course of evils in it. With this system there would be the grossest sort of imperfection. What can you urge in favor of a county on this question that can be urged in favor of the Senate of the United States, for instance—I would point to that as an example—that the Senate of the United States has but two senators from each State in the Union, and that they were created without reference to the population, that is true, but everyone knows how that came about. It was not by reason of any justice or equality in the matter but it was the result of a compromise which brought about the representation of the States. What sovereignty, if you please, has a county have sovereign representation—that sort of representation which a state has in the United States? What principles of sovereignty does it exercise? Simple functions in the matter of regulation of the finances of the county and a rate of taxation, and in looking after the regulations of local government. So that so far as that is concerned there is no argument in favor of it. Why, I would accord to every citizen of Dawson County the same right that I do to the people of Lewis & Clarke and Silver Bow. I say that it is establishing a principle here in this constitution which is unjust and unequal and the people of this State would not sanction it. It has everywhere been maintained and upheld as a correct principle of government that majorities should rule, and that the right of representation should be with reference to numbers. The constitution of the United States in providing upon the question of representation says with reference to the representation in the House of Representatives, which is the best method adopted by which we can get at the question of representation, that it shall be done with direct reference to the number of people, leaving out Indians that are not taxed. I simply make this appeal to gentlemen representing counties that represent the wealth, that represent the manufacturing interests, that represent the commercial interests and the mining interests of this Territory, can they afford to sit silently by and see this matter of representation wrested from them and placed in the hands and power of those who do not proximate them in numbers? Why, a man in Lewis & Clarke County, under our theory of government, or a man in Deer Lodge, or Silver Bow, or Missoula County is entitled to exactly the representation in proportion to his number as the man in Dawson, in Yellowstone or in Custer counties. There is no inequality about this. But we go farther than that. In order to secure the counties representing the smaller numbers of population, we accord to them by the amendment which I have offered at least one representation in the Senate of the State; so that so far as their local affairs are concerned, we have not put them in a situation by which they do not have some one to reflect the views of their constituency or that they have to divide up with some other constituency, but we say that they shall have at least one representative—one Senator, and that the rest shall be made in proportion so far as population is concerned. As I have said before, if this was a temporary arrangement it might be different, but every member present can see that if this is inaugurated, at the first session of the Legislative Assembly, it will be perpetuated for all time to come, for the simple reason that the first Legislative Assembly makes the apportionment for the second, and the second for the third, and therefore this inequality will continue indefinitely. Can the great county of Missoula with all of its invitations which it is extending to settlers to settle upon its public domain—can this county, building up with railroads, inviting settlers, and with the degree of prosperity before it that it has—can it afford, as well as the counties of Lewis & Clarke and Silver Bow and Deer Lodge and Jefferson, to tie its hands and give away the power which it has and ought to have in proportion to its population, and put itself upon an equality with counties that do not represent anything like the same amount of population? It seems to me that the statement of the proposition is enough to set gentlemen to reflect upon the question and to remember that this is not the end of it. If it can subserve any purpose, whether ulterior or otherwise—whatever its purpose may be—we must remember and reflect that there are other and greater considerations behind it, and that it will last for all time to come. I simply make this suggestion.

Mr. Fields, of Park: It would be preposterous for me to attempt to answer the eloquence of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, but I am here to take my stand in behalf of the people of the county that I represent. I do not believe that this is a party measure or anything of that kind, and I don't think that the claim of population and wealth has got anything to do with the representatives of our State Senate. I believe that Park County and Dawson County, with their smaller amount of population, have got the same right of representation in the Senate of the State of Montana as Montana claims with her two Senators in the United States against the great State of New York. I do not believe that the question of wealth should be taken into consideration, or the question of population either. I believe in the increase of representation in the House of Representatives, and will concede that they should be granted representation in proportion to their population. Lewis & Clarke, Silver Bow, Deer Lodge and Missoula, as it is claimed, have got the greatest population. If the people in those outside small counties concede to those counties the right of representation in the Senate in the ratio of the population they possess, it will deprive these other counties from any voice whatever in that Senate, except to resort to the right of petition, and I will guarantee that the people of those outside counties, Dawson, Yellowstone, Park and the others, with the right of petition that will be granted, when the interests of those counties are involved or questions brought up that would bear against the interests of those counties, that a petition would not amount in value to the paper it was written on. In behalf of the constituency that elected me to come here and represent them, I will stand and hold that we have equal representation in every county in the State of Montana in the Senate; and as far as the representation is concerned in the lower house I am willing and ready to concede that they shall have representation according to the ratio of population they have in each county.

Mr. Joy, of Park: This is a question that I am very much interested in. Now, the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County has stated that there were but two States in this Union, as far as he knew, where any such monstrous proposition was ever known to prevail. I want at the outset to call the attention of this convention to the fact that when the State constitutions were arranged and adopted in these States, this provision was incorporated therein, that each county was entitled to one Senator and no more; in the State of Alabama each county was entitled to one senator and no more, and it is to this day. In the State of Connecticut one senator from each county; in the State of Delaware three senators from each county—which shows that it was on the basis that representation should be equally distributed among counties. In the State of Georgia, one Senator from each county; in the State of Indiana, the clause in the constitution says not more than one Senator from each county; in the State of Kentucky, one Senator from each county; in the State of Louisiana, the same; in the State of Maryland, one Senator from each county; in the State of New Hampshire, there are twelve Senators to this day; in the State of New Jersey, one Senator from each county; in the State of North Carolina, one senator from each county; South Carolina, one Senator from each county. I will state, though, that when the constitutions were adopted in the States of North and South Carolina, this provision was not incorporated, but at the constitutional convention of 1878 when the States of North and South Carolina formed a new constitution and adopted that provision, it was in each of those constitutions, and it has been there since 1878.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: You have stated that there is one Senator from each county. Does the constitution of each State which you have mentioned provide that there should be one Senator for each county and no more?

Mr. Joy, of Park: That is what it provides; which shows, I say—this particular proposition shows that after those States of North and South Carolina had lived under their government for many years they concluded there was something wrong there, and when they framed their new constitution for some reason or other—and I would like the gentleman to explain the theory why it was done; there is nothing in the proposition that the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke states, that it was for the same reason that the United States constitution was formed—but after they had lived under these constitutions for these seventy-five or one hundred years they finally concluded that it was all wrong; that each county ought to have an equal representation in one house of their Legislature, and in framing their constitution they adopted provision, and such is the constitution today of the States of North and South Carolina. The State of Vermont has a similar provision in her constitution, one Senator from each county, making, instead of two States which the gentleman speaks of, thirteen States in this Union today which are living under that form of constitution, and of which you hear no complaint. I say, gentlemen, that we are asking this in that spirit of fairness which animates the American people. It is a mistake that the gentleman makes when he says that this was formed simply under circumstances and exigencies which forced upon them the provision of allowing two Senators to each of the thirteen colonies. I say that history won't bear him out in that statement. The constitution of the United States was adopted with the broad provision not only that these thirteen colonies, who would not come in under other circumstances, but that each and every state that might become a part of the constitution hereafter, even reaching down to the time that Montana should be admitted one hundred years after—it made that broad provision on the broad basis of equity and justice, that each State of the Union should have equal representation in the Senate of the United States. It was on that broad liberal platform. It was the only way in the world in which some of these States could get equal representation. And I want to say, Mr. President, as has already been said by my colleague, and as is well known, that Lewis & Clarke and Silver Bow Counties alone, or possibly including Deer Lodge County, have controlled every body that has met here for some years; that they have a majority in each house of the Legislature by virtue of their population; that they have a majority in convention, except, fortunately, they do not have it in this body—that very fact alone is enough to warn all of the counties outside of those three that they will practically never have a voice in the halls of either house of our Legislature; or they will have a voice there, but it will be soundless; it won't amount to anything; the majority of the votes will be cast in those three counties, and, however the other counties may protest, nevertheless those three counties will make the laws for the State of Montana, and the rest of these counties will have to live under them. Now, a great deal has been said about the government being formed by the consent of the governed—that that was the basis of republics; and I say that these three counties will control for all time both branches of the Legislature of Montana. It could hardly be presumed, and I won't undertake to advance the assertion, that Lewis & Clarke County and Silver Bow County will not grow in proportion to the balance of the State of Montana, and I say that we have no assurance that these conditions will ever be changed; and although I believe Park County to be one of the most prosperous counties in the State and one of the most growing counties in the State at this time, by virtue of her mines and machine shops and other interests, and promises to become one of the greatest counties in the State of Montana, and aside from that fact that she is at the present time four or five times as large as some of the other counties spoken of, yet by reason of that I do not ask any advantage over other counties. Something has been said about Dawson County. I say to you, Mr. President, that there are five or six counties in this Territory smaller by far than Park County, and we are willing to say to each one of those smaller counties, you shall have the same representation in the Senate of the State as Park County has, and we say that only in the same spirit of fairness and equity that we ask that our county have the same representation in that house as the other counties have. I say it is customary and it is fair and right and proper that we should at least have a check and something to say about the legislation that is to take place in the years to come in the State of Montana. Now, again, one reason particularly is in regard to the public buildings. Suppose a Legislature meets here composed of a majority in each county, how many public buildings do you suppose Dawson County will get? How many public buildings will Park County or Gallatin County or any other of these counties get? How much consideration will ever be shown them in any of the legislation that may take place? I do not want to take up the time of the Legislature, I have spoken longer than I expected, but I say that if this constitution is to be framed in favor of all the people of the State, so that we may dwell together in harmony and friendship in one common family, that there will be no grievances offered at the Legislature at any other point or place that we of the counties would not rush in to rectify it. I say, Mr. President, we are entitled to one Senator from each county and no more. Let the lower house be apportioned according to the voting population, and no complaint will be heard from any of the other outside counties. Finally, in that same spirit of fairness, I believe that the gentleman of this convention will adopt that provision as we have adopted it in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that the convention take a recess until eight o'clock this evening.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend by moving that we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Chessman, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of thirty-four in the affirmative to thirty-five in the negative.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, to take a recess.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered in the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, Edward, Cauby, Collins, Cooper, Dyer, Ealon, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Kennedy, Kuippenberg, Loud, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Middleton, Mitchell, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—35.

Nays: Aiken, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Carpenter, Cardwell, Chessman, Conrad, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Gaylord, Gillette, Hershfield, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Kohrs, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Muth, Myers, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K., Toole, J. R., Warren, Winston, Mr. President—35.

Absent: Brazleton, Hatch, Graves, Rickards, Webster—5.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, lost.

Mr. Aiken, of Silver Bow: I desire leave of absence until Monday.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the convention do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Craven, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention stood adjourned until August 3, 1889, at 10 A. M.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

Saturday, August 3, 1889. Morning Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I have a report here from the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I desire to submit report of the Committee on Ordinances.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President: Your committee on Judiciary, to whom was referred the resolution herewith returned relating to Indian reservations, have directed me to report that they have considered the same and are of opinion that this convention has no authority under the Enabling Act or the laws of Congress to take any action in the matter, and your committee recommend that no action be taken.

August 3, 1889.

Signed

DIXON, Chairman."

The President: If there be no objection to the adoption of this report it will be adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee on Judiciary, to whom was referred the letter of Brigadier General Ruger of date July 25, 1889, and also Resolution No. 28 relating to military reservations in Montana, have directed me to report that they have considered the matter and recommend the adoption by the convention of the article herewith submitted as one of the articles of the proposed constitution.

August 3, 1889.

(Signed

DIXON, Chairman."

This report will be ordered printed and placed upon file for consideration. The Clerk will now read the report of the Committee on Ordinances.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee on Ordinances beg leave to submit the following report.

Signed

ROBINSON, Chairman.

"ORDINANCES.

"Be It Ordained:

"First, that an election shall be held throughout the State of Montana on the first Tuesday of October, for the ratification or rejection of the constitution framed and adopted by this convention.

"Second, at said election the constitution framed and adopted by this convention shall be submitted to the people of the State for their ratification or rejection, and all persons who are then qualified electors under the laws of this Territory shall be qualified to vote for the ratification or rejection thereof.

"Third, said elections shall be held at the several places in the several wards and precincts throughout the Territory appointed for the holding of elections under the laws of this Territory, and shall be conducted in the manner prescribed by the laws of this Territory regulating elections. The Board of County Commissioners of the several counties of this Territory shall appoint judges and clerks of such election in each of said wards and precincts in the same manner as is now required by law for the appointment of judges and clerks of general elections in this Territory.

"Fourth, each elector voting at said election shall have written or printed upon the ticket he may deposit in the ballot box the words 'For the constitution', or 'Against the constitution', or other equivalent words.

"Fifth, the votes cast at said election for the adoption or rejection of said constitution shall be canvassed not later than fifteen days after said election, or sooner, if the returns from all of the precincts shall have been received and in the manner prescribed by the laws of the Territory of Montana for canvassing the votes at general elections in said Territory, and the returns of said election shall be made to the Secretary of the Territory; and the Governor, the Secretary, Auditor and Attorney General of the Territory and the President of this convention, or a majority of them shall constitute a Board of Canvassers, who shall meet at the offices of the Secretary of the Territory on the thirtieth day after the election and canvass the votes so cast and declare the result.

"Sixth, that on the first Tuesday in October there shall be elected by the qualified electors of Montana, a Governor, a Lieutenant-Governor, a Secretary of State, an Attorney General, a State Treasurer, a State Auditor, a Superintendent of Public Instruction, one Chief Justice and two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, a Judge for each of the Judicial Districts established by this constitution, a Clerk of the Supreme Court and a clerk of the District Court for each of the Judicial Districts established by this constitution.

"Seventh, that notice of such election for State, County and Township officers shall be given by the several boards of County Commissioners in the same manner as notices of general elections for delegate to Congress and county officers under the now existing laws of the Territory and such election shall be conducted and held and the votes canvassed in the same manner as provided by law for territorial officers, and all state, county and township officers shall qualify and enter upon the discharge of their duties as such on the first Monday of January following such election.

"Eighth, that perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured and that no inhabitant of the State of Montana shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship.

"Ninth, that the people inhabiting said State of Montana do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within the boundaries thereof and to all lands lying within said limits owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes, and that until the title thereto shall have been extinguished by the United States, the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition of the United States, and said Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States, that the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State of Montana shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands belonging to residents thereof; that no taxes shall be imposed by the said State of Montana on lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States or reserved for its use. But nothing herein contained shall preclude the said State of Montana from taxing as other lands are taxed any lands owned or held by any Indian who has severed his tribal relations and has obtained from the United States or from any person a title thereto by patent or other grant, save and except such lands as have been or may be granted to any Indian or Indians under any act of Congress containing a provision exempting the lands thus granted from taxation, but said last named lands shall be exempt from taxation by said State of Montana so long and to such extent as such act of Congress may prescribe.

"Tenth, that the debts and liabilities of said Territory of Montana shall be assumed and paid by the said State of Montana.

"Eleventh, that provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of systems of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of said State of Montana, and free from sectarian control.

"Twelfth, that this ordinance shall be irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of said State of Montana."

The reading of the above report was dispensed with and the same was referred to the Committee on Printing to be printed.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula, sent up a proposition relating to public lands.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula offers a proposition relating to public lands which will be read by the Clerk.

"Article Public Lands.

"Section 1. The lands granted to Montana by the act of Congress, approved February 22, 1889, entitled 'An Act to provide for the division of Dakota into two States and to enable the people of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Washington to form constitutions and state governments and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States and to make donations of public lands to such states for the support of common schools or which may hereafter be granted for that purpose, shall be classified by the Board of Land Commissioners as follows: 1st, Lands which are valuable only for grazing purposes. 2nd, Those which are principally valuable for the timber that is on them. 3rd, Agricultural lands. 4th, Lands within the corporate limits of any incorporated town or city or within a mile of such limits, and which are worth more than Fifty Dollars ($50) per acre.'

"Sec. 2. The lands of the first of said classes shall not be sold, but shall be leased, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The lands of the second class may be sold or the timber thereon may be sold, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The Agricultural lands may be either sold or leased, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The lands of the Fourth class shall be sold in lots of not more than five acres each, and not more than one-half of any one tract of such lands shall be sold prior to the year 1895.

"Sec. 3. None of the lands granted for common schools shall be sold for less than ten dollars ($10.00) per acre, and no lease of such lands shall be for a longer term than five (5) years, unless the Congress shall amend the act referred to in Section 1 of this article so as to permit longer leases.

"Sec. 4. All other public lands may be disposed of in such manner as may be provided by law."

The President: This properly belongs to Committee No. 20, on Public Lands. If there be no objection it will be so referred.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move you, sir, that the proposition be considered in connection with Proposition No. 23 when the same comes up.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I desire to offer a substitute for Section 1, Proposition No. 23.

The President: The proposition offered by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Section 1. All the public lands of the State are held in trust for all the people; and none of such lands nor any estate or interest therein shall ever be disposed of, except in pursuance of general laws providing for such disposition, nor unless the full market value of the estate or interest disposed of, to be ascertained in such manner as may be provided by law, be paid or safely secured to the State; nor shall any lands which the State holds by grant from the United States (in any case in which the manner of disposal and minimum price are so prescribed) be disposed of, except in the manner and for at least the price prescribed in the grant thereof, without the consent of the United States."

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move that the proposition as read be referred to the printing committee with orders to print it and place it on General File for consideration with Proposition No. 23 on Public Lands and Exemptions.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The convention had under consideration an amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, which was amended, and the amendment accepted by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. The proposition under consideration was No. 19, Section 4, line 2. The gentleman from Deer Lodge moved to strike out "sixteen" and insert "twenty-one". This was amended by a motion to strike out "sixteen" and insert "twenty-six". This matter was the subject of consideration upon the adjournment of the convention.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I consider this a matter of a good deal of importance, not only to the county that I represent, but to all of the counties of this Territory or State, perhaps with the exception of two or three. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke proposed an amendment whereby the number of Senators will be extended or increased from sixteen to twenty-six. The report of this committee that had in charge Proposition No. 19, lays down the proposition, in other words, the principle that each county shall have an equal representation in one house of the Legislature, and that the other house shall be based upon population. Now, I believe, although as the gentleman says, that committee was not unanimous on that proposition—I believe that the report of the committee and the principle that that report asserts is correct. We heard a great deal in the eloquence and oratory of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke as to republican form of government and popular representation. I believe the gentleman knows that twelve or thirteen counties of this Territory for the past twenty-five years have practically stood in a position where all they had in the Legislature was the bare right of petition; that they had to come here and kneel down with their hands raised towards heaven, beg for anything and everything they got; and I believe if it were in the power of the people of Lewis & Clarke County—and I don't know that that might not be true of the county that you, Mr. President, represent—they would place a Chinese wall around these counties and make the counties of the rest of the State build it and pay for it, and put a barb wire fence on top of it, and within that Chinese wall they would build all the institutions that the State of Montana would have, and if they could they would make the rest of the counties pay for them. I do not blame the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke for what he said; and I do not blame the gentleman for the attitude that he assumes here. He represents a people so absolutely selfish that he is bound on this floor to take the position that he does, regardless of what his conscience may dictate to him; regardless of what he may think is right and fair; and in view of his position it must be confessed that he made an eloquent and oratorical effort. Much more, perhaps than any representative from any of the smaller counties of this territory can make. Now it was shown here by a reference to the history of other states that at least twelve or perhaps fourteen of the States of the Union have this identical provision in their constitutions—that is, that one house, the upper house of the Legislature, shall be composed of an equal representation from each of the counties. Now, why would that be desired? Take it in a territory like this. Take the three large counties if you will—and the gentleman undertook to curry with a great deal of palaver the fourth county, that of Missoula—and I am here to say that Missoula county is represented here and is able to take care of her own interests; for herself, and I do not believe that Missoula county is demanding anything like what the gentleman asserted. But to go back and ask what is the reason or purpose, or why should any county demand that it stand on an equal footing with other counties regardless of population? It is, that in one house of the legislature it may have some kind of chance upon the popular will. If the city of Helena or the city of Butte had one hundred thousand population, upon the theory and argument of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, it would rule the State of Montana today. Now, in principle, is that right? Lewis & Clarke has to some extent diversified industries and interests, but principally its main industry is mining. As to Silver Bow County that is true; as to Deer Lodge County it is also true, although they have in connection with that more or less agriculture. Now, the other counties of the territory, nature has not so great an extent smiled upon. Some of them are engaged principally in stock raising; others principally and almost entirely in agriculture. The interests of these different counties are different. The mining sections demand certain classes of legislation; the agricultural sections require other kinds of legislation; the stock interests require legislation to some extent in their interest. Place the entire matter of both houses of this legislature upon a basis of popular representation and, Mr. President, you know that the mining interests and the mining localities and sections of this state will forever dictate to the rest of the state and to the other industries and interests, what legislation they shall have and what they shall not; and I submit that that is absolutely unfair. I submit that there should be in one house of the Legislature a representation based upon the counties; so that although the population house might desire to have everything in the interest of the mining localities, that house could say to them "gentlemen you cannot have things your way entirely without conceding something to us." And, Mr. President, it was with this matter in view that I moved yesterday to strike out Section 41 of this bill that makes it bribery, or solicitation and bribery in a man in the legislature to go to one member and say "you vote for my proposition and I'll vote for yours." I say that was, for twenty-five years, the only way that any small county in this Territory could get any legislation, by doing that very thing. I say that was the only way it was possible for the stock interests, or farming interests of this Territory last winter to get a bounty law passed was by saying, "We will stand in with your Boiler Inspector Bill or anything you want, if you will give us a bounty law." I agreed with the gentleman who voted against me when I moved to strike that thing out, and if we were to continue in the same position I believe that that section ought to be stricken out. If the outside counties—the smaller counties of this Territory are going to have but the bare right of petition, I think they ought to be permitted to come here and beg, and if they have a nominal representative here, he is always, and always will be, in the minority, that the representative might be permitted to say where there happened to be a division in Silver Bow County, Lewis & Clarke County, by siding with one or the other "I will do this if you will do that." That was my reason for moving to strike that section out, for although this motion to move to amend the number of senators from sixteen to twenty-six was not raised in the Committee of the Whole, I knew it was coming; I knew that the people of Lewis & Clarke county demanded it of their representatives on this floor. I was not certain but what the representatives of your own county, Mr. President, demanded it, although I was not so clear upon that point, but as to this county, I was perfectly satisfied that they would take the earth if they could get it. Now the gentleman asserted yesterday that a county is not a sovereignty in any sense of the word; that it does not stand on an equal footing as compared with the relation of a state to the National Government—undertaking to forestall the argument that he anticipated might be made, that the several states of this Union had in the upper house of the Congress of the United States an equal representation—undertaking to forestall any argument that might be made on the theory that Montana, if she shall become a state, would go into the Congress of the United States, and in the senate: have an equal voice and an equal vote with the State of New York. Now, I submit that that argument in that respect is not correct—and that a county is a sovereignty. It has an individual existence: it can sue and be sued; it can and is placed in a position to acquire property and hold it in the name of the county; it has to build and own courthouses, jails and all that sort of thing; it has to provide for the levying and collection of taxes, for the payment of its debts, for the payment of judgments that are brought into court and sued, and it has obligations in the shape of bonds of a market value in the markets of the world. Will it be contended that it has no existence, that it has nothing in the shape of a sovereignty? I submit that so far as a county's relations to a state are concerned, it stands relatively and identically in the same position that a state does to the government of the United States, and that there is every reason and every argument to be used in favor of each county having the same consideration and the same representation in one house of the Legislature that a state has in the legislature of the nation. Now, why does the gentleman from Silver Bow demand this increase of the number of senators? Why does this gentleman from Deer Lodge County accept his amendment—a man who has been posing as an economist; a man who has been here here opposing everything in the shape of the expenditure of a dollar that could possibly be avoided; and he accepts the amendment to increase the number of senators from sixteen to twenty-six. Why does he do it? Simply because he came here as the representative of Deer Lodge County, one of the counties in this trio that represents the wealth, and we will concede, the vote of the State of Montana; and the argument that is used as to these three counties representing population by basing it upon the count of the vote is misleading, for this reason: you take it in the mining districts and the ration of population is calculated by the number of votes polled would be perhaps one to one and a half or one to two, while the ratio of population in the farming counties, or even in the stock counties, where nearly every voter is a man of family, some of them with five or six or ten children, and the basis of population there as compared with the vote would be about one to five or six. So, that arriving at the population by reason of the number of votes polled in these different counties constituted as they are, is not a fair basis upon which to calculate. Many of these counties that today have a comparatively small population are as large in the extent of territory as the whole three counties of Lewis & Clarke, Silver Bow and Deer Lodge. The indications are that within a very few years the development of those counties will bring them where their population will be equal perhaps to that of most any other county in the state, and as the gentleman from Park said, although he represents a county whose vote is three or four or five times larger than some of the other counties, his people are willing to come into the upper house of the legislature and stand upon an equal footing with the people in every other county, and I submit that it is the only way that it is possible for twelve or thirteen counties in this state to ever procure any reasonable kind of legislation unless it should please the honorable gentlemen who happen to represent these three counties that I have mentioned, I believe that when we become a state these smaller counties—I say "smaller" because I speak of them by reason of their population, for all of them nearly, outside of these three, are large in territory—those counties have struggled, some of them for fifteen, some of them for ten, some not for quite so many years. Their conditions, circumstances and surroundings have not been as favorable as they have been in these counties where the bowels of the earth have yielded gold and silver and lead; But the people in those counties have struggled just as hard. They have interests and industries that are entitled to consideration. They should be able to go into the halls of the legislature of this state and stand at least in one house upon an equal footing with any other county; and for that reason it seems to me that it is absolutely unfair—it is absolutely selfish—it is, if I may be permitted to use the expression—it is hoggish, to demand of us anything else, or to say to us "Lewis & Clarke County shall have eight or ten representatives and you shall have one"; that "Silver Bow County shall have ten or twelve representatives to your one"; and "that the ratio of representation shall be the same in both houses, and if there is anything you want you can come and beg for it, and if we like we will give it to you, and if we do not you can go and whistle." Mr. President, I think that the proposed section four should stand as it is, and that the people of this territory undoubtedly when it comes to be submitted to them for their consideration and adoption or rejection will say—I do not know but persons might be found in Lewis & Clarke County who would say it is fair—but I do know, however, that outside of Lewis & Clarke County that a majority and a large majority in every county will say "gentlemen that is fair; I am glad you put that into the constitution; it is right." And I do not believe that the people of the State of Montana, if it becomes a part of this constitution—that principle that each county shall forever stand upon an equal footing with every other county in one house of the legislature—I do not think that in the next five hundred years it will be changed. Look at the history of other states. Look, after seventy-five years one state that had a popular representation in both houses, changed by a vote of the people its constitution so as to provide for the identical thing that we are here contending for. Has anybody suggested or indicated the necessity of changing the constitution of the United States so as to make the representation in the senate of the United States differ from what it is today? It never has been thought of; it never has been deemed necessary; in fact it has been considered a conservative check upon public excitement and popular clamor at times, which in themselves, in the heat of excitement, are dangerous; it has been considered a safe and conservative check upon the popular clamor of the lower house of the legislature of this nation. I can see and conceive of no reason why that same condition of things should not exist as between counties and as to their relation to the state. The provision is here that senators are to be elected for four years; that half of them are elected every two years; so that all the time there is in the senate of the state if this article goes through as it should go through, senators of experience. Half of that body are men who were there two years before. The house is elected by a popular vote of the state, districted so as to give a representation according to some numerical basis of population. It may be in itself political; it may be democratic, it may be republican. Its tendency may be to legislate in a manner that is not in the best interests of the people of the state, but when its legislation goes to the other house, if you leave it as is herein provided, they find there a body half of which was elected two years before, and they find there a body that give matters of legislation, and will and always have been known to, in the history of this country from its beginning until today, more careful and deliberate, cool, calm consideration than the other house, and popular public excitement and politics cannot carry it away. Permit legislatures—both houses—to be elected under the clamor of some nonsense, pounded into the people by some demagogue or politician seeking office, regardless of principle, and you do not know what kind of legislation you will get. It is safe to presume that you would not get as conservative and sensible legislation as you would where you had one house from the people and the other a conservative one of a smaller number representing each county in the state, each not only looking after the interests of his county, but fairly considering with the other counties what would be for the best interests of the whole state; and I submit that in my judgment that kind of a legislature will give better, wiser, safer legislation—better laws—and be more satisfactory and more economical to the people of his state than any legislature composed of a popular representation in both houses. Mr. President, I have talked longer than I intended to on this question, but I feel and feel warmly upon the subject, and feel that in the interest of this whole state that if these counties will go down into their own consciences, that that conscience will dictate to them that what we demand is fair and right.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Upon the adoption of the amendment now proposed I demand the previous question.

The President: The gentleman from Custer demands the previous question. The question is shall the main question be now put?

The Chair put the question on the main question and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty-nine in the affirmative to twenty-three in the negative.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, if the people who have formed a combination to disfranchise the citizens of these counties shall attempt to gag the convention without giving us a chance to express our views upon it, I hope the motion will be voted down.

During the delivery of the above remark there were frequent calls for the question.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is not in order. The question now is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, which was amended by the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, to strike out in line two of Section 4 the word "sixteen" and insert in lieu thereof the words "twenty-six."

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke called for the ayes and nays.

If there be no objections the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. The section will now be read as proposed to be amended. The original amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge was to strike out the word "sixteen" and insert the words "twenty-one." The amendment to that was as offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, to strike out "sixteen" and insert "twenty-six." This last amendment has been accepted by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, and the question now is upon striking out the word "sixteen" and inserting the words "twenty-six."

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Brazleton, Burns, A. F., Burns, A. J., Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Gaylord, Gillette, Hershfield, Hogan, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, Muth, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K., Toole J. R., Warren, Winston, Mr. President—30.

Nays: Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, Edward, Callaway, Cardwell, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Joes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marriion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—42.

Absent: Bullard, Graves, Webster—3.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to amend lost.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move to strike out the word "sixteen" and insert the word "one," and I do that to show that these gentlemen who want to move the previous question, and take this rather unfair advantage, that we can down this matter and make speeches on it so long as there is a numerical figure left in the English language and as we don't want to waste the twenty-six figures, Mr. President, I have begun with the beginning.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer here arose to his feet.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Sit down my friend. I have the floor. Now let us be good tempered and good humored and good natured about this matter.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offered an amendment that just preceded the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Maginnis and that amendment ought to be entitled to precedence.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Then I will withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move to adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Clerk will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The Clerk read as follows:

"I move to amend by striking out the word "sixteen" in line two and inserting the words "twenty-five." Offered by Warren of Silver Bow.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I second the amendment.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I demand the previous question.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: In connection with this matter I only have a few words to say, in reply to the remarks to my friend from Custer. I will not detain the convention long, and in fact I know of but little to say upon this matter. But, taking the last assessment of the territory of Montana as a basis of the sixty-seven millions of dollars, the three counties he speaks of pay taxes on twenty-eight millions of dollars. Taking the vote as an index, all the counties of this territory together poll a vote of 40,044 of which the counties of Silver Bow, Deer Lodge and Lewis & Clarke poll 23,368 or more than one-half. Now under their proposition they propose that a minority shall give to a majority of the citizens of this territory a representation of one-fifth or less than one-fifth in the state senate. This is not the only question that is before this convention, and if we do not stop now and consider where we are drifting we will wind up with the State of Montana assuming the indebtedness of all these smaller counties. It is a proposition that has not been acted upon by this convention but it was proposed by the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, that the state shall assume the indebtedness.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: And instead of these larger counties they speak of wanting the earth, it strikes me that the smaller counties have started in on that kind of a proposition. Until 1888 the county of Deer Lodge paid taxes on fourteen hundred thousand dollars in land, which is nearly three times that of what any county in this territory pays among the smaller counties, with the exception of Gallatin. It is over three times what the county of Custer pays. The agricultural interests of Deer Lodge county—the agricultural interests of Lewis & Clarke county are second only to those of Gallatin. The county of Lewis & Clarke last year paid on agricultural lands and improvements over two millions of dollars assessed valuation. I feel that the interests of all are alike upon this question. I cannot see how a gentleman representing or claiming to represent a county is going back home and vote to disfranchise 20,000 people to help out 400 living in a small county. Another phase of this question is this: All over eastern Montana it is made up of large counties, western Montana is now thickly settled by the small counties. It will only be a few years when these counties of Dawson, and Choteau are settled up and those counties will then be divided up, and under this system of representation it will be the other people who are wanting the earth and who will have it. The county of Dawson is capable of making fifteen counties of the size of Silver Bow, comprising less than one-tenth or less than one-twentieth of the population, to be cut up into fifteen counties, and when they walk in here with fifteen senators, whatever they demand they would get, that is all there is about it. During the history of this territory for the past ten years this same system of representation has been in force as now—one council member for each county. One council member for each county has been the system heretofore, and only those who have tried, and those who have gone up against this thing know how hard it is to get any legislation protecting the mining industry in any way out of any legislature that has met heretofore. Ten years ago this coming winter, the first mining law was passed. It was passed after thirty-nine days of hard, earnest work, both on the floor and in the lobby, and then it passed the house by a very small majority, and on the last day, I went with the chairman of the committee to the governor of this territory at twenty minutes after eleven on the last day of the session myself, for him to approve that law. There has hardly been a session of the Legislature that some effort has not been made to repeal or restrict that law. I claim that any other law than the one now in force would shut down one-half of the mines of this country. Furthermore there is this about it, that a senate composed as these gentlemen propose to have it composed, with a gentleman representing any of these larger counties coming with any proposition, no matter how just, they would simply laugh at him; and if this bill is passed—if this is to become a law—if five hundred men are to have the same representation that ten thousand are, why the sooner we come to a vote and the sooner the governor issues his proclamation again convening this convention; the better off we will all be. I am opposed to the bill!

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I am astonished at the scene before us. I had supposed, sir that gentlemen on this floor were expected at least to assume as best they could, in their inexperience, the role of statesman. I have expected, sir, that our constituents presumed that the delegates on this floor should occupy a high, elevated plane of statesmanship, above all partisanship, and should bury all ideas of personal aggrandizement or local advantage in their general desire for the general good of the people of the territory. I am loath to believe I was mistaken. The scene indicates, and the motives and actions of the delegates who have spoken upon this floor unmistakably show, that we are invited down to a place of action but little above that of the common pot house politician. Instead of spending the last month in a desire to subserve the general interests of the territory at large, we now learn that that time has been expended in conspiracy and trading and intrigue, in order to help out some particular part. What is the proposition before us? Are we really living in a republican form of government? Do we really have a constitution of the United States giving to each state, and guaranteeing to each state, a republican form of government, based upon the will of the majority? The proposition before us, if I understand it, is to pass through a gagged convention the idea that area should be represented, and not men and women. (Applause) Why sir, it is equivalent to saying "Go all over this broad domain of ours, and let the rocks and the grasses and the squirrels and the cattle have representation instead of men and women"—the most preposterous idea, I think, that has ever been seriously considered by a parliamentary assembly. How do you know if you divide up the territory into so much area and say that so much space shall have a representation, but that the changes of the future may come in such shape that the population of the few will be very much less than what it is now? How do you know but what the mines may be exhausted, as mines often are, and the population very materially decreased, so that now where you have a thriving village or city you will have nothing but the deserted houses occupied by bats, and a few tottering, gray haired, old men, and that county, no matter what its population may be, shall be entitled to the same representation on the floor of the senate as the counties of Silver Bow or Lewis & Clarke, or the most populous county in the territory? There has been considerable talk here about the tyranny of the majority. It has been said that the counties of Lewis & Clarke, Silver Bow and Deer Lodge, I think it is, have been tyrannizing over this stricken eastern country for twenty-five years back. I do not know how that is. We will concede that they have been. We will concede for the sake of the argument, that in the future we will get down to a low plane of statesmanship and down to tyrannizing. We will concede that all of the public buildings will be erected in these three counties, and that, as the gentleman says referring to Mr. Middleton, of Custer) his constituents can come before us only in the shape of petitioners begging justice on suppliant knees. But let us reverse the thing and put the shoe on the other foot—that these three counties shall not be represented on the basis of population, but with reference only to the mere matter of area, and only have the same representation as other counties of the territory: in other words the county with 6,000 voters shall have the same representation as a county of 400, or 25, if that shall become the population. Now let us concede that these outside counties will come down to the same plane of statesmanship that has been attributed to the three counties. We will say that they can carry everything simply because they have a majority. Is it not fair to assume that the outside counties will tyrannize over the other counties, those that have most of the population of the territory? I think it will be conceded that the industries of mining, commerce and manufactures will center in these largely populated counties. Suppose we want to pass a bill in favor of either mining, commerce or manufactures, will it not have to receive the approval of the delegates and representatives from the outside counties, and be subservient to their will and sanction? Will it not be completely at their mercy? And if there is going to be any tyrannizing will it not be better to let the majority tyrannize over the minority than to say that the minority shall tyrannize over the majority. That is the proposition. It has been said here that the small counties have been trading votes for the last twenty-five years in order to get anything in the way of legislation. Is the gentleman certain that on this proposition they have not been continuing the habit of trading votes? I feel free to say that I have been informed that my action and my vote on this proposition would influence the retaining of the capitol at Helena. Is it not likely that the same proposition may have been made to other gentlemen upon this floor? I care nothing comparatively regarding the capitol: it is a grain of sand compared with the proposition before us. I might vote it to Glendive or to Judith County, and if any mistake is made the people may correct it in the future, because time is a great leveler and evener and will adjust things according to their relative merits. Put this thing in your constitution, and it is not susceptible of amendment, because everything before going to the people must receive the approval of this very senate which you have created and given a majority therein to the outside counties. I do not know that the few remarks that I have incoherently uttered will be of any effect, but I cannot let this pass without rising in protest against what seems to me grossest injustice. (Applause)

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: My object in demanding the previous question was not to cut off the debate entirely, or to take advantage of any one; but I have spent a month's time here, and I am anxious to have this thing settled by a vote of the delegates sent to this convention for that express purpose. I do not wish to have an expression here that is not the expression of the delegates and I presume of the constituents that sent them here, and it was with that intention of saving time—of economizing time, and to make it possible that we might get through here some time with our labors and get home that I called for the previous question. With regard to passion, I certainly have not the emotion of passion in my heart, and the only indications of it that I have seen have been the excited expressions and flushed countenance of my chivalier friend from Lewis & Clarke County. I demand the previous question.

The President: The previous question has been demanded.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: The question is now on the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Warren, to strike out "sixteen" in line 2 Section 4 and insert "twenty-five." The previous question has been called.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I demand the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Breen, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Field, Gaylord, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—36.

Nays: Aiken, Brazleton, Burns, A. F., Burns, A. J., Carpenter, Chessman, Conrad, Courtney, Craven, Durfee, Hershfield, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, Muth, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K., Warren, Winston, Mr. President—27.

Absent: Bullard, Cauby, Graves, Webster—4.

Paired: Browne and J. K. Toole, Collins and Riekards, Gibson and Gillette, Dixon and Middleton—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion on the previous question carried.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I move to strike out Section 4.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I call for the ayes and nays on that.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Before that motion is put I move to amend by making it "twenty-three."

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I rise to a point of order. The previous question has been put and carried.

The President: The point of order of the gentleman is well taken. If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Warren.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Brazleton, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Chessman, Courtney, Craven, Durfee, Gaylord, Hershfield, Hogan, Knowles, Mayger, Muth, Reek, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K., Warren, Winston, Mr. President—24.

Nays: Bickford, Breen, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Cauby, Conrad, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Robinson, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—40.

Absent: Bullard, Graves, Webster—3.

Paired: Browne and J. R. Toole, Collins and Rickards, Gibson and Gillette, Dixon and Middleton—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to amend lost.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow was lost.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move to lay that motion on the table, and on that I call for the ayes and nays.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I rise to point order. My point of order is that the main question before this convention is the adoption of the report of the committee on Section 4, and that the motion for the previous question having been sustained any further amendments are out of order and that the convention must go on and vote upon the main proposition which is the adoption of Section 4.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: If I am in order I would like to move that when this convention adjourns it adjourn until four o'clock on Monday.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair understands the point of order raised by the gentleman from Meagher is that the previous question having been adopted the convention shall now proceed to vote upon the proposition, and that all further amendments are out of order.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I understand that the vote was taken upon the main proposition.

The President: No, sir; the vote was on the amendment. The motion to reconsider takes precedence over other matters except a motion to adjourn or to take a recess, and hence the motion to reconsider it is now in order.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: Do I understand from that that the motion sent up a few minutes ago has been cut off,

The President: If the Chair decides that the convention shall proceed to the consideration of the main question it would cut off any further amendments. The point of order raised by the gentleman from Meagher is well taken, according to our old rules.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move we take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move to amend that when the convention adjourns that it adjourn until Monday at four o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Warren, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty-one in the affirmative to twenty-six in the negative.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Hogan, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-seven in the affirmative to twenty-six in the negative.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge to reconsider the vote by which the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow was lost.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move we take a recess until 2 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Kanouse, of Meagher: I rise to a point of order. Rule No. 11 provides that when a question is under debate no motion except privileged question shall be put, and in the order in which they are given here, a motion to adjourn and a motion to lay on the table are the only two privileged questions. I rise to the point of order that the motion for a recess before the vote has been taken upon the main question is out of order.

The President: A motion to fix the time to which the convention shall adjourn and a motion to take a recess take precedence over all other matter.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I would like to call the attention of the Chair to Rule No. 11.

The President: The Chair will take pleasure in examining rule No. 11. (The Chair here examined Rule 11.)

There is nothing stated here with regard to a motion to fix the time to which the convention was adjourned, but it is the established rule in Jefferson's Manual, a rule adopted in the House of Representatives of the United States, and a rule that is recognized everywhere that a motion to adjourn, and a motion to fix a time to which the convention shall adjourn, and a motion to take a recess, shall take precedence over all other questions; and inasmuch as there is nothing expressed in here to that effect the Chair is of the opinion that those rules ought to prevail.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I am aware of the fact that those are the general rules, but this convention has adopted rules for their government and guidance, and the rule says that no motion shall be received with the exception of certain motions, and among those is not the motion to take a recess. I think the point of order is not well taken.

The President: A literal and strict interpretation of the rules would justify the gentleman no doubt in taking his point of order. It is a question of whether this convention wants to place itself in opposition to established rules that are uniform all over the world. The Chair, however, would like to have the sense of the convention upon this question, and would ask that the convention give an expression upon the question.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Is there any question before the House?

The President: The question is upon the motion to take a recess until two o'clock.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move to amend that by moving to adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I rise to the point of order that the motion is out of order. I am perfectly willing to have this question settled by submitting it to the convention.

The President: I would like to have the point of order submitted to the convention as to whether or not we shall adhere strictly to an interpretation of Rule 11 or not.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: In conformity with the wish of the Chair, as I understand it, and in order to get an expression of the convention, I take an appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The President: The Chair has not yet made any decision.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I would suggest to the Chair that even under Rule 11 this would not apply, because the question that is before the convention is not a debatable one and is not under debate. If you will apply rule thirty, it is a solution of the question. (Reading) "The rules of parliamentary practice embraced in Jefferson's Manual shall govern the convention in all cases where they are applicable and in which they are not inconsistent with the standing rules and orders of the convention."

The President: There is no question under debate. The previous question has been moved and the main question is not debatable. A motion to reconsider is not a debatable question according to "Jefferson's Manual", although it is a rule that obtains in the House of Representatives. Hence, there was nothing before the convention that was debatable, and the point of order that was taken by the gentleman from Deer Lodge is well taken. The question now is on the motion to adjourn.

The Chair put the question on the motion to adjourn and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is on the motion to take a recess until two o'clock.

Mr. Mayger, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend by moving to take a recess until four o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Mayger, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: I move we now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Chessman, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-eight in the affirmative to thirty-five in the negative.

Mr. Joy of Park: I call for the question on the main question.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I renew my motion that we take a recess until two o'clock.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I rise to a point of order. The point of order that I make is that the entertaining of alternate motions to adjourn or take a recess will have the effect of entirely repealing the intent and effect of Rule No. 13 which we have adopted for our guidance; that is, with regard to a demand for the previous question. The rule says that its effect shall be to put an end to all debate and bring the convention to a direct vote on pending amendments and then upon the main question. I submit that the entertaining of alternate motions of this kind would defeat the parliamentary practice of the motion for the main question, and there would be no use of any rule upon that subject.

The President: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman that on the other hand if those rules were not allowed the convention might be tied up here indefinitely.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: The point of order of the gentleman from Meagher, I respectfully submit, that when the previous question has been moved and seconded the only thing in order is "shall the main question be now put." If it has been once ordered by the convention, no motion even to adjourn is in order.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: What is the ruling upon the point of order taken by the gentleman from Meagher?

The President: The Chair has not ruled upon the question. The rules of the convention seem to be deficient on the subject. The Chair is of opinion that even after the main question has been ordered that the motion to adjourn takes precedence of everything, unless the convention has commenced to vote upon it. The mere ordering of the main question is not sufficient, unless the vote has begun.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I assure you, Mr. President, there is no disposition on our part to embarrass you or to embarrass this convention, but with all due respect I made a motion some time ago that we take a recess until two o'clock. I now renew my motion that we take a recess until two o'clock. It has not yet been voted upon.

The President: The Chair will entertain the motion.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It seems to me that we ought to have some determination of this question. As the gentleman from Meagher says, alternate motions to take a recess and to fix the time should not be entertained. It is possible to block the wheels and prevent anything being accomplished at all. Rule 17 of the House of Representatives, which we have adopted, perhaps defines more fully what is meant by the previous question than anything else, and my understanding of it is, as stated by the gentleman from Madison, that not even a motion to adjourn is in order after the main question has been voted upon and ordered.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order. I believe there is only one recognized person in this body who can rule upon a point of order. If the gentleman has a point of order, my idea is that he can state that point of order, but cannot debate it.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I am simply calling the attention of the Chair to Rule 17 of the House of Representatives.

The Chair put the question on the motion to take a recess until two o'clock and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now before the convention is upon the adoption of the section.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would like to ask if this does not carry with it the whole Proposition No. 19.

The President: It is the adoption of Section 4.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Breen, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Cauby, Conrad, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rotwitt, Sargent, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—41.

Nays: Aiken, Brazleton, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Chessman, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Gaylord, Hershfield, Hogan, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, Muth, Reek, Robinson, Schmidl, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Winston, Mr. President—25.

Absent: Bullard, Graves, Webster—3.

Paired: Browne and Toole, J. R.; Collins and Rickards, Gibson and Gillette—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to adopt carried.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: I wish to give notice that at some future time I shall move to reconsider the vote by which the section was adopted.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that we do now adjourn. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Chessman, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move you, sir, that the vote by which Section 4 was adopted be now reconsidered, and that that motion be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I know this proposition is not debatable, but I ask unanimous consent to make a statement not to exceed two minutes.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I have no objection to the gentleman saying a few words, provided this motion be put. But I do not withdraw my motion.

The President: The question before the convention is on the motion to lay on the table.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I recognize by the very decided vote of the convention that it is the determination to reject, as it has already done, the proposition that was offered by me upon yesterday. Nothing that has been said has changed my opinion upon this matter, that the proposition before the convention is an unjust one, but I think the convention took a little advantage of the proposition when they did not permit, as I intended to do, the following amendments along the line in order that we might reach a number which would be satisfactory to the convention. I believe we have proceeded under a misapprehension. No gentleman on this floor, so far as I know, has acted under impure motives, but that there has been a misapprehension I very firmly believe. My purpose was to offer to make it twenty-five and then twenty-four, twenty-three and twenty-one and along down until we could have reached what I believe the convention would have ultimately endorsed, that there should be at least twenty or twenty-one members of the senate; and I think now it is due to the people of this Territory, in view of everything that has been said, that this motion to lay on the table ought not to be carried, but that some time and some opportunity for reflection ought to be had, when we can get out some more deliberate judgment on the proposition. I make this suggestion.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Breen, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, Edward, Callaway, Cardwell, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Joy, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Watson, Whitebill, Witter—35.

Nays: Aiken, Brazleton, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Gaylord, Hershfield, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, Muth, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K., Warren, Winston, Mr. President—31.

Absent: Bullard, Graves, Webster—3.

Paired: Browne and Toole, J. R., Collins and Rickards, Gibson and Gillette—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to lay on the table carried.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move to adjourn until Monday at 4 o'clock. I move that that motion be reconsidered and that the convention adjourn sine die.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move to amend, if the gentleman is so anxious to get away, that indefinite leave of absence be granted to him.

The President: The motion is to reconsider the motion by which the convention fixed the time of adjournment at four o'clock on Monday.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move that the convention do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Callaway, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention stood adjourned until Monday, August 5, 1889, at 4 P. M.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

Monday, August 5th, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the President at four o'clock in the afternoon.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Mr. Graves asks to be excused until tomorrow morning. Mr. Gaylord also asks to be excused until tomorrow morning. Mr. Muth also asks to be excused until Friday. If there be no objection, leave of absence will be granted to these gentlemen.

Mr. Aiken, of Silver Bow: Mr. Durfee requested me to ask leave of absence for him until tomorrow.

The President: If there be no objection, leave of absence will be granted the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Durfee.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Mr. Schmidt, of Silver Bow, requests leave of absence until tomorrow; and Mr. Joy, of Park County, asked leave to be excused until four o'clock, and he also desired me to state that he was paired with Mr. Muth on the legislative question.

Mr. Joyes, of Jefferson: Mr. Cardwell, of Jefferson County, desires to be excused until tomorrow.

The President: If there be no objection, leave of absence will be granted these gentlemen. Mr. Parberry also desired to be excused until Tuesday at ten. If there be no objection, this excuse will be entered.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I would ask what has been done with the resolution that I offered a few days ago, which was referred to the Committee on Mining and Water Rights.

The President: Will the Chairman of the Mining and Water Rights Committee give the gentleman the information?

Mr. Eaton, of Park: The Chairman of the Committee on Mining and Water Rights, I think left the hall a moment ago.

Mr. Collins of Cascade sent up a report.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, your Committee on Engraving and Enrollment desire to make the following report.

The President: The report of Committee No. 7 will first be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Report of the Committee on the Finance of the State, etc., Mr. President, your Committee on the Finance of the State, etc., to whom was referred Resolution No. 26, by Maginnis, authorizing municipal corporations to incur indebtedness, to procure an ample water supply, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to report that the Resolution embodies a very necessary constitutional provision. They therefore recommend its adoption. The committee have had before them a matter of similar import, and in their general report on Public Indebtedness will fully provide for the subject matter stated in said resolution.

August 2nd, 1889.

(Signed) T. E. COLLINS, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of Committee No. 7 will be received and adopted. The Chairman of this committee proposes that the subject therein referred to shall have attention in their general report.

The Clerk read as follows: Report of Committee on Finance of the state. Mr. President, Your Committee on Finance of the state, to whom was referred Resolution No. 22, by Browne, prohibiting reduction or increase of fees or salaries of county, and municipal officers during the term for which they are elected, respectfully recommend that Committee No. 10, on City, Town and County Organizations, be requested to incorporate in their report, a provision by which all state, county, town and other officers shall receive a fixed salary during their respective terms of office, as provided by law, and that the same be not increased during their term of office, and that the fee system be abolished. We further recommend that said resolution be referred to Committee No. 10 for such further action as may be necessary.

August 2nd, 1889.

(Signed)

T. E. COLLINS, Chairman.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning this report.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move that the report be referred in accordance with the suggestion of the committee.

The President: If there be no objection this report will be referred to Committee No. 10 for their consideration.

The Clerk read as follows: Report of the Committee on Enrollment. Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom were referred propositions Nos. 1, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14, 17 and 21 for the purposes of enrollment, beg leave to report the same back correctly enrolled.

(Signed)

MIDDLETON, Chairman.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move you that the several propositions just reported back by the Committee on Enrollment be referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

The President: If there be no objection this report will be received, and the propositions as enrolled, will be referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, Mr. Warren, Chairman.

The President: The Chair would state to the Chairman of the Committee on Mining and Water Rights that an inquiry has been made for the resolution that was referred to that committee a few days since on the subject of memorial.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I find that there is some little difference of opinion between the members of the committee as to the report we shall make on that, and I have not been able to get that committee together. I wish to say to the members of the committee now, that after adjournment this evening, I would like to have them meet me in one of the Committee Rooms for the purpose of considering this resolution.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentleman will be granted further time.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I would like to present the report of Committee No. 7, so that it may be referred to the Printing Committee, to be printed.

The President: Report of Committee No. 7 will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Report of Committee on Finance of the State, &c. Mr. President, the Committee on Finance of the state, to whom was referred certain propositions relating to the Public Indebtedness, have carefully considered the same in connection with the second part of the subject matter committed to them, and have adopted in substance those suggestions which they have deemed of practical value, and include the same in the general report on Public Indebtedness herewith presented for the action of the convention. Your committee beg leave to call special attention to those sections relating to the indebtedness of counties and municipalities, which they believe, are in accord with the general sentiment of the people of Montana on these important questions. The committee have compiled these sections which they respectfully recommend be adopted and inserted in the constitution in the form of a separate article to be numbered and designated "Article Public Indebtedness."

(Signed)

T. E. COLLINS, Chairman.

Article on Public Indebtedness.

Section 1. Neither the state, or any county, city, town, municipality nor other subdivision of the state shall ever give or loan its credit in aid of, or make any donation or grant, by subsidy or otherwise, to any individual, association or corporation, or become a subscriber to, or a shareholder in, any company or corporation, or a joint owner with any person, company or corporation, except as to such ownership as may accrue to the state by operation or provision of law.

Sec. 2. The Legislative Assembly shall not, in any manner, create any debt, except by a law which shall be unappealable until the indebtedness therein provided for, shall have been fully paid or discharged; such law shall specify the purpose to which the funds so raised shall be applied, and provide for the levy of a tax sufficient to pay the interest on, and extinguish the principal of, such debt within the time limited by such law for the payment thereof; but no debt or liability shall be created which singly or in the aggregate with any existing debt or liability exceed the sum of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), except in case of war, to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, unless the law authorizing the same shall have been submitted to the people at a general election and shall have received a majority of the votes cast for and against it at such election.

Sec. 3. All moneys borrowed by, or on behalf of, the state or any county, city, town, municipality or other subdivision of the state, shall be used only for the purpose specified in the law authorizing the loan.

Sec. 4. The state shall not assume the debt, or any part thereof, of any county, city, town or municipal corporation.

Sec. 5. No county shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner, or for any purpose, to an amount including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate, exceeding five (5) per centum of the value of the taxable property therein, to be ascertained by the last assessment for state and county taxes previous to the incurring of such indebtedness, and all bonds and obligations in excess of such amount given by, or on behalf of such county shall be void. No county shall incur any indebtedness or liability for any single purpose to an amount exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000), without the approval of a majority of the electors thereof, voting at an election to be provided by law.

Sec. 6. No city, town, township, or school district shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner, or for any purpose, to any amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding three (3) per centum of the value of the taxable property therein, to be ascertained by the last assessment for state and county taxes previous to the incurring of such indebtedness, and all bonds or obligations in excess of such amount given by or on behalf of, such city, town, township or school district, shall be void; provided, however: That the Legislative Assembly may provide for an increase in the limit mentioned in this section, by authorizing municipal corporations to submit the question to a vote of the taxpayers affected thereby, when such increase is necessary to procure a supply of water for such municipality which shall own and control said water supply and devote the revenues derived therefrom to the payment of the debt."

On motion of Mr. Collins of Cascade the reading of the above report was dispensed with, and the same was referred to the Printing Committee, to be printed.

The President: The convention had under consideration when it adjourned Proposition No. 19, Article on Legislative Departments. That now comes under the head of unfinished business, and will have precedence of all other matters.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, I move that the article be put upon its final passage, and be adopted as part of the constitution.

The President: The Chair is not aware whether all the amendments had been considered or not. Section 4 was under consideration. We will proceed now to the remaining amendments that were proposed by the Committee of the Whole that have not yet been acted upon.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I understand that the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole had been acted upon entirely; and that after action had been concluded upon the amendments, the amendment offered by Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke was considered. That is my recollection of it.

The President: The Chair is informed by the Clerk that there are some amendments that have not been acted upon, that were reported by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: The Clerk is certainly in error in making that report to the Chairman of the convention. I beg to call the attention of the convention to the fact, that under the rule all of the amendments in Committee of the Whole as recommended to the convention have been disposed of. Then, the amendment occurred upon Section 1 after disposing of those amendments, and the amendments were disposed of up to that time, to Section 4.

The President: The amendments that were reported by the Committee of the Whole have all been acted upon. The convention had disposed of Section No. 4, and it was adopted. Now, are there any other amendments to be offered to the proposition? The motion of the gentleman from Custer was not seconded, I believe.

The motion of the gentleman from Custer was here seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that Proposition No. 19 be now put upon its final passage; and this motion will be in order if there are no further amendments to be offered. Upon this vote the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cauby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Field, Gibson, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Marriou, Marshall, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—39.

Nays: Brazleton, Burns, A. F., Burns, A. J., Carpenter, Chessman, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Gillette, Hershfield, Hogan, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K., Toole, J. R. Warren, Winston, Mr. President—23.

Absent: Cardwell, Durfee, Gaylord, Graves, Kohrs, McAdow, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rickards, Schmidt, Webster—11.

Paired: Joy and Muth—2.

The Chair announced the vote and declared Proposition No. 19 adopted as part of the constitution of the State of Montana.

The President: This proposition will now go to the Enrolling Committee for the purpose of being enrolled, and then referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Proposition No. 28 is, I believe, printed as amended in Committee of the Whole, and is now upon the desks of the members.

The President: That proposition will come then before the convention for final consideration. The Clerk will read over the sections, and if there be any amendments they will be received.

The Clerk read Proposition No. 28 as amended in Committee of the Whole and the convention as follows:

"Article—

Sec. 1. Members of the Legislative Assembly and all officers, executive, ministerial or judicial, shall before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe to the following oath or affirmation, to-wit: 'I do solemnly swear (or affirm), that I will support, protect and defend the constitution of the United States, and the constitution of the State of Montana, and that I will discharge the duties of my office with fidelity; that I have not paid or contributed, or promised to pay or contribute either directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing, to procure my nomination or election (or appointment) except for necessary and proper expenses expressly authorized by law; that I have not knowingly violated any election law of this state, or allowed it to be done by others in my behalf; that I will not knowingly receive directly or indirectly, any money or valuable thing for the performance or non-performance of any act or duty pertaining to my office, other than the compensation allowed by law, so help me God.' And no other oath, declaration or test shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust.

Sec. 2. All officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by the constitution, and all officers whose offices and duties may be hereafter created by law, shall be elected or appointed as may be provided by law.

Sec. 3. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to authorize lotteries, or gift enterprise for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery, or gift enterprise tickets in this state.

Sec. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall enact suitable laws to prevent the destruction by fire, from any cause, of the grasses and forests upon lands of the state or upon lands of the public domain, the control of which may be conferred by Congress upon this state, and to otherwise protect the same.

Sec. 5. The Legislative Assembly shall enact liberal homestead and exemption laws.

Sec. 6. No perpetuities shall be allowed, except for charitable purposes.

Sec. 7. All county officers shall keep their offices at the county seats of their respective counties.

Sec. 8. In the disposition of the public lands granted by the United States to this state, preference shall always be given to actual settlers thereon, and the Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for carrying this section into effect.

Sec. 9. No railroad or other transportation company, or any agent, officer or employe thereof, shall grant free passes or tickets, at a discount, to members of the Legislative Assembly, or of the Judiciary or to any member of the State or County Board of Equalization, and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket by a member of the Legislative Assembly, or by such Judiciary or by any member of the State or County Board of Equalization, shall work a forfeiture of his or their office and the emoluments thereof; and any railroad or other transportation company violating any provision of this section shall forfeit to the state one thousand ($1,000) dollars for each and every violation thereof, to be recovered by an action at law."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move to strike out Section 4. That is exclusively within the province of the legislature, and it is a work of supererogation to put it in here.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Eaton of Park: In Section 3 of this proposition, it is a matter of taste, but with regard to the word "enterprise" it strikes me that that word ought to be in the plural. The use of the word in the last line is correct; but the word "lotteries" is used in the plural in the first place, and it should be I think "gift enterprises" instead of "gift enterprise" in order to conform with the word "lotteries."

The President: If there be no objection to the amendment it will so read.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have a section to be numbered 10.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move to strike out Section 9.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow has offered an additional section.

The Clerk read as follows: "Sec. 10. All property, both real and personal of the wife owned or claimed by her before marriage, and that acquired by her after marriage by gift, devise, descent or otherwise, shall be her separate property, and laws shall be passed more clearly defining the rights of the wife in relation as well to her separate property as that held in common with her husband, and providing for the registration of the wife's separate property." Offered by Warren of Silver Bow.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: The only objection I have to that is that it is a matter within the discretion of the Legislature, and it is not necessary to adopt it in our constitution. We have laws on our statute books embodying the same thing, and under the same power. The Legislature has the power to pass all such laws as that.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: If my recollection serves me, this is the same section that was stricken out by the convention when this proposition was reprinted. I think that that very section has been acted upon before by the convention.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, that is the same section that was considered in Committee of the Whole. As I understand, it is copied from the California constitution, and there was no opportunity to get the sense of the convention upon the matter. I believe it should be placed in the constitution.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: My recollection of this matter is that this section was not only fully discussed in Committee of the Whole as being purely legislation—matters that are almost as fully covered by the statute at present—matters not proper to go into a constitution—and that the Committee of the Whole reported back to the convention that this section among others be stricken out, and the report of the Committee of the Whole was adopted. Now, if that be true, it does not seem to me that the section could be reinstated except by a reconsideration of the vote by which the section was stricken out. I don't know what the minutes of the Clerk will show, but that is my recollection.

The Clerk read from the minutes as follows: Section 10 was stricken out and the following substitute offered: "The Legislature shall pass laws prohibiting the granting of free passes." &c.

The Clerk: That substitute was offered in convention.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Let me ask if the minutes show that these matters were done in convention.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Section No. 9 was adopted in convention.

The President: If it be true that this section was acted upon in convention and defeated, it can only be revived by a reconsideration of the vote. It is now moved and seconded that Section 9 be stricken out.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: If that is true, and this was acted upon in convention, each section of this proposition, why, then, it would be put out of order to strike out any section now—and no motion should be entertained except to amend.

The President: What section does the gentleman refer to?

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I refer to the whole Proposition No. 28. The only thing that can be done with it now is to put it on its final passage.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: The gentleman from Deer Lodge is quite correct. All of these propositions acted upon in convention and passed and referred to the Committee for Printing are all adopted.

The President: It was ordered to be reprinted, but the Chair does not understand that it was put upon its final passage and adopted.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: They are passed and printed to be put upon their final passage.

The President: If there was no motion acted upon to put it upon its final passage, it is subject to amendment up to that point. The Chair does not understand that there was a motion made to put it upon its final passage.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to offer an amendment before that motion is entertained.

The President: If there is a motion to put it upon its final passage no amendment can be entertained, but the Chair must be informed upon that fact before the Chair can decide.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: If I remember, a motion was made, and then I think Mr. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke, moved before its final adoption that it be printed; after these amendments had been adopted and passed section by section, while it was still under consideration, Mr. Toole moved that it be printed so that the members could have it under their eyes before it passed from them.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: Mr. President, this bill was acted upon and the amendments to each section were considered, and each section I think was considered, but there was no motion to put it upon its final passage. Each section was considered and it was agreed that it should be printed before put upon its final passage.

The President: It is moved by the gentleman from Yellowstone, which motion has been seconded, that Section 9 be stricken out.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I rise for information. Is that a proper motion for the House to entertain? Has not this convention already passed upon Section 9? Section 9 was separately adopted as all the other sections were adopted. I think it can only be considered by unanimous consent.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I have no desire to be captious, but I feel obliged to rise to a point of order, that this Section 9 has been passed by the convention, and that a motion to strike out is not in order, and the only way to reach it is by a motion to reconsider. I don't think unanimous consent is required at all.

The President: If the gentleman will wait a minute the Clerk will read the minutes upon the subject.

The Chief Clerk read portions of the minutes relating to the subject matter under debate.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: Do I understand that a motion to reconsider Section 9 is now in order?

The President: Section 9 was amended, and unless the convention has placed it upon its final passage the whole section is open to amendment.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: Do I understand the Chair to rule that this proposition is now open for amendment?

The President: Yes sir. The minutes show that it stands in status quo. The convention simply ordered it to be printed.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula, sent up a resolution.

Mr. Field, of Park: I move to strike out Section 9.

The President: There is already a motion to that effect offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Goddard. That motion is now before the house.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I call for the ayes and nays on the question.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. The question is on the motion to strike out Section 9.

The Clerk called the roll and the vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Browne, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Chessman, Craven, Dyer, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrión, Middleton, Mitchell, Reek, Rotwitt, Sargent, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter—33.

Nays: Breen, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Eaton, Gillette, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Marshall, Mayger, Myers, Robinson, Stapleton, Watson, Mr. President—28.

Absent: Cardwell, Durfee, Gaylord, Graves, Haskell, Joy, Kohrs, McAdow, Muth, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rickards, Schmidt, Webster—14.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to strike out Section No. 9 carried.

The President: There is an amendment by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Marshall, to be numbered Section 10, as follows: "No person elected to any other State or county office shall be eligible to be elected to any other office during the term for which he is elected."

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I move the adoption of that amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Marshall, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move to amend Section No. 1 by striking out all after the word "fidelity" on line 5, and down to and including the word "law" on line 11.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke, sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers to amend by striking out "two-thirds" in line 2 of Section 14, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "majority".

A Member: There is no Section 14.

The President: Section 14 was stricken out.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Those two sections were adopted. They were not reprinted because it was not necessary as there was no amendments to them.

The President: The Clerk will look up the record on that matter.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I would state that Sections 13 and 14 were both passed upon by the convention, and that where amendments were carried in the Committee of the Whole, and they were omitted in the printed copy because the amendments, I presume, were all of so little importance.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: The gentleman from Missoula is quite correct.

The Chief Clerk: After referring to the record Mr. President, there was no action taken upon these two sections whatever. They were neither adopted or amended. At that point the motion to print the sections considered was made, and there was no further action taken on these amendments.

The President: The question now before the convention is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by Major Maginnis that in Section 14, line 2, the words "two-thirds" be stricken out, and the word "majority" inserted.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, when the motion was made by my friend from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, in Committee of the Whole, in regard to the preceding section, that whenever it was necessary to call a new constitutional convention, a majority of the Legislature should be sufficient, my friend, Dr. Burleigh, made an objection, which I thought was tenable. I did not believe that a new constitutional convention could be called except under such great public demand for it as would insure the election of two-thirds of the Legislature in its favor; but when it comes to merely submitting the simple amendment to the constitution to the people, I think it ought to be done by a majority of the Legislature. We had under consideration a little while ago in the article on suffrage, this question of granting the right of suffrage to women. This convention was almost equally divided on the question, and I believe it was lost by a tie vote. During that debate considerable was said about being willing to leave this matter to the people, and to trust the people in regard to these amendments. I stated then that I was willing to trust the people to vote on that, and I am willing, and I think it is only right that a majority of the Legislature should be able to submit a proposition to amend the constitution to the whole people, which I think is formal enough and difficult enough to make it perfectly secure and an entirely safe course to take. Here again the other day a proposition was adopted in regard to representation by an extremely divided vote of the convention. Other propositions may yet come up which will make the constitution still more objectionable perhaps to some of the people to whom we submit it. Now, I presume that no member of this body would care to see this constitution adopted by a greatly divided vote; they would not care to see a campaign for it and a campaign against it, led by speakers in the contest perhaps this fall. Intending, as I do, to support it myself, although of course as every other individual citizen, if anything is so objectionable that my sense of right is concerned in it, I would reserve the right, as I believe every other member should, as a citizen, to oppose it. But I think we all intend to do what we can to secure its adoption by the people, and in view of all these things I submit that it would be wise not to make the process of amending it so extremely difficult that it could not be accomplished. I think a majority of the Legislature have a right to submit a proposition, and a majority of the people to adopt it, and while I agree with my friends in requiring two-thirds of the Legislature to call a new constitutional convention, I think in regard to the mere submission of amendments that we ought to take a different course.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I was very much pleased with the views expressed by my friend, Mr. Maginnis, the other day, and especially delighted that I should have such able support as I had from him; and the reasons which I assigned then I will not take time to assign again. Now, what has come over this convention, or the shadow of any distinguished gentleman's dreams to cause this change is more than I know. Now, I do not believe that a bare majority of the Legislature should have the power to submit amendments to this constitution, or to call a convention, or anything of that kind. I think it ought to be placed a little farther off; I think it ought to be placed where it would take at least two-thirds of the members of the Legislative body to call a convention for the purpose of amending the constitution. I certainly have not changed my mind, and see no reason to; and no matter what measure may be adopted here in this convention it is adopted by the will of the convention, and I most certainly ground my action and my views upon what I believe to be a firm, well established principle, and that is, in submitting a constitutional amendment it should require at least the vote of two-thirds of the members of the Legislature before it can be submitted.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Just one word in reply. Now, the gentleman took me to task during the debate on the suffrage question as not being willing to trust to the people—that is the Legislature, the representatives of the people—upon any proposition of that kind. Now, I am willing to trust the Legislature to submit a proposition to the people, but my honorable friend from Custer really does seem to have changed his mind, for he is not willing to trust the Legislature to do that.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Maginnis, to strike out the words "two-thirds" in line 2 of Section 14 and insert the word "majority".

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: Will an amendment to the amendment be in order?

The President: Yes sir.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: I move to amend by making it read "a majority of the members elected."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I believe that is the way it is now. As it reads now it says: "And if the same shall be voted for by two-thirds of the members elected to each house," &c. Now, I propose to amend it so as to read: "And if the same shall be voted for by a majority of the members elected to each House."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Mr. President, I desire to say a word in this matter if it is not too late.

The President: Both sides of the question have been put; it can only be by unanimous consent.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: There was an amendment to the amendment suggested just now.

The President: The amendment was not submitted, however. The ayes and nays had been called for on the previous amendment.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I ask that the gentleman may have unanimous consent.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I second the motion.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I object.

The President: If there is any objection, no further remarks can be received.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: If the Chair will permit me, I rise to a point of order: the ayes and nays had been called for. After that the Chair entertained an amendment, and that was accepted.

The President: There was no one seconded the offer to the amendment and no acceptance of it.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: The Chair at least stated that an amendment to an amendment was in order.

The President: Since that time the Chair stated to the convention that the ayes and nays would be entered on the journal. After that statement is made by the Chair no further debate will be allowed except by consent.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: To Mr. Robinson: Do you insist upon your objection?

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I don't see any reason for changing the rule.

The President: Proceed with the call of the roll.

The Clerk called the roll, and the vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Breen, Bullard, Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Hammond, Hershfield, Hogan, Joes, Knippenberg, Knowles, Maginnis, Marshall, Mayger, Myers, Robinson, Rotwitt, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Witter, Mr. President—29.

Nays: Bickford, Brazleton, Browne, Buford, Burleigh, Callaway, Carpenter, Conrad, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Hartman, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Kanouse, Kennedy, Loud, Luce, Marrion, Middleton, Mitchell, Reek, Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston—31.

Absent: Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Durfee, Gaylord, Graves, Haskell, Joy, Kohrs, McAdow, Muth, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rickards, Schmidt, Webster—15.

The Chair announced the vote, and declared the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke lost.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: If amendments are in order I wish to offer one.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers an amendment to Section 14 by inserting the following after the first word "house" on line 3, "except in the case of proposed amendments with reference to an increase in the number of State Senators and the reorganization of senatorial districts when a majority vote of the Senate will be sufficient instead of the usual two-thirds vote of that body."

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the amendment. The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I call for the ayes and nays.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It does not seem to me that this particular matter of the representation in the upper house of the Legislature should be any easier of amendment than any other matter that might come before the Legislature, or before the people in the shape of proposed amendments. The people elected seventy-five men to come here, who really are the people themselves, making this constitution. They intrusted this work of preparing a fundamental law for the State of Montana to us here in convention. Now, I agree with what Dr. Burleigh has said, and with what Major Maginnis said the other day on this identical question, that the matter of an amendment to the constitution should not be an easy matter. Take it from a political point of view where a party might have a bare majority in both houses, why, they could submit any and all kinds of questions to the people, and those matters continually coming up could do no good. If the people adopt this constitution as it will be submitted to them, it seems to me that it ought not to be any easier of amendment than when proposed by two-thirds of the members elected in each house of the Legislature, and the gentleman can show no argument in favor of amending in this respect with any more facility than in any other respect. It is simply a question, as it has appeared, somewhat of local feeling. Several counties are here, each and all of them represented. By a very decided vote, it was determined beyond question that it was the sense of this convention that in the upper house of the Legislature each county should stand on an equal footing, and have the identical and the same representation. Now, because the minority of this convention are dissatisfied, or seem to be, with the action of the majority, they desire to incorporate this easy mode of submitting the question to the people so that the minority of this convention may overcome what a large majority have undertaken to make a part of the fundamental law. It doesn't seem to me that it is right; it doesn't seem to me that there is any good reason for it. I do not believe the constitution should be easy to amend. I do not believe that a proposition, either to hold a convention for the purpose of preparing a new constitution, or amending it, or of adopting a single amendment, should be permitted to go before the people unless by a vote of at least two-thirds of the members elected by the people to each house of the Legislature. So far as the matter of representation is concerned, that was discussed to a considerable extent here last Saturday, and everybody had a chance to consider it carefully. The vote was decided, and by a large majority, in favor of the representation as indicated in Section 4. Now, unquestionably, the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Major Maginnis, although not so patent on its face, had the object in view of perhaps in the near future defeating what is the will of this convention. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Craven, puts the matter plainly before the convention, so that it can be seen that it is the object of the minority to overcome the action of the majority of the convention. It would seem that that condition of feeling ought not to exist here. So far as I am concerned, when I stand with the minority on a proposition of that kind and find that the majority are strongly against me, I submit; and when this constitution is concluded and ready to be submitted to the people, although, beyond doubt, there will be many things that I would prefer to see out of it, I intend to stand by that constitution and do all that I can to see that it is adopted by the people. But to say that there should be a feeling grow up among the minority of this convention which on its face shows that it is the purpose of the minority to overcome the action of the majority, it does not seem to me that the convention wants to place itself in that kind of light.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I would like to inquire what that motion to lay on the table would carry with it.

The President: The motion to lay this amendment on the table will carry the section with it.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: If the Chair rules that way I will withdraw the motion.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: What do I understand to be before the House?

The President: The motion to lay upon the table is withdrawn by the gentleman. The question now before the convention is the adoption of the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Craven.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, upon this question, and among others, I must vote according to settled convictions. Upon the question of woman suffrage, I voted against extending the suffrage to women because it was from a strong conviction that they did not want it; but I am in favor of extending to them the largest liberty as to property. Upon the question before us in regard to the organization of these senatorial districts, I voted firmly against the Senate arrangement which has been made by this convention. I did not believe that the principle which lies at the bottom of representation in the Senate of the United States applies to this Territory, or to the State which we are to form. We all know that thirteen independent States formed the constitution of the United States. It is stated that that constitution was formed by the people. It was, through their agents, but the people never directly voted upon it. Those Thirteen Independent States through compromise in regard to senatorial and representative representation arranged the constitution and the representation which they were to have. The States reserved to themselves many powers, and among other things, the right to the representation as States of two senators for each. The States occupied an entirely different position. They are sovereign except as to the powers that have been yielded to the United States. Now, the analogy does not exist between those states of the United States and those states and the counties within them. Each state is sovereign except it has yielded certain powers to the United States government. The United States were at that time; now the United States is; which simply states the distinction. In reference to the relation of the State to the counties, the scene shifts. The States are sovereign and the counties entirely dependent. The counties of Montana have no sovereignty of their own. The State of Montana is sovereign as other States; but the State of Montana, except as limited by this constitution, can abolish a county by amendment if it chose. It can create a new county or counties, or do whatever it pleases with them. The government of the United States has no control over states, except that which was yielded to it by the states themselves. Now, I have been in favor of popular government; I am still in favor of it. If the theory that the counties of a state bear to a state the analogy of the States to the United States, then we ought to change our Preamble and say that the United Counties of Montana ordain this constitution. (Applause in the galleries) Go further in the Bill of Rights and say the power is not conceded to the State or prohibited from the State, or reserved to the counties. (Applause)—follow out the analogy of the states of the Union to the United States government. Therefore, believing that this analogy does not exist, I have voted against this system of senatorial representation, because I believe it entirely wrong in principle, and without a principle or an analogy to sustain it. (Applause) With that system we will have rotten boroughs as they have in England, as they have in the State of Connecticut today, where a single vote in a country town will offset the vote of the populous cities of Hartford and New Haven. This is not popular representation, but it was put upon the people nearly one hundred years ago and it is there still—a simple theory or pretext of representation without any actual representation at the bottom. I am in favor of two bodies for the Legislature. In the United States government there is a reason for it, the sovereign States being represented in the United States government which they have made, and the people back of it being represented in the lower House. Here it is all popular representation. It is in all the States. There is no difference between the constituencies of the Senate and the House of Representatives in the proposed State of Montana; there is not in any of our States. The distinction made is that the House shall be principally a popular body, and the senate shall represent simply a larger constituency. Here the constituencies will be entirely the same. I am in favor of two bodies, although the constituencies are the same, although there is no reason for what is termed by high-flown writers, "our government system", yet I know it is important that there should be two branches to the legislative body, that one may be a check upon the other in a certain way—not a check because either one should have any larger powers than the other, but because the measures that pass one body through haste or improvidence or scheming, perhaps, will have a little time in the other body before they become law; and I think that if this convention had been divided a great many crude provisions that will go into this constitution would have had a closer scrutiny, and we would have a far better constitution than we will have. It is enough that the constituencies are not the same as they would be in the Senate and House of Representatives, but there would not be that haste. Here, as a matter of fact, anybody knows that if there are four flaws in an article proposed here, members may offer amendment to two and they will pass; nobody will object to them; but offer an amendment to two more and somebody will say "Stand by the committee." Now, having those settled convictions, I voted as I have done for this House of Representation on what I believed to be principle. There is no difference between the two houses; it is a popular rule of popular sovereignty in each case. I have the same opinion in regard to some other matters. I believe it is dangerous to leave it to the Legislature to pass a bill by a bare majority of the members present, and I have voted against that. I have known again and again of the most cruel and improvident measures because a simple majority could pass them, and Legislatures over again have changed that rule, and a majority of them now favor upon good grounds that no bill shall pass except by a majority of all elected.

Now, we come to this matter of amendments to the constitution. It is proposed that a bare majority of those elected shall tamper with the constitution. When the constitution is once adopted it should not be changed for every trivial cause, and at the beck of every man. (Applause.) I must stand on such settled convictions no matter where they hinge. Now, I am in favor of no amendment being submitted to the people—no amendment to this constitution being so submitted—without the endorsement of two-thirds of the Legislature. (Applause.) I believe that the most ridiculous, grotesque proposition you ever heard of, with a single flit of the breeze, would pass through the Legislature and would be submitted to the people; there would be no end to the propositions that would be submitted to them at every election. There ought to be some check to them. I would favor this: If a majority of two successive legislatures would recommend the submission to the people of any question, I would favor that, because that would give time for reflection, but I would never favor the submission of a proposition by the simple majority of one Legislature. If the simple majority of one Legislature favor the submission of the propositions and the majority of the next approve of it also after reflection and consideration and decide to submit it to the people, then I would favor the proposition; but if it is to be done by one Legislature, I say that it should never be done except upon the concurrence of those elected to each body. Now, when it comes to this Senate representation, while I am in favor of the Senate being elected by the people in proportion to the population, and am firmly of that opinion, if this convention has decided otherwise, then I cannot change my opinion as to the matter of submitting amendments simply because that would afford an opportunity to submit again one measure that I am in favor of. I have never voted in this convention except on principle, every measure standing on its own merits, and I would despise the man who would vote for one bad measure because by that measure he could get another person to vote for what he regarded a good measure. As I have stood upon every question, upon their merits, I stand now upon the merits of this, whether this be a particular proposition that I favor or disfavor. If we make this exception then we want to make another exception, that the question of female suffrage shall be submitted. We want to go on farther and submit the question of water taxation, irrigation, mining taxes and everything else as a separate proposition on a majority vote, when the convention says that every proposition must be submitted only upon the concurrence of two-thirds. I know of no other ground, except to stand upon principle in reference to all questions submitted here, and I believe that this is the highest legislative body that there could be in the Territory. In one sense, it is purely a legislative body, because we recommend the fundamental law of the Territory, which is the highest law; but at any rate, whether as constitution makers or fundamental law makers, we ought to make such a record here as will be an example to the Legislatures that are to come after us, to carry out the provisions, the skeleton work of which we lay out for them in this constitution. Therefore, for the reasons which I have given, I shall vote against this amendment.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge, called for the previous question.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge, I would ask that the gentleman do not press this previous question. I think that I have not intruded very much upon this convention in speech-making, but I desire an opportunity to explain and give some of my reasons for my vote on this proposition. I hope the gentleman, knowing somewhat the facts, will withdraw his motion at present for the previous question. I seldom ask such a favor, but I would like to have his motion withdrawn.

The President: The motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge was not seconded. The gentleman from Deer Lodge has the floor.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I am willing to attribute honesty of purpose to every member of this convention in the record of his vote on every proposition that comes before us, and I believe that every gentleman of this convention has done so, and yet there have been charges of unholy combinations against members of this convention for the purpose of influencing their votes. It has been charged on members of this convention that by means of these unholy combinations they have outraged gentlemen who are aspiring for position at the hands of the people. They have charged that members of this convention have outraged their constituencies, and they have hurled denunciation with their mighty force that the indignation of this outraged constituency will relegate the persons who have entered into these combinations into the confines of Dawson County. Now, Mr. President, I am proud to say that I have voted for this proposition; I am proud to say that every vote of mine on the ayes and nays that has been recorded here is in favor of this proposition; and I am willing to say that it is the most righteous proposition that has come before this convention. I say that by means of this a check will be put upon unholy combinations of capital for the purpose of rushing through hasty legislation. I say that it will be a check upon unholy combinations and secret combinations of the laboring element or any other element of secret organization to get through hasty legislation. You will remember, many of you—and it was before my time in Montana—and the time they had to get through what was known and called the "Gag Law," and every man interested in mines understands why that "Gag Law" was passed. It was to prevent any persons taking in their own hands the law and preventing other persons who had equal rights from performing their duties, and the old miners of that date will understand that that could not be passed by the influence and by all the votes of the populous counties until an appeal had been made to the small counties, to the farmers, to stand in and protect and do justice to the mining rights. Now, there is one instance of where such legislation would have been disastrous. For instance, the small counties, if they should desire on any occasion, could unite with the large counties. I say that on every occasion—and history will substantiate me—that whenever an appeal is made to the farmer constituencies—to the cowboys, as they are sneeringly called by certain members of this convention—that they are the ones that will always listen to appeals in favor of justice and of equity and right. You all know when Rome was on the verge of destruction they sent out for old Cincinnatus to come in and lead the armies on account of the corruption of the mass of the people and their distrust in their leaders. Now, I say this is one of the most righteous propositions in my opinion that has been passed by this convention. Now, the gentlemen talk about a principle being involved in this thing and they sneeringly say, "Shall Dawson County with its 400 votes have an equal right with Lewis & Clarke County with its 6,000 votes, and with Silver Bow with its 7,000 votes." They say the man who performed such and such a thing is committing treason. To whom? To the gentlemen who would like to have themselves placed before this public for high office, and they are the only ones I know of who feel that they have been outraged on this occasion. Not an honest miner, not an honest mining man—and I have talked with them in my county, and have never been assailed in my views—they say, "We are proud you had the courage to vote as you did"; none of these men have raised their voices against this. And I say I am in favor of this proposition for these reasons, gentlemen of the convention, that it is a righteous proposition, and one of the best ones that has ever been presented to this convention.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to have just one minute for a personal explanation. The gentleman from Custer, I think very unwittingly, charged me with having submitted this amendment for a certain purpose. As I said before, when the debate on woman suffrage was up, and when I was being charged with not being willing to trust the people, I at that time made up my mind that I would at the proper time offer an amendment to the constitution saying that a majority of the Legislature might submit a proposition to the people. Now, I am against this amendment offered by my colleague from Lewis & Clarke, but I stand, like my other colleague from Lewis & Clarke, on the general principle that a majority of the Legislature should at any time be able to submit a motion to amend their constitution to the people, and I do not believe that any fantastic or any wicked measures would be submitted, and if they were submitted I do not believe that under any circumstances the people would endorse them. I had an amendment prepared to offer in the Committee of the Whole to this effect, but my friend from Missoula, whom I am sorry to see, has rather reversed his position upon it, offered an amendment covering it, and I was one of the fifteen gentlemen who voted for that, intending at the time when it came before the convention to more fully liberate my views as to the necessity of this on all occasions. I believe it would have taken with this convention today but the gentlemen have gotten the notion in their heads that it was intended to subserve some prearranged purpose. Now, I am so strongly in favor of the right of the Legislature to submit amendments to the people at any time that I would almost be willing to accept that very thing for my amendment.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: Mr. President and Gentlemen of the convention, it is perhaps more a question of privilege to which I rise than anything else. It seems to me from my recollection of what has occurred in this convention that we have moved back the wheels of time at least two days. On Saturday when this question was discussed pro and con by able members of this convention, a motion was made to adopt this section, and in order to close the debate upon that question I made a motion to reconsider the vote by which it was adopted, and upon that motion moved to lay upon the table. That was carried by a vote of 36 to 31 I believe. I submit to you now, as a matter of recollection, as a matter of the part of the history of this convention, that when we left here Saturday forenoon every gentleman in this convention of the 75—there were three or four absent—understood that the proposition which we are now discussing, with the whole article itself, had been adopted by the ayes and nays of this convention. I remember too, as a fact, that after its adoption it was referred for the purpose of being printed, and sent to the Committee of Engrossment. Now, why gentlemen who oppose this measure as they do, and who speak so warmly against it, have taken this dodge in relation to the matter, I think can be readily understood. I admire the candor; I admire the manner in which the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Governor Carpenter, has addressed this convention. If he has reasoned upon principle, why he should oppose measures adopted in this convention, allow me to say to him and to you that I believe that this system that we are now proposing—this theory—is the best system of government ever instituted among men. The honorable gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, the other day said that we should institute a government, Republican in form, and from his illustration he seemed to believe that if we had only one senator from each county it was not Republican in form. My mind ran back over history, and I thought of George Washington and Benjamin Franklin and Alexander Hamilton and Randolph and James Madison, and I wondered when they came to form a Constitution whether they knew they were forming one Republican in form. I wondered again to myself that after I had lived my fifty-four years of life that I had been living all the time under a government not Republican in form. So far as this constitution is concerned, let me say to the gentlemen, we cannot improve upon it as our fathers made it. Why, one of the first things that these seventy-five gentlemen did in this convention upon the motion of the honorable gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, was that in order to comply with the Enabling Act, each of us came in here and held up our hands and swore under our oaths, "That we do hereby adopt the constitution of the United States." That was not the constitution made by this state only. I know the great conflict they had there. You all heard it—"we, the people of the United States in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility have ordained this Constitution for the United States of America." We simply say in this, "we, the people of Montana, do ordain this constitution for the people of Montana." The same figure, the same idea. Now, all we are asking is that these small cow counties, as you may call them—these lesser communities—may be allowed to say here, "We do not propose to be swamped by those who have a majority." I have no grievance to speak of; I have asked for no office; but you know and I know that two or three, when they get into a convention, "We will take this and go home and help ourselves." It is a check upon the popular body, and we ask it as a matter of right, as a matter of principle, as the best form of government that is yet, and that is all we do ask.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I advocated as warmly as I knew how the other day what I considered to be popular government, and I know that I did it just about as well as I knew how to do it. I know another thing. I know that I am beaten and I am not eating any sour grapes. I propose to vote for this constitution just as it is. (Applause).

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Craven) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I move we take a recess until eight o'clock.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that Proposition No. 28 be put upon its final passage.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I will withdraw my motion.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: If the gentleman will withdraw his motion, Mr. President, I would move you that Sections No. 13 and 14 of the original proposition as it was printed be numbered 9 and 10.

The President: If there be no objection, Sections 13 and 14 will be numbered 9 and 10. The question now is upon the adoption of Section 14.

The Chair put the question upon the adoption of Section 14, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hickman, of Madison: In line one of Section two the word "the" occurs where it ought to be, in my opinion, the word "this". I move a motion to substitute the word "this".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Hickman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out Section 2.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I now move that the Proposition No. 28 be put upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of Proposition No. 28 as amended. The Clerk will call the roll and the ayes and nays will be entered upon the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. B.; Burns A. J.; Burns, Edwards; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Reek, Rotwitt, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—57.

Nays: None.

Absent: Brazleton, Cardwell, Durfee, Gaylord, Gitlette, Graves, Haskell, Joy, Kohrs, McAdow, Muth, Parberry, Ramsdell, Robinson, Rickards, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K.—18.

The Chair announced the vote and declared Proposition No. 28 adopted as part of the constitution of the State of Montana.

Said Proposition No. 28 was then sent to the Engrossing and Enrolling Committee.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I now move that the convention take a recess until eight o'clock this evening.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until eight o'clock P. M.

August 5th, 1889. Evening Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at eight P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Mr. McAdow, of Fergus, desires leave of absence for the day. If there be no objection he will be excused.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move that the convention go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 33, General File No. 29, Ordinances.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Warren, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chair invited Mr. Marrion, of Missoula, to the Chair.

Mr. Marrion, of Missoula, begged to be excused.

The President called Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula, to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula, in the Chair.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 1 of Proposition No. 33 on Ordinances.

The Clerk read Section 1 of Proposition No. 33 as follows: "Ordinances. Be it ordained. First, that an election shall be held throughout the State of Montana on the first Tuesday of October, for the ratification or rejection of the constitution framed and adopted by this convention."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move that when the committee rise it report the Proposition No. 33 with the recommendation that it be made a special order for Thursday at ten o'clock. It is a matter of ordinances, and it seems to me, one of the last things to come up and will necessarily be hinged more or less on what the constitution itself is, and I don't think it ought to be considered at this time.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to move an amendment, that it be put at the foot of the calendar, and that it be the last proposition considered.

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: In connection with this matter, I would say that looking Proposition No. 33 over, it provides for the retiring of every officer in this Territory and for new officers to be elected, and it is probably one of the questions that we are likely to have a little scrap over; I think it ought to be taken up at this time.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I think the gentleman from Silver Bow has stated a very good reason why we should put this for the last thing on the file during the session of this convention. We have had scraps enough certainly during the last two days, and don't want anything that will create a scrap. I think, furthermore, that this being one of the propositions containing the ordinances, that we will find that some amendments are necessary to this ordinance. For that reason, I think it would be wise and expedient to postpone it for the last thing on the file.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I will accept the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Custer accepts the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, as amended on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Loud, of Custer: I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Loud, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chair declared the committee dissolved.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move you that the convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of general orders.

The President: If the gentleman will withhold his motion for a moment, the convention will hear the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: The Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 33, Article on Ordinances, and have requested me to report the same back, with the recommendation that it be placed at the foot of the calendar.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 33, and report the same back to the convention with the recommendation that it be placed at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move that the report be received and adopted. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Now, Mr. President, I renew my motion that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of General Orders.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The convention will now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole. The gentleman from Missoula will resume the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula, in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Chair desires to be informed what is the next proposition on the general file.

Mr. Witley, of Beaverhead: I move that we take up Proposition No. 23, Article on Public Lands and Exemptions.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The Chair is informed by the Clerk that there are several propositions that would form a part of this proposition on public lands that have been referred to the Committee on Printing, to be printed, and that they have not yet been returned by that committee, and until their return it would not be in order to take up this proposition.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move we take up Proposition No. 24.

The Chairman: If there are no objections, Proposition No. 24, article on Municipal Corporations and Officers will be taken up. General Files Nos. 9, 10 and 20, are to be considered in connection with this article. The Clerk will read Section one of the article.

The Clerk read as follows: "Section 1. The several counties of the Territory of Montana, as they shall exist at the time of the admission of the State into the Union, are hereby declared to be the counties of the State until otherwise established or changed by law."

There being no amendment to Section 1, the Clerk read Section 2 as follows: "Sec. 2. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to remove the county seat of any county, but the same shall be provided for by general law, and no county seat shall be removed, unless a majority of the qualified electors of the county, voting on a proposition at a general election vote therefor; but no such proposition shall be submitted oftener than once in four years, and no person shall vote on such proposition who shall not have resided in the county six months, and in the election precinct ninety days next preceding such election."

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I move to strike out the words "a majority" in line 3, and insert in lieu thereof "two-thirds".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Believing that it is already provided for, I would move you, sir, to strike out after the word "years" in line 4 of Section 2, the words "and no person shall vote on such proposition who shall not have resided in the county six months, and in the election precinct ninety days next preceding such election." I think that is already provided for in another part of the Constitution wherein the qualification of electors are prescribed.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the gentleman where it is.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: In that section which prescribes the qualifications of electors.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: There is no provision that a voter shall live six months in the county in which he votes.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: If I am wrong, I will withdraw the motion.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I am of the opinion that the section the gentleman refers to provides that an elector shall reside in the county thirty days only. I am in favor of the proposition that no one shall vote upon that subject who has not resided in the county at least six months.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Park offers an amendment which does not seem germane to the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula, so the Chair will put the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula, which is to strike out in line 4 all words after the word "years" to the end of the section.

Mr. J. K. Poole, of Lewis & Clarke: I think the gentleman from Missoula is correct on that proposition. In looking over Proposition No. 14 I see the statement first, "That he shall have resided in the state one year immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote, and in the county, town, or precinct such time as may be prescribed by law."

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: Whether or not it is provided for, it is in conflict with Section 2 of Proposition No. 14, for it says that every man is entitled to vote at all general elections. This moving of a county seat must be at a general election, and Proposition No. 14 prescribes what are the qualifications of voters at general elections, and that is evidently in conflict with that and should be stricken out.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Fields, of Park: I will withdraw my amendment.

The Chair: The gentleman from Park withdraws his amendment. Are there any further amendments?

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out all of lines 3 and 4 beginning with the word "voting" on line 3, down to and including the word "therefor" on line 4; and inserting in place thereof the words "at a general election on a proposition to remove the county seat, shall vote therefor."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I do that merely because this is very indefinite.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of Section 2 as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3, as follows: "Sec. 3. That the Legislative Assembly shall provide by general law the manner in which a part of any county may be stricken from such county and added to another county, or formed into a new county."

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I move that section be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: As an amendment to the motion, I move you to strike out the word "general" in line 1 of the section.

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion of the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I believe that we have adopted a proposition to go into the constitution which provides that a matter of this kind could not be done at a special election, so that if you strike out the word "general" in that section, then it would have to be by a special election, and the other proposition would be in conflict with it, and I am in favor of striking out the entire section, as proposed.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: My idea of striking out that section is this. It is an absurd proposition to have here. How in the world are we here to compel the Legislature to do anything? Our object here is to make fundamental law, and to place limitations upon the Legislature. We can tell the Legislature what it shall not do, but that we shall put something in here saying that they shall do something, and must do something, is absurd; that is forcing them. We cannot mandamus them to do a thing that they do not want to do, and without this section they have a perfect right to everything that is incorporated here, and I say it means nothing. The books are full of decisions on this proposition, that our business here is to make fundamental propositions, if we please, or to legislate; but we cannot tell any other body that they must legislate, and so I say this section is nonsensical and means nothing. The Legislature can do that without it, and will do it.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chair: The question recurs upon the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge to strike out the entire section.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I hope this motion will not prevail. Simply because I believe that if you strike out the section, then the Legislature will not have power to take off any portion of one county and add it to another. We have provided heretofore that this legislative power can only be had by general law, and if we do not provide in this constitution that this particular thing can be done, then I believe that the Legislature would not have the power. I think that is the idea of this committee in putting it in here.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I do not like to be obliged to read law books here, but this thing has been settled so often and so frequently by decisions of the court that I would like to read a few sections in this book by Cooley on Constitutional Limitations.

(The gentleman read extracts from said book.)

We are here for the purpose of placing restrictions upon the Legislature, not for the purpose of telling the Legislature what they shall do, or what they must do. As I say, we authorize them and say they shall make provision for this matter, and there is no mode of compelling them to do it unless they see fit to do it themselves. A court cannot compel them, and if the Legislature refuses to do anything, when we say they shall do it, why, there you are powerless again. The legislative department is not made specially for the exercise of specified powers; but it is entrusted with the general power to make laws at their discretion.

Here the gentleman read further extracts from Cooley on Constitutional Limitations.)

We are here to place limitations upon the Legislature. Now, the books are full of just such passages as those I have read in regard to this matter of telling the Legislature that they shall or must do this or that. You cannot compel them. The Legislature have this power, and undoubtedly will pass such laws as are necessary. I say that this is just simply a useless section, and for that reason I am perfectly willing that the Legislature shall do all of this, but they have that power now, and for that reason, I say, we do not want to build up our constitution with silly propositions which have no meaning and no force, and can have no force. For that reason I think it ought to be stricken out.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, to strike out the section, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 4, as follows: "Sec. 4. In all cases of the establishment of a new county, it shall be held to pay its ratable proportion of all then existing liabilities of the county or counties from which it is formed, less the ratable proportion of the value of the county buildings and property of the county or counties from which it is formed."

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I would like to have read in connection with this General File No. 20, Resolution No. 14.

The Chairman: The gentleman asks that Resolution No. 14, General File No. 20, a proposition the Chair believes that was submitted by the gentleman for incorporation into the constitution, be read with this section.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows: "Resolved, that there shall be no new counties established unless the assessed valuation within the limits or boundaries described for the proposed county shall be $3,000,000 or more. No territory shall be taken from any county whereby it would leave said county with less than $1,000,000 of assessed property."

The Clerk also read the history of the said proposition, as follows: "Resolution No. 14 by Conrad, General File No. 20. Establishment of New Counties. July 14th, received, read and referred to Committee No. 40 on City, County and Town Organizations. July 19th, referred back without recommendation."

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move you, Mr. Chairman, that it be added to Section 4 as a proviso.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I hope the committee will seriously consider this matter. If you put this in the constitution, it will stop the Legislature from doing anything in the matter of organizing new counties for a great number of years, and I do not believe this constitution can afford to say that. We have three counties in this Territory that comprise one-half of its area. One of the counties is divided in two by the Missouri River, and the portion of it on the north side is rapidly settling up, and by next year will certainly be entitled to a county government, and if you pass this piece of legislation you will stop that. In the early days, and only a few years ago too, a majority of the counties in Montana did not have $3,000,000 or $2,000,000 assessed valuation. I remember the great county of Meagher about sixteen years ago had an assessed valuation of $600,000 and got along very well. That is as complete a county government as any in the territory, and paid its expenses and paid its debt. The great county of Lewis & Clarke a few years ago only had an assessed valuation of $3,500,000, and if you put this in your constitution you will block the wheels right here and say to the people of Montana and this legislature, you have sixteen counties and you shall have no more. If you provide this you say that instead of a $3,000,000 valuation the county cannot be divided until it has $6,000,000 of assessed valuation. It is legislation to begin with, and if it was fundamental law, it is not the place here.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I think we ought to have some consideration for the taxpayers of Montana. Now, the gentleman goes on and says there is a portion of the territory divided by the Missouri River, meaning Dawson county. The gentleman on this floor, Mr. Haskell, who assessed that county last year found $200,000 of assessed valuation outside of the Manitoba Railroad. Now, any gentleman on this floor knows that a county government cannot be run on an assessed valuation of less than $2,000,000, which would make about $27,000. You hold four terms of District Court out of that, which you have provided for. I have been a member of the Board of County Commissioners, and I know something about the matter. Now, where is the money coming from unless you have $3,000,000 of assessable property to pay the mining expenses; and the people who have property in this country are entitled to some consideration and ought not to be taxed to death by men who want office. At each session of the Legislature there are a lot of lobbyists around here that want new counties. Some want to be sheriff, some treasurers, and so on, and if you put a clause in here putting some amount of taxable property, by which amount it cannot be created and without that amount of taxable property it cannot be created, they cannot come around here. I think that the proviso ought to be put in there.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to explain the position taken by the gentleman from Cascade. I hope that this provision will not be put in the constitution. I hope to see the day, in a short time when there will be fifty counties in this state. I believe in small counties, and I believe their affairs are economically conducted. I believe their officers are closer to the people. I have known when the counties of this territory were small and their assessed valuation was small, and I believe the county governments were then better conducted. I believe it is the tendency of large and wealthy counties to create extravagance. Yes, to create the demand for great public buildings and extravagance in other ways. I think that any one ought to be able to go to his county seat in one day; and it would be better if he could go there and back in one day. I believe the counties ought to be so small that there would be a general unity of interest and not a conflict as there is in our counties between different sections of the country. There never has been a county created except after a struggle in the Legislature, and there never has been a county created that was not rightfully created; and this county of Dawson had to be created by an act of Congress—the only county in the United States, I believe that was so created—because its formation was unjustly opposed by interested people. I think we may safely leave this matter to the Legislature, and I believe it will be for the interest of the territory, and for its welfare to have smaller counties, and allow the people more latitude in making them. In these big counties outlawry always exists away from the county centre. Every new county seat is a new centre of growth and development and a new government, and I hope the provision will not prevail.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: It seems to me that this is an iron clad provision here that is not wanted. I am speaking for my own section of the country, although we are not ambitious at present to slice the large county of Missoula into three pieces, but no doubt at some early day steps will be taken to accomplish this, yet I think the people of that section of the country would look with disfavor upon the passage of that provision. I believe the Legislature of Montana is sufficiently intelligent and practical to at all times cope with this question; and if the people of any section are desirous of forming a new county, and can advance intelligent reasons, notwithstanding the fact that there are always office-seekers anxious for those offices, I believe it would be better to allow the people that choice; and although as I say, the people of our county are not anxious at this time to divide that new country, yet I have no doubt that in the near future as the railroad development progresses that the step will be taken, and I think it can be taken with justice to all.

Mr. Browne of Choteau: I am opposed to this matter being in the constitution. I think it is a matter for the Legislature.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: A gentleman on this floor has presented a resolution that the state assume the debts of each county, and if the state had to assume the debts of these counties, it is my opinion that they would be less anxious to divide these counties and make new ones of them, when they are wholly and absolutely unable to take care of themselves. It is nonsense right at the beginning to allow these counties to put on the garments of independent government before they are able to wear the swaddling clothes of infancy. Now, if they have enough assessable property to commence with, there would be no taxes created that the people would not be willing and able to bear. I know in our county where the assessed valuation is $2,800,000, we have a debt over $100,000. After paying the interest on that, and the county expenses for this year we will run behind $3,000. That is why I put the limit in there.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: In connection with this Proposition No. 24, I ask that the Clerk read a petition that is on file from the residents of Glasgow, Dawson County, to be considered with this.

The Clerk read the said petition, signed by numerous citizens of Dawson County, petitioning the convention not to take favorable action on the Conrad Resolution.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: Now, so far as that concerns Proposition No. 24, or the amendment offered to it by Mr. Conrad, I am of the opinion that that ought to be divided. Now, the county of Dawson is nearly 235 miles in length, and north of the Missouri River it is over 200 miles wide. Now, if this proposition is incorporated as an amendment to Proposition No. 24, it would certainly be at least ten years before you would be able to obtain a division of the County of Dawson. Now, they have a railroad running through the northern part of that county for 209 miles. The assessed valuation of that at a fair cash value would be at least $1,000,000.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: How much assessed property do you find outside of the railroad? I believe you told me.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: If I am to answer such a proposition as that I will lose my case (Laughter); I do not propose to answer it. Now, I venture to say that North of the Missouri River there will be personal property this year to the amount of $100,000. Now, with the incoming immigration that will come in here this year that will undoubtedly have a population inside of twelve months of 2,000, and it is no more than justice to those people who knock at the doors of this convention to grant them that which they ask, and that is, that this provision introduced by Mr. Conrad shall not be incorporated as a part of the fundamental law. I say it will be an act of justice to those people who live over there. You take it, as they allege in that appeal to this convention, that they are obliged to travel a distance of 225 to 230 miles to get to the county seat. Now, I beg you gentlemen to consider that proposition fairly. It is a matter of equity and justice, although it may not be doing an act of justice to some of the other counties. Suppose we had a criminal case come up; it would cost us at least a matter of $500 to try it, as the county seat is now located in the southern part of the county. In an air line it is 230 miles, but the only way you can reach it by railroad is by going into Dakota up to Fort Buford. Those people at Glendive appeal to us for justice. As the law now stands we are unable to give it to them, except to give them a justice of the peace, and in my judgment, it will be a great saving to all of the people in that part of the territory, when the county can be divided. It would be no more than justice to that part of the county of Dawson lying south of the Missouri River, and also to the North. The gentleman from Choteau, Mr. Conrad, understands the situation just as well as I do. He probably is acquainted with a great number of those people, and in my judgment this proposition of Mr. Conrad's ought not to be incorporated into the constitution, not on the ground that it would be only doing an act of equity and justice to us to divide our county, but because in my humble judgment it is purely legislative matter; and as this convention has already taken the ground that we propose to stop so far as incorporating legislative matter is concerned in this constitution, I ask the convention to draw the line here now, and say to these people who have petitioned this convention that this clause shall not be incorporated.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I would just say for the information of the convention that Glasgow is the end of a division of the railroad, and I see that there are 65 signatures to this petition. Now, Mr. Haskell knows as well as I do that there are no more than forty people living there outside of the employes.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: Although that may be true, I recollect that there were more than 100 Democratic votes cast against me in that precinct last year (Laughter). I also found 90 of them sleeping there this year.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I do not like to take issue with my colleague from Dawson county, but I believe I am bound to do it sometime. He makes the statement here, that if he tells the truth, and the whole truth in relation to this matter, that it will defeat this proposition and he will lose his case. Now, I look upon this proposition as a matter of equity and justice to the people who live in the county to be created. Certainly no people living in any section of Montana ought to have a government of a county saddled upon them unless they are in a position to afford it, and certainly this constitutional provision would not bar them of that right, simply because the resolution offered by the gentleman provides that before a county shall be created they shall have an assessable value of $3,000,000. It has been demonstrated in every new county that has been organized in this territory since its existence that a county cannot start its courts and the machinery of government on a cent less than $3,000,000 of assessed valuation. Now, then it is not fair, if there should happen to be a town of 400 or 500 inhabitants located in one corner of the county, to satisfy the ambition of a few men to create a county for the purpose of getting office, to saddle a debt upon them for the purpose of carrying on a government in their county, and not only that but under this provision in the constitution, which I presume will be adopted in section 1, it provides that they shall assume their portion of the indebtedness of the old county, which is double the amount of the cost of the permanent buildings. So that nearly every county in the territory—nearly every one of these large counties in area are more or less in debt and to create a new county, for instance in the county of Dawson over at Glasgow would saddle upon the people of that section of the country a debt. Certainly those people down there have a right to say what they want about this matter, but I am inclined to think with the gentleman from Choteau that a great majority of the persons who signed that petition are not property holders and pay no taxes in that county. I recognize the fact that the gentleman says there were about that many votes against him there on the Democratic side; but I recognize the fact to be true further, that that has been the history of Montana ever since its organization, that a number of men have voted the Democratic ticket, and I may say that some of them have voted the Republican ticket who have no interest in common with the people who live in the county in which they vote; who pay not a dollar of taxes in the county; and I don't believe that the county ought to undertake to bear the responsibility of a government until the taxpayers of the county say they are entitled to it and demand it; and I shall support the proposition of the gentleman from Choteau upon this principle, that no county shall be created until they are ready to assume the government of a county and until they can pay the expenses. Now, when Yellowstone County was created out of Custer County, there was a large indebtedness in Custer County. Yellowstone County had to assume about $50,000 of that indebtedness, and I have an idea that about $49,000 of that is unjust; but be that as it may, it has placed a burden upon Yellowstone County that it will not be rid of for many years to come. For these reasons I shall support the proposition.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I agree with the gentleman who spoke here in the main upon several topics advanced here, but one reason why I am opposed to this amendment is that this is a matter within the exclusive province of the Legislature, in my judgment, and I think the Legislature can be safely entrusted to examine the matter when it comes before them and act intelligently, as they will honestly, in the premises. They will determine whether it is necessary to create a new county, or whether it is not; whether the interests of the people demand a new county or whether they do not. Now, I for one, maintain that small counties, as suggested by my friend, Major Maginnis, are much more economically administered so far as their affairs are concerned than a large county, even with the same number of officers and with the same resources. Now, my friend from Yellowstone County has alluded to the indebtedness of Custer County, and to having broken away from the bonds of the parental authority down there and set up housekeeping for themselves, and he says they assumed $50,000 of indebtedness, $49,000 of which he believes to be unjust. Now, I will tell you just how this indebtedness occurred. It came in consequence of having a county almost as large as the six New England States, the sheriff's fees, the witnesses' fees and the jury fees absorbed everything. Why, I have known a single term of court of Custer County, when it ran clear to the British lines or nearly there, to cost $27,500. After getting rid of Dawson County, and a cheerful parting with our friend from Yellowstone County, the expense began to come down, and the last term of court cost less than $3,000. Now, there is economy in having small county governments to administer, and the smaller the county is the less the expense. I care nothing about the population, and I care nothing about the wealth of the county. When you come to take a county that requires you to send a sheriff and his deputies two or three or four hundred miles to serve processes, to bring witnesses into court, to get jurors and everything of that kind, you have shouldered a liability that would swamp any county in the country. Now, I don't believe there is any danger in entrusting this thing to the Legislature. I have a great deal of confidence in a Montana Legislature even, and I believe that when they come to consider this matter, they will do it fairly, dispassionately and with a view to justice and economy. Now, I am not one of those men who are so distrustful of my fellow-man as some men are. Perhaps I have more faith than some of them. I certainly have more than my friend who addressed us this evening, and to whatever annoyances we have been subjected heretofore, we are all right now. The citizens of Montana have gone to Botany Bay, and have imported a system of voting that is a panacea for all of our political wounds and a good deal more. I hope the motion of the gentleman from Choteau County will not prevail. I do not think it is proper to put his resolution in the constitution. I think it is a proper matter to leave within the control of the Legislature, and the Legislature only; and while a great deal has been said about there not being anything north of the Missouri River I have been over every mile of that country there, and it is as fine a grain growing country as there is in the world, and having become opened up, and the Manitoba Railroad going through there, it is going to be a populous, densely settled country. It is only a question of time when it will be necessary to admit them to the privileges of a new county government, because if they are going to maintain their county seat at Glendive, it could not help them; there will be nothing left of it. In regard to the population there now I know nothing about it; but as my friend remarked when this little question came up in regard to the number of people over there that there was one hundred Democratic votes polled against him, I will say that I have no doubt of that; I would not be surprised if there were 200. The country has experienced some phenomenal towns over that way—Wilder's Landing and Tolley's Ranch. I hope the motion will not prevail.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I wish to add my protest to those who have already spoken against the adoption of this resolution. I quite agree with Mr. Goddard. I believe that a county government should not be forced upon the people until they want it; but I believe the Legislative Assembly is as competent to judge of the wants or needs of a certain section of this territory or state as this Constitutional Convention, and I am opposed to incorporating anything in our constitution of this character. I want to say, too, in view of our action here last Saturday, that if we are going to adopt a proviso of this character, at all, I would rather favor $12,000,000 than $3,000,000 so as to make it practically impossible to ever have a new county in Montana.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of General File No. 20, the resolution offered by the gentleman from Choteau, which has been referred back to the Committee on City, County and Town Organizations without recommendation, and which it is moved to place at the end of Section 4 of Article 24 as a proviso.

Mr. Hobson of Fergus sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman moves a second proviso that nothing in this section shall prevent the readjustment of county lines between existing counties.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I believe that is an amendment to the amendment, and I will accept that.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Choteau accepts this amendment to his resolution.

The Chair put the question on the motion to adopt the resolution offered by Mr. Conrad of Choteau, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Hobson of Fergus: I would like to renew my amendment and have the proviso attached to the printed section.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Fergus desires to renew his amendment to the printed section as follows: "Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the readjustment of county lines between existing counties."

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the adoption of that proviso.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I move that the section be adopted as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Hogan, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5 as follows: "Sec. 5. When any part of a county is stricken from one or more counties and attached to another, the county to which such part is attached shall be liable to pay the ratable proportion of such part of all then existing liabilities of the county or counties from which such part is taken, less the ratable proportion of the value of the county buildings and property of the county or counties from which such part is taken."

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out Section 5; it is purely legislation and ought to be left to the Legislature.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Maginnis, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 6 as follows:

"Sec. 6. When any county formed from contiguous territory taken from older counties, or when any county to which territory shall be added or taken from, an adjoining county, shall fail to pay the proportion of indebtedness of such territory to the county or counties from which it is taken, then it may be lawful for the county from which such territory has been taken to recover from the county so failing to pay, by action at law, the proportion of indebtedness for which it shall be liable, as provided in the two preceding sections."

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I move to strike out Section 6.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow. Mr. Clark, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I move that Sections 7 and 8 be stricken out for the same reason that Section 5 was stricken out.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the section before any motions are received.

The Clerk read Section 7 as follows: "Sec. 7. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the subdivision of the several counties of the State into townships, districts, or precincts, of convenient number and size."

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I renew my motion to strike out Section 7.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I would like to know how this matter is to be provided for if it is to be stricken out. The Legislative Assembly should be empowered, it seems to me, to do this. There is no provision for it.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: Referring to the sections that I have read from the law books, they say that the power of the Legislature is absolute. The only limitation is wherever the constitution says they cannot do a thing. Now, I go further than any gentleman of this convention, and I do not propose to be shut up by the sneers of those who say that we have all the wisdom of this age and the age to come. This Legislature cannot pass any provision different from that; but I say we are coming in here and saying that the Legislature shall do so and so. Why, it is superfluous. It has no business here, and the Legislature has a perfect right when they are not limited by us to pass any laws they see fit. If it is for the good of the people to legislate on this matter they will do it, and if we state that they shall do this, that does not compel them if they see fit not to do it. These sections are just encumbering our constitution with a lot of trash that has no force or effect whatever.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I agree fully with the remarks of the gentleman from Deer Lodge. The convention, I suppose, does understand, and every lawyer understands the difference between the constitution of the State and the constitution of the United States. For instance, the constitution of the United States is that of delegated powers. It is the receptacle of the powers that have been granted to it by the States, and that is the limitation. Now, the power of the Legislature stands upon an entirely different basis. The Congress of the United States must legislate within the powers granted to it by the States respectively, but the constitution of the State possesses plenary powers provided they are not in conflict with the powers that have been granted by the States to the United States. For instance, we start out in every State constitution with the Bill of Rights, and reserve something to the people, but wherever those reservations are not made I think it has always been held that the Legislature has full power to legislate. Consequently, upon the division of the counties, it is not necessary to grant any power to the Legislature because it is not withheld from them anyway, that I know of, and not being withheld the power can be exercised. The power of the people of the Territory of Montana will hereafter be exercised by the Legislature of the State of Montana, so far as it has not been withheld or limited by this constitution. That is the way I understand it, and I think that the gentleman from Deer Lodge is perfectly right.

The Chairman: The question is upon the motion to strike out Section 7.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I move that the reading of Section 8 be dispensed with, and that it be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 9 as follows: "Sec. 9. In each county there shall be elected three County Commissioners, who shall compose the Board of County Commissioners, and who shall hold sessions for the transaction of county business as provided by law, and any two of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The board shall elect one of its members chairman."

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move an amendment to Section 9.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow moves to amend Section 9 by adding the following: "Provided that all county and township officers now holding office in the Territory of Montana, or in any county or township of said Territory, are hereby declared to be officers in the respective counties or townships of the State of Montana until the general election for congressmen in the year 1890, shall elect their successors, and thereafter until their successors shall qualify."

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of that amendment. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I would suggest simply to the gentleman who introduced the amendment that he excepts out of that amendment the Probate Judge, as the Judiciary Act has provided for the abolition of that office.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I accept that amendment.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I have no objection to the amendment as offered by Mr. Warren being considered on its merits; but I move to amend by striking out all of Section 9 after the word "Commissioners" in line 2.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I will very briefly give my reasons for that. It seems to me superfluous. If my motion prevails, we have provided that the county shall have three County Commissioners, who shall compose the Board of County Commissioners. Now, the idea of going on to say that they shall hold sessions, and how many shall constitute a quorum, and when they shall elect their chairman, seems to me to be superfluous.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I disagree with the gentleman as to its being superfluous. Where we want to legislate here, we can do it. It is purely legislation and it may be proper. It is well enough if we want to legislate on that subject for us to legislate and say they shall hold sessions for the transaction of business. We can say that here if we want to.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: Yes, but we don't want to.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Rickards, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I will withdraw my amendment for the purpose of adding the same to Section 11 when it comes up.

Mr. Fields, of Park: I believe after the words "who shall compose the Board of County Commissioners", the words, "the Board of County Equalization" should go in. I think we provided the other day for a State Board of Equalization, and a County Board of Equalization, and the County Commissioners should comprise that board.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I will ask the gentleman if that is not already provided for in another section.

Mr. Fields, of Park: I understand it is provided for, but it is mentioned here that the County Commissioners shall comprise the Board of County Commissioners, and if you put in the words "who shall compose the Board of County Commissioners", I don't see any reason why the Board of County Equalization should not be fixed also.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I would suggest to the gentleman that that is provided for in the other section. The Board of County Commissioners, as I understand it, is the Board of Equalization, and they have a special term for sitting as the Board of Equalization.

The Clerk read Section 10 as follows: "Sec. 10. The term of office of the County Commissioners shall be four years, except as otherwise provided for in this constitution. At the first general election provided for by this constitution there shall be elected in each county three County Commissioners. The one receiving the highest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election in 1896; the one receiving the next highest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election in 1894, and the one receiving the lowest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election in 1892; and each shall hold his office until his successor is elected and qualified. A vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners shall be filled by appointment by the Governor."

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move to amend Section 10 by inserting the words, "after the first general election provided for after the adoption of this constitution" instead of "After the first general election provided for by this constitution."

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow moves to amend the section by adding after the word "for" in line 2, the words "after the adoption of" and striking out the word "by" in line 2.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move as a substitute for the amendment to insert after the word "constitution" on line 3 the words "after its adoption", so that it will read "at the first general election provided for by this constitution after its adoption."

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I will accept the substitute of the gentleman from Gallatin in place of the amendment offered by myself.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow accepts the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin in lieu thereof; amend Section 10 by inserting after the word "constitution" on line 3, the words "after its adoption." So that it will read "At the first general election provided for by this constitution after its adoption."

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I cannot understand how that changes the sense of the reading of this section at all. It reads now: "At the first general election provided for by this constitution after its adoption." It is no constitution until it is adopted.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Mr. Chairman, I notice that the effect of my amendment is not what I intended it to be, and I therefore withdraw it.

The Chairman: The gentleman withdraws his amendment.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin, sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Cooper, moves to strike out the last word in line 8, and insert in lieu thereof, "District Judge", so that the vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners instead of being filled by the Governor shall be filled by the District Judge.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I would say in favor of the motion that I do not believe that the Governor ought to have anything to do with county affairs. In the first place, the Governor is not qualified to select; he does not know the people, as a rule, in the counties, and he certainly is not qualified to select officers to do the business of the counties. Hence, I am opposed to any interference of that kind, and I believe that the Judge of the district or somebody else should do that. It will read if amended, "A vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners shall be filled by the District Judge." That is the way the section would read if amended. It takes it out of the hands of the Governor and delegates it to the District Judge.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Cooper), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade, sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, moves to strike out Section 10, and to add to Section 9 the following: "Whose term of office shall be two years, except as otherwise provided for in this constitution."

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of that amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: This motion is to strike out Section 10—the entire section—and to add to Section 9 the words "Whose term of office shall be two years, except as otherwise provided in this constitution."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: It might be best to strike out everything else but the second sentence of Section 10, and add this to the two sentences, so that it would read as follows: "At the first general election provided for by this constitution there shall be elected three County Commissioners whose term of office shall be two years, except as provided for in this constitution."

The Chairman: The gentleman then moves to amend by inserting after the word "Commissioners" in line 3 of Section 10, the words, "whose term of office shall be two years, except as otherwise provided in this constitution."

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: My intention was to leave the last clause of Section 10 in, and insert this after the word "Commissioners" in line 3.

The Chairman: The section then as moved to be amended by the gentleman from Cascade would read, "At the first general election provided for by this constitution there shall be elected in each county three County Commissioners whose term of office shall be two years except as otherwise provided in this constitution. A vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners shall be filled by appointment of the District Judge."

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I wish to say that this represents the matter before the convention whether the term of office of the commissioners shall be two years or six years. I am in favor of the short term. Gentlemen may say that the objection to this will be that a new Board of County Commissioners goes out every two years, and you are not liable to have an experienced man on the Board of Commissioners. Now, in my experience, I believe it is better to change the Board every two years than it is to allow one man to fill the position for six years and another for four years. That is too long. If there are any abuses in the Board it cannot be changed, and if there is a good man on the Board he will be elected. The office of County Commissioners is a county office, and the term of that office, in my opinion, should not be more than any of the other county offices. The two horns of the dilemma are two years or six years, and, in my opinion, two years is far preferable.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I agree fully with the remarks of my friend from Cascade in regard to the office of the County Commissioners. I think I have seen the evil of electing gentlemen for six years, and as just remarked by him, if we get good men we can re-elect them. If we get bad men we cannot do anything but elect them for two years. I told you they get a little scabby sometimes, and I am in favor of electing them for two years and trusting to luck to fill their positions.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: My experience with county matters and County Commissioners would certainly lead me to believe this is not a wise policy. I have noticed in coming in contact with County Commissioners, while in possession of county offices myself, that a new board of County Commissioners often consists of farmers or possibly miners, or men not familiar with the details of county work, and it takes them almost the whole of the first year to learn the routine of the business, and it is uphill work for them. If they hold out for two years, it is possible they may be re-elected, but the usual history is that after a man has served a term in a county office that he gets such a hauling over the coals that he is not anxious for the office afterwards. It is something unusual to find a Commissioner succeeding himself. It seems now that the provisions of this bill are wise. One goes out every two years. That leaves an old member at the helm all the time. A new man comes in; he is very soon initiated in the actual business of the office, and it makes the business of the board run more smoothly, more so than it would if you elected a new board every two years.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I dislike very much to take up the time and attention of the convention; but the very reason that the gentleman assigns here for wanting to continue them for six years or four years is the very reason which I urge against it. Now, he says they learn the routine of the business. My experience has been that they learn it too effectually.

They get so after a while that they acquire this art of what we used to know when boys as presto change, that is, now you see it, now you don't. (Laughter) Now, a few years ago it became necessary in Custer County to bond its public indebtedness, and there was a law passed in this Legislature allowing the Commissioners to bond the outstanding indebtedness to the extent of $250,000. Well, the law provided that the bonds should not be sold at less than par. That was all right—that was the spirit with which they issued the authority to bond the indebtedness; but I discovered before I had been around the County Commissioner's office a long time that while they would live up to the law, they were going to pay a gentleman a percent for selling the bonds amounting to $17,500. There was one of these Boards of County Commissioners that had been in some time, and had acquired the very knowledge that my friend speaks of, and had acquired it so very effectually that we had to send to Bozeman, where the District Court was in session, and sue out an injunction, and it was the most ludicrous scene I ever witnessed. I happened to be the attorney for the taxpayers of the county, and went down there and ascertained that that day they had passed a resolution paying seven and a half per cent to a certain man there.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: He was not a banker.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Not from Butte. I took a seat in the Probate Court and sent a man in there to see when they adopted the resolution, and he came in and told me they had just adopted the resolution to pay the $17,500 of percentage. I took the papers in and told him to serve them on the Chairman of the Board of Commissioners and on the Clerk, and I noticed that one of the Commissioners discovered it, and he was one of these men who had experience; he had acquired the art of business. He went up to the Clerk and said he, "Charlie, has Burleigh injunctioned us?" And the result was that this man who had learned a great deal of experience took away from the taxpayers of that county $17,500. I suppose he wanted it for the church. He was a churchman. However, I took it for granted that he was a good man, and he wanted it for some useful purpose. But I am opposed to letting men go in there and learn all the ways that are dark and the tricks that are vain.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I suppose we all realize the fact that this little affair in Custer County has doubtless distorted the focus of the gentleman, and has induced him to take the same pessimistic view of human nature. I admit that I don't have the impression of men that these officers are always waiting the chance to play the presto change game. That kind of people, Mr. Chairman, will play the game the first year they are there. If people don't like them they get rid of them pretty quick, and I believe that the average citizen, at least on our side of the country, and this section of the country can be entrusted with the county affairs without that presto change business being carried on.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Allow me to ask, was the amendment itself lost in its entirety?

The Chairman: It was offered as one amendment, and the Chair put it as one.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I think I am in order, Mr. Chairman, and I move to amend this section by striking out all of the first line to and including the word "constitution" and inserting after the word "constitution" in line 3, the words, as amended by Mr. Collins there, except insert "four" where he had "two" and strike out all of Section 9. I think, gentlemen of the committee, if you will look at this matter of amendment, you will see that Section 9 is really superfluous. Why are you providing that there shall be three County Commissioners in Section 9, and then provide the same thing in Section 10?

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move the committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 24, article on Municipal Corporations and Officers, have made some progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that the committee have had under consideration Proposition No. 24, article on Municipal Corporations and Officers; that they have made some progress, and ask leave to sit again. If there be no objection, the report will be received and leave to sit again granted.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the convention adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The convention then adjourned until Tuesday, August 6th, 1889, at ten A. M.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

Tuesday, August 6th, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the President at ten A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Mayger is not well today and desires to be excused.

The President: Mr. Mayger will be excused if there be no objection. The Chair announced that there was no quorum present.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the call of the house.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried. (Several members came in and occupied their seats.)

Mr. McAdow, of Fergus: I move to dispense with the future proceedings under the call.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Fergus, Mr. McAdow, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk again called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge, sent up a report of standing committee on Mining and Water Rights.

The President: The report of the Committee on Mining and Water Rights will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee on Mining, Water and Water Rights, to whom was referred Memorial No. 1, relating to the importation of lead ores from Mexico have had the same under consideration and ask leave to report the same back without recommendation.

(Signed)

J. R. TOOLE, Chairman.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning this report?

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: First, is a motion for its adoption in order? I move the adoption of the report.

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I move that the report of the committee be received and properly placed on file.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I move to amend that, that it be received, printed and be considered in connection with the article on Water and Water Rights.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I object to any such filibustering with that resolution. It is not a resolution. It is a memorial.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin moves that the report be received, the resolution printed and considered in Committee of the Whole with the proposition for article on Water and Water Rights.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order in this matter. It is no proper matter to go into the constitution, and as I understand, it has no right to be considered by any committee. It was wrongfully committed to this committee.

The President: A motion to commit is always in order, and being the only motion before the convention, the Chair will put the motion.

The Chair put the motion.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: In view of the fact that I have understood from one of the members that they do not propose to make any report on this matter, I hope this motion will not prevail. I hope it will bury this matter.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: It is not my intention to bury this matter. It is my intention to get it before the Committee of the Whole, or the convention. There must be some course taken to get it before the Committee of the Whole. Unless taken up with some proposition it cannot be considered in Committee of the Whole. I want to keep it alive so that we may consider it and discuss it, and do with it that which is proper to be done. It should go on the general file in some manner. I know of no other way.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Is a motion to amend in order?

The President: A motion to amend is not in order.

Mr. Aiken, of Silver Bow: As this is a matter not to be reported in the constitution, I make a motion that that resolution be laid on the table.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Mr. President, I would like to know what this memorial is. I just got "Mexico" in my ear, and I could not tell whether it was a scheme for the annexation of Mexico to the United States or what.

The Clerk read the memorial for the information of the gentleman.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I move as an amendment that this memorial be adopted as the sense of this convention.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I was just going to rise to a point of order, as to whether that motion is debatable.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I am heartily in favor of most of the statements in this memorial, but I would ask whether it is to be construed as a vote of censure on the Republican administration; if it is, I should be a little tender about voting on it.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I just want to make one remark.

The President: This question will be received without debate.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I want to explain my vote then. (Laughter) I am heartily in favor of the amendment embraced in this proposition. I have no objection to their taking their lead in any direction they want to, but we don't want it here.

The President: The gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I would ask for information: what the history of this memorial is?

The Clerk read the history of the memorial for the information of the gentleman.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Now, Mr. President, if I understand the motion, it is to lay this matter on the table, and on that I call for the ayes and nays.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I wish to call attention to one fact. I notice that this is called Memorial No. 1. If I remember correctly, Major Maginnis presented a memorial here respecting arid lands which was marked No. 1.

The President: The Clerk will look that matter up, and correct the number if it is wrong. If there is no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered in the journal. Those in favor of the motion to lay the resolution on the table will when their names are called say aye, and those opposed no.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I want to explain my vote upon this proposition. It seems to me to be political dodge on the part of the gentleman who introduced it, and I want simply to say that I object to making a special case of this lead matter. If he will include all the Montana industries I would be very apt to vote for it. I shall vote aye.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to explain my vote in this matter. I am heartily in favor and in accord with the intent of the memorial. I would like to see a ruling from the Secretary of the Treasury in favor of the lead interests of Montana; but the language in the memorial does not accord with the proper dignity and propriety towards the officials of the government, and therefore I shall vote aye.

The Clerk called the roll, and the vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Browne, Collins, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Gaylord, Gibson, Hammond, Hatch, Hershfield, Hogan, Joyes, Middleton, Myers, Robinson, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Winston—20.

Nays: Brazleton, Breen, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Callaway, Carpenter, Chessman, Conrad, Craven, Dyer, Eaton, Gillette, Goddard, Hartman, Haskell, Hickman, Hobson, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marshall, McAdow, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Witter, Mr. President—39.

Absent: Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Cauby, Durfee, Fields, Graves, Joy, Kanouse, Marrion, Mager, Muth, Parberry, Schmidt, Watson, Webster—16.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to lay the resolution on the table lost.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: In connection with this matter, I wish to disclaim any political dodge or anything of the kind. I have in my hand a letter written to M. D. Van Horn, secretary of the American Lead Producers Association, to the Honorable B. C. Kingsberry, one of the prominent Democrats of this country. Mr. Kingsberry handed me this resolution written by the secretary of that association. A like resolution had also been sent to the Idaho Constitutional Convention, and they adopted it. I have a telegram from the Washington Constitution Convention saying that they have without a dissenting voice adopted the resolution, and saying, what is the matter with Montana? I disclaim any partisan side issue or anything of the kind. I now move the adoption of the resolution.

The President: The motion is to commit to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: Now, sir, I am right about this matter. Perhaps the language of this memorial might be changed by this convention. I think we are not wholly ready to vote upon this and commit ourselves upon the memorial upon a mere reading of the matter, and my object in having it printed is to have it laid upon the desks of every member here. I don't think there is anything the matter with Montana. I may vote for it or against it, as I see fit. I have no general recollection now as to what was in that, and I make the motion to have it put somewhere on the general file where we can vote on it conscientiously. I hope my motion will prevail.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I hope the motion to print will prevail. I presume that I shall vote for the resolution. I am in favor of it in a general way, but I shan't vote for it without a careful scrutiny of it. If it contains any reflection upon anybody who has been in charge of the affairs of this government, I should not vote for it in this convention, no matter whether it was a Democrat or a Republican this reflection was cast upon. Therefore, while I am in favor of this resolution, I hope it will be printed.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: My colleague only expresses the request which I contemplated making in this matter, and that is that the suggestion of the gentleman from Gallatin is very wise and ought to prevail. We ought to know what we are doing in a matter of this kind. If it comes out in the public print and contains censorious remarks on public authorities, it would not be dignified upon the part of this convention to be guilty of an act of that kind.

Mr. Conrad, of Choteau: I move to amend by referring it to a select committee with instructions to print after they have revised this memorial.

The President: The motion to refer to the Committee of the Whole the Chair thinks takes precedence.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I move that a committee be appointed by the Chair to which all memorials of this character may be referred.

The President: The motion is not in order. The Chair will state the question. The question before the convention is that the resolution be ordered printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I have not discovered in this convention much of politics; nor do I believe that the memorial presented by the gentleman from Silver Bow is of any political significance. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke said something to the effect that if we wanted to censure the President and the Secretary of the Treasury, we might have the pleasure of doing so, if I understood his remarks.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: No sir. I said that if it did contain a censure upon the Secretary or the President we ought to be tender about passing it.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: Now, Mr. President, I differ with my friends from Lewis & Clarke, Governor Carpenter and Mr. Hershfield. This is a memorial in a very respectful tone—very respectful words. It is perhaps an implied censure; I don't know about that; but if it be that any officer of this government, I care not who he is, from President down to the lowest office, has been negligent in his duty, it is the right of this convention, representing 200,000 of the sovereigns of this nation, to say that we want to call their attention to what has been neglected. I have no disposition, Mr. President, to shirk the responsibility. Now, taking into consideration a matter of such great importance to the mining industries of Montana, when we have some reason to believe that the law has not been enforced, to say to ourselves in this convention we will vote "no" because we fear that somebody might be offended, I do not believe it is the intention here at all; but when we know that the interest affected by the nonperformance of the law has been jeopardized, we certainly have a right as a part of the people of this country to say to these gentlemen, "We would ask you, and we ask to call you attention to the fact that this law has been neglected," if it be true. If the law has not been neglected, then we have simply done our duty in asking whether we have.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: Mr. President, it seems to me in relation to this matter it is a mistake all the way through. What are we here for? Are we here to recommend legislation to the United States government? Are we here for the purpose of memorializing Congress and about what we think it ought to do? Or are we here under the Act of Congress, and by virtue of that act to form a constitution for the people of this Territory? My own idea has been that the last was the purpose for which we were assembled, and I think, as I said before, this proposition has no connection with the constitution, and ought not to be incorporated here, and ought to be defeated here. Now, so far as I am concerned, I have a desire to say, and take this opportunity of saying it, rather than interrupting the roll call, that, as to my own vote, there is a portion of this proposition that I am heartily in favor of; although I don't believe it is the proper time and place to present it, nor is it the proper way to bring it before the Congress in this memorial. There is a tariff on lead. So far as that tariff is capable of a construction favorable to the interests of Montana, I am in favor of that construction decidedly, and I would like to see that construction put upon it by the Secretary of the Interior; but so far as this resolution goes and further—so far as it would seek to imply a general leaning or inclination to favor a system of protection itself, I should certainly be opposed to it. As I said, it is capable of construction, and if it favors the interests of this Territory, I would like to have it construed in that way. Further than that, I would not like to see this resolution go. So far as it implies any censure upon any of the officers of the government; it seems to me, it is reflecting upon their inaction in the matter, to say the least, and I think it would be impolitic at this time for the convention to take any action reflecting upon any portion of the administration in power. As I said, it seems to me our business here is to make a constitution, and to do nothing else. It is neither our right nor our privilege, nor our power, as I take it, to do anything else? There are matters about which we may memorialize Congress when we are a state, but this resolution seems to be entirely out of place and improper as it stands now.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Like the gentleman from Silver Bow, I think this resolution ought not properly to have been introduced into this body. I don't think it is the place for memorials, but I am in favor of the proposition laid down so far as it undertakes to secure such a construction of the present law as shall prevent the importation of Mexican lead ores into the United States without the payment of the duty prescribed by law. I am in favor of it to that extent, and with that explanation I propose to vote for the resolution. I would go further, and urge it in much stronger terms if I were in a political convention or a legislative assembly or a mass meeting upon the hustings, but I don't think it necessary to go further here. In a speech which I made in this city a year ago, I said, "Under a law enacted by the Republican administration, and still in force, we have seen the lead ores of Mexico pour into the United States without the payment of duty. It came in absolutely free of duty. It occurred in this way: Under the present tariff laws silver and gold ores are on the free list and lead ores pay a cent and a half tariff or $30 per ton; but under the construction long prevailing in the treasury department it is held that if upon an assay of the ore value, more silver or gold than lead are found, the shipment is classified as silver or gold ores, as the case may be, and so the lead it contains comes in free. I have fought against this construction before the committee and before the department, and desired to be heard upon the floor of the House, but was unavoidably absent when that part of the tariff schedule was reached. Lead is a merchantable article. The true construction of the law is that the ore ought to be fairly sampled, and if it contain any amount of lead, say 30 per cent, it should pay a tariff upon that 30 per cent or upon 600 tons, which would be equivalent thereto, but this construction was arrested by the Republican Senate. Senator Stewart of Nevada offered a resolution directing the Judiciary Committee of the Senate to inquire into and report what was the proper construction of the existing law; and that committee composed of a Republican majority, with Senator Edmunds at its head, reported that if the ore contained more silver or gold than lead that such ores should be classified as silver or gold, as the case might be, and that the lead should come in free."

I am still of that same opinion, and I do not think that because the administration, so far as its head is concerned, has changed in the meantime, that we ought to be so soft and delicate in the use of language as not to be able to say just exactly what we mean. I do not think there is anything in the language of this resolution that is, so far as language is concerned, such a reflection upon any gentleman connected with the administration but that he ought to be able to hear it, and if he finds he is wrong to make a change as quick as possible. So far as anything else is concerned in it, as suggested by my friend from Silver Bow, as might be construed to commit me to any other proposition than that, so far as lead is concerned, I wish it understood that that is not involved in my vote on the question; but that it relates to the resolution in regard to lead.

The President: The question is now upon the reference of the resolution to the Committee of the Whole—ordered to be printed first and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the memorial.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Ramsdall, of Missoula: I object to this upon the same ground as the gentlemen from Silver Bow and Lewis & Clarke. I do not wish to take my stand as a protectionist. Now, if this memorial is construed to mean simply that it is a memorial praying that if the tariff on lead shall be enforced, I am heartily in favor of it; but if it is construed to be general in its character, I am opposed to it.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: As long as we have a tariff I am in favor of this present lead law, and in favor of compelling the Secretary, if we can, by public sentiment or otherwise, to change that ruling; but I am not certainly in favor of incorporating in a resolution or memorial in this convention, the assertion that the people of Montana or that this convention itself, is in favor of a particular line of policy, so far as the tariff is concerned. Now, the exact words of this memorial are "having ever advocated the protection of American industries." Now, I ask in all reason, is that right, that this resolution in this shape should pass a body of this kind? If it is a memorial to the Secretary, let the gentleman or some other one pass it around, and let those who are in favor of that sweeping clause, and in favor of that resolution, sign it; and those who are not, let them have the privilege of not signing it. It seems to me it has no place here; it seems to me under our rules it should not come in here, and certainly we should not adopt the broad principle that every man, woman and child in Montana is in favor of tariff per se. I cannot understand how the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke can vote for this resolution. It is purely political and partisan. If that is stricken out and other things are stricken out, then I think it will have the unanimous vote; but I think their solution is in such shape that it should be voted down.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: We have met here to frame a constitution, not to petition the Secretary of the Interior for any ruling in his department. For that reason, I am opposed to the resolution.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I would state, as one of the members of the committee that that resolution was referred to that after reading the resolution and studying over it, a great many of us came to the conclusion it was no place for it; that it was more or less a political dodge. That part relating to the tariff on lead was proper and right, but that the other part was not; and we thought we would report it back with the recommendation that it be not passed. For that reason, I made a motion that the report of the committee be received and the communication placed on file; it seems that motion fell by the wayside between here and the President's desk.

Mr. Craven, of Lewis & Clarke: I heartily agree with many of the views previously expressed. It does not seem to me that the reading of the resolution the way it is, is quite proper. I happen to be a Republican, and I am in favor of protection, but this is no place for the expression of those matters. All of the gentlemen, I think, are in favor of enforcing existing laws, and if the existing laws provide that lead shall not come in free, I think all would agree that those laws should be enforced until changed. I hope that the resolution will be so changed and so worded that it will refer only to the matter of lead, and not to the general system of protection, as intimated by the remarks of the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. Burleigh, of Silver Bow: There is no desire on the part of myself to worry anybody or to hurt the feelings of any half-bred Republican or moss-back Democrat. If the gentleman who made the motion to adopt that resolution will withdraw that motion, I would like to have the resolution referred to such a committee as would dress it up in such language as would be acceptable. I wish to have the memorial brought to the attention of the President, and in order to do that, it should be practically unanimous, and for that reason should be couched in such language as will be entirely respectful in tone.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: I will withdraw my motion.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Eaton, of Park: If in order, I move that the report be referred to a special committee of five, to be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Ramsdell, of Missoula: I would amend that by making it a committee to which all memorials be referred.

The President: All memorials, according to the rules of the convention, are to be referred to the proper committees. The Chair believes the rules so state.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair will announce the committee in due time.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I believe there is a special order for this morning—Section 4 of the article on Revenue and Taxation.

The President: The question for the consideration of the convention is Section 4 of the Article on Revenue and Taxation.

The Clerk read Section 4 as offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, as follows: "Sec. 4. Ditches, canals and flumes heretofore or hereafter constructed by any person, company or corporation, for the sale, rental, distribution or other beneficial use of water, shall be taxed upon the annual net proceeds of such sale, rental, distribution or use, in such manner as may be provided by law. Provided, that the use and price of such water shall at all times be subject to regulations by the Board of County Commissioners, or other authority as in this constitution provided; and provided, further, that this section shall apply only to the ditches, canals and flumes of such persons, companies or corporations as shall, within such time as may be provided by law after they commence the sale, rental, distribution or use of water, make and file in the office of the Secretary of State, their duly executed written consent to be subject to and comply with all the terms and conditions of this section and all provisions of this constitution, and a failure of any such person, company or corporation to make and file such consent shall render the ditches, canals and flumes of such person, company or corporation subject to taxation in the same manner as other property without regard to this section, so long as said person, company or corporation fails to file such consent."

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I desire to offer an amendment to that section.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, moves to amend Section 4, Proposition No. 27, as follows:

The Clerk read: Proposition No. 27, amend Section 4 by striking out the words "or beneficial use of water" in line 2 and insert instead the words "or use of water for irrigation," so as to make it read, "ditches, canals and flumes heretofore or hereafter constructed by any person, company or corporation, for the sale, rental, distribution or use of water for irrigation" &c.

The motion to amend was seconded.

Mr. Reek, of Deer Lodge: I would like to say a word in reference to the position that I have taken in regard to this Section 4. When this question was up last week I voted against the measure, believing as I did and do now, that it was inconsistent with that part of the constitution already adopted; but the friends of the measure, in order to keep this before the House, stated that it was a very important question, and insisted that it was not perfectly understood, and I made a motion to reconsider. I am aware that I have made myself liable to censure by some of the members here for my liberality in the matter, but if there is a wrong to be righted it is the duty that I owe, and I do not wish to shirk any responsibility whatever.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I desire to say a few words in addition to what I have already said in opposition to this measure. Now, gentlemen on the floor have been very profuse in their arguments to show that irrigation is a necessary matter for us to consider in this territory. That is not a debatable question; we all agree upon that; and therefore, it seems to me that there is no need of any member going on and showing up the beauties and necessities of irrigation. The simple question is this: In the first place, is it a matter for this constitution to decide, or this convention to decide; or, in the second place, if it is a matter for us to pass upon is it a meritorious measure? That is the only thing. We will all admit that upon irrigation depends the salvation of the agricultural interests of this community. Now, then, supposing for one moment that some manufacturing corporation from the eastern States should come into the Territory of Montana and say, here, we want to be exempted except upon our net proceeds. The identical same argument would be used there as is used and as has been used upon this question of irrigation. Capital invested and manufacturing institutions will benefit the State of Montana as much capital as invested in any other enterprise, and therefore, if the argument is good that because it is a beneficial matter for the State of Montana to encourage irrigation, therefore it is a beneficial thing for us to encourage manufacturing institutions and if the argument is good to exempt all of the property in the matter of irrigating canals, so it is in manufacturing institutions. Now, then, in reply to the argument which gentlemen starting this proposition have given, that because it is within the control of the Board of County Commissioners that therefore no harm can accrue, I desire to ask the gentlemen this question. Suppose we, in the State of Montana, like the various other States in the Union, notably the State of Indiana—I say supposing this State assumed the control and regulated the price which should be charged by railroad companies for fares and freight, would that be an argument sufficient to induce you to support a bill which would simply exempt the railroad companies' property from taxation except upon the net proceeds; and I do say, gentlemen, that that is exactly the same principle which applies here. Let me repeat it: If the State of Montana had the control and the regulation of the prices to be charged for transportation of freight and passengers in this State, would you be willing to come here and by your vote say that all of the rolling stock, track, rails and roadbed of that company should be exempted? That is exactly what you are saying here. Now, then, gentlemen also say that this is upon a par with the mining industry. It is not on a par with the mining industry. I opposed that bill because I thought it was not proper in the Constitution. It is not on a par with the mining industries for this reason: you cannot possibly look beneath the surface of the ground and say what the value is beneath it, but you can go along a canal or ditch from its head clear through the country which it runs and say what extent it is, how much water it carries, and by an examination of the books of the company, you can ascertain what it produces. Now, then, what is it that lends value to any property? It is the capacity to produce a revenue. What is it that lends value to a farm? It is its capacity to raise a certain amount of grain.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I would like to ask the gentleman a question. I would like to ask him if there would be any taxable property in the county from which we hail were it not for the ditches in that county?

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I will answer that question. In answer to the question, I desire to say this: In the first place, the agricultural interests of the County of Gallatin are almost its exclusive interest except coal mines, and I do say this, that without irrigation there would not be one-tenth of the grain raised in that valley that there can be with irrigation; but I say this, Mr. President, that every single industry which will be a paying industry will stand upon its own legs, and if it does not it is not a proper industry. If you have got to coddle and fondle and caress these great capitalists in order to get them to come out here and invest their money in these enterprises, then I pretend to say that we don't want these enterprises, for home capital will produce them; home capital will be invested in these enterprises just as fast as the demands of the people call for it. We know that the old theory of the investment of money in any business is the demand for it. A man does not go out here on the broad prairies and establish a mercantile establishment. Why? Because there is no demand for it. A man does not go to work in a barren country where the soil is not one-half inch deep and establish ditches, because if he did he would not be able to raise anything on an entirely barren soil, but it is the arid plain, where we have good soil, which is too dry, that irrigation is called into play. Now, I desire to say that I have given this matter considerable study since it was brought up, and some before, and I have only been able to find one State that has touched upon this matter in its constitution, and that is the State of Colorado. I desire you gentlemen to bear with me one moment while I read a part of the constitution of Colorado in reference to this question: "Ditches, canals and flumes, owned and used by individuals and corporations for irrigating lands owned by such individuals or corporations, or the individual members thereof, shall not be separately taxed so long as they shall be owned and used exclusively for such purpose." That is all that I have been able to find that even snacks of the proposition which gentlemen argue here. We are taking a new departure. We are saying by our views in this constitution that it is one of the fundamental principles of the State of Montana, that a certain class or a certain occupation shall have a preference extended to it over all others. Are gentlemen ready to admit that that is a kind of principle to which they adhere in this convention, which obtains with the members of this convention? I pretend to say that it is not the duty of this convention to say that any man, any occupation, any industry shall have one preference over another. There is but one thing to do, and that is to put all classes, all men, all industries, upon the same plane, and whenever you assume to do otherwise you are deriding the principles of Republican form of government—equal burdens and equal taxation for all.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: Is it not the object of a protective tariff to foster the industries of the United States?

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: It is the object of the protective tariff to foster all of the industries of the United States, and by its indirect application, every single one of the agricultural interests of the United States are fostered. But I do not think gentlemen are so anxious about this bill that they would insert a political document into it. Now, then, the local papers of this place, for what reason I am not prepared to say, have taken up the cudgel for the support of this bill. One of the local papers says: "In the earlier history of irrigation, both in California and Colorado, irrigation corporations did come into existence, but the adoption of wise laws subsequently has relieved the people from that evil." Do you pretend to say that even a wise law, or any law, could have any effect in the face of the bill which is introduced here. Are legislators superior to the constitution? If so, the argument is good; if not, it is simply false. Now, Mr. President, my individual interests rest wholly with the fostering of agricultural interests. Do away with the agricultural interests of our county, and I might as well close up my law office and go away from there. And I want to say, furthermore, that I have just returned from my own home, and there I met numbers of men, and every single one of them voluntarily said, "We do not want the irrigation bill to pass." Now, I do not want to say—I dislike very much to differ with my colleagues—they are both older men than I am, and men for whom I entertain the sincerest respect—but I do pretend to say, gentlemen, that these persons came to me voluntarily—and we are the greatest agricultural county in this territory—and without a dissenting voice they enter their protest against the passage of this bill. I hope that gentlemen who come from other counties, who come from mining counties, will consider this as a fact. I do not know at this time that I have anything further to say on this proposition. I will say in justice to the papers here that one of them, "The Independent," has taken the view that I have stated; the other two have taken the other bill.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It is a little remarkable why my young friend from Gallatin should become so warm on this subject. He starts out by citing a comparison of this kind of companies, specially for the purpose of irrigating these arid lands, with mercantile companies. Now, I have known many institutions where cities and towns have held out inducements to large manufacturing or mercantile companies by way of fair bonuses to establish a business within the city or town.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: Is that a good principle to incorporate in the constitution?

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I have known, so far as the matter of railroads is concerned that the Congress of the United States made a grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad company providing that its right of rail and road-bed should be exempt from taxation in the territories. What was the purpose of that? The purpose and object was if it had any, was to hold out an inducement to the company to go ahead and construct a road there. What for? In order that this western country might be opened up, in order that it might become populated; in order that these lands might be settled upon and farmed. When we get out here, we find that most of the lands without an artificial means of irrigation are practically arid and in order that we may avail ourselves of the inherent properties of those lands, which with water are productive, it seems to me it would be a part of wisdom to hold out any and every inducement that we can, to place these lands in such a condition that they will render crops. It is conceded by the gentleman himself—conceded on all sides—that the majority of the lands, in fact nearly all of them that are known as agricultural lands in the territory, are arid lands. Without irrigation they are practically for the purposes of agriculture worthless. Now the gentleman says to us that he has talked with many of the people from his county, and they say they are not in favor of this proposition being inserted into the constitution. I believe that they can be inserted in this way. It is a notorious fact that Gallatin County is one of the oldest agricultural counties in the territory. The gentleman admits himself that the entire taxable property of that county today would not be one-tenth of what it is, were it not for the fact of irrigation. Now, the probabilities are that these very men with whom he talked appreciated the fact that they have an enormous amount of money employed in the matter of ditches that are already constructed there; that they have sufficient constructed, perhaps to irrigate those lands that are susceptible of irrigation in the county. Those ditches have cost an enormous amount of money. At the present time they are being taxed an enormous amount of money, and these individuals undoubtedly would hate to see these companies and corporations that are there now exempt from taxation. But that condition of affairs exists in many of the counties in the Territory. Is it not a fact that in Dawson, Yellowstone and Custer, and all of the northern tier of counties through, without this means of irrigation, or some inducement being held out—and this is but a small inducement, we cannot expect that those lands can be settled up or populated for years and years to come? In the Yellowstone valley it is not practicable for an individual, or for four or five individuals, owning farms there to amass money enough to take a ditch out of the Yellowstone River for the purpose of irrigating their own lands. It is too extensive. So that that kind of thing can only be done by large companies, by constructing ditches, 20, 30, 50 or perhaps a hundred miles in length, by massing together an enormous amount of capital for the purpose of building county ditches that will have to be constructed in order to irrigate those lands. Now, the gentleman will admit that as soon as those lands are irrigated they become at least ten times as valuable as they are today, and by reason of that increased valuation, the farmers, the owners of those lands, are paying more taxes, and they are glad and willing to do it because then they have property that will produce something. If they desire to sell their lands they can sell for $10 or $15 or $20, what they paid one dollar for. When they sow seed in the ground, they can raise a crop; and the matter of their increased tax is a comparatively small matter as compared with their increased gain in the way of production. Now I do not see any reason on earth why the gentleman from Gallatin should take the position he has. He undertakes to assume here, that all manner and kinds of industries and enterprises should stand on their own ledge. Now Mr. President that would be a very good free trade speech to come from my young Republican friend, and I do not quite see the consistency in his argument. It is a notorious fact that the policy of the Republican party has been to foster certain industries in that kind of way. But this is not for the purpose of fostering an industry. It is for the purpose of inducing capital to come into an industry that will benefit the people at large. Any industry that by fostering, can be shown to me to be a benefit to the people of the community, and would benefit all the people at large, I would favor a reasonable fostering of that industry; and when it is necessary for these inducements to be held out, it seems to me we should hold them out, because these lands will not be valuable at any time until they are irrigated. The gentleman from Cascade asserted here the other day that these local companies would become enormous extensive corporations, wealthy, and all that sort of thing. There is not any indication of that, so far as known in this territory as yet, and I think my friend from Gallatin will agree with me that there is not any ditch Company in his own county that is making any enormous amount of money, although they have been established there for years and years. It seems to me that this proposition is unanswerable, and although it is in the nature of legislation, it is that character of legislation that ought to have a degree of permanence. Probably the legislature would enact that kind of an exemption; possibly the next one succeeding it would turn around and repeal it. These matters of enormous ditches or improvements in irrigation, when once constructed remain permanent, and the people who would attempt to hold out inducements, should have reason to believe that these inducements would have at least some degree of permanency. For that reason I am in favor of incorporating it into the constitution, and I do not see that it can possibly do any harm, but do believe that it will be such an inducement as will do a large amount of good.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: When propositions of this kind are raised they require some thought and some study. Since this matter has come up I have given it some little thought, and there are one or two points that I think have not been touched upon yet, by anybody I have heard speak on this matter in convention. I want to say as a preliminary statement, that so far as the exemption of mines from taxation is concerned, I think there is hardly any parallel. In fact we deny that there is any such thing as exemption of mines from taxation, but we assert that the manner of taxing mines has only been provided for. We assert that mines are taxed on the surface ground, and that the improvements and all matters pertaining to them are taxed the same as any other property. Now in relation to this matter I was inclined to go with the majority of men who are familiar with the agricultural section, and I am so inclined to go now. I see there seems to be a division. Still the impression I get is that the majority of the people from the agricultural counties—the people who are familiar with this irrigation question—are inclined to go against the adoption of this resolution, and in thinking the matter over, the point that occurred to me was this, is not this a matter that is wholly in the provisions of the County Commissioners? Will not the County Commissioners, sitting as a board of equalization, act upon this matter when it is presented to them? If a ditch that cost a hundred thousand dollars is not actually worth ten thousand dollars, is it not the province of the Board of County Commissioners to say that that property shall not be taxed for more than it is worth? And if so, what is the necessity of this proposition? And that is the point that has determined my views and given me a decided view upon this side of the question. The Board of County Commissioners sitting as a board of equalization have this matter altogether in their hands, and if the money that is spent in the construction of a ditch is not paying money and the ditch is not worth the money expended on it, is it not usual for them, and do they not usually provide for an equalization of the tax rate? It seems to me I am right in that position. If not, I would like to be corrected.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: We have already heard from several members on this floor about the proposition now for consideration. I believe that every one of us have made up our minds how to vote, and I believe that we are ready to vote. Believing that, I call for the previous question.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I would like to ask the gentleman not to call his previous question for just about a minute and a half. I do not want to speak longer than that.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I do not wish to be arbitrary, but I believe that if Mr. Bickford be allowed to speak someone will want to reply to him.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: If the call for the previous question is withdrawn for a minute and a half at the request of the gentleman from Missoula, I hope it will also be withdrawn for a minute and a half at my request.

The Chair put the question on the previous question, called for by Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow which will be read by the Clerk for information.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Section 4 by striking out the words "Or other beneficial use of the water" in line 2 and insert "Or use of water for irrigation"; so as to make it read "ditches, canals and flumes heretofore or hereafter constructed by any person, company, or corporation, for the sale, rental, and distribution or use of water called irrigation" etc.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 27 in the affirmative to 29 in the negative.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of Section 4.

Mr. Callaway of Madison called for the ayes and nays.

The President: The Chair desires to state that after the roll call has once begun it cannot be interrupted. The Chair indulged some gentleman this morning, but will not do so again.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Burleigh, Bickford, Carpenter, Cooper, Conrad, Dixon, Gaylord, Goddard, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Ramsdell, Toole, Joseph K., Whitehill—23.

Nays: Aiken, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. F., Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Courtney, Craven, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gilette, Hammond, Hartman, Hatch, Hickman, Hogan, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Loud, Maginnis, Reek, Robinson, Rotwill, Rickards, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, J. R., Warren, Watson, Witter, Mr. President—40.

Paired: Haskell and Parberry.

Absent: Cardwell, Duffee, Graves, Joy, Kanouse, Mayger, Muth, Schmidt, Webster, Winston.—10.

The Chair announced the vote and declared Section 4 of Proposition No. 27 lost.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move to reconsider the vote by which the Section was lost, and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke, Mr. Maginnis and a vote being taken, was declared carried, and the motion was considered laid on the table.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to know what condition this leaves this proposition in.

The President: The original proposition has already been voted upon with the exception of this section, and adopted.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I presume the Committee on Revision will have the proper authority to renumber the propositions.

Mr. President: Yes, sir.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move the Convention resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of No. 24, Article on State, County and Town organization.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Is there a motion before the convention at present?

The President: Yes, sir.

Mr. Eaton of Park: If the convention will bear with me I would like to present one matter; it is this. As I understand the rules adopted by the convention provide that after each article has been adopted and referred to the committee on revision of phraseology and adjustment, it then is to be deposited with the secretary of the territory as corrected. Is that correct?

The President: The Chair presumes they would not be deposited until after the constitution is voted upon as a whole.

Mr. Eaton of Park: What I am trying to arrive at is this; it occurs to me that after each article has passed through all these stages that it ought to be printed and laid on the tables of the members before its final adoption. With all due respect to the committee of revision, phraseology and adjustment, they are liable to error. For instance it may be possible to get some section in twice. While I recognize the fact I am sitting by unanimous consent, I feel as though we were making haste too rapidly when we act upon the final adoption in this way.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: I was going to suggest, Mr. President, if the gentleman from Yellowstone will withdraw his motion that here is a proposition No. 32 that we might take up and pass in the time remaining.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I withdraw my motion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: I move that the convention then consider Proposition No. 32 in convention.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the convention now consider bill No. 32 on "Military Reservations."

The Chair put the motion of the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke, Mr. Maginnis and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will read the article.

The Clerk read as follows:

Proposition No. 32. Military Reservations. August 3—Introduced by Judiciary Committee—W. W. Dixon, Chairman. (General File No. 30.)

Article. "Section 1. Authority is hereby granted to and acknowledged in the United States to exercise exclusive legislation as approved by the Constitution of the United States, over the military reservations of Fort Assiniboine, Fort Custer, Fort Keogh, Fort Maginnis, Fort Missoula, and Fort Shaw, as now established by law, so long as said places remain Military Reservations, to the same extent and with the same effect, as if said reservations had been purchased by the United States by consent of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, and the Legislative Assembly is authorized and directed to enact any law necessary or proper to give effect to this article. PROVIDED, That there be and is hereby reserved to the State the right to serve all legal process of the State both civil and criminal upon persons and property found within any of said reservations in all cases where the United States has not exclusive jurisdiction."

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: I move to insert after the words "Missoula" in line 3 the words "Fort Buford."

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: Is there a portion of that reservation in this territory?

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: One half of it.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: It seems to me that under rule 26 this matter will have to be referred to the committee of the whole.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: We can suspend the rules.

The President: It is understood that the rules are suspended. The Chair inferred that the gentlemen all understood that these matters had to be considered with the committee of the whole.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: In order that there may be no doubt about it that the rules are suspended I move that this article No. 32 be considered in the convention as the final consideration.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: An amendment has been offered by the gentleman from Dawson, to amend by inserting "Fort Buford."

The question is raised as to whether any portion of the reservation is in Montana Territory.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: Quite a portion of it. I do not know that one-half is in the territory of Montana. It lies but a short distance below the mouth of the Yellowstone River. We once had a matter of jurisdiction come up in the Court of Yankton, and it was there ascertained that quite a portion of the military reservation was in Montana.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: As these military reservations should all be named, and if my memory serves me right there is a reservation on the Custer battlefield, and a monument erected there, I would suggest we strike out the word "the" on line two, and insert "all military reservations," and strike out all after the word "reservations." It would then read "Of all military reservations now established by law" etc. It seems to me we would make no mistake about it if we did that, and I make the most of it.

The President: Will the gentleman from Dawson accept the amendment.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: My amendment simply is as to line three. This makes another amendment of a general bill.

The President: The amendment is that Fort Buford be inserted.

The Chair put the question on said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The Chair is now waiting for the amendment of the gentleman from Yellowstone.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: I would state that this is in accordance with the request of the secretary of war, transmitted by the Commander of the department, and they may have some reason for it, or they may propose to abolish, which I hope they will, all these unnecessary portions of these military reservations which are all too large.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: I would say that the fort is within a mile of the boundary line of the territory of Montana.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: The reservations named in the article are those mentioned by the Commander of the department, and as I understand forwarded by the secretary of war. These are the reservations as I understand it that the United States wants included in that article. Now there is no advantage whatever, on the contrary it would be perhaps a detriment to the state to give up its jurisdiction over any of these military reservations, and I am not in favor of conceding the power over them to the United States any further than we can help. That is the reason why these first were mentioned specially, because they were mentioned specifically in the communication from General Rugar. I am not in favor of giving up the authority of the state over these military reservations further than the government requires and requests, and I am in favor of passing this just as they have given it.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: The authorities of the government certainly must have had some reason for naming these military reservations in this way, and I am in favor of the adoption of the report of the Committee.

Mr. Myers, of Yellowstone: I will withdraw my motion.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the article. The ayes and nays were demanded.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Eaton of Park: Is this upon the final passage of the article?

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move to put the bill on its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The vote now will be upon the final disposition of Proposition No. 32. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Brown, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, Edward; Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitl, Rickards, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, J. K.; Toole, J. R., Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Witter, Mr. President—61.

Nays, none.

Absent: Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Durfee, Graves, Joy, Kanouse, Mayger, Muth, Parberry, Robinson, Schmidt, Webster, Winston.—14.

The President: The motion to adopt Proposition 32 is carried, and the Proposition will go to the engrossing committee, and from there to the Committee on Revision, Phraseology and Adjustment.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the Convention take a recess until 2 o'clock.

Motion seconded.

The Chair put the motion on the question of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Convention took a recess until 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Tuesday, August 6, 1889.

The Convention was called to order by the President at 2 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move the Convention resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of General File.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Goddard, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Kennedy of Missoula to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula in the chair.

The Committee was called to order.

The Chairman: When the Committee dissolved last evening they had under consideration Section 10, Proposition 24. The Article on Municipal Corporations and Offices, to which Section 10 amendment had been adopted. For the information of the Committee the Clerk will read Section 10 as it now stands.

The Clerk read Section 10 as follows:

"Sec. 10. The term of office of the County Commissioners shall be four years, except as otherwise provided for in this Constitution. At the first general election provided for by this Constitution there shall be elected in each county three County Commissioners. The one receiving the highest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election in 1896, the one receiving the next highest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election in 1894, and the one receiving the lowest number of votes shall hold his office until the general election of 1892 and each shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified. A vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners shall be filled by appointment of the Governor."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move that Section 10 be adopted as amended.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Rickards, had a motion pending last evening.

The Chairman: His amendment was lost the Chair understood. Mr. Rickards proposed an amendment to Section 9, which was carried, but the amendment to Section 10 as I understand it was lost.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that Section 9 be stricken out.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin proposed an amendment to Section 10 which was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: My motion was to adopt Section 10.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis and Clarke: I offer the following as a substitute for Section 10.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis and Clarke offers the following as a substitute for Section 10. "In each County there shall be elected three County Commissioners whose terms of office shall be four years. A vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners shall be filled by appointment by the District Judge in the District in which the vacancy occurs.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis and Clarke: That involves striking out Section 9. If that amendment is voted Section 9 should be stricken out. That leaves the term of the County Commissioners just as it is, and the Board the same; and if there is anything to be said in regard to the terms of office that would properly come in Section 11, with all County officers.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Now, Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out Section 9.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Rickards, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to hear the substitute read again.

The Clerk read the substitute of the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) which was adopted, for the information of the gentleman.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 11.

The Clerk read Section 11 as follows:

"Sec. 11. There shall be elected in each county the following officers: One County Clerk, who shall be Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners, and ex-officio recorder of deeds; one Sheriff; one Treasurer, who shall be collector of taxes; one County Superintendent of Schools; one County Surveyor; one Assessor; one Coroner; one Public Administrator. Persons elected to the different offices named in this section shall hold their respective offices for the term of two years; except that the county officers elected at the first general election provided for by this Constitution, shall hold their offices until the general election in 1892, and until their successors are elected and qualified. Vacancies in all county, township and precinct offices, except that of county Commissioners, shall be filled by appointment by the Board of County Commissioners, and the appointee shall hold office until the next general election."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have an amendment.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I introduced a Proposition early in the Session which I believe was numbered No. 6, and before we proceed further I will ask the Clerk to read that Proposition for the consideration of the Committee.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Warren, has offered the following amendment to Section 11:

"Strike out all section after the word 'years' in line 6 to and including the word 'qualified' in line 8, and insert as follows: 'Provided that all county and township officers now holding offices under the Territory of Montana, or any county or township of said Territory, are hereby declared to be officers in the respective counties and townships of the State of Montana until the general election for Congressmen in the year 1890, except the office of Probate Judge which is abolished, and County Commissioners, who shall serve the terms for which they have been elected.'"

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Well, I am in favor of what the mover of this motion evidently aims at, yet it seems to me that the wording of it is not quite clear in one particular. If I heard the reading correctly, it specifies that those holding office shall hold office until the next general election. Now doesn't the mover mean until their successors are elected and qualified?

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis and Clarke: As there is a question raised as to the duration of these officers I would offer the following amendment, which I think will cover it in a few words.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis and Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, offers the following amendment to Section 11: After the word "years" in line 6 strike out all in lines 6 and 7 up to and including the words "1892" and insert "All county and township officers in office at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, except Probate Judges, shall hold their respective offices until the expiration of the time for which they were elected."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I will accept that amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman accepts the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke, which is now the question before the Committee.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I hope that this question will not come up in an article to the Constitution, for our Constitution will be printed as a beginning of every law book for years to come, probably, and it seems to me that we should not drag in the offices of the Territory of Montana so conspicuously. If we are to put this in any place in our Constitution, let us put it in the Ordinance, so that when the objects for which the ordinance is created shall have been carried out, the ordinance can be dropped.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I think myself that the proposition involved here is a good one, but I think that I understand, too, the object and purpose of the members in putting this off as far as possible in order that it may be defeated. Now I introduced a resolution early in this session, which had for its object the same thing as the resolution offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow, except that it was worded in a little different way. I am in hearty support of the proposition as amended by the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke, and hope it will be inserted in the Constitution, and in this provision, and I hope that this Convention will not take chances in failing to insert it in this Section here. Now, so far as the measure is concerned it is a just one, and it matters not whether the officer is a republican or democrat, it is an equitable and just provision which ought to be incorporated in this Constitution, inasmuch as the county officers and precinct officers for the Territory were elected for two years last fall, and inasmuch as they have spent their money to be elected. Inasmuch as the people have chosen them as their choice for the offices respectively which they are filling. All these considerations are in favor of the adoption of this proposition. It might be urged, and undoubtedly will be urged that the proposition should not prevail, that the officers should not hold their terms of office until 1890 for the reason that it will necessitate another election. Anticipating that argument I will say that in 1890 it will be necessary to hold an election for the election of a Congressman. The expense will be very slight. Certainly the expense will be no more for that election than it will be if the election were held this fall. Another good reason for this proposition is this. We are about entering upon a new system of balloting in this Territory called the Australian system, which is a very complicated system. We have never had any experience in that respect. Another thing we have adopted the system of registration of the voters. All these matters will tend to complicate the election now before us, and I am in favor of eliminating County politics so far as may be from this election. It is the first election to be held in the State of Montana, and I am in favor of eliminating everything of a factional nature, everything of local interest, and allowing this new system of voting to go upon its merits, so that it may be thoroughly tested without the swapping and trafficking in votes which is liable to take place if County officers are mixed up in this election. Now I happen to know that a great many of the members of this convention are pledged to the support of a proposition of this character. I happen to know some of the gentlemen who have pledged themselves to support it. I have learned since this convention has been in session that some of those gentlemen regard the ties which bind them to their party and their caucus more sacredly than they do their vows. I may be misinformed upon this proposition, but I say it has come to my knowledge that some of the gentlemen who have pledged themselves to their constituents before election, and have promised them since election that they would stand on this proposition, are wavering in this matter, and now claim they are bound by their caucus. All I would have to say to that kind of man is just this, that if his political convictions are stronger than his convictions of right, are stronger than his promises and his fidelity to his constituents, then let him vote as he chooses. But I wish to serve notice upon those gentlemen that if they violate the promises which they made their constituents, that I will undertake before this debate closes to arraign them in such a manner that their constituents may know of their conduct, and may read the records as to their vote here.

A member: Name the men.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: No, I will not name them. Some of the men who have made these pledges are friends of mine, and I would say all of them for that matter, and for that reason I do not care to mention the names. It may be that those gentlemen will fall into line for all I know, and if they do it will be better that they did not know to whom I refer when I make this remark. Suffice it to say that this proposition is a proposition which has merit, and which should be supported by every member of this convention regardless of political convictions. It is a matter of justice to the men who are now in the offices. It is a matter of pure justice to the constituency that elects them, and so far as I am concerned I shall support the proposition.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I believe we have a preamble to our constitution that we have adopted, that we are grateful to Almighty God for our liberties, and that we have adopted this constitution in accordance with the Enabling Act; and the Enabling Act provides that this convention may provide for the election of State officers by an ordinance. Now I agree with the gentleman from Cascade that this matter does not belong in this bill. I agree with the gentleman from Yellowstone County upon this proposition, but I think we had better follow out the last part at least of our preamble. If we are doing this according to the Enabling Act we had better put this provision in an ordinance.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I would like to call the attention of the gentleman who last spoke to a different understanding that I have of this proposition as regards the Enabling Act. I do not know what the legal aspect may be, but as I understand the reading of this it provides that the constitutional convention may by ordinance provide for the election of officers for full state government. Now what is proposed here is not the election but the retention of officers already elected. It seems to me to be a different proposition. I am asking simply for information now, but it seems to me that the Enabling Act refers to the election of officers, and not to the retention of those officers already in office.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: I would like to have the report of the judiciary committee on this proposition read.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Is an amendment in order?

The Chairman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I wish to say to the gentleman this, that I suppose that we are considering Section 11 which provides for the election of officers. Now if those officers mentioned in that section are a part of those which we are to provide for in accordance with this Enabling Act, it means officers that are to start and govern in full force, and it therefore does not belong in here, but belongs in an ordinance. Of course they might put in here that they may retain them in office, and that would be another thing entirely. But we are not considering the proposition of whether we should elect officers, and if that is so I do not think it is in accordance with the Enabling Act.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I withdraw my amendment.

The Clerk read the report of the judiciary committee on the proposition, as called for by Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke, as follows:

Resolution by Browne. "Resolved that the committee on judiciary of this convention be instructed to consider and report whether the Enabling Act of Congress provides for the general election to be held before admission to fill all offices both state and county elected by the Constitution."

Report of judiciary committee:

Mr. President: Your committee on judiciary to whom was referred resolution herewith returned have directed me to report that they have examined the question referred to them and are of the opinion that the Enabling Act of Congress provides for the general election before admission to fill all the offices both state and county provided for by the constitution, but that such provision is not mandatory and that this convention has a right and power in its discretion to provide that all or any such district or county officers provided for by the constitution shall be elected at such time and for such terms as may be prescribed or provided that any district or county officers now holding office under the laws of the territory may continue in office under the constitution for such time as may be prescribed. Your committee are of the opinion that the whole matter is within the power of the convention to regulate. (Signed). W. W. Dixon, Chairman.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: That, in our view of it, belongs as a provision by this amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow County. It is provided in the fore parts of Section 24 of the Enabling Act that the constitutional convention may by ordinance provide for the election of officers for full state government, including, etc. Now then, part of the officers for full state government, according to this Enabling Act are to be provided for by ordinance. The committee on ordinance reported this ordinance back to this convention and asked the question whether or not these county officers should be elected at this election or what action should be taken upon them, and the committee left that to the convention without making any recommendation one way or the other. Then that should come up in the convention on the report of the Committee on Ordinances. It was put to a vote, a few days ago on the last part of the file, to be one of the last things to be considered by the convention. The objection that I have to its being considered now, is, that it is out of place, and does not belong to the constitution, as would be the case if it was provided as proposed by this amendment. That is the reason I object to it going in here.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I should like to ask the gentleman who has just taken his seat if this is the proper place for it, or in your report why you did not make it a part of the report of your committee.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I will answer the gentleman that when we come to that part of it, instead of making a majority report and a minority report, after suggestions of a distinguished member of the committee, I held that back without making any recommendation on it, for the convention to take such action when considering the report as it saw fit. That was the reason assigned. Instead of making the minority report and a majority report, we made a report without any recommendation whatever.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I call for the reading of the report that is on file in connection with proposition No. 24.

The Chairman: The resolution is resolution No. 6, read and referred to the committee on city, county and town organization on July 9th. Reported back without any recommendation and placed on file for consideration with main report of the committee. The report reads as follows: "All county and precinct officers who may be in office at the time of the adoption of this constitution shall hold their respective offices for the full term for which they may have been elected and until such time as their successors may be elected and qualified in accordance with the provision of this constitution and the laws now in force; and the official bonds of all such officers shall continue in full force and effect as if this constitution had not been adopted.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I happened to be present when the Committee on Ordinance met I think the third time and made their report; and the statement made by my friend Mr. Robinson, the gentleman from Deer Lodge County is as I recollect precisely correct, and the reasons he assigned are the reasons which influenced the committee in sending it back without a recommendation. Now, in regard to this amendment offered, I am greatly in favor of it and shall support it, and I shall do so for this reason, that I believe it to be just; I believe it to be just to the parties whom it affects; but whether it may be a question to be provided for by ordinance or to go into the constitution, there may be some difference of opinion. I cannot be accused of acting from any political motive, for the reason that nearly all of the county officers from our county belong to the democratic party. I never have belonged to it, and unless there is some great change in the political moral status in my mind I do not think I ever shall. (Laughter) I have lived to that time of life where, if all my political acts have been sinful transgressions, I believe it is now too late to repent. Now, these officers went into the election in good faith and believed they were elected for two years, and unless there is a great public necessity for putting them out I think it is morally wrong to do it. Our sheriff is a democrat; our county clerk is a democrat; our probate judge is a democrat—he seems to be fated anyhow, and there is no help for him—and our assessor is a democrat; and every other county officer almost is a democrat. I hold a position there. I am not a democrat but it is not on that account that I support the measure. I think it is right that these men should remain there during their term of office, and I think it is proper. Now, while there may be some technical question in regard to whether this should go into a constitution or go into the ordinance, I do not believe that that should control the principle here. I feel a good deal like, and I am persuaded a good deal by a remark that I once heard an eminent old judge make, Judge Greer, in regard to determining close questions. A friend of his said to him, "Judge, I suppose you gentlemen who preside on the Supreme Court bench of the United States never have any question on regard to what is right?" "Oh, frequently, frequently," said he. "Well," said his friend, "but how do you determine them?" "Well," said he, "after examining the law and all the surrounding circumstances if I am still in doubt I appeal to the chancery of my own heart and I am scarcely ever mistaken in my judgment." Now I think every man here should look at the question in all its bearings, and just imagine himself in the same situation; and where there is no harm to be done in the State, I think there ought to be no question in determining it, aside from political consideration, that these men should be entitled to hold their offices during the residue of their term.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I do not desire to advance any arguments on this subject. In fact I do not think the arguments of any of the speakers, nor even the logic of a Webster can change a single man's conviction on this matter. In fact, I do not think even the honest conviction and the venerable aspect of my aged friend who has just taken his seat can change our views. Personally I have been in favor of this proposition, but I doubt the expediency of it, and I shall vote against it, and when it is considered that I am losing the office of justice of the peace I think it will be some extenuation of my action, and I hope the scattering remarks of the gentleman from Yellowstone will lose their force. (Laughter and applause.)

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I am unable to see why section 24 of the Enabling Act should make any difference in our action on this question. If this amendment prevails I cannot see how section 24 of the Enabling Act has anything to do with it. If the amendment prevails these officers will be provided for by the constitution itself. They will not be up for election this fall: there will be no county officers elected this fall. The ordinance would be in use if the amendment did not prevail, and if the county officers were to be elected then perhaps the ordinance should state in their case as in all other cases the manner of the election, but as long as they are not to be elected it seems this should be the proper place for it, and any motion in the ordinance will be out of place. Now a word as to these offices. If the non-election of county officers or their continuance in office by the constitution affected in any manner the successful introduction of a state government, I should be in favor of a new election. No officer has a vested right to his office. But we must take into consideration the convenience of the people, and the system which we have adopted. To continue these persons in office until the expiration of their terms would be simply continuing the system which we have adopted by this constitution. When we adopt this constitution we adopt all the laws, or we will adopt all the laws applicable to these officers and their tenure of office. Now, one or two things will be done. We would make two irregular terms, or we would continue these persons in office. It would be a term of one year, and then a term of three years. That breaks up the system and interferes with its harmonious operation. While these officers have no vested rights to their office, and the legislature can shorten their terms and take away their positions at any time it chooses, there is a political equity in their continuance; not as affecting one party or the other party, but a matter of what we termed political equity. But it is not injustice to these officers, that I am speaking. It is injustice to the people of the territory and the coming state that I make these remarks. If you cut short these terms and provide for a three year term you run a great risk. Practically every person in office now whose term is cut short a year will be a candidate for re-election and will be renominated and stand a far better chance of re-election than if his term had not been cut short. Now there may be some excellent officers who may be elected for three years, but you cut short the term and those officers are quite certain to be re-elected and placed upon the people for three years longer. They will never be renominated again. It seems to me it is a matter of precaution of the people more than it is for the protecting of these officers to have their continuance for two years until the terms for which they were elected expired.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: In considering this matter before the Committee of the Whole at this time I am disposed to feel that these petty wranglings and petty decisions of the Committee of the Whole amount to nothing, and are a pure waste of time, for nothing in the world, for the purpose of allowing the members of the convention a chance to make some speeches. I do not care for it, but let it go into the convention where we can act upon it finally, it will amount to something and do some good. When we go over it time and time again it amounts to nothing. These discussions in the Committee of the Whole have retarded the action of the convention for several weeks. Now, for the purpose of getting it where it belongs, I move Mr. Chairman that when this Committee rise to report this bill to the house they recommend that this amendment be considered in connection with the report of the Committee or Ordinance on this matter.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I have an amendment to section 11.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have another amendment to section 11.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Choteau moves to amend section 11 by adding the following:

"Provided that no county treasurer shall be eligible to succeed himself, after being elected under the provisions of this constitution."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: That would certainly be out of order. The committee have decided to report it back to the convention, to be considered with the report of the committee on ordinance.

The Chairman: The Chair understands that that referred to the amendment that was offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: That is what the motion extended to, and nothing else.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau asked the Chairman to return his amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I suggest that there is nothing in section 11 that in any way interferes with the proposition as to whether the county officers shall hold or not, and I suggest that that proposition alone be postponed and be considered in connection with the ordinance. But the other propositions in this section do not interfere at all with the main section. This section provided for county officers and for the term of their office, and it certainly belongs in this article. The question as to whether our county officers shall hold over or whether there shall be a general election is postponed, and I think that is the only thing that should be postponed. If we have an understanding as to that fact then we can adopt these sections 11, 12 and 14. This section 11 as I understand it does not interfere at all with the main question.

The Chairman: The question has been referred back with a recommendation that it be referred to the committee on ordinances.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I suggest that by unanimous consent it would be arranged that this article be gone through with, and recommended for passage, and that the main question as to whether or not the main officers shall hold or shall go to the committee on ordinance.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: It is my understanding that the amendment only should be referred back, with recommendation that it be considered with the report of the committee on ordinance.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: Yes, sir; that was the motion.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I would ask the chair what motion the chair put and declared carried.

The Chairman: My understanding was that it referred to the section.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I ask unanimous consent that the vote just taken shall refer only to that portion referring to the election of officers, and that the rest of the section be considered.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: The motion that was made only went to the amendment.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move you then, that when we rise we report resolution No. 6., offered by Mr. Goddard, back with the recommendation that it be made part of the article on ordinance.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Collins of Cascade called for the reading of the resolution.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: That was the motion that prevailed in the committee, and it embodied the same proposition as the motion now made by the gentleman from Beaverhead.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I understand that that motion was that it be considered in connection with the report of the ordinance committee, and this motion is to make it a part of the article of ordinance.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I understand that that had been recommended back to be considered in the Committee of the Whole in connection with the article on ordinance and not to be made a part of it.

The Chairman: I believe the motion now is that it be made a part of the ordinance.

Mr. Clarke of Silver Bow: I thought that motion was voted and carried.

The Chairman: That reference to Section 6 has reference to the Resolution No. 6, offered by Mr. Goddard.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I can see some propriety in instructing the committee what it shall do. While to some extent I favor the proposition contained in the resolution offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone, yet at the same time there is some propriety in letting it go back to the Committee on Ordinance, and allowing them to report to the convention, and then let the convention decide what to do with it. We do not want to tell them what the committee shall report.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I concur with my colleague from Lewis & Clarke: The Convention has a right to instruct a committee, or to refer a subject to it with instruction, but I submit that the Committee of the Whole has no right to instruct any committee what they shall do.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I rise to a point of order. The motion did not so state at all. I did not ask to have it referred to any committee at all in my motion. It was to report it back with a recommendation that it be made a part of the article on ordinance.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: In order to bring this matter properly before the Committee of the Whole I move the following:

"Resolved that it is the sense of this Committee that a general election be had for all state and county officers at the time this constitution is submitted for adoption." I offer that as an amendment.

The amendment was seconded.

The Chairman: The Chair will not entertain the motion of the gentleman in connection with this resolution.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move to amend the motion now appending before the committee that when this committee rise they report this resolution just offered back to the house with the recommendation that it be considered in connection with the proposition on ordinance.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: It has been moved by the gentleman from Meagher, that when the committee rise they report this resolution just offered back to the house with recommendation that it be considered in connection with the proposition on ordinance. This is an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead. Does the gentleman wish to accept it?

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I do not.

Mr. Ealon of Park: I would like to inquire whether that motion has not already been adopted by this committee?

The Chairman: For the information of the gentleman from Park I would state that this is the Goddard resolution that we are considering now—resolution No. 6. The question is that when this committee rise it report this resolution back to the convention with the recommendation that it be considered in connection with the report of the committee on ordinance.

The Chair put the said question on the motion, of the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Kanouse), and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 36 in the affirmative to 23 in the negative.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: Now, Mr. Chairman, I would like to have my amendment to section 14 read referring to county officers.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Choteau wishes to amend section 11 by adding thereto the following:

"Provided that no county treasurer shall be eligible to succeed himself after being elected under the provision of this constitution."

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I think that is a wise provision to put in here. I do not think it is safe for county treasurers to succeed themselves five or six times. It is a safeguard placed around the public money. Let them go out after two years service, and if their accounts are made up all right they can wait two years.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I would like to have the Chair decide this matter of section 11, whether it has been referred to the committee on ordinance or not.

The Chairman: No, the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke was referred to that committee. The section is still open before the committee. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Choteau, which I believe was seconded.

The Chair put the said question on the motion of the gentleman from Choteau (Mr. Conrad), and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 22 in the affirmative and 32 in the negative.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I have an amendment.

The Chairman: This amendment is to section 15. The Chair will leave it aside for the present until we arrive at the consideration of that section. The gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, now offers the following amendment, to section 11: amend by adding the words "one clerk of the District Court" after the word "taxes" in line 3.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I believe Mr. Chairman that the election of clerk of the District Court is provided for in the article that we have adopted on the judiciary.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I will withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move to amend by inserting after the word "taxes" in line 3 the words "one county attorney."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: That is provided for.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I sent up an amendment to Section 11 as follows: After the word "deeds" on line 2 add the words "and such other instruments as required to be recorded."

The Chairman: Are there any further amendments.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I desire to offer an amendment to section 11. After the word "taxes" in line 3 "provided that the county treasurer shall have held his office for more than three consecutive terms."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: According to that a man would never be eligible to hold office for county treasurer except for four years.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I think the words "eligible for election but once" would cover it.

The Chairman put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move to strike out the words "of deeds" on line 2, so that it shall read "and ex-officio recorder."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 19 in the affirmative to 16 in the negative.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I have an amendment. On line 3 add after the word "taxes" and "ex-officio county superintendent of public schools," so that it shall read "the treasurer shall be collector of taxes, and ex-officio county superintendent of public schools."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I think the office of county superintendent of the schools is a useless one. There are some things under the law as now established the county superintendent does that could as properly be performed by the County Treasurer. There is one duty performed that the county superintendent of school does, and that is that the census of the school children shall be taken by that officer. It frequently happens that three or four children are put on the same list, and it is necessary some one should look after that. Now that is really about the only important duty that I can conceive of that the county superintendent of schools is needed for at all. We have 25 or 30 pages on our statute books regarding this, and one-half of it is absolutely useless. Now, I do not find fault with any of the county superintendents. In our county we have a young lady who is a jewel, and I think has satisfied the county better than any superintendent of schools we have had, but I believe that these duties she performs could be dispensed with, and could be carried on without any County Superintendent. Now there are many of these duties that the county superintendent performs that the state ought to look after. The first duty is that she shall apportion the school money. Now I say the county treasurer should do that. I do not think the schools are benefited in the least by a county superintendent of schools. Now this idea which I have here has been adopted in some places. In some States the County Attorney is made ex-officio County Superintendent of Schools, and I think it very proper that that office should be abolished and the county treasurers should perform all the duties that are necessary to be performed.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I know it is not necessary to take up much time in discussing this matter. I only desire to say that my colleague from Deer Lodge County is not very familiar with the duties of the County Superintendent of Schools of today in this territory. I certainly believe that anything that will interfere with the progress of our school system in this country is a very bad move, either on the part of the legislature or this convention. I had the pleasure of attending an institute in our county last year, and I do not hesitate to say that I believe that the benefit derived to the schools of Deer Lodge County from that one session was incalculably more than the amount of the salary that the County Superintendent gets. There were young girls, and young men, and there was a gathering of teachers old and young discussing the different important matters; and this institute was presided over by the County Superintendent of schools. I know the County Superintendent visits our schools, converses with the teachers, many of them young and inexperienced, and she looks into their affairs, and she prompts them and helps them, and shows them where they are lacking, and shows them important methods of teaching; and I say I apprehend it is not necessary to take up any time in discussing this thing at all. I believe this convention is opposed to the amendment offered.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: It occurred to me when my friend was talking that he had, to use a very common place expression, the cart before the horse. Now if instead of the county treasurer being authorized to discharge the duties of county superintendent of schools ex-officio, I think it would be perhaps more proper to charge the county superintendent with discharging the duties of county treasurer ex-officio. I am satisfied the duties would be discharged just as well. I admit that my friend from Deer Lodge, who is a good judge and never speaks without knowing what he is talking about, lives in a country where they have a jewel for county superintendent, but they are no more favored than we are in the lower counties. We would be all opposed to this thing down in Custer County, and if there is to be any shifting to the responsibility of the duties by virtue of an office, I am in favor decidedly of transferring the duties of the county treasurer to the county superintendent of schools. (Laughter)

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I would like to know how they propose to pay this County Treasurer for performing the duty of the Superintendent of Public Instruction. The office of County Treasurer is paid usually by feeing, such a percentage on the amount of money he collects. Now, are they going to have him perform all the duties of County Superintendent of Schools without any compensation? My experience with officers has been that they perform very few duties unless they get paid for them. About the first six months after a man gets into an office he is very anxious about performing his duties, the rest of his time he is very anxious about how much pay he is going to get for performing them; and if you put those duties over upon the treasurer you will have very few duties performed. In the next place the qualifications for the two officers are different. One ought to be a person who is an accountant and business man and the other ought to be a person who is interested in public instruction and you don't often find these two classes combined in the same person. And these County Superintendents do have a good deal to perform; their duties have been stated here and a great many of them yearly keep up the spirit of the teachers—the esprit decorps of teachers in a county. They have to look over these matters and they are very necessary. There are teachers very often who are not capable of performing their duty. They have to make certain reports to the county superintendent and those reports have to be examined. County Superintendents have to keep a census of the children, and all such matters, and they are necessary matters. They have to make up the estimates for school appropriations. I trust that nothing of this kind will be done.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I certainly do not expect that this amendment will prevail. If I had any idea it would I should insist upon saying a good deal. But I think that the idea of the County Treasurer being ex-officio County Superintendent is somewhat ridiculous, and that it will quite be impossible for that officer to perform the duties, or to fill the office of County Superintendent of Schools.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: As has been well said here by some gentlemen who preceded me the office of County Superintendent of Schools is certainly one of the most important and responsible offices that will be created by this constitution if the office is allowed to remain. I believe that the duties of that office require a very competent person, and one who would devote all of his or her time to the discharge of the duty. I have seen the working of the office, or rather the duties of the office, to a considerable extent, and I know as has been stated by Mr. Toole that the good effects that grow out of a proper discharge of the duties of the office are remarkable; and besides the two offices would be inconsistent and incompatible. There are seasons of the year when the County Treasurer has his hands full, for instance the last two or three months of the year when tax gathering time comes around. We know there is a time there for several weeks when the County Treasurer has all that he and his corps of help can possibly do. Now, just about that time it might happen that one of these teachers institutes, which is also very important would come up, and it certainly would be impossible for the County Treasurer to exercise the duty of County Superintendent of Schools.

Mr. Rotwitt of Meagher: We had this same law on our statutes, and the legislature of 1881 abolished it. It was found to be very unsatisfactory as our population increased, and now as our population has doubled in most of the counties I think it would be still more unsatisfactory, and I hope this amendment will not prevail.

The Chairman: The question is on the proposition to amend section 11 by adding on line 3 after the word "taxes," the words "and ex-officio County Superintendent of Schools," and on the same line to strike out the words, "one" after the word "taxes."

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Clerk then, read section 12 as follows: No person shall be eligible to any county office unless he is a qualified elector, not unless he shall have resided in the county at least one year next preceding his election.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin sent up an amendment to section 12.

The Chairman: An amendment is offered to section 12 by the gentleman from Gallatin as follows: Strike out the word "qualified elector" and insert "citizen of the state."

The motion was stated.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I would like to inquire what "citizen of the state" means. We have recognized in this constitution I believe, citizens of the United States, but I do not understand what "citizens of the state" means.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I understand the citizen of the state to be a person that is a full fledged citizen, not a person that has taken out his first papers, but one that has completed his citizenship.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone. My understanding is that a citizen of the state is one who has come to this state with the intention of residing here permanently. A citizen might be a citizen of the state if he only had resided here one day, if he has the intention of making it his permanent residence. Now, there is a provision in the suffrage proposition which makes it absolutely certain that a woman can hold the office of county superintendent, I would object to this amendment. I believe however that that has been provided for in the proposition on suffrage, that the office of county superintendent may be filled by a woman. I believe the proposition as it is printed is proper, and it should be adopted.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: If you make this change in here it will be somewhat conflicting with the qualifications of persons to hold office, which were adopted in the article on suffrage. According to the qualifications on that article, any person that is a qualified voter can hold office, so I think if you make this change here, while I certainly favor it, you will have to do something with the other changes. Instead of being a "citizen" in the other requirements, it is "qualified electors," and if you insert that here it would certainly conflict with that.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I offer an amendment to section 12.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Beaverhead offers the following amendment: Add to section 12 "except as otherwise provided in this constitution."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I find in article 21 on judiciary that section 12 will come somewhat in conflict with that, as well as in conflict with the office of county superintendent of public schools, and I should think that that would harmonize the whole matter.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I beg to call the attention of the committee to section 7, proposition No. 14 as it has been adopted.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: With the consent of my second I will withdraw my amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin withdraws his amendment.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman's amendment (Mr. Hershfield) does not apply to the one offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Is there an amendment before the committee now?

The Chairman: Yes, sir: the question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead to add to section 12 the words "except as otherwise provided in this constitution."

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I beg the indulgence of the committee. I would like to read section 7 of proposition No. 14 on suffrage: "no person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this State, civil or military, who is not a citizen of the United States, and who shall not have resided in this state, at least one year next preceding his appointment or election." I understand that this has been adopted by the convention.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: Read section 11. You will see some difference.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: That is true. At the same time it here states the qualifications of any one relative to county officers. That speaks of territorial qualifications, or state qualifications, and this speaks of the county; so that I would think that the addition to that section would make it harmonious with even the section quoted by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: My idea was that the terms "office in this State" would comprehend county officers.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Section 10 of Proposition No. 14 reads as follows: "Women shall be eligible to hold the office of county superintendent of schools, or any district office, or to vote at any school election." I think that was adopted, and this section 12 should be amended in some way so as not to conflict with that.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move to strike out section 12.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: It seems to me that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead covers the matter.

The Chairman put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, (Mr. Witter), and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield) proposes the following amendment: Strike out the word "one" and insert the word "two" in line 2 after the word "least" and add the letter "s" to the word "year."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: It is hardly worth while to take up the time of the convention on the propriety of that amendment. It certainly ought to be provided for that the person who seeks an office ought to become acquainted with the office, and the duties of an office, and it is hardly possible for any individual, no matter how much of a genius he may be, to be sufficiently acquainted with the affairs of the locality in which he has made his home to entitle him to hold office, if he has resided in it but one year. I think the amendment is quite appropriate.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: There is one objection, and a very serious one, that I have to this amendment. Now my friend from Deer Lodge says it is impossible for a man to become sufficiently qualified to attend to the duties of his office or the business of the county unless he has lived there two years. Now suppose a man happens to live right down in the upper part of Gallatin County; he had been there for twenty years; he is familiar with all the duties of a county office there; will he undertake to say that if a man moves from Gallatin County into some other county that it is necessary for him to live there two years before he is qualified to perform the duties of a county office? It seems to me there is no reason in that; it seems to me that the facts would not justify his position under circumstances of that kind; and how may men are there that change from one county to another that are familiar with the transaction of business in the different counties. I do not think any argument is necessary to defeat the matter.

Mr. Bullard of Jefferson: It seems to me that proposition was settled in proposition No. 14, Section 7, "no person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state, civil or military, who is not a citizen of the United States and who shall not have resided in this State at least two years next before his election or appointment."

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: This is a county matter. It relates to county affairs, and it is the very proposition that I want to defeat, the very proposition that the gentleman so eloquently expressed when he said that there are professional office seekers, when they are unsuccessful in one county will go over to another county, if the chances are better for them there.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I do not think the majority of the counties are afflicted with professional office seekers after you get forty or fifty miles from this locality. (Laughter)

The Chair put the question on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield), and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out section 12.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read section 13 as follows: "The Legislative Assembly shall provide for the election or appointment of such other county, township, precinct, municipal officers as public convenience may require, and their terms of office shall be as prescribed by law, not in any case to exceed two years, except as in this Constitution otherwise provided."

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move to strike out Section 11, and to amend Section 13 by inserting after the word "of" on line 1 the word "all," and strike out the word "other" on line 2. I believe that section 13 as thus amended will cover all of sections 11 and 13, and certainly in a great deal fewer words. It would then read, Mr. Chairman, "the Legislative Assembly shall provide for the election of all such county, precinct, and municipal officers, etc." I think that section 11 is certainly superfluous.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I move to strike out section 13 for the same reasons that I gave last night. The legislature has the power now to perform every act prescribed in section 13 without any action on the part of this convention whatever, and for the very reason that these sections were stricken out last evening I move that this section be stricken out.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: It seems to me that the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow should prevail. I think there ought to be some provision in here touching the matter of county officers. I do not think it should define or specify what those officers should do. That matter should be left to the legislature; and striking out section 11 and amending section 13, I think it would be about right. I do not think it is proper to strike the entire matter out.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead called for the reading of the amendment.

The Chairman: The amendment as offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow is to strike out all of section 11 and to amend section 13 as follows: add the word "all" after the word "of" in line 1, and strike out the word "other" in line 2.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move Mr. Chairman to strike out the word "shall" in Section 13, line 1, and substitute therefor the word "may."

The Chairman: That amendment is not germane to the one offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow. I shall put the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow first.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: If the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow prevails it will be in conflict with the Judiciary Act. The Judiciary Act provides for the election of certain county officers—county attorney and clerk of the Court, and if you leave that to the legislature as proposed by the gentleman from Silver Bow, it will be in conflict with that Act, and I believe one or two other acts.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I think the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard) is certainly mistaken; for instance, one gentleman thought they had not enumerated the name of the District Court, and he attempted to amend that section, but his attention was called to the fact that there was provision made for that office elsewhere; and now it seems in section 13 this committee had in mind the fact that some county officer had been overlooked. Now I believe if my amendment prevails it will cover everything that is covered in Section 11 and Section 13 and certainly in very much fewer words; it covers the ground entirely and more intelligently. I may be wrong, but that is my judgment and opinion.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: It is the duty of this Convention to establish a government for the State of Montana, and these officers that are enumerated in Section 11 are certainly necessary for the establishment of such government. In the meantime I would ask what would we do for county organizations—county officers, if they are not provided for by this constitution. It happens in the Judiciary Act that two county officers are provided for; one is the clerk of the district court and the other the county attorney, and this is supplementary to that and provides for all the other officers that are necessary for a complete county organization. It is just as necessary that these county offices should be organized as it is for the State to be. It is our duty to make county organizations as well as state organizations, and we have not half done our work in my opinion if we do not provide for county organizations.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I now renew my motion to strike out.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I have an amendment to this section.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke moves to strike out section 13 and substitute the following: the term of any officer hereafter created by law shall not exceed two years, except justices of the supreme court.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I trust that will not prevail. It clashes directly with the provision already adopted by this convention, in regard to district judges and clerk of the district court, which has already been determined and settled.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: It also conflicts with the proposition we have adopted in relation to county commissioners. My understanding is that we have adopted a section here which provides that the county commissioners shall be elected for four years.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I think I will withdraw my amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman withdraws the substitute and the question now is on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge to strike out the section.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, to strike out, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I now renew my motion to strike out "shall" in the first line and insert "may," so as to take the dog collar off the legislature, and not put it on.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 14 of Proposition No. 24 as follows:

The compensation of all county, township and precinct officers, except as in this constitution otherwise provided, shall be prescribed by law.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I wish to amend the section.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, moves to amend the section by adding after the word "the" on line 1 the words "duties and."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Gallatin moves the following amendment to section 14, by striking out the words "except as in this constitution otherwise provided".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: My object in that is to avoid using superfluous language. Any provision of this constitution would be law, and it is all covered by the expression "shall be as prescribed by law."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move to strike out section 14.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: There is a substitute that has been on the desk for some time, and it will take precedence. The substitute is a substitute for Section 14 offered by Mr. Collins of Cascade as follows: "All state and county officers and clerks of court shall be paid by salary to be fixed by law, and all fees shall be collected and disposed of as provided by law. The compensation of township and precinct officers shall be as provided by law."

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of that substitute.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I do not know whether the mind of the convention is clearly set upon that. I think the section as it stands now is much better than the amendment to it. It leaves it entirely discretionary to the legislature and this amendment is the kind of legislation that ought to be left to the discretion of the legislature to say whether they shall be paid by salary or prerequisites.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Rickards, to adopt the substitute offered by the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I renew by motion to strike out section 14.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, Mr. Witter, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Loud of Custer: I move that the committee take up Proposition No. 21, General File No. 38, Article on Corporations other than Municipal.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The Chair cannot entertain the motion.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that when the committee rise that it report back Proposition No. 24 with the recommendation that as amended it do pass.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: The Chair cannot entertain the motion for the reason that there are certain propositions here to be considered in connection with this article.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I withdraw my motion.

The Chairman: General Files Nos. 9, 10 and 20 were to be considered with this report. No. 20 was considered last evening and disposed of, so that Nos. 9 and 10 will now come up for consideration. The Clerk will read General File Nos. 9 and 10.

The Clerk read as follows:

Extract No. 2, Resolution No. 13, introduced by Buford, relating to terms of offices of county and municipal officers, July 15th received, read, and referred to committee No. 10 on city, county and town organization. July 17 reported back adversely and placed on General File No. 9. "Resolved, that the following be incorporated as a provision in the constitution and be properly numbered. "No county or municipal officer shall hold office for more than two consecutive terms."

The Chairman: Gentlemen, you have heard the resolution as read by the Clerk, which was offered by Mr. Buford of Madison and which was to be read and considered in connection with this report. What is the pleasure of the committee?

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move when the committee rise they report back this resolution with the recommendation that it do not pass.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Rickards, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Resolution No. 10 as follows:

"Establishment of new county." Read and referred to Committee on City, County and Town Organizations. July 17, reported back adversely and placed on General File No. 10. "Resolved that in the creation and establishment of counties they shall be named in regard to mountain range, river or other appropriate natural features of the country in the vicinity of proposed new counties." Presented by Kennedy of Missoula.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to add an amendment to that—"as far as practicable." It may be impossible to do that in a great many instances, but where it is possible to do it I think it ought to be done.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I think the name of the county ought to have something descriptive of its locality, and we have nearly always followed that practice here. Wherever we have departed from it I believe we have done wrong.

Mr. Chessman, of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me this is a very proper matter to leave to the Legislature. I do not believe it ought to go into the constitution.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It seems to me it is a good deal of a matter of sentiment instead of fundamental law, and I do not believe we want any more sentimentality in our constitution than can be helped.

The Chairman: The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, to add the words "as far as practicable."

The Chair put the question on the said amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now occurs upon the adoption of the resolution.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of said resolution, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: There is another extract from Proposition 27 offered by A. R. Joy, on Chinese Labor. It is to be considered in connection with the report of this committee. The Chair will read the section. "The Legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this state for the removal of Chinese without the limit of such cities or towns, or for their location within prescribed portions of those limits."

Mr. Hogan, of Silver Bow: I move its adoption.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Hogan, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 20 in the affirmative and 27 in the negative.

The Chairman: Are there any further amendments?

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: I move you that when the committee rise, it report back this proposition, with the recommendation that it do pass, with the exception of that part that was referred.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move to amend the motion by moving that when the committee rise it report the proposition back without recommendation. It seems to me that the committee last night acted somewhat hastily in the matter of striking out, and I really think that when it is considered again those sections should be reinstated. I move to report it back without recommendation.

The Chairman: Will the gentleman from Beaverhead accept that amendment?

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: No sir.

The motion to amend moved by the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Middleton, received no second.

The Chairman: It has been moved and seconded that when the committee rise it report this proposition back with the recommendation that it do pass as amended, with the exception of such parts as have been referred.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, Mr. Witter, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: What is the further pleasure of the committee?

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move the committee do now rise.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move as a substitute that the committee consider Proposition No. 31 "Article on Corporations other than Municipal."

The Chairman: The Chair is of the opinion that the Chair cannot entertain a motion to consider any other proposition.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I understand we went into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the General File.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on said motion of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Callaway, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The Convention was called to order.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 21, and in connection with this have considered General Files Nos. 9, 10 and 20; also Proposition on Chinese Labor, which was referred to this committee; and have instructed me to report the article back with the recommendation that it do pass as amended with the exception of such parts as have been referred to other committees.

The President: Gentlemen of the convention, you have heard the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole. If there be no objection the report will be received, and the Chairman granted time in which to prepare his report.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move the convention resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 31.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke, to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke, in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The committee has under consideration Proposition No. 31, Article on Corporations other than Municipal. The Clerk will read Section 1.

The Clerk read Section 1 as follows:

Section 1. "All existing charters or grants of special or exclusive privileges, under which the corporators or grantees shall not have organized or commanded business in good faith at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall thereafter have no validity."

There being no amendment to Section 1, the Clerk read Section 2, as follows:

Section 2. "No charter of incorporations shall be granted, extended, changed or amended by special law, except for such municipal, charitable, educational, penal or reformatory corporations as are or may be under the control of the state; but the Legislative Assembly shall provide by general law for the organization of corporations hereafter to be created. Provided, that any such laws shall be subject to future repeal or alteration by the Legislative Assembly."

There being no amendment to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3, as follows:

Section 3. The Legislative Assembly shall have power to alter, revoke or annul any charter or incorporation existing at the time of the adoption of this constitution, or which may be hereafter incorporated, whenever in its opinion it may be injurious to the citizens of the state.

There being no amendment to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4, as follows:

Section 4. "The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law that in all elections for directors or managers of incorporated companies every stockholder shall have the right to vote in person or by proxy for the number of shares of stock owned by him for as many persons as there are directors or managers to be elected, or to cumulate said shares and give one candidate as many votes as the number of directors multiplied by the number of his shares of stock shall equal, or to distribute them, on the same principle, among as many candidates as he shall think fit; and such directors or managers shall not be elected in any other company."

There being no amendment to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5, as follows:

Section 5. "All railroads shall be public highways, and all railroad, transportation and express companies shall be common carriers, and subject to legislative control, and the Legislative Assembly shall have the power to regulate and control by law the rates charged for the transportation of passengers and freight by such companies as common carriers from one point to another in the State. Any association or corporation, organized for the purpose, shall have the right to construct and operate a railroad between any designated points within this State, and to connect at the State line with railroads of other States and Territories. Every railroad company shall have the right with its road to intersect, connect with or cross any other railroad."

There being no amendment to Section 5, the Clerk read Section 6, as follows:

Section 6. "No railroad corporation, express or other transportation company, or the lessees or managers thereof, shall consolidate its stock, property or franchises with any other railroad corporation, express, or other transportation company owning or having under its control a parallel or competing line; neither shall it in any manner unite its business or earnings of any other railroad corporation."

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson, sent up an amendment to Section 6.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Jefferson offers the following amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Nor shall officer of such railroad, express or other transportation company act as an officer of any other railroad, express or any other transportation company owning or having control of a parallel or competing line."

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Breen, of Jefferson: I copied that from the constitution of the State of Pennsylvania, and where they have competing lines of the railroad, and where they have 2 or 3 lines of railroads under the same management. We have railroad lines in the Territory of Montana, and we want to keep them under separate management. That is the reason I offer it and move the adoption.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I believe if you adopt Section 6 as it is, which will prohibit all express companies or corporations of this kind uniting with competing companies that this amendment will be germane and should be adopted also. There is no use prohibiting corporations if you do not prohibit the persons. I think the section is a little too harsh, but if it is to be adopted I believe the amendment of the gentleman from Jefferson is good.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Jefferson (Mr. Breen).

A vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 6, the Clerk read Section 7, as follows:

Section 7. "All individuals, associations and corporations shall have equal rights to have persons or property transported on and over any railroad, transportation or express route in this State. No discrimination in charges or facilities for transportation of freight or passengers of the same class shall be made by any railroad or transportation or express company between persons or places within this State; but excursion or commutation tickets may be issued and sold at special rates, provided such rates are the same to all persons. No railroad or transportation or express company shall be allowed to charge more toll for the transportation of freight or passengers to any place or station upon its route or line than it charges for the transportation of the same class of freight or passengers to any more distant place or station upon its route or line within this State. No railroad, express or transportation company, nor any lessee, manager, or other employe thereof, shall give any preference to any individual, association or corporation in furnishing cars or motive power or for the transportation of money or other express matter.

There being no amendment to Section 7, the Clerk read Section 8, as follows:

Section 8. "No railroad, express or other transportation company, in existence at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall have the benefit of any future legislation, without first filing in the office of Secretary of State an acceptance of the provisions of this constitution in binding form."

There being no amendment to Section 8, the Clerk read Section 9, as follows:

Section 9. "The right of eminent domain shall never be abridged, nor so constructed as to prevent the Legislative Assembly from taking the property and franchises of incorporated companies, and subjecting them to public use the same as the property of individuals; and the public powers of the State shall never be abridged, or so construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals, or the general wellbeing of the State.

There being no amendment to Section 9, the Clerk read Section 10, as follows:

Section 10. "No corporation shall issue stocks or bonds, except for labor done, services performed or money and property actually received, and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void. The stock of corporations shall not be increased except in pursuance of general law, nor without the consent of the persons holding a majority of the stock, first obtained at a meeting held after at least thirty days' notice given in pursuance of law."

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I offer an amendment to be numbered 11.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, offers as an amendment the following: "Add the following as Section 11. I have renumbered the remaining sections to correspond." The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Each stockholder of a corporation for joint stock association shall be individually and personally liable for such proportion of all its debts and liabilities if contracted and incurred during the time he was the stockholder as the amount of stock or shares owned by him bears to the whole of the specified capital stock or shares of corporations or associations. The directors or trustees of corporations and joint stock associations shall be jointly and civilly liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by officers of such corporation or joint stock associations during the term of office of such directors or trustees."

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I think that ought to go in the constitution. It is, I believe, the law in nearly every state of the Union. The law of this Territory makes a stockholder of a joint stock company or corporation liable only for the amount of incomplected stock in the concern. Now, under the laws which obtain here, pretty nearly everything in this Territory is run into a corporation. It seems to me a sort of panacea for all tickets and conditions of commerce and everything else. There is the provision in California. I have found from more experience in the matter that many of the states provide for just what purpose a corporation may be credited and for no other; but here, under our laws, it seems that a corporation may be credited for any purpose—the cigar stand, the real estate agency, a grocery store, a drygoods store, and everything possible which may be comprehended under the term "Industrial Purposes." And I have ascertained further that in undertaking some judgment, amount $200 or $300, against an individual supposed to be worth $250,000 or $300,000, not a dollar's worth of property against which an execution would run could be found upon which to levy; everything was conveyed to the incorporation, and in many instances the property itself, if it is a real estate concern, where the property represented by the corporation was $10,000, the property was conveyed at once to the corporation for that consideration. And the stock of the concern issued as fully paid up stock and yet that concern is permitted to transact business in the community without any sort of personal liability so far as it stockholders are concerned. I think it is wrong in principle, so far as I know no better provision than that can find its way into the constitution.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: It seems to me that the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County in moving this amendment certainly has not studied very well the effects such a provision as this would produce. Now, sir, if you adopt a provision like this in the constitution of Montana, you will not only drive all foreign capital invested in the state away, but you would prevent any further inquiries of foreign capital in this country. Now, it is the object and to the advantage of corporations—the mining corporation, commercial, agricultural and all other kinds of industrial corporations, if they are founded upon the legitimate basis—and I believe that Montana is as free from wildcat operations, and probably much more so, than any other state or territory in the west—I believe we can safely say that there are less wildcat forgerment institutions than are incorporated, or that are sought to be thrust upon the public in state or in the territory of Montana than anywhere else in the western country—and it is a great advantage to promoters of the legitimate enterprises of this character to be enabled to sell their shares in the eastern markets. Look at the "Boston and Montana" in Butte—"The Poorman's" down here in Idaho—and I might cite you 100 other legitimate enterprises in the State of Montana. I think with this provision in the constitution I undertake to say that that stock would come rolling back to Montana to be sold for whatever they could get for it. My reasons are these. Gentlemen who have been associated with corporations of this character well know that frequently it happens that the management of a corporation goes into the hands of a minority of the representation of the stock; but allowing that a majority has the management of the affairs, what protection has the 49%, we will say, of the stockholders got when the management of the property is entirely out of their hands and in the hands of the persons holding 51% of the stock; and these men may go on operating the business of that corporation and fraudulently absorbing all of its assets, and these innocent stockholders on the outside have no remedy whatever except to rush into the market and sell their stock. I say it is an unfair proposition and it will work to the detriment of all of our corporations in this country where they seek to sell the shares of other companies in the foreign markets or the eastern markets. Now, there has been a great deal of stress laid on the proposition that when Montana enters as a state we are to be taken out of the restrictions of the alien law. We know well that millions of dollars that would have been invested in the territory of Montana did not come here because they had no protection under this alien law; but let us pass an ordinance like this or engraft into the constitution of the state such a provision as this, and you could not sell one share of a corporation in the markets of the old world, nor, could you in the markets of the United States outside of perhaps a few people who might be identified with the management of the business. I say that if you adopt this principal you are going to embarrass and handicap every enterprise in this country which seeks to have its business carried on under the act of incorporation.

Mr. Stapleton, of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, I believe if you adopt this section that you will ruin half the corporations in this territory.

I do not believe it is possible to enter into any corporate business with a section like this. I believe that our present law as it exists upon the statute book is the best that can possibly be framed in regard to corporations, and this is the first complaint that I have ever heard in regard to the workings of our present law. Now, it must be admitted that the party who deals with corporations has the same protection as the party who deals with an individual, for the reason that a corporation is only an individual, and they have the same opportunity of finding out and knowing what the responsibility of an individual is. The records are open, and they can find out, and know what property is owned by a corporation the same as an individual. The argument that my friend, Mr. Toole, made would apply equally to an individual as to a corporation. Every lawyer knows that that very often happens, and yet that is no argument why corporations should not be allowed to do business on the same basis. Now, Mr. Chairman, under our present law as we have in Montana Territory, and as it will be left by the laws that we are now considering, no one is liable for the debts of the corporation except so far and to the extent of its unpaid capital stock. If he subscribes for the capital stock of a corporation he must pay that stock in, otherwise he is liable to the extent of that unpaid stock. That is perfectly right and proper, because the supposition is that when he has paid the stock he has paid the value of it. Now, suppose that when you open stock books a party purchases stock, and he pays his money in good faith. Then he has done all that any honest man should be required to do, and the corporation has the management of that money; it has been put in their hands. Now, Mr. Chairman, if you say that notwithstanding he has paid his money in in good faith—if you say that he shall be liable for the debts of that corporation, it appears to me that there is no man who would consent to invest in any corporate enterprise in the world. The stock of any incorporation under our laws is personal property, and you can go into the market and purchase a thousand or ten thousand shares of the stock; you may hold it an hour, or a week, or a year. Now, this section provides that every party holding the stock should be liable for all the debts of that corporation while he holds such stock. Now that corporation may be indebted ten thousand or one hundred thousand dollars; he holds that stock for an hour and then sells it, or a week and sells it; and during this time this debt may exist and a hundred different persons may have held that stock, and when it comes to enforcing this indebtedness, it appears to me that the utmost confusion would prevail; it appears to me the only thing that anyone should require is that when a person shall pay the money in good faith and actually owns part of the corporation, that you should deal with the corporation the same as any other individual, now the only exception that we have for that under our law is providing that where a person owns mines that a company may be incorporated and that the mine may be exchanged for the stock, that is, that you may purchase the mine with the stock. When a company is incorporated it has the stock, but it has no property. Now, you can exchange the stock for a mine, so that the corporation will have the mine and the man who formerly owned the mine will have the stock. Then the company owns the mine and the man can sell the stock and do whatever he sees fit to do with it. That is the way the most of the mining corporations in the territory of Montana have been conducted. The stock may be very valuable afterwards; that depends on the value of the mine which is given for the stock. Now if you say after the stock has been exchanged for the mine or for a dozen mines, that everybody who handles that stock must be responsible for the debts of that corporation. I feel that I never would purchase a share of stock in the world if I had to be responsible for the debts of the corporation, because there are very few of us who have any opportunity of knowing the indebtedness of that corporation at the time we purchase stock; and as my colleague, Mr. Clarke, said, when you go to sell stock outside of the territory it would be a death blow right at the start. I believe you might just as well say in this constitution that there never shall be a corporation organized in the territory of Montana, because I do not believe that any one will buy the stock. The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Clarke, has well shown that all these foreign corporations will be driven out, and I must say that while it may be possible to put this in the constitution, or the laws of the state, or the territory, I do believe that it is the most vicious section that has been sought to be placed in this constitution since this convention began. I believe that as it stands it is much better, and I therefore hope the amendment will not prevail.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I desire to amend the amendment of the gentleman.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Deer Lodge wishes to amend the amendment of the gentleman by inserting the following:

The Clerk read as follows:

"Unless each stockholder shall have paid into the company the par value of such stock in money or property at its actual cash value."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I have never been accused of entertaining any extraordinary partiality to the corporations. A corporation has been defined as being an invisible, intangible being existing only in contemplation of law. I think Chief Justice Marshall came to some such definition as that. But I think John Randolph of Virginia came nearer to it when he stated in Congress that a corporation—and he did not like a corporation either any too well—that a corporation was "an invisible, intangible being, with nobody to be kicked, no soul to be damned;" and that has been my idea of a corporation; and yet a corporation has shown itself to be useful and indispensable to the progress of the world's affairs today. I know that there are many good men, pure men, honest men, Congressmen and Christian men who are large stockholders in corporations, and when I have witnessed their transactions I have sometimes supposed that these devout men went in there for the sake of participating in some outside legitimate business because it yielded more profits than any individual enterprise, and for the further reason that there was nobody to be kicked and no soul to be damned. But since we have recently made a great effort, and a great stride towards accomplishing the introduction of foreign capital here and have declared in our constitution that it shall be—have declared in our constitution that it shall come here and enjoy the same rights that are enjoyed by citizens of the country, it seems to me that it is playing hot and cold, fast and loose, after incorporating that provision in our constitution to turn around now and undertake to put an embargo upon their coming here, for that is just what it is. I know my friend Mr. Clarke or Mr. Stapleton stated here this would prevent the investment of foreign capital or eastern capital in the development of the resources of this country. For instance, a man says "here I get into a corporation, and if there is any mismanagement I am not only going to lose my stock, but I am liable to be beggared"; and it has been the experience of this country for years past that where there are personal liability to the extent that my friend from Lewis & Clarke proposes, that it has been almost impossible to get any corporate stock taken; and in-as-much as Montana is situated as it is, and that our resources can only be brought out by the largest expenditures of money and the greatest degree of energy and enterprise, it seems to me that, in-as-much as we have opened the doors to foreign capital and foreign capitalists here, that we ought not to make a "fake" of it. I am satisfied that the constitution carried out in good faith with a provision inviting foreign capital here, and with a plentiful supply of money in the old world and in the East that those men will come here and invest their money; and there is one particular thing, that when a man finds that he has got on the scent of a gold vein or a copper vein, he will stick to it through thick and thin. There is something in human imagination to go in and perhaps unguardedly to leave their money. But we are not working for the nabobs of the east, we are not working for the lords of England; we are not working for the capitalists of New England, and while we may invite a man to come in here and drop a hundred thousand dollars of his money in the development of our resources, if he happens to prove unfortunate in his investment we cannot help that; but we want to be just. We can say to him, "Here you have gone in here and you have put your money in, and you are out of luck; if you are so short that you can not get out of town we will lend you enough to see you home." (Laughter.) But we want to be just with these people, and we do not want to hedge around the development of our resources by any such strict rules of conduct either moral or business. We want their money to develop the country; we want their energy, and we want their enterprise. Last Saturday I was at the Anaconda, a place that I never visited before, where I saw more machinery driven by power that was invented and called into requisition by man—saw those mountains bored, those wonderful structures put up, and a vast development of wealth there, and all by capital brought into this country; and I came to the conclusion that a man that obstructed its introduction into this country was, to say the least, benighted. I hope this amendment will not prevail.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: Mr. Chairman, this question as to the consideration of corporations and the interests of the territory is something that I have given no little consideration to. I believe, as a lawyer, that as affecting the interests of corporations and affecting the business community of Montana, that I have some knowledge of the proposition. I do not entirely agree with the gentlemen on either side of this proposition to the full extent that they have gone. In the first place, it would be the last one, living in a mining county as I do, especially where the aid of corporations must be invoked and where the concentration of capital is necessary to develop the very resources of the country where I live; where it is necessary to my own interests—I would be the last one to thwart or interfere with that directly or indirectly or to prevent the concentration of capital for the purposes of carrying on these enterprises. On the other hand, sir, I have been trained in a school to believe that every man who has contracted a debt to the extent of his means, should pay that debt. I would hold out no false lights for people to run after; I do not believe in deceiving the innocent public. I believe in a square, fair transaction in all these matters and let the result of it be what it may. I believe that it is the better policy always to deal fairly and squarely with the public. Now, to invoke that principle as applicable to these corporations, it occurs to me in this way. I would not be unmerciful to corporations if it were not carried to the extent that the gentleman himself contemplates. I believe that would be going too far. I believe, on the other hand, if we leave it just exactly where our statutes leaves it at the present time, that it is not going far enough to protect innocent parties who deal with corporations. We have, sir, on our statute books a law that reads fair on its face and it goes far beyond what the President of this Convention would suggest should be the created law; it goes too far in one respect, and not far enough in another. I will read the section. Section 457 of our act with regard to this character of corporations provides as follows: "That the stockholders of every company incorporated under the provisions of this chapter shall be severally and individually liable to the creditors of the company in which they are stockholders to the amount of the unpaid stock held by them respectively, for all acts and contracts made by such company until the whole amount of the capital stock subscribed for shall have been paid in." That, sir, reads very fair upon its face and goes to a very great extent in protecting parties dealing with corporations. The difficulty with this section is simply this. In another section of the statute it stands in this way, that where two, three or more men who are worth two or three millions of dollars, each may incorporate a company and fix its capital stock at a million and a half dollars. In the first place the public in dealing with corporations, do not look to the responsibility of the artificial persons at all; few of them are well enough versed in law; the laborers and the mechanics and merchants are not well enough versed in law to know that the corporation is only bound to a limited extent, but that as they extend credit they do it more on the financial responsibility of the men who are conducting that corporation—the proprietors themselves. They believe they are responsible in every way, shape or fashion, and they deal with that corporation as if dealing with individual men and believe they are amply protected until the corporate property proves a failure. They go to these corporations to collect their bills; it is a failure and they are advised of the fact that the corporate property is of no value and that there is no individual responsibility, notwithstanding the provision of this section of the statute, for the reason that they have, in taking half a million of the capital stock of the corporation, turned into that corporation wild-cat property that has proved after the expenditure of $1,000, $20,000 or $50,000—after spending that amount of money on the corporate property—it has proved an utter failure and worthless and they say our creditors can take the corporate property on which we have expended our money and which we have turned in in payment of the million and a half dollars that we have subscribed to the capital stock of that company. That renders this section or statute entirely nugatory and of no effect whatever. In that way they hold out a false light to laboring men, mechanics and business men to extend credit to them upon the faith in the character of the men who conduct the corporations. Now, if those men are honorable men and want to do what is right, they will, in dealing fair and square with the public, one of two things. They will say, or should at least say, that those innocent parties should be protected or that the law should be as contemplated by this amendment that I offer; that they should only exonerate themselves from this liability upon payment into the treasury of that company the par value of the stock for which they have subscribed, that is, the owner of a particular share of stock that represents one or ten dollars of the capital stock of that company should pay in the par value of that stock if they desire to entirely exonerate themselves from any claim that the creditors of the company may have against them. But, as the law now stands, if they can get around this section of the statute, as I said before, by putting in payment $1-500,000 of land that is worth only $150,000, they will do it. These men are irresponsible; they are adventurers; but they are not such business men as many of our business men in Montana. I can call to mind not far back when mining adventurers were not as successful as they are now. I remember in one of our great mining towns where business men and laboring men were short from seventy-five to one hundred thousand dollars in labor and material, all put into those mines; they proved a failure. I know that, sir, by being called upon by those claimants as their attorney to make a demand to collect those funds, but I was thwarted upon the very threshold by that section. Now, that is not honest; that is not right between man and man. Many of our men who are operating mines today would not do such a thing as that, but men who come into the country—adventurers—they have done just such things as I speak of; they are liable at any time to do it again. I know of instances in Montana where that is being done. Now, then, perhaps to go to the extent of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke contemplates would be going too far. That is, it contemplates that, under certain circumstances, the stockholders in a corporation should be liable for the corporate debts, even if they had paid in the par value of the stock as contemplated in this section here. That is going too far, and to obviate that I offer the amendment that I do, "Unless he shall have paid in the par value of the stock that he holds." My amendment goes a little further than that and seeks to put it on an honest basis of actual cash or property, at its actual cash value. Now, then, my idea about this thing is to protect all parties; to do that it will not thwart or interfere with the organization of legal corporations at all. It will say to men who desire to go into those corporations and carry out those enterprises that you, in common with everybody else in Montana, should expect to pay your debts. We do not desire men to undertake enterprises here who will represent themselves as being worth a million and a half dollars and who may contract a debt of $50,000 with the working elements or the mechanics and business men of Montana and shall not be liable for it. Now, with all deference, I do not believe that is a fair deal. This principle, as may be claimed by gentlemen who control the books—there are articles of incorporation filed now in Montana in the Clerk's Office and others with the Secretary of State—that men contracting with such corporations can go and look at those articles of incorporation—they can go and look at the bylaws of the company; they can look at the statutes of Montana, they can look at the deeds that are on file—on record—of the corporations and see to what extent the capital stock has been paid up and if they do not desire to do a day's labor for that corporation, why, that is their own business. That is one aspect of the case and as a matter of practical application, men that deal with corporations do not go and look at all those things. As I said before, they rely on the responsibility of the men who manage them. Then, unless they go and examine and see what kind of property the corporation has and how much of their capital stock they have paid up, it is holding out a false light to the business world; it is a place where this false light can be held to men; when they expect one thing, there is covertly another staring them in the face, because the men who incorporated the companies are not honorable men and do not want to do what is right. That is what I object to, and that is prevented by the amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke—and to carry out the provisions of this section of the statute which I have read. It seems to me it would be a fair deal all around to carry out this provision of the statute in good faith and not allow a provision created in our legislation, by which this can be rendered nugatory by allowing incorporated properties to transfer a mine or other property worth $25,000 in payment of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

I do not think that is fair or right and I think that this amendment with the amendment that I offer to it would be carrying out the principle laid down here by this statute which has been recognized and which mining men do not object to. Suppose we would incorporate a water company. We want to dig a ditch that costs $50,000. We incorporated our company and put the capital stock at half a million dollars; we will deed to that corporation that water right, or a few rods of ditch that may have been loaned we will deed them in full payment of our capital stock of half a million dollars and go on then with our work and contract a ditch at an expense of $100,000, and you have got that ditch done—taking the chances—that ditch will prove a failure; suppose we are all right men who have inaugurated this scheme. Men who are today working on that ditch do not know the intricacy of the law—how easily they may be thwarted; they come to us and say we are not responsible to you, you have worked on the strength of the value of that ditch alone, and one man may say I do not propose to pay a dollar for the debt to the men, although I have subscribed over one hundred thousand dollars to the capital stock and I have an interest in the water right and I am protected. I say, then, that that holds out a false light to the business community and to the world and it is not fair and just and I do not believe that men who seek to invest money with us and carry out those mining operations in good faith—I do not believe that they would expect, and it would be unreasonable for them to expect us to legislate in such a way that they could not be required in a reasonable manner to pay their debts.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I think, Mr. Chairman, that I will go as far as any gentleman to advance the material interests of this new state and perhaps will do as little to stifle any enterprise as any gentleman here; but I fail to discover, sir, why it is that a mere transformation of a business transaction from that of an individual enterprise to a corporate enterprise should change the morale or integrity of the transaction. If an individual has escaped the obligation of liability, the laws of this country hold him for the payment of it; if it is a loan upon my property, my property is first subject to the payment of it and a judgment from the courts is the remedy for the deficiency. I simply ask by this amendment to put an incorporated company into the shoes of an individual so far as its liability is concerned and not even to that extent, limiting it to the amount of the indebtedness created at the time of the holding of his stock. Now, sir, there must be some reciprocity in regard to these transactions. Organizations must not be allowed to be understood to be for the sole purpose of promoting the interest of the corporations. There must be some reciprocity by which the interests of the public may be protected. If money is loaned by the individual, he has recourse to the public law courts—to the records of deeds, where they are spread upon the open books. It is the history of the property of the person and his liability may be ascertained by consulting the records of the district court. Now, how is it sir, with regard to the transactions of a corporation? The books of the company are open to nobody but the stockholders and creditors of the concern. The individual who transacts business with a corporation is in entire ignorance of its status, and, as suggested by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson) he relies upon the character and integrity of the promoters of the concern and it is upon both the faith and credit given to those gentlemen more than to the corporation that he is induced to loan his money or perform his services. Now, I do not conceive that it is necessary for the interests and property of this country that everything from the crop to the mining concern shall be incorporated. I do not believe it is necessary in order to sell a mine—whether it be one of moderate value or of the highest value—that it shall be necessary to incorporate it in order to induce foreign capital to come into this country. I have done as much as I could, not only upon this floor but elsewhere to secure such legislation as would be an invitation to foreign capital to invest its money in this country. The proposition which puts a corporation upon the same footing as an individual does not take from them, in my humble judgment, the invitation which has been extended in that regard, and they can come here if they want to buy mining properties and examine into the title of the concerns. If my friend from Silver Bow, Mr. Clark, has a mine which he wishes to sell to foreign capital, and they are unwilling to take the stock with any embargo which may be upon it by reason of any indebtedness of which they know nothing, let Mr. Clark and his incorporators reorganize, settle up the debts of the concern, and transfer to the new corporation the property which is represented by the stock. It seems to me that no incorporated company has the right to demand or ask anything over or above the individual of the community. I think the suggestion made by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson), as embodied in his amendment, would perhaps subserve all the purposes contemplated; in other words if an incorporated company has a business—a grocery business or a mine—worth $100,000 and they are inclined to incorporate it and stock it for $500,000, let the amount of money which the stockholder puts into it represent the amount of the capital stock; that is to say, if it is five dollars a share, let him put up the par value of the stock, so that the amount in the treasury may represent exactly what the stock is declared to be; and in that way there is no advantage taken of the public. The public has a right to know something of the affairs of the concern with which they deal. I have no hostility to any particular corporation or to corporations in general; I have no hostility to the system when it is confined within due bounds, but under a law which authorizes anything and everything to be made the subject of an incorporation it seems to me that the public has some interests and some rights which ought to be guarded and protected, and I think that the proposition submitted by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Robinson) is a very modest departure in that direction.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: The distinguished gentleman who has introduced this proposition informs us that he got it from the constitution of California.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: No, from the laws of California.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: That proposition introduced into the laws of California drove from that state almost every mining corporation that existed there, no matter what kind of corporation, a wild-cat corporation or a corporation that had a good and substantial basis. The gentlemen say that men who deal with these corporations deal with them upon the faith of those who manage them. I deny that. Men who deal with these corporations deal with them from what they know of their condition, the value of their property, what incumbrances is upon that property. Mr. Robinson has spoken of mining transactions that occurred in this county some years ago that were unfortunate and how the people of that section of country were wronged. I happen to know something of some of these corporations. One of them, I think, was organized under the corporate laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and when we had procured judgment against the company for some $10,000, and thought under the laws of Pennsylvania we might collect it of some of the officers of the company. Mr. Napton, now deceased, went to Philadelphia and he found that the stock of the company was in the hands of dummies, except a small amount, enough to make certain responsible gentlemen directors—men that you could not collect five cents from. The stock had all been transferred to them a year or two before. There is no trouble in getting around these matters. The gentleman says to put in the corporate property for its cash value. I know mining corporations are organized in the Territory and they announce the capital stock as four or five millions of dollars. Some of the corporations perhaps are organized in such a way as to make the stockholders liable, just as Mr. Robinson wishes; others are perhaps organized properly; but if with such a provision in our constitution as this it is no trouble to organize corporations and deed to them the property in any amount of value—$250—that will not affect the sale of the stock. The stock in mining corporations will always sell in accordance with what appears to be the value of that property. Why, over here in his town they have organized a lot of mining corporations there, all of which I think are claimed to have from four to five millions of dollars of capital stock, and the stock has been selling for 10, 15, 20, and none of it higher than 55 cents, par value, of the shares of stock. Now, I undertake to say that those mining operations that have developed those mines in that section of country, or that have developed them in other sections of country, would not have been entered into by the people of this section of country if they had known that they were making themselves liable for all of the debts of these mining companies. They would not have gone into those corporations and contributed, some $50, some $100, some $500, and some $1,000, if they had expected for one moment that they were to be liable. If that is the case, what is the result? Why, in organizing corporations such as these gentlemen wish here you will retard the development of the country.

Most of these corporations for developing mines are formed right here with us, and as has been said, for a number of years there have been no instances known where the people have been swindled by these corporations. Gentlemen have trusted these corporations, not upon the faith of those who manage them, but upon the faith of how they have been organized, and they have trusted them only in accordance with their faith in trusting individuals having so much property. And I am sure that there is no advantage being taken of the public, as has been suggested in this matter. Can a gentleman cite where the public has been taken advantage of by any of these corporations for the last ten years? I know of none myself—none whatever. Men have dealt with them as they would with individuals. I know there are a great many men that will go to work for a corporation knowing just the whole condition of that corporation—knowing how much property they have—and if the corporation fails then they turn around and wish to get their pay from some individual connected with the corporation. Now this proposition that the gentleman has presented here is an old proposition. The legislatures were generally hostile to corporations fifty years ago, and they used to make some such provision as this as to the personal liability of individuals. You find that even now in the National Bankin Act, where they have made them liable for the same amount as their stock. But the great mass of the corporations in this country that are incorporated for mining purposes and such purposes as are kindred to them, do not make their stockholders liable for the debts of the corporation. It is well known that men would not go into these corporations; they would not put up their money upon those conditions. It is generally easy enough to find out how much money is put up for a corporation, how much is subscribed, how much is really the capital stock. Gentlemen say that they keep their books so that no one can tell. If any corporation keeps the books so that no one can tell whether it is solvent or not, does that take advantage of them? People are not forced to deal with corporations. The truth is that this country is prospering in its mining enterprises by reason of its corporations, and for the reason that these people were not liable for their corporation stock. Anyone can go and examine their books, and everything that is reasonable, I think, in these matters has been done by our law. Take up the proposition as Mr. Robinson says. Why, if he inaugurates that system, all that is necessary to do is to say that the capital stock of your mining enterprise is $250,000. Then the stock will sell for just exactly what it is worth. You can put it at one cent a share, but it will go back to the question of what will that amount pay in dividends and if it will pay something in dividends it will go up to one dollar a share. There is no trouble in getting around the proposition that the gentleman has stated at all, and there is no use of putting that into our constitution. Shut out legislation or any encroachment that can be made upon this subject of mines or kindred enterprises, smelting enterprises, or such other enterprises, by legislatures in the future. You have fixed it up here in a cast-iron form of constitution, so that it can only be amended after action by the legislature and by vote of the people, and I think that we can fix our constitution so that this matter can be wholly relegated to the legislature. Let the legislature act upon it. There is no necessity for prescribing all such matters as this in a constitution, and except in California I do not know of a single state in this Union that has put such a provision in its constitution.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: About two weeks ago I received a letter from one of the brightest men in the Territory of Montana today: it was closely written and contained ten pages and it related to the very subject we are discussing now. I had an amendment something similar to the one presented by Mr. Toole waiting for the time to offer it, and I am very glad that a man of his ability and standing made the amendment instead of my being compelled to make it, and I hope it will prevail. Now, in regard to these corporations, when it comes to a question of corporations and the mechanics, laborers and business men of the territory, I think it is to the interest of the people of Montana that it shall be the corporations that will suffer. We can go to the town of the gentlemen that oppose this amendment—to the town of Butte—and we have an example of it there. I imagine everyone remembers the Bell Concentrating and Reduction Company. I worked for that company and wanted to get my pay but could not. I went to consult lawyers and I found that I could do nothing. I tried to attach the property. I was working for the Bell Concentrating & Reduction Company. Mr. King was superintendent of the company, and Mr. Wallace and Mr. King were the Bell Concentrating & Reduction Company, but I found out that the Bell Concentrating & Reduction Company were not Mr. Wallace and Mr. King. I tried to attach the charcoal and the engine and everything, and when I got to the horse and buggy I found that the horse and buggy was a present from Mr. Wallace to Mr. King and was in no way connected with the Bell Concentrating & Reduction Company. If we are to protect such men as Wallace and King, or any other men, I don't care who they are, with such principles as that, and let the laborers and miners and mechanics and business men of the territory suffer, I say we had better not have such corporations, and I hope the amendment will prevail. Is not Silver Bow County better off today since the Bell smelter shut down? Over here in the Cataract district we have a St. Louis company operating there. If they strike it rich they will pay their men and if not they won't pay them. The workmen don't know any better, but so long as it is a corporation and has a superintendent they will go there and they will work for them. We don't want any such corporations. We will take legitimate chances and every man be liable for his just debts, and I hope Mr. Toole's amendment will prevail.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: The citizens of Butte put up over $450,000 for the laborers that worked upon the Bell Company property—men that put it up and bought stock in that company, and they never got any return back. There is a gentleman within the sound of my voice now that put up $50,000 that those laborers got, and he has never got a dollar of it back.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I did not say that there were men who were officers in these companies who were good men, and for such men as that there is no need to offer this amendment—men that are going to stay within their means and not go off on wild-cat speculations and realize, or attempt to realize a million dollars out of a possible thousand, and if they don't make it to fleece the laborer and everybody else to the extent of $100,000. It is such men as that class that are the ones that this amendment is intended to cover and not the honest, legitimate business men of Montana.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: All of this debate would be very entertaining and instructive if we were a legislative assembly, but I quite agree with the remarks of my colleague, Judge Knowles, when he says that this is a matter that ought to have been left to the legislative assembly. It may seem presumptuous for me to stand on my feet and raise the question as to what is fundamental law; nevertheless I do say that in my judgment there is a great deal in this proposition that has not any place in the constitution of the state; and I want to express my disappointment that there is so much here that is unnecessary, for I have looked over the statutes of our territory as they are now in operation and I find a great deal in the statutes now that is incorporated in this constitution. Now, I do not see the need of this. A gentleman said to me in the city of Butte the other day, "Mr. Rickards, I predict that the majority of the members of that constitutional convention will regret the day that they were ever elected to that convention." There is abroad in this territory a feeling that you are doing and attempting too much in the way of legislation. The only objection that we had to the old constitution was that there was so much legislation in it; and I regret to see, and I want to raise my voice at this time against so much effort, so much attempt—so much futile attempt to incorporate in our constitution what ought to be left to our legislative assembly. I am not attempting to discuss the merits or demerits of this case, I confess to you that I do not feel competent to; and I do not impeach the confidence of this body when I say that I feel that we are wasting time in attempting to discuss the merits or demerits of this proposition. If this were a legislative assembly I would sit here and listen with patience to all this debate; but I do say with a great deal of feeling, and I believe I voice my constituency when I say that we are attempting to do too much in the way of legislation in this constitution. I am astonished that there should be an attempt made to engraft in our constitution so much of the statute as it is now on this statute book.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke—Mr. Toole's.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 11 as follows: No foreign corporation shall do any business in this state without having one or more places of business and an authorized agent or agents in the same, upon whom process may be served; and no company or corporation formed under the laws of any other country, state or territory shall have or be allowed to exercise or enjoy within this state any greater rights or privileges than those possessed or enjoyed by corporations of the same or similar character created under the laws of this state.

There being no amendment to Section 11, the Clerk read Section 12, as follows: Section 12. No street or other railroad shall be constructed within any city or town without the consent of the legal authorities having control of the street or highway proposed to be occupied by such street or other railroad.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move to strike out Section 12.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 20 to 16.

The Clerk read Section 13 as follows: Section 13. The legislative assembly shall pass no law for the benefit of a railroad or other corporation or any individual or association of individuals, retrospective in its operation, or which imposes on the people of any county or municipal subdivision of the state, a new liability in respect to transactions or considerations already passed.

There being no amendment to section 13, the Clerk read Section 14 as follows: Section 14. Any association or corporation, or the lessees or managers thereof, organized for the purpose, or any individual, shall have the right to construct and maintain lines of telegraph or telephone within this state, and connect the same with other lines; and the legislative assembly shall by general law of uniform operation provide reasonable regulations to give full effect to this section. No telegraph or telephone company shall consolidate with or hold a controlling interest in the stock or bonds of any other telegraph or telephone company owning or having control of a competing line, or acquire by purchase or otherwise any other competing line of telegraph or telephone.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow moved to strike out Section 14.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 15 as follows: Section 15: If any railroad, telegraph, telephone, express or other corporation, organized under any of the laws of this state shall consolidate by sale or otherwise with any railroad, telegraph, telephone, express or other corporation organized under any of the laws of any other state or territory, or of the United States, the same shall not thereby become a foreign corporation, but the courts of this state shall retain jurisdiction over that part of the corporate property within the limits of the state, in all matters that may arise, as if said consolidation had not taken place.

There being no amendment to Section 15, the Clerk read Section 16, as follows: Section 16. It shall be unlawful for any person, company or corporation to require of its servants or employes, as a condition of their employment or otherwise, any contract or agreement whereby such person, company or corporation shall be released or discharged from liability or responsibility on account of personal injuries received by such servants or employes while in the service of such person, company or corporation by reason of the negligence of such person, company or corporation or the agents or employes thereof; and such contracts shall be absolutely null and void.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to recur to Section 15. In Section 15 the word "company" is omitted on line one, after the word "corporation." I move to insert the word "company."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Sections 15 or 16, the Clerk read Section 17, as follows: Section 17. The legislative assembly shall not pass any law permitting the leasing or alienation of any franchise so as to release or relieve the franchise or property held thereunder from any of the liabilities of the lessor or grantor, or lessee or grantee, contracted or incurred in the operation, use or enjoyment of such franchise or any of its privileges.

There being no amendment to Section 17, the Clerk read Section 18, as follows: Section 18. The term "corporation" as used in this article shall be held and construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having or exercising any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships; and all corporations shall have the right to sue and shall be subject to be sued in all courts in like cases as natural persons, subject to such regulations and conditions as may be prescribed by law.

There being no amendment to Section 18, the Clerk read Section 19, as follows: Section 19. Dues from private corporations shall be secured by such means as may be prescribed by law, but in no case shall any stockholder be individually liable in any amount over or above the amount of stock owned by him.

Mr. Fields of Park: I offer the following substitute for Section 19:

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for Section 19. Dues from private corporations shall be secured by such means as may be prescribed by law, and the stockholders of such corporation shall be jointly and severally individually liable for all debts that may be due and owing to all their laborers, servants, employes and apprentices for services performed for such corporations.

Mr. Fields of Park: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I move to strike out all after the word "law" in the second line.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman stated the motion.

Mr. Fields of Park: I believe in starting right in and supporting it from the start. I do not think it is any greater crime for a man that is hungry to use Victor Hugo's illustration, walking down the street, to steal a loaf of bread from a baker's shop and be condemned for it than it is to be employed for companies and corporations and make them work for a certain time and then throw up and dissolve the company and declare there is nothing to pay for what work has been done. I contend that there are gentlemen here who understand perfectly well what the aim and object of this amendment is and also the one that the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offered a little while ago for Section 10, and I know it is a hopeless task, but still I am willing and ready to put myself on record to see that we enact laws here that shall show equality and justice to all, and I propose to put myself on record in saying that working men shall have their pay for the work they do for any corporation whatever. If my wife goes down to the city and buys a dollar's worth of sugar I am held responsible for it, and I contend that when I join a company or corporation and invest my money here that I should be held equally responsible for the same and every cent of the property that I own for labor that is honestly done and should be honestly paid for.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I agree with the gentleman in some things. I think that a man who goes down the street and robs his neighbor of a loaf of bread should be punished for petty larceny; so I think if any man goes into a corporation and robs his neighbor he should be punished for the offense under the law, and that is just what this section provides in the amendment to strike out. "Dues from private corporations shall be secured by such means as may be prescribed by law." There is a motion to strike out the residue—"but in no case shall any stockholder be individually liable in any amount over or above the amount of stock owned by him." Now, if the corporation is able to pay, make them pay, and if they can't then punish them under the criminal law. The old saying is: "All that you can get of a cat is the skin."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Jefferson (Mr. Breen), and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 19, the Clerk read Section 20, as follows: Section 20. That no incorporation, stock company, person or association of persons in the State of Montana shall directly or indirectly combine, or form what is known as a trust, or make any contract with any person or persons, corporation or stock company, foreign or domestic, through their stockholders, trustees, or in any manner whatever for the purpose of fixing the price or regulating the production of any article of commerce or of the product of the soil, for consumption by the people. That the legislature shall pass laws for the enforcement thereof by adequate penalties to the extent, if necessary for that purpose, of the forfeiture of their property and franchises, or in case of foreign corporations, prohibiting them from carrying on business in this state.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move to strike out Section 4.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Now, Mr. Chairman, I said a few moments ago, I believe, that there has been incorporated in Proposition 31 a great deal that is already on our statute books, and I reaffirm what I said a few moments ago. This is one of the sections containing what I already find on page 726 of our statute book, which I wish to read. "At such election for trustees each stockholder shall have as many votes as the number of shares of stock held by him multiplied by the number of trustees to be chosen, and may cast all his votes for one candidate, or distribute them as he may see fit, and the persons having the greatest number of votes shall be trustees." Now, Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to incorporating in our constitution an irrevocable method by which an election shall be held. While our statutes have provided for an election in this manner, the experience of a few years may demonstrate that there is a better or more approved method, and I do not believe it is wise to adopt irrevocably such a method. Hence my motion.

Mr. Fields, of Park: I hope this motion will prevail. I know at the present time of several different bodies that are on the verge of incorporation that are delayed for the simple reason that we have a law on our statute books which they would like, and I believe will at the coming Legislature, have changed, and if this is put in the constitution it will be impossible without a constitutional amendment. Everybody in the Territory of Montana today who wishes to incorporate in business, so far as my observation goes, wishes to go in under the head of a law that has been passed in Minnesota wherein it is made optional in taking out incorporation papers to vote the shareholders or the shares. At the present time, I know of one instance in the Territory of Montana. It has been running a year and a half, and it has proved a success, and I think where bodies of men form a company or corporation together and they come to an agreement that they will not vote the shares but vote the shareholders, that there should be no law prohibiting them from so doing; and I hope that this motion made by the gentleman from Silver Bow will prevail, thereby not binding those people who are looking forward for a change in that law at the meeting of our next Legislature.

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I do not wish to interfere in any way with the proposition of the gentleman from Park. I would simply say this, that the method here provided for by the Legislature of Montana, as cited by my colleague, Mr. Rickards, is one that allows this optional method of voting, and that may be repealed. Now, in the State of New York—for I happen to be interested there and know how matters are conducted there—those holding a majority of the stock of any corporation or company organized under the laws of the State of New York have the absolute control of the Board of Directors and elect every one of them; the minority can get no representation whatever; but by the rule now adopted by the Legislature of Montana, and which is incorporated in the section of this article here, no manner of shutting out the minority representation upon any board of trustees exists. I believe in a minority representation.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I wish to say that I believe in the minority always having a voice in the management of its own affairs; nevertheless, I repeat as I said before, that I do not deem it wise in making fundamental law to fix irrevocably a method by which stockholders shall be elected. It is already on our statute books, and I think the Legislative Assembly is as competent to deal with that statute as we are, and I am not sure but that in the light of future developments they may be more competent.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Rickards, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: There is a little change there that I want to make. I send the motion to the Chair.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Hershfield, moves to strike out in line four the word "managers" and insert "trustees"—line four of section four.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: I move to amend Section 3 by inserting after the word "constitution" in the third line these words: "or which may be hereafter incorporated."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that the committee do now rise and report, with the recommendation that Proposition No. 31 be adopted as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 31 and have made some amendments thereto which are as follows: They have amended Section 6 in the manner herein recorded in writing, as follows: Add to Section 6 as follows: "Nor shall any officer of such railroad, express or other transportation company act as an officer of any other railroad, express or other transportation company owning or having control of a parallel or competing line". Section 15 has been amended by adding the words "or company" after the word "corporation". Section 19 has been amended by striking out all after the word "law" in line two. Section 3 has been amended by inserting after the word "constitution" in the second line the words "or which may be hereafter incorporated." Section 4 is amended by striking out of line 4 the word "managers" and in the other places in the same section where the word occurs, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "trustees". The committee have directed their chairman to report back this article with the amendments stated and recommend that the amendments be adopted in convention.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: I move that the amendments specified be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, and a vote being had, the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I wish to offer the following amendments to the rules.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee on Rules offers the following amendments, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Amendments to rules. 1st. It shall not be in order to call the roll but once a day, and then upon the assembling of the convention after an adjournment. 2nd. A call of the ayes and nays upon the final passage of any proposition intended to be embodied in the constitution shall not be necessary unless demanded by a member. 3rd. An amendment offered to any proposition in Committee of the Whole may be again presented in convention, but no debate shall be in order thereon without unanimous consent.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I would like to ask the gentleman one question, if the adoption of this rule as read here won't preclude the possibility of a call of the house.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: It was designed so. I hope the matter will be postponed for further consideration until tomorrow morning.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that the convention do now take a recess until eight o'clock this evening.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 8 P. M.

Eight P. M. The convention was called to order by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: The Committee of the Whole desire to report their action on Proposition No. 24, Article on Municipal Corporations and Officers.

The President: If there be no objection the report of the Committee of the Whole on Proposition No. 24 will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole had under consideration Proposition No. 24, General File No. 24, Article on Municipal Corporations and Officers, and beg leave to report the same back to the convention, except such parts as have been referred, with the following amendments, which the committee recommend be adopted. Your committee would state that in the amendments offered reference is to numbers of lines and sections as such as are in the printed bill.

Strike out all of Section 2 after the word "years" on line four; also strike out all words after the word "vote" on line three up to and including the word "therefor" on line four, and insert in lieu thereof the words "at a general election on a proposition to remove the county seat, shall vote therefor." Strike out Section three. Amend Section four by adding thereto the following: "Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the readjustment of county lines between existing counties." Strike out Section five, Section six, Section seven and Section eight. Strike out Sections nine and ten and substitute in lieu thereof the following: "In each county there shall be elected three County Commissioners whose term of office shall be four years. A vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners shall be filled by appointment of the District Judge in which the vacancy occurs." Amend Section eleven by inserting after the word "taxes" on line three the words "Provided that the County Treasurer shall not hold his office for more than two consecutive terms." Also strike out the word "all" on line two. Strike out Section 12. Amend Section 13 by striking out the word "shall" in line one and insert in lieu thereof the word "may." Strike out Section 14.

Your committee would further recommend that the following be recommended to the Committee of the Whole to be considered with the article on ordinances: "All county officers in office at the time of the adoption of this constitution, except Probate Judge, shall hold their respective offices until the expiration of the term for which they were elected." Also that Resolution No. 6, introduced by Goddard, of Yellowstone, be referred to the same committee. Your committee would further recommend that Resolution No. 18, introduced by Buford, and Resolution No. 9, introduced by Kennedy, and extract of proposition introduced by Joy, and also Resolution No. 14 introduced by Conrad, do not pass.

(Signed)

KENNEDY, Chairman.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move that Proposition No. 24 as amended and reported back by the committee be adopted as part of the constitution of the State of Montana.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The report of the committee should be disposed of.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move you as an amendment that the report of the Committee of the Whole be amended by reinstating Sections seven and eight as in the printed copy.

The President: The Chair would state to the gentleman from Custer that the first thing to do is to dispose of the report of the committee.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: My idea was to amend the report of the committee by reinstating those two sections.

The President: The report should be received first. If there be no objection the report will be received and will be now open for amendment.

The amendments offered by the Committee of the Whole must first be considered, and then any other amendments that may be proposed.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out all of Section 2 after the word "years" on line four; also strike out all words after the word "vote" on line three up to and including the word "therefor" on line four and insert in lieu thereof the words "at a general election on a proposition to remove the county seat, shall vote therefor."

Mr. Fields, of Park: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 3.

Mr. Witter, of Beaverhead: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section four by adding thereto the following: "Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the readjustment of county lines between existing counties."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move its adoption.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 5.

Mr. Sargent, of Silver Bow: I move that the amendment be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 6.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Sections seven and eight.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the report be adopted as to Section 7.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, it seems to me that the constitution should provide in some way or other that the Legislature should have the power to divide counties up into townships, districts, precinct, etc. Now, a great many matters of legislation have so far crept into the constitution, but it seems on the other hand that there has been a disposition during the last day or two to strike out matters as being legislation that really should remain, and I really believe that if the same disposition had existed from the start that we would not have anything today but perhaps the preamble. Now, Section seven provides that the Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for the subdivision of the several counties of the State. It occurs to me that it is proper there should be a provision of that kind in the constitution, and although some may say that it is legislation, and undoubtedly the Legislature would have the power to do that in the absence of constitutional provision, I think that it is wise that those matters be touched upon in some way, and that the report of the Committee of the Whole upon that proposition should not be adopted, and that Section seven of the printed bill should remain.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: There is nothing clearer under the sun than that the power to legislate in regard to matters not inhibited by this constitution exists with the people and their representatives in the Legislature. It is not necessary to interject anything of that kind into the constitution; they have the power now, and if there is nothing said about it they have unlimited power to divide the counties and their State into such districts as they see fit. It is true that if it is put in there it would not rob them of that power, but the power exists here to all intents and purposes in the people to make such internal arrangements as they see fit, provided they do not conflict with the constitution of the United States.

The President: The question is upon striking out Section 7.

The Chair put the said question, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The question is now on the report of the committee to strike out Section 8.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: Now, although it is true, as has been suggested divers and sundry times by my colleague from Custer, that unless these powers are inhibited they do remain in the Legislature and exist there, in Section eight there is a certain limitation as to the number of classes that cities and towns shall be divided into, and it occurs to me that the Legislature should be prohibited from providing more classes of cities and towns than is mentioned in this section. (Reading) "The number of such classes should not exceed The power of such classes should be limited by general law." Now, both of those paragraphs are limitations and are proper matters of fundamental law. I do not desire to take up the time of the convention, but it occurs to me that we have got to sweeping matters out too much, and that that section should remain.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I think there is somebody going to come after us in the legislative halls of the State of Montana—I hope so—and I would remind this convention that we have got along here pretty well since 1867 without this constitution, so far as the legislative power is concerned. The Organic Act provides, I think, that the legislative power should extend to all rights of suffrage and legislation not inconsistent with the constitution of the United States, and it does not seem to me that the Territory has gone wild over all that power in its hand. I think this is a matter that the Legislature may be safely intrusted with, and as has been said by my friend from Deer Lodge County, Mr. Whitehill, the Legislature will do this, or at least it has a perfect right to do it, and if it does not do it there is no power on earth to coerce them. It is unnecessary to have this thing in the constitution, and I think we had better leave something for the Legislature of the State of Montana to do hereafter. We might do things here in the shape of legislation that should be undone, and it is not so easy if you put it in the constitution to have it undone. Whatever one Legislature may do, why, a subsequent Legislature can amend or repeal. I think the Committee of the Whole did right in striking this out, and I hope their action will be sustained.

The President: The question is upon the report of the Committee of the Whole striking out Section eight.

The Chair put the said question, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Sections 9 and 10 and substitute in lieu thereof the following: "In each county there shall be elected three County Commissioners whose term of office shall be four years. A vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners shall be filled by appointment of the District Judge of the district in which the vacancy occurs."

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I move its adoption.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 11 by inserting after the word "taxes" on line three the words "provided that the County Treasurer shall not hold his office for more than two consecutive terms." Also strike out the words "of deeds" on line two.

The President: The convention will act upon the first amendment.

Mr. Middleton: I desire to offer an amendment to that, Mr. President.

The Clerk read the gentleman's amendment as follows: "Strike out the proposed amendment made by Committee of the Whole and insert in lieu thereof the following: Provided that no person shall hold the office of County Treasurer for more than two consecutive terms."

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: That leaves the substance of the amendment the same, but changes the wording of it. It should state "the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole after the word 'taxes' on line three."

The President: The Clerk will read the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole, and then the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 11 by inserting after the word "taxes" on line three the words: "Provided that the County Treasurer shall not hold his office for more than two consecutive terms. The amendment by Mr. Middleton reads as follows: "Provided that no person shall hold the office of County Treasurer for more than two consecutive terms."

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer to the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It will be seen that the phraseology of the amendment of the Committee of the Whole is "that the County Treasurer shall not hold his office," and what is attempted to be arrived at is that no person shall hold the office of County Treasurer for more than two consecutive terms.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer in lieu of the amendment of the committee of the whole.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Also strike out the words "of deeds" in line two of Section 11.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 12.

Mr. Buford of Madison: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and on a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 13 by striking out the word "shall" in line one, and insert in lieu thereof the word "may."

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 14.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: Are there any further amendments to be offered to Proposition No. 24? If not the Chair will entertain a motion to place the proposition upon its final passage.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I move that proposition No. 24 be placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Clerk calls the attention of the Chair to the fact that there were some resolutions considered in connection with this proposition that have not yet been considered by the convention. If the gentleman will withhold his motion for a few minutes, the convention can act upon these matters.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I withdraw my motion, with the consent of my second.

The President: The Clerk will read the resolutions to be considered.

The Clerk read as follows: "Your committee would recommend that the following be recommended to the committee of the whole to be considered with the article on Ordinances: All county officers in office at the time of the adoption of this constitution except Probate Judges, shall hold their respective offices until the expiration of the terms for which they were elected. Also that resolution No. 6, introduced by Goddard of Yellowstone, be referred to the same committee."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment, or rather the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I would ask if this amendment would carry that whole section with it?

The President: What section does the gentleman refer to?

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: Section 11.

The President: No, it will not carry the section with it, simply the amendment offered to be considered in committee of the whole in connection with the ordinances.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Your committee would further recommend that Resolution No. 18, introduced by Buford, and Resolution No. 9, introduced by Kennedy, and extract of Proposition No. 7, introduced by Joy; also Resolution No. 14, introduced by Conrad, do not pass.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move the adoption of the report.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the final adoption of Proposition No. 24 as amended.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I renew my motion.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I would ask what shape Section 11 is now in? Part of it has been referred or amended.

The President: That was considered not to be Germane to this section, and was referred.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I have an amendment to Section 11.

The President: The gentleman from Beaverhead, Mr. Witter, offers to amend Section 11 by striking out all after the word "years" in line six ~~to~~ and including the figures "1892" in line seven.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 33 in the affirmative to 30 in the negative.

The President: The question now before the convention is upon the final adoption of Proposition No. 24. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes: Aiken, Breen, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J., Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Craven, Dyer, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marshall, Mitchell, Myers, Reek, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Witter.

Nays: Bickford, Brown, Buford, Burns, A. F., Burns, Edward; Cardwell, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Fields, Graves, Halch, Hogan, Joyes, Marion, Mayger, Middleton, Ramsdell, Robinson, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K., Toole, J. R., Winston, Mr. President.

Ayes, 41; Nays, 26.

Absent: Brazleton, Durfee, Eaton, Joy, McAdow, Muth, Parberry, Webster—8.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move you, sir, that the vote by which Proposition No. 24 was adopted be now reconsidered, and that motion laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 33 in the affirmative to 32 in the negative.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: When we adjourned I believe we were considering the report of the committee of the whole on Proposition No. 31 with the amendments, were we not?

The President: The committee of the whole, I believe, did report upon that verbally, but the chairman of the committee desired further time in which to file his report.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that the rules be suspended and Proposition No. 31 placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, that the rules be suspended and Proposition No. 31 placed upon its final passage. The amendments of the committee of the whole will first be received. The Clerk will read the amendments reported by the committee of the whole.

The Clerk read as follows: Add to Section 6 as follows: "Nor shall any officer of such railroad, express or other transportation company act as an officer of any other railroad, express or other transportation company owning or having control of a parallel or competing line."

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 15, line one, by adding the words "or company" after the word "corporation."

Mr. Fields of Park: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question of the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out of Section 19 all after the word "law" in line two.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out of line "four" of Section 4 the word "managers" and insert the word "trustees."

The President: This occurs also in lines "two" and "seven." The question now is upon the amendment offered by the committee of the whole to substitute in lines 2, 4 and 7 the word "trustee" in lieu of the word "managers."

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move as an amendment to the amendment from the committee of the whole that Section 4 be stricken out entirely.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion to amend by substituting "trustees" for "managers" and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow to strike out Section 4.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I wish to say for the benefit of the few who were not there this afternoon when we were considering this in the committee of the whole, my reasons for this motion. We find that there is already on the statute books practically and almost literally the same provision that was incorporated in Section 4, and I stated this afternoon, and I wish to state again, that I do not believe it wise for this constitutional convention to attempt to fix irrevocably the question of how directors or trustees of a corporation shall be elected. Our experience has taught us that there may be a better way of regulating this matter than that now on our statute books, and experience may prove the same thing with any other enactment we may make here on that matter. For that reason I think it wrong for us to attempt to fix in an ironclad manner how the trustees of corporations shall be elected. That is my reason for moving to strike out Section 4.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: I hope that Section 4 will not be stricken out. My colleague says that we have the same provision in the statute. That is true; but the committee thought it was so important a matter that, in order that there might never be any influence brought to bear on the legislature to have them change it, it was necessary to incorporate it into the constitution, in order that, as my friend Mr. Rickards says, it might be iron-clad and that it might not be liable or subject to change. Mr. President, it is the only means by which the minority can ever have a representation upon the board of any corporation, and by this means they always can have a representation. Now, until this law was passed there was no possible way for a minority or for a few men owning a small amount of stock to have a trustee of their own and to elect a trustee at a meeting, and now they can under this section of the law always have a representation—a minority representation it is true, but it does appear to me that this section is the poor man's friend—that it provides for minority representation, and I do not believe that any means can ever be devised that will be better than it. I would say, leave to the legislature, if it could devise a better means, but I believe that no better way can ever be devised, and that the legislature may depart from this and enact a much worse law. I believe it is to the interest of the people to retain this here as a limitation upon any enactment which the legislature might make; and it is not legislation pure and simple; it is a limitation upon the legislature. You cannot provide for it in any other way, and I believe when this convention thoroughly understands the matter they will see at once it is the only way a poor man can have a representation on the board of trustees of any corporation, and by retaining this for all time they will have that; and if you strike it out the legislature at the very first session may begin to experiment and so amend the law that there would be no minority representation on the board.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Did I understand the decision of the Chair correctly when he announced that the substitution of the word "trustees" for "managers" was lost.

The President: Yes, sir; the motion to amend was lost.

Mr. Fields of Park: I have listened with close attention to the remarks of my learned friend the member of Silver Bow county, in reference to this Section No. 4 being the poor man's friend. I have had a little experience in that myself, and I believe it is the poor man's enemy. The idea of giving the poor man a minority and telling him that that is giving him a representation. I say that minority is nothing to the poor or the rich man in this case. The way it is provided for in here is taking the law to the extreme and the utmost distance from the poor man or the workingman. I have heard my learned friends here say that a law on our statute books could be changed by another legislature, and I believe it can; I believe it can be changed easier than an amendment to the constitution can be made. I know of orders and societies which have for the past number of years been trying to become incorporated with the intention of voting the shareholder instead of the shares. At the present time there is one company of that kind in the territory of Montana. It has never been brought to a test case, but the people who belong to that company are in fear at all times that it might be brought up by some person. Now, I know that these people are looking forward to the first legislature of the State of Montana to see the law repealed and without wishing to attribute any unworthy motives to the learned friends and members who are trying to advance this, and without at all wishing to accuse them unjustly, I honestly and candidly believe that they are making steps and strides to defeat that measure and place it farther from the reach of the people of Montana; and I stand here to see and do my utmost that that clause is stricken out of the constitution, and I hope to live to see the day it will be stricken from our statute books as it stands today.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I am very much in favor of having this section retained, but it seems to me the way it is in here that the objection is, it will amount to nothing as it stands now, for it is simply a direction to the legislature that they shall make this law. Now, if we desire to retain it in here we can put this into the form of a statute itself, and then it is as binding as though the legislature had made it a statute; and for that reason I move to strike out the words up to the word "all." Then it will read: "All elections for directors, etc., shall be." Then it is in the form of a statute and is as binding. I believe, as though the legislature had passed it. If passed as it is now it will be a nullity. The legislature need not pass any law unless it sees fit. Now, I venture to say that a great many states have passed, by their legislatures, this provision. I say it is wise and right that a minority should have some chance of having a say there. It is little enough as it is now. Any one who has any dealing with a corporation and stands in with the minority knows that they have a small show to get any right they are entitled to, and I think it would be almost the unanimous sense of the people that they should be preserved; and although we may leave it out here and leave it to the legislature to pass it, still I think it is important that such a provision should be made, and for that reason I say let us put it in the form of a statute by striking out those first words.

The President: The Chair will put the motion. The motion to amend takes precedence of the motion to strike out. It is moved and seconded that Section 4 be amended by striking out the first nine words in line one—"The legislative assembly shall provide by law that in". This section will then begin: "All elections for directors and managers."

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Mr. President, I had intended to say a few words in favor of striking out the section as it is printed here. It occurs to me that the proper thing to do would be to leave this to the legislature. As the gentleman from Park well says, there are some people in this territory, and a good many people in this territory, who desire to go into corporations where individuals instead of stock shall have the vote, and if the matter is left to the legislature, a bill can be drafted providing that the promoters of any scheme shall elect whether they shall accept this provision or shall accept the other; and if we put this in the constitution we shall prohibit the owners of stock in building associations and other associations of that kind from providing in their by-laws of incorporation that individuals instead of stock shall have a vote; and by leaving this matter to the legislature a bill can be drafted that will meet the wants and requirements of both parties—people who desire a provision of this kind, and also those who desire the other provision. Those who desire to incorporate under the other provision will incorporate in the by-laws of the company the fact that individuals instead of stock shall be entitled to vote. If we incorporate that we will prohibit them from incorporating for the purpose of building associations and other incorporations of that character. It strikes me, in view of that fact, that the correct course to pursue would be to leave this out and let the legislature provide that the promoters of any of those schemes shall elect which course they desire to take in the incorporation. That will meet the wants of all people. It strikes me the correct way to do would be to strike out the section.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to call the attention of the convention to the fact that if those words are stricken out it will not make sense.

The President: The Chair would suggest that the question now before the convention is not upon striking out the section, but upon the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

Mr. Sargent of Silver Bow: I see no objection to the section as it stands, and I also see no use for it, for it provides precisely what the articles of incorporation of every incorporated company provides that I have known anything about. I have held a little stock in a number of companies, always in a large minority, and I never knew any incorporated company but what allowed the stockholders, no matter how little stock they held, to vote. If the stockholder has only one share he is permitted to vote, and that is all that this provides; so it furnishes, as it reads, no additional protection to any minority stockholder whatever, and it seems to me as it stands that it might be better left out.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: If the gentleman will read the section carefully he will see that it does provide—(interrupted).

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow has the floor.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: Mr. President, I am opposed to striking out any part of this section, but I certainly am in favor of striking out the whole section. All I have to say to the amendment is that I don't think it makes complete sense, and I don't think it is necessary.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: If the gentleman will examine this carefully he will see that this does provide that a minority stockholder can cumulate his votes; for instance, there are five directors to be elected and he has ten shares; he would be entitled to vote for ten shares; the votes of ten shares would entitle him to vote for each one; but this provides that instead of voting for each one of the five he doubles up his right and he has fifty votes for any one man, and in that way he is able to elect some one man. He thus provides that where a minority desire to be represented there is no defeating them, because they would have five votes to one, and in that way it does provide so that a minority may have a say in electing one of the directors in a corporation.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I have endeavored to maintain a consistent course respecting superfluous legislation throughout our proceedings. My motion made in committee of the whole was made without consultation with any one except a learned gentleman on this floor as to whether the same provision was not already on the statute books, and he told me that it was; hence my motion. Now, the amendment before us to amend by striking out a part would leave it practically just where it was. Therefore I am opposed to the amendment and of course shall vote in favor of my original motion, that the section be stricken out. And I want to say, Mr. President, before I take my seat, and then I am done with the subject and shall vote in accordance with my views, that I believe that all that we give the minority stockholders by the adoption of this section they already have under the law as it now exists. What I am opposed to is any attempt on the part of this constitutional convention to make an iron-clad rule that after developments and experience may prove it most radically wrong. Now, I am not prepared to say at this time, and do not wish to be understood as saying, it is wrong now; but I do say that we are learning all the time and profiting by experience, and later experience may prove that there is a better way than the way suggested by this section; therefore my motion, and I do hope it will prevail.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that he has stricken out one word too many. The sentence should begin "In all elections."

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I accept that amendment.

The President: The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge to strike out the first eight words in line one.

The Chair put the question, and the vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The President: The question is now upon the motion of the gentleman to strike out the section.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: There seems to be a little misunderstanding.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I move to reconsider the question on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to strike out "managers" and insert "trustees." I will state at the time that question was put several of us understood we were voting on striking out the whole section.

The President: There was an amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to insert the word "trustees" in place of "managers." That motion was voted upon and lost. The gentleman from Missoula moves to reconsider the vote by which this amendment was lost.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the reconsideration, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now stands upon the amendment and it can be renewed.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis and Clarke renewed his motion.

The President: The gentleman moves that the word "managers" in three places, lines two, four and seven, be stricken out and the word "trustees" be inserted in lieu thereof.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: Now, the question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow to strike out section four.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: It seems to me that this section should be stricken out, and for the reason that in the matter of corporations there is no classification, and as has been well suggested by the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Toole) there are certain classes of corporations that desire to be in a position where they can either vote their shares of stock or vote by the person owning stock, such as building associations. Now, if this section remains, it relates to all classes of corporations that may ever at any time be organized in the State of Montana, and I do not see any necessity for it. There is a provision on the statute books now as to certain classes of corporations which does not, as I recollect it, relate to that character of corporations, such as building associations, and the presumption is that that statute will remain until there is reason to repeal or modify or change it. Now, in view of that fact it will seem that this fundamental proposition ought not to be incorporated; that there may be certain classes of corporations created by statute or organized, or there may be such a classification made by statute as would render this provision a bar, or rather it might stand in the way of creating corporations of a certain character. It is pure legislation on its face and ought not to go into this provision. I hope the section will be stricken out.

The President: The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I hope that the section will not be stricken out. I cannot for the life of me conceive of a corporation that can get along without a board of trustees. Now, a board of trustees may be three or it may be three hundred. If the entire corporation wishes to run the concerns of it and each one to vote, then they can all be trustees; but the corporation must provide for trustees, and more particularly the special corporations mentioned by the gentleman—building associations—and this particular provision or inhibition in this section applies more to that class of corporations than any other; it provides that a minority in a building association or in any corporation of that kind shall have a representation upon the board. I believe that this is legislation certainly, but it is such legislation as we have had and have proven is good, and I cannot conceive how it can be changed for the better; so that it seems to me it should be placed in the constitution.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: If this provision remains, how can a corporation, if it see fit to do so, vote its stockholders instead of its stock?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: A corporation can vote its stockholders instead of its stock when it provides that its trustees shall equal its stockholders, whether they be three or three hundred.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I would like to know how you would vote for trustees or directors of a corporation when they have no stock.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: You cannot, certainly.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Well, now, there are certain classes of corporations that have no stock—corporations of Odd Fellows, church corporations, etc. How are you going to do with those?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Church corporations and benevolent society organizations are incorporated always by trustees, and those trustees are the same identically as the trustees of industrial organizations, and the trustees manage the affairs of that corporation.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Does not this provide for industrial corporations?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Certainly; and under that broad term you would include those other institutions. Every corporation must be governed by trustees, and the minority in every corporation, whether it be a church corporation or whatever else, ought to be represented upon that board of trustees. So I believe this section should remain.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: How is the minority going to get representation in a board where there are no shares of stock?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: By property. There are no shares but there is property, and those persons representing that property should run it. I cannot conceive of any corporation that can run without trustees, and the power which creates those trustees, if there is a minority in that power, should insist upon the right of selecting some of those trustees; and there is always a minority in a matter of that kind, whether it is a church organization or what not.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I certainly hope this motion will prevail and that this section will be stricken out. I do not think it ought to go into the constitution. I do not feel like my friend from Cascade: I think we should leave this for the future legislatures to do. It is on the statutes now and I presume it is a good law. If it suits the people it will remain there, and if it doesn't suit them it will give the people a chance to change it. This law will suit a great many now, but there may be other people hereafter who would like to incorporate and start different institutions which under this present law they could not. I certainly will favor the motion to strike out, and think it is a good motion. I think this can safely be left to the legislature and they will certainly suit the people better.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I do not desire to cut off debate on this matter, and it is the first time I have moved the previous question, but I think the discussion has gone far enough, and I therefore move the previous question.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow to strike out Section 4.

Mr. Fields of Park called for the ayes and nays on the question.

There being no objection, the Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Burleigh, Burns, Edward, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Courtney, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Goddard, Hartman, Hershfield, Hogan, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Maginnis, Middleton, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Toole, J. R., Witter—29.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. J.; Burns, A. F.; Callaway, Cauby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Gibson, Gillette, Graves, Hammond, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joes, Kohrs, Loud, Marshall, Marion, Hayer, Myers, Rotwitt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—38.

Absent: Brazleton, Ealon, Joy, Luce, McAdow, Muth, Parberry, Webster—8.

The motion to strike out Section 4 was declared lost.

The President: The convention will now proceed to the consideration of the other amendments.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section three (3) by inserting after the word "constitution" in the second line the words "or which may be hereafter incorporated."

The amendment, on motion, duly seconded, was declared adopted.

The President: This leaves all of the amendments reported by the committee of the whole disposed of. Are there any other amendments?

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the proposition be placed on its final passage:

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the rules be suspended and Proposition No. 31 placed upon its final passage.

The motion was put and carried.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of Proposition No. 31 as amended. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

When the name of Mr. Middleton of Custer was reached the gentleman rose:

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I desire to explain my vote on this matter.

The President: The Chair announced today that no interruption would be permitted during roll call, except by unanimous consent.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: That would be a new rule to me.

The President: It is a rule adopted by all parliamentary bodies; it is a rule that the Chair holds to be correct, and the gentleman will not be heard except by unanimous consent. If there be no objection the gentleman from Custer will be heard.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: This article 31, Mr. President, relates to all classes of corporations outside of municipal. In my judgment a corporation should stand on identically the same footing with an individual, that although it is a creature of the law it should have the same rights, and be subject to the same liabilities as an individual. In my opinion there are limitations and inhibitions in many of the sections of this article that are absolutely unjust and unfair, not only to one class of corporations but to many kinds of corporations that I can conceive of. On the other hand, Mr. President, the liabilities, in my judgment, of a corporation should be the same as those of an individual partner in a partnership. When persons purchase stock in a stock company, a corporation, they should individually be liable for the indebtedness of the concern; and in view of those facts, that it is in the first place unfair to the corporations by placing limitations and inhibitions on them that are absolutely iron-bound and entirely different from those that are placed upon any other class, either of individuals or companies, and on the other hand exempting them from the liabilities of individuals and partnerships, my vote will be no.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Maginnis, Marion, Marshall, Mayger, Mitchell, Myers, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—63.

Nays: Fields, Middleton—2.

Absent: Brazleton, Eaton, Joy, Luce, McAdow, Muth, Parberry, Webster—8.

The President: The motion to adopt Proposition No. 31 is carried, and the proposition will be referred to the engrossing committee.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move we do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion, and the vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The convention stood adjourned until Wednesday, August 7th, 1889, at 10 o'clock A. M.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

Wednesday, August 7th, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge sent a proposition to the Clerk's desk.

The President: The Clerk will read the Proposition of the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 37. Construction of words. That wherever in this constitution the word "May" occurs the same shall be construed to be directory, and wherever the word "shall" occurs the same shall be construed to be mandatory.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning this proposition?

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I move the adoption of the proposition.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

A member called for a division on the question.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Before we vote on that proposition or resolution, it seems to me it is not clear enough. It says, wherever the word "shall" occurs, and that is very sweeping. It will occur several times in the constitution and I don't know that this convention is prepared to say it shall be mandatory. I would like the gentleman to explain just what his resolution does mean. If it applies only to what the legislative assembly shall do, I think we are prepared to vote upon it.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: It is a construction of words so as to avoid any ambiguity in the sense of the convention where it uses these words. It seems to me it is necessary to put this in.

The President: A division is called for upon the question.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin called for the reading of the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move its reference to the Judiciary Committee.

The motion was seconded.

The President: If there be no objection it will be so referred. The Chair desires to state that he overlooked the fact that a special committee on the memorial introduced by the gentleman from Silver Bow is to be announced and desires a little further time. The committee will be announced during the day.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I move you that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of further considering Proposition No. 18, General File No. 17. It was made a special order for this time.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: While we had under consideration this proposition, Mr. Hershfield of Lewis and Clarke was chairman of the committee of the whole, and he will now be called upon to resume the chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke in the chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: Under the rules, on the 27th of last month we had under consideration Section 2 of Proposition No. 18. What is the further pleasure of the committee on that subject?

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to renew the motion which I had submitted at the time the committee rose.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Maginnis, offers the following amendment to Proposition No. 18, Section 2.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I object. That Section 2 has been adopted by the committee.

The Chairman: What is the objection

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Section 2 has been adopted in the committee of the whole and is not subject to amendment.

The Chairman: If the Chair is not in error, I think that section has not been acted upon.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I ask for the reading of the minutes.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, when this committee rose, I was on my feet and made the motion which you now hold in your hand, when the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) rose and interrupted me.

The Chairman: I think the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) will find that to be the case. I will further state to the gentleman from Silver Bow that there are no minutes of the proceedings for the reason that the chairman of the committee stated to the president of the convention that progress had been made on this matter and that the committee wanted further time.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I ask to have the amendment read.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Proposition No. 18, Section 2, by striking out in line two the words "at its third regular session," and strike out in lines nine and ten, Section 2, all the words of the proviso after the words "general election."

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I ask to have the section read, with the amendment, as it would stand if adopted.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I ask for a division of the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis).

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers an amendment, on which the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) calls for a division.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Before the amendment is placed before the house I would like to have the section read as it would be with my amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: "Section 2. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the State, but shall after the adoption of this constitution provide by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the State at the general election then next ensuing, and a majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the State at the next general election."

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: A few words before I yield the floor, merely explanatory of the amendment. It will be seen that the amendment leaves out any reference to the first regular session of the Legislature, because it provides that it shall be at the first election after the adoption of the constitution. The words "first regular session" are not necessary, because the continuation of the text says that at the first general election after the adoption of the constitution the question shall be submitted to the people of the State for their vote.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: My only object, Mr. Chairman, in bringing this matter of striking out the word "third" and inserting "first" up, is that the people of this State shall have an opportunity to vote upon the location of the seat of government, and the sooner it is brought to a vote the sooner the matter will be settled. If I understand the amendment, at any time we can hold the Legislature down and keep them from passing that law.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I am willing to accept the gentleman's amendment, but if he will listen to me a moment he will see that it is unnecessary. The amendment reads "At the general election next ensuing."

The Chairman: You accept the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow?

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Yes sir.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would like to state the reasons briefly that actuated the committee. I do not believe, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, that anyone will rise to his feet on this floor and claim that it is an opportune time to permanently locate the capital of Montana. This matter was discussed in the committee room. We have seen within the last five years a town spring up to a population of five or six thousand people where five or six years ago there was not an inhabitant, and we believe it is not only likely but altogether probable that there will be within the next five or six years another town and possibly a second, and possibly a third town spring up. So that we believe we had better wait a few years before we permanently locate the capital of Montana. And it was for this reason that the committee thought it best in locating the capital temporarily to leave it there until the expiration, say, of eight or ten years. Now, you will notice that if at the third regular session the Legislative Assembly shall take up this matter and submit it to the vote of the people, that will be the year of 1895. We have further provided that if no place receive a majority of all the votes cast, that the two places receiving the highest number of votes shall be re-submitted at the following general election, and the place receiving the highest number of votes shall be determined upon as the permanent capital of Montana. Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that when we consider that after the adoption of this constitution it is altogether likely that there will be a large immigration into Montana, for if we do not have this experience it will be unlike that of any other State after the adoption of its constitution—it is a wise thing to do. We confidently expect a large influx of immigration and we just as confidently expect that there will be somewhere—we cannot tell where—but we believe on the west side, two or three towns that within the next eight or ten years, and that are unknown today, will have a population of from 5,000 to 8,000 people. Therefore, I do not believe it is best that the Legislature at its first regular session shall submit this matter to the vote of the people. The time is not ripe; it is not the opportune time for the settling of the permanent location of the capital of Montana. For that reason, I hope this amendment will not prevail and that the report as it came from your committee will prevail. I think the more we consider this the better reasons you will see for it.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I desire to have this question presented now in the amendment and in two separate propositions. One is in relation to fixing the time when the Legislature shall provide for the location, when the location shall take place. The other is, striking out the proviso in the last part of the section, which leaves the matter of the temporary capital without any disposition. The resolution introduced by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke contains two separate propositions, and I ask for a division of the question; first, on the proposition to make the first Legislature provide for the location, and second upon striking out the proviso.

The Chairman: The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) striking out in line two the words "at its third regular session" and amended by the gentleman from Silver Bow to read "at its first regular session". The committee will vote on the insertion of the word "first" instead of "third".

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Is an amendment in order at present?

The Chairman: Not now. A division has been called for.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and the same was declared carried by a vote of 12 in the affirmative to 13 in the negative.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I want to say a word in relation to striking out this proviso, and that is this: I would like to have the question remain where it is now. It is a hard matter in the Committee of the Whole to get a correct expression, and if this proviso is stricken out now there is no doubt an amendment will be offered in convention and we will go through the same routine. It seems to me, in order to facilitate business, it is well to let this remain.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: How does the proviso read now?

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: It reads as it was reported by the Committee of the Whole. There was a blank here, or a vacancy, which has not been filled. It seems to me that the committee saw fit the other day to insert the word "Anaconda"; so now it reads as follows: "That the seat of government shall be and remain at the city of Anaconda." It is ample time to facilitate the work of the convention to let it remain as it is.

The Chairman: The question now is on the second division of the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. Those who are in favor of the adoption of the amendment say aye.

The Chair declared the amendment lost.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move the adoption of the section as amended.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I offer an amendment. I move that in line two of the printed copy you insert "at its second regular session."

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I understand the committee have adopted the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow County, providing that the Legislature shall provide at its first session—at the next general election after the first session of the Legislature. Now, that has been adopted and passed on, and I don't understand it can be changed except by reconsidering the vote.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: Before the Chair decides that matter, I wish to state the proposition. A motion was made that the words "at its first regular session" be stricken out. That motion was carried; there was no motion to insert a word; so that under all parliamentary usages my motion to amend is in order.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: My understanding was that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow was accepted. The word "first" fills the blank.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: But even if that proposition is true, I claim that while the question is under consideration it may be amended as many times as amendments are germane to the proposition, and my motion to amend by inserting "two" has never been before this committee and is certainly in order. It is only reasonable that it should be if the Chair should even decide that it should not be. It will be in order before the convention, but now is the time to bring the matter up.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to speak on the amendment I offered, the amendment striking out the proviso because there was no need of a proviso. The Organic Act and the laws of the State of Montana fix the seat of government of this Territory until it shall be removed. There has been no popular demand for its removal, no petition, no meeting of the people, no agitation to remove the capital. The members of the convention who came here were not elected on that issue, nor was that question at all discussed as bearing on their election. The Congress that framed this Enabling Act under which we are acting never contemplated that the question should arise in this convention. It was my pleasure to sit the other day with five or six gentlemen, members of Congress, all of whom had voted for this Enabling Act, and every one of them was astonished that the convention should assume that it had any jurisdiction over this capital question other than to commit it to the Legislature and the people. They are all sitting in Territories where questions similar to this will arise. The seat of government of Washington is at Olympia, a little town on the extreme outskirts of the Territory, and the very first act of its Legislature will be to remove that capital and fix the permanent seat of government of the State of Washington. But it never entered into the minds of our sister convention sitting in Washington Territory that they should assume jurisdiction of this matter and remove the territorial seat of government, or do anything else except provide that the seat of government of the State should be submitted by the Legislature to the vote of the people. In both North and South Dakota the place for the capital has been a burning question. But in neither of the conventions of the two Territories has it been assumed that they had control of the seat of government, or any authority to fix either a permanent or temporary seat of government. Why should we go beyond them? Why do we do this which our neighbors do not presume to do? There is no reason given. There is no reason to be given. There is no reason why this vexed question should be interjected into our canvas, or our campaign this fall. Why has the apple of discord been thrown into this convention? We have claimed Montana to be equal in public spirit, to be abreast in patriotism and good citizenship with our sister Territories. Why, when they go on and confine themselves to the duties for which they were called together, the duties of framing an organic act to be submitted to the people, and confine themselves within their proper limits, why do we, who have claimed to be superior to them all, allow this apple of discord to be flung into our midst and go outside of our province to discuss extraneous questions.

We were here as harmonious as conventions reasonably may be. On all these questions that came up we have had our differences or our dissensions. None of us has had our way entirely. Some of us were voted down on matters that we believed to be very essential to popular government. There is scarcely a man in the convention who has not been voted down on some proposition in which he believed. But we all submitted to the result. Going on in this harmonious way, why is this thing thrown in here? Shall we resolve this convention, framed to form a law for the people, into a convention of jobbers, intent only on dividing up the spoils? Will that add to our dignity, to the place that we will have in the history of this State, before our people? Or shall we, confining ourselves to the work for which we were sent here, properly provide that this question shall be submitted to the only tribunal that ought to decide it—the people of the Territory? (Applause in the galleries) It is a question, my friends, whether we have the power to do it. But even if we had the power, should we abuse it? If this were submitted even as a separate proposition, the people would have the right to vote on it. But you are attempting to embody it and crystallize it in the constitution, leaving to them no issue except to vote against the constitution or to vote against their most cherished feelings in this matter. I ask you, my friends, is it right to make the constitution a pack horse to carry everybody's scheme through this territorial election? (Applause in the galleries) I appeal to you as a matter of equity and justice, if that is a right and a proper thing to do. The Legislature of this State will certainly have intelligence enough to frame a law to submit this question to the people. It will be submitted to the people of Montana; it will be discussed in all its bearings; the proposition advanced by my friend from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) will be taken into consideration. The growth of towns and mines on the west side will be discussed; the magnificent valleys that lie to our north, with their incoming population, will be a part of the discussion. We will see the new empires that are to be built up in those valleys. The people that come into the Yellowstone country, the people that come into all the various portions of this great State, and the proper and convenient center for the transaction of the business of this great State, having been discussed by all the people of the State, will be settled at the polls in accordance with the privileges of freemen.

At this point the demonstrations of applause in the galleries became pronounced and irrepresible. Mr. Luce, of Gallatin, requested that the sergeant-at-arms be instructed to preserve order. The Chair announced that the galleries would be cleared if the demonstrations did not cease.

The speaker continued: When that time shall come, Mr. Chairman, and not before, for we do not desire to insert the name of Helena in this constitution, when that time comes, the constituents that I represent here will be prepared to present their claims, not to the Legislature, not to any convention, but to all the people of the State of Montana. They will endeavor to show that this point is central and as convenient as any other; that the travel from the Yellowstone to the Missoula country passes through it, and finds it a central point; that the travel from Great Falls and Choteau to Butte and Dillon, and the towns below, pass through it, and find it a central point in their journey; that it is the pivotal point of the population of Montana; that it can be reached more conveniently than any other place. Gentlemen talk about four or five trains running out of their towns. Twenty-one daily passenger trains run out of the city of Helena, and fifty will run out of it before two years are ended. In the matter of time it cannot be matched. And now, my friends, a good friend of mine said the other day, and I must say that the spirit of jealousy and rivalry rises in all places, that Helena was selfish and wanted everything. What has it had except the capital? What money does it get out of the Territory of Montana? $140,000 a year for the support of prisoners and the insane are spent in one county in this Territory, and now you propose to move the capital to that county, so that every dollar of territorial money shall be spent in one county as against the other fifteen. Is that right, or just, or generous, or fair? Where is the selfishness that crops out in a proposition of that kind? You say that Helena has had everything. Point me to anything that she has had except the seat of government, with the officers that come from it. Whatever has been paid out here has been paid out of the United States, while the great expenditures of your Territory have never been made in this locality; and as I have said, it is the very locality where nine-tenths of the taxes are disbursed. To that you now propose the other tenth shall be added. I ask you can you face a proposition like that? My friends, we all ought to be proud of every growing town in Montana; we all ought to be proud of the industry, of the enterprise, and of the energy that has builded them up; and in the van of that enterprise the citizens of this town—unofficial citizens—simple citizens—have had their share. My friend from Custer (Mr. Middleton) spoke the other day about the selfishness of this town. The town he comes from was founded by a Helena man. It was cut out of a military reservation and dedicated to freedom and to its citizens, by a Helena man—after it had been locked up by the commander of this department and an officer of his staff given the sole commercial control of it, it was thrown open that you might build a city there; and the first man that put a dollar in it was Matt Carroll of this town. Your County of Dawson was organized by an act of Congress, supported by the citizens of this place. If the northern part of this Territory, which has been for years a solitude, a barren waste inhabited only by the Indians, the wolf and the coyote, is at last open to civilization, to settlement and to advancement. Who deserved the credit of it? You know that the Manitoba Railroad was brought here; you know that the Montana Central was built by the energy and enterprise of a citizen of Helena—working not only for his own town, but for the benefit of this whole Territory. You people of Butte—the older people of you—know that when it was an open proposition to build the Utah & Northern up there and develop that camp, then only a lot of shafts, that Mr. Jay Gould sent Mr. Bertrude up to this country to investigate the country. He came to this town; he was disgusted with the place; he was going back to make an adverse report upon this proposition, when a few men here raised a purse and sent me out with him to visit all the mining camps of the Territory, and especially that great camp of Butte, that he might see its resources, and out of his report came the building of that railroad which, like the touch of Aladdin's ring, has built a magnificent city upon the west side. This other road, which has its termination in Butte, this Montana Central, was built, as you know, by a citizen of Helena. Your road up the Bitter Root, your road to Phillipsburg, your road to all these camps—who inspired, who conceived, who built them, not only for themselves but for the advancement of this whole Territory? You people of the Yellowstone, whose mines at Red Lodge have lain idle so long—attempted to be opened and failure after failure made—they laid there useless to you and to all the world until the citizens of Helena organized and enterprise and carried it through, which has made them successful. Where is the point in this Territory that her enterprise, her intelligence, her generosity has not reached in order to advance the interests of the whole? Selfish, of course, men are. All humanity is selfish. They all work for their own advancement, their own interests and their own glory; but of those who have worked for the advancement, for the interests and for the glory, who have populated this State so that this Enabling Act became a possibility, who have builded it up so that we could become a State, the city of Helena, in all that enterprise, are in the van, and among the factors that have built up this great country; I challenge you to match her. That being here history and that being the case, this capital, which certainly will be but a beloitier, while it can do but little good to any temporary place except to make a fictitious advance in real estate, in which the fortunes of many people will be swamped hereafter. It can do but little good in that way. Shall you, out of pique—shall you, out of these little jealousies, remove the seat of government from here unfairly and unjustly by the action of this convention, without consulting the wishes of the voters and the people who sent you here, or will you go on, as our sister conventions have gone on, doing your duty under the constitution and the laws, framing a constitution of which we will all be proud, and which will be adopted, not by a divided vote, but by the almost unanimous vote of the people of Montana, fulfilling and justifying all the predictions and prophecies that we who have worked for her year after year abroad, and have spent our own money, and our own time to forward her claims, may be justified in the statements we made to eastern statesmen, when we asked them to unlock the doors and admit us into the Union. I trust, my friends, that you will be governed by a wiser and a higher sense of duty that has been advocated by some. I trust that we will remove this whole question from out of our deliberations—that we will throw this apple of discord over the fence—that we will proceed with the work for which we were sent here—that we will make a constitution that will be accepted by the people of Montana, and that will create heart-burnings among none; and thus having done our duty to those who sent us here, we will go to our homes blessed with the consciousness that we have done it well, and that the people of this territory now and forever will rise up and call us blessed. (Applause)

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I do not wish to take part in the discussion here this morning on the capital question, but I believe there is one point here that possibly may be overlooked in the general scramble for this place. As the gentleman who has just taken his seat has said, I believe that when we were sent here to discharge the duties which devolved upon us, that the question of the location of the capital had no place in the minds of our constituents; and I believe that in settling this question, if it is to come up and the location is to be determined on, that we should submit it to the voters of this territory as soon as possible. I for one feel the grave responsibility that is resting upon me to vote upon this important question this morning, and although I feel that the motives of the gentleman from Cascade and from Silver Bow are probably worthy ones and that the gentleman from Cascade no doubt hopes that in the near future the broad and fertile prairies of his own county will be populous and that railroads will intersect that country and that Cascade may have a fair show in the settlement of the question, and although the gentleman from Butte possibly aspires to the same motives and hopes, and although in my own country the development of the near future may warrant the same aspirations and hopes, I believe that we are not justified in allowing this question to stretch out indefinitely. As I have said, the people in my section of the country did not contemplate this issue when I was elected, and I feel that it is a great responsibility, and I feel further that in providing that this shall be submitted to the people at the first election after the adoption of this constitution, that if I have erred in this matter I shall at least be taking the right step to allow that injustice to be righted as soon as possible.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin. In speaking upon this proposition I will venture to say that the Chair will have no difficulty in preserving order in the galleries. (Laughter). I do not expect to be smothered by the perfume of beautiful flowers scattered upon my head by the ladies and gentlemen of Helena. (Laughter). Nevertheless I hope that I may have the privilege of making such feeble remarks as I may see fit to make upon this occasion, certainly without any undue influence. I agree with my friend, Mr. Maginnis, in nearly all of his remarks in relation to this great capital city of Helena, its strides in progress and the great railroad center that has been made here and the inducements that have been held out by its millionaires and those who represent other millionaires to invest their money here and make a large city. I am with him on that proposition. Helena is a prosperous place. It is not a hoggish place, as some gentleman here the other day said. It is a generous community; it is a great people. Comparatively speaking, it is a great city, that is, compared perhaps with Glendive and Bozeman, it is a metropolis. (Laughter). Compared with New York, however, it may be a country village. Notwithstanding all that, I say, taking its surroundings and all the circumstances, it is a great and comparatively a powerful city. And these great statesmen that I have conversed with, like unto my worthy friend over there (alluding to Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke) who has lately conversed with statesmen from the east, have told me that one of the greatest mistakes that a state ever could make would be to place a capital in the great metropolis of the state, where it was surrounded by all of these influences, some of which we have seen break out in the galleries here this morning (Laughter), that would almost crush any other country pumpkin but one like myself that has the adamantine cheek to get up in the face of it and make the remarks that I am about to make now (Laughter and applause). The influence of these great corporations that have been spoken of by my friend, Mr. Maginnis—the influence of these millionaires who can build cities all over the territory, will be felt by the legislature of the State of Montana if the capital be permanently located here. Now that is a subject of great consideration for my friend who spoke last before me. He seems to have been somewhat crushed by it himself. Now, sir, I want to enter upon another proposition. I think I have said all that is necessary for me to say in behalf of Helena. I believe in her. She has more varied industries, more enterprises, than any other city in the territory of Montana today. Now, down in our little county of Gallatin the principal industries are agricultural. Around about Helena we have agriculture. If we go over on the west side into the great county of Silver Bow, the principal industry is mining; but we have that industry in the county of Lewis & Clarke. And so I may go on. This county probably has a greater variety of industries, a greater variety of influences and perhaps a larger number of millionaires and representatives of millionaires than any other county in the territory. Now, if that is the reason for establishing the capital here, I do not understand it. Put it in some quiet places where your nostrils are not forever offended with dust, and where you are not in the great danger of breaking your necks in the winter time. (Laughter). Take it, for heaven's sake, where you can see green fields once in a while and flowing streams of water. Put it over at Bozeman (laughter) among an honest set of people that I venture to say will never undertake to have any undue influence over any great statesman that may be elected either to the Senate or to the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of Montana. We have everything there that is suitable, you know, for a capital. As I said, we raise the finest potatoes in the Territory of Montana; and what is better for the intellect of a great statesman than fine potatoes? (Laughter). Then again, those people over there are educated and refined and, although not all of us are millionaires, we have some, that is to say, we have one. (Laughter). We are noted for having the best schools today in the territory. We have fine schools, beautiful ladies, and some intelligent men; we make an exception of those that have been sent to this convention. (Laughter). Now there is a point that the state might be proud to erect the finest buildings, and buildings that would be worth all the generosity of the millionaires of Helena and of Butte and of Anaconda and Deer Lodge. But there is something that is quite misleading in the remarks of my worthy friend from Lewis & Clarke. He thinks that this is no time or place for the naming of any city or town for the temporary location of the seat of government of this state. There, I think, is where the gentleman makes his fatal mistake. Everything else that he said I heartily concurred with, except that Helena is the place for the capitol. (Laughter). Now, I would ask the gentleman, and I would ask this convention, where would your next legislature meet? Why, Mr. Maginnis would have you understand that it would meet where it has ever since they dragged it away from Virginia City—in the City of Helena. By what authority would it meet there? Let us read a little. Section 1445 of what is known as the Organic Act provides as follows: "The members of the legislative assembly of Montana and Idaho Territories shall each receive—" No that is not it. (Laughter). "The seat of government when once fixed by the governor and legislative assembly of Idaho and Montana respectively shall not be at any time changed except by an act of such assembly for each territory respectively, duly passed and approved, after due notice, at the first general election thereafter by a majority of the legal votes cast on that question." Now, then, I understand that the seat of government for the Territory of Montana has been fixed at Helena. That is all right. The seat of government for the State of Montana has not been fixed, either temporarily or permanently, at any place. Gentlemen say here that they do not come from their constituents with this proposition—they had no instruction from the voters in relation to this proposition. Nor do I take it had they any instructions in relation to any particular proposition. For instance, we have made a material change in the judiciary of Montana, and we have provided for the removal of probate judges. I didn't come here with that proposition, nor instructed upon that proposition; and the argument seems to be that before we can take any action here in this convention upon any such proposition, it must first be submitted to the people to say whether they want it or not. They sent us here to frame a constitution, and I undertake to say that unless there is named some place for the temporary seat of government for the State of Montana, there is no place at which the legislature can meet; there is no place for the meeting of your supreme court. This seat of government is for the Territory of Montana. When this constitution that we are endeavoring to frame, and which I hope and pray we may get through with before the general election that is ordered by the Enabling Act (laughter)—we expect in this constitutional convention to do everything that shall put a state into motion that shall make one of the sovereign states of this Union, and in order to have a sovereign state, that state must have a seat of government, and that seat of government must not be going around upon wheels from Anaconda to Bozeman, and from Bozeman to Glendive, and from Glendive to Great Falls, and from Great Falls back to Helena again. There must be some place named in this constitution for the temporary seat of government at least; nobody proposed here to make a permanent seat of government anyway; it is simply a temporary seat of government until the people can be heard upon this proposition and let them locate it. I say, with all due regard to the astonishment of the great statesmen of the East that my friend, Mr. Maginnis, has talked with, that they are mistaken if they think that this convention should not name the temporary seat of government. Would you have your legislators wandering around, part of them going to the city where it is now temporarily located—I have forgotten the name of it—Anaconda (laughter), and part of them going to Butte, some of them coming over here to Helena, and most of them going to Bozeman, because it is the prettiest place to go to. Where would your legislature be? Why, it would be spread all over the State of Montana. You could never find it or get it back, or to enact any laws at all. I do say with all respect to the advice of these statesmen from the East, that they are mistaken, and I say if Washington Territory has not provided for a temporary seat of government it is the grandest blunder that was ever made in any constitutional convention on earth. Now, all that is provided in this Enabling Act that the gentleman spoke of, is in Section 4. That the delegates to the convention selected as provided in this Act shall meet at the seat of government in each of said Territories, except the delegates from South Dakota," etc. That is all. They meet at the seat of government. That means something, because we have a seat of government for the Territory of Montana, and we know where to go to. But if we should provide here, instead of naming any place for the temporary seat of government—if we should provide that the legislature should meet at the seat of government of the State of Montana, I would like to ask my learned friend over there where they would meet. No, this thing must be met. Disagreeable as it may seem, it must be met. Now, I undertake to say in reply to my friend from Silver Bow, that it is not altogether necessary to wait for new towns to grow up in order that we may take one of these new towns for the seat of government; for it appears that there are too many towns that want to have it located by them. There are towns enough, God knows; the only trouble now is to select one for the seat of government. (Laughter). And I undertake to say that it matters not where you locate it, for when the good sense of the people returns, when the people of Montana take a calm and rational view of this thing and undertake to locate the seat of government permanently, they will locate it over in Bozeman (applause), where it ought to be from its central location, and from every other consideration that you can imagine. Now, I am not unfriendly to Helena; I like the Helena people and like the town; I like to see it grow; it makes a great demand for our potatoes and hay and oats over there in the Gallatin Valley. May she grow within the next ten years to be a city of 100,000 people. (Applause). But its great growth and its great prosperity and its great influence, I say, are reasons why the seat of government of a small and growing state like this should not be permanently located within its midst. There is too much influence. Now, if there are gentlemen younger than I am who would to any extent be influenced by the galleries, if they were on the floor of the House of Representatives or the Senate of the State of Montana, these influences can be and will be brought to bear upon legislators just the same as they have attempted to be brought upon this convention. Now, I am not adverse particularly to a temporary location of the capitol in Helena if that would not mean the permanent location of it. And as to my views here as to what I would do upon this question, I have but one thing to say for a dead certainty, and that is, if I get an opportunity to vote for the glorious little city of Bozeman down there for the temporary seat of this capital, I am going to do it. (Applause).

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Although unlike my friend from Gallatin who last had the floor, I am young and timid, with a somewhat retiring disposition, yet I feel impelled to face the galleries even and say a few words with regard to the position I find myself in, particularly in regard to my esteemed and honorable friend from Lewis & Clarke. I was somewhat surprised that the gentleman should manifest any heat in relation to this matter; that he should brand this innocent little blank here as an apple of discord in this convention, because as my friend, Judge Luce, so well said, the blank was there; action had to be taken on it and it had to be filled up with the name of some place that the people deemed most fit. Instead, sir, of this being an apple of discord and creating any ill-feeling, I think it is a matter that any citizen of Montana might well be proud of. It presents itself to us in this light, that there are in this growing territory and prosperous state to come a half dozen cities, any one of which are worthy to be mentioned in this connection, that is to say, the temporary location of the capital—any one of whom are amply able and qualified to take the responsibility and share the burdens that have been borne so long by this city here, until the permanent location of the seat of government by the people of the state. We have no desire and no feeling of creating any discord in our deliberations on this matter. It is something that we must take as it comes, and settle it, and settle it in a kindly and harmonious manner; and it is only proper and just that those who have preferences and believe sincerely and honestly in the merits of their claims should present them and have them acted upon by the convention and to abide with the best of good feeling the result of that action. I say for one, so far as I am concerned, whatever may be the final result of the deliberations of the convention on this matter, that I will be satisfied and pleased with it. There will be no apple of discord in connection with the matter so far as I am concerned. My friend, Judge Luce, made a remark which calls to my mind one feature of the case that I am about to present, and that is this: He was hardly aware that there was such a town as Anaconda in existence, and I regret that there are some few of the members here who were called upon to vote on this matter who perhaps were not aware of our true position on that side of the mountain, and for their benefit and for the benefit of this convention I wish to make a few statements and I wish to make them conservatively and conscientiously, and if I misstate or misquote anything I desire simply to be corrected. Now, we realize the fact that this is only a temporary solution of the question in any event; it is a matter that will remain as it is fixed here only for a year or two at the outside, and then the voice of the people will decide it; and in asking for its temporary location, we want to present the claims of our town, and to have them counted in in the generous rivalry for a place to be named for the temporary capital. We claim three or four things that will be necessary for the temporary location of the capital of this state. In the first place, in my mind, it should be easy of access; it should be central as regards the present population for the next year or two, not what it may be ten or fifteen years from now, but what it is now. In the next place, the city should have ample accommodations for the state officers and the officers of the government who are obliged to go there and live. It should have all the conveniences of modern civilization, and I claim and assert now that we have all those in our city of Anaconda. I assert, first, that we have the best railroad facilities of any city in Montana. I will not go into details, but I claimed and asserted here the other day that the railroads would verify what I said, that the business done there was three millions of dollars a year, and that was questioned here, and so I sent and got the exact figures, which I find to be $2,700,000 and odd dollars. I claim and ask that it be considered that at almost any hour of the day or night we have railroad accommodations for getting in or out of town. I need not say that we have the best hotel accommodations of any place in this territory or any adjacent territory. That goes without controversy. I need not say either that we have the finest system of water. We have the best system of electric lights in Montana. We have everything there that would conduce to the ease and comfort of the members of the legislative assembly duly elected, for a year or two. If it was a permanent thing we would not ask it; but for a temporary place, we claim that we have every facility presented by any city in Montana Territory; and in talking about that there is another point that I wish to mention, and that is: It has been asserted that the people from the eastern portion of the territory will have to travel further than they do now. I have it from the superintendents of two lines of railroad here that when the short line is completed from Gallatin City to Butte that the difference in time from all points east of Gallatin between the city of Helena and the city of Anaconda would be the same, and another said it would be thirty minutes longer. So there is no good reasonable objection that I can see against the presentation at least of the name of our prosperous city. The gentleman says we have two state institutions already. I wish to remind him that these institutions, one of them at least, is a private enterprise. It is of no particular benefit to the county of Deer Lodge, nor would it be to the county of Lewis &

Clarke or any other county. Those institutions that we have in Deer Lodge County now we are willing anybody that wants them should have them. They are not definitely settled. They will be parceled out by the next legislature, to be divided up with some other portion of the territory. Now, I have made this statement, honestly, sincerely and conscientiously. If I have stated anything that is not true here that any of the members of the convention are aware of, I desire to be corrected. And another matter. It was said that there might be some expense. In order to meet that I made a proposition here the other day which I am ready to reiterate now, and that is that the city will furnish a temporary capitol, quarters for the state officers, accommodations, etc., and a building for the legislature to meet in. So it will be a matter of saving. If the convention sees fit to accept that proposition we will be glad to tender it to them again; if not, we will be glad to tender the hospitalities of the city to them anyway if they see fit to locate the capital there. We present our claim honestly. We know that we are justified in asserting that we have the best accommodations, and we desire honestly and sincerely to advocate them. We have no jobs or schemes here of any kind, but simply in a plain, unvarnished way desire to present to the members of this convention our claims for the possession of the capital temporarily for the State of Montana.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I have listened with very great interest to the discussion so far as it has gone, but it seems to me there is one point that has not been sufficiently dwelt upon, and while I was thinking of it at the time that my friend from Lewis & Clarke County was speaking upon this subject, his eloquence almost rendered me oblivious to this essential feature which should enter into the discussion and consideration of this question, and that is this: It is as to the permanent location of the capital spoken of by my friend who sits before me, from Silver Bow County (Mr. Rickards) and I think the people of this Territory should not be in a haste in selecting a permanent location for the capital. After it is located it will probably be many years, or it may be many generations, and perhaps centuries, before it is removed; and wherever a capital has been located early by any state in this Union, or by many states in this Union, they have regretted a hasty action at their leisure, and have been compelled in some cases to expend large amounts of money in making a new location to suit the growing wants of the people. Now, it would be a great misfortune to provide that the first or the second or the third legislature should permanently locate this capital in a country like this where its developments depend upon so many circumstances, upon so much labor and such vast expenditures of money. Not that I would wait for some great metropolis in which to locate it; but in order to accommodate the wants, the necessities and the conveniences of the people. I do not think there is any harm in providing for a temporary location of this capital here. It is temporary only, and whenever the wants of the people require it to be located somewhere else permanently they will locate it there and locate it by their suffrages, and there it will remain. Now, my friend from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) in growing eloquence spoke of his own city. I love a man who loves his friends; I love a man who is true to his friends and to his home and his fireside and his neighbors. I despise the man who would forsake them in the hour of their need and their emergency and seek new friends at their expense. I admire my friend for his fidelity to the people of Lewis & Clarke county, and he is merely returning them gratitude for that gratitude they have shown him when he asked them for a favor. The man who will fail to do it is not worthy of the consideration or the confidence of any human being. But while he speaks in such exalted terms of what these people have done here—what they have done for Custer County, for Dawson County, through the agency of my friend, Matt Carroll and some others, it occurred to me that perhaps with his artistic brush he had overdrawn the picture a little—perhaps not as viewed through his optics, but certainly so as viewed through mine. When he spoke of what Lewis & Clarke County had done for the smaller counties, he spoke sincerely and from an honest and sincere heart, but misguided judgment I think. And he reminded me of a story, and you will pardon me for relating it, because it is more expressive than any language I can use, told by a general during the war. In one of his raids through the South he had a man in his regiment by the name of Patrick O'Flaherty, and Patrick insisted on every occasion that he was with the Duke of Wellington at the battle of Waterloo and that without his presence the Duke would never have won the battle. "Why," said he, "how old a man are you?" "45, sir." "Why, sir, that was 10 or 15 or 20 years before you were born." "It doesn't make any difference; I was there all the same; and," said he, "I can relate an anecdote." "Well, what is it?" "Well," said he, "on the morning before the terrible slaughter took place, after the Duke had ordered his subordinate officers to arrange the line of battle and dispose of the troops according to his direction, he rode along the line and his staff officer met him, and said he, 'Your Excellency, the line is ready; the conflict cannot come on too soon.' The Duke rode up and down the lines, and turning around to his general of staff, he said: 'Is Patrick O'Flaherty here?' 'He is,' said he. 'Call Patrick O'Flaherty.' Patrick was called out, and said he, 'I took five steps in advance and bowed and said 'Patrick O'Flaherty is here.' 'Then,' said he, 'let the battle go on.'" (Laughter). I was reminded of that anecdote, and when my friend with so much emphasis came to state the creation of all the rest of the territory by the people of Helena, I was struck with its appropriateness to Patrick O'Flaherty's claim. Now, I believe in the creative power of men of genius, of energy and enterprise and all that sort of thing, but I do not believe that the battle was won by Patrick O'Flaherty at all, at all, in creating these smaller counties. There was a capital here before Helena had assumed the gigantic proportions which it now occupies, located here somewhere about Alder Gulch, I think, when Last Chance was struggling for an existence. Yet through their adroit negotiations it was taken from Alder Gulch and moved down to Last Chance, it was always supposed on account of undue influence. Well, now, if there was such influence in the days of its infancy as to take the whole capital and move it by force, what influence may we not expect to be thrown around our legislature when they get here; and I agree with my illustrious friend Luce, who is a patriot and a statesman, that it is not safe to trust young men. It might be safe to trust him or me, but it is not safe to trust young men among such allurements and such surroundings when a convention can be stamped out of their senses almost by the fair sex in the galleries. Now, I am sincere in what I say in regard to the danger of locating the capital too soon. I don't know that I have any particular spot for it, unless that, having voted down the beautiful town of Billings, I should bring Miles City to the front—no meager or insignificant town; populated by a people as brave and loyal as ever lived; surrounded by a population known as cow-boys, who never close their hands in time of need. But I don't think I shall even drag the name of Miles City before the convention. I recollect living many years in Yankton. The capital of the territory was located there for twenty years, and just so long as the capital remained there a curse rested upon the prosperity of that town, and prosperity never dawned upon it until they got rid of that incubus which had been laid upon their necks; and today a half million of dollars would not induce those men to take the capital back and locate it there. Now, so far as injuring Helena is concerned, I do not believe a word of it. I believe that they will forget this little source of bickering and trouble and dissension. It may cause a few pestilential fellows to leave the country, but they will leave for the country's good; they will leave for the city's good, and for the county's good; and if I had my way I would locate it in some beautiful, sequestered place where a man when he got up in the morning to wash himself would not have to go and borrow the water of his neighbor or take it with him when he went to town. (Laughter). Of course we have met here during an unfavorable season. I don't suppose this smoke is always here which we have been compelled to endure while we have been here in this town; I don't suppose the dust is always so deep as it is now; I take it for granted that the saloons will not be, when they get plenty of water, so populous and so densely inhabited as they are at the present time. (Laughter). But I fail to see any advantages in Helena which are not possessed or might not be possessed before the meeting of the next legislature by 15 or 20 other places in this territory. Of course our friends in Helena here have enjoyed the monopoly, as my friend Major Maginnis says, not of money, because it has been a source of expense to them, but of courting political favors, or something of that kind. There is a sort of magic in having it here which they are afraid of losing. It will pave the way to the United States Senate or to the House of Representatives or to the Supreme Court bench, or to some such exalted position among the powers and principalities of the earth. Now, I shall vote against any proposition which looks to the permanent location of the capital at an early day. I do not say that I shall vote against Anaconda or against Butte—against my friends down town here; and his description reminded me of the city of the New Jerusalem, with everything except the silver pavements. But I will not vote for the permanent location of this capital at an early day, for the reasons which I have assigned.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I am sorry that all the remarks that have been made have not been confined to the matters strictly before us. Now, I believe that Judge Luce certainly did answer the argument of Major Maginnis when the Major stood up and said it was not in the province of this constitutional convention to name the temporary capital of Montana. Therefore, I shall not attempt to add anything to what Mr. Luce said on that point. The arguments and the speeches that have been made remind me of the old adage, "He that hath a horn and bloweth it not, the same shall not be blown." And for fear that I may not have another opportune time to blow Butte's horn, I propose now to say a few words, and a very few. Now, Mr. Chairman, I agree with a great deal that has been said in favor of Helena; not what is said in favor of Helena retaining the capital, but in favor of Helena's enterprise, in favor of Helena's wonderful energy—unharnessed and bottled up energy that is yet to be displayed. I agree with all of that. But I am not willing to sit here and admit that Helena is Montana; I am not willing to sit here and admit that Helena is the only place for the capital; I don't believe that others are ready to admit any such proposition. Now, the fact stares us in the face that this constitutional convention is framing a constitution which, as Major Maginnis says, has been thus far gone along with comparatively in a harmonious spirit, but I contend that it will not be a perfect whole until we determine where the temporary location of the capital shall be, and we are all buoyed up and confidently expect that when this convention comes to its sober senses that they will find that Butte is the most eligible and the most acceptable point in the Territory. Butte is a wonderful city. As I said the other day when this proposition was up, a city that is set upon a hill whose light cannot be hid. It is a city that I am sure all Montana is proud of. It is a city that is all that Helena can boast of, and a great deal more. It is a city that has all of the modern appliances and conveniences. We have the best railway system in Montana; we have the best street railway system in Montana; and when the Homestake Pass road is completed we will be nearer to eastern Montana than any other point in Montana that is up for capital honors except Bozeman, and I don't believe that anyone will claim for Bozeman that it is the center of the populous district. We do claim for Butte City that it is the center of the present populous district, and we believe it will be so for many years to come. We are not working for the permanent location of the capital at Butte City, but we do desire to work for the temporary location of the capital there, so that when this matter is submitted to the vote of the people, the people shall decide whether Butte City shall be the point for the permanent capital or not. We are willing to trust that to the people. Now, I am sorry that Major Maginnis referred to this apple of discord. This discussion thus far has gone on very pleasantly until some member from Lewis & Clarke has risen to his feet and assailed the motives or impugned the motives of every member who may differ with them. I yield to no member upon this floor, not even the eloquent gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, in the motives that actuate every member of this constitutional convention in framing this constitution that is to be submitted to the vote of the people, and I am not willing to sit in my seat and hear those motives impugned, nor am I willing to sit here and have it said that in the discussion of this question we are throwing to others the apple of discord. If the apple of discord has been plucked I have not seen anyone that has plucked it except some representative from Lewis & Clarke County. Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not say this in any spirit of unfairness; I do not say it in any other than a friendly spirit; and if there has been any other spirit than the most kindly, the most chivalrous shown here by any delegation, I have yet to witness it. Now, I hope that when we come to the final settlement of this question—I am sincere in this—I hope you will give Butte City what she asks. She has never had anything from Montana—not a single thing; and she asks now for the temporary location of the capital of Montana there because she believes it is her right; because she believes that in the location of it at that point you will be accommodating the most populous districts of Montana, not alone now, but for many years to come. And I want to reaffirm what I said a while ago; that when the Homestake Pass road is completed you will find that Butte City is the most acceptable point in the Territory for the accommodation of the entire Territory, and more especially for the populous district of the Territory. Butte City's business surpasses that of any other point in Montana; Butte City's business has made possible these lines of railroad that Major Maginnis so eloquently portrayed; Butte City has made possible not only these various lines of railroad, but she maintains them today; and I claim that the citizens of Butte City have been as loyal and as patriotic to the interests of Montana as those of any other city or town in the Territory; and I claim for her that she is as loyal today; and if we don't get what we ask, we will submit as gracefully as our friend from Deer Lodge County. We are willing to contend with you as to the acceptability and eligibility of these various points, but if we shall not get what we ask we will not rise to our feet and say that from any unjust motives or influences you robbed us of our rights. We present our claims, and we hope that when the time comes you will give us what we ask.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: I move that the committee now rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reported progress and asked leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports progress, and asks that the committee be extended leave to sit again.

Mr. Callaway, of Madison: I move that the convention take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

RECESS.

2 o'clock P. M.

The convention was called to order by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The convention had under consideration a special order in the Committee of the Whole. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reported progress and asked leave to sit again, which was granted. What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of Proposition No. 18.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Before the motion is put, I desire to send to the Clerk's desk a resolution and ask that the same be read in connection with the matter in the newspaper that I send along with it.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula Mr. Bickford offers a resolution. Is there any objection to its being read? If there be no objection, it will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Whereas the privileges of the floor of this convention have been accorded the Helena Journal with other papers of the Territory for the purpose of reporting the proceedings of the convention; and whereas said privilege has been abused by the said

Helena Journal in that articles have been published in said paper reflecting upon the integrity of certain members of this convention and impugning the motives of certain members in casting their votes; therefore be it resolved that the said Helena Journal be excluded from this hall and its representatives be excluded from the floor of the convention during the remainder of its session; and that the sergeant-at-arms be directed to see that this resolution is enforced.

(Signed)

L. D. HATCH,
C. S. MARSHALL,
JOSEPH E. MARRION,
W. M. BICKFORD,
W. R. RAMSDELL,
W. J. KENNEDY.

The Clerk also read said article referred to as follows:

"FUNNY BUSINESS FROM MISSOULA."

"A trade has been made, but of what nature not a word has been divulged. This delegation acted in what may be termed a meteoric manner on the question of representation in the Senate. It would naturally have been supposed that Missoula would have stood in with Lewis & Clarke, Silver Bow and Deer Lodge on this question, being a big county. The vote of the entire delegation, however, astounded everyone by going solidly with the small counties in favor of the one-county-one-senator principle. Previous to taking this action a caucus of the delegation was held. It was rumored that they had traded their vote for a vote on the capital question. Just what this trade was and how it was worked is difficult to surmise. It is certain that Missoula County did not trade her vote on this matter for those of the small counties on the capital question, as she can have no hope of getting the capital located at Missoula. The true inwardness of the vote will doubtless be learned today."

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention concerning this resolution?

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I would be as loath as anybody to impugn the motives or actions of the members of any delegation, or to have them impugned, but I think this ought to go to a special committee to investigate the charge and see if it was maliciously done or for what reasons it was done. I think the gentleman from Missoula would be very glad to have that done. I suggest a special committee of three to investigate the matter, and if that committee report favorably on the resolution there will be nobody in the convention that will more gladly vote on the resolution than myself. Nobody ought to be punished without the form of a trial.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: I appreciate the weight of what has been said by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and I also appreciate the fact that it is a serious matter to have the motives of the members of this convention impugned either upon the floor of the convention or in a newspaper of general circulation in the Territory. The members from Missoula County are confronted with the fact that they must go back to their constituents and if their constituents have a knowledge of this publication, that they must stand the brunt of having a falsehood to face, and that they must fight it down. I desire at this time to submit to the convention the fact—and if there is any member of the convention who knows to the contrary, I call upon him to get upon his feet and state it—that the delegation from Missoula County have acted as fair as any delegation within the limits of this hall. We have been neither bought by the expectation of favor nor have we been cowered by the threats of anyone. We are here simply to vote for principles, to maintain that which we consider right, and to stay by any convictions we may have, no matter whether we are persuaded or whether we are threatened. It is true that the Missoula delegation has not always voted as a unit, and this fact I refer to only as showing that we are honest and sincere in our convictions. We have been modest because we come from a county west of the mountains and one that is remote from the rest of the Territory. We do not wish to enforce upon this convention in any unfair way any convictions that we may have. The opportunity may have been presented to us to trade our votes for others, but I say that no open proffer has ever been made by any member of this convention so to do. I can say, standing in my place here upon the floor of this convention that, be it to the credit of this convention, no proffer of any kind has ever been made so far as the capital question is concerned, nor any other matter, so far as that is concerned; and if there has been a vote taken upon the question of representation in the State Senate to be, the vote of the Missoula delegation has been a vote given from purest motives and simply because they believed that that political principle should prevail, that a representative should come from every county in this Territory. We are not here, Mr. President, to be bulldozed by a newspaper, nor are we to be browbeaten by our fellow members. We are here simply to co-operate with the members of this convention for the best interests of the Territory of Montana. I say this without fear of successful contradiction. I say it, and I appeal to our actions upon the floor of this convention as a confirmation of what I say. I simply leave the resolution in the hands of the convention to do with it as they see fit.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I wish to assure my friend from Missoula that I fully concur in all that he has said; and of course it will be as apparent to him as to others that a breach of privilege being committed, the report of an impartial committee of this convention will be a judicial decision in favor of the gentlemen who feel themselves aggrieved. Everyone knows that a newspaper run out in the morning contains a great many things that the editor nor anybody else but the authors of them ever see, and I think the best thing would be to refer the question to the breach of privilege to a committee of three gentlemen.

Mr. Cooper, of Gallatin: I move that this resolution be referred to a committee of three, with instructions to report tomorrow morning after the morning roll call.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 42 in the affirmative to 10 in the negative.

The Chair appointed as such committee Messrs. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke, Knowles of Silver Bow, and Gibson of Cascade.

Mr. Maginnis asked to be excused, and the Chair appointed in his place Mr. Burleigh of Custer.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge, renewed his motion that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke, in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, I regret exceedingly that any gentleman of this convention feels that anything has been said or done which would be construed to be an impugment of his integrity or in any way a reflection upon his conduct in this convention. And I desire to disclaim in the outset in anything that I shall have to say, any intention of indulging in anything of that kind or character; and if anything should escape me that would be subject to any such construction, I now make the apology. It will either be through the infirmity of my language or the heat of debate. I do not think that any gentleman of this convention may be fairly subject to any such imputation or that there has been cause for anything of the kind. I trust, Mr. Chairman, that I may be permitted to indulge the hope that every member of this convention, when the time for adjournment shall have come—and there is ample foundation for the hope—that he may be able to say, as did the distinguished statesman of Kentucky—a gentleman who was the pride and devoted son of that great State—who, when he came to finish up his public career, asked that there might be inscribed upon his tomb these immortal words: "I can appeal," he said, "with unshaken confidence to the Divine Arbitrer for the truth of the declaration which I here make, that I have been controlled by no impure motives, have sought no personal aggrandizement, but in all my public acts I have had an eye single and a warm, devoted heart to what in my best judgment I conceived to be the true interests of my country." Now, Mr. President, it is perhaps proper to say in the outset that we ought to conceive—to start with a proper apprehension of what are the duties and obligations imposed upon this convention. Different ideas obtain. At different times during the proceedings of this convention it has been asserted that a constitutional convention is a sovereign body—that it possesses absolute sovereignty, and that it only needs to submit its acts for ratification to the people in order that they may have binding force and effect. Upon the other hand, I maintain, as I maintained upon the adoption of the preamble, that this convention has never sought to act as a political sovereignty, but that what it does is in pursuance of an Enabling Act of the Congress of the United States, supplemented with whatever sovereignty belongs to it. For four years, as the representative of the people of this Territory, independent of politics, upon the floor of the Congress of the United States, in the lobbies and elsewhere, in season and out of season, I have clamored for constitutional government for the people of the State of Montana. I thought then, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the convention, that the people of this Territory wanted constitutional government, and that they were demanding that a convention might assemble in the city of Helena for the purpose of adopting a constitution for the proposed State of Montana. I never dreamed, Mr. Chairman, that the object and purpose of it was to move the capital to some other point within the State. It may be, Mr. Chairman, that the right resides in this convention to establish the seat of government; it may be that this convention has the arbitrary power to locate the seat of government. Carrying that idea out of its logical consequences, if it be possessed of this idea of sovereignty, it may go farther and nominate a State ticket from Governor down, place it in this constitution, submit it to the people and say "You shall be compelled to accept the ticket which we nominate, or you will be compelled to defeat this constitution." (Applause) Now, let me ask you, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of this convention, in all fairness, are you not tying the hands of the people upon this question, if you consider it of sufficient importance to submit it at all? Are you not tying the hands of the people and saying, "Gentlemen, you cannot have a fair expression of popular sentiment and popular will upon this question, but if you want to adopt a constitution for the State of Montana you must accept it with some town which we shall designate in it as the temporary seat of government." You are taking away from them the right to say what they will do. Now, this might be very well, and it would be excusable if what was stated by my honorable friend from Gallatin County (Judge Luce) was true. He stated that it was absolutely necessary that we should designate some place in this instrument for the temporary seat of government. He was followed up also by the gentleman from Silver Bow, who always presents everything forcibly and clearly (Mr. Rickards) that that condition of things was true and therefore it becomes necessary to insert the name of some town in this constitution. Let me call the attention of the gentlemen to the fact that by an act of the Legislative Assembly of 1874 provision was made for submitting the question of the location of the seat of government to the people of the Territory of Montana, and by a popular vote it was determined to be at the city of Helena. Thereupon the proclamation of the Governor was made, the law went into force, the seat of government was removed, is here today and has been here since that time. The very last section of the Enabling Act under which this constitution assembled and under which it transacts its business today provides that the laws of the Territory of Montana, not modified by the Enabling Act or this constitution, shall be and remain in full force and effect. By that the seat of government—the temporary seat of government of the State of Montana would be at the city of Helena; and I make this observation because when the other day the proposition was up, myself and my colleague, Major Maginnis, voted that there should be nothing said upon this question; that our votes were being misconstrued as a vote against the city of Helena. Now, this is true. If it were not true it would be necessary in this constitution to go farther, if we desire any laws of the Territory to remain in force, and strike out the word "Territory" wherever it appears in the miscellaneous subdivisions, in the criminal subdivisions, in the civil code and in the general law. This was done for the very express purpose of preventing the people in these Territories who are proposing to form States from entering into these legal controversies. Why, sir, in that Enabling Act, so far as the Territory of North Dakota was concerned, an express provision is inserted in it, that they shall have a right to submit the question of the temporary location of the seat of government to the people of the State by a separate proposition and an amendment. Allusion is made all the way through the bill to the temporary seats of government, and also to Bismarek in North Dakota. Now, that is true, and it was done for the very purpose, I take it, to prevent these legal controversies. I consider it a laudable ambition upon the part of any town in this Territory to aspire to capital honors. There is nothing wrong about it. Helena claims no such superiority as would point it out as the only place in this Territory where the seat of government ought to be. It recognizes that in this Territory towns are growing up—towns of importance—and that the settlement of new communities is constantly changing the centers of population. What we do claim is that when the question is submitted, when the time shall come for the consideration of this question, that it may go to the popular will; that the people, independently of the question of constitutional government, may be permitted to say where it shall be. Now, we may be running upon dangerous ground. I listened the other day to my good friend from Deer Lodge, Judge Whitehill, who stood upon this floor time after time and asserted that any proposition which went into this constitution that said the Legislature shall do so and so was a nugatory proposition and a nugatory provision. You propose to locate the temporary seat of government at Anaconda, at Butte, at Bozeman, or elsewhere, and then you follow it up with a provision which says the Legislature shall at its first, its second, or its third session provide for the submission of that proposition to the people. I say my friend has said to you time and again, and he has said that the books are full of it, that you cannot mandamus the Legislature; you cannot compel them by any proposition known to the law. There was no method by which the executive department or the judicial department could control the legislative department. Hence, if the provision is put in there and the temporary seat of government is removed, how, I ask you, do you know that it will not remain there for five years, for ten, for fifteen or for twenty. Therefore, it seems to me that it is useless to undertake to interfere with this proposition at a time when it is admitted by everybody that the permanent seat of government should not yet be located. It therefore seems proper to me that the temporary seat of government should remain just exactly where it is without any interference upon the part of the convention, and that the Legislative Assembly when it meets at its first, second, third, fifth or sixth session, or whenever public sentiment may demand it, may be in a situation unrestrained by constitutional provisions from putting it into operation. Now, sir, the constitution which we are adopting is an instrument, I take it, in which not only every member of this convention, but every citizen of this Territory, ought to feel a pride. This is no place for this sort of question. If it was in the Legislative Assembly, I would not only think it entirely proper, but I would expect of every locality in this Territory that thought that they were the proper place for the seat of government to urge their claims in the best manner possible. But in the constitution it was designed that it should contain only fundamental law. Expediency, policy, the mere question as to where a thing should be today or tomorrow—no such proposition as that was ever designed to be inserted in the fundamental instrument of any State of the Union. Shall we put into this constitution mere matters of expediency? Certainly not; only the fundamental law; and I think that declaration has been assented to a hundred times upon this floor since this convention met. Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not think it can be maintained here, so far as the mere question of sovereignty is concerned, that this convention has a right to do anything that it pleases arbitrarily. It ought to be done with circumspection; it ought to be done with discretion. If that is not the case, what is there but the mere sense of justice upon the part of this convention to prevent it from running riot as did the thirty tyrants of Athens. Nothing but the mere sense of propriety on the part of this convention would guide and control it. This convention provides that certain things shall go into this constitution, and it seems to me that we will lose nothing of our character, integrity or ambition if we confine ourselves as closely to it as we may; so that in the end, Mr.

Chairman, we may have a constitution which shall contain only fundamental law; a constitution which may last in all its vigor unimpaired until our resources, until our wealth and our prosperity shall demand a still greater enlargement of our liberties. (Applause)

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I had not intended to have intruded upon the convention any remarks of my own in reference to this matter, but as it seems to have taken a turn wherein not the interests of the localities is involved, but the greater question of constitutional law, I have a desire to say a few words upon the subject. Here is an Act of Congress authorizing us to assemble for the purpose of forming a State constitution. Under that we have the undoubted right to make provisions to protect the life, the liberties and the dearest interests of every citizen of the proposed State of Montana. But it seems, according to the arguments of gentlemen that have been made here to you, that when it comes to the very vital and important question of this convention saying where the temporary seat of government shall be, that that is a matter over which this convention has no jurisdiction whatever. Why, one of my honorable friends from Lewis & Clarke says that he does not think that Congress ever had any idea that anybody would undertake to remove the capital. Now, with all due respect to its importance, to its high standing among the great commercial and financial centers of the world, permit me to suggest that Congress would perhaps so far forget its duty that the town of Helena never entered its mind.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The gentleman, I am sure, does not want to misrepresent me. My point was that this Enabling Act of Congress authorized any of these conventions to take this matter into consideration.

Mr. Dixon, of Silver Bow: I say in reply to that that it seems very singular to me that the question of authorizing the admission of any of the new States, should have any concern or interest in whatever the conventions might do in such an unimportant and simply local matter as the changing of the seat of government. As I said before, we may pass unquestioned here propositions relating to the most vital interests of the community, and yet when it comes to the question of whether or not the capital shall be removed, on that our mouths are stopped by the Organic Law. Now, I claim that this convention has full power not only to regulate that matter—a matter comparatively unimportant among matters of so much more moment—but I claim that if it chooses to exercise that power, it has undoubted right to do so. The gentleman who last addressed you said this would be taking an unfair advantage of the people, I say not. If we take no action in this matter, and that is what the gentlemen want—they do not want anything done—then under the law the temporary seat of government would remain where it is. But they say we are taking an unfair advantage. Suppose we leave the seat of government at the city of Helena, does not that comprehend quite as much as if we were to provide for removing it somewhere else? I believe this whole matter is purely within the discretion of the convention. This constitution is to be voted upon. We are not the final judges whether it shall be the controlling law of the land or not. It is to be submitted to the people, and we have just as much right, if we believe it is expedient and fit to do so, to act upon this question as upon any other, and I hope the gentlemen of the convention will not be deterred from taking such action as their judgment may dictate, by the idea that there is a great constitutional question involved here, and that among the multiplicity of powers, one was reserved, and that you must protect the rights of the city of Helena. It is presumptuous, it is absurd, to talk about removing the capital. When you come to touch the interests of Helena, you must be still, you must say nothing; take off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the ground whereon thou standest is holy ground. (Laughter and applause) Now, I do not consider this a very vital matter. There are a great many things that we have considered in this constitution of infinitely more importance to the people of this Territory than where the temporary capital may be located; but I do say that we have a perfect right to consider it, and I think we ought to do so; and if it is the sense of this convention that some other place, some other point than Helena is entitled to whatever advantages there may be in the temporary seat of government, I think it is perfectly right and proper that this convention should take action in regard to the matter. Now, so far as the Silver Bow delegation is concerned, I believe that I represent them in saying that they desire, as is natural and right, the removal of the temporary seat of government to Butte, but they do not stand exactly in the position that seems to be assumed by some of the representatives of Lewis & Clarke County. In Butte we have a large and flourishing mining camp. We take pride in the wealth, the resources and the business and the industries of our town, but we do not claim to own the Territory of Montana. We do not claim that we built up Custer County, we do not claim that there is no place in the Territory but what was built up by Butte capital, and therefore ought to be tributary to Butte whenever it comes to the question of the interests of Butte. We admit the right of every portion of the country, of every place in the State to put in its claim for the location of the temporary seat of government. Whatever enterprises have been established, whatever industries have been founded there, they have been founded for the benefit of those who went into them, and while those industries have had their effect, all over the Territory, I may say, in the increase of business, we do not claim that we went into them for the benefit of the outside counties, nor do we claim that we have any lien upon the outside counties, by which they should vote for Butte for the temporary seat of government. We stand only upon our own rights, and upon our own claims, not derogating from those of other people, nor assuming that it is sacrilegious for anybody else to claim anything as against Butte, not thinking that it is presumptuous for anybody else to think they have a good town, but only presenting our claims, and asking for them a fair consideration. If this matter is put upon the ground of the considerations which have been advanced here in favor of Helena, I do not know of one of them that might not apply with equal force to Butte. As a center of population, it certainly has as many advantages as this place; in fact, I know of no argument in favor of Helena that would not apply to the location of the capital in Butte. But, as I said before, we stand upon our merits, claiming a fair consideration, but without any attempt or any desire to arrogate to ourselves any superior claim, except so far as it is founded upon right and justice to that of any other community in the country. And so far as this matter of stirring up strife in this convention is concerned, so far as casting into the ring the apple of discord, and stirring up feeling and all that, why, I have seen no evidence of it, except that which came from some of the gentlemen who have addressed you upon this floor in reference to the retention of the capital. Now, this is not a matter about which I see any occasion for feeling, or for which I see any occasion for any discord. Why, the world will not go to pieces if the capital is removed from Helena, nor Helena will not go to pieces either. I have a great respect for the city of Helena. I admire the perseverance and persistence and the unanimity with which its people stand together in everything that relates to it. I am proud of the place as a city of Montana, and I admit that it has all the virtues in the calendar, except one—now somewhat gone out of date, but still entitled to be considered occasionally—the virtue of modesty. (Laughter and applause) However, I am not willing to admit everything that is claimed for it, nor am I willing to admit that there are any such superior rights existing in Helena as to make it presumptuous upon the part of any other place to fairly present its claims for the seat of government, and to have those claims acted upon. As I said before, I see no feeling or trouble or discord here. Let us go on and discuss this matter. Let us consider what is best to be done. Let each member vote according to his convictions, and when we are through let that be the end of it. So far as Butte is concerned, I am satisfied I can say for its delegation that if its claims are defeated, there will be no demonstrations of recalcitration on its part. We will accept the verdict of this convention; and I think I represent the sentiment of the majority that if we cannot get it in our own place, we shall exercise the privilege of voting for it in the next place that we believe should have it, and we shall do all this good-naturedly. We shall advance no claim of superior rights against any other place. If we are beaten, we shall give up, making the best of what we can, and there shall be no further feeling about the matter. I do not understand why there should be any feeling. Why, if Helena has all the advantages of the future before it, and the present prosperity which it has, and which I believe it will always have, it seems to me that there should be no feeling about this matter. I do not know how you are situated here in Helena with reference to the location of the capital; we have got along in Butte without it; whatever advantages there are in it, Helena has had them for a good while, and as I said before, while I do not desire to go into this discussion at any greater length, I want to state what I believe is the position and the feeling of the majority of the Silver Bow delegation, that we have got a perfect right to consider this matter if we choose, and that there is nothing about it, which will prevent us, if we desire to do so, from voting to take the capital away from Helena, however treasonable it may seem in the eyes of some people who live in this particular place. Upon that principle we propose to act, good naturedly, without feeling, and without making any accusations; but we certainly do not intend to be bluffed off from discussing this question, or trying to get a vote of the convention upon it, by reason of any want of power in the convention to regulate the matter if it see fit to do so.

Mr. Whitehill, of Deer Lodge: I do not propose to repeat or rehash any of the arguments which have been presented here at all. My friend from Bozeman has fully answered the arguments in regard to the power of this convention to settle this question as to the location of the capital. And I would simply say that I do and have argued here that any such provision put into the constitution, as says that the Legislature shall do so and so, is nugatory. But sometimes there is a power in the indignation of the public, in the arousing of public sentiment, which will do things that courts cannot do, and let any aspirant after public office attempt to make nugatory any act of this convention, and I say here that he will be hurled forever into utter oblivion by the indignation of these people. Now, there is but a single thought, Mr. President, that I wish to present here, and that is this: Threats have been made, and with very great effect because gentlemen have said to me, "Whitehill, if this thing is pressed, we fear very much that the constitution will be defeated." Is not that a great idea for any gentleman who is in this convention to argue or attempt to substantiate—the idea that if we do not leave the capital at Helena, that this constitution which we propose to present to the people will not be ratified? Now, Mr. Chairman, no matter what this convention in its good wisdom may decide to do, whether it shall allow the capitol to remain here, or whether it shall say that it shall go to some other town—no matter what, if this convention has decided, the good people of this beautiful city may decide to do in that respect, no matter what the people of our sister city of Butte may decide to do, no matter what Bozeman, Billings, or any other town or hamlet in this blessed State may decide to do—I tell you that on the first day of October, in spite of storm or tempest roar, in spite of false and foolish lies, I assure you, the good people of Anaconda will come up with smiling faces, and give a solid vote for the ratification of this constitution, which we may present to them. And I tell you that in spite of the slurs which have been cast upon us, in spite of the insinuations which have been hurled at us, I tell you that the good people of Anaconda are not spiteful. (Applause)

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I have no desire to discuss this question, but propositions have been presented, and assertions have been made, that have compelled me to take my part in this discussion. The question of sovereignty in this convention has been touched upon. This convention, as I have asserted before, assembled to form a constitution by virtue of the sovereign right of the people they represent. The Congress of the United States had no power to form a state government. A state government is formed by the sovereign power reposed in the people within the limits of a certain locality, and they organize their government and they come to the door of Congress and say, we wish to be admitted into the family of states with the constitution that we have; and the only limit upon that is that it shall be republican in form. As to the question of this temporary location of the capitol, why, we have got a right to say where the legislative assembly or the legislative power that we create shall meet. We created that power. We, the people of Montana delegate to that legislature its power, and we limit its power, and we cannot say where it shall assemble? If we cannot, it seems that we are cut very short; that while we can provide for a legislature, and give it a right to legislate, upon all rightful subjects of legislation, that we cannot say where that legislature should meet. I do not claim that this convention is over and above all law. It meets here in pursuance of an Act of Congress, to form a constitution. The constitution of the United States provided for a permanent capitol; they have provided in that constitution where a permanent capitol should be, ten miles square, that should be under the absolute control of the United States. In the law we created the Constitutional Convention, we created the Constitution of the United States, and submitted it to the people; there was no authority upon this subject of the location of the capitol. The temporary capitol of the Confederate States was then I believe at Philadelphia, but they provided afterwards in that constitution for establishing a permanent capitol, and there was no provision of that Congress that gave them any such power. The fact is that the law under which the convention wrote the Constitution of the United States, and enacted it, did not provide for any such constitution as that convention adopted. Then we come down to another point in it. The gentlemen say, Why we will leave things just as they are; and yet this Enabling Act provides that the laws of the territory shall remain in force; reading "and all laws in force made by said territory at the time of the admission in the United States, shall be in force in said state, except as modified or changed by this Act, or by the constitution of the state respectively." Now there is a special grant given by this Enabling Act that they can change these laws. They say "remain in force, except as modified or changed by this Act or by the constitutions of the states respectively." These states when we can create, can modify the law and change the law, and yet the gentlemen say that in respect to all matter, you can change these laws upon any question, except one, and that the capitol question.

(Here Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke interrupted the speaker in a few words, which were not distinguishable at the reporter's table.)

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Yes, but that does not refer either to the laws that should be enforced or the fundamental law; it refers to the laws that shall be on the statute books and there is a special law that those laws that are on the statute books, we may change. But if that was not there, then you have got a law upon your statute books that says that the capitol for the territory of Montana shall be at Helena—not the temporary capitol, gentlemen, not the temporary capitol, Mr. Chairman—but the capitol of Montana Territory. And if we adopt those laws, we would adopt that as the capitol of Montana Territory. Now, in the report of a committee of which I am Chairman, that will be made in a day or two, as soon as this convention proceeds a little further, there will be a provision that wherever "territory" or "Territory of Montana" occurs in the Laws of Montana that they shall be read "state" or "State of Montana" to make it applicable to state government. Now, apply this to the location of the capitol that is now located in Helena, and you have "the capitol shall be at Helena"—the capitol of the state. Just look at it there. That is the capitol of the state and that will be the way that the law will read—not the temporary capitol, but the capitol of the state. These gentlemen are lawyers enough to know that that will be the effect of enacting that schedule. Do we want to leave out such a provision as that? Do we want to go into a state organization wherever "territory" occurs, leaving it still in there—that prosecution shall be made in the name of the territory, that certain things shall be done by the territory; do we want to leave that there? No, we want to change these laws and make them apply to the state, and that is what we are doing here by legislating. When we adopt that schedule we will legislate upon that subject. That is enacting law by this convention; and upon that matter, if you leave this matter without saying anything about this temporary government, I believe that as you have adopted a state government here, and say nothing upon the subject of a capitol, that the courts themselves, would be compelled to construe the law as you would provide in this schedule, and say that wherever "territory" occurred it meant "state," and wherever "Territory of Montana" occurred it meant "State of Montana." They would have to do that; they would have to say that it had been modified by enacting this state government. Now, gentlemen here seem to think and argue as though this was only a continuation of a sort of a territorial government. It never has been fully decided yet as to what a territorial government is. One thing that seems to be clearly decided about a territory is that it has not any rights that courts are bound to respect—that no matter what laws it enacts that the courts of the United States can repeal them. That it has no sovereignty at all. That was the argument that was made for Kansas by Senator Douglas that there is a sovereignty in the people that never has been granted to the national government and that by virtue of this sovereignty that was in the people, they had a right to enact these local laws that were called derisively "squatter sovereignty." But the Supreme Court of the United States in the Dred Scott decision, denied that; and where we are and what we are it is difficult to tell from the decisions. But I do say, gentlemen, that whatever it is, that this state government is something that is different from a territorial government. It is upon a different basis; it has a different status. It is a state—and not a simple municipal corporation or a simple thing that is created by the will of Congress. It is something that is created by the people. It is a state created by the people in their sovereign capacity; and when you come down to that, this government is not simply a continuation of the territorial government, only modified by a constitution—it is a new government, an entire revolution. New rights, new officers and everything that pertains to this state government will be different from a territorial government; and we have to adopt all these schedules and these amendments in the laws so as to make them applicable to the state government, and we do it in our constitution that we adopt. There has been a good deal said as to the enterprise of Helena, and the propriety of the question of leaving this capitol here. Whatever is the propriety of leaving the capitol here, I trust there will be a provision in this constitution that will only make Helena the temporary capital, if the capitol remains here. But then as to the question of propriety. The gentleman has spoken of the enterprising citizens of Helena. I grant that they are enterprising. They have citizens in Helena that I have wished lived in the communities where I live; they have had push and energy and public spirit and a patriotism in their town such as has never been witnessed anywhere else in Montana. What citizens of other communities in Montana Territory have had the loyalty towards their town that the citizens of Helena have had? They have built up here under the most discouraging circumstances a splendid city. But, gentlemen, they have not done everything for Montana, and there has been a good deal that has been charged against them of selfishness in their enterprise. There is a good deal of that that is true. The gentlemen may say that they have done this and that for their county, but they have not done it in the spirit of generosity. The gentlemen say "Why, you have the Insane Asylum in Deer Lodge County." We have not the Insane Asylum in Deer Lodge County. There is no Insane Asylum located there. There are a couple of respectable gentlemen members of the medical fraternity that, under a contract with the Territory of Montana, took care of its insane at so much per head. They could as well have taken those insane to Boulder as they could to the Warm Springs. They could take them to Bozeman today as well as leave them where they are. They are simply contractors to keep and board these men for so much money. There is no location of the Insane Asylum there. There has been some desire to locate the Insane Asylum at Warm Springs, and purchase that property as it is so well adapted to that purpose. But how has Helena felt upon that subject? It has been felt by a good many of our legislative assembly that Helena was not favorable for a permanent location of the Insane Asylum even for the territory, because Helena might want that institution itself. Then they say that they have in Deer Lodge County the Penitentiary. Yes; a good many years ago the Penitentiary was located in Deer Lodge County. After a few years it was filled. They were in such a condition that every United States Grand Jury for ten or twelve, and I do not know but fifteen years, reported that the Penitentiary was in a bad condition and asked to have something done with it; and not until the time arrived when the courts had to provide by order that the penitentiary convicts should be confined in the local jail on account of that penitentiary being so filled up, could there be found anything to be done to enlarge that penitentiary; and it was charged by a good many citizens of Deer Lodge that there was a local feeling upon that subject in this town of Helena, and that was the reason the penitentiary was not enlarged.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Did you ever believe that, Judge?

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I never knew why it could not be enlarged, because I knew that when it was enlarged, although it was the property of the United States, it was taken out of the pockets of the taxpayers of Montana Territory—a part of the internal revenue of Montana

Territory that was collected in this territory in violation of the great fundamental principle that there should be no taxation without representation. Part of the forty thousand dollars, less than half of the revenue derived from Montana Territory for one year, was at one time put in that penitentiary. The gentlemen say that they have built railroads—the Helena people have—in their communities; they have built a railroad to Philipsburg. Why, were there not other parties associated with the few Helena gentlemen that built the railroad to Philipsburg? Were there not some West Side capitalists that helped build that road and really put the largest amount of capital in that enterprise—and the railroad, too, up the Bitter Root Valley? Why, these gentlemen were associated with other gentlemen in Montana Territory who had not lived in Helena, all building that as a business enterprise for the money that could be made out of building it; and yet the gentlemen from Helena can brag about these things that have been done by gentlemen of business enterprise from other portions of the territory associated with them. Why, it is these things, gentlemen, that lead us to say that there is considerable of selfishness in Helena—that there is a considerable disposition to aggrandize the people of Helena. Why, to off-set the penitentiary of Deer Lodge, that has been a kind of nuisance over there, you have the United States Assay Office located at Helena and that has been a good deal better provided for and cared for than the Penitentiary of Deer Lodge. Why, the bullion that was shipped from the Hope Mining Company in Deer Lodge County and from other places, that we sent here were reported as the product of this community because they went through this assay office. What stopped the mining men from Deer Lodge from sending their bullion to be assayed at this office. It was because Helena claimed it as part of their product. I know that the gentlemen talk about that, and there are gentlemen here that know more about that matter than I do. And there was a time, I remember years ago, when Deer Lodge was an aspirant for capital honors—only forty miles from Helena—and at that time Deer Lodge County had sixty mine camps, placer mining camps—and was turning out more than one-half of the gold product of the territory; and Helena claimed that it was friendly to that proposition, and the gentleman at that time—the distinguished and honorable gentleman—was running for Congress, and they came over there from Helena and said “Why, you support our man for Congress and we will support Deer Lodge for the capital. And there were some fifty or sixty votes obtained at that time against a citizen of Deer Lodge upon that play, and when the time came around they got twenty-eight votes in Lewis & Clark County for Deer Lodge for capital. Why was it? Because Helena was an aspirant and it wanted to put its foot on any other aspirant but itself. The gentleman has stated that a certain Helena man started the town of Miles City. “Why,” said he, “a gentleman of Helena built the first house in Miles City, our grand Mr. Matt Carroll.” Well, Mr. Matt Carroll, if I remember correctly, about that time was a contractor for the government of the United States in furnishing transportation and supplies to the Fort, and I have wondered whether or not the fact that part of that reservation was cut off so that Matt Carroll could put his house there, was not because he was a Helena man. (Laughter). Now, in relation to the town in which I live—Butte—they have got a notion that they want the capital over there, and we from that section will support that place for the capital. The gentlemen here may seem surprised, or may feign surprise, that Butte should not be disposed to stand in with its thriving sister upon the other side of the mountain; but there is a feeling in Butte that Helena has not always been just. In talking about the railroads that were to be built, one that was manipulated under Helena hands was to go from the Three Forks up the Boulder over here and run really further north than Butte, and they made a detour and came around to Butte on a one hundred and fifty feet grade to the mile a distance of one hundred and three miles long, when there was a cut and practical route thirty-four miles nearer and much more easily constructed; and when it was claimed by the people of that community that there was a cut and practical route, the friends of this community said that we were misrepresenting that fact, that we had no pass there; and one of the engineers of the Northern Pacific Railroad told me that in the Pipestone Pass there were twenty-seven miles of one hundred and twenty-one feet grade, and when he agreed with me as to the elevations between the Three Forks and the Pipestone Pass I showed him that at Three Forks he would be over three hundred and fifty feet under ground; and then he turned around and said he was mistaken as to it being on that side, but that it was sixteen miles on the Butte side, and when we agreed on the elevations I showed him that thirteen miles and a half from the Pipestone Pass he would be a thousand feet under ground. Now, how did it happen that a man whose business was engineering should have such a mistaken notion about the pass that had been so much talked about as that? I say to these gentlemen here that those people on our side of the range have felt that this community in its selfishness had misrepresented them somewhat in these matters. The gentleman spoke about distinguished visitors—Senatorial visitors here—who advised him upon constitutional law. I notice those gentlemen were here and they went up to Marysville to see the mines of Montana Territory. They were the guests of citizens of Helena but they did not come to Butte. And there were a couple of distinguished gentlemen who went to Anaconda the other day.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: If they did not go to Butte it was not because we did not urge them.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Well, I know they went to Marysville and they did not come to Butte. I know they could see more of the different kinds of mining in Butte in one day than they can see in all the rest of Montana in a month.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: That is what we told them.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I will say this of Major Maginnis, that while he has been a local patriot to Helena he has been a generous and noble friend of Montana. (Applause). What is said here about officiating here and getting Jay Gould to build a railroad to Butte, I do know something about that. I know what the proposition was at that time, that while it was to be built within six miles of Butte it was to be built to Helena, and Montana was to exempt it through taxation for ten years. That is the time that we started in sometime before upon the railroad question to agree at Deer Lodge that there should be a million dollars of subsidy given to the railroad, and we thought then that the railroad was to be built to Three Forks at Gaffney's on the Jefferson River or about the junction of the Big Hole and the Beaverhead, why we found out that that railroad was projected to go up by Henry's Lake and down across over this way to Helena and was not to strike another town in its round through Montana Territory. We might go back into a good many things of that kind—and the gentlemen when the time at last came and they could not get any railroad in that direction—although I believe at that time the Union Pacific Company thought there was more profit to be made in building a railroad up within forty miles of the Geysers than there was to build one up into Montana Territory—they finally got freight enough as they came along into Butte to build their road. But it is fair to say of Major Maginnis that while he was first a Helena man that next he was a Montanan, and anything that he could do to make Montana prosperous he was in for it. He was willing to work early and late upon that subject. I grant to him that meed of praise—and I only say these things because the gentleman has spoken of the great generosity of Helena. Now, Helena men have worked for their localities, worked to build their localities. I deny here now that Helena without a selfish purpose ever worked for any other locality in Montana Territory.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I do not believe, Judge Knowles, that any man ever worked without some selfish purpose. It is human nature.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I am with you there to some extent, but I must say that there was a great deal more of human nature in the Helena people than there is in the general run of people. Now then, we are going into a state government, and I think we might as well wipe out the history of the past, all our past struggles and have a clean slate. Helena has not any more right to this capitol than any other place in Montana Territory—not a bit. It belongs to the people to say what they will do upon that matter, and really it was a matter for mirth in the Butte delegation who had not much feeling on this capital question a week ago Saturday, to meet gentlemen who talked about us stealing the capitol and all sorts of things of that kind, as though it was the personal property of Helena that was carried around in their vest pockets and that anybody else who took it was stealing. Now, we did not feel that way about it, because we did not care one way or another about the capital question; but now that it has come about that our own locality is for the capitol, we shall stand by them, and when we find that we cannot obtain it we shall feel at liberty to vote for any other place that we see fit, and we shall not feel that we are stealing the capitol from Helena; and when we have got through with this thing I hope that the Helena people wont be like a child that cannot have its own way and then say we wont play "State" at all any more; we will just vote against your constitution; we will spend one hundred thousand dollars to defeat your constitution if you do not let us have the capitol." Why, when you have got yourself into that state of mind it is time the capitol was taken away temporarily for a little while, and let you understand that you do not own the capitol—that it belongs to the people, and that we represent the people of Montana here in this convention.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I have listened with considerable degree of interest to the discussion of this matter of the capitol. Coming from a part of the territory that is not at the present time making an effort to have the capitol located there, I believe I have been able to look upon the matter with somewhat of a feeling of disinterestedness; but it seems to me the way the matter is working, this convention is resolving itself into a free-for-all race, in which already the cities of Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Great Falls, Bozeman and other places have been entered; and I do not know before we get through but that there will be fifty others and instead of placing the matter in the light of what is best for the interests of the State of Montana—what the people want as to where the capitol is to be located it is resolving itself into a local fight either from local pride or else from the hope of material gain by reason of having a capitol located in some one of these respective cities. Now, it occurs to me that the matter resolves itself right down to this. Do the necessities of the territory of Montana at the present time demand the removal of the capitol or is it not the part of wisdom to let it stay where it is until by a vote of the people, as provided in the rest of this article, it is determined where it shall be permanently located. (Applause in the galleries). Helena has no rival claim to the capitol so far as the capital of the state is concerned. It is true she has possession of it now, but possession of it does not give her ownership, and the mere evidence of possession is not a valid title. What claim has Anaconda to the capitol? She presents her representatives here, coming from a nice little city of six or seven thousand people. They have the largest smelting works on the face of the earth there; they have an elegant new hotel, and have a nice little city started. Butte City comes in as a competitor. What claim does she lay for it? The question is are we going to consider the separate claims of these different cities for the capitol, or shall we consider what are and should be the best interests of the State of Montana? Let the capital stay where it is, and where the people vote upon this question they will determine where the permanent capitol should go. (Applause in the galleries). It seems to me like a waste of time that we should quibble over this matter a whole day and probably two or three days before we get through with it. It is simply because persons representing certain localities have some little pique or jealous feeling against the city of Helena. So far as I am personally concerned I talked upon another subject the other day, and did assert upon the floor of this convention that in my judgment the people of Helena had shown themselves selfish to their interests and industries outside of this county, and for that reason I believe it would be as fair to place the thirteen counties of this state in a position where they should have a representation equal to that of the three others, rather than to allow the three to control for all time the thirteen. But does that question arise? Does it matter to us from the fact of the capital being located in Helena, whether the people here are selfish or not? Does it seem like good judgment and good sense to say here, because we have some little pique or quarrel with the city of Helena that we will remove the capital temporarily over to Butte for two or three or four years, or to Anaconda, or over perhaps to the Great Falls of the Missouri? It was a matter that certainly was not made an issue in electing delegates to this convention. So far as my knowledge goes it was not mentioned in the county from which I came, and I am unable to stand on this floor and tell how any single person in my county would vote upon the subject if the matter was submitted to them today. I do not believe that Custer County or Yellowstone County or any other county, for the best interests of the territory, demands that this thing shall be placed upon wheels and dragged over to Anaconda or to Butte or anywhere else. I do not care anything about the claims of Helena. It has no better right or claim than any other city has, but I do care what appears to me to be the best interests of the State of Montana, and I do not think it is the part of wisdom to lumber up the constitution with any provision of this kind. It seems to me the motion of Major Maginnis should prevail, that that part of that section be stricken out. It has been suggested by the gentleman from Silver Bow, Judge Knowles, that if you strike that out it permanently locates the capital in Helena. I will leave it to any other lawyer who will read the rest of the article if that is a fact. It does nothing of the kind. The whole article provides as to how the matter shall be submitted to the people, and there shall not be a permanent location until the majority of all the people have determined upon one location. The argument that has been made here today, or the major part of it, simply relates to what the city of Helena has—what inducements it can hold out why the capitol should stay here. We hear the same kind of thing from Anaconda. They come here with a promise to furnish free of charge rooms, and baths I suppose (laughter), and all that sort of thing for the legislature. Butte will come over here I presume with the same thing; it has not been entirely heard from yet. I was not here a week ago Saturday and did not hear what my friend, Mr. Collins, had to say about the matter, but I presume they have good inducements to hold out at Great Falls for the legislature and the state officers to go over there. But are those reasons that we should consider as statesmen here as to the temporary location of the capitol? Is there any reason why it should be changed? Is there any demand on the part of the people for an immediate change? If not what is the sense in it, and what is it but a waste of time? Men appear upon this floor here and talk for an hour telling what their city is and what they have and what they have been doing and what they are going to do, and what a nice place it would be for the capital. We people down in the eastern part of the territory do not give the snap of the finger for anything of the kind. The question is, when it is permanently located let it be where it will be the most convenient for all the people; let it be located somewhere where it can be constructed, where material can be had readily. There are a thousand and one things that may enter into the consideration as to the best place to locate it, but I do not think that any of the inducements that have been held out today are reasons or arguments at all in favor of locating it anywhere or leaving it in the city of Helena; but what I do say is, that it is good enough for the present and until the people have by their votes determined where it shall be located permanently, to let it stay where it is. (Applause).

Mr. Gibson of Cascade: I am in favor of settling this question of the temporary capital here and now, and I am ready to vote upon the question. When it is presented I shall vote in favor of Helena. (Applause in the galleries). I shall do it because I consider under the present facilities for traveling, under the present railway system of the state, that the city of Helena is the best place for it. (Applause in the galleries). And I consider that Helena will be the best place for it until the center of population has materially changed. I hardly believe that there is a man on this floor that will not say in his own mind candidly, if this question is submitted to him that Helena is today centrally located in the Territory of Montana. I can see no good in attempting to remove the capital from this place at this time. The time may come, and if the question is determined according to the report of the committee, the time may be then, five or six years hence when it will be expedient to change the capital from this place. Possibly it may be so, but I sincerely believe that if the time ever comes for changing the capital from Helena to another place it will not be over the range of the Rockies, but on the contrary, that the popular voice of the state will demand its location over the Belt range of mountains. I do not believe that gentlemen in this convention appreciate the resources of that country from the other side of the Belt range of mountains. It is a vast country. It is capable of supporting an immense population. It has one of the most extensive mining districts on the face of the earth—I refer to the Little Belt range of mountains. That country abounds in coal for a distance of one hundred miles along the Belt Range of the mountains, and its coal unsurpassed in the western country. It is full of iron. It has agricultural districts more extensive than any other part of Montana, and for that reason it is capable of supporting an immense population. It has water power. It is in the center of the best stock ranches of Montana, and in my judgment, it has all the material resources to make this country the other side of the Belt range of mountains a great empire. Now, I believe in putting this time off six or eight years, and then when the center of population is more clearly determined, we can define where the temporary capital shall be. But at present I am decidedly in favor of leaving the capital here at Helena. (Applause in the galleries).

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I desire to have the indulgence of the Chair and of the gentlemen of this committee for a few brief remarks upon this subject. It has been stated that this is a sort of free-for-all race, and it seems to be so, and I am glad that it is so. If I understand the proposition before this committee, it is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade to change the time at which this question of fixing the capital permanently shall be submitted to the people of Montana, and I believe if I am not mistaken that that amendment comprehends a period of about four years or at the second meeting of the legislature after the adoption of this constitution. I believe if I am not mistaken it is intended to amend this section as it has been amended, that this question shall be submitted at the first regular session of the legislature after the adoption of the constitution, and while the gentlemen have wandered off from this subject and have been discussing the respective merits of the several counties of this territory for capital honors, I wish to say a word with reference to the main question, and I may wander off myself before I get through with my few remarks. I am opposed to the postponement of this question any longer than may be practicable. It has been discussed here as to whether this convention has the powers, upon legal grounds, to change this capital. That I believe has been pretty fully considered, and it is generally believed that it has the power to change it temporarily. Now, if this be the case it may be a misfortune, although I see nothing about this change of the capital or the removing of the capital that has any insurmountable difficulty about it—we have no state buildings; there is nothing to permanently bind down this capital at any particular point, and it is a matter of very easy consequence to move it from one section of the country to the other under the present condition of things. Now, this being the case, I am in favor of submitting the question to the people of this territory whose sovereign right it is to say where the capital shall be placed permanently; this being the fact, the quicker we submit that question to the people of the territory and let them exercise their sovereign will upon this subject the better. (Applause). Now, I am in favor of submitting this question at the first meeting of the legislature after this constitution shall have been adopted, for another reason, if as the gentleman has suggested, the capitol of the state is going to travel upon wheels, the meeting of the legislature and the residences of the state officers will be disadvantageous in some places which probably would not present such advantages as a temporary capital as might or would be advantageous in considering the permanent location of the capitol. There can be no good reasons urged, in my opinion, why the capitol of the state should not be fixed at as early a date as possible on financial grounds. It is easy to arrive at a probable center if this be a question to be considered—a center of population that will be obtained probably for a great number of years to come. If it be contended that this state is not able to fix the permanent capital and establish its state buildings, I would say to you that we have a rich commonwealth, a great state, with over one hundred millions of capital, and if it progress at the same rate that has characterized its progress in the last few years we may look forward towards the establishment of this capital in the most limited time that may seem desirable. We may look at least for a doubling of the wealth of the state, and this cannot be considered an objection to fixing the capital and establishing the state buildings, whenever the sovereign will of the people of Montana shall determine that question. Now, I listened with a great deal of pleasure to the speeches of the gentlemen from the various localities of Montana, and I admire the loyalty and the devotion and I may say the patriotism of those gentlemen in describing the merits and advantages of their respective localities. I recall to my mind the speech of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke who depicted in glowing and eloquent language the advantages of the city of Helena. It is a notorious fact that the people of the city of Helena are known all over this country as among the most enterprising, liberal and energetic people to be found in all the western country or any other part of the United States. (Applause in the galleries). I have no feeling but kindness for the people of Helena. I commend their enterprise and their energy and their liberality and a great many things, as is instanced here by the money that was raised a day or two ago for a stricken sister city. Now, I concur with the gentleman, my learned friend from Bozeman, with regard to the advantages of Bozeman and the great potatoes that may be grown there. I concur with the gentleman from Deer Lodge with regard to the advantages that his city of Anaconda presents. They are an enterprising people. They have built up there the most gigantic plant for the reduction of ores that is to be found anywhere in this world. I agree with him as to the healthfulness of the climate and the purity of the waters. I agree with other gentlemen who have spoken here about the advantages of their respective localities; but I say to you, Mr. Chairman, that there are advantages which may be claimed, that overshadow all of these, by the magic city of Silver Bow County. (Applause). I recall to my mind a little speech that was made by my intelligent friend from Custer County (Dr. Burleigh), who is generally right on most of the propositions that have been discussed in this convention, when he alluded to a visit he made recently, or sometime in the last year, to the silver city wherein he was troubled a great deal with the smoke. I believe that the gentleman must have been laboring under a fit of dyspepsia or something of that kind. (Laughter). It might have been that during the visit of this distinguished gentleman there had settled over the city by reason of the calmness in the air, which sometimes happens, a little smoke, but I say to the gentleman within the last several months he might have visited there and not have met with this disadvantage or disagreeable feature. The gentleman said that he smelt sulphur over there. He said it was too suggestive of the future. I have no doubt sulphur seems to be suggestive of Sheol, and probably the gentleman from Custer is a little tender upon that subject. (Laughter). I am reminded to suggest also to this gentleman that I believe he is an admirer of the ladies, and I must say that the ladies are very fond of this smoky city, as it is sometimes called, because there is just enough arsenic there to give them a beautiful complexion, and that is the reason the ladies of Butte are renowned wherever they go for their beautiful complexions. (Laughter). I believe this will be urged—because the interests of the ladies are paramount to everything else—as one reason why the capital should be at Butte. Now, talking about this smoke, I believe there are times when there is smoke settling over the city, but I say it would be a great deal better for other cities in the territory if they had more smoke and less diphtheria and other diseases. It has been believed by all the physicians of Butte that the smoke that sometimes prevails there is a disinfectant, and destroys the microbes that constitute the germs of disease. I believe the gentleman is pretty well posted on that matter, and while it is disagreeable, it is an advantage in some respects, and it would be a great advantage for the other cities, as I have said, to have a little more smoke and business activity and less disease. Now, I am not one of those that believe in trying to establish the prosperity or the reputation of one place by pulling down that of another, and I am sorry that there has been manifested upon this floor a little disposition to criticise, perhaps a little too severely the actions of people who may happen to live in any one locality. I say a man might just as well try to establish his reputation by traducing that of his neighbor and we know that this generally results in a signal failure. I believe in the great race for prosperity, for wealth and for glory on behalf of the cities of this Territory, but they should not go into the race handicapped, nor should they try to build their respective places up by culminating and belying others. I should like to see the city of Helena contain a quarter of a million of people; it would be so much the better for Butte. I should like to see Anaconda grow and prosper; it would be an advantage to Butte; and I still say right here in regard to the town of Anaconda, that it has been stated that there is feeling between these two cities, and that Anaconda is jealous of Butte, and Butte is jealous of Anaconda. I only say this to disabuse the minds of people who may entertain such ideas as this—I will only say that the city of Anaconda is a progenitor of Butte City, the necessary auxiliary and the outgrowth of the great mining industries of Butte, and its leading citizens are citizens of Butte and have been identified with Butte in many ways, and the most friendly feelings exist there among the people of each place, each towards the other. Butte jealous of Anaconda! Butte is jealous of none of them. Butte can afford to be magnanimous and she is not jealous of any of them. I wish that Deer Lodge, that Great Falls, that all the towns of this Territory might grow up, that we might join together here to build up a great integral whole rather than to tear each other to pieces. Whatever tends to develop one section contributes to the prosperity of the entire Territory or State. Whatever tends to promote the interests of any one town of this Territory promotes the interests of this Territory, however remote it may be. I could wish that the beautiful turfs, the sweet flowers and the rippling waters of those streams in this modern Arcadia that have been so beautifully portrayed by my learned friend from Gallatin could be wafted to delight and soothe the one hundred thousand inhabitants in the beautiful valley of Gallatin. I trust we may work to the common end, that we may develop the State here and rise above that feeling which would seek to have us detract from the interests of any one particular locality. But, now, to return to the subject matter of my remarks, I desire to say to you that Butte does present advantages for the temporary or permanent location of the capital, as the case may be, and I may say that while I have reasonable hopes that this temporary capital will be located at Butte, I am willing notwithstanding that fact to say that it shall be submitted as early as possible to the people of the State, and let them decide it, for to them the question belongs. We have over there in Silver Bow County a city of double the size of any other, I believe, in this Territory. It has the name of being the greatest producer of the precious metals of any city upon the face of the earth. We know this, that it does produce more than one-half of all the precious metals, of the valuable metals, I may say, of the Territory of Montana. It possesses all the advantages that pertain to any city in the Territory. We have pure water; we have churches; we have a refined and elevated society. We have all the advantages which pertain to any civilized city wherever you go in these United States. Now, we shall make no special claim but we have advantages that have been claimed for all of these other cities and in addition to that we have the center, we may say, of the population, or probably as nearly as the city of Helena. We have there a railroad center that will not be surpassed in a short time by any place in this Territory. And the gentlemen have alluded to the fact that Helena people have built a road to Butte, but I say that the object of building that road to Butte was because Butte had her minerals and other articles for furnishing that road transportation, and while due credit should be given to the gentlemen who invested capital to build it there, I say that Butte is to be commended because she has the power to draw the railroads to her. We are now upon the line of this road that is going in a short time no doubt to be extended to the Pacific Coast, and then it will be part of a great highway, and the beautifully equipped coaches and dining cars that stop there now will go on their way to the Pacific Coast. We are now, or will be very soon, on the great highway of the Northern Pacific Railway, for they have concluded to build from Bozeman through to Butte, and I have no doubt will extend on to Gallatin. So it will be as well as Helena upon the great highway of that road; and the Union Pacific that is furnishing facilities for building up that longer than any other great trunk line is about to extend or make connection with the Pacific Coast; so that in a very short time we will be upon three great lines of railway extending from the east to the west; and it is a well known fact that a Chicago and Northwestern road now building into Dakota Territory near the Black Hills is extending out westward and has Montana in view; and within perhaps two years we shall have the Chicago and Northwestern road that will penetrate a country over here that is noted for its grasses and for its fuel, its coals and wood, that is almost terra incognita at present and it will open the country extending from the Madison Valley through to the Sweetwater country, and make it tributary to Butte. So that none of these roads that come into this Territory can afford to miss Butte, because she has the prosperity to draw them to her. Why, the books show that Butte last year paid to the various railroad companies over three millions of dollars for freight alone. I say that in the consideration of this question where we shall locate, temporarily or permanently, the capital of the State of Montana, the claims of Butte, I consider and believe candidly and firmly, to be paramount to those of all others, and I stand here today to support her claims, to advocate her cause and shall vote for the establishment temporarily, and, of course, when it comes up for permanent adoption the people there will have something to say about that themselves, and I will be one of them, I hope. And I shall vote for the permanent location of the capital there. I will not detain you any longer with my remarks, but simply desire to put myself upon record here on these questions and without wishing to detract from Helena or any other place, I consider it my first duty to stand here and claim as I can justly proclaim the advantages of Butte for this temporary location of the capital.

Mr. Burleigh, of Custer: I desire to detain the convention only a moment for the purpose of explanation. My friend states that when I was in Butte last year during those positive and noxious exhalations from their furnaces that I was laboring under dyspepsia. I admit that I was not feeling well, and I regret exceedingly that my friend was not there at the time. I was not only laboring under an attack of dyspepsia but of a difficulty of breathing and some nervous prostration, and I have no doubt my friend will sympathize with me in those feelings when I state that it was just after the October election. (Laughter and applause)

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I have no desire to prolong the discussion which has seemed to me to have wandered widely and very materially from the question under discussion and consideration by this committee. I believe that my ornate friend from Lewis & Clarke County, Major Maginnis, who is usually very clear and usually in the habit of sticking to the text as close as a young dude to his first girl or a pitch plaster to a tight board has certainly digressed. If I understand the proposition that has been discussed, that is being discussed before this committee at the present time, it is one that has already been settled by this committee, and unless there is a motion to reconsider that proposition, and it comes up in successive terms after being voted down time and again ad infinitum, there is no end to it and we will keep repeating the dose both in argument and vote. If I understand, the convention has already fixed that proposition by filling in the blank in this Proposition No. 18, by its vote in this Committee of the Whole, inserting the word Anaconda. Then, if that is the case, this committee has settled the question that has been so much discussed, that we have been entertained by the gentlemen for hours and hours upon. The committee by its vote last week settled the question by filling in that blank the word Anaconda, as the place where the temporary capital of Montana should be until its final location by the voice of the people. I believe I am correct as to that vote. Then, if that is the case, why the necessity of this prolonged discussion as to which place is proper for the temporary capital of Montana, and whether or not this convention has the power to change it from Helena or not? If I am correct upon this proposition, why the necessity of the prolonged discussion upon this proposition that has been indulged in by the committee, unless it be upon the hypothesis as I suggested that the committee has unlimited power to vote upon this and to undo what it has done by a subsequent vote, without a reconsideration, to amend by filling in some other place, and so on without end, which I do not understand it is the power of the committee to do. But once it has been voted upon and fixed, that ends so far as the committee is concerned and brings it back into the convention for its consideration. Now, then, if I understand it correctly, the question under consideration now is whether or not it is expedient for the first Legislative Assembly after the formation of the State government to provide for an immediate submission of this question to the people of the State, or whether or not it is contemplated in the proposition as reported by the committee it shall be submitted by the third Legislative Assembly that may convene after the adoption of this constitution, or whether or not the amendment by the gentleman from Cascade, by inserting the section, shall be substituted. That, I understand, is the whole proposition before this committee, upon which proposition I propose to speak. I do not believe, sir, that it is expedient to delay the submission of this question for the ten years. I do not agree with my friend, Mr. Rickards, from Silver Bow County, that it would be well to retain it as it is in the report of the committee, that is, the third session after the adoption of this constitution. Let us for a moment glance at it and see what that will lead us to. It is contemplated in the framing of this constitution and the Enabling Act of Congress that the first Legislative Assembly is to meet this fall, probably in November or December. If that is the case, it will be the first session of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana. Then, if it is to be submitted at the next general election after that session, that next general election, as I understand it, would fall probably in the month of November, eighteen hundred and ninety, a year from this coming November. If it is to be submitted after the meeting of the second Legislative Assembly, that would bring it in November, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, for submission—that is, that Legislature would provide for it; and if it is to be taken up and provided for by the third Legislative Assembly, which would make it ten years before this proposition could be submitted to the people, that is before a final vote would be taken on the proposition embodied in this proposition, that if at the first election there could not be a vote or a majority of the people for one particular place, which in all probability would be the case, and there is not a majority of all the votes for one place, then it shall be submitted at the next subsequent election of the State which will prolong the definite settlement of the question two years longer, and then the two places having the highest number of votes at the first election shall be voted for. So that if we are to take it as the report of the committee is, it will be ten years before this question can be settled at all. If, on the other hand, we are to provide that the first Legislative Assembly shall provide for the submission of this question to a vote a year from next fall, then, in all probability it will be two years or three years from this coming fall before this capital question can be settled, because the probabilities are nineteen to one that the first election that will be held on that proposition, the different places will be voted for and that no one place will have a majority of the entire vote of the State. Then, I say, that if the first Legislative Assembly provides for submitting this to a vote at the next general election as contemplated in this article, that the probabilities are nineteen to one that the question will not be settled until three years from next fall, in any event it cannot be settled until one year from next fall, which would be long enough in my opinion to leave the question unsettled. I do not understand, sirs, that we are here to take the chances particularly, and to legislate or to act in this convention upon the game of chance or the probabilities as to what the fluctuating population of the State may be ten or twenty years from now. If we defer it for twenty years in view of anticipation, why under the same rule not defer it for fifteen or twenty years longer? Our State government is not formed on the basis of probabilities and what we would be ten years from now, but is formed on the basis of our present population. If we are able to support a State government we should build and locate our capital within a reasonable time after our State government has been formed. Then, I say, that I think upon this proposition the only thing for this committee to consider at the present time is whether or not the first Legislative Assembly shall provide for submitting this question to a vote of the people of the State at the next ensuing election after that, or whether it shall be the second or third Legislative Assembly. My judgment dictates to me that the first Legislative Assembly should make a proposition for a submission of this capital question to a vote of the people at the next general election ensuing thereafter, which would bring it in November, eighteen hundred and ninety. This much for that part of the proposition. But upon the panegyrics that have been indulged in by those ornate gentlemen in favor of their particular towns in the Territory, I happen to represent a place that so far as any action of this convention is concerned, I might say, and I might feel, has, by ringing the changes, mutatis mutandis, that he who has not the freedom to fight for home let him fight for his neighbors, let him think of the glories of Greece and of Rome, and yet let him knock on his head for his labors. Sir, I represent a town that has none of these glories, but an humble village; but still I am fighting for the freedom and the glory of my neighbors, and in doing that, sir, I shall not allow the ornate gentlemen to disturb me in expatiating upon the greatness of these places. Yes, sir; I do realize that Helena is a great town indeed. Aye, sir, she is a noble city; aye, sir, an ignoble city. Her many admirers and advocates upon this floor have omitted many things in summing up her excellencies. They have certainly overlooked the excellency of her old bourbon that I can testify to myself. Then, sir, they have overlooked the proposition that they have added to the geography of the country that has been taught in the public schools, that when the pupils are asked what is the greatest city of the United States they are required to say "Helena." I agree with them upon that.

sir, but, sir, they have gone further, they have added to the Decalogue an eleventh commandment. I do not know whether it is a fact, but I have been advised that it is taught in the schools, at the Sunday schools and at the family hearth stones, to the children that they must repeat "None of thy shekels shall fly to the west side of the mountains." They have been true upon these propositions. Therefore, sirs, I can say that Helena possesses a great people. It is true, sir, and I will go further than my learned friend, Major Maginnis, I believe that but for Helena there would be little of Montana Territory. I am ready to go upon my knees and with uplifted eyes and hands thank my stars that there is such a place as Helena, and that we owe all the blessedness we enjoy to Helena. I admit that Butte would have been insignificant but for Helena, as suggested by my friend, Major Maginnis, a fact that I was not aware of before that the North-Pacific Railroad would not have been built, sir, but for the fact of the suggestion of the Helena people that there was a country over there. They would not have gone there to see whether there was a mining country or not but for the suggestion of my friend that I have been intimate with for twenty odd years, and I know he tells the truth—that he suggested it to them. Another thing, sir, that I am satisfied of, and that is, that but for the suggestions of Helena, the President of this convention, whom I regard as having given the mines there their first impetus by ricking one hundred and fifty thousand dollars of his own money in the first mining enterprise established there, I believe, sir, that it was Helena that suggested all that to him, and that he never would have thought of it but for Helena. Helena inspired the President of this convention to give mining its first impetus there, I believe, sir, but for Helena in her endeavors ten years ago, or twelve years ago, who encouraged this consideration of railroads that we would have had but the North-Pacific Railroad in Montana today, and the building of that was impelled by a gigantic subsidy from the United States—the North-Pacific would be the only railroad in Montana but for the efforts, I say, of Helena ten or twelve years ago to encourage the construction of railroads in Montana. Yes sir, in the assemblages of Montana, I can remember as I see it around me today that whenever a proposition that most favored Helena struck the hearts of the people I could hear the vibrations there then as I do today. But for the plaudits that came from the galleries from the fair and unfair of Helena, to encourage the construction of railroads, that Utah and Northern would never have been built. We owe all, I am willing to acknowledge, that we owe all we have or ever will have to Helena. Then I would not allow the gentlemen to disturb me in my need of praise for what Helena has done. We, the balance of us, are humble adjuncts and seconders of the motion of Helena. We are willing to contribute our mite to Helena as we have always done, and I believe they have thanked us for it. We admire Helena, but nevertheless, I suggest this, that the Helena people have not legotten any mutual admiration society. Now, then, if we will cut for ourselves outside of Helena we will create an admiration by Helena for us. And if we do that we will mutually admire each other. We admire people here, and we want to make them admire us a little. I do not believe that they have had a great deal of admiration for us before, but I propose, sir, so far as my vote is concerned to make Helena admire us a little on the west side of the mountains, although she has made us. I say, sir, that wherever the lions of Helena have belched forth their roars, I hear the echoing plaudits coming from the sacred city. This is all right in launching forth those encomiums but still it is no reason why we should notwithstanding these things act independently for ourselves; and as has been suggested by members on that branch of the proposition, why, this great metropolis should not be the capital of the State on account of the corrupting tendencies and influences and pressure of those things. Why, the place where there is the regular chance for these things to occur is the better place for the capital. Now, sir, upon that proposition I am thoroughly in accord with that view of it, that is, I have seen the pressures brought to bear right in this town. I have seen pressures brought to bear on Legislative Assemblies, where I could say to a positive certainty that where they have a deep interest upon a Legislature not one in five of those Legislatures would ever own itself or dare to speak its own feelings. With all due deference to the firmness of man I have seen that occur right in this city. I have seen measures proposed in the Legislative Assembly here that if there had been a fair discussion of them among the members alone, cut loose from outside influences, the measure would not have received one vote in five of the Assembly; yet I saw those pressures brought to bear by the business men of this town—influential men—men who understand those things and ways of handling men. They have been brought to bear, and I have seen the men yield and go away one by one. My friend, Marrion, who is looking at me, has seen the same thing, and knows it as well as I do. They would go away until these outside pressures in the town would secure a majority of them. That is one of the effects of having the capital in a place where there is as much influence for evil as there is here, that is, if this place is as great as her orators are willing to consider her. Then, gentlemen, I do not desire to detain you longer on this thing because it is not an issue, and I may say I am in favor of a proposition to submit this question to a vote of the people for the location of the capital at the next ensuing election after the first meeting of the Legislative Assembly, which is one year from next fall, the earliest possible time.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I do not expect to make any remarks upon this proposition; I do not expect to inflict this patient audience of this constitutional convention with a speech; but inasmuch as other gentlemen upon this floor have disregarded my feelings in this matter and have punished me, I see no good reason why I should not afflict them. So far as my vote and my action is concerned upon the proposition which is pending before this committee, I will say that it will not be influenced by any man in Helena, in Butte, in Anaconda, in Billings or anywhere else, but that it will be influenced by my own feelings and conscience. So far as my vote upon this proposition is concerned, it will be cast with an eye single to the prosperity, to the best interests and to the convenience of all the people of the State of Montana. I do not believe that the question of the capital of this Territory or of this State is a subject of barter and sale. I do not believe because Anaconda has made a proposition to entertain the Legislature and the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor and the other State officers of this State over at their city that this convention is bound to accept it. If that were the case, I would undertake to say that every capital in every State in the Union would be moved inside of twenty-four hours. There is another consideration that has been advanced here by almost everybody who has advocated one or the other of these places, and that is based upon the population, upon the wealth, upon the resources, and upon the advantages so far as money and all that sort of thing is concerned; but I want to say that none of those things will control me so far as my vote and my action is concerned on this proposition. I do not think that because Helena is a large city it is entitled to the capital of Montana; neither do I think because Butte is the largest city in the Territory that it is therefore by reason of its population entitled to the capital. I do not believe because Anaconda is a great mining camp, because she has a spur of railroad running in there on which she backs her friends into town, that she is entitled to any more consideration than any other town in the Territory, provided that town is located centrally and with a view to reaching it by all of the usually traveled routes of the Territory. So far as I am concerned, I believe that the capital of the State that will be, should be located at a point that will be most convenient for all sections of the Territory regardless of the population of the town or its wealth; and as to the permanent location of the capital, I am in favor of locating it at the earliest day possible, and with a view to that I am in favor of leaving the capital where it is until the people decide the question. (Applause in the galleries) As I said before, my vote will not be controlled by any of these considerations except the one of convenience, and I am in favor of stopping this matter right where it is. It has already degenerated into something not very far above a petty wrangle; it has engendered, I am sorry to say, some very hard feelings which have cropped out in the speeches of the gentlemen who have talked about this matter. It is not the proper place for engendering such feeling, and I am opposed to it. While I might with equal consideration claim that because Billings is located in one of the most beautiful valleys in the Territory of Montana, because she has a population of honest, industrious and intelligent people, because she has the facilities for building the capital building, because she has pure water and pure air and all that sort of thing, that she would be entitled to the capital, I would not for one moment rise in my seat and ask that the capital be located permanently at the town of Billings, simply because I believe it is my duty, as I believe it is the duty of every other man on this floor to vote to locate the capital at the most convenient place in the Territory of Montana. I do not believe Billings would be the most convenient. While some of these other valleys may produce larger potatoes than the valley of the Yellowstone, while some of these places may produce more wealth and more ore than the town of Billings, I want to say that the people down in my section of the country, although they do not produce the largest potatoes or largest specimens—I want to say that they are busily engaged in producing a class of energetic, patriotic and honest citizens. (Uproarious laughter) I give you my word of honor I had no idea that that construction would be put upon my language. (Continued uproarious laughter) but I want to say furthermore, since that construction has been placed upon it by the people of this convention and in the galleries, that nevertheless it is true; and I will say in conclusion that when I have cast my vote upon this proposition I will have the consciousness of knowing that I have done what I consider to be my duty and that I am casting my vote and not the vote of any other man and I will have no apologies to make to my constituents or anybody else.

The Chairman: The question before the committee is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade County to amend Section 2 by striking out the word "three" in line two and inserting in lieu thereof the word "second".

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: What is the pleasure of the committee?

Mr. Courtney, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the Section as it now reads.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Is there not still pending an amendment of Major Maginnis to strike out the proviso?

The Chairman: No sir; that was lost in the morning hour.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I ask that the Clerk of the committee read Section 2 as it is now.

The Clerk read as follows: The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the State, but shall at its first regular session after the adoption of this constitution, provide by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the state at the general election then next ensuing, and a majority of all votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election, the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast, shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the State at the next general election; provided, that until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided, the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of Anaconda.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move that the section as read be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question upon the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. J. R. Toole) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of thirty in the affirmative to thirty-seven in the negative. (Applause in the galleries)

Mr. Buford, of Madison: I now move to strike out the word "Anaconda" and insert "Helena".

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I rise to a point of order. The section was not adopted. We have no section there now, there is no place in which to insert.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: Quite right, Mr. Chairman, and I offer the following in lieu of the section, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 2. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the State, but shall at its first regular session provided by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the State at the general election then next ensuing, and the majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast, shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the State at the next general election.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of this section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I move to amend by inserting the following, "Provided that until the seat of government shall have been located as herein provided, the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of Bozeman."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move an amendment to the amendment by striking out the word "Bozeman" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "Butte City".

Mr. Clark, of Silver Bow: I second that motion.

The Chairman: The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow to strike out Bozeman and insert Butte City.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-eight in the affirmative to thirty-seven in the negative. (Applause in the galleries)

The Chairman: The question now is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin to insert Bozeman.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of thirty-six in the affirmative to twenty-one in the negative.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the section.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move the following amendment: Strike out in line three the word "permanent" and insert "temporary", and strike out in line four "majority" and insert "plurality"; so that at the first election we shall vote upon the temporary location of the seat of government.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I now renew my motion to adopt the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendment to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3 as follows: Section 3. When the seat of government shall have been located as herein provided, the location thereof shall not thereafter be changed, except by a vote of two-thirds of all the qualified electors of the State voting on that question at a general election, at which the question of the location of the seat of government shall have been submitted by the Legislative Assembly.

There being no amendment to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4, as follows: Section 4. The Legislative Assembly shall make no appropriations or expenditures for capital buildings or grounds until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided.

There being no amendment to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5, as follows: Section 5. The several counties of the State shall provide, as may be prescribed by law, for those inhabitants who, by reason of age, infirmity or other misfortune, may have claims upon the sympathy and aid of society.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I move that when the committee rise they report back Proposition No. 18 with the recommendation that as amended it do pass, and that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

The President in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reported to the President.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole desires a few minutes in which to make a report. If there be no objection the time will be granted.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Awaiting the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole I move that the convention take a recess of ten minutes.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess at 5:45 P. M., of ten minutes.

The convention was called to order at 5:55 by the President.

Mr. Hershfield sent up a report of the Committee of the Whole.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports as follows. The Clerk will read the report.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 48, General File No. 17, Article on State Institutions and Public Buildings, and beg leave to report the same back to the convention with the following amendments, which the committee recommend be adopted. Your committee would state that in the amendments offered references to numbers of lines and sections are to such as appear in the printed bill.

Amend Section 1 by inserting after the word "mute" in line two the words "soldiers' home".

Amend Section 2 to read as follows: Section 2. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the State but shall at its first regular session provide by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the State at the general election then next ensuing, and a majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election, the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the State at the next general election; provided, that until the seat of government shall have been permanently located it is herein provided that the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of Bozeman.

(Signed)

L. H. HERSHFIELD.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move the adoption of the report of the committee.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question is upon the amendment offered to Section 1.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 1 by inserting after the word "mute" the words "soldiers' home".

The Chair put the question on the said amendment and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read the substitute for Section 2 as reported by the committee.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention as to Section 2?

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I would move to strike out the word "Bozeman" and substitute in lieu thereof the words "Butte City".

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Is there a motion before the house?

The President: There is a motion before the house to adopt Section 2, followed by a motion to amend by striking out of the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole the word "Bozeman" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Butte". The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—39.

Paired: Joy, Muth—2.

Absent: Webster, Middleton—2.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to amend lost.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I move to amend the section as read by inserting the word "Anaconda" instead of Bozeman.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the convention take a recess until eight o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge to insert "Anaconda" in lieu of Bozeman.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Marrion, Marshall, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. Absent: Webster—1.

Paired: Joy, Muth—2.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge to amend as lost.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: I move that we now take a recess until eight o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Cardwell, of Jefferson: I renew my amendment that I sent up to the President's desk.

The President: That will be in order when the motion to take a recess is disposed of.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Parberry) that the convention take a recess until eight o'clock and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The gentleman from Jefferson offers an amendment as follows: Amend Section 2, line ten, by inserting "Boulder City" in place of "Bozeman".

Mr. Cardwell, of Jefferson: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Absent: Webster—1.

Paired: Joy, Muth—2.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Park lost.

The President: The following is offered by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Marrión.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I move, Mr. President, that we take a recess until eight o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the motion on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clark (Mr. Hershfield) and a division being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair desires to announce the following special committee on Warren's resolution relating to lead ores: Carpenter, J. K., Toole, Luce, Goddard, Conrad.

The convention took a recess until 8 P. M.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 7TH, 1889.

Evening Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 8 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marrión) moved to amend the section by striking out the word "Bozeman" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "Missoula." Is there a second to that motion?

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll:

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Browne, Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Courtney, Durfee, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Haskell, Hateli, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Maginnis, Marrión, Marshall, Mayger, Middleton, Mitchell, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Schmidt, Toole, J. K.; Toole, J. R.; Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—44.

Nays—Breen, Buford, Burleigh, Bullard, Burns, A. F.; Cauby, Cooper, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, McAdow, Myers, Rotwill, Sargent, Stapleton, Warren, Watson—27.

Paired—Joy, Muth—2.

Absent—Joyes, Webster—2.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marrión) adopted.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I have an amendment on the President's desk, the Chair will remember.

The President: The Chair has several amendments here that have been offered by gentlemen from various sections who favor the striking out and inserting. The convention has adopted "Missoula." No further amendment to strike "Missoula" and insert is in order. It cannot now be stricken out except by a reconsideration of the vote.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I ask if that same thing did not happen as to two or three other localities?

The President: The Chair would say to the gentleman from Custer that the other amendments were offered as amendments to the amendment proposed by the committee of the whole, and this amendment prevailed. It is equivalent to the adoption of the word "Missoula" to fill the blank. It can only be reached by a reconsideration.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I understand the rule to be that every section of the proposition is subject to amendment until placed on its final passage.

The President: The Chair would say to the gentleman that the convention, having adopted any proposition or resolution, cannot change it except by a reconsideration of the vote.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move to reconsider the vote by which the word "Bozeman" was stricken out and "Missoula" inserted.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask if the gentleman making the motion voted in the affirmative.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Yes, sir.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the vote to reconsider the motion by which "Bozeman" was stricken out and "Missoula" inserted by laid upon the table.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Does that not take the entire section with it?

The President: No, sir; the motion to lay upon the table and the motion to reconsider do not carry anything with them.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Kennedy) and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of twenty-five in the affirmative to thirty-five in the negative.

The President: The question is now to reconsider the vote by which "Bozeman" was stricken out and "Missoula" inserted.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: By leave of my second I withdraw the motion.

The President: The motion of the gentleman from Custer is withdrawn. The gentleman from Lewis and Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) offers to amend the section as follows:

The Clerk read: "I move to amend by striking out the proviso in Section 2."

The Clerk read the said proviso as follows: Provided that until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of Missoula.

The motion of the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I shall say a very few words upon it, but it seems to me unnecessary that that proviso should remain in the section. It adds nothing whatever to the power of the people of the state, and takes nothing away from them. It was stated this morning by the gentleman from Gallatin that it was necessary that the temporary capital be named in the constitution, but I think that view has been exploded. The gentleman from Silver Bow (Judge Knowles), while opposed to that view of the question, stated to the convention as his opinion, that the striking out of that section would leave Helena the permanent capital. This cannot be the fact under the law. The elimination of that section would leave Helena as it is today, the capital of the territory, subject to the amendment of the legislature and the people. It would be simply a temporary capital. It would not be the capital by virtue and by force of the constitution.

The President: Will the gentleman allow the Chair to interrupt him a moment? The gentleman referred to the striking out of the section; this refers to the striking out of the proviso.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Yes, sir. As I said that would not leave Helena the capital by virtue of any force applied to it if the constitution should be adopted, but simply by force of the statute which was passed in 1874 and in this very section it is provided in any event that there shall be submission of the question of the permanent capital to the people three years hence, as the amendment that it should be submitted at the first session of the legislature was adopted. The act of 1874 provided that the capitol should be located at Helena. If the constitution is adopted, operating upon that amendment would have the effect of leaving the capitol temporarily and only so long as the legislature or the people should favor its retention where it is. Now, Mr. President, the ground that the people of Helena have taken is, as I understand it, the location of the capitol is a question for the people. It never has been regarded simply a question for the legislature, because the legislature provides for its submission to the people. It has never been so regarded under the Organic Act. It is not regarded in any case as a constitutional question, and the view that we take of it is that the judgment of the people should be taken upon it, and that that judgment should be final, but that there should be no disposition of it without the expression of the popular will. Now the capitol is at Helena by force of the verdict of the people. The question as to its location in Helena was submitted to the people in 1874, and the people passed upon it. Now, the people having placed it temporarily in Helena we think that no body of men should undertake to remove it except through the authority of the people. (Applause in the galleries). We would ask now that the capitol remain where the people have placed it until the people by their vote say that it should be located somewhere else. Applause. That is somewhat of the claim that Helena makes. Now, that question of the location of the capitol when Helena was selected was submitted to the people as a separate and independent proposition. That is the only way that the judgment of the people could be passed upon it. It was not intertwined and intermixed with other questions. If the place is named in this constitution so that it goes into the body of the constitution for the expression of the popular will, the people will have no opportunity to pass separately upon that question. The alternative will be presented to them either excepting this proposition which they cannot vote separately upon and express their independent judgment upon, or reject the constitution that is offered. I take it that the people of this territory desire the constitution which they can adopt, and desire questions submitted to them in such a way that they can express their judgment in a proper way upon them. This question has not been agitated by the people at all. The people have been contented that the capitol should remain where they put it until so voted by their judgment and by their mind and the expression of their independent will to take it to some other place. If this capitol had been located at Missoula, or Anaconda, or Bozeman, or Butte, or any other place, I for one should have taken the position that if the people put it there it should stay there until the people by their will expressed on that one subject should decide that it should be removed to some other place. It seems to me that upon that question, which is always a question to be submitted to the people, there should be no desire to place the name of the capital in this constitution where it shall be fixed by the constitution itself, without any opportunity for the people to express their opinion upon it. Now, Mr. President, this question is a question of importance to the people. It is a question that should be considered with care and with deliberation. I impugn the motives of no man in this constitution. I assume that every man in this body has voted honestly and conscientiously upon this question and upon all others. There is no occasion for excitement; there is no occasion for undue haste; but this question ought to be considered carefully and with mature deliberation. I do not recognize the claims of any city or town in the territory to the capitol. Helena has no claim upon it in preference to any other place that I am aware of. Helena has no right to ask to be considered, nor has Anaconda, nor Butte, nor Bozeman. It is a question for the people to consider and it is not for any one place to claim the capitol or any other public building. It is a question of great importance to the people. The question is not whether Helena, or Bozeman, or Anaconda, or Butte, or Missoula or any other place shall be gratified by the capitol being located within the limits of one of those places, but whether the interests of the people of Montana shall be better subserved by its location in one place than in another. It is the people of Montana and their interests that alone are to be consulted and considered. We assert and we think it would be the judgment of the people that for their convenience Helena would be the most eligible place, but I may be mistaken as to what their opinion would be. It might be very different if the question were submitted to them again, but at all events we ought not to undertake to force upon the people anything that they have never expressed their desire for. There are reasons which I think are strong, showing that Helena is the most convenient place in the territory for the people. There are more interests and more diversity of interests here than anywhere else. No matter how many trains may leave Anaconda, it is not for the convenience of the people to go there, simply because people go to the capital not only because they have public business at the capital, but because they have some other business in connection with the public business; and we all know that there is scarcely a man in the territory, scarcely a sheep ranch or a cattle ranch or range but that people living in distant counties are interested with the people of Helena in the same enterprise. Now, Mr. President, these diversified interests, no particular one predominating, give a congenial atmosphere for the capital. It is not a place where only one enterprise exists, where only one genius presides, but here the diversity of interests is such that no legislature is liable improperly to be interested in favor of one branch of industry, in favor of one class of legislation, improperly against any other that would be entitled to its fair consideration. But I am not here to discuss the merits of Helena. I have lived in this city for five years, and I am proud to say that I never heard from a Helena man a word of opprobrium uttered against any sister city of Montana. (Applause). They have always spoken of Butte with pride and have delighted to recommend her to strangers traveling through the territory. They have written eulogiums upon her. In almost every letter they have written to the East or South they have spoken of the virtues and advantages of the territory. We recognize Butte as the greatest mining camp in the world, and the smoke from her camp fires is a constant reminder of her thrift and her industry. It is the same of Anaconda, which I believe we have all delighted to speak of as possessing the greatest smelter in the world, the largest single branch of industry in existence in that line at least, so, too, of our sister cities, Bozeman and Missoula. But it is not, as I have said, a question for Helena to try to decide, or for that matter any of these other cities. It is a question that the people are intensely interested in, and in regard to which their interests alone should be consulted. So I say we ought to leave this proviso out of the section—leave the matter where the people have left it until they choose their own time to express their will upon it and in favor of its removal, if they desire its removal. And whenever they do desire this removal nobody more heartily than I will join with them in effecting their purpose. (Applause).

Mr. Luce of Gallatin : I will not occupy the attention of this convention for any great length of time, but I take the same position that I did this morning, that unless some place is named as the temporary seat of government, that we will have none, notwithstanding the opinion of my learned friend who has just addressed the convention, and notwithstanding a contrary opinion from the other gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, whose opinions are entitled to a great deal of weight upon a constitutional or legal question. Now, sir, here is the only provision that we have in relation to the seat of government, and that relates entirely, as I said this morning, to the Territory of Montana and not to the State of Montana. It is Section first of this act of 1874. I have left my glasses at home and do not know whether I can see to read or not. (Reading). "Section 1. That the seat of government of the Territory of Montana be and the same is hereby changed from Virginia in the County of Madison, to the town of Helena in the County of Lewis & Clarke, upon approval hereof as herein provided." And the provision hereinafter which this section relates to is one that submits it to the people, and by a majority vote it should be changed—simply changed—from the city of Virginia to the town of Helena. There is nothing in this statute which provides how long it shall remain, or that it shall be the seat of government even, but it simply says that it shall be changed, and afterwards it provides that if the people by a majority vote, vote for the change, then the archives of the government shall be taken from the city of Virginia and brought to the town of Helena, and I understand that they were so taken, although our friends do claim that they were taken between two days, but however that may be, they were taken and brought here, and by a sort of common consent Helena has been the seat of government, that is all, so the people have got into the habit of coming here and attending the legislature; not that it is the seat of government except by virtue of this very section that I have read here that it should be changed. Now, then, that is the capital for the Territory of Montana. Where is the capital of the State of Montana? You may move it to Missoula so far as I care. If I go to the Supreme Court at Missoula my clients will pay my fare of course. (Laughter). And if I go to the legislature I will get mileage; but I undertook to say as a constitutional provision that this convention must name some temporary seat. Now, sir, it would appear from what the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke presents to this convention that this is a permanent arrangement. Why, they say this is a matter that the people should have something to say about. In the name of God, have the people in Montana, as they now exist, ever said that this capital should remain in Helena? Not once. I will call the attention of this convention to one provision in the constitution of Illinois—the first constitution formed under the Enabling Act—and I suppose if we would make a little further search we could find any number of cases of this kind. It provides in so many words: "The seat of government for the state shall be Kaskaskia until the general assembly shall otherwise provide." Those people of Illinois, old Ab. Lincoln and all those fellows who helped frame that constitution, they knew something. They knew it was necessary in order to have a seat of government that it should name the place; and I say that if this convention adjourns without naming some place for the temporary seat of government, notwithstanding this opinion of my learned friend, the State of Montana will have no seat of government, and the gentlemen who are elected to the legislature, part of them may take their carpet bags and go over to Missoula and part of them to Anaconda and the balance of them down to Bozeman, and they will never know where they ought to gather together or where they are expected to go to. There will be no place for the Supreme Court, except they should gravitate to Helena by a sort of habit they have had ever since 1874 when the capitol was taken from the city of Virginia and brought to the town of Helena. Laughter and applause. Now, I have no hardness in my heart towards Helena. As I said this morning, I like her. She is a big thing in the eyes of her own people; she is a tremendous thing if the feet in the gallery are any indication. Demonstrations in the gallery. My views concur with those of Judge Knowles and Judge Dixon upon this point. We should have a seat of government, and we have not organized a government until we have named one. Now, you may name any place that you please—name Helena. Let it remain in Helena if you like. Name Missoula; name Anaconda; name Wilder's Landing or any other place, but for Heaven's sake name something and let us have a seat of government and a state organization, and not trifle with this matter as it appears to be the intention of some gentlemen upon this floor—and I impune nobody's motives; of course I believe everybody is as honest as I am; if he is not, God help him. Laughter. I say in all sincerity of heart, they have knocked out this little jewel of mine in Gallatin Valley—this little city, located in a beautiful valley that my friend Martin Maginnis was down there one time giving us taffy, gave us to understand was an emerald gem set in those blue mountains; and as another distinguished gentleman, the Right Reverend Robert G. Ingersoll said about it "My God, what a beautiful place it is! It is a dimple in the cheek of Nature." But you have slighted it. Laughter. You have taken the capital now over to Missoula to the home of my friend, Mr. Bickford, and of my friend over there, Mr. Marshall, and I am contented to let it remain if it suits the convenience of this convention to do so. But I say you must have some place for the capital of the State.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: The seat of government when this State is formed will be and must be fixed by virtue of some clause in this constitution. Whether the provision which will probably be offered that all the laws existing in the Territory and in force in the Territory at the time it is admitted as a State into the Union as continued in force in the Territory will continue in force, the law that made Helena the capital of the Territory, or not, is a question that I do not propose to discuss. That has been discussed by Mr. Dixon and Judge Knowles, but unless that is in it, there can be no question about the matter. I think that the gentlemen will admit that the last clause in the twenty-fourth section of the Enabling Act is an absolute nullity, Congress cannot adopt a code of laws for the State of Montana. Congress saying that the laws heretofore in force in the Territory of Montana shall continue in force after it becomes a State, in my judgment, is a nullity. Congress can no more adopt a code of laws for the State of Montana than it can for the State of Minnesota or any other State. It cannot provide what laws shall be in force in Montana, and I say that the provision of the twenty-fourth section which says that the laws of the Territory of Montana shall continue in force until changed by the Legislature is an absolute nullity.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: If this constitutional convention meets under and by virtue of the Enabling Act, then as the constitutional convention it has the power to repeal an act of the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Marshall, of Missoula: This convention meets under the power granted by the Enabling Act; the Legislature of the State of Montana will meet under the power granted by the constitution that we send to the people and they adopt. That is true; there is no question about it in my mind; and that clause of the Enabling Act of Congress that applies to what shall be the law of the State of Montana is an absolute nullity and of no force. Then and now there is no law in existence that places Helena in any other position than that occupied by any other town or city in the Territory of Montana, and I do not believe that even if the constitution adopt a general provision that the laws of the Territory in force at the time of the adoption of the constitution should continue in force in the State of Montana, that it would place the capital at the city of Helena. The law of the Territory had nothing to do—no reference to the capital of the State of Montana. It fixes the capital for the Territory of Montana. There has been no capital fixed for the State of Montana. My judgment is that the city of Helena stands precisely upon the same footing that any city or town in the State of Montana stands, and it will be by virtue of some provision of this constitution that the capital will be at Helena if it is here; and this convention has the same power and the question is just as clearly presented as between Helena and Butte and Anaconda and Missoula and Bozeman as it would be if the capital was not at Helena today. Now, I think those are propositions of law that will be agreed to by legal gentlemen in this House. It seems to me that nobody will contend that Congress of the United States has a right to provide a code of laws for the State of Montana; I do not think it has, and I do know the provision of the twenty-fourth section of the Enabling Act which says that the laws of the Territory in force at the time the State is admitted into the Union shall continue in force until repealed by the Legislature is an absolute nullity. This constitution can say that and probably will say it, except so far as it is in conflict with the provisions of the constitution itself and with the constitution of the United States. Even if it asserts in general terms that fact as was argued by Judge Knowles and Mr. Dixon, I do not believe it would fix the capital at the city of Helena, because there is no law in force in the Territory now that fixes the capital of the State of Montana anywhere or has any reference to it. And I do contend that the city of Helena stands exactly in the same position that every other town and city in the State of Montana or the Territory of Montana stands.

Mr. Carpenter, of Lewis & Clarke: I will say one word. This act of 1874 fixes the capital at Helena. The capital is here, or the seat of government is here, by virtue of that act. Now, the act of Congress was "And all laws in force made by said Territories at the time of their admission into the Union shall be in force in said States, except as modified by this act." That is the law under which we meet as a constitutional convention. We accept the conditions of this Enabling Act when we do meet. Congress had a right to prescribe any conditions it chose. That is one of them. If the gentleman from Missoula is correct, as soon as this constitution is adopted, until the Legislature meet and enact a code of laws we would be without law in this Territory. This would be construed by any court of competent jurisdiction to mean that the laws of the Territory should be the laws of the State, and they would be whether we put in our schedule any provision or not, until they were altered or repealed by the Legislature. That is one of the provisions under which we frame this constitution. And under the force of this provision the laws would exist and be continued the same as if in all our statutes. Otherwise there would be no law to prevent crime. Murder would be rampant within the Territory. Any other construction would leave us in a state of anarchy, and this construction is reasonable and it is a construction that cannot be removed by the courts. (Applause)

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I agree with the distinguished gentleman from Missoula that that provision in the Enabling Act that provides that the laws of Montana Territory shall be in force in the State of Montana is an unconstitutional provision in that Enabling Act. The Congress has no constitutional authority to provide a code of laws for the State of Montana. It could provide a code of laws for the Territory, but when we come to be a State we have got to provide a code of laws for our municipal regulations ourselves. I do not think there can be any doubt about that. For the gentleman to say that we accept this State government under the condition that is prescribed in the Enabling Act, and to say that where there is an unconstitutional provision in that act that we have got to accept that, too, it cannot be. We accept only in that Enabling Act what Congress may lawfully and legitimately do. What power have they in the matter of the legislation upon that subject we have got to accept? We can accept nothing further than that.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Do we state we form our government, too?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Yes sir; we say we form our State government, I know, that is we say we are grateful to Almighty God for liberty, and I am somewhat doubtful whether some gentlemen here are, and that in accordance with the provision of the Organic Act we establish this constitution. And I have contended and other gentlemen have contended all the way through that we do not establish this—that that is a mere waste of paper; that it does not amount to anything whatever. To say that we could take an unconstitutional act of the Congress of the United States and galvanize it into life by our act is preposterous. I will ask the distinguished gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Governor Carpenter, whether the Legislature of Montana or this constitutional convention, or any body of people in Montana Territory can make an unconstitutional law constitutional. It is impossible to do so. There is no power given. It is like asking a blind man to see, a man without feet to walk. It cannot be done. Now, as to this question of capital. The question of the capital is this: If we do not establish the capital but do provide as we will in this constitution that all of the laws of Montana Territory shall be in force in the State of Montana, and we turn around then and say that wherever the word "Territory" is used or "Territory of Montana" is used that there shall be substituted the word "State" or the words "State of Montana". Then by virtue of this convention and this constitution the people will adopt these statutes of Montana Territory. The people in voting upon this question will adopt these laws. Why, the gentlemen say that we cannot legislate, that this convention cannot legislate and yet they are legislating every day. They are providing a code of laws for corporations here similar to what is provided in our statute. They have provided for a great many things here that are pure, simple legislation, for instance, that all the county officers of a county shall hold their office at the county seat of the county—a matter of pure legislation—no fundamental law in it. Now, coming back to this proposition that we adopt these laws by virtue of that, then I say that if the laws of Montana Territory establish the capital at Helena, and we then change that law so that it shall read "State" or "State of Montana" instead of "Territory" or "Territory of Montana", that we would establish by virtue of that provision the capital at Helena, and we would provide for that by statute. That would be a statute and we would adopt it, and that statute that we would adopt that makes the capital at Helena does not provide that it shall be a temporary capital. It provides for it there as a permanent capital. There is nothing said in the statute about its being a temporary capital whatever. Now, the gentlemen say, "Oh, but here is this very provision that you are acting upon, and that provides that the Legislature shall do a certain thing", and the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. J. K. Toole, and the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, have spoken upon that and they have shown that supposing the Legislature does not act, what will be done? The courts cannot mandamus them and compel them to act and then the plea would be made if they do not act just exactly as the gentlemen have provided here, "Why, there is no demand on the part of the people of Montana for you to act, you have not been elected upon that issue whatever; that question was not put in the platform of your county convention; you were not elected upon that." And the capital would remain here under and by virtue of that statute. We would adopt that statute in our constitution. Now, that is the position that I take in this matter, and that to strike out that proviso is just saying that we establish the capital at Helena until such time as the Legislature that shall meet in Helena and be subject to the glories and the dominion of the people of this place, shall see fit to provide a law upon this matter to be submitted to the people.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: Would not it be that way if you inserted any town?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: Yes sir; it would be just exactly that way.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Would it not be that way in all the Territories?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: I believe the other Territories that are acting in this manner actually provide in their constitution not only for the capital, but they are providing for all of these other institutions, deaf and dumb asylum, insane asylum, etc., and putting them all before the people to vote upon. I understand that some of them are doing it. But of course there should be a provision that that statute should provide in such a way that it would not be left to the Legislature at all to say, but that the constitution itself would provide that at a certain time, say 1892, this matter should be submitted to the people directly and not through the Legislature. But I am making an argument as to what would be the result of this matter if that proviso was stricken out. It would leave it to Helena, and leave it to Helena indefinitely, so far as the law is concerned; and that is just exactly what these gentlemen who are advocating the cause of their town so gallantly desire; and I hope that I have been understood about this matter now—that is, to strike out this proviso and leave it, and then adopt all the laws of Montana Territory by striking out the word "Territory" wherever it occurs and inserting the word "State", would leave that statute in force providing for the capital here. Now, in relation to the terms of that statute, they are not falsities, but undoubtedly the intention was to establish the capital at Helena. The statute has received that construction, and whatever might be thought now as to the wording of that statute any court in the country would say that by virtue of that statute and the construction that has been put upon it the capital was located at Helena and that that is the seat of government of the Territory, and when you strike out the word "Territory" and put in the word "State" you have located the capital permanently at Helena.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I shall not attempt to touch on any legal aspect of the question before us. I do not feel myself competent to discuss these mandamuses and other features of the case. Several of us have heard mandamus hurled at us now until we are almost frightened out of our wits; but I do want to raise, and I think I can raise, a very pertinent question at this point of the discussion—I want to know why the constitutional convention of 1884 did ingraft in the constitution presented to the people the same proviso that we are considering here tonight, and which this amendment proposes to strike out?

Mr. Hershfield, of Lewis & Clarke: Because we were acting without authority from the United States government.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I cannot hear you. I suppose the question might be raised that the people passed upon this. True they did, but I raise again the pertinent inquiry, if it is unconstitutional now, or if it is unnecessary now, why was it not as unconstitutional and as unnecessary then? The constitutional convention of 1884 did ingraft this same proposition, this same proviso, the only difference being that the word "Helena" was then inserted, and Helena's ox was not gored. Now, Mr. President, I think that every member of this constitutional convention understands the object of this amendment. It is simply to strike out every other amendment that has been before us and leave it just where they want it left—just where the movers of this proposition want it left—at Helena. Now, I confess to you and I confess to this body that if that is the judgment of this convention I acquiesce; but I do not think it altogether proper and right. I say this without any disrespect. I say it without any ill feeling, that this question should be raised as to whether it is the province of this constitutional convention to put in this proviso. I say if it was competent and right in 1884, it is equally competent and right to insert it here in 1889, if not, why not?

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I have only a word to say in addition to what I said today upon this matter. The gentleman from Silver Bow who has just taken his seat says that he thinks he understands what is intended by this amendment that it is to strike out in order that the seat of government may remain at Helena. That is exactly my understanding and I trust that there will be no mistake made by any gentleman of the convention. It is not designed as I know by the mover of this, my colleague, Mr. Maginnis, that any snap judgment is sought to be taken on any members of this convention, but that they may thoroughly understand that if this provision is stricken out that the city of Helena will remain the temporary capital of the State of Montana; and it is with this view that this proposition was presented at this time in order that we might get a final fair expression of the sentiment of this convention as between the city of Helena and the town of Missoula. What has been said, so well and plainly said, by the gentleman from Missoula, Judge Marshall, and the gentleman from Silver Bow, Judge Knowles, with respect to the authority of Congress to interfere in this matter, I do not intend at this late hour to discuss; but what matter which horn of the dilemma we take, whether we say that the Congress of the United States has not the power to impose upon the state laws which they have not recognized, or whether we say that the ordinance which we shall provide shall say that these laws shall be in force. If it is the deliberate judgment of this convention after all that has been said and done, that as between the city of Helena and the town of Missoula the city of Helena shall remain the temporary seat of government, we are not remitted to the act of Congress which imposes its legislation upon us, but by the ordinance which shall be prepared under the supervision and care and skill of the gentleman from Silver Bow, we may say that the laws of the Territory shall be in force and thereby recognized what will be the act of this convention. Now, I take it while I stand upon the general principle today and agree with Judge Whitehill that the insertion of the provision into this constitution that the Legislative Assembly shall do a certain act would be nugatory if the Legislature was disposed to disregard it—in other words, that the Judiciary Department of the government could not control the Legislature and compel us to pass a law—nevertheless I believe with my friend from Deer Lodge, Judge Whitehill, that if any Legislative Assembly should meet in this Territory or in the State of Montana to legislate under the power created by this constitution, and should openly defy public sentiment, defy a provision in this constitution that says that you shall submit this proposition to the popular will of this country, that the men who opposed it and those wilfully and deliberately violating the provisions of this constitution would bring upon themselves the condemnation of this people from which they would never rise. Applause. There is no danger from precedent but that if we put in this a provision that the Legislative Assembly shall at its first session submit this question to the popular will, there is no danger that it will not be submitted. How to obviate this difficulty and to relieve gentlemen from submitting to an authority to which they do not wish to submit, let us provide by the ordinance which shall be the last thing which shall be brought in and submitted to this convention—let us provide by that that the laws of the Territory shall be in force until they are changed by the Legislature of the State. When that is done we have covered and obviated everything.

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I have just one remark to make further. I do not wish to be on my feet all the time boring this convention but I take notice that the gentleman who was last upon the floor seems to have gone back upon his own selection. I take notice that the gentlemen from Lewis & Clarke County have aided almost unanimously in locating the capital temporarily at Missoula. I have been in the town of Missoula. I have seen that other dimple in the cheek of nature. Now, then, if the people of Lewis & Clarke County want the capital temporarily at Missoula they have voted it there, and I am willing that it should remain. That is their own work and they should not undertake now in this manner to undo it. They told this convention, now you have your choice between striking out this proviso and letting the capital remain in Helena or going over to the town of Missoula. That is their own work, gentlemen of the convention; let it stand. Helena has only ninety-eight miles the advantage of myself. I will get to Missoula and when you get there you will get into a town of good hotels, of generous people and enterprising people, and a prettier place you will not find in the Territory of Montana—except Bozeman. (Laughter) That has been the deliberate judgment I say—and I appeal to the ayes and nays of this convention of the gentlemen from Lewis & Clarke—that this capital shall go temporarily to Missoula. It could not go to a better place except so far as the geographical situation is concerned, but that makes but little difference, you know that the boys that get elected to the Legislature get mileage. Let the capital remain where Helena has placed it. Take Helena at her own word. I will stay with Helena. (Laughter) I have been with you Helena all day. I have the best of you. I will stay with you now.

The Chair stated the question which was on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) to strike out the proviso in Section 2.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge, called for the ayes and nays on the question.

The Clerk called the roll as far as the name of Mr. Joy, of Park.

Mr. Joy, of Park: I would like to explain to the convention that my pair was not with Mr. Muth. It was based upon the understanding that he was to vote first, last and all the time for Helena for the capital while I was to vote with the same regularity and proposition for Anaconda; that was the extent of the pair that we were to vote on opposite sides. Since that time I have changed my proposition and I now desire to vote in favor of Helena. I desire to say, Mr. President, that it won't be questioned by any member of this convention that Mr. Muth if he were present would vote in favor of Helena on this proposition, and knowing that I desire to vote the same way, I feel that it would be no prejudice of faith on my part of which Mr. Muth could complain; not only that, but it would be an act that Mr. Muth would be glad to hear of; he would be satisfied, I think. He would hold me to no account for it, and certainly no other person could complain; and I ask, Mr. President, that the pair be declared off and that I be allowed to vote.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I understand that Mr. Muth also paired with another gentleman, a member of this convention. (Laughter) I object.

Mr. Maginnis, of Lewis & Clarke: The matter of pairs of course always depends upon a man's own sense of honor and feeling. The gentleman of Park has made a very proper statement of the case and if Mr. Muth has paired with any other gentleman upon this question, and the gentleman from Park is no longer paired with him, it is eminently right and proper that he should be allowed to vote.

The Clerk finished the roll call.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Gardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Craven, Eaton, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hobson, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Mayger, Middleton, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson, Witter—34.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Maginnis, Marston, Marshall, McAdow, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—39.

Absent: Muth, Webster—2.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to strike out lost.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of forty in the affirmative to twenty-five in the negative.

The convention stood adjourned until Thursday, August eighth, 1889, at 10 A. M.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

Thursday, August 8th, 1889. Morning Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Dr. Bullard, of Jefferson, desired to be excused for the day. If there be no objection leave of absence will be granted.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: I learned that a member of this constitutional convention met with an accident this morning which may detain him some time. I refer to Mr. Durfee of Deer Lodge County. I request that leave of absence be granted in his behalf.

The President: If there be no objection leave of absence will be granted the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

The President: The Chair would ask if the select committee appointed on the resolution offered by Mr. Bickford, of Missoula, is ready to report?

Mr. Knowles, of Silver Bow: That matter has shaped itself in such a way that the committee desire to ask for further time.

The President: If there be no objection, further time in which to report will be granted the Chairman of the committee.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher, sent up a substitute for Section 2, Proposition No. 48.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I would say that this article that we were discussing yesterday comes up under the head of unfinished business and that the substitute of the gentleman from Meagher is not in order at this time.

The President: The Chair is not advised as to the nature of the substitute. The order of business calls for propositions and resolutions relating to the constitution.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: The Clerk will read the proposition for information.

Mr. Kennedy, of Missoula: I will ask the gentleman from Meagher if this is a proposition relating to a resolution to be ingrafted in the constitution? I understood the Clerk to say that it was a substitute for Section 2 of the article that we had under consideration yesterday.

The President: If it is intended that this shall be referred to a committee, it will be in order, but if it is to be considered by the convention it is not in order at the present time.

Mr. Eaton, of Park: Do I understand the Chair to rule that a substitute for Section 2 is not in order?

The President: We have not reached that point in the order of business yet. The order of business now is the introduction of resolutions and propositions relating to the constitution—resolutions and propositions that are to be ingrafted in the constitution and referred to committees. If there are no propositions or resolutions to be offered the order of business will then be unfinished business. Under that head the Clerk will now read the substitute.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out of Proposition No. 18, Sections 2 and 4, and insert the following as a substitute therefor to be numbered 2, and renumber Section 5 as No. 4.

The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the State, but shall at its second regular session after the adoption of this constitution provide by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the State at a special election in October then next ensuing, and a majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the State at the next general election; and until the permanent seat of government shall have been located permanently the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the present seat of government of the Territory; but no liability shall be incurred by the State for the purchase, erection or rent of any building for temporary legislative purposes, nor shall the Legislative Assembly make any appropriations or expenditures for capital buildings or grounds until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of that substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the substitute for Section 2 and 4 of Proposition No. 18 offered by the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Parberry) be adopted.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I move to amend the motion by laying it on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren).

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: While I am not in favor of this proposition, I do not understand it as a resolution, as I understand Mr. Parberry's motion it was to strike out Section 2 and 4 and substitute this.

The President: It is an amendment to the proposition. The motion has been to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: I would inquire of the Chair if that would carry the entire section?

The President: Yes sir.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Then I withdraw the motion. I move that the consideration of this amendment be indefinitely postponed.

The motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: I suppose this matter is debatable now. I have said nothing on this subject. I was away yesterday afternoon and did not have an opportunity of hearing the different speeches that were made in the forenoon, but I think we have rolled this government wagon around long enough to get it into a place where we ought to call a halt and come to some decision. We all know very well that it is not the wish of a majority of the people of Montana that the temporary seat of government should be at the extreme western portion of the Territory -- at Missoula. We all know that. The people all know it. The people of Missoula do not really expect it, but they have rolled the wagon around until they have got it into a mud hole--in mired ground. I know that we have many reasons why White Sulphur Springs is a preferable place for the seat of government to many other places. But I know that the people would not locate it over there, so there is no use of mentioning them. I listened to discourses from gentlemen in regard to the beautiful fields, the clear brooks, the fragrant flowers and charming scenery of the Gallatin valley. That is all nice enough to listen to. I have heard them speak of the tall mountains capped with snow which is refreshing to the wearied eye of the hard worked legislators, nice to listen to. I heard the gentlemen speak of the merits of Silver Bow, of Butte City, and I was thinking at the time that the courts had decided that a woman was a thing and arsenical fumes had settled upon the thing and made her a beautiful thing for the legislator to look upon and therefore the temporary capital ought to be located over there. But what do the people who pay the taxes and support the government think about these things. They want them to get right down to solid business, and as a business proposition Helena certainly is the place where we ought to locate this seat of government temporarily. It is provided in that substitute that we shall not incur any expense. Now, I have not consulted a single delegate from Lewis & Clarke County in regard to that, neither have I asked a delegate from Lewis & Clarke whether they would support that measure or not; but there are great advantages to be derived from the temporary advantages of the seat of government and I take it for granted that if the delegates here in this convention assembled endorse that proposition they endorse it for the people and that there will be no expense incurred to the State in the shape of rents for office and House here during the temporary location of the government.

Mr. Rickards, of Silver Bow: Board, too? (Laughter.)

Mr. Parberry, of Meagher: No, not board, just in the shape of rent. But I think it is much better to have a special election to locate the permanent seat of government. There is no swapping and trading of votes. It is of very great importance that we select the proper place and postpone it until we can build a capitol building that is in accordance with the wants, the conditions and prosperity of the State, and it ought to be postponed for some little time. So far as the little feeling that was gotten up by my friends that live a little further east yesterday in regard to the votes that were cast by the delegates from Lewis & Clarke, I have only to say that the delegates from Lewis & Clarke did just as they would have done under similar circumstances. It was a parliamentary necessity for the delegates from Lewis & Clarke to vote for Missoula. The wagon was mired in Bozeman and they could not get it away in any other way. They could not vote directly upon the temporary seat of government here and they were in the fix that the man that came home late at night drunk was not. His wife hollered out to him in a fit of bad humor "Why don't you come to bed?" And he said "Hie, wait until I can come around again." (Laughter.) Now, they had to wait until it came around again. Our friends ought not to feel hard towards Lewis & Clarke at all, and I hope that we will come to some decision this morning and settle this business, and let us go home. Yesterday cost five hundred dollars. That is a pretty expensive bill of fare, and while we can indulge in a little extravagance of that kind for a little while, it is not a bill that the people who pay the taxes of this Territory would like to put up for.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I would like to ask if that substitute is not so worded that there would be no expenditure even for renting purposes. Now, I should not like to have the Legislature come over here to Helena and be herded out here on the prairies. It would make a very short session of the matter, and they would elect a couple of senators and go home; and I do not think we ought to put the young State of Montana in that condition. They cannot even rent any buildings.

The Clerk read the substitute of the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Parberry) for the information of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out of that part of it the words "but the State shall incur no liability" etc.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: As I understand the substitute the motion is not in order now, and I move you that we indefinitely postpone the motion.

The President: The gentleman is wrong. The question to indefinitely postpone is of the lowest rank, and a motion to amend takes precedence, hence the motion to amend is in order.

Mr. Goddard, of Yellowstone: I do not understand why it would be proper to strike out the provision there in relation to the erection of public buildings inasmuch as I do not believe it would be possible to rent permanent buildings until the capital is definitely located. I would be in favor of striking out that portion in relation to the rent unless the gentlemen from Lewis & Clarke County will tender the Courthouse free of rent.

Mr. Bickford, of Missoula: Striking out the two words "or rent" in the latter part of the section would leave the section exactly as it should be. The intention evidently is that there should be no money paid out for buildings of a permanent nature, and by striking out the words "or rent" it leaves the section as it originally is.

Mr. Hartman, of Gallatin: I rise to a point of order on the question of the consideration of this substitute. On yesterday the city of Helena was voted down as the capital. And now the same matter is brought up only in different words—that it shall remain and be at the seat of government. The present seat of government is Helena. I understood that no play of words could possibly bring it before the convention again.

The President: It comprises matter different from the question of the capital. There are other considerations. If it involves other considerations which would make the proposition substantially different it is in order. The Clerk will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. J. K. Toole.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: I have accepted the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford.

The Clerk read as follows: "And until the permanent seat of government shall have been located permanently, the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the temporary seat of government of the Territory; but no liability shall be incurred by the State for the purchase or erection of any building for temporary legislative purposes."

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Is a motion to amend in order?

The President: A motion to amend is in order.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge offers an amendment. The Clerk will read the same.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out the words "the present seat of government of the Territory" and insert the word "Anaconda."

The President: Is there a second to the motion.

Mr. Collins, of Cascade: So as to meet to a certain extent the views of the gentleman from Silver Bow, I move we postpone the matter until next Monday. We cannot postpone it indefinitely.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: Does not a motion to amend take precedence of a motion to postpone?

The President: No sir; a motion to postpone to a day certain takes precedence of a motion to amend.

The motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the consideration of this amendment and of all matters pertaining thereto be deferred until Monday next.

Mr. Warren, of Silver Bow: It strikes me that now this row is up, we might just as well settle it here now as to postpone it.

The President: The Chair will state the question and then the gentlemen will have the floor. The question is upon the further postponement of the consideration of this amendment and all matters pertaining thereto.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: As this discussion is now open it might just as well be fought to a finish. There seems to be a sentiment not only among the members of this convention but among the people of Montana that a time has come for a change in the seat of government. There seems to be no question about that. Whether or not that seat of government goes to Missoula, Bozeman or Great Falls, I care not, but it seems to me that the matter ought to be settled here now. If it remains here in Helena that is all right, and we have no fault to find, but if you postpone it until Monday you will only renew it then, and it strikes me that we should settle it now.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge: I certainly am in accord with the gentleman from Silver Bow. It is a harrassing and annoying thing to have this matter still pending, with a consequent loss of time, and perhaps a little irritation that comes in connection with it; but it seems to me that the wise policy is to settle the matter one way or the other today. Our business will be retarded to a certain extent, for this will occupy a position uppermost in the minds of the convention for the coming week, and if we dispose of it now we will go on and finish the work that we came here to do. We are in just as good position today for settling this matter as at any time. I believe the matter has been thoroughly canvassed and whatever will be the result we are willing to abide by it. It is only a temporary arrangement; it is not a permanent thing. It is a matter of generous rivalry. It is a gratifying thing that there are so many who are generous and competent rivals in the race for this temporary location of the capital. It makes no money for anybody, but it is a commendable spirit on the part of citizens who are able to lay the claims of their respective localities before the convention. Evidently the sovereign voice of the people will settle the matter, and why not go on and settle the matter today as to the temporary location of the capital and be done with it, and let all abide the result good naturedly without any feeling. I have no occasion for hard feelings. Listening to some of the remarks yesterday I was somewhat surprised and astonished that old scores were raked up that occurred twenty years ago. I say in behalf of my city that there is nothing of that kind; we have none of it. We come in on our merits only I stand here and say to this convention that if we did not have supreme and superior merits that I would not press our claims. I am willing to abide by the result of the convention, and I hope the matter will be settled today.

Mr. Rickford, of Missoula: At the commencement of the discussion relative to the temporary location of the capital I was firmly impressed with the idea that this convention should take no step tending to move the capital or its present location. I believe that the will of the people, if it could be expressed by their votes, would show that Helena should remain the capital of the Territory until it should be permanently fixed by a vote of the people themselves. Since that time there have been various motions made in regard to the capital, and by a vote of the convention the town of Helena was defeated for the temporary capital. Other towns came into the race and among them the town of Missoula was mentioned by one of our delegation. In regard to the town of Missoula I would say to those who are not acquainted with her surroundings that it is a town which now has in the neighborhood of four thousand inhabitants. It is located at a place where the capital can be conveniently taken care of for the time being at least. The location of the town is such as to render it a healthful one. It is supplied with the purest of water. The location is as pretty perhaps as the town of Bozeman mentioned by my friend yesterday in his argument in favor of that town. Not only is that true but we have all the buildings, all the conveniences necessary for entertaining the members of the Legislature and the members of the Supreme Court. All the State officers could find ample accommodations in Missoula. It is a town which will never be incompetent for the permanent location of the capital. If by a vote of this convention it is determined to place the temporary capital at the town of Missoula, the members of this convention can rest assured that when the time comes for moving the capital to some other place that the people of Missoula will join heart and hand with those who desire to move it to some more central location. We should esteem it a great honor, one of which we would be ineliminably proud, if the temporary location of the capital was fixed at the town of Missoula. You start in with a location that is as good as any perhaps in the Territory. Starting in at this hour of the race with other competitors out of the race I say that so far as any other town is concerned Missoula has more claims as a pleasant location and as possessing good accommodations for the capital than any other town remaining in the Territory. We believe that we could take care of the people that come there to make our laws, and a telegram has just been shown me from many of the prominent business men of Missoula which says that every facility, every courtesy will be extended if the temporary capital is located at that place. There can be no question at this stage of the proceedings but that it would be unwise to continue the discussion as has been well said by the gentleman who offered the amendment, we spent on yesterday five hundred dollars of money in discussing the question as to the temporary location of the capital. I say, sir, that we should proceed to business. We should proceed at once and finish this discussion—not delay until next Monday, not allow it to be resting upon the minds of the members of this convention to distract their minds from other and needful work, but let us proceed at once to finish up the work. Let us do it this morning; and if Missoula is the choice of this convention for the temporary location of the capital the members of the convention and the people of the Territory of Montana can rest assured that they make no mistake when they choose the little town of Missoula. The location—everything—is as pleasant as any other town in the Territory, and while Butte and Anaconda, while Helena and Bozeman have their claims upon the people of Montana for the temporary location of the capital, this modest town has never asked anything from the Territory, has never asked anything from the government of the United States except the establishment of a military post to protect them from the Indians. This town always was loath to present any claims to the people because of the fact that it was somewhat away from the centers of population. Now, we are on the main line of travel, we are on a transcontinental route with the prospect of numerous other railroads; with the prospect that we shall be on one other transcontinental route. These prospects are such that we can speak with a degree of certainty as to their materializing in the near future. We can assure the people that they will be there almost immediately. Missoula is easy of access because it is central to every part of the western side of the Territory and is only a few miles further than Helena when one is once upon the train going to his destination. I say that Missoula has a modest claim to the temporary location of the capital. We have everything to offer and I can assure the members of this convention that we shall esteem it a very great honor if the temporary capital is located with us.

The President: The question is upon the motion to postpone until Monday.

Mr. J. R. Toole, of Deer Lodge, called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. It includes that portion of the proposition regarding the capital.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Cardwell of Jefferson: Mr. Durfee being away requested that I should pair with him.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Brown, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Gibson, Gillette, Graves, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, Middleton, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson—30.

Nays—Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Courtney, Dixon, Dyer, Gaylord, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—38.

Absent—Burns, Edward; Muth, Webster—3.

Paired—Cardwell and Durfee; Fields and Bullard—4.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) to postpone consideration of proposition No. 18 with the amendments until Monday, lost.

The President: The question now recurs on the amendment of the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. J. R. Toole) to strike out the words "the present seat of government of the territory."

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: On that I call for ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll until the name of Mr. Fields of Park was reached.

Mr. Fields of Park: I wish to explain my position. Mr. Bullard of Jefferson is in favor of Helena and as long as Helena is not in the field in this vote I do not think I am bound by the pledge to vote in that respect. It is a vote between Anaconda and Missoula.

The President: This is a vote to strike out the temporary seat of government, which I understand is Helena, and insert in lieu thereof "Anaconda."

Mr. Fields of Park: Very well, then I will pair.

Mr. Joy of Park: In view of the understanding with Mr. Muth, I should declare to pair on this proposition.

The gentleman: The gentleman considers himself paired with Mr. Muth on this question.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask in this connection if there was not someone else who rose to his feet and announced that he was paired with Mr. Muth.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: There seems to be some misunderstanding about this matter. Saturday morning just after the adjournment of this convention Mr. Muth asked me if I would pair with him. I told him that I thought it might not be well to pair because we might want to vote on the same proposition, and as I expected to be here and he expected to be absent, that it might not be well to do this. He telegraphed me Saturday morning and I got his telegram in the afternoon. His telegram said "Will pair with you on capital question." I telegraphed to him that I would pair with him. Yesterday morning before any vote took place Mr. Fields, who I believe will corroborate me in this statement, told me that on the depot platform at Livingston he heard Mr. Muth and Mr. Joy pair on the capital question. Of course, if he was paired with Mr. Joy he could not pair with me, and I did not know whether he got my telegram. I therefore telegraphed Mr. Joy. When he came here I asked Mr. Joy if he was paired with Mr. Muth. He said yes, he was. I told him then that I would consider myself released, and I told him Mr. Muth might not have gotten my telegram. When Mr. Joy got up and said he was paired with Mr. Muth I did not consider it was necessary for me to make any statement at all, and in view of the fact that Mr. Fields had heard this conversation between Mr. Muth and Mr. Joy I considered myself personally released.

The President: If the gentleman will allow the Chair to interrupt him I will read a telegram that may explain this matter. The telegram reads: "Livingston, August 4th. Winston pairs me on capital; Joy on legislative."

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: There is some mistake then, Mr. President. I want to act fairly in this matter, and have no desire to act in any other way. Mr. Muth could not pair with both, and I would not consider this paired with him. If the gentleman from Park is not paired with him I will pair with Mr. Muth. He has stated on the floor of the convention that he was paired with him. Mr. Fields will state to the convention exactly what he stated to me. I think there is a misunderstanding somewhere.

The President: It seems that Mr. Muth considers he is paired with Mr. Joy on the legislative question. He states that he is paired with you on the capital question and with Mr. Joy on the legislative matter.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: Mr. Joy himself stated here yesterday that he was paired with him on the capital question.

Mr. Fields of Park: The conversation was on the platform just before he was taking the train for the Park, and the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Goddard) was in our company. The conversation that I overheard was not between Mr. Joy and Mr. Muth but Mr. Muth told me that morning that he had paired with Mr. Joy, and on Sunday afternoon in conversation with Mr. Joy, Mr. Joy told me he had paired with Mr. Muth on the legislative question and also on the capital question, and I spoke of the fact with Mr. Winston yesterday morning before his vote was brought up, and I believe between Mr. Muth and Mr. Joy it was understood that they would pair on three different questions—the legislative question, the capital question and some other questions.

The President: The question is which one of the gentlemen is paired with Mr. Muth on the capital question.

Mr. Joy of Park: There seems to be some misunderstanding about this pair, one thing certain, Mr. Muth considered he was paired.

The President: On all questions?

Mr. Joy of Park: No, sir; it was not definitely settled on Saturday but the suggestion was made that he pair with me on the legislative question before he left this hall. That was settled. Then upon the train it was settled that he pair with me on the ditch question, and there was a conversation at that time on the train before we reached Livingston as to a pair on the capitol question. He said if he could secure a pair on the capitol question he would go to the Park; otherwise he would not, as he was interested in the capitol question and was anxious to see it left with Helena. I told him I would pair with him if he wished. He was with a party of friends and anxious to go to the Park. I told him that I would see that no harm came to him. He seemed to be very grateful to me at that time and so expressed himself, and we had a talk there, and while he did not say to me in express terms, "that is settled, I will depend upon you and I will say no more about it," there was such a talk and I inferred he considered it not necessary to remind me three or four times that he would rely upon me. I am satisfied now that Mr. Muth considers himself paired with either Mr. Winston or myself, and as there is some question about it I will stand here and see that no harm comes to him on account of his vote. It makes no difference in the result of the vote whether in fact he is paired with myself or with Mr. Winston, and I have declined to vote upon this proposition for this reason. If the convention insists upon my voting I will cast a vote that will protect Mr. Muth's vote in his absence, as he understands it that way.

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: I consider that I am released from my pledge then. I certainly would have paired with Mr. Muth yesterday morning had Mr. Joy not told me that he was paired, and I did not know that he received my telegram. I do not know yet that he received it, and therefore I consider myself released and I hope that the convention will release me from it.

The President: If Mr. Joy and Mr. Winston are not agreed and will both vote the same way, and Mr. Joy insists that he is paired with Mr. Muth, there can be no objection, as the Chair thinks, to releasing Mr. Winston, and if there be no objection it will be so considered.

Mr. Joy of Park: I think I ought to state here at this time as I have heard some intimation from some members here that Mr. Muth attempted to pair with two or three different members on this proposition, that I am very well satisfied from his talk that he did not know and was uncertain whether he had secured this pair, and this talk came about in that way. The remark came up as to the uncertainty of his getting this pair, and it was settled that he was to vote for Helena all the time and that I was to offset his vote. However, I am perfectly willing that the gentleman from Deer Lodge should make that pair.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I regret exceedingly, Mr. President, that the question should be raised as to whether anyone questions Mr. Muth's sincerity in this matter. Now, I have known Mr. Muth a number of years and no one on this floor holds him in higher esteem or has more confidence in his integrity than I. The only reason I made this objection was simply to protect Mr. Winston.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Of course it is necessary for members to pair, but in order to avoid misunderstandings which continually arise from verbal agreements, pairs ought to be reduced to writing and filed with the Clerk.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Winston) will be released.

Mr. Joy of Park: Before this is decided upon, I would state that I would very much prefer that Mr. Winston should pair with Mr. Muth.

Mr. Sargent of Silver Bow: I move that Mr. Muth be considered paired with Mr. Joy and Mr. Winston be released and that we go on with this motion.

Mr. President: This is simply a question of privilege and it is no doubt the object of every gentleman here to have this matter honorably and equitably settled; and if Mr. Winston has no objection to pairing with Mr. Muth, Mr. Joy will be released. Does the gentleman from Deer Lodge object to pairing with Mr. Muth?

Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge: I have no objection to pairing with him. Of course, I considered myself released when Mr. Joy paired yesterday.

I would do nothing that would injure the chances of Mr. Muth on this vote. I simply considered myself released when Mr. Joy announced that he was paired with Mr. Muth and voted so.

The President: There can be no prejudice at all in this matter, inasmuch as both of these gentlemen are in accord, and I believe the Chair in questions of division has a right to decide these matters peremptorily. There can be no motion entertained during the call of the roll, and in order to settle this matter the Chair will decide that Mr. Joy has already paired with the gentleman, and that Mr. Winston shall be released. The Clerk will proceed with the calling of the roll.

The clerk finished the call of the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Burleigh, Burns, E., Callaway, Courtney, Dixon, Dyer, Gaylord, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—34.

Nays—Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hobson, Hershfield, Hickman, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson, Witter—34.

Absent—4.

Paired—Bullard and Field, Cardwell and Durfee, Joy and Muth—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge to insert "Anaconda" lost.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers to amend by striking out "present seal of government" and inserting in lieu thereof "the city of Great Falls."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The ayes and nays were called for on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Browne, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Collins, Courtney, Gibson, Gillette, Hatch, Hobson, Hogan, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, Mitchell, Parberry, Ramsdell, Robinson, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston—26.

Nays—Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Eaton, Gaylord, Goddard, Graves, Hartman, Hammond, Haskell, Hershfield, Hickman, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Myers, Reek, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Witter, Mr. President—42.

Absent: Webster—1.

Paired: Bullard and Field, Cardwell and Durfee, Joy and Muth—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow lost.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I wish to offer an amendment.

The President: The amendment of the gentleman from Yellowstone will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 2 by striking out the words "present seat of government" and inserting "the city of Billings."

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The ayes and nays were called for on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Breen, Browne, Burleigh, Cooper, Courtney, Eaton, Goddard, Hatch, Hobson, Hogan, Knowles, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Mitchell, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston—28.

Nays—Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Craven, Dixon, Dyer, Gaylord, Gibson, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hershfield, Hickman, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Kohrs, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, Middleton, Parberry, Reek, Schmidt, Toole, Jos. K.; Witter, Mr. President—39.

Absent: Knippenberg, Webster—2.

Paired: Bullard and Field, Cardwell and Durfee, Joy and Muth—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone lost.

Mr. Aiken of Silver Bow: I have an amendment to offer.

The President: There are two amendments already on the desk of the President.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend by striking out the words "present seat of government" and inserting the "city of Bozeman." Offered by Mr. Luce of Gallatin.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The ayes and nays were called for on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Bickford, Brazleton, Browne, Burford, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Dyer, Eaton, Gaylord, Hartman, Hatch, Hickman, Hogan, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, McAdow, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston—35.

Nays—Aiken, Breen, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Green, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Haskell, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Maginnis, Mayger, Middleton, Mitchell, Parberry, Reek, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson, Witter, Mr. President—31.

Absent: Knippenberg, Webster—2.

Paired: Bullard and Fields, Cardwell and Durfee, Joy and Muth—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin carried.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I move that the substitute as amended be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out all of that portion of the substitute relating to the temporary seat of government.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the substitute as amended.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Is there not a motion to definitely postpone?

The President: The motion to indefinitely postpone is in order after all motions have been acted upon.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I will hold my amendment for the present.

The President: The question before the convention is upon the motion to indefinitely postpone the substitute, carrying with it the amendments.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: With the consent of my second I withdraw my motion to indefinitely postpone.

The President: The gentleman withdraws his motion to indefinitely postpone. Does the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke desire to offer this amendment?

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: Is there not a motion before the House to postpone until Monday or to a day certain?

The President: The motion was lost.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: What is the motion now?

The President: The motion now is to adopt the substitute as amended. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke has a substitute to offer.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move that the convention do now take a recess until 2 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Galatin, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 2 P. M.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 8th, 1889.

Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 2 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment desire to report.

The President: The report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom was referred Propositions Nos. 19, 28, 31 and 32, for the purpose of enrollment, beg leave to report that they have compared the enrolled copies with the originals as adopted by the convention, and find said propositions correctly enrolled.

(Signed) MIDDLETON, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection the report will be received and adopted.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move you, sir, that the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment be referred to the Committee on Revision, Phraseology and Adjustment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Custer, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The report of the Committee on Schedule will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: To the Honorable President of the Constitutional Convention of the State of Montana,

Your Committee on Schedule having considered the subject, direct me to report the following articles which they ask to be made a part of the Constitution of the State of Montana, (Signed) HIRAM KNOWLES.

ARTICLE ON SCHEDULE.

That no inconvenience may arise by reason of changing from a territorial to a state form of government, it is declared as follows:

Section 1. All laws enacted by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Montana and in force at the time the state shall be admitted into the Union and not inconsistent with this Constitution or the Constitution or Laws of the United States of America, shall be and remain in full force as the laws of the state until altered or repealed or until they expire by their own limitation: Provided, that wherever in said laws the words "Territory" or "Territory of Montana" occur, the words "State" or "State of Montana" shall be appropriately substituted and read therefor. And provided further, that the duties which now by law devolve upon probate judges as jury commissioners and in relation to issuing marriage licenses and filing and recording marriage certificates and the duties as ex-officio clerks of their own courts, shall, until otherwise provided by law, devolve upon and be performed by the clerks of district courts in their respective counties. And provided further, that the duties of probate judges now imposed by law relative to townsites and to the approval of bonds of other county officers shall, until otherwise provided by law, be performed by the district judges in the several counties in their respective districts.

Section 2. All lawful orders, judgments and decrees in civil causes, all contracts and claims and all lawful convictions, judgments and sentences in criminal actions, made and entered, or pronounced by the courts within the Territory of Montana, and in force at the time the state shall be admitted into the Union, shall continue to be and remain in full force in the state unaffected in any respect by the change from a territorial to a state form of government, and may be enforced and executed under the laws of the state.

Section 3. No crime or criminal offense committed against the laws of the Territory of Montana shall abate or be in anywise affected by reason of the change from a territorial to a state form of government, but the same shall be deemed and taken to be an offense against the laws of the state, and the appropriate courts of the state shall have jurisdiction over and to hear and determine the same. Provided, that this section shall not in anywise be construed to change the laws of the statute of limitations or the due effect or application of the same.

Section 4. Except as herein otherwise provided, the word "district" shall be substituted and read in lieu of the word "probate" in the term "probate court" or "probate judge" wherever the same occur in the laws of the Territory of Montana and all said laws which by their terms apply to probate court or probate judge shall upon a change from territorial to state government be deemed and taken to apply to district courts and district judges, provided that all laws allowing fees to probate judges are hereby repealed.

Section 5. Clerks of district courts until otherwise provided by law shall each perform the duties and be entitled to the same fees as now provided by law for clerk of the district court of the territory, and until otherwise provided by law, shall also perform the services and be entitled to fees therefor that are now provided for clerks of probate courts.

Section 6. Upon a change from a territorial to a state government the seals in use by the Supreme Court and the Territorial District Courts in and for the several counties respectively shall pass to and become, until otherwise provided by law, the seals respectively of the Supreme Court and of the District Courts of the state in such counties.

Section 7. Prosecutions for criminal offenses against the laws of the Territory of Montana, pending at the time the state shall be admitted into the Union, shall not abate; but the same shall continue and be prosecuted in the name of the State of Montana, and the title of every such action shall be changed to conform to this provision.

Section 8. Parties who, at the time of the admission of the state into the Union, may be confined under lawful commitments or otherwise lawfully held to answer for alleged violations of any of the criminal laws of the Territory of Montana, shall continue to be so confined and held until discharged therefrom by the proper courts of the state.

Section 9. All writs, processes, prosecutions, causes of action, defenses, claims and rights of individuals, associations and bodies corporate existing at the time the state shall be admitted into the Union, shall continue and be respectively executed, proceeded with, determined, enforced and protected under the laws of the state.

Section 10. All undertakings, bonds, obligations and recognizances in force at the time the state shall be admitted into the Union which were executed to the Territory of Montana or any officer thereof in his official capacity or to any official board for the benefit of the Territory of Montana, are hereby respectively assigned and transferred to the State of Montana, to the state officer successor to said territorial officer, or to the official board successor to the aforesaid official board for the use of the state, as the case may be, and shall be as valid and binding as if executed under state law to the state, or state officer in his official capacity or official board for the benefit of the state; and all fines, taxes, penalties and forfeitures due or owing to the Territory of Montana, or to any county, school district or municipality therein, at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union, are hereby respectively assigned and transferred and the same shall be payable to the state, county, school district or municipality, as the case may be, and payment thereof may be enforced under the laws of the state.

Section 11. All property, real and personal, and all moneys, credits, claims, demands and choses in action of every kind, belonging to the Territory of Montana at the time the state shall have been admitted into the Union, are hereby assigned and transferred to and shall be vested in and become the property of the state.

Section 12. All obligations of the Territory of Montana, existing, in force and unpaid at the time of the admission of the state into the Union are hereby assumed by the state which shall and will well and truly pay the same.

Section 13. All matters, cases and proceedings pending in any Probate Court of the Territory of Montana, at the time the state shall be admitted to the Union, and all official records, files and other property of or pertaining to such court, are hereby transferred to the district court in and for the same county, and such district court shall have full power and jurisdiction to hear, determine and dispose of all such matters, cases and proceedings.

Section 14. All actions, cases and proceedings and matters which shall be pending in the Supreme and District Courts of Montana Territory at the time of the admission of the state into the Union whereof the United States Circuit or District Court might have had jurisdiction had such court existed at the commencement of such actions, cases, proceedings and matters, respectively, shall be transferred to said United States Circuit and District Courts, respectively; and all files, records, indictments and proceedings relating to such actions, cases, proceedings and matters shall also be transferred to said United States Courts; Provided, that no civil action, cause or proceeding to which the United States is not a party shall be transferred to either of said United States Courts except upon written request of one of the parties thereto, and in the absence of such request such cases shall be proceeded with in the proper state courts.

Section 15. All actions, cases, proceedings and matters pending in the Supreme and District Courts of the Territory of Montana at the time the state shall be admitted into the Union and all files, records and indictments relating thereto, except as otherwise provided herein, shall be appropriately transferred, as may be proper, to the Supreme and District Courts of the State, respectively, and all such actions, cases and matters shall be proceeded with in the proper state.

Section 16. Upon a change from territorial to state government and until otherwise provided by law, the great seal of the territory shall be deemed and taken to be the great seal of the State of Montana.

There being no objection, the reading of the above report was dispensed with and the same was referred to the Printing Committee to be printed.

Mr. Hickman of Madison sent up a resolution.

The President: The gentleman from Madison (Mr. Hickman) offers a resolution which, if there be no objection, will be considered now.

The Clerk read as follows: Whereas, the Senate Committee on Arid Lands will be in this House tomorrow, and whereas our citizens are deeply interested in the subject of irrigation; therefore be it resolved that the committee be and are hereby invited to visit this convention, and that the freedom of the floor is hereby granted to said committee.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: It will be necessary to have someone wait upon these gentlemen and extend the courtesy of the convention to them. The Chair suggests that it would be well to have a committee appointed to wait upon the Senate Committee.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that the Chair appoint a committee of three.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move to amend by making it a committee of five, of which the President of this convention shall be chairman.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair will name the committee sometime during the course of the day. The question pending before the convention was upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clark to the substitute offered for Section 2.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clark: I withdraw that amendment.

The President: The gentleman withdraws his amendment. The question is upon the adoption of the section as amended.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clark called for the reading of the section as amended.

The President: The Clerk will read the substitute now offered for Sections 2 and 4 as amended.

The Clerk read as follows: The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to locate or change the seat of government of the state, but shall at its second regular session after the adoption of this Constitution provide by law for the submission of the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the state at a special election in October then next ensuing, and a majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of this state at the next general election, and until the permanent seat of government shall have been located permanently the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of Bozeman, but no liability shall be incurred by the state for the purchase or erection of any building for temporary legislative purposes, nor shall the Legislative Assembly make any appropriation or expenditure for capitol buildings or grounds until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Are amendments in order?

The President: Amendments to the substitute are in order with the exception of the name of the temporary capitol.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I desire to offer an amendment to substitute the word "first" in place of the word "second" before the words "regular session."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I make that amendment for the reason that I believe it is wise and in accord with the views of most of the members of the convention. The feeling is in this convention that the legislature may meet here with the incubus of this capitol question hanging over them, and it may interfere with their work as much as it has interfered with the progress of this convention. It will determine their course of action and to a certain extent aid the proper working of the legislature if there shall be an early solution of this question of the location of the capitol. I do not think it is wise to have anything of this kind pending whereby trading or dickering or gerrymandering might come up. It certainly would be the proper course to provide that the legislature shall provide for an election as speedily as possible and throw this thing off the minds of the people.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I am glad to hear the admission of my friend from Deer Lodge that this thing does interfere with the harmonious workings of the convention and the legislature and is an incubus upon them.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: An apple of discord.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Exactly, an apple of discord. Substantially the same remark that I made yesterday to which some gentleman on the floor took exception. However, I am glad to find that my friend from Deer Lodge is in accord with me.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: On this matter of permanently settling the capitol, I think the views of most of the members of this convention who live in the hills and in the mountains are rather obscure and misty. I do not believe that they have an idea of the great extent of the Territory of Montana. As a matter of fact it extends beyond the municipal limits of either Butte or Helena. The great State of Montana to be is about 500 miles in length by 300 miles in width, and the gentlemen who insist upon the permanent settlement of the capitol question within a year, I do not believe can realize that great fact. They cannot realize the fact that over 100 miles east of where we are sitting we are in the geographical center of Montana and that within a comparatively short space of time the population of the State of Montana east of that geographical center will be as great in number as that west of the geographical center. I sincerely and honestly believe that in the lifetime of some of the pages upon this floor that the population east of the geographical center of Montana will be greater than the population of this western country—that instead of the population of 150,000 or 200,000, as we have today, we will have a population of two millions and upwards. I believe it is not right that in the next year or year and a half the permanent capitol should be settled in some of these mountain gulches, and if we have a big population it is only right that the people who come in here and help develop the state and populate it in the next four or five years should have a voice. The election, if held a year or a year and a half from now will possibly and in all probability decide that the capitol shall be permanently west of the Rocky Mountains. I believe sincerely that if a vote was polled today the majority of the state would locate the capitol on the West Side, and I believe the same thing would occur if the election were held at any time within the next two years. I believe in looking at the future of the great State of Montana that that would be wrong. The great populous centers in Montana in the future will be east of here, and the question of the permanent capitol may be kept off long enough to give the people a chance to decide upon it fairly. Now, sir, I am in favor of the proposition that the first Legislative Assembly shall decide where the temporary capitol shall be, and then 10 years from that date let the people decide it. That would give the temporary location a chance to build under the impetus that would be given to it as the capitol of the state for ten years. It is not right that we should shuffle this thing off after a year or sixteen months. It is not right in the interests of the community that it is going to and it is not right in the interests of the whole people of Montana. If you temporarily locate your capitol four, five, six or ten years and after that locate it permanently for the whole people of the state you will be doing what I consider to be the wise thing. I believe the people of the East Side of this range, and the members who represent Helena upon this floor are making the greatest mistake in their lives when they vote upon this proposition. I do not think it is right that it should be settled within a year and a half.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I move the previous question.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question now before the convention is shall the main question be now put.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I withdraw my motion.

The President: The gentleman withdraws the motion.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: May I ask as a matter of privilege to say just a word or two, not to advance argument at all. I feel, Mr. President and gentlemen of the convention, that I owe it to myself to make an explanation of how and why I shall vote as I do upon this proposition. As I have said before on this floor, I always try to maintain a consistent course, and although I may not always appear to do so to the other members of the convention, I do so, so far as I know my own conscience. The other members of this committee who reported this proposition that we have been considering for a day or two will remember that it was at my suggestion and on my motion that we provided that this question of the permanent location of the capitol of Montana should be taken in hand by the Legislative Assembly at its third annual session after the adoption of this constitution. I believed then as I believe now that when it comes to the permanent location of the capitol that every citizen of Montana should be actuated by none other than the most patriotic motives, and I believe that when it comes to the settlement of that question that the primary object before all of the intelligent voters of this commonwealth will be, "Where can we locate the capitol to best accommodate the populous districts of Montana?" Now, while I do not wish to appear to reflect upon what my friend has just said, if I thought then as now sectionalism would show itself, I would depreciate it then as I do now. But I rise—and pardon me if I seem to put myself on a plane above the remark as indicated by my friend—I put myself upon a plane above that of the East Side, West Side, North Side or South Side. Those questions cut no figure with me in the question of the permanent location of the capitol of Montana. I believe, however, with the gentleman that the time is not ripe and will not be one year from now, nor two years from now, for the settlement of this question. Therefore as a compromise measure, I shall vote for this amendment, and I would have been glad if our original proposition could have passed this body, but that has been voted down, and I shall vote for an adoption of the amendment, believing as I do, that the best interests, not, Mr. President, of Butte City, not the best interests of Missoula County, not the best interests of Lewis & Clarke county, but the best interests of Montana will be subserved by putting this question off until we see where the populous districts are going to be, and then you and I and every other citizen of Montana can vote intelligently upon the proposition.

The President: The Chair would suggest that the gentleman probably had some misapprehension as to the amendment. The amendment is to strike out two and insert one.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Then I shall vote against that proposition.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Do I understand that this is to be decided by a special election?

The President: Yes, sir.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move now to strike our "special" and insert "general."

The President: The question now is with reference to striking out "second" and inserting "first."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Well, now, Mr. President, I have to say that is a compromise measure, I shall vote for it, although I agree with the gentleman from Cascade County that it is too early in the history of the development of the territory to permanently fix the capitol, and yet I am aware that while it will not embarrass the legislature as intimated, yet it will retard the construction of permanent buildings for the accommodation of the legislature and for state officers, and as I said before while I think it is too soon to locate the capitol of the territory, and perhaps will be for the next eight or ten years, I would much rather, were it not for the inconvenience I have spoken of, see the first legislature provide, or a second legislature provide for the temporary location of the capitol, and see the permanent location deferred for another day. But as I said before, with the exception of calling a special election for that purpose and substituting a "general election," I shall vote for the amendment.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I do not know how this proposition stands, but this convention voted upon that proposition yesterday and determined after considerable argument on the proposition that the election should be held at the first general election after the first legislature. Now, then, it seems we are to vote on the same proposition again, and if it will be tolerated and allowed to be done there is no end to the changes and the resubmission of it to this convention, time and again in the same shape. While the balance of the substitute is different from what is proposed, it seems to me this part of it is in direct contradiction of what this convention has already determined. This convention decided by a large majority that the vote on the capitol question should be at the first general election after the first Legislative Assembly, and I do not see any reason for changing it.

The President: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman that the object now of making this amendment is to bring it in conformity with the amendment as passed yesterday. The motion is now to strike out "second" and insert "first."

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: The original bill as it came from the committee was that at the third session of the Legislature they should provide for submitting it. That was amended yesterday in this convention by striking out the word "third" and inserting "first."

The President: But this substitute contains the word "two," and the friends of the proposition who submitted it at the first election desire to have this stricken out in order to conform with their views established yesterday.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I wish to say to the gentlemen of this convention that the question of striking out yesterday referred to a general election, and the substitute refers to a special election. So it is entirely a different proposition.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: Be all that as it may, I do not see why we should put this "second" or "third" any more than we should put it "fourth," "fifth" or "tenth." If we are to wait until the population of the state finally settles down to some particular place in the future, I do not see why we should put the "tenth" instead of the "second" or "third"; but we are acting upon the present condition. I do not see why we should not act upon that all the way through and get the permanent capitol located as soon as we reasonably can. I do not see any reason for deferring it as long as proposed by some of our friends, and I do not see why it should not be settled with reasonable certainty and settled as soon as possible. I am opposed to any such amendment, and I trust it will not prevail, but leave it where the convention put it by its vote yesterday.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I call for the ayes and nays on the motion.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment to strike out "second" and insert in lieu thereof "first".

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows.

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Burns, E.; Callaway, Cauby, Courtney, Dyer, Graves, Haskell, Hartman, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Kohrs, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Robinson, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—30.

Nays: Browne, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Myers, Parberry, Reek, Rotwitt, Rickards, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson, Witter—40.

Absent: Bullard, Knippenberg, Muth, Webster—4.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge lost.

Mr. Rotwitt of Meagher sent up an amendment.

The President: The amendment of the gentleman from Meagher is in order.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: The gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Durfee, met with an accident this morning, and I would ask that some gentleman of the opposition on this capital matter pair with him.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge County, Mr. Durfee, who sustained a serious accident this morning, desires to ask any member on the opposite side of the question to kindly and generously pair with him.

Mr. Cauby, of Lewis & Clarke: I will pair with the gentleman.

The President: Mr. Cauby who votes that the capital shall remain at Helena has generously offered to pair with Mr. Durfee.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: On all questions relating to the capital?

Mr. Cauby of Lewis & Clarke: On all questions relating to the location of the capital; yes, sir.

The President: On all questions pertaining to the locating of the capital Mr. Durfee and Mr. Cauby will both be excused if there be no objection. The question is now upon the adoption of the substitute as amended.

Mr. J. K. Toole, of Lewis & Clarke: The motion pending now as I understand it is upon the adoption of the substitute as amended having the word "Bozeman" inserted?

The President: That is the motion pending before the convention.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Is it not in order now to move to strike out a portion of the substitute?

The President: If the gentleman will put it in writing and send his motion to the desk the Chair will resolve upon that question.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I would like to ask the Chair if the motion of the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Rotwitt) is in order?

The President: That motion to strike out Bozeman and substitute is not in order. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke moves to strike out something else.

The Clerk read for information the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, as follows: Strike out the following in the substitute: "And until the remaining seat of government shall have been located permanently the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at Bozeman, but no liability shall be incurred by the State for the purchase or erection of any building for temporary purposes." Also strike out the following: "Nor shall the Legislative Assembly make any" and in insert the following "the Legislative Assembly shall make no".

The President: The Clerk will now read the substitute as it would be if this amendment is adopted.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I ask for a division of the two propositions.

The President: The Chair desires to have it read now as amended and then the Chair will entertain the gentleman's suggestion.

The Clerk read as follows: The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the State but shall at its second regular session after the adoption of this constitution provide by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the State at a special election in October then next ensuing, and a majority of all votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the State at the next general election. The Legislative Assembly shall make no appropriation or expenditures for capital buildings or grounds until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: Is an amendment in order now?

The President: If the gentleman will send up his amendment the Chair will decide.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I move to strike out the word "special" and insert in lieu thereof the word "general".

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I sent up an amendment to that effect previous to Mr. Toole's amendment having been sent.

The President: The amendment is offered by the gentleman from Meagher. The Chair decided, was out of order. The Chair overlooked the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone. This amendment is in order. The gentleman from Deer Lodge desires to have the proposition divided. The Clerk will read that portion and we will decide that part first, and then the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone will be in order.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I do not think that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone is in order. There are already two amendments pending upon that section. The first is the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher County, and the second amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County to the substitute.

The President: That is very true, and as it does not conflict with the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, the Chair would ask the privilege of submitting it first. It was overlooked by the Chair when sent up by the gentleman from Yellowstone. This is simply with reference to the election. Mr. Toole's amendment was with reference to the Legislature which should provide or submit the question. The substitute reads: "At a special election in October then next ensuing" and this amendment reads to insert instead "At the first general election". The question is now upon the adoption of the amendment which, I believe, has been moved and seconded.

Mr. Middleton, of Custer: It seems to me that is not in order. That identical proposition has been voted down.

The President: The Chair understands that the motion to amend offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge was with reference to the session of the Legislature which should submit it. This has reference to the election which shall decide the question.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I would ask if that proposition of Mr. Toole's of Deer Lodge to change from the "second" to the "first" was lost?

The President: Yes sir.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: The object of that resolution is to submit the permanent location to the qualified voters of the State of Montana at a general election instead of at a special election.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I am opposed to the amendment offered. I believe that when the question of the permanent location of the capital of the State of Montana shall be submitted to the voters thereof for their decision on the question that the question should be presented upon its merits without any extraneous influences whatever entering into the question. Certainly if that question is put before the voters of Montana at the time of a general election when a member or members of Congress are to be voted for, and other state officers, all of those questions will enter into it and will cut a large figure in the votes to be polled on the capital question. Now, I believe on a proposition of so much importance to the people of Montana it should be submitted to them at a time when they will, of necessity, vote upon that question and none other, and therefore I think it should be submitted at a special election; and feeling in that way I shall vote against the amendment.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I am in favor of the other proposition. I cannot see the necessity of this Territory going to the extra expense of an election for that purpose alone. It has been found by experience that where questions of this kind are submitted aside from the general elections, that only those particular parties who are very greatly interested will give any attention to it. The towns which are aspirants for capital honors will be the ones that will exert themselves. For instance, where a town has a large amount of influence and another has not, the one with a great influence will have a great deal better advantage for securing the capital than the town with but little influence; and I am sure that when the names of the different places are placed upon the tickets every voter who votes will see the names there and have an opportunity to vote; and in that way the town with but little influence which is an aspirant for the capital will secure a better vote. In the other way, I say that the vote will be unfair. And then there is the additional expense. It will certainly cost $25,000 or $30,000 to have a special election and there is nothing that I can see to be gained by having a special election. In California they at one time held the judicial elections at a different time from the general elections, and it was the experience there after one election that they desired to have the elections for judicial officers returned to the time for general elections for the reasons that I have stated, that they could not get out at a special election one-half of the people of California to vote for judges, and only the interested parties would come out and vote. So for those reasons I am in favor of having this election held at the time that the general elections are held throughout the Territory.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I want to call the attention of the convention to Section 2, Proposition No. 14. It has been adopted and considered in Committee of the Whole. I underlook to get the matter before the convention and was shut off by a gentleman from Deer Lodge. It reads as follows: "Every male person of the age of twenty-one years or over possessing the following qualifications shall be entitled to vote at all general elections." Now, sir, it has always been admitted among all lawyers and everybody else upon this subject that the right of suffrage is not a natural or inherent right; that is a grant of the sovereign power; in other words, when the people of Montana vote upon this suffrage proposition they make these very persons whose ages are defined here electors, and they have only the authority to vote at general elections. Now, if this capital should go down to Bozeman— if lightning should strike us in that direction why, if the word "special" was in there until this constitution was changed, we would have it there forever, because I venture to say it as necessary as I think it is that the sovereign power of this State should define the ages of those that are called electors, they are bound by this limitation in this constitution. It has been adopted, how we are to get back at it is more than I know, but as it stands now the Legislature of Montana can never grant any further rights. It is the right of the sovereign; it is the right of the people of Montana to make electors. We have made them here and limited their right to vote, to general elections. Consequently I say that if you vote for permanent location of the capital as our constitution now stands, it must be at a general election and not at a special one.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: The gentleman is entirely wrong upon that proposition, so far as it relates to this question. I agree with him that the qualifications specified in this bill refer only to general elections, but all special elections are provided for by the Legislature, and whenever the Legislature calls a special election, or appoints a special election for any purpose it invariably provides for the qualifications of the electors. So that when the Legislature would submit this proposition to the people by an act of the Legislative Assembly it would undoubtedly as it has always done in every other case, define the qualifications of the voters who shall vote upon that proposition.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Can the Legislature go further than the constitutional convention?

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: No, sir; the Legislature cannot go outside of the power that is granted by this constitution, but this constitution in fixing the qualifications of the voters fix them for general elections. Now, if this constitution provides that this question shall be submitted by the Legislature at a special election, then when the Legislature, as I said before, submits it at a special election it will fix the qualifications of the voters who shall vote upon that proposition. Now, as to the question of expediency or propriety in voting upon this proposition at a general or special election, I only have this to say, that I do not believe this question should be submitted to the people at a general election, for the reason that if it is, all of these populous cities and these large mining camps—that is, those that are candidates for the permanent location of the capital—will wish for influence just in order to carry the election for their particular place, and to do that every man upon the State ticket, upon the county ticket, upon the precinct ticket, will be swept off for votes for the permanent location of the capital. So that I doubt whether any man would be elected on any ticket under an arrangement of that kind. They would swap the ticket. It is a dangerous thing. In other words, it would defeat the will of the people insofar as the election of the State, the county and the precinct officers is concerned. The whole matter would hinge simply upon the proposition of the location of the capital, because, I take it, that the candidate for the location of the capital would sooner see the whole State ticket slaughtered than lose that proposition; and I am in favor of submitting it at a special election, and if it is necessary in order to corner the proposition which the gentleman has read, I am in favor of putting the proposition in this amendment here allowing the Legislature or directing the Legislature, if you please, to fix the qualifications of the voters when they vote upon that proposition when submitted at a special election.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I have just one word to add in connection with what has already been said. We have heard from time to time on this floor a great deal of stress laid upon the necessity of economy. Now, it does seem to me that while we have a registration system and the Australian system of voting, assuming that they will be proven to be beneficial and the electors of the State want to retain them, I do not see any reason why, when it comes to submitting this proposition to the vote of the people, it should not be submitted at a general election. If it shall be submitted at a special election under this system of voting, there would be an expense attached to that proposition amounting to I do not know how many thousands of dollars, possibly $50,000 or $100,000. I have seen the statement made that in certain counties the Australian system of voting will increase the cost of an election from five to ten or twelve thousand dollars and that does not take into consideration at all the system of registration. So that I believe it is better the way it is in the original proposition that it shall be at a general election and not at a special election called for that purpose alone. Therefore, I shall vote for what I believe is right.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: There is one matter that I wish to call attention to. The history of the contests for the location of capitals has shown that there is a great deal of fraudulent voting in such contests. The cases in the law books are numerous upon this point in the cases of changing the location of county seats and capitals. Now, if we put in that "at a special election" there will be any amount of this fraudulent voting—stuffing of ballot boxes, etc., but if you make it at a general election then the officers and candidates who are looking out for the general election will see to it that there is nothing of that kind. They will not submit to having the returns of an election tampered with. For that reason, I think it ought to be at a general election. There is another thing, too, that I wish to say. This question of location of the capital has not, so far as I know, except to a very limited extent affected the general result at general elections. To some limited extent the question has affected the vote but to no great extent; but a gentleman was telling me yesterday of a vote to change I think the county seat in some county in Kansas where there were seven thousand fraudulent votes in one town at a special election. I believe it is better to put it at a general election where all of the safeguards that can be thrown around the election will pertain to it. Then there is another question; the gentleman from Yellowstone County says that when they provide for a special election the Legislature would prescribe the qualifications of the voters at that special election. I believe the Legislature can do that, but then will come up the proposition as to whether or not that Legislature shall submit that question to all of the voters of the Territory or simply to the taxpayers. There will be a vote over such questions as that. Now, I believe it should be submitted to all the citizens of the Territory and not to the taxpayers alone, and that this matter should not be left to the Legislature to wrangle over the subject of the capital.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone (Mr. Myers) to strike out "special" and insert "general", and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The motion now is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole). A division has been called for and the Clerk will read it as it is proposed to be divided by the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to make a preliminary inquiry. If this substitute is adopted in lieu of the section that has Bozeman in it, will the section then be subject to amendment?

The President: If the substitute is adopted in lieu of the original section?

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Yes, sir.

The President: Certainly it will be subject to amendment. It will not be subject to amendment by changing the name of the town at all unless there was a reconsideration of the vote. There should be other features to it that should be subject to amendment, but that portion of it would not be subject to amendment without a reconsideration of the vote.

The Clerk read the first subdivision of the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) as follows: Strike out the following in the substitute "and until the permanent seat of government shall have been located permanently, the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at Bozeman, but no liability shall be incurred by the State for the purchase or erection of any building for temporary purposes."

The Clerk also read the second subdivision of the same amendment as follows: Strike out the following "nor shall the Legislative Assembly make any" and insert the following "The Legislative Assembly shall make no."

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move that the consideration of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke be postponed indefinitely.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Aiken of Silver Bow: Does that carry the substitute with it?

The President: It has no reference to the substitute. The question before the convention is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. It is an amendment to the substitute. The motion of the gentleman from Gallatin is to indefinitely postpone the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. The question now is upon the motion to indefinitely postpone the amendment.

Mr. Robinson, of Deer Lodge: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I would like a moment to state the effect of this amendment so that the convention may understand the proposition as it now stands. The substitute is pending and its adoption has been moved by Mr. Cooper of Gallatin County whereby the temporary seat of government goes to Bozeman. I have offered an amendment which strikes out of that substitute that section of it relating to the temporary location of the seat of government, which would leave it just exactly where it is now. It might be from what has been said here by the gentleman upon the floor last evening or yesterday that some provision would be required to be placed in the ordinance in order to give it force and effect; but at all events the postponement of the proposition indefinitely that I have submitted would leave simply the question of the adoption of the proposition providing for a location of the temporary seat of government at Bozeman. I therefore trust that the friends of the present location will vote against it.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: If I understand this, it is to strike out that part of the section by which we voted this morning to have a temporary seat of government at the city of Bozeman. Now, sir, I rise to a point of order. I think that after the convention has voted to adopt the amendment that I offered this morning a motion to strike out is now out of order.

The President: The Chair would state to the gentleman from Gallatin that a motion to strike out the word Bozeman would not be in order without a motion to reconsider, but this involves other questions and other matter which makes it a different proposition, and that the motion to strike out the proviso is in order.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I want to understand the question fully. If this motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke prevails it is equivalent to the establishment of the temporary seat of government at Helena?

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: That is correct as I understand it. The question would still remain as between Helena and Missoula.

The President: The question now is upon the motion to indefinitely postpone.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: As my colleague has stated, if his amendment should prevail it would leave the question still pending between Helena and Missoula.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I understand we are voting on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin to indefinitely postpone the amendment now offered.

Mr. Aiken of Silver Bow: I would make the motion to indefinitely postpone the amendment and substitute both.

The President: The motion is not in order. The Clerk will read the roll and the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Hartman) to indefinitely postpone the consideration of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole).

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—39.

Nays: Breen, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Browne, Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Craven, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hershfield, Hobson, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Maginnis, Mayger, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson—29.

Absent: Bullard, Muth, Webster—3.

Paired: Cauby and Durfee, Dyer and Knippenberg—4.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to indefinitely postpone carried.

The President: The question is now upon the adoption of the substitute.

The ayes and nays were called for on the adoption of the substitute.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk will read the substitute.

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for Sections 2 and 4. Strike out Sections 2 and 4 of Proposition No. 18 and insert the following as a substitute therefor, to be No. 2, and renumber Section 5 as No. 4. The Legislative Assembly shall have no power to change or locate the seat of government of the State, but shall at its second regular session after the adoption of this constitution provide by law for submitting the question of the permanent location of the seat of government to the qualified electors of the State at the first general election, and a majority of all the votes upon said question cast at said election shall be necessary to determine the location thereof. Said Legislative Assembly shall also provide that in case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be submitted in like manner to the qualified electors of the State at the general election. And until the permanent seat of government shall have been located permanently the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of Bozeman; but no liability shall be incurred by the State for the purchase or erection of any building for temporary legislative purposes, nor shall the Legislative Assembly make any appropriation or expenditure for capital buildings or grounds until the seat of government shall have been permanently located as herein provided.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to a preliminary inquiry. This substitute is moved for the original section?

The President: For Sections 2 and 4.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: For which Missoula is now inserted?

The President: The adoption of this substitute as read substitutes Bozeman for Missoula.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I understand a while ago that there was a motion or amendment carried by which the word "first" was stricken out and the word "second" substituted.

The President: That motion did not prevail.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Upon the adoption of this substitute I demand the previous question.

The President: The previous question has been demanded.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: There is another substitute there, I understand. It is to substitute the words "Deer Lodge" for "Bozeman".

The President: It is not in order without a recommendation of the vote. The word "Bozeman" has already been adopted as an amendment to the substitute. That cannot be changed without a reconsideration. The question before the convention is, shall the motion be now put?

The Chair put the question, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I ask simply for information. We are voting upon the adoption of the substitute as offered by Dr. Parberry, as I understand it?

The President: Yes, sir.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: And if that should carry it eliminates Sections 2 and 4 of the original proposition?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: It makes Bozeman the temporary capital.

Mr. Watson of Fergus: I would like to ask for information. It seems to me that some of us are getting "between the devil and the deep sea". I would like to know what the result of this vote is to be?

The President: We are now voting on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher (Dr. Parberry) which has been amended. The effect of the adoption of this substitute will be to strike out Sections 2 and 4 and insert this substitute in lieu thereof.

Mr. Watson of Fergus: What I want to get at is this: I understand the result of this vote will be a decision as between Bozeman and Missoula.

The President: That would be the effect of it. It strikes out "Missoula" and inserts "Bozeman".

Mr. Watson of Fergus: If you do not want to vote for either what will you do? (Laughter and applause in the galleries.)

The Clerk called the roll on the adoption of the substitute of the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Parberry) for Sections 2 and 4, and the vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Buford, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Callaway, Cardwell, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Eaton, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hickman, Kanouse, Loud, Luce, McAdow, Middleton, Myers, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—26.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Craven, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hatch, Hershfield, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kennedy, Kohrs, Knowles, Maginnis, Marrión, Marshall, Mayger, Mitchell, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rotwith, Rickards, Sargent, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson, Witter—40.

Absent: Webster—1.

Paired: Bullard and Fields, Cauby and Durfee, Dyer and Knippenberg, Joy and Muth—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to adopt the substitute lost.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I now move to amend by inserting the words "Deer Lodge".

The President: The question cannot be reached except by reconsideration.

Mr. Kennedy of Fergus: I move a reconsideration of the vote by which Section No. 2 was lost.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman from Fergus offers a motion to reconsider the vote by which the proviso in Section 2 of Proposition No. 18 was lost. There was a motion before the convention yesterday to strike out the proviso in the ninth line of Section 2, which was lost. The gentleman now moves to reconsider the vote by which that proviso was lost.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I rise to a point of order. The gentleman who has moved for the reconsideration voted in the negative.

The President: The gentleman must be mistaken; the Clerk informs the Chair that the gentleman voted in the affirmative, and the gentleman has therefore a right to move to reconsider. The proviso beginning in line nine of Section 2 reads, "Provided that until the seat of government shall be permanently located as herein provided the temporary location thereof shall be and remain in the city of Missoula."

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move to amend that it be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I accept the amendment.

The President: A motion to indefinitely postpone is not in order. The question now is upon the motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion to strike out the proviso was lost.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Would not a motion to lay on the table be in order?

The President: It is in order, but it would have the effect of carrying the section with it.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I rise for information. If this motion prevails it adopts the section and fixes the capital at Missoula?

The President: Yes sir.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: There is a motion made to reconsider the motion by which part of this section was stricken out. Now, if this is carried you claim it will take the section with it?

The President: This is a motion to reconsider the vote, and a motion to reconsider would not carry the section with it. The Chair was in error.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: Then I move to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table.

The motion was seconded.

The President: There is a motion pending before the convention to lay upon the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which the proviso was lost. The ayes and nays are demanded on the last motion.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I would like to ask where the capital is now and what effect this motion is going to have upon it. (Laughter)

The President: The Chair would state to the gentleman that the section as adopted provides that the capital shall be at Missoula. Now, there was a motion by a gentleman from Lewis & Clarke last night to strike out the proviso beginning in line nine of Section 2. That would leave the capital at Helena, but that motion was lost. The motion now is to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table, and the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Callaway, Courtney, Dixon, Gaylord, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Kohrs, Luce, Marston, Marshall, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—33.

Nays: Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Leud, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson—32.

Absent: Webster—1.

Paired: Bullard and Fields, Cauby and Durfee, Joy and Muth, Dyer and Knippenberg—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to lay on the table carried.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I move that Section 2 as amended be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move to amend Section 2.

The President: The gentleman from Meagher moves to amend Section 2 by a substitute. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for Section 2. After the admission of the State into the Union and at the general election of the year 1892, the question of permanent location of the seat of government as hereby provided be submitted to the qualified electors of the State, and the majority of all the votes upon said question shall determine the location thereof. In case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be and is hereby submitted in like manner to the qualified electors at the next general election thereafter.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that the consideration of that substitute be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The ayes and nays were called for on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I suggest this is in the shape of an amendment, and that the motion to indefinitely postpone is not in order.

The President: The question is not upon the substitute but upon the motion to amend. The motion to postpone the substitute is in order.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: It is in the shape of a motion to amend the original section, and a motion to amend has preference of a motion to postpone.

The President: Where there is a motion to indefinitely postpone a question, a motion to amend the main question takes precedence of it. This question is moved upon the amendment itself.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Is this substitute upon the amendment?

The President: Yes sir.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Then I withdraw my motion to indefinitely postpone and submit the following amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Meagher.

The Clerk read the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow as follows: Provided that until the seat of government shall be permanently located as herein provided the temporary location thereof shall be and remain in Section 2 of Township 4 North of Range 11 West of the Principal Meridian of Montana.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: In connection to that matter I would state that this is the section upon which the city of Anaconda is located.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I move to amend that amendment by inserting another in lieu.

The President: There is one amendment offered now.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: In order that the matter may come up squarely I move to strike out that section and range and put in the word "Anaconda".

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Upon the adoption of this amendment I demand the previous question.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow: Upon this the previous question is demanded. The question now before the convention is, shall the main question be now put?

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk commenced the call of the roll.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I withdraw the demand for the ayes and nays.

The President: The question then is, shall the main question be now put?

The Chair put the question on the main question, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment without debate.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: The ayes and nays have been demanded and will be entered on the journal. This is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: I call for the reading of the amendment.

The President: We are voting on the amendment to the substitute. The Clerk will read the substitute and then the amendment.

The Clerk read the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Kanouse) as follows: Substitute for Section 2 after the admission of the State into the Union and at the general election in the year 1892 the question of permanent location of the seat of government is hereby provided to be submitted to the qualified electors of the State, and the majority of all the votes upon said question shall determine the location thereof. In case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be and is hereby submitted in like manner to the qualified electors at the next general election thereafter.

The Clerk also read the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow to said substitute as follows: Provided that until the seat of government shall be permanently located as herein provided the temporary location thereof shall be and remain at the city of Anaconda.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I would like to offer an amendment to that amendment.

The President: It is not in order: This is an amendment to an amendment. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Callaway, Cardwell, Courtney, Dixon, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Joyes, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Marrion, Marshall, Mitchell, Parberry, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—36.

Nays: Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Kanouse, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Myers, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson—30.

Absent: Webster—1.

Paired: Bullard and Fields, Cauby and Durfee, Dyer and Knippenberg, Joy and Muth—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared to motion to amend carried.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I move you that the vote last taken be reconsidered and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the vote by which the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow was adopted and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: On that I call for the ayes and nays.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I desire to ask if the motion to amend is now in order?

The President: The motion to reconsider takes precedence. The question now is to lay upon the table the vote by which the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow was adopted. The ayes and nays have been demanded. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Burleigh, Burns, E.; Callaway, Courtney, Dixon, Gaylord, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Marrion, Marshall, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—33.

Nays: Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, J. K.; Watson—33.

Absent: Webster—1.

Paired: Bullard and Fields, Cauby and Durfee, Dyer and Knippenberg, Joy and Muth—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to lay on the table lost.

The President: The Chair has an amendment that was sent up previously by Mr. Hershfield. There is also an amendment offered by Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge which comes next. And there are also two other amendments. Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke moves to amend the amendment by striking out the word "Anaconda" and inserting in lieu thereof "White Sulphur Springs".

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: Was the previous question adopted?

The President: We are voting upon the amendment. The previous question was adopted, but not on the substitute. The amendment can only be reached by a reconsideration, as it has been adopted once, and hence it may be reconsidered, but not today. The vote now by which "Anaconda" was adopted can only be reached by reconsideration.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that the section as amended be adopted.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I believe I have a motion pending.

The President: The question really before the convention is upon the reconsideration of the vote by which this was adopted.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Does the reconsideration shut out all other amendments such as "White Sulphur Springs"?

The President: It may be reached by a vote to reconsider, so as to give this gentleman a chance to get the names of their towns in. It is moved and seconded to reconsider the vote by which the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow was adopted.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask who is the mover of this motion.

The President: The gentleman from Deer Lodge first moved it and then moved to lay upon the table, which motion did not prevail.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I understand the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is a reconsideration, and I raise the question as to whether the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke voted with the majority.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I did not.

Mr. Cardwell of Jefferson: I move to reconsider.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman from Jefferson moves to reconsider the vote.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be called and entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Gillette, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Myers, Middleton, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, J. K.; Watson—34.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Callaway, Courtney, Dixon, Gaylord, Hartman, Haskell, Hatoh, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Marriion, Marshall, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—32.

Absent: Webster—1.

Paired: Bullard and Fields, Cauby and Durfee, Dyer and Knippenberg, Joy and Muth—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to reconsider carried.

The President: A motion to amend is now in order. There is an amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield). The Chair would state that the motion to reconsider leaves the main question precisely as it stood before the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow was adopted, but is now subject to amendment. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield) moves to amend by striking out "Anaconda" and inserting "White Sulphur Springs."

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to say a few words with reference to the locality, that it is a good healthful town, located in the geographical center of the State of Montana. It is noted for its beautiful scenery, clever and moral people, and there is an abundance of water—which some of the gentlemen upon this floor object to. With all it is a very desirable place for the future capitol of the State of Montana, both temporary and permanent, by reason of its central location, and I do not know that the convention could make a mistake in selecting White Sulphur Springs as the future capital of the Territory of Montana, as also of the State of Montana.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I would like to ask the gentleman whether he has any town lots there for sale.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I have not any for sale there yet, but I will have if the capitol is located there.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to a point of order. The gentleman from Silver Bow offered a proviso which contained the name of Anaconda. That was voted in. My point of order is that the whole proviso goes out, and the question now is just as it was when offered by the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Kanouse).

The President: The question to reconsider the vote by which it was adopted leaves the question precisely where it was before. The gentleman is correct. The motion to reconsider the vote by which the Marrion amendment was adopted having prevailed, leaves the amendment before the convention to be disposed of. The motion is just precisely as it was offered without being voted upon. The question now before the convention is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren).

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move, sir, that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow be made a special order for eight o'clock this evening.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Let us have another night session here. I am told the reporters here, some of them have to sit up until four o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move to amend by making it a special order for ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I accept the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I suggest to my friend that we have not had a night session here yet, if we are to get through this season we have got to have several night sessions.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: If the gentleman had taken my advice we would have saved two or three days on this proposition.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren), which was accepted by the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Kanouse) to make this a special order for ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The ayes and nays were demanded on said motion.

The President: If there is no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes—Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Craven, Eaton, Gibson, Gillette, Graves, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Maginnis, Mayer, McAdow, Parberry, Reek, Rotwill, Toole, Jos. K.; Witter, Mr. President—29.

Nays—Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Burleigh, Burns, Edward; Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Gaylord, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Warren, Watson, Winston, Whitehill—36.

Absent: Loud and Webster—2.

Paired: Bullard and Fields, Cauby and Durfee, Dyer and Knippenberg, Joy and Muth—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to make the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow a special order for ten o'clock the following morning lost.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I move we take a recess until eight o'clock this evening.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The President: The Chair desires, if this motion should be carried, to announce a committee and also to have a telegram read.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the convention do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The President: The Chair will read the names of the committee empowered to wait upon the said Irrigation Committee and will then put the motion. This is a committee of five to co-operate with the President of the Convention for the purpose of waiting upon the Senatorial Irrigation Committee and to extend to them the privileges of this floor. The Committee is as follows: Maginnis, Bickford, Conrad, Kohrs and Hobson.

The Chair also desires to have a telegram from the President of the Constitutional Convention at Boise City, Idaho, read.

The Clerk read as follows: Boise City, Idaho, August 8th, President of the Constitutional Convention, Helena, Montana: The Idaho Constitutional Convention before adjournment ordered its congratulations to be sent to the Constitutional Conventions of Washington, Montana, and North and South Dakota on the progress the people of the entire Northwest are making toward early statehood. Idaho is now prepared to present itself before Congress simultaneously with its sister territories and ask for admission into the Union of States, being fully able to support a state government and possessed of unlimited natural resources. We ask for your friendly assistance and cooperation in obtaining a speedy release from territorial dependence. (Signed)

GEORGE L. SHOUP, Governor.

W. H. CLAGGETT, President.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I think, Mr. President, at the rate of progress we are making it would be well to remind them that we have to help ourselves before we can help them.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I move the President be instructed to send a proper response to the telegram.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Cooper), and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now before the convention is upon adjournment.

The Chair put the question on the motion to adjourn, and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 33 in the affirmative to 29 in the negative.

The convention stood adjourned until Friday, August 9th, 1889, at 10 A. M.

THIRTIETH DAY.

Friday, August 9th, 1889. Morning Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I rise to a question of privilege. I would state that on the day before yesterday I introduced a resolution signed by the members from Missoula County. I now desire, with the consent of the convention, to withdraw that resolution and to ask that the Clerk will read the portion of the editorial which I have marked here in the newspaper.

The President: If there be no objection this will be allowed: The Clerk read as follows: In an article printed in the Journal on Wednesday it was intimated that the votes of the Missoula delegation of the Constitutional Convention were cast upon the question of senatorial representation under an arrangement. This suggestion deeply and properly offended the Missoula members, and they united in offering a resolution denying to the Journal the privileges of the floor. This action was taken without any previous conversation with the editor of the Journal, and without giving him the opportunity to offer a voluntary expression of regret for what was unquestionably a mistaken and unjust remark. It was impressed upon the members of the delegation that a fairer and certainly a more kindly course to have taken would have been to assume that there was some mistake about the matter which the Journal would be glad to rectify were the facts in the case only brought to its editor's attention. This view was no sooner suggested to the members of Missoula than they offered to withdraw the resolution, and, were informed, they endeavored to do so yesterday morning, but for some reason, parliamentary or otherwise, it is still pending. The Journal, however, claims to be a fair and honorable newspaper, and it does not conceive itself to be relieved from any of the obligations under which honorable men rest and are supposed to rest, in their relations with one another. It is entirely satisfied that the offending paragraph did an injustice to the gentlemen from Missoula, and it would be untrue to its conceptions of the right did it permit itself to allow another day to pass without conveying to the public, to the convention and especially to the members from Missoula its sincere regret for the appearance of the erroneous report. It will not wait, therefore, for the resolution to be withdrawn.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I desire to say that we wish, so far as the Missoula delegation is concerned, to meeting the gentleman representing this paper upon the plan which they have laid down, and desire to withdraw the resolution because we feel that the paragraph just read by the Clerk is a full and complete retraction of the imputation which was placed upon the Missoula delegation. We do not wish to wage the warfare any further than is necessary, and in order to justify ourselves and place ourselves in the proper light before this convention and the people of Montana, I ask consent of the convention to withdraw the resolution.

The President: The gentleman asks unanimous consent of the convention to withdraw the resolution in relation to the article that appeared in the Helena Journal. If there be no objection the resolution will be allowed to be withdrawn.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to call the attention of the members of the convention to the fact that the members of the Senate Committee on Irrigation are here, accompanied by the director of the Geological Survey, Professor Powell, and I desire to offer the following resolution:

The Clerk read as follows: Whereas the Senate Committee to investigate and report upon the arid lands of the northwest, composed of distinguished gentlemen in public life, accompanied by the Director of the Geological Survey, are in the city, and by a resolution have been invited to visit this convention; therefore, be it resolved, as a further mark of respect and courtesy on our part, that the gentlemen comprising said committee and the Director of the Geological Survey be and they are hereby invited to address this convention upon the subject of irrigation and generally upon matters affecting the interests of the Northwest; and that a committee of three be appointed to escort the gentlemen to the convention; and that the convention take a recess for thirty minutes.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The convention will now take a recess for thirty minutes, say at eleven o'clock, at which time the convention will be called to order again. The Chair will appoint as members of the committee Mr. Toole, Mr. Marshall and Mr. Callaway.

The convention took a recess at 10:30 A. M.

The convention was called to order at 10:45 A. M.

The President: The Chair desires to state to the members of the convention that it has been suggested to him and he has acted upon that suggestion, that in order to save time the convention be called to order. We are to have the pleasure of listening to some of the distinguished gentlemen who are now visiting us, and I now have the honor of introducing to you Senator Stewart of Nevada. (Applause).

Senator William M. Stewart of Nevada spoke as follows:

Senator Stewart: Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the Convention, this is a most interesting occasion—interesting in many respects. You are one of the brightest of four new states that are about to enter the Union. The importance of this movement can hardly be realized by anybody except yourselves. Other sections of the country which have been ably represented and their wants attended to through a series of years can hardly appreciate the importance of representation from your new and growing state. The Committee on Irrigation is charged with the duty of ascertaining such facts as they can in regard to this subject, for the purpose of laying it before the Senate. The subject of irrigation, although the oldest mode of agriculture, is not understood or appreciated by the people of our race. Our ancestors came from northern Europe, where irrigation was not practiced in the time of the early emigrants to this country and has not been practiced until quite recently. Irrigation has been practiced more and more in Europe every year for the purpose of moistening the land where it is necessary in order to obtain moisture, and the irrigation dependent upon the rainfall is comparatively modern. At the time the Roman Empire was in power and governed the world, those portions of Europe where the rainfall was sufficient to raise crops were in comparative barbarism; they had cultivated the crops but very little. Men first sought the desert, and the deserts have many advantages. More than two-thirds of all the people who pursue agriculture now, and perhaps three-fourths, irrigate their land and are required to. There never was any agriculture in Egypt except by irrigation, and they practiced irrigation in Italy and Spain and Austria and throughout the Turkish Empire and most of the Russian Empire; China and India and the islands that were inhabited about the coast there, and in South America and in part of our own country—Arizona, where people flourished by agriculture in early times. And what is very remarkable, the early history of all these countries furnished us a lesson which can hardly be found elsewhere. It was supposed that the pyramids furnished the greatest example of the engineering skill of the ancients. It is now known that the engineering skill of the ancients in constructing irrigation works was equal to anything that can be done in modern times. In Egypt they found a principle of dykes used in regulating gates of masonry that were supposed to have been constructed 3600 years ago. They placed a great dyke in the Nile that connects with a basin 250 miles wide, and around it were found the remains of pottery and other things showing it had been occupied and used. It is probable that many of these works were in their prime at the time Egypt was the granary of the world; and in Palestine that is one of the problems that have puzzled men. Many people have told me that Palestine and Nevada were precisely the same kind of country. We did not know that anything could be done with Nevada at that time and it was always a matter of surprise that there could be a great people there. Professor Marsh solved the problem. He traveled over there and at every step found irrigation. Sometimes they found tanks on the side of the mountains that are still in a state of preservation. And it is so of Persia and so of India; in India, however, they kept up their irrigation. In some parts of India they have a great deal of rainfall, but very little of it comes at the right season so that they can raise crops. All the small streams of India are well cared for. The mountains of India are dotted all over with reservoirs, each farmer storing the water for himself. The map of India is a perfect picture in that respect. But they were not able to deal with large rivers in modern times. Some say they did not in very ancient times, and the English in building found that that would not do. They could not utilize the country and they commenced irrigating. The first estimate was $415,000,000 for that purpose. They have spent now two or three times that amount—I have not the exact figure—and the government retains the water and sells it at a very low rate. The estimate was to make it pay four and a half per cent on the money. They say that they are paying up the entire interest on the bonds with it, and still the country is filling up and becoming very prosperous. Now, without going further into that, and let me say that British India has 800,000 square miles. We have in this country 1,200,000 square miles of the same kind of country. By the way, in 1873 I introduced a bill which was passed providing for a commission to examine San Joaquin Valley of California. Land in it now is very valuable where irrigation is extended. Some is not irrigated yet, but all will be. Land connected with it is worth from fifty to two hundred or three hundred dollars an acre without any other improvements, while land with water—and the land and the water, by the way, should always be kept together, brings much higher prices. Well, they made a report upon that, and they had associated with them a Mr. Breerton who had been surveying in India for a long time, and he furnished some maps and gave a great deal of information in regard to it. He had traveled for a good many times across the continent here and was a mining man also and had been through the country considerably, and he contended all the time that this country is precisely the same kind of a country that India was. I think he went to the Treasury Department and to the Government and got them to send Prof. Davidson, who had been one of these commissioners, and he went to India and came back and made elaborate report of what England had done, and he also was profoundly impressed with a similar idea of the country, and particularly with a large tract of country below a certain range of mountains that is entirely similar to the country between Canada and the Mexican line, three or four hundred miles wide east of the Rocky Mountains. There they had attempted, as here, to farm without irrigation, but the natives were never able to handle these rivers to an advantage. In England they had gone to work to handle them to an advantage—spent a large amount of money on the country where there is rainfall enough some years, and they had a great many bad years. He said that the country that we reclaimed and got good crops from every year was entirely similar to that. There they have their mountain ranges the same as we have here, where irrigation is much easier. Well, now, in order to utilize this country and make it available it is necessary for the country to know what it is. Now, what is the arid region? All that is west of the 100th meridian is certainly a portion of it, and some that is east of the 100th meridian. In Dakota they require irrigation very much. They did not hardly admit it to themselves until recently. They are all now satisfied that they must avail themselves of every means to increase the water supply. Now, here is an area one-third larger than British India. We do not expect to put 350,000,000 of people on it because we do not want to crowd the people on the land, but there is no doubt that the arid region of the United States will produce as much very nearly, and perhaps more than the humid region where they have plenty of rainfall. An acre of land irrigated, according to the testimony we have taken carefully, estimated by men in your territory here, and confirmed by what we have seen everywhere, an acre of land will produce very nearly as much as the very best land in the east in a year of very good crops—of two acres of the very best land in the east in the year of good crops. It will produce on the average nearly twice as much. Somebody put it at four or five times, but I think an acre of land well irrigated is worth two acres of the best land that is not irrigated, and then you have no bad crops. You are sure of a good crop every year, and that is why they have such an enormous population in the arid country. Now, in Ceylon, which now has only 2,000,000 of people, the history of irrigation is wonderful. We have a pretty authentic history of that country for about two hundred years before the commencement of the Christian era. Every sovereign on that land yied with his predecessor for about 1500 years in producing irrigation, and they raised a population there to between fifteen and twenty millions. The historians have been examining that and are perfectly astonished at the facts that they find; but they find that all the water was practically saved. They had then war and were invaded and the irrigation works were cut and destroyed about 500 years ago, and that is one of the reasons why ancient people disappeared. But war was most fatal to them without the telegraph and without our modern means of transportation, because if they depended upon irrigation and invading armies came into their country it would be their destruction. We do not think we will meet with that calamity, but that accounts for the disappearance of many of the ancient nations. The invading army was very destructive, and until you ascertain how they lived you can hardly comprehend how they could be destroyed in such large numbers by invasion. Now, this country is different from what it is in the Atlantic States. The government is not going to build reservoirs and irrigate this country. We have not discussed such a proposition—the proposition of making appropriation for erecting irrigating works. That is another proposition altogether. But what we now propose to do by appropriations that have already been made—one made at the first session of the last Congress, and one at the second session, the first session appropriated $100,000 for the purpose of investigation and surveys, and the second session $200,000, and there was to be a reservation in the first law of all the places that were to be required for reservoirs and ditches and for hydraulic works. The reservation in the last act extended beyond that and perhaps too far. It would require further legislation in order to enable people to acquire land. As you are well aware, the settler cannot go in one of those valleys where there are 100,000 or 10,000 or 5,000 acres of land to be irrigated by one stream and locate a homestead and stay on it. He must first get the water; and to get the water on a large scale requires capital and combination. But before either will proceed at all, a survey is necessary. Now, I know plenty of people that live right along the foot of the mountains, and know nothing about what they contain. I have been called upon to litigate with regard to water rights. I have suggested to parties before they spend any money litigating they had better go up in the mountains and see if they could not get more water. They would find lakes there and little dams and the people would all be supplied. It would cost in many instances a good deal less than the litigation in courts. As I say, I find people living right in the valleys that knew little about the mountains. Indeed, there is a peculiarity and some of the witnesses that we have met in our investigation have mentioned it, and I mention it because it will be called to mind by every old prospector, if he will think about it—he may not have thought about it at the time, but if he will think about it he will remember that on the ridges of all the mountains throughout this country, however abrupt or perpendicular they have looked, you will find near the summit flats and swamps and lakes discharging their narrow gorges, where a slight dam will keep back a large amount of water. But the emigrant goes through—and you not having found it out in thirty years the emigrant is not going to find it out and determine what is to be done. Now, Congress has established the principle that it will survey the public lands for the benefit of settlers so that it can be made available. Now, what is proposed is to have these mountain ranges and the lines of ditches indicated, because they must indicate the line of ditch if they are going to segregate the land that can be irrigated from the other land—and the reservoirs surveyed and located and an estimate sufficiently accurate for general purposes of the probable cost. Then, you will find through this country innumerable places that you do not think anything about now, where the water can be cheaply put upon the land. When that is done we think that the people will flow into these cheap places at first and they will be made available. Then, when we come to handle the larger rivers and deal with the greater subject, that is a matter of after consideration. Now, too, the American people when they find that they have got a home for 100,000,000 or 150,000,000 of people where they can live and enjoy themselves and raise crops with certainty, and that it is a healthful country, and has many advantages, and it is the only place that the future population can go to—when the American people realize that fact there is enough genius in our country to utilize it without impoverishing the country and without violating any principles of government. Undoubtedly you will find new problems of government in this question. It has been suggested and it has been discussed a good deal in various sections that they must have local government. That has been the result everywhere. There has to be some local government to regulate the water and properly distribute it. Now, here water is the principle thing. Land is the incident, so far as land is concerned, and the water laws that England has adopted—that is the English courts said that it is best for the people that the water should flow in the stream; they wanted to keep it clean for fishing and sporting and drainage was rather more necessary than irrigation, and consequently they adopted certain rules making them keep the water in the streams, and they would not let it be diverted at all. But even in England that is all changed and modified. The rivers are all used there for sewers and other things, and it had to be changed even there. But England when it made this proposition that you had to confront was not hampered by this common law at all. They first appointed a commission to see when they had got to take hold of it, and when there was a failure among the railroads and they continued to have those famines they sent a commission to examine the laws in relation to water which had been distributed in ancient times in ancient Rome—collect the laws and examine them and make a report. Then they took hold of the question in a very able way. They declared that all the waters of India were to be controlled by the government. They declared that, and then they passed an easy law for condemnation and regulation of the water. That was more arbitrary than we could do probably, but we have got to reach the result. If the water is to be used by the community, and the water is the principle thing, we ought to start in at once with our faces firmly set against any person owning the land to sell. That should be the leading principle in every movement, that the man with such land should have the right to the water—not the right that somebody else will control, but he should have an interest and properly right in the water. That can be very well arranged, because if it is not you will have a country of lords and barons and plebeians very soon. But that you will control by your local government. You will work it out and you will find out that the common law is after all simply a system of principles to be applied to the facts as they are developed. It is not true that the common law consists of immemorial usages. We are making common law every day. You have got a common law system governing your mining actions that the Supreme Court of the United States is bound to adopt. As courts adopt and confirm your rights, they accept it, and no genius of man could have invented such a system as grew up by experience starting in California and spreading all over the territory. You are going to apply the facts as they exist to the common law which, properly understood, means that there shall be such administration of the law, such application of the facts as they exist in the different localities, as will inure to the greatest good of the people. That is the way the common law started and changes and grows. Why, every railroad contractor and every steamboat engineer and every railroad engineer is making common law. You will have a whole system of common law in regard to the railroads and in regard to the telephone. We have no difficulty in applying it to those principles. We decide what a man must reasonably do in order to promote the greatest good—what the interests of the country require. We do not want to go to Europe for facts when we come here. That will be worked out by local government. Now, all that this committee want is to get the facts as far as we can claim them as we travel through the country, and we want those having facts here, we want them to come before the committee and make a statement. We expect your surveyors, etc., will give us the general facts. We cannot go into much detail because we want to go into all the arid country. The detail will come with the surveys. You will have a section of country surveyed and you will see whether it is worth dealing with, so as not to mislead the people. No people ought to be brought into this country in the belief that they can farm without irrigation. I have seen some very cruel examples of that—not being prepared for the new situation from arid lands. The new situation, although it requires experience, and we have not been taught in it, is not an embarrassing one when we understand it. If the people had come from the Pacific and occupied this country, the Atlantic Coast states would probably have been a wilderness today, because ordinarily it costs less to bring a farm here in the arid region—it costs much less to bring a farm under cultivation than it did to clear the land along the Atlantic coast. Our honest ancestors had a very hard time, and if they had come here they would have found it much easier. They would have stuck to the country where they could be sure of crops every year. But take the stranger and put him in a new situation which seems to him impossible—and people who pass along the railroad and with an unpractical eye, they pronounce it a desert, they think there is nothing to be seen along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad, whereas it goes through one of the most magnificent countries in the world. The eastern part of Montana is a most magnificent domain. It has its rivers; its soil is fertile; the climate is superb; the latitude is not high. You have the most luxuriant grass for stock, and when the land that can be cultivated is brought under cultivation and you feed your stock in winter and fatten them besides so as to send dressed beef and fat cattle to Chicago, why this is the meat producing section of the world. Montana, I think very likely this eastern portion of Montana, will produce more food for man than the same number of square miles in the Mississippi valley. You may take out your mountain ranges and your waste land—and there is not so much waste land as you think, and all this waste land is nutritious pasture land—and you have your pasture land and a sure crop, and what would be regarded a wondrous crop in the east. They tell me they have in this territory produced as much as twelve tons of hay to the acre; but six tons is an ordinary crop and that is about as well as they can do anywhere. Then you have the advantage over almost all countries of this brisk, invigorating and exhilarating climate. You can raise a good crop of men and women not affected with malaria. The men and women raised in the mountains are always superior in that respect from malaria and fever and grow up healthy; and liberty will always prevail in the mountains because people are bright and healthy and not subject to sickness. And then your mines; I will not speak of them. As we are talking about irrigating land to make it productive, there is another class of men who know how to irrigate something else and make it productive. There is a class of men that irrigate debts and make them grow. The debts of the United States have grown independent of the interest at least thirty-five per cent in sixteen years. That is a pretty rapid growth—the debts of the civilized world. And how is that done? It was done by a rascally form of irrigation. They irrigate the contractors with rascality, and produce an enormous growth, and if it won't be out of the way here I want to explain how that is done.

President Clark: Not at all. Proceed, Senator.

Senator Stewart: That is a little out of your province, and I do not propose to turn this into a silver meeting (Applause); but inasmuch as I see a great many of my old fellow miners here I would like to explain the trick that has been played on them. Now, everything depends upon the law of supply and demand. You have heard that said a great deal, but you hardly realize it—that is, all value depends upon the desire of men to have a certain thing. Nothing is valuable that men do not want. Some things have value in one place but not in another. If you were on Lake Superior you would not think of buying water, but put you out on the Colorado desert twenty miles from any habitation, and no water within twenty miles, and I do not think there is any of you but would give whatever he had for plenty of water. So you see where the quantity is very limited and the desire very great a thing has value. Suppose there were no rocks here but gold, gold would have the same intrinsic value as it now has, but everybody would get it without paying for it. So it depends upon those two things. Now, when a wheat crop fails everybody says wheat is going to be dear. And the ladies at the market know everything is going to be dear if it is scarce. That is the universal law of supply and demand. Well, that is applied to money just the same as everything else. When money is scarce it will go up, and when it is plentiful it will go down. Now, there is half of the world will tell you that gold is a standard, and it does not make a great deal of difference whether you have a little of it or a good deal of it, it has the same value, and that is the same with the monometalists. They call it intrinsic value, and some writers on the subject call it intrinsic value. But there is nothing in it but the desire of men. Value is outside of a thing, quality is in the thing, but value is outside, and the use of those terms intrinsic value misleads the people and they just argue the question that gold is the very best thing for money. Now, all mankind from the earliest history of the world have found it necessary, in any attempt to emerge out of barbarism, to have some medium of exchange, something that would be a general standard of profit. The savages even attempted a little. In portions of Asia they had it in early times. History says they used Mubay; and they had it stamped; and our ancestors used a grosser kind of money, used cattle and used hides and all things have been used, and there has to be some medium of exchange. If I was reduced to what I could produce for myself I would have a pretty rough time. Now, just think of yourselves out here compelled to make your clothes and make your food. Just imagine yourself out in this country alone. Pick your place and if you are alone you cannot do much. You have got to let somebody else have half, and he has got to do the same, and that enables civilization to progress. One man has something that you want and you have something that he wants, but in order that civilization may progress they must have a medium of exchange. Well, now, whenever that medium of exchange is increased it grows cheaper and property grows dearer. While property is going up people will put money in property, because they are making money by it. As long as property is growing dearer you want to get property, and the effort of men to get property makes times good. That is enterprise. He will invent ways of making property cheap. In other words, when that life blood, when it is full it runs forward with the rapidity that can hardly be realized, when money is going up and property is going down, so that every time you agree to deliver money you have got to deliver more than at the time you make the contract. The person that goes in cheap borrows money; he sells it "short," in the language of the Stock Exchange. He undertakes to deliver a thing at a future day that he has not got, and if it is scarcer then he is destroyed. If it is a stock and you pool if you break the shorts; if it is a debt and the money is much more dear so that he cannot get it to pay the debt the man is ruined. Now, there has been in the history of the world many times when money was plenty, and then we have prosperity. It has been a long time since the world had confidence in gold and silver; it is a long time since that confidence was established; and it has been looked upon now for nearly three or four hundred years as the only kind of money. It may not be the only kind of money; probably you would get a commodity of no value at all, and have it universally, in other words fiat money; but they do not take into consideration the fact that there are twelve millions of people to be educated to believe that the amount on hand will be kept the same. Now, there are twelve millions of people educated in the use of silver. Sixteen years have not deprived them of the knowledge that silver is money. There are probably five millions of people who only use gold—may be ten millions of people—not more. There are 250,000,000 people that regard gold as money, but those that use it are very few in number, and there are not more than 250,000,000 that regard it as money at all; but the civilized regard it as money, and the civilized world has regarded both gold and silver as money for a very long time, but gold has been so expensive that it could not be used through the vast multitude of Asia, where the great mass of mankind live, although the merchants have some idea of its value. Now, these two metals have been in the most civilized countries regarded for four thousand years as money, and out of them they have made standard money. When there has been a good crop of money there has been progress, and I defy any historian to examine it from the beginning to end and find that there has been any considerable progress of civilization. There were some inventions of money in the countries about the Mediterranean that helped somewhat, but there has been no progressive stride in the world's history except at the times when there was a bounteous supply from the mines. In the time of Abraham we hear of the Jews giving money and from Abraham down to the time of Solomon, Solomon got large supplies of gold and silver from Ophir—gold from Ophir and silver from other places. We find that they accumulated there vast stores of gold and silver, and the Phenicians had prosperity about the same time. The historians say they gathered gold and silver from all the countries around the Mediterranean, and the Egyptians when they flourished had mica as the prevailing value. The ruins of the mines in ancient Egypt are still monuments to their industry and monuments to their exertions to obtain gold and silver, and when Rome started in on her career of power she commenced by capturing countries and obtaining their gold and silver, until finally all the civilized countries of Europe and Asia and Africa within the reach of Rome—all that they had accumulated was gradually brought under the dominion of Rome. Then she went further and enslaved the soldiers. Spain presents today a grand picture of the terrible exertions of men in tearing down mountains to get gold and silver, and it is estimated by Jacob and others that at the time of Augustus the Roman Empire had about 2,000,000,000 of our money in circulation—of gold and silver—besides a vast amount which was in plate and ornaments, for they used gold and silver for ornamental purposes then more than they do now. It would be difficult now to find the amount of bullion in this country that they had; they had a vast amount. Then commenced in testine war. The war broke out and the property became unsafe. They were invaded by the barbarians of the north. It was taken and wasted and lost. No more mining was conducted, and in seven hundred years the whole stock was practically exhausted and remained so until the fifteenth century. Why, Jacob and other historians tell us, that during the seven hundred years preceding the discovery of America that the art of separating gold and silver from the baser metals was lost and had to be acquired again through the different processes that the ancients had acquired. Those were the dark ages; everybody was poor; a man's debt was growing larger all the while; a mortgage on a farm would grow larger and the price of commodities less every year, until men settled down into despair and slavery. A braver race never occupied the earth, and they were reduced to slavery. I tell you poverty makes a man a coward quicker than anything else. You see a poor fellow that is in bad luck; he finally gets to be a nuisance; you kick him out of the bar room; and he would strike a good mine and he would have a fine horse and a new suit of clothes and a pistol in his belt, and he would go through your town with a chip on his shoulder and there would be none of you that would want to disturb him either. It is luck that transforms the man. Year after year of hard times makes men cowards. It was a great mystery to me until I understood how the Romans could be enslaved; but I see now, year after year of poverty and starvation, family to support, wages getting lower, property getting lower, times getting harder all the time. That is what makes men weak and cowardly. Now, after the discovery of gold and silver in Mexico and South America, we not only mined but we robbed the people of what they had. They had large stores. They were partially civilized. It was taken to Europe and excited Europe and it revived mining everywhere, and people had some money in their pockets, and they commenced walking about and telling the monarchs of that country to stand back; they had chips on their shoulders, and were willing to meet any issue. The life blood of civilization was poured from the mines of America during three hundred years, and progress was onward and upward. Until the civilization of the nineteenth century was created—until about the commencement of this century, the wars in Mexico and South America retarded it somewhat, and from 1810 to 1850 we had a pretty hard time. Wages were low; property was low; a man was very glad to get $8 a month on a farm in Ohio where I lived at that time. I worked for that myself.

I know just how it was. I tell you times were hard. Prices were falling. The whole world was struggling for the want of a crop of money. There was a famine of money during that period, and all the impetus of three hundred years of supplies and the accumulations on hand was not sufficient to keep up prosperity. Then it was that this new discovery came. California and Australia were discovered, and this was a new era, new life blood for progress, new life blood for civilization, and everything started throughout the world, and the progress of the twenty-three years from 1850 to 1873, take the civilized world at large, has no parallel in any period of 100 years, in finance, in wealth, in accumulation of wealth, because most every enterprise was necessarily a success—not everyone—a man might fool away his money and get broke, but the average business man, if he invested in property during that period would find that his property had increased. Of course, we had commenced to resume specie payments, and it was a little hard in this country just at that time; but take the average and the country was prosperous. Well, now, this gold and silver—the gold that came from California and Australia alarmed the men who had fixed incomes and had bonds, and during all that period the world kept in debt pretty fast because men are still money short when they think it is going down, and everybody was at work. They said it was necessary to protect the bonds—those persons having a fixed income—and the thing started with the suggestion of exaggerated reports that came from California and Australia, and they said here we must not make money out of gold; make silver the standard; it will destroy civilization to have gold in this country. Everybody can use silver. The silver is used all over the world; and they wrote the most magnificent books about it, enough to break down this fable. France appointed a commission to demonetize gold, Germany and Austria in 1857, right on the first alarm, decided to demonetize gold and to adopt a silver standard. In Holland it was the same, and it was contemplated throughout, but England would not change. England in 1816 had demonetized gold in England, and as long as other nations kept it up as the standard it kept the price equal and consequently England did not like to change and would not change. France did not decide which metal she would demonetize, but in the Franco-German war then Germany said, we are the greater nation now and you cannot demonetize gold; we will demonetize silver; and they were producing a good deal of silver. Then they came to the United States and they got a bill through Congress that left out the silver dollar. Nobody knew how that was done—nobody knew anything about it, but it was gotten through. Well, that left out the silver dollar here. Now, then, they used the United States and Germany to get the balance of Europe—the United States and Germany and England undertook to operate upon the balance of Europe and finally at the end of 1875 we had every mint in the civilized world closed against silver, and silver then fell like lead, and then we found out we had demonetized it. Nobody knew it until that time, because Europe kept the bimetallic basis up by receiving silver until 1875 or the beginning or pretty near the beginning of 1876, until it was generally known. In January, 1875, President Grant when he signed the Specie Resumption Bill, sent a special message to Congress establishing the two or three mints of St. Louis and Omaha for the purpose of coining silver dollars. He had no idea that no silver dollars had been coined. We did not know it until silver fell and then we began to feel it. Well, then there was a struggle in Congress, and they operated things there in a way that did not do silver much good. Well, now, what was the effect of this thing? Why, there was at that time \$100,000,000 of indebtedness, public and private. There were \$25,000,000 in the civilized world of national debts, payable in either gold or silver. There was three or four times that amount in private debts, incorporated debts, city debts and state debts, municipal debts of every kind probably three or four times; that makes \$75,000,000,000 more, making \$100,000,000,000. Now, a large portion of this was controlled in Europe by Rothschilds and other syndicates all working in harmony, they placing it among the people that enjoyed these fixed incomes, and then it was invested in bonds for them, and they controlled it. Now, the object of making it more valuable was this: We had an aggregate then approximately, say \$200,000,000 borrowed money in gold and silver. It did not make any difference whether you had gold or silver, because it is the dollar that you want, the dollar that the demand is for, and if a dollar can be made out of either one of these articles I hold in my hand, it would not make any difference to the man I owe, because it is the dollar that he is after, and since the dollar can be made out of a good amount of gold or a good amount of silver, those things were equal to each other, and it did not make any difference whether more was produced of one metal than of the other, for from 1500 to 1850, 350 years, the average production of gold and silver was 70 of silver and 30 of gold, on the basis of 15½ to 1. From 1850 to 1873, during the whole of that period the amount of gold produced is estimated to have been 70 to the amount of silver produced of 30. It was changed right around. Still it did not make any difference because they were both money metals; there was the one standard, and that of money. Talk about the double standard, there never was but one standard of money, having the same purchasing power, and when they struck down silver they cut off half the supply, what has been the effect? Just what those who did it anticipated. It has enhanced the value of bonds and depreciated the value of property all over the world. Now, it is estimated by the statisticians of Germany and England that have given their lives to it and it was presented to the Royal Commission recently that the decline in value during the last sixteen years has been 33 ⅓ per cent, and it is still going down. It will take 35 per cent more money, more labor, more cotton, more of everything to pay the debt now than it would to have paid the same debt sixteen years ago. It has been added to in that proportion to the addition of interest, there has been that much added to all debts that have existed down to this time; and that is not all, this addition is going on, and if the price of property goes down so that people cannot meet their debts, it makes hard times. Now, this question of whether silver should be restored has been considered largely in England. They found trade was depressed and they appointed a commission on the depression of trade. They found that it ran right into this question of gold and silver. They then appointed a commission on the recent changes in the relative value of gold and silver. These two commissions have been occupying the time for the last four or five years, and they have taken a vast amount of testimony. In the first place the farmers went before the gold and silver commission and said it was ruining them—"This low price of produce is ruining us and cannot we have some help?" "Since silver was demonetized it puts down the price of farm products." They said to them frankly in substance, "There is no help for you; you cannot supply our people—our manufacturers—and they must be supplied from abroad, we are dependent upon our commerce and manufactures and we must buy our products from abroad." "We understand that," they said, "but see since we have cut silver down what are the consequences? We had been dependent for generations upon America for a supply of breadstuffs. We had to pay enormous prices. Our dominions in India were not able to compete with America in the production of wheat. Now, behold, we take 70 cents, go to America and buy a dollar's worth of silver, because they all said that the purchasing power of silver had not perceptibly diminished in America or Asia, and they estimated it would take hundreds of years before that great mass of people could be taught that their unit of money in silver was not standard; they think it has intrinsic value—all Asia thinks that, and all Asia cannot be educated; consequently they will come to some kind of rental of property, and they can take, as I said before, seventy cents, buy a dollar's worth of silver, and there buy as much wheat as anywhere; and by that process you raise the price of Indian wheat from nothing to forty cents per acre. Besides there is South America, Argentine Republic and Chile brought much on a similar basis, and some from Russia, which is not on a gold basis; but our importations from the United States have fallen off in this article of wheat in the last sixteen years at least one half, and the price has fallen 33 ⅓ per cent." Now, do not you see that has accomplished something from effect; and the manufacturer comes up and says "I am manufacturing here on a gold basis, and I have to sell my commodities in India on a silver discount, and there is thirty per cent." They say to the manufacturer, "Why look at the situation? We give you cheap food; we liberated you from buying high priced food from America; we did that; that is a great gain. We did another thing for you; we developed India, and you have the monopoly of trade with India—there are 250,000,000, and we have other colonies where we give you a monopoly, making probably a monopoly of 300,000,000 of people that you can supply with cheap food. That enables you to manufacture cheaply, because you can have enormous sales, and therefore you must submit to this with the idea that you will be ultimately benefited because our trade ranges are such that we can keep them without putting on tariffs at all—we can keep out others by government mail regulations—governed by the military—and we can give you that trade. Now, is it not better to get your wheat from India than to be dependent on the United States?" Then came the great argument. There were thirteen commissioners. Chamberlain was one of them; he resigned and that made twelve. Well, they voted at the end six to six. Six of that side that under no circumstances would they consider the system of demonetizing silver. The other six said it might possibly be—while they would suggest for the consideration of parliament that it might possibly be a good thing. They said "We do not underrate the all important consideration that England is the creditor nation," all debts payable in gold, and that anything that will raise the price of commodities generally, that is that will make gold cheap—anything that will make gold cheap and property dearer, raises the price of commodities anywhere—will be injurious to England; that she now has the commercial supremacy of the world; that all the world is paying tribute to her, and that the contract is that the tribute shall be paid in money; consequently the lowest money we have the more of toil it will take from all the nations of the world to pay that tribute. That is what they said, and that being the controlling interest, that being the controlling motive, we will adhere to gold." And there are those greedy enough to stop the mining of gold if it can be carried out; but they have carried this thing too far now; they have carried it to the verge of bankruptcy. Take the railroads for instance. This United States has been the fat goose to pluck ever since the war. We showed such enormous vigor in meeting our obligations and such sturdy honesty after the war, and such boundless resources as to astonish the people of Europe, and our banks in New York formed partnerships with the money lenders of Europe—those that had the disposition of the bonded indebtedness of the world; they formed a syndicate with them; they represented that all that appeared to be true was true, that with the resources of America we are boundless, that there was no debt that she could not pay; and on that they formed syndicates, and when they wanted money for railroads, and towns wanted money, etc., they had these syndicates loan to them, and they borrowed more than was absolutely necessary. It is remarkable that some men have gotten rich by mortgaging them for two or three times their cost, but the debts are there, and the mortgages are there, and the people who own them have got to get along the best they can. Railroads have got the great load to carry, but they are not complaining; that would destroy their credit and the bonds would be sent home. They dare not even complain; they dare not even to say "you must not press this thing too far"; but the people who are paying railroad freights and fares throughout the United States, from which they are to get their money have already given them their notice practically by the decreasing business on the railroads and the shrinking business everywhere that money is getting too dear and property is getting too cheap, and something must be done to relieve the situation. We are told, however, that we are silly children and have not yet investigated the question. "Why, what a crazy man he is," they say, to hear me talk this way. They say you can borrow money for less than two per cent in New York. Yes, you can, and what does that show? That subject was considered by this commission, too, and they said that it was a sign that money was tight there. Why, this circulating medium, this blood of civilization, money that circulates there, it is like the blood that circulates in the system, when a patient is sick it will rush to the head, and if you bleed him he will die. Now, here the money of this country is too dear to put in an ordinary business; it is too dear for that, and consequently everybody is curtailing his expenses, reducing wages, cutting off expenses, reducing and trying to meet the storm when it comes. The whole country is providing for this storm, and the money has gone to the center of the country, it seeks investment somewhere, and it will take gilt-edged securities—bonds, and money is getting cheap for that purpose; and I submit to the people if money is cheap for business purposes, something has to be done. What do you suggest? I would suggest this, as I believe this country is in a condition to get on a sound financial basis. I would take all the gold and silver that is produced and issue coin certificates payable in either gold or silver coin—making no distinction. I would take it at our ratio of sixteen to one. They say that would be a great swindle. Who would it swindle? Silver would be at par the next day after that, and would remain at par as long as the United States would do that, because nobody would sell silver in any part of the world for less price than they could get in the United States, consequently that would be the price of it if we could give that. Then there would be no more cheap silver to buy wheat in India. Then silver would go up, then we would have what money in circulation we could produce in gold and silver. We would destroy the old limitation upon it, and we would restore to the people the benefits of the discoveries of modern times. We would revive mining. They sneer at that. They say that we want to sell our silver money—these gold bugs say "They want to sell their silver." Now, I do not make any poor mouth about the silver matters. I undertake to say that our sufferings are nothing compared to the wheat sufferers, and you have got a better country in Montana to bring out the silver moneys than anyone; it is at least as good as any of them. We can use all our silver mines and develop this country and make it as good as any country. But was it a good thing for this country when we were the largest silver producing country in the world, when we led off in developing mines, when the genius of the American people had opened up mines to extract the gold—and were really the men that were causing the gold to be produced in this and other countries—was it a good thing to destroy them to sacrifice them—to do no good to any person—to do no good to any person in the world except themselves that live on fixed incomes? Was it a good thing to destroy one of the principal industries of the country without excuse, and however they may sneer at us, there has been dishonestly taken from us by legislation in actual discounts, besides the destruction of many properties and the ruin of many men that had spent their lifetime in developing the country here—had devoted their lives to the development of the mines—there has been actually taken from us in actual money on the silver proceeds of this country over \$90,000,000 of money. (Applause). Taken from us to give to whom? To American citizens? No. To be given to foreign bondholders to enrich them; because we are a borrowing nation—debtor nation; and the witnesses that we called before the interstate commission sneered at us and said "Who can imagine the value of America—a wheat producing, bread producing country, a silver producing country, a debtor country that is destroying one of their greatest industries, contract their currency and augment their debts." They laughed at us as silly. Still the Treasury Department will take its dictation through London and New York, and follow their dictations, and it has been so for the last twenty-five years. Now, I do not propose any new thing. I am not an inflationist, I want honest money, and I do not want them to interfere with it by legislation. If we are to take the precious metals that have been handled for four thousand years, let no legislative authority interfere with it or tamper with it. (Applause). Now, the argument they have is this, that we cannot do this alone, that we must ask Europe's consent, and every emissary of the bondholders will say, "I am a better bimetalist than you are, but you must get England and other countries to agree." If we cannot do it with the consent of the bondholders we can never do it and they know it. They never will consent to relinquishing the advantages they have got of the American people, for it is American property they are plundering. (Applause). Now, it was well developed in this investigation that there is no accumulation of silver bullion anywhere. London economists sold it out and said there was more coin by eighteen per cent used in the bonds than was produced. They said there must be that much coin of the old coin; that it was all consumed, that there is no surplus silver anywhere in the world; and then it was said with a great deal of truth by people acquainted with Asia that a vast multitude of that country who used silver were being stimulated to little more activity and the demand for silver was constantly increasing. I tell you it does not go up because it is held down. There they do not have the law of supply and demand. It is held down by two governments. These treasury departments exaggerate the amount produced. They get it just as big as they can and call it official. I suppose there is about a little over 100,000,000—probably 110,000,000 of silver produced and about 90,000,000 of gold—about 200,000,000 in all. Well, now, how do they keep it down? We are required to buy 2,000,000 a month, 24,000,000 a year in coin, which with a discount keeps it up to thirty-one or two millions of a nominal value. Then England buys about forty-five millions for the purpose of supplying Asia; and nobody else can supply Asia. The English council that governs India draws bills on India for everything that India has to pay to England, and inasmuch as these bills are payable in silver, the price they will sell for in London determines the price of silver. Now, there is nobody else who can send silver to China. If any merchant in this country undertook sending silver to any other country, England will sell council bills lower— $\frac{1}{2}$ a point lower, and although they will lose money they will make it in the end. The two governments buy pretty much all the silver produced except what is used in the arts. Now, if silver is likely to go up, they say "We will sell the council bills payable in silver in India." They can go three months and not buy any silver, if there is any symptom. So they bull the market in that way. Let any improvement be made in this country, and they will drop the council bills one or two points. So you can see then how much harm they are doing in putting down silver. Now, my object in stating all this is, to illustrate the condition of things going to show that there is no surplus on hand. That being the fact now how are we going to be flooded with silver? In the first place, they have no silver there which they can spare except of base coin. It is the money of the people and in the hands of the people. There is a little of it in the banks, a little of it in the treasury, but it is the people's money, and they are educated to use it and must have it. But suppose they should undertake to send it here. They have got actually less than 100,000,000 of legal tender silver in all Europe and if we resume we should take silver at $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1, their ratio. The person who would buy silver in Europe would be required to pay an ounce of gold to $15\frac{1}{2}$ ounces of silver. He would have to add another ounce of silver to get his money in this country. Now, how much do we want? We have got outstanding over 600,000,000 of paper—630,000,000 last winter, I had it figured up—630,000,000 of the various denominations, greenbacks, national bank notes and I cannot tell you all, a whole lot of different things that circulate as money. Now, will anybody that is ever so much of an advocate of interest money—would it do any hurt to put 600,000,000 of silver dollars or silver bullion behind that? Would it not be guaranteed by the government? Would not that be pretty good money? Well, now, I believe, and that is the opinion of most people, that it will take 300,000,000 to put this country per capita where it was in 1808, there has been such a vast increase of population. The national bank currency has retired nearly 200,000,000 of it—175,000,000 since 1883 by the payment of notes—by the payment of bonds upon which it is predicated. You know that paid up bonds. When the bonds are paid the circulation has to be retired and they have retired 175,000,000 of this national bank currency in the last five years, and they will continue to retire it. And in 1891 there are 69,000,000 dollars of the remaining national bank currency to be retired. There are 69,000,000 of the $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent bonds that will mature at that time. So the whole of the national bank currency will run out in a few years, without legislation. Now, something must be done. Now, these bondholders in Europe believe that our credit is immaculate. Let a few railroads default and the bonds will come here for collection and for sale. 50,000,000 of dollars have gone in the last six months—70,000,000 of gold and silver. It is going very rapidly now, and if they should get a little scared they would call for it, for we cannot pay them in wheat; they have put down the price of wheat. We have got to pay in gold. That is the time our gold will go and not fill them. But I say it will take 300,000,000 to put us right. There will be 900,000,000. Then with the increase of population and business from year to year you have got to increase it. Does anybody believe we can get 900,000,000 of gold and silver, or even 800 or 600,000,000 of gold and silver in the next nine or ten years? I do not believe it is possible, if we will take all of the gold and silver that is produced at a rate of 16 to 1 and issue coin certificates payable in coin to overreach the metallic basis; but suppose that we take all that we can get, and suppose that we can get 1,500,000,000 of gold and silver piled up, then according to any sound principle of banking we could keep an issue, and it would be a reserve. So that take this particular opportunity, get all the gold and silver we can—no country ever had too much—and reach a metallic basis if we can. If we can get a basis for a circulation that will circulate throughout the world, that is what we want to do, and what these new States will help do. I think they have got to have something. They will try to patch up more national bank notes or some ephemeral thing that is not sanctioned by the ages. When the people get rich enough that they can evade fiat money; but while a mass of mankind must adhere to metallic money give us our right that we shall have it measured fairly by the amounts of money that can be produced, and we will enrich the people of the east and all Europe—the struggling people everywhere.

and that delve in the mines here we will increase in the production; we will give them a little more money every year so that property and wages may go up rather than down; so that these generations may enjoy the benefits and blessings of the great discoveries in coining that have been made. I say to the bondholders it is better for you to do this than to take the chances of repudiation. The people of the United States cannot continue to pay fares and freights on railroads sufficient to pay the interest on the debts already contracted, let alone paying dividends to the stockholders. The thing will stop itself as easily as two and two make four. The demonetizing of silver has not only effected that matter, but it has diminished the production of gold. You all know that 1-3 and perhaps $\frac{1}{2}$ of all the gold that is produced is produced in combination with silver or silver mines, and that the mines throughout the world that are worked for both gold and silver would not pay if worked for one of the metals alone. Let the monometallists have their way and demonetize silver so as to stop these mines, and you will have to cut off more than one-half of the gold supply, and here we will be vastly increased in population; there will be a vastly increased demand for money and a constant decline, perpetual and forever withering contraction. And it is here in America—here alone that this can be withstood. The common people do not discuss it; they have no means of discussing it. Europe is governed by the bondholders, by the people living on fixed incomes, and they issue their decrees and they must be obeyed. It has, beside, a military camp, and any attempt at strikes or resistance is quickly quelled by the force of their military establishments. It is here in free America that we must restore an honest standard of money and prevent those holding fixed capital from destroying this civilization by contraction. They are depriving this generation of a great boon that the discovery and development of mines has furnished for us. It is our heritage; it is the heritage of civilized man that mines had been discovered and that civilization has progressed. We protest and will ever protest against the crime of the century that undertook to interfere with that right—undertook to cut off half the supply of the precious metals for the selfish purpose of increasing the obligations of contracts and adding millions and millions of days of toil—making it necessary for millions of days of toil—who can estimate it?—to pay the debt that has already been made by the increase of thirty-five per cent of the existing debts of the world besides the thousands that are thrown out of employment and must starve in consequence of it. We say that we will protest against this crime and we will work in season, and out of season to restore this country to its money, to restore it to its inheritance which gave it an independent financial policy, it needs that as much as it needs political independence; it needs financial independence quite as much. Its financial dependence upon England is most degrading. The fact that the telegraph can send through New York to London for the orders of financial managers, and that those in the treasury department of all parties obey their behests is humiliating to us Americans; when they tell you that they are bimetalists, you must ask England to tell them that they must stop talking such nonsense, that they are in the employ of the enemy and attempting to betray you; that you are willing to trust the limitation that the word has placed for the last four thousand years upon the amount of currency; that you will take the amount, let it be covered by the amount of gold and silver that can be produced, and until some evil results from using these metals and it be made apparent to you, you will not change. If the crop of gold and silver fail, the creditor would say I must have my gold and silver. Why, when we have a crop of gold we are not entitled to it. Why? Are not enterprise and civilization entitled to it? Why are those that live on fixed incomes and can produce nothing and live upon the toil and sweat of others, why should legislation be made for them particularly, which shall impoverish the masses. Why, Montana, Washington, Idaho and the two Dakotas will join with Kansas, Nebraska and other States which understand this question—and I am glad that there are here now two champions of the rights of the people and have stood up on all occasions for the rights of honest money. My two colleagues on this committee have done yeoman work in behalf of the people and have opposed contraction at every step. Be assured that those who have come here among you are in full sympathy with you—full sympathy with honest money—full sympathy with the development of this country, and we have come here, if we can, to find out how we can do you good. (Applause)

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move to take a recess until half past one, when we will listen to the distinguished colleagues of the gentleman who has so eloquently addressed us.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 1:30 P. M.

Friday, August 9th, 1889. Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 1:30 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The convention will now have the pleasure of listening to another of our distinguished visitors, Senator Reagan. I have the honor to introduce to you Senator Reagan from Texas. (Applause)

Senator John H. Reagan of Texas spoke as follows:

Senator: Mr. President and gentlemen of the convention, I esteem it a very great honor to have the privilege of appearing before the chosen representatives of the Territory of Montana and of saying a few words in reference to questions which not only interest your immediate section but the whole country. The Congress of the United States have made provision for securing surveys to determine where the waters are located which may be used for irrigation, and for setting apart such waters and the land necessary to apply them to the use of the public. The Senate of the United States felt that the question was one of sufficient importance to justify the appointment of a committee to inquire into the question of irrigation in the arid regions of the United States. When we remember that about four-ninths of the territory of the United States is in a condition which requires irrigation to utilize its soil and to give the full fruition of its crops, you will understand how important the question is to us. The question of irrigation is not a new one to our country. It is older than history, established in Egypt and Asia. It has been extensively applied for a long time to much of Europe, especially in Italy, in Spain, and more recently in France. It has been extensively applied in the Republic of Mexico, and in Central and South America. So that we have much information on this subject to guide our actions, and may avail ourselves of the experience of other countries in the development of a system of irrigation for the people of the United States. I do not profess to be familiar with the subject, though I have been learning as much as I could from my distinguished friend, the Senator from California, and from Major Powell who is along with us—trying to learn all I can to join in an intelligent report to the Senate as to such facts as may guide the action either of the federal or state governments or territorial governments, or of the people themselves. I shall not go into any detailed discussion of the question of irrigation. The application of rules which would distribute the water that may be obtained for the irrigation of the alluvial lands of the country is one of a great deal of interest; it is one of much difficulty, and gives rise to a great deal of controversy where there is no certain system whereby the water of the ditches can be applied to the soil. I am inclined to the belief that the plan suggested by Major Powell will probably be found to be the best. I would not encourage the people to expect too much from the federal government. It will no doubt furnish surveys and the information necessary to enable the State and Territorial governments and the people to avail themselves of such water privileges as may be within their reach. That it will enter upon the system to provide irrigation is doubtful, is improbable. I do not know how far the States and Territories may take up this subject in detail. The plan suggested by Major Powell, who is better informed upon this subject than I am, is to form irrigation districts, each basin to form a separate district, to be organized and controlled by the people of the locality, under rules which will distribute water to the lands which are to be supplied by irrigation in these districts, giving the local community the control of the question of the application of the water to the soil. I am a very great believer in self government, and in local self government, and I am a very great believer in the government of the people by somebody that is a good ways off from them. While I make this general distinction, as I said, I do not propose to go into the discussion of irrigation in detail. We shall visit, after leaving this territory, Washington Territory, Western Oregon, Utah, Nevada, California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Colorado and Kansas. That is in our plan. It is to obtain all the information we can upon this subject that we may lay before the Senate. I shall not occupy further time upon this subject. There is another question that was presented to you by Senator Stewart to which I desire to call attention. In the first place I desire to say that the admission of the four new states now in preparation for admission into the sisterhood of states, with probably two or three others soon to follow, is going to form an epoch of this country, it is going to secure a power to represent the interests of the West which it has never passed. (Applause.) It is going to promote the wealth of the western country. It has so happened for nearly a quarter of a century past that this government has been run in the interest of classes at the expense of the great masses of the people, and it may not be inappropriate before the members of this convention to point out some of the things which have been done in this line, as it is to be hoped when these new states send their Senators and Representatives to Washington they will send men who will represent their interests and their own people, and not men who will represent Wall Street and London and Berlin and who will aid in enslaving the American people. (Applause.) It will be remembered that the government of the United States was involved in a very large debt in the prosecution of the recent civil war, and to a large extent to the issuance of its notes until the redundancy of these notes greatly reduced their value. In order to restore them to par or more nearly to par the government attempted a policy of funding these notes into interest bearing bonds. In order to induce the people who had money to take these bonds, it was provided that they might be purchased by the legal tender notes at par, which, when many of them were purchased, were worth about 50 cents on the dollar; so that a man with 100,000 dollars of coin could buy $200,000 of notes, and that is $200,000 of notes could buy $200,000 of interest bearing bonds, the interest payable semi-annually in gold. Thus it so happened that the holders of coin were able to double their money on this transaction. I do not mention this to criticise the action of the Government, but simply mention the fact as the beginning of a system of measures which could not be lost sight of in this country. It may be possible it was the best that could be done under the circumstances. As to that I express no opinion. I only suggest that of the hundreds of millions—the thousands of millions of notes funded, the persons and corporations purchasing them double their investment. When fifty years ago Stephen Girard, by a long course of industry and trade and by some remarkable accidents, acquired a fortune of three millions of dollars, it was thought to be a very wonderful thing; it was the subject of remark throughout the country. Of recent years we see that men obtain fortunes ten and twenty and fifty and one hundred, and in a few instances two hundred millions of dollars, in a short time. Now, we all understand and know that no man by legitimate business or legitimate speculation can earn such a fortune in the lifetime of a human being. The men who make these fortunes are not supposed to be thieves; they are not thieves in the figured sense of the world, nor are they robbers in the sense of the man who takes your money at the muzzle of the gun; but these fortunes are made by the legislation of this country which has been under the moneyed classes. (Applause.) At least I shall submit facts which determine that to my mind; you are to determine whether they demonstrate it to you or not. In 1869 when the law was passed which had for its title an "Act to Strengthen the Public Credit," it was provided that these bonds which had been purchased for the Government notes worth fifty cents on the dollar should be paid in coin, that is in gold and silver coin, of the weight and fineness prescribed by law. Up to that time they were payable in lawful money, which meant gold coin, silver coin and the legal tender notes of the Government. The bondholders, who had got the bonds for fifty cents on the dollar, with the gold interest payable semi-annually, concluded that the legal tender notes with which they purchased them were not good enough to redeem them. They were good enough for the soldiers and sailors of the country to pay them; they were good enough for the public officers and public contractors; they were good enough for all classes of people except this chosen class which had purchased its bonds at fifty cents on the dollar. They were not good enough for them. Some of the interested men in this country examined this subject subsequent to the passage of that act, declared that by reducing the volume of this money out of which these bonds could be paid, by reducing the kinds of money out of which these bonds could be paid, that their value had been increased with reference to the value, and property and labor out of which they were to be paid, not less than five hundred millions of dollars, and that the property and labor of the country out of which they were to be paid had an additional burden imposed upon them of not less than five hundred millions of dollars. So that this was certain step in legislation in the interest of capital and against the property and against the labor of the country; and this begins to open to your view the way in which these vast fortunes could be made. I do not propose to go through that whole subject; I would not have time nor would you have patience for me to do so, and I shall only examine the particular loan, which shall have for its object my claim that this Government has been run for twenty years in the interest of the money class and against the interests of the great body of the American people. It was then provided by law, and I forget the date of that act, that the legal tender notes outstanding, when paid into the Treasury, should be canceled and retired. At the time that act was passed there were about four hundred millions of legal tender notes in circulation. When in 1877 the Congress passed an act repealing this law there remained still in circulation about 346,000,000 of dollars. In 1877 the Congress determined to reverse the policy of running the government in the interest of the money classes, and they repealed that act and saved to the people 346,000,000 and some odd thousand dollars of legal tender notes to be a part of the money of the country, to aid in its industries and to reward its labors, instead of making that sum an additional interest bearing bonded debt to be saddled upon the industry and property and labor of the country. There were two objects in the passage of this law, one of them was to reduce the volume of money and increase the value of coin; another was to secure to the national banks the privilege of issuing the money of the country. I do not propose to look to that now, but I simply mention the fact. In 1872 and 1873 the bondholders got distressed again and they were very anxious that this country should adopt an honest money system. They were earnest, vehement advocates for honest money, and induced a large part of the press of the country, especially the metropolitan press of the east, to advocate honest money in the payment of debts. The honest money was to require the demonetization of silver and make the debts—the national debt, the state debts, the incorporated debts and the individual debts of this country, payable in gold alone. Now, then, in their interest when the law was passed taking away from the people the right to pay these bonds in legal tender notes, it was a square clear violation of the contract between the people and the bondholders. They made the debt on the faith that it was to be paid in the lawful money then in existence. The law violated the contract in order to increase their fortunes and increase the burdens of the people. When they wanted silver demonetized and secure its demonetization in the interest of the moneyed classes and those having fixed incomes, they again reduced the volume of money out of which these debts were to be paid, taking from the use of the people about one-half the metal money of the world, made their national, their state, their corporate and their individual liabilities, and thus very nearly doubled the value of the bonds with reference to the labor and property out of which they were to be paid, and very nearly doubled the burdens of the people, not only in paying their bonded debts, but in paying their state debts, in paying their corporate debts, in paying their individual debts which amounted to thousands of millions of dollars—imposing a burden upon the people which as Senator Stewart told you today, was one it would have been impossible for them to discharge under any conceivable circumstances. They secured, however, the demonetization of silver, and they did it in the face of the fact that ours was a debtor nation—our corporations and states were debtors and our people were debtors—and in the face of the further fact that the mines of the United States were then as they are now yielding about forty per cent of all the silver taken from the surface of the earth. Now, my friends, let us inquire in our minds whether if Great Britain and Germany or either of them had been placed by the Almighty with such a source of wealth as our silver mines, they would have been willing to destroy and sacrifice the people. Who believes it? I do not suppose a sane man on earth believes that either of those governments would have consented to such a fraud and outrage upon their people. Let us inquire of ourselves whether our eastern cities such as Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore—if in their vicinity and in their states they possessed these sources of wealth, whether they would have consented to surrender it. Who supposes they would? But that was not the case. They were the holders of the public security—of the credits of the country to a large extent. The silver was to be mined in the distant west that was to be represented in the Congress of the United States, and they seemed not to find it difficult to get plenty of newspapers to advocate honest money. That is a violation of the contract between the Government and the people in the second instance, for the making of millionaires on the one side and paupers on the other. (Applause). Now, my friends, if Montana and the two Dakotas and Washington shall send Senators and Representatives to Washington to cooperate with the four Pacific States and with Colorado and Kansas and Missouri and Arkansas and Texas and the populations of the Southern States, and such other States as will cooperate with us, we will produce a change in the legislative experience of this country (Applause) and provide for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. (Applause). Now, in order to discredit silver—for after we had secured by the act of 1877 the unlimited coinage of silver, still the government in every administration we have had, no matter by what party—the government has cooperated with the bondholders and the banks to discredit and to degrade silver. One of the means has been in this way: Gold is coined at the expense of the government. And the gold taken from the mint, whether of bullion or of coin, is coined and re coined at the mint of the United States free of expense to the holder of the bullion or the coin to be so used. Now, then, silver, on the contrary, is required to pay to the government a certain percent for its coinage, and it is a considerable amount. I mention that to show you the drift of legislation and the purpose to degrade silver in the interest of the bondholders, the bankers and the capitalists and the men who have fixed incomes. I therefore say to you if you will send men that represent our new states to cooperate with those already in the Union we will secure the free and unlimited coinage of silver as we now have the free and unlimited coinage of gold. (Applause). We will not only do that but we will relieve men who are so much distressed about the difficulty of carrying silver about, by providing for the issuance of coin certificates—not silver certificates—not gold certificates, to enable them to keep up the distinction between the price of gold and silver—but coin certificates redeemable in gold or silver at the pleasure of the government, at the ratio of sixteen to one as provided by our law and take away all temptation to degrade silver any further. I mention these things for the purpose of showing you that hundreds of millions—thousands of millions of dollars have been transferred from the producers of property and given to the moneyed classes by operation of law, and under the policy of the government, and I have done it in order that your attention, which has no doubt before been called to it, may be re-awakened to the necessity of meeting this contingency in providing for your representation in the two Houses of Congress. Now, we have been told by the men who are determined that silver shall not be placed in its proper place, that we cannot afford to remonetize silver excepting by agreement with other countries. Well, if you are only to secure the remonetization of silver when Great Britain and Germany consent, it will never be remonetized. Why? Because both countries, and especially Great Britain, are large creditor nations. The English people are the creditors of every civilized government on earth and of corporations in all the civilized world. A large portion of the revenue of that country consists of interest bearing bonds they hold upon other governments and the corporations and the people of other countries. Whatever will increase the value of those securities will benefit their people, and one of the ways to increase their value is to decrease the different kinds and the volume of money out of which these securities can be paid; so that as a matter of public policy they desire that silver should be demonetized, and they make their contracts for the debts credited among them payable in gold in their own country. A state or a corporation goes to their banks or moneyed men for accommodation with those bonds. They perhaps give him ninety, maybe eighty, maybe seventy-five cents on the dollar for his bonds, take them at their face and demand the payment of interest at the full face in gold, and the payment of the principal in gold; so that they get the interest and get the discount on these bonds and all of them are required to be paid in gold. I cannot now call up an estimate of the amount of the credits which Great Britain holds against other countries, but it is enormous, and she has all that temptation to benefit the moneyed classes, thereby reducing the kind of money in which those obligations can be paid. Her own citizens, the middle classes, and the laboring classes, suffer by the demonetization of silver and are clamoring for its remonetization, and the clamor has been so great in Germany recently that it is believed that Germany will be compelled to remonetize silver by the demands of her people. Now, then, there are but few states if any in the Union but that owe debts besides the large national debt which so far has been of late greatly reduced. The railroad corporations owe thousands of millions of dollars; the most of them owe the entire cost of the construction of these roads, and are trying to pay the interest on them, and debts are generally measured by the amount of bonds it is possible for them to float; so that the debt honestly contracted and the watered stock alike has all to pay its interest, and with silver demonetized have not only to pay the principal but the interest of those debts in gold coin. The people are largely indebted and were then—an active, energetic people, enterprising people in the country where enterprises are frequently started, and debts contracted to push them forward, and yet in the interest of the moneyed classes the currency is contracted, the silver taken from circulation in large measure and bonds in circulation, in a large measure degraded; and these men who owe debts, who have mortgages upon their property, have twice the difficulty of paying their debts and lifting those mortgages that they would have with a free circulation of currency of both silver and gold in equal scale.

My friends, I feel I should be trespassing to take up your time longer. I will conclude by saying that you will find many states outside of these new states, and their Representatives and Senators prepared to cooperate with you not only in removing these obstacles to prosperity and restoring a proper gold and silver and a proper amount of currency, but you will find them ready to cooperate with you in other respects which I have not the time to discuss now, in relieving the masses of the people against the burdens imposed upon them by unjust legislation—by legislation which has made millionaires to which I referred, and which is causing the great masses of people to struggle from year's end to year's end, scarcely able to meet their liabilities and take care of their families. (Applause).

The President: Gentlemen of the Convention, I have the pleasure and honor of introducing to you Major Powell, Director of the United States Geological Survey.

Major Powell spoke as follows:

Major Powell: Mr. President, and Gentlemen, it is with some degree of embarrassment that I speak to you after the distinguished gentlemen who have spoken today, and who have discussed national affairs so eloquently and so ably to you. I such discussion I have taken no part, I came to this country rather as a pioneer. I am older in this country than most of you. I feel as though most of you were new comers here and were tenderfeet. I came at an early time, and I want to talk now as one of the old pioneers, if you please, and not in the capacity of a statesman. (Applause). It has fallen under my observation from time to time and been a source—a theme of study for many years, the general question what would ultimately become of this country what would be the form of the industries in this country and the form of government in this country? For you are under peculiar conditions. In the eastern half of the United States we have settled governments, that is we have state and local governments adapted to the physical conditions of their country; but in the western half of America, the local, the state, the territorial, county governments and the regulations and the national government are in no sense adapted to the physical conditions of the country. (Applause). And these are the problems which have been interesting me for many years, and I will illustrate it by simply stating somewhat of the physical conditions of this state now forming, and explain to you what seems to me as an old pioneer, not as a statesman, if you please—what seems to me to be the form of local government and the adaptation of institutions of these physical conditions, which are necessary for your prosperity, and which you will, as I believe, ultimately have. Montana has an area of about, if my memory serves me, ninety millions of acres. Of that ninety millions thirty-five millions of acres are mountainous—thirty-five millions of acres of land are dedicated to special industries thereby. In those mountains you will find silver and gold, copper, lead, and in the mountains more or less iron, in the flanks iron and coal. But the mountain region has something more in it of value, as you will see. The mountain region is the timber region of the country. On the plains and in the valleys no timber grows. The regions below are in part agricultural and in part pastoral. And the remaining portion, leaving out the mountain area, about thirty-five million acres of land, can be redeemed by irrigation, according to the latest estimates and careful study of the matter, which we have made for the last two years. It must be understood that if thirty-five million acres of land were redeemed by irrigation in this country, it means the utilization of all its waters—it means that no drop of water, which is the blood of agriculture, if you please, the life blood of agriculture—that no drop of water falling within the area of the state shall flow beyond the boundaries of the state. It means that all the waters falling within the state will be utilized upon its lands for agriculture. That is made under some careful estimate and partial estimate of the volumes of water running in your streams, a study of the rainfall of a district, and upon a further computation that it will take one acre of water to irrigate one acre of land. Now, understand what I mean by one acre of water, for as engineers we do not reckon water in inches of flow, but in acre feet. An acre of water one foot in depth we call an acre foot, and on an average in Montana for years, irrigation of an acre of land requires an acre foot of water. It is a very simple ratio as you see. If all of the water flowing in the streams of Montana be used—not all the water flowing during the season of irrigation, but all of the water is used in irrigation, it will irrigate about thirty-five million acres; but in order to utilize all of this water and to redeem all of this land it becomes necessary to store the waters which are usually run to waste; that is the season of irrigation in Montana will vary from six weeks to nine weeks; in some few cases it will be longer than that, but in the main we may say that the time of irrigation, the season of irrigation will be about two months. With that understanding, ten months of the flow runs to waste, and in order that the thirty-five million acres of land be redeemed for agriculture within this state, it is necessary to use all that water running to waste to the sea—to store it. Then there remains twenty million acres of land which cannot be used for agriculture, which are yet in the mountains and not covered by timber, but which yet have more or less value for pasturage purposes. That is the condition, and, gentlemen, it is a magnificent heritage—nineteen million acres of land; thirty-five million acres of mountains covered with forests, and with mountains filled with ores—thirty-five million acres of land as rich as any other that lies under the sun, to be made fertile, to be made to yield in vast abundance by the utilization of these waters. It is no misfortune as at first it may appear—it is no ultimate misfortune to the people that their land is arid. The thirty-five million acres of land which you have to redeem by irrigation will be to you much more valuable than if that water was distributed evenly over the country so that there was sufficient rainfall and irrigation was unnecessary. To those who have not studied the subject with care, the proposition seems perhaps somewhat quixotic, and yet there is a long line of history to prove what I have said. I will not stop to enter upon this line of the subject, but I wish to call the attention of you gentlemen to some of the conditions which you must meet in order to secure the prosperity of these people. The question of irrigation then is undoubtedly bound up with some other questions of almost equal importance, as you will see as I proceed. The timber of this country grows on the mountains; it is therefore not distributed throughout the country where it is needed. The agricultural people will have their timber lands five, ten, twenty, fifty and one hundred miles away from home, but the people who want to use that timber and who live down in the valleys and spread abroad over the plains, they are the people primarily interested in the forests, and the people who own the irrigable lands must own and must control the forest lands, for a part of their prosperity depends upon the utilization and preservation of those forests. There is still another reason. In the mountainous region like those in the arid country, a large part of the rain falls upon the mountains. Usually throughout Montana you have say from twelve to fifteen inches of rainfall in the low country and from twenty to twenty-five, forty, fifty and even sixty inches of rainfall on the mountains. The water necessary to fertilize the agricultural lands falls somewhere else—falls upon these mountains. And the men who are engaged in agriculture in the valleys and on the plains are interested in the mountains for another reason than that they must derive their source of timber from them. Every iota of value there is to the lands to be redeemed for agriculture depends upon the water with which they are supplied. The intrinsic value exists in the water. And the water falls not on their own land—the water falls elsewhere in the mountains, and hence the people who live by agriculture below have a double reason for being interested in the forests and mountains above, and ultimately they must control those mountain acres—the agriculturists must own and control not only the lands which they occupy themselves, but also the lands where the timbers grow, and also the lands where the waters fall which make their lands valuable. Now, having made this brief statement of the conditions and the facts at large, let me apply them. The state is in the formative condition. You are met here to adopt a constitution, and there are questions that ultimately will be of vast interest to these people—and I beg pardon almost for mentioning them, but I have mentioned them from the standard not of a statesman but only of a pioneer—a man in the country earlier than occupants usually and you must take them only for what they are worth from an observer, and not a statesman. But this is the point. The whole area of Montana may be easily divided into drainage basin districts of country which constitute a geographical—a physical unity; a region like the Gallatin Valley, for example, with a river flowing down through the valley with its tributaries on either side, heading out from the mountains to the very rim of the Gallatin basin on either side. Every man who settles within the valley of Gallatin comes ultimately to be interested in every part of that valley, because it is the entire Gallatin valley, the whole drainage basin, gathers the water for his farm. Only a portion of these valleys can be redeemed for agriculture; another portion will be utilized ultimately for pasturage. High up in the valleys we have the timber lands, and higher up the valleys we have the mountains where the waters are condensed. The people below must necessarily be interested in the whole drainage basin around about where these waters are gathered. Now, agricultural industry carried on under conditions where irrigation is absolutely necessary, are carried on under very peculiar conditions as compared with those of humid lands. You have not in this territory reached a condition of affairs where the matters which I now wish to present to you yet press upon you. They may in some few localities only; but very speedily the question of water rights—who owns this water, is to be the important question in this country, remember the question of land rights is comparatively a minor one as compared with water rights, and water cannot be measured out to you by meets and bounds; you cannot lay out lines and drive stakes in the clouds of the heavens from whence the waters come. They pour down today in storms and tomorrow in storms, and the year in storms, and flow down to the rivers and creeks, and you have to measure them out by gallons or by acres from day to day, from month to month and from year to year. All the great values of this Territory have ultimately to be measured to you in acre feet, and in the preparation of a constitution for this great State this great fact should be held in view. Now, without entering too largely into the question of pointing out the necessities for regulating the use of waters and the measurement of waters etc., I want to present to you what I believe to be ultimately the political system which you have got to adopt in this country, and which the United States will be compelled sooner or later ultimately to recognize. I think that each drainage basin in the arid land must ultimately become the practical unity of organization, and it would be wise if you could immediately adopt a county system which would be coincident with drainage basins, for in every such drainage basin you have got to have first the water courts. Disputes will arise from day to day about the waters, and in every district there must be ultimately a water court. There must be a corps of officers, water master or supervisors who measure out this water for the people. The general government cannot, the State government will not measure the water for you, neither can they measure it for themselves, and you have got to have local self government to manage that matter. Then the people who are interested in these waters are also interested in the timber, and the people who are interested in the waters and agricultural lands are interested in the pasturage of those lands. And now I come briefly to state what I believe should be done. First, I believe that the primary unity of organization in the arid lands should be the drainage basin which would practically have a county organization, if you please, with county courts, etc.—I need not enter into the details—then that the government of the United States should cede all of the lands of that drainage basin to the people who live in that basin. (Applause.) I do not believe that the government of the United States can ever keep up a police force or a system of agents to manage the timber of this country. (Applause.) I believe that the people of the drainage basin themselves are more interested than any other people can be in that particular drainage basin—that they are the only people who can properly administer that trust, and I believe that the people who live along every valley in this country should be the people who control three things besides the land on which they live; they should have the control of the water; they should have the control of the common or pasturage lands, and they should have the control of the timber lands (applause); and I have no doubt but that could be secured through general legislation ultimately in this country, for the interests of this western country are being rapidly understood in the east, and the people are filling up the country so rapidly that they are very soon to be able to make the eastern people respect their wants, their needs, their rights and their wishes. The simple question which I have then to present to you, which I think would be worthy of your consideration, and which early in the history of the State or even in the adoption of your State constitution you should consider, is, what should be the primary unit of your government? And I think that the careful study of the matter will show you that the drainage basin is the natural unit and should be a county of this State. If then you will provide a system of counties by drainage basins you have the fundamental organizations, and can in time acquire all the other rights and assume all the other duties which that organization demands. For thirty odd years I have been studying this western country when no irrigation was practical except in a few places in Utah and New Mexico and so I have been traveling about the country from year to year surveying now this portion and now that, and studying from many standpoints, and I have seen gradually agricultural industries growing up, and today within the arid region not less than seven million acres of land are cultivated by artificial irrigation, but the time will soon come when this will be multiplied tenfold and one hundredfold, for everywhere throughout the whole region west of the one hundredth meridian the people are wide awake to this problem. The mountains may be filled with gold and silver; the hills may be filled with coal and iron, but all these have little value unless there is a basis of agriculture for a prosperous people, and that you can have in all of this country. But in order that you may not have vast conflicts, in order that irrigation may be developed, that agriculture may be developed, with the least friction, with the least cost of the people, the system which I have mentioned will be of untold value. Let me call your attention to two more points just here. The first is, that litigation is a prolific source of expense and evil, and you should endeavor to provide for a proper system at the very beginning of your State for adjusting rights by your fellow citizens among yourselves. It will save you—you hardly know how much—unless you have studied irrigation in other lands you will hardly know how much, but it will save you a vast cloud, a vast amount of litigation, let me repeat once more to you and close with this, that you have three interests, all tied together, and they ought to be tied together in the organization of your body politic as they are tied together by physical conditions. The agricultural lands are dependent upon the mountains above, and the farmers below ought to know the mountains above—own the control of those mountains so far as they are the source of the timber which they must use, and own and control them so far as they are pasturage is concerned, for pasturage on a large scale, the range pasturage which has grown up in all of this western country must necessarily decay as such and must become tied up with the agriculture of the land; not that there will be less, but more stock raising in the country then, but it will be distributed instead of in the hands of the few people—it will be distributed ultimately among all those who cultivate the soil.

I thank you gentlemen for your attention. (Applause.)

The President: The Chair is not advised as to whether or not any other gentlemen are to address the convention.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: We would like to hear from Senator Plumb.

The President: Will Senator Plumb come forward?

Senator Plumb was escorted to the President's desk.

The President: Gentlemen of the convention, I have the honor to introduce to you Senator Preston B. Plumb of Kansas, who will now address you. (Applause)

Senator Plumb spoke as follows:

Senator Plumb: Mr. President and Gentlemen, I think this must be due to the position which I accidentally occupy. I cannot conceive it possible that a Territory so rich in all the elements that go to make up the requirements of public life, so rich in those who can express themselves ably upon all occasions, would have expected anything from me which would add to that which has already been said. I felt when I heard Senator Stewart speaking about the results of irrigation in Egypt and India, I thought then if I were called upon I might say something by way of admonition in view of the fact that the illustrations which he drew were of places which had entirely disappeared, and so far as anything which he said was concerned, they seemed to have made exclusive use of water (laughter) for of that I thought I would hardly need to point to a Montana audience. But that was the only thing that occurred to me which was left unsaid in his very admirable address.

A famous Englishman said that statesmanship consists in a knowledge of the resources of one's own country. If that were literally applied to the American people of today, there would be no statesmen in the best acceptance of the term (applause) because no one knows, no one can know, unless he were gifted with prophetic vision, the entire resources of this country. Suffice it to say that while we learn something every day we know enough now to know that this is the greatest country in natural resources there is in the world, (applause) and if it is to be made fit use of it is because the people who inhabit this country are better, wiser and stronger than the people have been elsewhere. I have been a part in a minor way of the institutional history of one of the States of the Union, and the most interesting part of the things that I see anywhere around me is the formation and growth of institutions. You are engaged here in preparing for the admission of the Territory into the Union, and I hope that you have been admonished that self government began in mining communities, and that therefore you are expected to make a constitution of a government which shall be equal not only to the constitution and governments of other States with which you shall be associated, but that it shall be better than all of them put together. The greatest ambition, the only ambition I think worthy of having is that for power, no man unless he be unusually sordid ever would admit that he wanted money for money's sake; he wanted it because it would widen his horizon, because it gave him new power. The men who sit before me are the men who made this country; they are the men who built up its institutions, organized its counties, school houses and churches, and laid broad and deep the foundations of the social order, and whose names and the best of whose judgments and of whose intentions and ideas of justice are to be embodied in the foundations of the government which you are going to lay before this convention adjourns; and in that everyone of you will have, for I know the work will be well done—that sense of power which mere money cannot bring. Montana will be one of the States of an imperishable Union. It will be not only one of the States of this Union, but will be a State which Mr. Stewart said in his speech in St. Paul in 1860 when referring to the source of power in this country—he said it was not the States on the Atlantic or the Pacific coasts that would speak the will of the American people, but it was the States which lay at the sources of the great rivers which contribute an infinite variety of sources of wealth and the power and perpetuity of the American people, would finally speak the will of this great people of the United States, and that the cities on the sea coast were only the mouths which would speak the will of that people. And so it is the men of the interior and the men who live at the sources of the great waters and the men who live not only in the agricultural region, for such it has been demonstrated to be by that which has passed under your own observation, and which you have heard today—the men who have that variety of resources embodied in the conjunction of these two great industries, agriculture and mining, that are finally to be the resources of power in the United States; and therefore Montana ought to speak not by the mouths of the senators but by the mouths of the people in whom there is the strongest and best evidence of the ability of the American people for self government, represented in the best government here on the crest of the Rocky Mountains. (Applause) I do not speak this by way of admonition. I have seen that attrition going on in the mountains, on the plains and in the valleys, the result of which has been the selection of the fittest, and I know that no man here and no other man in the Territory, with possibly here and there an exception, has remained among you except it was because he had embodied in him that determination which only expresses best an American citizen—that willingness to do and that ability to overcome natural obstacles which finally brings together under one head the very best that is human. And so I know that of these men in the valleys and the men in the mines and all the men in the limits of these Territories are not here accidentally, but are here upon the principle of selection, and here is to be a community started upon a plain which is equal to that of any of the States of the Union, and I say this for the purpose of expressing to you that which the people of the United States have a right to expect, that in time Montana itself, not as a younger brother—that in time Montana itself, not as a brother-in-law, but as a peer—not only as a peer, but as a State representing that phase of humanity, that perfection of development in the near future which shall make the older States not only willing to join it hand in hand but to take off the hat as it is always taken off in the presence of superiors. (Applause) And it is this dominion, gentlemen, which is represented generally in what you do today and tomorrow and the next day until you adjourn, which is to be submitted to the suffrage of the people of Montana and which is to be exhibited finally to the people of the United States and the people of the world as the idea of the people of Montana as to the framework of a government fit for a free people. There are some things which have been touched upon by those with whom I have been associated in this committee which I will not speak upon in a general way. We struggle each for his own interest. You struggle for silver, for irrigation, for the things that are peculiar to you. The Atlantic States struggle simultaneously for things that are peculiar to them. All these interests struggling together finally result in compromise, which is supposed to represent as it usually does the general average of interests. It is because we must express ourselves, and because they reckon today we may prevail tomorrow that the republican form of government answers to the abilities and the expectations and the hopes of a free people. You are for silver because it is one of your productions; I am for silver because I am for my country and for all the people in it. (Applause) I do not mean to say that your standard is less high than mine, but the cause is immediately before your eyes. I am for silver because I am for everything just produced from the soil and under the flag of the American republic (applause) and I take no account of any patriotism that does not consider first a man's neighbor, next his township, next his county, next his State, and next his republic against all the world. (Applause) The millions outside are nothing to us, except as mere atoms in molecular space. If they do not like the situation they are in, the people of the United States say to them "come and join your fortunes with us"; but as long as they remain where they are, they are foreign to us, speaking in a foreign language, and a foreign tongue, and we prefer first to take care of our own. For these reasons, as I said, I am for silver as I am for gold. I am in favor of developing every resource in Montana, but in such a way as to beget self help, self reliance and all that impact and confusion of interest and all enterprise, and all energy which makes men stronger. Mr. Seward said as he went out of the gates of Jerusalem one morning that the officer who was in charge of the party as he rode up and down to see that no one not under permit was in the ranks, cried out "How much man is here?" That is the question that is always confronting us, "How much man is here?" Give us the man and I know that every irrigable acre of Montana will sometime be developed. Given the man and I know that there is no atom of silver or gold concealed anywhere in its mountains that finally from enterprise and energy will not secure it. Make institutions for man, develop the manhood, and all the balance comes because this fruitful soil that only needs to be pricked by the hoe to laugh at the harvest—all these mountains that are bound to yield to the impact of your pick will bring forth everything that is naturally attributed to that energy and to that enterprise and to that manhood. (Applause). Now, gentlemen, and Mr. President, I hope that you will excuse me from anything further. (Applause).

The President: The next in the order of business will be the reading and presentations of petitions and memorials, which will include remonstrances, communications, etc., from public bodies.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow sent up a report.

The President: The report of the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your Committee on Judiciary, to whom was referred Proposition No. 37 as to the construction of words, have directed me to report that they are of the opinion that the matter to which said proposition relates is sufficiently provided for by Section 39 of the Bill of Rights already adopted by this convention. Your committee therefore recommend that said proposition be not adopted.

August 9th, 1889.

(Signed DIXON, Chairman.

The proposition to which the above report referred was as follows: Proposition by Robinson of Deer Lodge. Construction of words. That wherever in this constitution the word "may" occurs the same shall be construed to be directory, and wherever the word "shall" occurs the same shall be considered to be mandatory.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move the report of the committee be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula Mr. Bickford and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: Unfinished business is now in order. The convention had under consideration at its adjournment a substitute for Sections 2 and 4 by Mr. Kanouse of Meagher to which the gentleman from Silver Bow offered an amendment.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that the consideration of the substitute be indefinitely postponed.

The President: The Chair desires to state to the gentleman that while he entertained a motion to indefinitely postpone an amendment yesterday inadvertently that it is not strictly in accordance with the rules, for the reason that the same object is attained by a vote upon the question, and the only object of indefinitely postponing is to take the matter entirely from before the session, and as there is nothing in the amendment that is construed to be of that character, the rule does not apply.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: For two days this convention wrestled with the question of the location of the temporary capital—(interrupted.)

The President: Will the gentleman allow the Chair to state the question before the convention? There is an amendment offered to this substitute by the gentleman from Silver Bow. It is the desire to have that amendment considered. It was moved and seconded that the amendment be adopted. It contained a proviso of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher Mr Kanouse containing a proviso that the temporary capital of Montana should be located at Anaconda.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The President: The gentleman probably means the amendment. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Silver Bow, and the gentleman from Madison has the floor.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I ask for the present to withdraw the amendment.

The President: The gentleman withdraws the amendment, and the question is upon the substitute.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: If the amendment is withdrawn, Mr. President, I move the previous question on the substitute.

The President: The gentleman from Madison has the floor. The motion is not in order at present.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: Mr. President, I beg the indulgence of the convention to make the motion that I will make before I take my seat. For two days we have wrestled with this question and without result. All has been in vain. I think it is well understood by the gentlemen of this convention what is my position upon this proposition. I say to you now, Mr. President, and gentlemen, that if the capital remains at Helena I will be satisfied. (Applause) And more than that I will take the stump in support of the adoption of the constitution. It would, however, perhaps be modest on the part of Helena to be generous to the rest of the Territory. Personally, I prefer another place than Helena, yet about that matter I do not care. Madison County has been referred to and the question of dragging the capital from Virginia City to Helena has been broached. Mr. President, we have no ranklings in our breast. Madison County has no feeling of pique about that matter, but I desire to say on this proposition as on every other one, a free fight—a free ballot and a fair count. I think that perhaps we cannot today determine this matter. We have some matters before this convention that I believe if my motion prevails we can adopt this constitution and by Sunday have it before the Committee of Phraseology and Revision. I think it will save that much time. Therefore, Mr. President, I move you that this matter be postponed until Monday afternoon, and with this assurance that while I say to these gentlemen that I will be satisfied with the action in the event the capital remains here, but I shall as long as there is hope for any other place, vote against Helena.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the further consideration of the entire subject affecting the capital be postponed until Monday afternoon.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Mayer, McAdow, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson—36.

Nays: Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Fields, Gaylord, Graves, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Kohrs, Marrión, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—30.

Absent: Burleigh and Webster—2.

Paired: Aiken & Gibson, Dyer & Knippenberg, Eaton & Knowles—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Callaway) adopted.

Mr. Marrión of Missoula: I move that we now adjourn until Monday at four o'clock.

The President: The motion is not in order. If the gentleman desires to fix Monday at four o'clock the time at which to adjourn, that motion will be in order.

Mr. Marrión of Missoula: Then I move that when we adjourn we adjourn until Monday at four o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question before the convention is that when the convention adjourn it adjourn until Monday at four o'clock.

The Chair put the said question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marrión) and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Marrión of Missoula: I desire to be excused until Monday at four o'clock.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused until Monday at four o'clock.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: If the convention will indulge me I would like to make a motion and that is that this convention tender a vote of thanks to Senators Stewart, Reagan and Plumb and to Major Powell for their very interesting and instructive addresses.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move to amend by asking the President of this convention in person to tender the thanks of the convention.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I accept the amendment.

The President: The amendment is accepted.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I move that the convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider Proposition on Public Lands, I believe No. 34.

Mr. Bullard of Jefferson: I would like to be excused until Monday.

The President: The gentleman will be excused. The question now before the convention is that the convention do now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for consideration of Proposition No. 34.

Mr. Joy of Park: Before the motion is put I would like to be excused until Monday four o'clock.

The President: The gentleman will be excused until Monday at four o'clock.

Mr. Durfee of Deer Lodge: I would ask to be excused until the same hour.

Mr. Harlman of Gallatin: Mr. President, I would also ask to be excused until the same time.

The President: If there be no objection these gentlemen will be excused. The question now before the convention is, that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Article on Public Lands.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: Would it not be in order to suspend the rules and consider this in convention?

The President: It could be done by unanimous vote and suspension of the rules.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I believe, Mr. President, that if this proposition could be considered in convention it would save considerable time.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I would move that the rules be suspended and this proposition be considered in the convention.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I will withdraw my motion.

The President: The gentleman withdraws his motion. The question now is that the rules be suspended and that the convention proceed to consider Proposition No. 34 and associate with it Propositions No. 23 and 35. The adoption of the motion requires a two-thirds vote.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead (Mr. Witter) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Proposition No. 23 as follows: Section 1. None of the lands granted by Congress to the State of Montana, for the support of common schools, for the establishment and maintenance of a School of Mines, State Normal Schools, Agricultural Colleges, a State Reform School, and a Deaf and Dumb Asylum shall be sold, granted or disposed of in any manner; but the same may be leased under such regulations as the Legislative Assembly may provide by law, not inconsistent with the laws of Congress in force at the time the same may be leased. Section 2. The moneys, profits and proceeds arising from the public lands shall be used and devoted exclusively for educational purposes, and it shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly to enforce this provision by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE

Exemptions.

Section 1. The Legislative Assembly shall provide liberal exemption laws.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move, sir, that Section 1 as read by the Clerk be stricken out and Section 1 of Proposition No. 35 be substituted in lieu thereof.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The Clerk read Proposition No. 35 for the information of the convention as follows:

ARTICLE

Public Lands.

Section 1. All the public lands of the State are held in trust for all the people; and none of such land nor any estate or interest therein, shall ever be disposed thereof except in pursuance of general laws providing for such disposition, nor unless the full market value of the estate or interest disposed of, to be ascertained in such manner as may be provided by law, be paid or safely secured to the State; nor shall any lands which the State holds by grant from the United States (in any case in which the manner of disposal and minimum price are so prescribed) be disposed of, except in the manner and for at least the price prescribed in the grant thereof, without the consent of the United States.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Kanouse) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I move that Proposition No. 34 be added to Proposition No. 35 as just adopted, as subsequent sections, commencing with Section 2.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The Clerk read Proposition No. 34 for the information of the convention, as follows:

ARTICLE.

Public Lands.

Section 1. The lands granted to Montana by the act of Congress, approved February 22, 1889, entitled "Act to provide for the division of Dakota into two States and to enable the people of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Washington, to form constitutions and state governments and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original states and to make donations of public lands to such States for the support of common schools or which may hereafter be granted for that purpose, shall be classified by the Board of Land Commissioners as follows: First, lands which are valuable only for grazing purposes; second, those which are principally valuable for the timber that is on them; third, agricultural lands; fourth, lands within the corporate limits of any incorporated town or city or within a mile of such limits, and which are worth more than Fifty Dollars ($50) per acre.

Section 2. The lands of the first of said classes shall not be sold, but shall be leased, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The lands of the second class may be sold or the timber thereon may be sold, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The agricultural lands may be either sold or leased, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The lands of the fourth class shall be sold in lots of not more than five acres each, and not more than one-half of any one tract of such lands shall be sold prior to the year 1895.

Section 3. None of the lands granted for common schools shall be sold for less than ten dollars ($10.00) per acre, and no lease of such lands shall be for a longer term than five (5) years, unless the Congress shall amend the Act referred to in Section 1 of this Article so as to permit longer leases.

Section 4. All other public lands may be disposed of in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the motion to attach Proposition No. 34 to Proposition No. 35 and make it a part thereof.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I desire to call attention to the fact that my understanding is the rules were suspended so that Proposition No. 23 should be considered by the convention direct, and we seem to be also considering and adopting Proposition No. 35 without ever going into Committee of the Whole, and I suggest that a like resolution be passed governing this.

The President: The Chair embraced those two propositions in the motion. The Chair put the question on Proposition No. 23 and the associate propositions.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I wish to call the attention of the convention to the fact that the first portion of Section 1 of Proposition No. 34 is included in Proposition No. 35, which has already been adopted as a substitute for the first section of Proposition No. 23—in other words all that part of Section 1 which recites the granting of lands by the government to the states is recited in Proposition No. 35, so that we may with propriety strike out all of that part of Section No. 1 of Proposition No. 34 to and include the word “purpose” in line sixth thereof; in other words this part may be stricken out Section 1 to “lands granted to Montana by the act of Congress provided February 22, 1889” entitled “An Act to provide for the division of Dakota into two states to enable the people of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Washington to form constitutions and state governments and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original states, and to make donations of public lands to such states for the support of common schools or which may hereafter be granted for that purpose.” So much of said section, Mr. President, may be stricken out, and in lieu thereof, just add the words “said lands” and number it Section 2 so that it shall read “said lands shall be classified by the Board of Land Commissioners as follows: Then that would make Section 2 of Proposition No. 23, and would provide the manner in which the lands would be disposed of. I think the gentleman from Missoula will agree with me that this is the proper thing to do. As a substitute I now move you that all of Proposition No. 34 up to and including the word “purpose” in the sixth line thereof be stricken out, and that the words “Section 2” and the words “said lands” be added just before the words “shall be classified.”

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I suppose that we are acting under the rules of the convention and cannot go back to Section 1 as already adopted.

The President: That could not be reached except by reconsideration.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: This is the difficulty of not going into Committee of the Whole. I want to call attention to one thing here in this Article 35 (reading: “All the public lands of the state are held in trust for all the people.” I suppose that the definition of public lands may cover all those that are enumerated here in section 1 of the proposition offered by the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall), but I think that in Section 1 that they should be held in trust for the people for the respective purposes for which they were granted. That strikes me to be the proper proposition to be in there, so that we will have some definition of what public lands are. Those lands that have been granted by the Enabling Act of Congress, I suppose, are intended here to mean the public lands of the state, but it seems to me this would be a better definition of them, and the trust for which they are held should be better defined, for the several purposes for which they were granted by the act of Congress.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I think that is correct. If my memory serves me, Mr. Rickards covered that in the Article on Education.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: If that be so then this amendment might not be offered.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: While we are upon this proposition I will state for the information of the gentleman that this section was drawn with particular reference to the report of the Committee on Education, and that in all probability the grant will be found to be covered by the report and that the uses are not only defined by the act donating the lands to the state, to which we may refer, if in anyone a doubt arises, but the lands can only be applied to that particular purpose to which they were dedicated, under any circumstance.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move to amend the motion.

The President: The motion would not be in order. The amendment is an amendment to an amendment and another amendment at present would not be in order.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I will simply suggest, sir, then the propriety of modifying that motion so that for the purpose of consideration that portion of Section 1 of Proposition 34 after the word “purpose” in line six should be added to and become a part of Proposition No. 35 by inserting after the words “United States” the words “said lands.”

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I accept the suggestion of the gentleman.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that we resolve ourselves into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of these three propositions.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The rules have been suspended and the convention resolved to proceed to the consideration of these articles, and of course if you are resolved upon that I presume the gentleman's motion will be in order. The Chair will put the motion.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I rise to a point of order. I do not believe this motion is in order unless the convention reconsider the vote.

The President: It would not be except by unanimous consent or reconsideration.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I do not wish to infringe upon the rules, but I wish to state that I confess to this convention that I think that there are parliamentary difficulties in the way of intelligently considering these three propositions in convention. I believe that time could be saved and more intelligent action taken if we resolve ourselves into Committee of the Whole. I confess to you, Mr. President, and gentlemen, that I cannot keep track of the matter in convention as we are going. That is my reason for making the motion.

The President: There is a parliamentary rule that a motion to suspend the rules cannot be reconsidered.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I withdraw my motion then.

The President: The question now before the convention is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula, which is further amended by consent to attach Section 1 of Proposition No. 34 and make it a part of Section 1 of Proposition No. 35, and then add the remaining sections of Proposition No. 34 to Proposition No. 35. That includes the whole matter.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I would like to ask a question. We have stricken out, I believe, all down to the word "purpose." Now, sir, as we attach this to Section 1 of Proposition No. 35, will the remaining portion of Section 1 of Proposition No. 34 be susceptible to amendment afterwards?

The President: Yes, sir; any portion of the whole matter will be subject to amendment.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I would like to ask if Sections 2, 3 and 4 of Proposition No. 34 are added to Proposition No. 35?

The President: Yes, sir.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I move then that Section No. 3 be stricken out. Section 3 is included in the Enabling Act as I understand.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move to amend Section 1.

The President: The motion to strike out Section No. 3 will take precedence of that motion.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: Upon the proposition to strike out Section 3, it is true it is a repetition of the act of Congress, I believe—"None of the lands granted for common schools shall be sold for less than ten dollars an acre." That is what the act of Congress says, and I suppose it is proper for us to adopt it in our Constitution in accordance with the Enabling Act. I suppose the act of Congress would bind us whether we put it in our constitution or not, but I see no impropriety in putting in this constitution what the act requires this state to do.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would ask of the gentleman if the latter part of Proposition No. 35 does not cover the ground mentioned in Section 3 of Proposition No. 34? It says on line five "Nor shall any lands which the state holds by grant from the United States (in any case in which the manner of disposition and minimum price are so prescribed) be disposed of, except in the manner and for at least the price prescribed in the grant thereof, without the consent of the United States."

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: That is so. It might as well be stricken out.

The Chair put the question on the motion to strike out Section 3 of Proposition 34, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: What has been done with Proposition No. 23? Has all of it been stricken out?

The President: No, sir; only the first part.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that Proposition No. 23 be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the remaining Section 2, and also the article in regard to exemptions of Proposition No. 23 be stricken out.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Rickards), and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: Proposition No. 23 is now disposed of and stricken from the file.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) offers an amendment to Proposition No. 35, which will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out all of line one of Section 1 of Proposition No. 35 up to and including the word "people," and insert the following: "All lands of the state that have been or that may hereafter be granted to the state by Congress, and all lands acquired by gift or grant or devise from any person or corporation shall be public lands of the state, and shall forever be held in trust for the people for the respective purposes for which they have been or may be granted, donated or devised."

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: I beg to be excused until Monday.

The President: If there be no objection the gentleman will be excused. The gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Sargent) desires leave of absence until Monday at four o'clock. If there be no objection leave of absence will be granted.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: I move the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: In examining Proposition No. 17, Mr. President, I do not find that any lands have been defined as public lands. Section 2 provides as follows: "The public school fund of the state shall consist of the proceeds of such lands as have been heretofore granted or may hereafter be granted to the state by the general government, known as school lands," etc. That is the article providing what shall be public school funds of the state. There has been no definition of public lands in this state that I know of, and I think it will be very proper and very wise and cautious measure to define what are the public lands.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would say that Proposition No. 35, as it now stands, covers all the lands that can be in any way acquired by the state. The general term used in the first part of Section 1 of Proposition No. 35 is general enough to include all public lands. If ever the courts are called upon to determine what are the public lands, and what class they may belong to, they have the United States law making the donation in which to refer in order to determine that question, and for us to put into the section that construction of the law will be useless. The courts have already done that. The courts have in many cases said what public lands are. The use to which these public lands are to be put is defined by the act of Congress itself, and this first section or clause in Section 1 of Proposition No. 35 has all that is necessary for us to say in order that the court or that the people, for that matter, may know what is meant. It says "All public lands of the state are held in trust for all the people, and none of such land nor any estate or interest therein shall ever be disposed of except in pursuance of general laws provided for such disposition, nor unless the full market value of the estate or interest disposed of to be ascertained in such manner as may be provided by law, be paid or safely secured to the state." Now, that covers the whole proposition. The legislature under that may prescribe a particular method of disposition of them—may prescribe the officers who shall have the power of disposing of them; but under the restrictions of Congress they may be disposed of in no other manner than that prescribed by law of the United States. I believe in leaving it to the legislature to prescribe the will of the people in relation to these public lands.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I am not able now to refer to a decision that held that after the title once passed into a state the control of the general government over that title is lost, and the check is put on the munificent grant of the Congress of the United States to the Territory of Montana for the several purposes, that that grant should be recognized and a provision made here to the effect that it shall be held in trust for the people of the several trusts for which it was granted. I am not particular about defining what are public lands, but there may be some question as to the question hereafter; for instance, I find in this Article No. 17 on Education that they provide for lands that may be acquired by gift, grant or devise. Now, whether these lands will be public lands or not might be a question, and I think that all lands granted to the State of Montana should be deemed and held to be public lands, and I think further that those several classes of lands—the different grants—should be held in trust for the people for the respective purpose for which they were granted, so that no legislature may ever take it in its power, or think it has the power to dispose of school lands for the purpose of a university, or university lands for the purpose of a School of Mines, or the lands that are granted for the School of Mines, for the purpose of an Agricultural College. That is my object in amending this section, and it may be as my friend has said that this proposition covers all that I have recited, and I am willing that he may amend it by saying that all the public lands are held in trust by the people for the several purposes for which they have been or may be hereafter granted, donated or devised, if it suits the gentleman better. I am not particular about the language.

The Congress may define that all these lands that are given to the state are public lands, but there has been no such definition yet, and I think it is very proper for this convention to define it in some manner. The legislature may undertake, as I say, to dispose of these lands differently, with the understanding or the idea that after the people have once completely passed that then the general government can no further control, but so long as the title remains with this condition which the courts may construe to be a condition subsequent, and not a condition precedent, prevails, I say that whenever the title gets in that condition the United States, in my opinion, cannot control it within the state, and if the legislature should assume the authority to sell the public school lands of this state and divert that money for some other purpose, why I do not understand how the laws of the United States can conflict or interfere, how the officers authorized to dispose of them as lands could be enjoined by reason of this condition that has been imposed upon the title of these lands by the government of the United States. I think that that much respect should be paid to this granting clause that has given us these lands, that we pledge ourselves never to divert one dollar from the purposes for which they were granted severally.

Mr. Middleton of Custer called for the reading of the amendment.

The Clerk read same for the information of the gentleman.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: If I understand the purport of the amendment aright, the effect of it would be to prohibit forever the sale of these lands. If they are held in trust for the people forever the provisions here in the remainder of the section certainly could not be done; it would either be inconsistent with the rest of the section or else it would be a perpetual bar to the sale of a single acre of these public lands. It seems to me that the section as it stands covers the matter sufficiently, and this convention does not want to adopt any such provision or an amendment embodying such a provision as that these lands shall be held in trust forever.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: The word "forever" adds nothing to this Section 1 of Article 35. It can be stricken out.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to ask the gentleman the effect of the word "hereafter" upon lands which would subsequently be granted to the State of Montana for irrigating purposes. Supposing that we would want to dispose of that land for immediate cash; according to the wording of your amendment, "hereafter," we cannot dispose of it in that way.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move that the word "forever" be stricken out.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: "The lands granted to us hereafter." Supposing we obtain a grant of land for irrigating purposes, which we hope to sometime or other, then these lands would come under the same restrictions as the lands which have already been granted to the state.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Only so far as holding these lands for the purposes for which they are granted. If they are granted for the purposes of irrigation you would not be allowed to take those lands after they are granted and sell them and appropriate the money from that sale for some other purpose.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: You would have to dispose of them at the time limited here.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: My impression is that that word does not cut much figure one way or the other, and it may lead us into difficulty.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: The gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Kanouse) says he has an amendment which will cover it all. I will accept it.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: For the benefit of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke I would say, there is an express provision—"Nor shall any lands which the state holds by grant of the United States, in any case in which the manner of disposition and minimum price are so prescribed, be disposed of, except in the manner and for at least the price prescribed in the grant thereof, without the consent of the United States." Unless the United States grant this land for irrigating purposes—unless there is a manner of disposition prescribed in the grant, there is nothing to prevent it from doing so. Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow. All that I desired to do was to call the attention of the convention to the fact that in Proposition No. 17, Article on Education, as reported from the Committee on Education, the school lands are already well guarded in these words: "The funds of the State University and of the several state institutions of learning, from whatever source accruing, shall forever remain inviolate and sacred to the purpose for which they were dedicated."

The President: The gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Kanouse) offers an amendment which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Add after the words "In trust for the people" the words "To be disposed of as hereinafter provided," so as to make it read as follows: "And all lands acquired by gift or grant or devise from any person or corporation shall be public lands of the state, and shall be held in trust for the people, to be disposed of as hereinafter provided."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I will accept the amendment.

The President: The gentleman accepts the amendment. The question is now upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin as amended by the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Kanouse).

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I desire the indulgence of the convention for one moment, and to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that his amendment is covered not only by Section 1, but it is also covered by the report of the Committee on Education; in other words, we are getting ourselves into the same condition with Proposition No. 35 we did with the report of the Judiciary Committee; we are getting in surplusage; we are getting in conflicting provisions, and that Section 1 of Proposition No. 35 covers everything that is attempted to be covered by the various amendments offered here, when it is taken in connection with Proposition No. 17 on Education. There is nothing that can escape, nor can there be any misapplication of the funds derived from the sale of the public lands. Section 12 covers a portion of the ground, the very last section. Section 1 of Proposition No. 35 provides here the gentleman read Section 1, Proposition No. 35. As soon as the title is acquired by the state they become public lands, and they may be designated in all proceedings as the public lands. They are a part of the donation of the United States which is given to the State of Montana to be applied to a particular use or to a particular purpose. That purpose is defined in the act which donates the land. The manner of selecting the land is also provided for by a general law, and the particular board of persons entrusted with the selections of those lands has been pointed out in Section 1 of Proposition No. 17, which provides that the Governor, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Secretary of State and Attorney General shall constitute the State Board of Land Commissioners. Now, it will no doubt be the duty of that board in the laws which will be enacted by the state to choose certain lands for certain purposes. Their report will designate the particular purpose to which the lands selected shall be applied; their report will set apart those lands to that particular use, and under the power just granted them by law they can act and set apart the land only to the use designated by the act of Congress. Any act of theirs setting out any other land to any other purpose than that laid down in the act of Congress would be simply a nullity. Then, I say that Proposition No. 35 covers the ground as to the duty of the Board of Land Commissioners, as it is called, as provided in Section 4, and that the people have a right to an absolute safeguard that these funds will remain inviolate—that the proceeds of this land will remain the property of the people; that it cannot be disposed of except in the manner provided by law. Therefore, I say that the amendment is useless. If the proposition should go to the Committee on Adjustment and Phraseology, it will become necessary for them to strike out this, because they will find, on investigation, if not an absolute conflict, at least it is surplusage and something that should be stricken out. The provision relative to the disposal of the land is left to the legislature—the manner of disposing of the land is left to the legislature, except that in the proposition No. 34 the lands are classified into three or four separate classes. In all states where public lands are entered for school purposes, the laws enacted by the legislature have been conformed to the donations made by the Congress of the United States. I say that the ground is covered already by the section.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I regret that I am compelled to disagree with my learned friend from Missoula on the proposition. If I understood the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, it is that the several grants given by the United States to the State of Montana shall be kept separate—their funds shall be kept separate; they shall be used for no other purpose; and the object of that amendment is so to direct and to "mandate" the legislature, if we may use the expression, that those funds shall be kept separate. That is carrying out the intention of the act of Congress. Now, we have a certain grant for the State University, a grant for the common schools, a grant for the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, and one for public buildings, and so on; and I do say that we will leave this thing in an ambiguous condition if we do not pass that amendment or something like it. It will leave it in such a condition if this does pass that these officers he speaks of cannot divert these funds; they cannot misappropriate them; they cannot mix them together. Each fund belongs separately to itself.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I am out of order, but I hope the convention will indulge me. Now, this Proposition No. 17 relates exclusively to lands granted for educational purposes, or that may hereafter be granted for educational purposes. It has nothing to do with the grant of the beneficiary, nor has it anything to do with the grant of lands for the benefit of the state in the erection of public buildings, nor has it anything to do with any lands that may hereafter be granted for another purpose. I think my amendment covers it all. Suppose, as was intimated by the Senator today in his argument—perhaps Professor Powell it was—that there would be lands granted for the purpose of irrigation; it never would be covered by this proposition 17 on Education, for they confine their proposition entirely to lands granted to educational purposes, and there is no declaration in that from first to last that these are public lands, or any definition of public lands. I once knew a very distinguished gentleman to say that the land upon which the Interior Department in Washington is situated stands open within the meaning of the law. He was the first and only man that I ever heard make the statement, because it has been decided by different decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States that those are only public lands subject to disposition; but these are all lands held by the state. Now, I say that this includes not only the lands that have been donated for school purposes, the lands that may hereafter be donated for school purposes, or for any other purposes—for the purpose of constructing public buildings; or if any rich gentleman dies and donates a hundred thousand acres of land to the state, that will cover it and it will keep that donation separate from all others. I say that there is danger of the legislature at some time taking the bit into its own mouth and rushing on and saying that it has the power to fuse these funds. Proposition No. 17, Section 12, as referred to by the gentleman from Missoula reads: "The funds of the State University and of all the other state institutions of learning, from whatever source accruing, shall forever remain inviolate," etc. Now, I want all other funds and all other donations for all other purposes kept as separate and distinct as provided for in this, and then I want a definition of what are public lands, so that there can be no confusion by any judge or any court or any lawyer, and if we say that all lands granted to the state or donated to the state or devised to the state are public lands, it covers all the lands of the state that are ever acquired for any purpose; and that the funds arising from them—that is in the language of the amendment, but it means that—all the funds arising from these lands shall be devoted to the purposes for which they were respectively granted or devised or donated, for the specific use of which they were granted. I do think that that is a very needful provision to go into this constitution, and is not superfluous to anything that has been adopted and put into this constitution so far.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce), and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 22 in the affirmative to 7 in the negative.

The President: The gentleman from Meagher (Mr. Kanouse) has an amendment. The gentleman offers an amendment to Section 1 by adding thereto "Provided that any of said lands may be reclassified whenever by reason of increased facilities for irrigation or otherwise they shall be eligible to different classification."

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I think it might be well to insert there after the word "reclassify" the words "By said Board," so as to show what power shall act. It suggests itself to my mind that after this Board of Land Commissioners has once classified these lands, that their powers might not be sufficient to enable them to reclassify any lands which afterwards by reason of canals or reservoirs which were determined on the first classification, as possibly grazing lands, that afterwards probably would be agricultural lands of increased value. That is the object of the amendment.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Meagher, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hickman of Madison sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Madison (Mr. Hickman) offers to amend Section 2, on line one, by striking out the word "shall" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "may"; also strike out of same line the words "but shall be" and insert in lieu thereof the word "or."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: That would make it "arid lands of the second class may be sold or leased under the rules and regulations," etc., instead of reading as it does now, the lands of the first and second class shall not be sold, but shall be "leased." Now, the difficulty would be in leasing arid lands or grazing lands. Sometimes they may lie contiguous to a man's ranch, and he may want to buy them, while perhaps it would be useless to anyone else, and he would not lease them.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I call the attention of the gentleman to the first class which are only valuable for grazing purposes.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Ranch men or farmers have no such land either contiguous or near them that they would give a good price for, and I do not understand why they should not be sold under such circumstances or why they should ever be withheld from sale. I should say that there are grazing lands or in some cases timber lands that farmers would give a good deal for, say twenty acres lying contiguous to them—either of timber or farming lands.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Hickman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: There is an amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Ramsdell,—an amendment to Section 2, line five.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: Mr. President, before you pass to the second section I desire to offer an amendment to the first.

The President: Mr. Myers of Yellowstone offers an amendment to Section 1, line nine. After the word "any" strike out the word "incorporated", and all of said section after "limits"—in other words strike out the words "and which are worth more than fifty dollars per acre."

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I move the adoption of that amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: The object I have in offering that is to take the sense of the convention as to whether they desire to retain the lands adjacent to incorporated cities only, or incorporated towns. It seems to me that there are many growing little towns that there may be a valuable piece of land nearby, that it would be just as advisable to hold as any lying adjacent to incorporated cities, and I also wish to take the sense of the convention as to whether they desire to sell lands that are worth less than fifty dollars per acre. If they are going to retain any at all, I think they should just as well retain those that are less than thirty dollars an acre as those that are worth fifty dollars and over, hence I offer the amendment and hope it will prevail.

The President: The Clerk will read the section as it would be if amended. The Chair would suggest the difficulty of ascertaining the value of this land, whether it should be more or less than $50.

The Clerk read the section as amended by the proposed amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I very much doubted the propriety of authorizing the Legislature to in any way or manner sell those lands and still doubt it, but the committee having this matter under consideration, having examined the matter thoroughly and reported upon it, so far as my opinion was concerned I allowed it to go in favor of that committee. But I believe, Mr. President, that very little of this land will be sold in the next eight or ten years, and the little that will be sold will be within a few miles of the thriving and growing little communities scattered all over this State. Those lands I believe we should reserve. I am in favor of the adoption of this amendment, but I would like to see it go a little further. The one mile limit is too near; it should be made five or six miles, because school lands within six miles of any growing little town in Montana or any city, or incorporated town, are valuable—are worth, if they are worth anything more than ten dollars an acre, and in the near future will be worth more than you can realize on ten dollars an acre—than you can realize on the interest, on the proceeds of the land, whether it be ten dollars an acre or twenty dollars an acre, if you hold it in perpetuity and lease it. Lands far distant, at present say 200 miles from towns, may be sold, because it is a long way in the future until they will have a value exceeding ten dollars; but lands within a half dozen miles of a town have that value now, and that value would increase very fast; besides they have a leasing value, and a leasing value is more than you can realize on the purchase money. So that I am in favor of extending that limit to six miles.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: If the gentleman will make a motion to that effect I will accept it.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I hope the gentleman will extend the limit to ten miles. In our valley there are any number of acres worth fifty dollars, and even more than that, within ten miles of our city.

The President: How many miles will the gentleman accept as a limit?

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: Six miles.

The President: It will be so amended then to read within six miles.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I move to strike out six and insert three. I think six miles entirely too far off, because the character of it is not uniform. I think three miles from any incorporated town would be far enough.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I second the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to amend by making it three miles.

The Chair stated the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. Mr. Hershfield.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I want to remind the gentleman from Cascade and others that this proposition includes all the lands granted by Congress. Some of the land is granted for public buildings—the State capital. I suppose the money will be wanted to be used for that, and it cannot be raised by leasing. It certainly ought to be in the power of the Legislature to sell the lands granted for the building of the State capitol, it seems to me, so as to raise the money to be applied to the building, and it is probably so with regard to the institutions for the benefit of which lands are granted. There is no restriction upon those lands by Congress as to the price. The restriction to ten dollars an acre, I believe, if I am not mistaken, in the Enabling Act, only applied to lands that are granted for common school purposes. Evidently the intention of Congress was that the other lands might be sold for cash as it was needed, and it would not intend that those lands should be sold at all, I suppose. The limitation as to price only applies to lands granted for common school purposes, and certainly lands that are only within a few miles of a town ought to be sold, I suppose; those granted for public buildings ought to be sold for money to be applied to the purpose of public buildings.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I would say that the lands that are granted for other purposes have not been selected yet; hence there will be no danger of selecting lands near these towns, except of towns that may be platted and laid out in the future, and this will only apply to university and school purposes.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: My object was to limit the Legislature. Now, some gentleman has left it entirely with the Legislature without limit, and it is not probable that lands that might be leased to a good purpose and not sold for a good purpose, will be sold for a low price. School lands cannot be sold for less than ten dollars an acre.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: In the Enabling Act, Section 17, which states the quantity of land and for what purpose it is donated, says: "All the lands granted by this section shall be held, appropriated and disposed of exclusively for the purpose herein mentioned, in such manner as the Legislatures of the respective States may severally provide." As Judge Marshall says, I do not think that the minimum price at which the school lands shall be sold refers to the lands donated for the purpose of public buildings at all.

The President: The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Hershfield, to make the distance three miles instead of six.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: It just occurred to me that the land mentioned by the gentleman from Missoula as lying near his town is the land we ought to try to protect. Now, this broad piece of land lying near Missoula can be divided into two thousand lots of one hundred feet square, or one hundred feet frontage by a little more than one hundred feet the other way, that is, at a quick calculation. Now, I believe that reasonable rental from that land would amount to a great sum of money, and that it would amount even now to fifty dollars, the amount of money that would be realized from the sale of it. That is just one instance; and the longer it remains tied up in the school fund, and the longer it remains the property of the school fund, the more valuable it becomes. When the first lease of five, ten, fifteen or twenty years has expired, the second leasehold is more valuable yet, probably double or treble or quadruple; and so on to the end of time; whereas if you sell that property today for $50—well say $100 an acre, or $500 an acre, the interest on that money would amount to quite a sum, but an insignificant sum compared to the rental. Now, this regulation holds good so far as all school lands are concerned, but it holds good more particularly to school lands lying within a reasonable distance of towns. So far as the land donated for public buildings is concerned, if that cuts any figure in this case, I would be in favor of postponing the sale of that land until such time as the convention thinks the public buildings should be built, and then selling it when we are ready to build.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I am in favor of selling off all the lands within three miles of the city limits. Now, this provides that they should be sold in lots of not more than five acres, and they shall not be leased for a longer period than five years. Now, we know that nobody will put up a good building on lands that are leased; so that if half is leased and good buildings put up, that would make the rest so much more valuable. We will get more out of it in that way. And then I would be in favor of line five of Section 2, where it says it shall be sold in lots of not more than five—say alternate lots of not more than five so as to enhance the property.

The President: The Chair would suggest that there might be some difficulty in determining the limits of a city if it is not incorporated. However, the amendment now offered by Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke is the question upon which the convention is to act. The motion is to strike out six and insert in lieu thereof three.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield) and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 15 in the affirmative to 11 in the negative.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: There does not seem to be any interest taken in this matter any more, and therefore I move that we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Will the gentleman allow me to introduce a resolution so that it can be referred before the motion is carried?

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I also ask the privilege of introducing a motion.

The President: There are already two amendments to offer to Section 2 when the convention reaches that section, one by the gentleman from Missoula, and one by the gentleman from Meagher.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: If it is in order I move that when we adjourn we adjourn until four P. M. on Monday.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Marshall) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The President: The gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, desires to introduce a resolution before the motion to adjourn is put. The Clerk will read the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows: Resolved that the Chief Clerk be and he is hereby required to make out a payroll of the extra clerks and pages of this convention, which shall be duly certified to by the President and Chief Clerk, and at the adjournment of this convention shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Territory. The Chief Clerk is hereby authorized and required to issue a certificate to each clerk and page, or his order, telling the service rendered and amount due, which said certificate shall be duly certified to by the President of the convention.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that the resolution be referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade (Mr. Collins) and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, desires to offer the following resolution.

The Clerk read as follows: Resolved that a committee of three be appointed by the President of this convention, whose duty it shall be to carefully examine the various propositions already adopted as parts of the constitution, and those which may hereafter become parts thereof, with a view to ascertain any inconsistencies or omission which may exist in the instrument, and that authority to remedy such inconsistencies and omissions, and wherever any ambiguity or imperfection exists in the language employed, or the intention of the convention seems incompletely expressed, the committee shall remedy such defects, and report to the convention for its action.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move the adoption of that resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I certainly want to say that my only reason for offering that is this, that I do not believe the Committee on Revision and Phraseology has the power to carry out all that the resolution contemplates. I do not mean to reflect upon the Committee on Revision and Phraseology at all, but I do not believe that their powers would be sufficient to arrive at the end desired and contemplated by that resolution. I should also like to suggest if the resolution be adopted that the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee be made Chairman of that committee.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I presume, Mr. President, that the mover of that committee has duly considered this, but the question suggests itself to my mind whether there might not be some conflict of authority between that committee and the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: As Chairman of the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, I hope the resolution will prevail. I think the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee is the man above all others that should pass upon this constitution.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I was going to move, Mr. President, that the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee be added to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I will accept that amendment, with the understanding that their authority is increased to the extent as contemplated in the resolution.

The President: There is an amendment for that instead of a committee of three that a Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary be added to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, giving power to that committee to carry out the provisions incorporated in this resolution.

Mr. Joy of Park: I would like to inquire of the gentleman who introduced that resolution if it is intended that this committee will complete its work before the convention adjourn.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: The intention is certainly that they shall report before the convention adjourns. My idea was to get it introduced now and to get the committee at work, so that they would not have it all to do on the last day or two of the session.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula offers an amendment that the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee be added to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, and that that committee be given the power to carry out the provisions incorporated in this resolution.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I would suggest that the motion be that one or two or three or four more be added to that committee—say four more. I move that four more be added to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology if it meets the views of the Chairman of that committee.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Cut it down to two.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Well, cut it down to two.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I suggest that it had better be two or three, as one of the members is not here, Mr. Webster.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move you then that it be three.

The President: The amendment is then that the Chair appoint three members of the convention. The question now before the convention is that the Chair add three members of the convention to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, with provision to carry out the powers that are granted in this resolution.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Before I vote upon the adoption of that resolution and the amendment, I would like to hear from the Chairman of this committee. There are three persons on this committee all of whom are here, I believe—there is only one absent, and I would not like to vote for the adoption of the resolution of this character unless I knew that all the members of this committee were in full accord with it, for it might appear as casting some reflection upon their ability.

The President: The Chairman of the committee has assented to the proposition and recommends it. The Chair does not know that the other gentlemen are here.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: It seems to me that it is unnecessary—entirely so—to add three more members to this committee. The committee certainly are competent to do the work, and there is enough of them. My experience has been here that the larger the committee the more difficult it is to get them together. I know that more than three-fourths of the meetings of the Judiciary Committee have been attended by a bare quorum, and I am satisfied that this kind of work will have to be done by two or three. I do not object to the resolution so far as endorsing the matters that it embodies to this Committee on Revision, Phraseology and Adjustment. I am in favor of adopting the resolution, but I do not see any necessity of increasing the number.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment to have a committee of three appointed by the President, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair will appoint on that committee the gentleman from Silver Bow, the Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary, the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, and the gentleman from Meagher, Mr. Kanouse.

Mr. Breen of Jefferson: I now renew my motion that the convention adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Jefferson (Mr. Breen) and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 23 in the affirmative to 19 in the negative.

The convention adjourned until Saturday, August 10th, 1889, at 10 A. M.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.Saturday, August 10, 1889. Morning Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Leave of absence was granted to the following members:

Burns, Edward, until Monday, August 12th.

Graves, until Monday, August 12th.

Reck, for the day.

Buford, until Monday, August 12th.

Hershfield, for the day.

Toole, J. K., for the day.

Dixon, for the day.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

The President: The Chair has a communication purporting to come from some public body. If the convention desires to hear the communication the same will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Stuart, Montana; August 9th, 1889. President Constitutional Convention. What is the matter with Stuart for permanent capital? Citizens getting mad because no attention paid to them. Please read to the convention and oblige. Signed Board of Trade.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: Mr. President, four or five days ago I laid before this convention a provision to be incorporated in the constitution, but to be voted on separately, and, if carried, to be incorporated as a part of the constitution. I think it was referred to the Committee on Suffrage. It was a proposition for woman's suffrage. I would like to know what is the matter with that committee. I ask that they be instructed by the convention to report. I would respectfully ask, Mr. President, that that committee report next Monday.

The President: Will the Chairman of the Committee on Suffrage give the gentleman the information he requires?

Mr. Rotwitt of Meagher: During the excitement of the capital question the committee has not been able to hold a meeting but I believe we will be able to report today.

The President: The Chairman of the committee reports that the committee will probably be able to report today. If not they will no doubt report on Monday.

The convention had under consideration Proposition No. 35.

The last action of the convention was upon the adoption of an amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to insert three instead of six, in line nine of Section 1, so as to read "within three miles of such limits."

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: That was carried.

The President: Yes sir. There is now an amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Ramsdell, to amend Section 2 on line five, "Provided, however, that not more than 160 acres of land, arid or otherwise, shall ever be sold to the same person, company or corporation."

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move the adoption of the amendment. The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the amendment be adopted, to insert after the word "law" on line five of Section 2 the words "Provided that not more than 160 acres, arid or otherwise, shall ever be sold to the same person, company or corporation."

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I do not believe that there need be much said in support of this amendment, it seems to me that it will commend itself. It is a wise provision in this respect that not over 160 acres of land should ever be sold to the same company, or corporation. There may be reasons for selling grazing or timber lands in larger bodies than that and it would not really affect the interests of the people so much, but the policy of the general government has been in the last twenty or twenty-five years not to give to the same individual or company or allow them to acquire in any manner more than 160 acres. I believe it would be a good provision to incorporate in the constitution.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I am opposed to the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula, and notwithstanding it has been the policy of the government for several years to put up no lands at public sale, but to dispose of them to actual settlers, having had a great deal of experience in these land matters, I have been firmly of the opinion that the land law of public sale and private entry was best for the government and best for the people, and I can point to States now where the lands have been disposed of—for instance the State of Ohio, one of the most populous and wealthy States in the Union—the State of Indiana, the State of Illinois, and the State of Missouri—where the lands were sold. Now, so far as the public land system goes, if the lands go into the hands of private proprietors they are sold to persons who want them upon long terms of credit and so on. They are sure of their titles then, and in the settlement system there is always somebody jumping lands and consequently the Land Department at Washington is full of decisions and burdened down with perjury. I do not know that that would act in this way, but I undertook to say that the land would sell at as good a price and find buyers. If we sell at all let us sell; but my view of this matter is that they never should have been sold at all; however, it seems to be left to the legislature now to sell, and if we sell I think we should leave that matter to the legislature to meet the wants of the community in the future; and I am not at all afraid of large capitalists or wealthy men getting these lands and holding them, because there is no profit in them at all unless they can sell them; and if they are to be sold they may as well be sold to them as to be parceled out in little lots of 160 acres. I am in favor of settling up this country and getting all the lands of this future State into the hands of private proprietors, too, at the very earliest it is possible to do it, and I do say that it would be better for Montana to do that, and the arid lands of the territory should be surveyed at the earliest possible date, put up and sold, and subject to private entry at the minimum price. Then you get the title into hands of private proprietors; and the same system would work well as regards the public lands of the state, if they are to be sold at all. There are some lands that must be sold, and whenever they are sold let us have a market and not limit the market for the land, because your sales to the government amount to nothing. They would be sold to those persons, and only one person could buy 160 acres. If there is to be any sale at all of these lands, and it is necessary to sell them, and they ought to be sold, I say let us have a market for them and not limit the market. I have never been accused of being a friend of corporations or anything of that kind, but I do say that the system that limits the purchase of any commodity will work detrimentally.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: The fact, sir, that our homestead and pre-emption laws have remained on the statute books comparatively untouched is an indication that the policy that is embodied in these acts has commended itself to the great body of the American people, and I undertake to show, sir, that the policy would be comprised in something after these, "That the public lands of this country in subdivisions such as are recommended by this amendment that has just been offered, in such tracts as were suitable for homes should be owned by people of the country in fee simple absolute. I am in favor, sir, of incorporating that in the constitution. I believe in stating what the policy shall be in terms that cannot be misunderstood. I am in favor of stating that they shall be sold wherever it would be necessary they should be sold. I think, sir, that the amendment that has been offered is a good one, but I believe as I heard it read that it does not perhaps comprehend all it should. I think it is necessary to still further amend it in line four of this provision. It seems to me it is a question of whether it is preferable to have these lands covered with homes, with all the improvements permanent, as they naturally would be, that the homemaker gathers about him, or whether they should simply be covered with shacks with such bare improvements as are absolutely necessary during the short time which a renter would naturally occupy them. I am in favor of the amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Meagher offers an amendment which is germane to the subject, and if it is necessary the Chair will have it read.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I would offer it as an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 2 as follows: Strike out lines four and five to and including the word "law" and insert "The agricultural lands shall be sold in lots not exceeding 160 acres, whenever the price as fixed by Section 3 herein can be obtained therefor; that whenever any of the said lands cannot be sold for said price, and so long as they shall so continue unsold, they may be leased in manner as may be provided by law.

The President: The Chair would suggest that Section 3 is stricken out. There is a reference in this amendment to Section 3.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I think, Mr. President, if the reference be made to Section 1 it will have the same effect. Section 1 prescribes that they shall only be sold on such terms and at such minimum price as may be fixed by Congress.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I suggest that the Clerk change it so that it will read Section 1.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead called for the reading of the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Ramsdell).

The Clerk read as follows: Provided further that not more than 160 acres of agricultural land, arid or otherwise, shall ever be sold to the same person, company or corporation.

The President: This amendment in no wise conflicts with the other amendment and might be attached to it.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: In the report that has been adopted of the Committee on Irrigation, it seems to me that this has been provided for better than we can provide for it here. It allows the legislature to make such laws, rules and regulations in regard to selling or leasing this land as it may in its judgment deem fit and proper. Now, I have been opposed to the selling of the land; I think leasing it far preferable, but that was settled in the adoption of the report of the Committee on Education. In regard to selling 160 acres I have the same objection that I have had all the time. If we were back in the states, where we have a regular rainfall and where every 40 acres could be cultivated, it would be very different. No gentleman has traveled over his territory and has taken any interest at all in endeavoring to find out about the water and about the land knows that nearly every bit of the water has been appropriated except in a few large streams. Now, where there is a small stream and you can get 160 acres, if you allow a purchaser 40 or 160 acres of land it virtually gives him a clear title to the 160 acres, because there is no water that can be had on the remaining acres that he will not control, that is if you sell the 160 acres that has the water and the timber on it. The balance of the 640 acres never could be sold; and we are limited by the Enabling Act to the sale of 640 acres. There is no person allowed to purchase more than one section, and it does not seem to me that it would work to the best interests of the school fund to restrict it to 160 acres.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I can see where this matter, if it is neglected, would lead to a great deal of fraud and speculation. If an individual wants a section of land and he wants it badly he will obtain it, whether he had a right himself to purchase it or not. He will get an employe or a friend to enter the land for him, and he will obtain it anyway. I think it is far more to the interests of the public lands that the individuals who want to purchase a section of land should be entitled to purchase it in his own right, and not have others go around and purchase the land for him. They will obtain it anyway if they want the section of land, and we might as well let them have it in a legal and a proper way. I think there is a good deal of talent mischief in that amendment, and it should not be adopted.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I fully agree with the remarks made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. I do not apprehend that there is going to be such a struggle on the part of the authorities to keep this land from being sold as there will be to sell them, and I know no good reason why a man who comes here with his family and settles and wants to locate land enough to settle his children about him should not be allowed to do so. To limit a man to 160 acres, it seems to me, would be the height of folly. I think that every man who goes and locates should buy whatever he wants provided he pays for it. Now, in regard to the matter of irrigation, as my friend from Meagher county says, everyone knows who has been over the country and taken an observation of the conditions of things that exist, that there are 1000 acres of land that may be deprived of the benefit of irrigation by appropriating the water and putting it on the 160 acres. That is another reason why a man who goes there and wants to buy 640 acres should certainly be allowed to do it; and I am certainly opposed to this amendment in toto. I am in favor of selling a man just as much as he will pay for. There is no danger of a man getting a great tract of land out in this arid country and keeping it from settlement. There is another thing I do not like in this bill, that is, that none of the lands granted to common schools shall be sold for less than ten dollars an acre. Now, we propose to put that provision in the constitution. It will remain there as long as this constitution remains unaltered. Suppose after five or ten years that it will prove the case that we cannot sell these lands for five dollars an acre or two dollars an acre, and we go to Congress to modify this Enabling Act. Interrupted.

The President: Section 3 has been stricken out.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Well, I have no more to say in regard to that matter, but it seems to me that wisdom requires that whenever a man comes in to purchase these lands and complies with the requirements of the Enabling Act that he should be allowed to purchase what he wants. There is another thing. Where these lands remain in trust for the purposes for which they were appropriated, they are not taxable, nothing is derived from them to supply the revenues of the state; but the moment they are sold to private parties they become taxable, and I think that a very important consideration in viewing this matter from a financial point of view. I do not want to consume the time of the convention in talking this matter over, I merely give my views thus briefly, and will say that they are satisfactory to my mind.

The President: The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Ramsdell).

The Clerk read the said amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau. I think we are all agreed upon one thing, and that is to get the most out of these lands for the school fund. Now, the question is which is the best way to work it so as to get the money out of it. I agree with Dr. Parberry. There are sections to my knowledge that have 160 acres of water frontage, and the other 160 acres lies back on the hills, perfectly arid lands; and if we allow them to buy 160 acres of this land they will practically own the rest and never will buy it, and I believe the school fund will get more out of some of these sections of land by selling the entire section.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: It occurs to me that if there should be any abuse of this privilege, it is right and proper the legislature should attend to it, and it looks to me as if it should be left in the hands of the legislature; and as it stands now, without any further amendment, it would be left to the legislature.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I think so far as the agricultural lands are concerned it ought to be the desire of the people of the state that they should fall into the hands of actual residents of the state, and I do not think very much of the provision that any more than 160 acres shall be sold to any one individual. The principle is entirely correct, but it seems to me that it would be impossible to enforce such a law as that in the terms of the amendment which has been sent to the Chair, because everybody knows how easy it is to violate a law of that kind. A party who was in search of this sort of land could buy 160 acres, and so on along the line until he could purchase all he wanted. It seems to me that there ought to be a provision by which actual residence on the land was had, and that never should be made unless there was a provision that this agricultural land could be sold on credit. If that was done then provision could be made that before the second or another payment was made, that satisfactory proof should be made to somebody provided by law that at that time the party was in the actual residence and occupancy of the land, and in the event of his failure to make that sort of proof the land itself would be forfeited and the amount he paid also forfeited. That is my idea of it. I have put into writing the suggestion which I make, and I submit it to the convention for what it is worth reading: "Agricultural lands shall be sold on credit in tracts not exceeding 160 acres, provided that before the second or another subsequent payment is received the purchaser shall prove to the satisfaction of such person as may be prescribed by law that he is actually residing upon the tract of land so purchased; and in case of default in any deferred payment or the interest thereon the person so defaulting for the period of ninety days shall forfeit absolutely the tract which he has purchased with any payment or payments he may have made, and the land thus forfeited shall again be sold as in the first instance." I submit this as embodying my views and offer it as an amendment to the additional section.

The President: It will be in order in its proper order.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: In order that the proposed amendment which has just been read may be offered at this time, inasmuch as it meets my views upon the subject, I will withdraw the amendment offered by myself to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I also withdraw my amendment.

The President: The Chair then understands that both amendments are now withdrawn for the purpose of allowing the introduction of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I offer this substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

The President: The Clerk will first read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke and then the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: My amendment would come in right after the word "law" on line five.

The Clerk read as follows: Agricultural lands shall be sold on credit in tracts not exceeding 160 acres, provided that before the second or another subsequent payment is received the purchaser shall prove to the satisfaction of such person as may be prescribed by law that he is actually residing upon the tract of land so purchased; and in case of default in any deferred payment or the interest thereon the person so defaulting for the period of ninety days shall forfeit absolutely the tract which he has purchased, with any payment or payments he may have made, and the land thus forfeited shall again be sold as in the first instance.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: As there is in the line above a provision for leasing these lands, it ought to say, instead of "agricultural lands"—"When sold said land shall be settled on credit," etc.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I dislike a second time to express myself in regard to that, but it does seem to me that the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is acting in the interest of the actual settler at the expense of the school fund. I do not think that the actual settler should have all the advantages at the expense of the school fund.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin (Mr. Luce) offers an amendment to that, which will now be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for Toole's amendment offered by Luce of Gallatin: "Provided that the agricultural public lands shall only be sold to actual settlers thereon, and in quantities not to exceed 160 acres, and upon such terms and conditions as may be provided by law."

The President: The question is now upon the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke: I was about to say, Mr. President, that there is too much detail about this matter; that it should be entirely left to the legislature. Here we tie the hands of the legislature and fix it so that they can hardly dispose of this land with any reasonable advantage to the school fund, and it seems to me that the section of itself is sufficient to be embodied in the fundamental law, and leave it entirely to the legislature so that they can dispose of it to the best advantage of the settler, to the public and to the school fund, and in such quantities as may be prescribed by law. I am opposed to tying up the hands of the legislature in all matters of title. It is good enough in a general way.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: The convention having adopted the policy that this matter shall be left to the legislature, it seems to me that we should not take hold of this matter in the way that we are doing. Now, I believe that this matter of disposing of public lands and of regulating the sale of water, or of disposing of the water—those two questions are the great questions to be disposed of in the interest of the people of Montana, and if we are to go upon an untrodden road, if we are to try a new policy, I would suggest that this matter be referred to a committee and that they investigate the matter in all its phases and bring in a report. Certainly if we are to branch out in a new policy, I do not think we can make a satisfactory one by trying it in Committee of the Whole or convention. The matter should be referred to a committee. My idea is that we should grapple with these subjects and insist that a new policy should be put into the constitution in regard to them; I do not think that we can do justice to ourselves nor to the people by trying to do it in this way. It should be referred to a committee, and the committee should investigate it with particular reference to this matter. But the convention having adopted the policy that these lands shall not be leased but sold, I think that this whole subject matter should be stricken out, and if I am in order I move that this whole matter, Article 35 and Article 34 be stricken out except the first line and a half—"All the public lands of the state are held in trust for all the people, and none of such land nor any estate or interest therein, shall ever be disposed of except in pursuance of general laws—and I leave that in for the purpose of prescribing for the school lands. Now, if we want to go any further than those words imply, it seems to me we cannot do it by legislating in this manner: we want to do it by letting a committee investigate it in all its phases and report. We are having under consideration at present agricultural lands solely and purely. So far as my opinion goes it always has been and is yet, that we should not sell them at all, nor authorize the legislature to sell them, but that they should be leased on long terms. That not carrying, I am in favor of compelling the legislature to adopt a policy that the agricultural lands shall not be sold in tracts exceeding 160 acres, and that they shall not be sold except to bona fide residents. But the proposition is, can we insert this in this article, after having provided generally in the proposition on education that our policy is to leave it all to the legislature and let the legislature provide such rules as they shall see fit?

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: So far as I am concerned I am entirely contented that this matter should be left to the legislature, but upon entering the convention I found that amendments are pending seeking to dispose of these lands in a way different from what my judgment would dictate, and if the convention proposes to take hold of the subject and dispose of it, it seems to me that there should be one conclusion so far as the agricultural lands are concerned, and that is that they ought to go to the actual settlers. My friend from Meagher County (Dr. Parberry) refers to the fact that a good deal has been said about the actual settler, and that the lands should be sold to the best advantage for the school fund. I think that no better possible way could be devised in the interest of the school fund than to keep these lands in the hands of the actual settlers, so that they would be occupied and cultivated and produce something which would be subject to taxation. If the lands should be disposed of at all as a separate and distinct class, as agricultural lands, and these lands have been classified, they ought to go to the actual settler. Everybody knows, who is conversant at all with the topography of this country, that we have plenty of purely pastoral lands—grazing lands—and that we ought not to permit them to go to some other purpose, or to be used for purely speculative purposes. I am entirely contented that the whole subject shall go to the legislature, providing they shall be disposed of in the manner provided by law; but if anything is to be done we ought to put such restrictions upon it as will ultimately result in the agricultural lands being occupied by the actual settlers.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: If in order I would like to withdraw the substitute I sent up and offer another one.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin withdraws the substitute offered, and desires to offer another one.

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for Toole amendment. Provided that in the sale of agricultural lands actual settlers thereon shall have the preference under such conditions as may be prescribed by law."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move that that substitute be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I am satisfied that my friend from Lewis & Clarke, who has introduced the substitute for the amendment here, either goes too far or does not go far enough. He goes too far, in my judgment, in this, that he proposes to insert into this Constitution—place in this constitution a matter which I think legitimately belongs to the legislature. If he is right in his position and I am wrong, then he does not go far enough, for carrying his proposition out to its fullest and most extended results, it provides the manner in which these lands shall be prescribed for. It is purely a matter of legislation, and if the object is to make a provision for disposing of these lands ultimately then he wants to go on and provide for office rent—office hire, and the appointment of a chief and necessary clerks. Now, I think that this is a matter of pure legislation and should be left to the legislature, and not incorporated here. This is the position which I take, and I have not seen anything to indicate that my position is not correct.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I would just like to call the attention of the convention to Section nine of Proposition 28 which reads: "In the disposition of the public lands granted by the United States to this state preference shall always be given to actual settlers thereon." This was the suggestion made by the gentleman from Gallatin County; and further it says, "and the Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for carrying this section into effect.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: It seems to me that we might safely leave it to the legislature to prescribe rules and regulations for the disposition of the agricultural lands as in the original proposition offered.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: That provision was only intended to apply to those cases where persons are now actually occupying the school lands, or that may occupy them before they are surveyed. They go onto school lands and occupy them, and make improvements upon them, and when they come to be sold other persons might come in and bid more for them on account of these improvements; and for that reason it was put in there that they should be sold—those that are actually occupied. But as I understand the provision of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clark it is to provide for persons that may go onto lands under contract to purchase. We will have no such pre-emption laws such as have been enacted by Congress providing for the going on and filing and settlement, and such matters as that, but we will have these lands for sale, and we can provide such conditions in the making of the sale as we see fit, and after we have entered into the contract of sale the parties may go on and by complying with the contract become purchasers. But this provision that we have already only applies to lands where parties are in the actual occupancy of those lands now or may become actual occupants before they are surveyed.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: It appears to me that the gentleman from Silver Bow puts rather a big construction upon that part as to the privilege of the actual settlers. It seems to me that would apply to any lands offered for sale in that way.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Undoubtedly there will be provisions by the legislature preventing parties from trespassing on these lands—going upon them and taking them and using them—as there ought to be—or taking them and going and using them an exhausting the soil. There ought to be such provisions and there undoubtedly will be. But here are parties that have already settled upon these school lands before they are surveyed, and there will be others and that will settle upon the school lands. We will have a small portion of the domain of Montana surveyed, and in relation to those, why, where they have gone on there under such circumstances, they ought to have the preference in the purchase of them. But as I said in relation to these other lands, there will be legislation to prevent people from going upon them and using them and cutting the timber or exhausting the soil or doing anything that will impair value.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I think that we would agree upon the proposition that this matter should be left with the legislature. I believe the legislature will have to take this matter in hand as to the regulation of this land, and for that reason it should be left to them and not encumber this constitution with any provisions here unless they are effective. As to the matter of pre-emption, it is true that the legislature cannot provide for anything like pre-emption law, neither do I believe that this constitutional convention can, and as we cannot perfect the pre-emption law. I believe we had better leave it as it is, with as little legislation as possible.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I think that the amendment and the amendment to the amendment would both be unwise. The question immediately before the house is, of course, the amendment to the amendment, but that and the amendment are the same in one respect, that is limiting the number of acres of agricultural land to be sold to 160 acres. I will, however, say a word upon that. I think this section ought to remain as it is with the exception of the limitation to 640 acres. That, I understand, is already provided for by the Enabling Act, but the Enabling Act may be changed. It may be wise to put some limitation upon the power of the legislature as to the number of acres to be sold, but I think it would be absurd to limit it to 160. The ordinary agricultural land in this territory is not very desirable. I think the worst curse to a poor man would be to advise him to purchase 160 acres of land unless there was water upon it—unless he had it irrigated and could use it for the protection of crops. A poor man going on 160 acres of agricultural land as it is ordinarily situated in this land would starve to death. He would hardly make a quarter a day as wages, so I think that would be wrong. It would be a damage to a poor man and to every other man, unless under the most favorable conditions and circumstances there was a stream for the purpose of artificial irrigation, which he cannot afford as a rule, to bring about on that number of acres. But probably there ought to be some limitation upon the power of the legislature, and there might be a legislature sometime or other that would provide for selling twenty thousand acres in a body, so that there would be no competition and the lands would be squandered in that way. As to the provision for actual settlers, it seems to me that would be unwise. As a rule we would not have actual settlers under our system as provided by this constitution. A man would not settle on bodies of land; he would be very foolish to settle. He would look around to see how much the land would cost him, and then provide for settlement upon it. And further it seems to me that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is a very harsh one, upon the poor man particularly, providing for a forfeiture of everything he has paid on it, if a bad season should come and he was unable to make the second or third payment. Now, Mr. President, it seems to me that this credit system is bad anywhere it is carried out with a liberal policy, but to adopt the credit system with that harsh rule provided in the amendment might ruin every hard working poor man. It seems to me that the section ought to remain as it is, with the simple limitation that no quantity in excess of 640 acres should be sold to any one person, corporation or company.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin called for the reading of the substitute offered by himself.

The Clerk read the same as follows: Substitute for Toole amendment. Provided that in the sale of agricultural lands actual settlers thereon shall have the preference under such conditions as may be prescribed by law.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I want to say that when I offered that I had in mind this section that was called to the attention of the convention by the gentleman from Lewis and Clarke (Mr. Hershfield). When I offered it I supposed it related to school lands, but on reading Section 9 of Proposition No. 28 I find it is not limited. That section we have already adopted as a part of the constitution, and it provides "In the disposition of public lands granted by the United States to this state preference shall always be given to actual settlers thereon, and the Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for carrying this into effect." Now, then, in that condition the substitute that I offered is precisely in effect what Section 9 is, that we have already adopted. Again, according to the proposition or the substitute offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, it is in conflict with Section 9, Proposition No. 28, directly, because that provides that the preference shall be given to actual settlers thereon. "And the Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for carrying this section into effect." Instead of that his position is to legislate here now and take the power away from the legislature that we have already granted. My substitute for his amendment I will withdraw because I think it is covered by Section 9, that has already been adopted, and I think that if we have adopted this section that no conflicting section should be adopted by this convention. This section offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is pure legislation and takes away this power which you have already granted, or a part of it, instead of leaving it to the Legislative Assembly which we have provided in a mandatory way shall provide by law to carry the section into effect. If we adopt the substitute offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke we take away from the legislature the power to carry that proposition into effect so far as legislating in relation to sale of land is concerned. The Enabling Act provides—my attention is called to the fact that the legislature provides "That the states provided for in this Act shall not be entitled to any further or other grants of land for any purpose than is expressly provided in this Act. And the lands granted by this section shall be held, appropriated and disposed of exclusively for the purposes herein mentioned, in such manner as the legislature of the respective states may severally provide." I think we have gone in this Section 9 of Proposition No. 28 exactly in accordance with the provisions of the Enabling Act. I withdraw my amendment, and I think if I had understood it rightly I never should have made it.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: Mr. President, I desire to offer a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole). I understand it is now in order. I move in Proposition No. 35, Section 1, that all be stricken out after the word "laws" in the third line, and that that be adopted. I will read Section 1 as it would be if adopted. "All the public lands of the state are held in trust for all of the people, and none of such lands, nor any estate or interest therein shall ever be disposed of except in pursuance of general laws."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I rise to a point of order. We have already amended that section and adopted it.

The President: The section has not been adopted. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) will be in order first, because the amendment of the gentleman from Madison (Mr. Callaway) contemplates striking out a portion of the section, and the friends of the measure have a right to amend it as much as desired. The question is now upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I think the gentleman from Gallatin misapprehended my amendment or the purpose of it. I stated at the time I introduced it that I very much preferred myself that the matter should be left to the Legislative Assembly, and it seems that under the grant itself as read by the gentleman from Gallatin that the matter belongs to the Legislative Assembly. It is part of the grant of the general government that the lands are to be disposed of in the manner prescribed by the Legislative Assembly. So far as the amendment that I offered here is concerned, it is not in conflict with the portion of the section read as having been adopted, that in the sale of these lands preference should be given to actual settlers. I had prepared an amendment when the subject was up, to another portion of the constitution which provided that in the sale of these lands preference should be given to all parties who are in the actual occupancy of these lands, who are bona fide residents upon them prior to the fourth day of July, 1889. I was not present when this amendment was adopted, although the purpose and intention of it was that preference should be given to those persons who were occupants of the lands prior to the sale of it; prior to this time, as the constitution of 1884 had the same provision in it. People were then in possession of these lands by reason of a failure to know where the school lands were, and the adoption of that proposition in the constitution of 1884 was certainly an invitation or a declaration, so far as the constitution could make it, that their rights should be respected; and in pursuance of that I know several instances where men went upon school lands believing that they would have the first right to purchase. The price should be fixed by somebody, but every man in possession of them should have the preference. However, as was said by Judge Knowles, it certainly cannot be intended that we are going to open up these lands and permit everybody to go upon them and cut the timber and exhaust the soil and destroy its value, and then put them up to sell and say that the rights of parties should be respected without loss or anything else. I simply say this in explanation, and I offered this simply that in the event the convention determined to interfere with the sale or disposition of this property, that the sale of the agricultural lands should be so regulated as to give the first preference to actual settlers on the lands. But I believe now and believed before that it ought to be left to the Legislative Assembly. It seems to me that we are compelled to leave it to the legislature under the grant, and with the consent of my second I withdraw the amendment.

The President: The gentleman withdraws the amendment. Hence there is nothing now before the convention except the motion of the gentleman from Madison to strike out, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out of Proposition No. 35 after the word "laws" in the third line, so that the section will read as follows: Section 1. All the public lands of the state are held in trust for all the people, and none of such lands nor any estate or interest therein shall ever be disposed of except in pursuance of general laws.

The motion to amend was seconded.

The President: The Chair would suggest that the Clerk read the amendment offered by Mr. Luce of Gallatin yesterday that was adopted.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. Luce of Gallatin offered an amendment to Section 1 of Proposition No. 35 which was adopted, eliminating the words "All of the public lands of the State are held in trust for all the people" and substituted the following: "All lands of the State that have been or may hereafter be granted to the State by Congress, and all lands acquired by gift or grant or devise from any person or corporation shall be public lands of the State, and shall forever be held in trust for the people for the respective purposes for which they have been or may be granted, donated or devised, and none of such lands or any estate or interest therein shall ever be disposed of except in pursuance of general laws."

Mr. Callaway of Madison: Then my motion is not in order, and I am satisfied with the proposition as it now stands.

The President: Are there any further amendments to the proposition?

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move the adoption of the article as now amended.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The President: The gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Myers, offers an amendment to Section 2, line six of Proposition No. 34, which is now Proposition No. 35, to strike out "1895" and insert in lieu thereof "1915".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The Clerk read the section as proposed to be amended as follows: "The lands of the first of said classes may be sold or leased under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The lands of the second class may be sold or the timber thereon may be sold, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The agricultural lands may be either sold or leased, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by law. The lands of the fourth shall be sold in alternate lots of not more than five acres each, and not more than one-half of any one tract of such lands shall be sold prior to the year 1915."

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: If that amendment is adopted it will defer the sale of the alternate lots as provided for all the lands of the fourth class, or in other words the lands that are within the limits of the town, or within three miles thereof, as now provided, shall be subdivided into lots of not exceeding five acres each, and as contemplated by the gentleman from Missoula in his resolution to reserve those lands or not allow any of those lands of the fourth class, or these alternate blocks of five acres each to be sold until 1895. My idea is to hold them for about twenty-five years before they are sold, so that the State may have the benefit of the increase of value of those lands.

The Chair stated the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Myers, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of nineteen in the affirmative and twenty-one in the negative.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I move to amend by making it 1910.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I hope that this will be inserted. We have provided here for alternate lots to be sold, and if buildings are erected on those alternate lots it will make the others very valuable; and if we hold them until 1910 it will add materially to the school fund. If we go now to improve these lands, the year 1895 will be on us before any improvements are actually completed. The reserve lots—the first settled lots shall be sold now or as soon as the Legislature can get around to it, and then we hold the other lands until 1910.

The Clerk read the section as proposed to be amended by the amendment of the gentleman from Choteau (Mr. Conrad) to insert "1910" in place of "1895".

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I can see one serious objection to this and only one. We will take for instance the case of the city of Missoula here that is growing and expanding. Now, if you extend the time, while it may enhance the school fund very materially, it may be a great obstacle in the way of building up the city. I make the suggestion as one that suggests itself to my mind.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I am satisfied that short leases, so far as the school lands are concerned, that valuable leases cannot be made, and if leased at all the buildings will necessarily be very indifferent, and the rents will always be small, and it does seem to me that for the sake of the improvement of the city if nothing else the section should be allowed to stand as it is. I believe that the school fund will not suffer by it. I believe in five or six years those lands will be as valuable as they will ever be, and the interest on the fund will always exceed the income from any leases that may be made for five years, with the small buildings that will necessarily be put upon them, for no lessee is going to put valuable improvements upon a lease for five years. I hope the time will not be extended as long as the gentleman suggests. It seemed to me when I drew up this proposition that 1895 would be long enough. It does seem to me that putting it off twenty-five or thirty-five years will not only be an injury to the city of Missoula, but as I believe actually a detriment to the school fund of the State of Montana.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I do not think that 1910 is too long to hold these alternate lots. That portion of the town that is now school land will be built up for residence property anyway and if a good residence was put on each alternate block of about four acres it will certainly enhance the other block, and we cannot expect that very many residences will be built before 1895, because this law will not go into effect until 1890. So I hope that the clause of 1910 will prevail. I think it will be to the interest of the school fund.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: It is perhaps well for this convention sometime to recur to facts of history. I beg of these gentlemen their indulgence while I state that if they ever recur to the history of Illinois they will remember that it had a magnificent heritage granted them by Congress for school purposes. By the jobbing of the Legislature, by land sharks getting in their work, the fact is that nearly the entire grant to the State of Illinois for school purposes was frittered and nothing left. Gentlemen here, some of them, have said that we are not the assembled wisdom of the world. That I know, and I do not presume, sir, that we are anything more than the average Legislature will be in point of allegiance or integrity. But we are not disposing of these lands. You will know how easy it is for some gentleman who has substantial interests to get a law passed that will benefit him, when nine-tenths of the Legislature do not know what he is doing. Recall history. You heard a very eloquent and able speech yesterday from the gentleman from Nevada (Senator Stewart) speaking about the passage of a law demonetizing silver, and yet to this day the history of that legislation is not known; no man knows how it was done. I am in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Choteau, for the reason that I believe the time should be deferred when this property shall be disposed of. As a little more of Illinois history, there happened somehow or other to be retained by the State one block in the city of Chicago for school purposes. That single block today is worth one million of dollars. They have hardly any school land left there now except that. The entire school lands were sold to jobbers and appropriated by speculators. So that I say that in this provision when every alternate lot as provided here is reserved, it will not retard the settlement of the progress of the city of Missoula or the city of Bozeman or the city of Miles, and I believe that if we do not do our duty here in reserving some of these lands until they can rise in value and increase our school fund and preserve it, we will regret it. The greatest interests of a civilized people is the education of the children of the land. Therefore, I do insist that the time shall be long deferred when the Legislature will be enabled in any way to dispose of all of this grand heritage donated us by Congress.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Choteau (Mr. Conrad) to insert "1910", and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of twenty-eight in the affirmative to eight in the negative.

Mr. Schmidt of Silver Bow: I would like to know how Section 1 of Article 35 reads by this time?

The President: The whole proposition should be read before it is acted upon. For the information of the gentleman from Silver Bow Section 1 will now be read.

The Clerk read the section as amended for the information of the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Chair would like to make one suggestion as to the difficulty of defining the limits of a city or town that is not incorporated. Would it not give rise to some difficulty and confusion.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I understand that under the present law they should be defined and must be defined. I think that a three mile limit would define this matter, within and fully cover the point suggested by the Chair.

The President: It is moved and seconded that Section 1 as amended be now adopted. The question is now on the motion to adopt.

The Chair put the question on the motion to adopt Section 1 and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: Mr. Luce of Gallatin offers an amendment to Section 2 of Proposition No. 35 as it now stands, being Proposition No. 34 as printed.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 2 of Proposition No. 34 as amended by striking out of line six the words "and not more than one-half of any one tract of such lands" and insert "and only the alternate odd numbered lots."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move to amend the amendment by inserting after the word "laws" the words "unless occupied by actual settlers."

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I hope this will not carry. I do not see that it makes any difference whether the odd numbered or the even numbered lots should be sold. They are amending this proposition section by section and word by word. We will have to refer it back to the committee that it came from, just the same as the judiciary report.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I accept the amendment of the gentleman from Meagher.

The President: The question now is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Gallatin as further amended and accepted by adding thereto "and unless occupied by actual settlers."

Mr. Wittler of Beaverhead: I would like to ask the gentleman a question—whether he intends to settle every fourth lot or every other lot.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Well, every odd numbered lot—every alternate odd numbered lot. The first lot to be numbered "one", the next alternate lot to be numbered "three", and then sell every second lot. That is the language that has been used in all these grants to railroad corporations and everything else—every alternate odd numbered lot. Let me get before this convention what I mean. (Reading) "The lands of the fourth class shall be sold in lots of not more than five acres and not more than one-half on any such lands shall be sold prior to" etc. Instead of selling the alternate lots you sell the half of an alternate lot.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: If the gentleman will allow me to make a suggestion: the language used is "every alternate lot and designated by numbers."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Well, "every alternate lot designated by odd numbers." So that you sell the half of a five acre lot, and then that which remains unsold gets the benefit of the increased value.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: Mr. President, suppose we put "one-half of any one section." "The one-half of the tract" was not intended to refer to the five acre tracts, but to the school tracts.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move, sir, to substitute for the language used, without changing the idea, as has been suggested by the gentleman, the following: "No more than one-half of each alternate lot not exceeding five acres in extent shall be sold" etc.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to make a motion to refer the proposition with the various amendments to the Printing Committee and have it printed.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The gentleman's motion to refer of course takes precedence to all motions to amend, but would it not be well to consider this amendment first and get the matter straightened out?

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: There are members here who do not know how it does read.

The President: The gentleman from Meagher offers an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin which will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Beginning after the word "each" strike out "and not more than one-half of any such lands" and substitute the following: "No more than one-half of each alternate lot, and not exceeding five acres in extent, shall be sold prior to the year 1910."

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: It seems to me that there is one vital error in that, that is going to creep in after years. It may be absolutely necessary for the prosperity of some growing town that this land be sold or leased under such conditions that they may build and move on with the prosperity of the town, and if this provision is in there it will be impossible to settle only on these alternate sections of land, and thereby retard the growth and development of the cities and towns that may be able to build on these lands. It occurs to me that this will be a serious mistake—that although it is a laudable ambition to keep this fund and allow the value to enhance to the benefit of the school fund, yet at the same time we should not lose consideration of the fact that it is going to hurt the interests of these towns.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I see another matter in this amendment of the gentleman from Meagher, and that is the closing clause where it provides for actual settlers. Now, before the contingency may arise, if this constitution is adopted and before the Legislature could reasonably be expected to adopt laws regulating the sale of this land, the whole of that section might be squatted on by squatters, and they would take advantage of this provision here. I think the whole matter ought to go to some committee to be straightened out.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I hope that this amendment will not prevail for the same reason that the gentleman from Madison has stated. If it does you will find that men will put up ten-acre shacks upon the property and will claim the right to purchase it. As to the phraseology, I do not object to that part of it.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I think the point raised by the gentleman from Madison is very well taken. I made that same suggestion to the gentleman who introduced the proposition a few moments ago. There is no question but such a thing as that will occur, and our action here will be futile.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I quite agree with the gentleman from Madison. There would be ample time while the constitution was being adopted to oppose these lands. It ought to be cut right down to the very day that it was discussed in the convention.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Meagher, and the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin Mr. Luce.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: I would urge my motion now to refer this matter to the committee on printing.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move as an amendment that this whole subject matter be referred to the committee on education.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I move that the section as amended be adopted.

The President: The motion to refer is in order. The question is upon the adoption of the section, and it has been moved to refer to the Committee on revision and phraseology.

Mr. Schmidt: I would amend that by moving that we consider Section 4, and then I would amend the amendment to refer the proposition to the committee on revision and phraseology with instructions to clothe the ideas adopted in other and plainer language, have it printed and report to the convention.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: My idea of referring this to the committee on printing was to have this matter printed and referred to the members. After it is adopted it won't make any difference. I want to get to see this matter before it is adopted.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow asks for a consideration of Section 4 before that is done.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I move that Section 4 be adopted and renumbered 3.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: Now, the question before the convention is upon the reference of the proposition as amended to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, with instructions to revise it and order it printed for the consideration of the convention.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I would call for the reading of Proposition No. 35 as amended, so that the members can tell whether it suits them or not.

The President: If there be no objection it will be read.

The Clerk read Proposition No. 35.

The President: There is a motion to refer this to the Printing Committee.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I think the convention has spent time enough on this proposition, and I think from the reading of it by the Clerk that it must be apparent to everyone I think we are well able to dispose of it now. I cannot understand why it is necessary to delay this matter any longer. I understand that the people outside are anxious to see this constitution, and I certainly don't blame them.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: I will withdraw my motion.

The President: The question is on the adoption of the proposition as amended. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Buford, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Hyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kennedy, Knowles, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Schmidt, Watson, Winston, Mr. President—44.

Nays: Aiken, Kanouse, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Toole, J. K.; Whitehill—6.

Absent: Bickford, Brazleton, Bullard, Burns, Ed; Cauby, Collins, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Gibson, Graves, Hartman, Haskell, Joy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Marrion, Middleton, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Webster, Witter—27.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the proposition adopted.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I desire to ask the convention to excuse me until Tuesday afternoon. I have some very important business in the lower country and would like to go down and attend to it.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentleman will be excused.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I move that when the convention adjourn it adjourn until four o'clock on Monday.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair desires to make a statement. This Proposition 35 has been adopted as part of the constitution and will be referred to the Engrossing and Enrolling Committee and subsequently to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I have a resolution which I wish to introduce and have referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The President: The resolution will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Resolved, that W. H. Green, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, and Henry Bernard, Clerk of the Committee on Finance and Acting Clerk for the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, together with the stenographer and such other officers as are not provided for, be included among the attaches provided for in Resolution No. 31.

The President: If there be no objection this will be received and referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Buford of Madison: I move that the convention now take a recess until two o'clock.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion to adjourn, and the same was declared carried.

The convention adjourned until Monday, August 12th, 1889, at 4 P. M.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

Monday, August 12th, 1889. 4 P. M.

The convention was called to order by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The Chair has a letter from Mr. Edward Burns asking to be excused until Wednesday. If there be no objection he will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: My colleague, Mr. Rickards, has been so unfortunate as to be afflicted by the death of one of his children who died yesterday afternoon. I desire to have him excused until tomorrow.

The President: If there be no objection, Mr. Rickards, having lost one of his children by death, will be excused until tomorrow.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I would ask that Mr. Knippenberg of Beaverhead County be excused.

The President: Mr. Knippenberg will be excused until tomorrow if there be no objection.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: The Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment desire to make the following report.

The President: The Clerk will read the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President: Your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom was referred Propositions No. 24, 27 and 35, for the purpose of enrollment, beg leave to report that the enrolled copies have been carefully compared with the originals and that said propositions are correctly enrolled.

(Signed)

MIDDLETON, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection, the report will be received and adopted.

The Clerk also read the following report of the Committee on Rights of Suffrage and Qualifications to Hold Office, which was sent to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. President: Your Committee on Rights of Suffrage and Qualifications to Hold Office, to whom was referred Proposition No. 29 on Woman Suffrage, offered by Callaway, together with a communication and two petitions relating to the same subject, beg leave to report that they have had the same under consideration and report them back without recommendation.

(Signed)

ROTWITT, Chairman.

The Clerk read Proposition 29.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: I move you that the report be laid upon the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Cardwell, Carpenter, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Gibson, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hogan, Joyes, Kennedy, Kohrs, Luce, Maginnis, Marrior, Marshall, Mayger, Middleton, Mitchell, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, Jos. K.; Whitehill, Winston, Witter—33.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Kanouse, Knowles, Loud, McAdow, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Sargent, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Mr. President—35.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gavlord, Haskell, Joy, Knippenberg, Rickards, Webster—7.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to lay on the table lost.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that the report of the committee be received and that the resolution or proposition be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move to amend the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow that the proposition as presented be adopted as a separate proposition in the constitution.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that without the suspension of the rules the proposition would have to be considered in the Committee of the Whole before it can be adopted is a part of the constitution.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: For the sake of expediting the thing, I move that the rules be suspended.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the rules of the convention be suspended, that the report of the Committee on Suffrage be received and the resolution reported back to be adopted and made a separate proposition in the constitution.

Mr. Marrion of Missoula called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Canby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Fields, Gillette, Goddard, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Kanouse, Knowles, Loud, McAdow, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Sargent, Toole, Jos. K.; Toole, J. R.; Warren, Watson, Mr. President—34.

Nays: Brazleton, Cardwell, Carpenter, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Duffee, Dyer, Eaton, Gibson, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hogan, Joy, Jukes, Kennedy; Kohrs, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, Middleton, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Schmidt, Stapleton, Whitehill, Winston, Witter—34.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylord, Haskell, Joy, Knippenberg, Rickards and Webster.

The Chair announced that the motion, having failed to receive a two-thirds majority, was lost.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move you, sir, that the proposition be referred to General Orders for consideration.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the resolution be indefinitely postponed.

The President: The motions are not in order because the matter has been disposed of. Are there any other reports of standing committees?

Mr. Breen of Jefferson sent up the following, which was read by the Clerk: "Every citizen of the State shall be free to obtain employment wherever possible, and any person, corporation or agent thereof keeping a blacklist, interfering or hindering in any way a citizen from obtaining or enjoying employment already obtained from the same or any other corporation or person, shall be deemed guilty of a conspiracy against the welfare of the State, which offense shall be deemed felony."

The President: If there be no objection, this will be received, and unless otherwise directed, referred to the Committee on Labor.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Some time during last week I submitted a memorial here. There was a special committee appointed on that, and I would like to know when they expect to report.

The President: Will Governor Carpenter, who is Chairman of that committee, be kind enough to inform the gentleman from Silver Bow when the committee will be able to report?

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: The committee will be able to report in a day or two. They have been unable to make any report as yet.

The President: If there be no objection, further time will be granted the committee. The unfinished business before the convention relates to State Institutions and Public Buildings.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I desire to inquire the present status of the business.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion it would be better for the Clerk to read the minutes to ascertain precisely the condition of that proposition.

The Clerk read the minutes.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I would like to inquire if Mr. Warren's amendment is before the convention now.

The President: The Clerk informs the Chair that nothing has been done with it. Everything else has been disposed of except the substitute offered.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I desire to make a motion that the consideration of that substitute for Section 2 be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I would like to offer an amendment to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher County.

The President: The Chair desires to state to the gentleman from Deer Lodge that a motion to indefinitely postpone an amendment is not in order. It could apply to the main question but not to the amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: My recollection is that the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke County to substitute "White Sulphur Springs" was the last motion.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: His motion was to strike out something that did not exist. It was ruled out of order. If I understand the proposition before the convention now, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow has been withdrawn, and nothing remains before the convention but the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher County.

The President: That is the position of it, and you offer the substitute now?

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Yes sir.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I wish to offer an amendment to substitute for Section 2.

The President: The Chair desires to state that the question now before the convention is the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher, Mr. Kanouse. The substitute will be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Substitute for Section 2.^o After the admission of the State into the Union and at the general election in the year 1892, the question of permanent location of the seat of government is hereby provided to be submitted to the qualified electors of the State and a majority of all the votes upon said question shall determine the election thereof. In case there shall be no choice of location at said election the question of choice between the two places for which the highest number of votes shall have been cast shall be and is hereby submitted to the qualified electors at the next general election thereof.

The President: The Clerk will now read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend by adding the following: Provided that until the seat of government shall have been permanently located the temporary seat of government shall be and remain at the city of Helena.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the amendment be adopted. The question now before the convention is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin called for the ayes and nays.

The President: The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal, if there be no objection.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, Witter—37.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Callaway, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Hartman, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Schmidt, Slapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—28.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylord, Joy, Webster—4.

Paired: Dyer and Knippenberg, Haskell and Watson, Hickman and Rickards—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the amendment carried.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have an amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that the vote by which the last motion was carried be reconsidered.

Mr. Maginnis: And I move to lay that motion on the table.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the vote by which the last motion was carried shall be reconsidered, and the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke moves to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have an amendment.

The President: The motion to reconsider takes precedence of everything else except a motion to adjourn. The question now is upon the motion to reconsider the vote by which Helena was placed in the substitute and to lay upon the table.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula called for the ayes and nays.

The President: The ayes and nays will be entered in the journal. The question is upon the motion to lay upon the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which Helena was adopted.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Mulh, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, J. K.; Witter—36.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Callaway, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Fields, Hartman, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—29.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylord, Joy, Webster—4.

Paired: Dyer & Knippenberg, Haskell & Watson, Hickman & Rickards—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion carried.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move the previous question upon Section 2 and the substitute.

The President: The question before the convention is upon the adoption of the substitute and the section. Upon this the previous question has been demanded. The question before the convention is, shall the main question be now put? The previous question will apply to the amendment first, and then to the section.

The Chair put the previous question, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher. Mr. Kanouse, as amended by the proviso, providing that until the permanent seat of government shall be located the temporary seat of government shall remain at Helena. The question is upon the adoption of that substitute as amended. The ayes and nays are demanded. The Clerk will call the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Mulh, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, J. K.; Witter—39.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Hartman, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—26.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylord, Joy and Webster—4.

Paired: Dyer and Knippenberg, Haskell and Watson, Hickman and Rickards—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher to Section 2 of Proposition No. 18, as amended, carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to reconsider the vote by which that substitute was adopted, and to lay that motion on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It has been moved and seconded that the vote by which the substitute was adopted be reconsidered. There is also a motion to lay that motion to reconsider upon the table. The question is upon the motion to reconsider.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow called for the ayes and nays.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hershfield, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Loud, Maginnis, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Toole, J. K.; Witter—39.

Nays: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Hartman, Hatch, Hogan, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—26.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylor, Joy and Webster—4.

Paired: Dyer and Knippenberg, Haskell and Watson, Hickman and Rickards—6.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion carried.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead sent up an amendment, which the Clerk read as follows: "Add to Proposition No. 18, Section 6: It shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly to make provision as soon as practicable for a State University, School of Mines, State Normal School, Agricultural College, State Reform School, Dead and Dumb Asylum, Insane Asylum and State Penitentiary. Provided that no more than two of such institutions shall be located in any one county in the State, and none of them in the county in which the capital of the State is located."

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: It will be necessary to have two penitentiaries, an eastern penitentiary and a western penitentiary. I move the substitute "two" for "one".

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I accept the amendment.

Mr. Muth of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: With the arguments that we have heard here the last week about legislation, I do not see the necessity of adopting this at all. The Legislature has the power, and will certainly exert that power as soon as possible, to govern this matter. So it seems to me that is no reasonable cause why this should go into the proposition. It does not add one iota to or take one iota from the power of the Legislature. If we adopt this section it don't add to or take from any of the authority or powers of the Legislative Assembly. It is not necessary because the Legislative Assembly will have that power without it, except it may be possible that the Legislature might put two educational institutions in one place and this would prohibit it. I do not care where the University or the educational institution may be located. The question comes before the convention, is not it right and proper that two or more of those institutions may be located where the University is located, whether it be at Bozeman, Missoula, or elsewhere. It seems to me the best thing to do is to leave this matter entirely with the Legislature.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I hope this motion will not prevail, for the simple reason that if it does no two of these State institutions can be located in one town. I think it would be very necessary to locate several of these institutions in the same place, especially these educational institutions. I think the State University, the School of Mines and the Agricultural College should be all located in the same town and should be subject to and under the control of the same management. I think it would be an advantage to the school.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I offer this for the purpose of distributing these institutions throughout the State. That is the object of the section, and I have no argument to make upon it. It is to the interest of the State that they should be distributed. It is to the interest of any town that they should all be in any one town, and that is as the matter would stand. If you get them all in one location it would be good for that particular location; it would be of no advantage at all to the State to have them all in one place.

Mr. Aiken of Silver Bow: I have an amendment to Mr. Witter's amendment.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I would like to call again for the reading of the section. I did not understand whether it embraced part of the public institutions provided for by the Enabling Act.

The Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: The amendment that the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offered was two penitentiaries instead of one. It did not apply to any of the other State institutions.

The President: There is an amendment here now from the gentleman from Silver Bow that is in order.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I would like to have that amendment rectified, else I cannot accept it. It reads now that not more than two shall be established in any one county, and the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke had reference only to there being two penitentiaries in the State.

Mr. Muth of Lewis & Clarke: The gentleman from Beaverhead is entirely in accord with the intention of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke. The mistake was made by the Clerk. The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke moved to make it two penitentiaries. The Clerk instead of making it that way has left it to read "one penitentiary" and has changed the word "two" in reference to the building or buildings to be placed in any one county.

The President: The Chair understands then that it is two penitentiaries, and not more than one of these buildings shall be placed in any one county.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I desire to ask if an amendment is in order.

The President: Not at present. The Clerk will now read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead, as amended and accepted.

The Clerk read as follows: Add to Proposition No. 18, Section 6: It shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly to make provision as soon as practicable for a State University, School of Mines, State Normal School, Agricultural College, State Reform School, Deaf and Dumb Asylum, Insane Asylum and two State Penitentiaries. Provided that not more than one of such institutions shall be located in any one county of the State, and none of them in the county in which the capital of the State is located."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow sent up an amendment, which the Clerk read as follows: "Provided, that nothing herein shall prevent counties now having such buildings from having any of said institutions."

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I make the statement for this reason: In Deer Lodge county the contract for the keeping of the insane is being performed, but it is not a State Institution. Therefore I am satisfied that the people of Deer Lodge county would like very well to get rid of the Penitentiary and the Insane Asylum both, and I think it nothing more than right that they should have an opportunity of competing for these public buildings.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I see no particular need of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow County, inasmuch as if this section is adopted as amended the legislature will have a right to locate these institutions wherever it may see fit, and it would just simply be superfluous and would not be binding.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin desires to amend the section offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead (Mr. Witter), as follows: Add the following to Section 6: Provided, that no State Institution shall be located until the capital of the state shall have been permanently located.

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I would suggest that the Enabling Act, Section 17, provides for Agricultural Colleges and Normal Schools, and makes an appropriation of lands for those in the plural, and as the section reads it is in the singular. I move that Agricultural Colleges and Normal Schools be made in the plural.

The President: The question is now upon the adoption of the section as amended.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I move you that we strike out the first proviso in the section.

The Clerk read Witter's amendment.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: I would ask if "colleges" and "normal schools" is not plural?

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: They are in the singular, but I will accept an amendment to that effect.

The President: It will be so corrected. The gentleman from Deer Lodge moves to strike out the proviso, which reads as follows: "Provided that not more than one of such institutions shall be located in any one county in the state, and none of them in the county in which the capital of the state is located."

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: Strike out the word "proviso" and the last word "state."

The President: The gentleman will please send up the amendment.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move to strike out the entire substitute and attach to Section 1 the proviso that not more than one institution shall be located in any one county of the state. That will cover the entire ground that the gentlemen are desiring to get at.

The President: If the gentleman will write out his substitute the Chair will entertain it.

Mr. Hickman of Madison sent up an amendment.

The President: The Chair will hold the amendment of the gentleman from Madison. It is not in order at present. The gentleman from Deer Lodge (Mr. Reek) moves to amend Section 6 by striking out the first proviso up to and including the word "state." There is an amendment offered to this by the gentleman from Gallatin which the Chair is holding over at present.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I hope that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge will not prevail. It is certainly— Interrupted.

The President: There is another amendment pending. After that is disposed of the gentleman will have the floor. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Deer Lodge that if his amendment should prevail it would leave the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin standing alone without any coherence, and hence the amendment would not be appropriate without cutting out a portion that has already been adopted.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: If a few remarks are in order I would like to make them.

The President: The Chair will hear the gentleman in a few minutes. The Chair is waiting on an amendment which is being prepared.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: It strikes me that this Section 6, as presented by the gentleman from Beaverhead—Interrupted.

The President: The Chair desires to say to the gentleman that the gentleman from Missoula is entitled to the floor.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I desire to have all the amendments before the convention before I make my remarks to the Chair, and if the gentleman wishes to proceed he may.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: This section 6 as presented by the gentleman from Beaverhead will have the effect. It will have the effect, in my judgment, of keeping every town in Deer Lodge County from being a candidate or receiving votes for the capital, and in the event that the city of Anaconda or the City of Deer Lodge should be chosen for the capital of the territory, in my judgment that would prevent them from taking the capital.

The President: The Chair would suggest that there has been a substitute offered which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Strike out Section 6 and add to Section 1 the words: "Provided that not more than one of such institutions shall be located in any one county, and provided that none of such institutions shall be located in the county in which the capital shall be located, and none of such institutions shall be located until the permanent seat of government is fixed."

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I think the objection raised by the gentleman from Silver Bow is met by the last amendment, and if the amendment last offered is adopted, certainly there can be no plea made such as is advanced by him, that it would be impossible to locate the capital in the county of Deer Lodge. While the penitentiary is at present located in the county of Deer Lodge, it certainly remains a fact that under the provisions of this constitution the legislature will have the right to locate the penitentiary in any county in which it sees fit to locate it. It is not at the present time a state institution, but rather an institution under the guidance and direction, supervision and control of the United States. It will be a state institution, of course, upon the adoption of this constitution. It may become a state institution, but not one which has been located by legislative authority. It is simply one which has been located by the authority of the Congress of the United States. This is a matter of great importance. It is a matter of great importance to the people of this territory because Congress has bestowed upon the respective institutions mentioned in the proviso a large amount of the public domain. If the gentleman will refer to Section 17—the latter part of Section 17 of the Omnibus Bill, it is there stated that there is donated to the State of Montana for the establishment and maintenance of a school of mines 100,000 acres, for State Normal Schools, 100,000 acres; for Agricultural Colleges, 50,000 acres; for the establishment of a State Reform School, 50,000 acres; for the establishment of a Deaf and Dumb Asylum, 50,000 acres; and for other public buildings, 150,000 acres. It will be seen that there is a donation made not only for these schools and these public institutions, but there is also a donation for erecting the state buildings and the capitol. It seems to me that it would only be fair that there should be a distribution of this patronage to the different counties of the territory; that if one county receives the benefit of the capital and this donation of the lands, that another county will receive the benefit of another institution, perhaps one of learning—perhaps an agricultural college. By so doing you place in the reach of the people living in the different sections of the country one or the other of the state institutions, either the State Normal School, the State University, the School of Mines, or some other state institution. You place such an institution within the reach of all, and it seems reasonable that they should be distributed to the different parts of the state. It seems also that the different parts of the new state should receive the benefit of these donations. It is through the beneficence of Congress that we receive them. They are not made for any one particular county of the territory; they are not made for any one particular locality, but they are made for the benefit of the entire territory; and the legislators who meet here hereafter can place these institutions where they will be for the best advantage of the people. It seems also that there should be a restriction placed upon the placing of more than one of these institutions in any one county. It is a reasonable supposition that the different counties in the territory will be candidates for the location of these institutions; it is reasonable to suppose that they will want some of the institutions located in different parts of the territory in order that they may be, above all things else, acceptable to the young people who will attend these schools. If we can, then, by passing the amendment or the proviso last offered fix it so that the legislature will be compelled to distribute these institutions to the different parts of the state, it seems to me that we should do it. It seems reasonable that such a provision should be placed in our constitution.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: The donations of land here are for capitol purposes and for institutions of learning, and yet the gentleman who has drawn up this bill has put in penitentiaries, so as to entirely exclude one of the counties of this territory from any of the benefits or for being a candidate for any of the benefits of this appropriation of public lands. I will say, if that is adopted, in relation to that county, that you cannot be a candidate for the benefits of any of these appropriations of public lands whatever. That is my understanding of that as it is. Gentlemen may say that the penitentiary at Deer Lodge is not a public institution, but it will be upon the adoption of this constitution, and this constitution will relate to matters as they are at the time of the adoption of the constitution. I am satisfied that will be a state institution at that time. It will be turned over to the state and then that will preclude and shut out that one county from any of the benefits of the land. All the amendments leave in there that question of the penitentiary, and leaving in that question of the penitentiary, you have by this convention said, as to this appropriation of public lands, we will exclude in this constitution one of the counties of the territory. If the gentlemen here think they can afford to do that let them go on.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Is it not a fact that the proviso as read says "Any institution hereafter to be located"?

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Yes, but you have already in that bill, as it is introduced, shut out the provisions of the original bill.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: If I thought for one moment that it would prevent the county of Deer Lodge, or any other county of the territory, from receiving its proportion of the public lands appropriated, I should certainly vote against it.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I say that in that original bill as presented here there is this question, so that it shuts out Deer Lodge, and the amendment of the gentleman does not cure that at all. It does not affect that matter in any way, shape, form or manner. There is something as to the general bill that I would like to say, and that is that I believe it will be ten years before this capitol is located, and we will want normal schools in this territory before that time; and I am opposed to putting this thing all off until this capitol question is finally settled. I think we had better have no provisos to put in there looking to a future contest in relation to this matter. If you will just put in there a clause stating that none of these institutions that are specified shall be placed in more than one county or in the county where the capitol is established, it would cover the same idea that the gentleman wishes to get at, except penitentiaries. You put in penitentiaries there in such a way as to exclude the county of Deer Lodge.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin called for the reading of the substitute.

The Clerk read the same.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I move that the substitute and all the amendments thereto be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The motion is not in order.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I fully endorse what has been said by my friend from Silver Bow county. I think that every tub should stand on its own bottom in this particular, and I do not believe in making the establishment of a normal school or any other institution contingent upon a fight that may be gotten up here; and while I believe it is right that each county that merits it should have one of these institutions, and I am willing to give it the benefit of it, yet to say that no one of these institutions shall be located until after the capitol is located is a sentiment that I am not willing to endorse at all. I believe that the normal school should be located as soon as possible. There is another institution of vast importance here and that is a moral reform school; and I do not believe in holding the location of any of these institutions in abeyance to the permanent location of the place where the distinguished statesmen of the territory are to meet and make laws for the people. I therefore hope that the gentleman's amendment will be modified, or that it will be voted down.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: If I may obtain the consent of my second I will withdraw so much of my substitute as is included within the proviso, and that will be simply to strike out Section 6 and leave Section 1 in lieu thereof.

The President: The motion is not in order. The question now before the convention is upon the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentlemen, to which an amendment is proposed by the gentleman from Madison.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: The only way to get at this matter is to vote upon the section and vote it down. I do not believe for one moment that there is any gentleman here that desires to hamper any of the counties that desire to bid for the capital or buildings, and I do not believe they intend anything of that kind. It strikes me the proper thing to do is to vote it down and let this remain as it is. Section 1 covers the ground probably as fully as is necessary, and I have no doubt that any legislature that will meet here will be in favor of dividing those institutions up, one in each county. I hardly think there is any danger or that we run any risk in leaving this matter to the legislature, and I think that Section 1 covers the ground fully enough so that any amendments are unnecessary; and it seems to me the natural way to arrive at the matter is by voting the amendments and the section down.

The President: The Chair will state to the gentleman and also to the gentleman from Gallatin that this substitute has been offered as an amendment to the proposition. It has not been adopted yet, but it can be disposed of by voting upon it. Hence, the motion to strike it out will not be in order unless you propose to substitute something in lieu thereof.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move to strike out and insert.

The President: There is a motion to amend offered by the gentleman from Madison.

The Clerk read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Madison, as follows: Provided that no appropriation of money shall be made to erect capitol buildings prior to the year 1900.

The amendment was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the amendment be adopted, that is, to strike out the substitute offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead and insert in lieu thereof this provision.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: There are too many amendments and substitutes.

The President: They are all now embodied in this one amendment.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: The proposition to postpone the location of these public buildings until the permanent location of the seat of government is determined, I think is nothing but fair and just. Here is nearly one-half of the territory lying bare beyond where I live, and it is as fine a mineral country and agricultural country as any; and to locate these buildings now is taking advantage of all that part of the territory. Gentlemen here asserted that they did not wish to bar any county out of that privilege, and to locate it now or in a year or two would virtually be barring that whole half of the territory of this privilege. That part of it I am not in favor of.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I am very sure that there is no intention on the part of any gentleman of the convention to do the thing spoken of by my friend from Deer Lodge (Mr. Toole), or to bar any county in the territory from competing for the capitol, or any other of these buildings. Now, we have made a pretty warm fight on this proposition, which has been ended, and if we have done so it is not because we did not recognize the right of every county in the territory to go before the people for this capital, and we don't want to put any handicap on them; and the reason why we made this fight so warm was because the people put it here and the people ought to take it away. But when the people come to vote on it finally, we don't want any handicap put on any county or town. I did at one time think I would support the proposition of my friend from Beaverhead because during the debate some accusations were made here. It was said that we wanted not only the capital but all the other public buildings. That was the reason I wished to vote for the proposition; but I think I will vote to leave the whole matter to the legislature and let them fix the matter up as they see fit—except as to the proposition of my friend Dr. Parberry. I am opposed to that. I don't care where this capital is located. I do think that the men who climbed these mountains, crossed the plains and braved the dangers of savage warfare in order to make way for those who came after should see the dome of this State House rise in the blue mountain air before they die; and consequently I think I shall be compelled to vote against the proposition of my friend from Meagher, that the proposition of the location of the capitol shall be postponed to a time that few of us will see.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I move to take a recess until eight o'clock.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The President: Before the motion is put the Chair desires to state the position of this question, so that the convention may understand it on reconvening. The Chair understands that the gentleman from Madison withdraws his amendment entirely. Now, the question before the convention will be upon the substitute offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead, Mr. Witter. The question now is on the motion to adjourn.

The Chair then put the question on the motion to adjourn, and the same was declared carried.

The Convention adjourned until Tuesday, August 13, 1889.

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

Tuesday, August 13th, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: Mr. Dyer asked to be excused. He is ill. If there be no objection he will be excused.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: We are approaching the last hours of this convention, and it strikes me that the apportionment committee should make their report, instead of waiting until the very last hour. It is a matter that will require some attention and some thought, and I therefore move that the Chairman of the Committee on Apportionment be requested to make his report tomorrow morning.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: The Committee on Apportionment will make their report probably tomorrow morning.

The President: The Chairman of the Apportionment Committee states that he will probably be able to make his report tomorrow. The report of the Irrigation Committee will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President: Your Committee on Irrigation, to whom Resolution No. 13 was referred, have instructed me to report that they have duly considered the same and that they do not think it advisable to memorialize Congress on the subject of arid lands.

Respectfully,

Signed PARBERRY, Chairman.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: The visit of the senators here and other matters have somewhat changed the situation, and I move that the report of the committee be accepted and the matter laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move that the convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 33.

The President: That comes under the head of General Orders. We are under the head of "Unfinished Business" at present.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: In relation to some matters in regard to irrigation and the right of way for ditches, and the reservoirs, and the titles that the government had in all the mountain lands of the country, and the fact that they are unsurveyed and are not likely to be surveyed very soon, the Irrigation Committee recommended that this body memorialize Congress. As to the proposition that there would be any arid lands appropriated to the Territory or given to any corporation or company that might be organized for the purpose of constructing ditches, they said Congress never would grant any more lands to corporations for any purpose. That was the settled policy of the government. As to what they could do in relation to legislation on the subject of these lands themselves that might facilitate the matter of irrigation and of reclaiming arid lands, there could be something done, they said and that it would be good policy for this convention to memorialize Congress on this subject.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Then, Mr. President, if there is no objection, I would ask unanimous consent to reconsider what we have done and re-refer the resolution of the committee so as to give them jurisdiction and let them draw the memorial covering the branches suggested by Judge Knowles. I move that the matter be taken from the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kohrs of Deer Lodge: I think it would be better to leave that to the Legislature.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read the following communication:

Helena, Mont., August 12, 1889. Hon. W. A. Clark, President Constitutional Convention. Sir: I hereby tender my resignation as Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, the same to take effect today. Very respectfully,

W. L. GREENE, Asst. Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the resignation be accepted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. Sargent of Silver Bow County would like to be excused until tomorrow.

The President: The gentleman will be excused if there be no objection. Under the head of unfinished business, the convention had under consideration Proposition No. 18, which is now in order. There was an amendment offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead, and the question was upon the adoption of the amendment to add Section 6. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 6. It shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly to make provision as soon as practicable for a State University, School of Mines, State Normal Schools, Agricultural Colleges, State Reform School, Deaf and Dumb Asylum, Insane Asylum and two State Penitentiaries. Provided, that not more than one of such institutions shall be located in any one county in the State, and none of them in the county in which the capital of the State is located.

The President: The following provision was added to that afterwards by the convention: Provided that no State institution shall be located until the capital of the State shall have been located.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I desire to ask if there is any provision there for the Legislature creating a reform school?

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I think the substitute or the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin that was read for the information of the convention, would be more satisfactory, after the discussion of the matter that was had yesterday.

The President: There was an amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, which will now be read.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I think it obviates the difficulties that we encountered yesterday.

The Clerk read as follows: Add to Section 4 the following: Provided that no more than one of said institutions may be located in any one county in the State, and no one thereof shall be located in the county where the capital is situated; Provided, further, that the present location of the penitentiary in Deer Lodge County shall not bar said county from having located within its limits any other State institution.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move the adoption of the amendment, virtually striking out Section 6 and adding that as a proviso to Section 4.

The President: Section 6 has not been adopted yet. The question now before the convention is upon the adoption of Section 6, this amendment offered in the way of a substitute.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: This is an amendment to Mr. Witter's amendment.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: If I understand the reading of that correctly, although in the outset it provides that not more than one of these institutions shall be established in any one county, the proviso afterwards takes the county of Deer Lodge out, and from the reading of it, leaves the impression on my mind that all of these institutions might be established in the county of Deer Lodge.

The Clerk re-read the amendment for the information of the convention.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: It seems to me it would be better not to make any amendment. It seems to me perfectly safe to leave this matter to the Legislature and let them regulate it. It may be very desirable, it seems to me, as matters may turn out, that more than one of these institutions should be located in one county. The relations between them would be a great deal better for the State if they were located near each other, and in reference to all these matters it seems to me that the matter could be left to the Legislature to regulate it as it may see fit. So far as I am concerned, I am opposed to any amendments whatever, or any provision in reference to the matter. The first section of Article 18 here seems to me to be sufficient for all practical purposes. "Educational, reformatory and penal institution, and those for the benefit of the insane, blind, deaf and mute and such other institutions as the public good may require, shall be established and supported by the State in such manner as may be prescribed by law." I think that as this provision stands, that would leave the Legislature to regulate this matter without restricting them in any way. I do not think they ought to be restricted until the time the capital is permanently located. It may be desirable to locate them before that time, and I am opposed to all these amendments and all these substitutes, and I am in favor of leaving the matter as provided for in that section.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I agree fully with what has been said by the learned gentleman from Silver Bow County, and as I said yesterday, to defer this matter by any provision in this constitution seems to me would be unwise. We do not know how soon the Legislature would deem it expedient to locate some one of these institutions, and I think it would be safe to leave this matter to the Legislature fresh from the people and let them take care of it.

Mr. Whitebill of Deer Lodge: I agree with the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon. I think there is no doubt the convention can scatter these institutions over the country. Now, it seems as though this was in the interest of the small counties; it seems as though the little counties were being afraid. To be sure, this convention could go on and locate each one of these institutions through the different counties, there may in the future arise some contingency whereby we would not care to have them located just as the members of this convention would like to have them located, and I think we ought to be willing to trust the Legislature to arrange these counties and locate these different institutions as the necessity arises. I don't think there will be any disposition to filch any of them out of their just rights, in this matter. I think Section I covers the ground fully. It provides that the Legislature shall whenever the necessity arises, locate each one of these institutions wherever the people of this Territory, or the members of the Legislature at that time, may think the proper place for it, and that then would be the proper time to locate them and not now.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: There is one other point that has not been noticed in relation to this provision of the constitution, and that is the words, "other institutions of learning"—other State institutions. Now, it is difficult to say what other State institutions we may wish to establish in time, and it may be that some of these institutions that we would wish to establish ought to be connected with the State university. For instance, there might be such a thing as a medical school established in Montana, and if so, it ought to have some connection, in my judgment, with the State university. Lecturers in colleges who are sometimes employed in one department and sometimes in another, and where we have that provision "other institutions of learning", in my judgment, we ought to leave it to the Legislature to provide where those institutions shall be established. A few weeks ago I saw an article written by one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States upon Iowa, and he takes occasion in that article to criticise the action of the Methodist church that is so called in that State, for having divided the State into four sections and establishing four institutions of learning in that State, none of which are prosperous and none of which take any rank as such institutions ought; and when we establish a State university we ought to establish a university. Now, of course the Deaf and Dumb Asylum or a Reformatory School and such matters as that, having nothing to do with the University, but there may be institutions and public institutions that ought to be connected with this university, and make one good university—one that is entitled to the claim of a university—is worth half a dozen insignificant ones. I trust that when Montana establishes a university that it will have the right to place there everything that should pertain to a university; and as this section stands now, why, I feel confident that there ought to be no proviso put in there, leaving it to the Legislature to decide according to the facts as they may be presented to them at that time. We have not all of the facts that may arise in the history of Montana; other facts may arise in the history of Montana that will control the action of a legislative body, that are not presented to us now, and I trust that section will be left just where it is. Give power to the Legislature to provide for these institutions, and that is all we want.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: In the line of the gentleman's remarks, I would state that that is substantially the report of the committee, and that is the reason instead of having a Board of Regents we confined them all under one Educational Board, because it was shown in other States where they established these technical and other schools that they encroached upon the domain of each other, if it should be found advisable to give dignity and power and reputation and efficiency to the university, the committee were of the opinion that they should be in one place, and I fully agree with my friend, Judge Knowles, in this that they should all be in one place.

Mr. Reek of Deer Lodge: I would like to say that the institution of Ann Arbor, Michigan, is one of the finest institutions in the United States of the kind, and I understand they have there many of these different branches, which it seems is the disposition to scatter over the Territory. Now, if there is a law school established at the University, I think they should both be in one place. If this amendment prevails it will preclude the possibility of establishing many of these branches in the same town, and I hope it will not prevail.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the substitute offered by Mr. Hartman of Gallatin.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the section offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead, Mr. Witter.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that Proposition No. 18 be now placed upon its final passage.

Mr. Schmidt of Silver Bow: I move to strike out Section 5.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Schmidt, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 27 in the affirmative to 24 in the negative.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: If the provision of Section 2 was adopted, and it was the sense of this convention that the Legislative Assembly should provide by law for an election to fix the capital, if it is possible now I should like to have such an expression of the convention as to whether that would be deemed advisable or not.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: The convention voted on that proposition twice, and the motion was lost both times.

The President: That was adopted in amendment offered some days ago.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I understood it was indicated that the first Legislature should provide by law.

The Chair requested the Clerk to read the section as it stood.

The Clerk read same.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I believe that covers the ground I was aiming at, that the next Legislature would provide for the submission.

The President: The question now is upon the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Warren, to place Proposition No. 18 as amended on its final passage.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I hope this will not be done. I think it is a dangerous precedent we have established for putting a proposition on its final passage where several amendments are made, and then it goes to the Enrolling Committee and does not come back to the convention except through the Committee on Revision. The probabilities are that there will be mistakes. It seems to me the proposition should be engrossed and submitted for a final vote of this convention. I move you as an amendment that it be referred to the Engrossing Committee with instructions to engross it.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I trust that will not be done. There is but one amendment just one section stricken out and another one inserted. Let it be read again for information.

The President: The Clerk will read the proposition as it stands amended.

The Clerk read the proposition as amended.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: It has been stated to me that the striking out of Section 5 of this proposition would have the effect of compelling the State to make provision for the poor of several counties. I voted in the affirmative upon the motion to strike out that proposition, and at that time it did not occur to me that such a view would be taken. I desire to move that the motion by which Section 5 was stricken out be reconsidered.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: It occurs to me that the Legislature would have that authority without a provision of this kind in the constitution.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I will say this, that if there is any danger of this first section receiving the construction that has been stated here, that there ought to be an exception put in that section. This Section No. 5 that they have here would not be any limitation upon the first section. Now, Section 5 neither limits the power of the Legislative Assembly in any manner whatever, nor does it locate the power of the general government, nor does it grant any power to the general government. It is a provision here in relation to the several counties of the State, that the several counties of the State may do certain things, as though we were here forming a constitution and granting the counties of the State certain powers. Well, now, we don't want to put anything of the kind in the constitution. If it is thought that that would have the effect—and there might be some question about it, that provision here ought to be put in this—"such other public institutions as the public may require, except such as poor houses and county farms," and such matters as that. If it is thought that this first section here, which certainly was not intended to be anything of the kind—"Educational, reformatory and penal institutions, and those for the benefit of the insane, blind, deaf and mute and such other institution as the public good may require shall be established and supported by the State in such manner as may be prescribed by law." Now, as to the words, "such other institutions," I was under the impression that referred to educational institutions and such institutions as that, and that what we call a poor farm and a poor house was not an institution. It would never be considered usually a state institution, but if it is, we don't want it in that section here, because that Section 5 neither grants any power to the State nor restricts any power of the State.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I notice that the Reverend Dr. Talmage is in the gallery, and I move that this convention extend the privileges of the floor to the gentleman and his party.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved that the Reverend Dr. Talmage and his party be invited to the privileges of the floor of the convention.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Major Maginnis, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Chair appoint Honorable Martin Maginnis to escort the gentleman to the floor.

The question is upon the motion to reconsider the vote by which Section No. 5 was stricken out.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I am opposed to this motion prevailing. I voted to strike this Section 5 out for the reason that it is unnecessary to have that in the constitution. Under the general police powers of the State, without any clause being inserted in this constitution save for that purpose, we have the right to make all the provisions necessary that are provided for in this Section 5, and being unnecessary in the constitution I voted to strike it out.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: It seems to me, sir, that this is a power which rests originally with the people, and I shall support the motion of the gentleman to strike out this Section 5, for the reason that it neither adds to nor takes from the Legislature the power to do that which is prescribed. The prescription here that they shall do it is not binding on the Legislature, in my judgment. There is certainly nothing in Section 1 that limits the power of the Legislature to provide for its poor and infirm. I think it is a power which is inherent in the people, and the humanity of the people has always been such as to look after their own poor and suffering, and they will continue to do so unless there is something in this constitution to prevent it. I shall therefore support the motion to strike out.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: The members of this convention will remember that when this section was up before, I had inserted in the section the words "Soldiers' Home" for the reason that one State had decided that unless that provision was in this original section—this first section—that that would come under Section 5, and for that very reason they decided that an act of the Legislature providing that a soldiers' home was an institution that should be provided for by the State, and that by reason of Section 5 it was unconstitutional and the act of the Legislature was set aside by the Supreme Court. Now, this Section 5 provides that the county paupers, in short, shall be supported by the respective counties. Section 1 provides "and such other institutions as the public good may require." Now, all institutions that the public good may require, as we have it now, shall be supported by the State, to be sure. This is a matter which we can fix here by this constitution, and although it does not negative the power of the Legislature, eventually it is a limitation upon the power of the Legislature so that they cannot pass an act contrary to Section 4, wherein it is provided that the State must support all these public institutions. Now, as Judge Knowles says, if there were an exception in there then it would be all right? Now, I say this Section 5 is just and should not be stricken out. If we ever go into court to decide this matter, the court will decide that the counties are relieved from supporting their own paupers, and these paupers must be provided for in institutions supported by the State. That is the reason I have asked these gentlemen who have voted in the affirmative to have it reconsidered, and I don't believe it has been fully discussed. The result of this will be if Section 5 was stricken out that county paupers will be supported in State institutions. I think the action in striking out Section 7 was hasty and ought to be reconsidered, and Section 5 should be left in just as it is.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: In order to bring this matter squarely before the convention, I move to amend Section 4 by adding thereto.

The President: The motion will not be in order.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: It seems to me that the provisions contained in Section 5 are intended simply as a limitation upon the almost universal power conferred in Section 4 of this article. It should not be a limitation upon the powers of the people, but it is a limitation to Section 4, and changes the rule so far as the establishment of county poor houses is concerned. Therefore, I think if Section 5 is stricken out that there should be inserted in Section 4 a limitation upon that section itself, so that the State would not be called upon under Section 4 to support county poor houses. If you could insert "except county poor houses" the difficulty apprehended by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, who has just spoken, would be made, and the objections of the gentleman from Silver Bow would also be made, because then it would be such a limitation upon the power of the Legislature, or upon the duty of general State government as you contemplate by the article generally, and that is that certain institutions shall be supported by the State, and that the county poor houses shall be supported by the county.

The President: The question now is upon the motion to reconsider the vote by which Section 5 was stricken out.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move that Proposition No. 18 as amended be put upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: In the wording of Section 2 I notice that the election is provided for in 1892, and as we are going to pass this without having it printed, which I think is hardly necessary, in order to get the sense of the convention once more, I move to strike out 1892 and insert 1890.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I object to that, Mr. President, that is not in order.

The President: An amendment to that section is not in order; it was adopted and on motion to reconsider was laid upon the table. The motion is not in order except by unanimous consent. The question now is upon the motion to adopt Proposition No. 18. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Eaton, Fields, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marriion, Marshall, Mayerger, McDow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Reek, Robinson, Rotwitt, Toole, Jos. K.; Watson, Witter, Mr. President—53.

Nays: Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Halch, Hogan, Knowles, Kohrs, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Whitehill, Winston—13.

Absent: Burns, E.; Dyer, Gaylord, Haskell, Knippenberg, Ramsdell, Rickards, Sargent, Webster—9.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to adopt Proposition No. 18 carried and the proposition adopted.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to reconsider the vote by which that proposition was adopted, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I ask unanimous consent to submit a proposition, and ask its reference to a committee.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, asks the unanimous consent to offer the following proposition to be incorporated in the constitution.

The Clerk read as follows: Sec. To be added to article on Suffrage. Upon all questions submitted to the taxpayers of the State, or any political division thereof, women who are taxpayers and possessed of the qualifications for suffrage required of men by this constitution shall equally with men have the right to vote.

The President: If there be no objection this will be received and referred to the Committee on Suffrage.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I object. We have had enough talk about women.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move that the rules be suspended and it be referred to the Committee on Suffrage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Madison, Mr. Callaway, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 40 in the affirmative to 22 in the negative, the necessary two-third vote being required to suspend the rules.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 33, Ordinances, and in this connection I would say this: While it is placed at the foot of the General File, during this week county conventions will meet all over the Territory, and they do not know whether to nominate a county ticket or not. This will dispose of that matter.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: If I understand it, this matter was placed at the foot of the calendar to be considered last, and that it can only be taken up upon a reconsideration of that action.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that the gentleman is correct.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I will withdraw that motion so far as it relates to the Committee of the Whole, and now make a motion that the rules be suspended and we take the matter up in open convention.

The President: It would require a reconsideration of the vote by which it was placed on the calendar.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move that we go into Committee of the Whole on General File.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The point of order raised was that the convention had already decided to place it at the foot of the calendar, and that it can only be reached by a reconsideration. The question before the convention now is that the convention do now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of General Orders.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: Do I understand this would have to be reconsidered by the convention?

The President: It was in the convention that the matter was adopted, and was therefore the action of the convention.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I will state that according to my idea of it, we can go into Committee of the Whole, and can act upon any one of those propositions.

The President: The Committee of the Whole could not act upon that proposition without being so directed by the convention, inasmuch as they have decided to place it at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I presume I voted in the affirmative to place Proposition No. 33 at the foot of the calendar. I move that the vote whereby that was placed at the foot of the calendar be reconsidered.

The President: The motion is not in order, except by unanimous consent. It has been several days since that was done.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I object.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: If this motion is carried and we go into Committee of the Whole upon the General File, is it not in the province of the committee to consider any proposition on the general file?

The President: Any proposition except that one.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Why not that one?

The President: Because the convention put it at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: But the convention has not decided that anything else shall be done with it.

The President: The Chair understands that placing it at the foot of the calendar means that it shall be last considered.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I don't so understand it.

The President: The Chair can see no object in placing anything at the foot of the calendar, except that everything else shall be considered first.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: If you will reflect, this proposition No. 33 was made the special order for last Thursday, right following the capital question.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: As a matter of fact and of parliamentary practice, I would like to ask of the presiding officer what authority has this convention over the Committee of the Whole to give it any orders or any directions? The Committee of the Whole, I contend, as an authorized body, has a right to do anything it pleases, no matter what it pleases, and I am of the opinion of the gentleman from Cascade that we have a right to go into Committee of the Whole and take up any of these propositions.

The Chair would inform the gentleman from Madison that the convention has a right to instruct any committee, the Committee of the Whole as well as any other committee.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I heard no objection to the motion offered by the gentleman from Park County, that the convention reconsider the vote by which this matter was placed at the foot of the calendar.

The President: Objection was made to the reconsideration.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: If a motion to suspend the rules is in order, I move the convention that we suspend the rules, and let the convention proceed then to take up the General Order of business instead of going into Committee of the Whole. It seems under the rules of the convention that it serves no purpose whatever to go into Committee of the Whole but to delay time, and if we have to go into Committee of the Whole and go over everything again in the convention after discussing it in Committee of the Whole; it takes double time and serves no purpose whatever, except to delay our action.

The President: If the gentleman will yield his motion the Chair will state the motion of the gentleman from Cascade.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I desire to second the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, that this convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of General File.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: Before we go into Committee of the Whole, I would ask what was done with Proposition No. 38.

The President: The Clerk informs the Chair that the proposition has been printed and distributed, and is on the desks of the members at present. The question before the convention is that the convention do now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of General File.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Collins of Cascade to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Collins of Cascade in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The committee have under consideration the General File. What is the pleasure of the committee?

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move that the committee take up Proposition No. 33, found at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I object to it for the reason that the convention has instructed this committee that this matter should be placed at the foot of the calendar. The only way it can be reached in Committee of the Whole at this time is by taking up each of the other matters on the calendar and postponing their consideration until this can be reached.

The Chairman: The Chair would state that the proposition was placed at the foot of the calendar, but is not at the foot of the calendar now.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Meagher, Mr. Kanouse, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 1 of Proposition No. 33.

The Clerk read Section 1 of Proposition 33 as follows: "Ordinances, Be it ordained: First, That an election shall be held throughout the State of Montana on the First Tuesday of October, for the ratification or rejection of the constitution framed and adopted by this convention."

There being no amendment to Section 1, the Clerk read Section 2, as follows: "Second, At said election the constitution framed and adopted by this convention shall be submitted to the people of the State for their ratification or rejection, and all persons who are then qualified electors under the laws of this Territory shall be qualified to vote for the ratification or rejection thereof."

There being no amendment to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3 as follows: "Third, Said elections shall be held at the several places in the several wards and precincts throughout the Territory appointed for the holding of elections under the laws of this Territory, and shall be conducted in the manner prescribed by the laws of this Territory regulating elections. The Board of County Commissioners of the several counties of this Territory shall appoint judges and clerks of such election in each of said wards and precincts in the same manner as is now required by law for the appointment of judges and clerks of general elections in this Territory."

There being no amendment to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4 as follows: "Fourth, Each elector voting at said election shall have written or printed upon the ticket he may deposit in the ballot box the words "for the constitution" or "against the constitution", or other equivalent words."

There being no amendment to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5 as follows: "Fifth, The votes cast at said election for the adoption or rejection of said constitution shall be canvassed not later than fifteen days after said election, or sooner, if the returns from all of the precincts shall have been received and in the manner prescribed by the laws of the Territory of Montana for canvassing the votes at general elections in said Territory, and the returns of said election shall be made to the Secretary of the Territory; and the Governor, the Secretary, Auditor and Attorney General of the Territory and the President of this convention, or a majority of them shall constitute a Board of Canvassers, who shall meet at the office of the Secretary of the Territory on the thirtieth day after the election, and canvass the votes so cast and declare the result."

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge sent up an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 5 by striking out of lines 5 and 6 the word "and" and the words, "Secretary, Auditor and Attorney General" and the words "and the President of this convention" and insert in lieu thereof after the word "Territory" on line 5 the words "who with" and after the word "governor" add "and the Chief Justice."

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I move the adoption of that amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: This is just simply in accordance with the Enabling Act.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that we turn back to Section 2 and strike out the word "State" and insert "Territory". We are not a State until after the matter is voted upon.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: In order to make it in harmony with that, I move to strike out the word "State" on the first line of Section first.

The Chairman: The word will be stricken out if there be no objection.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I move to strike out in Section 4 the words "or other equivalent words". The reason I make that is that it can be printed "for the constitution" or "against the constitution", and if those words "or other equivalent words" are left in there, there will be half a dozen modes of expressing that idea. So I ask that the words be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Whitehill, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I move the unanimous consent to return to Section 1 for the purpose of amendment. I think the words "1892" should be in line 2 after the word "October". There is no year designated. I offer a motion to that effect.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: Before we go to Section 6, I move to amend Section 5 on the last line by inserting "or before" after the word "on", so that the Board of Canvassers shall meet at the office of the Secretary of the Territory on or before the thirtieth day after the election.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Marshall, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 5, the Clerk read Section 6, as follows: "Sixth, That on the first Tuesday in October there shall be elected by the qualified electors of Montana, a Governor, a Lieutenant Governor, a Secretary of State, an Attorney General, a State Treasurer, a State Auditor, a Superintendent of Public Instruction, one Chief Justice and two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, a Judge for each of the Judicial Districts established by this constitution, a Clerk of the Supreme Court, and a Clerk of the District Court for each of the Judicial Districts established by this constitution."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin sent up an amendment to Section 6.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 6 by striking out of lines 6 and 5 the following, "for each of the Judicial Districts established by this constitution," and inserting the following, "in and for each county of the State."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried. Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke sent up an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: Insert on first line in Section 6 after the word "October" the words "in the year 1889".

The Chairman: If there be no objection these words will be inserted.

Mr. McAdow of Fergus: I move to insert the word "State" before the word "Superintendent" in line 3.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Fergus, Mr. McAdow, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: Proposition No. 6, which I introduced, I believe was by order of the convention ordered to be considered with this proposition. I ask to have it read before Section 7.

The Chairman: Section 7 and the resolution offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone will now be read. Section 7 will be read first, and then the resolution of the gentleman from Yellowstone.

The Clerk read Section 7 as follows: "Seventh, That notice for such election for State, County and Township officers, shall be given by the several Boards of County Commissioners in the same manner as notices of general elections for delegates to Congress, and county officers under the now existing laws of the Territory, and such election shall be conducted and held and the votes canvassed in the same manner as provided by law for territorial officers, and all State, county and township officers shall qualify and enter upon the discharge of their duties as such on the first Monday of January following such election."

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move to have the resolution read, and that it be added to Section 6.

The Clerk read as follows: "All county and precinct officers who may be in office at the time of the adoption of this constitution shall hold their respective offices for the full term for which they may have been elected, and until such time as their successors may be elected and qualify in accordance with the provisions of this constitution and the laws now in force; and the official bonds of such officers shall continue in full force and effect as though this constitution had not been adopted."

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I wish to say that that provides for all county officers; I wish to amend that so as to except Probate Judges. If the Clerk will write in there after "county officers" "except Probate Judges"; I ask that it be added to Section 6.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I offer an amendment.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Another officer that ought to be excepted is the Treasurer. All the laws that provide for settlements of the County Treasurer provide for the settlements in March, and if we adopt those laws, there ought to be an exception as to the County Treasurer.

The Chairman: I would state to the gentleman from Silver Bow that the settlements are made quarterly. The reason that the principal settlement with the Treasurer was made in March was because the new county officers went into existence early. Now, they don't go into existence until the first Monday in January.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: There is no objection to that except the one office of County Treasurer, and if you will examine the statutes of the Territory it provides that the time the County Treasurer goes out of office is the second Monday in March. I am not sure but the law provides for a settlement with the County Treasurer before he goes out on the March term of the County Commissioners, and we will, I suppose, adopt those laws as our laws. Well, now, if you make the County Treasurer go out of office in January, why, the settlement that he makes will be with his successor in office, and then his successor in office will have to make this settlement on the first Monday in March. I would like to insert in there "except County Treasurers". The Probate Judge will be abolished anyhow.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I will accept the gentleman's amendment. I will just say to the gentleman that the term of the office of the Treasurer does not expire until March anyhow. This resolution provides that they shall hold their office for the full time for which they were elected.

The Chairman: The question before the committee is upon the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone, that his resolution be adopted.

The Clerk read the resolution for the information of the committee.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Goddard, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 31 in the affirmative to 30 in the negative.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I call for tellers on that count.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Let it go into the convention and consider it by ayes and nays.

The Chairman: The committee will now consider Section 7.

The Clerk read Section 7 as follows: "Seventh. That notice for such election, for State, county and township officers, shall be given by the several Boards of County Commissioners in the same manner as notices of general elections for delegate to Congress and county officers under the now existing laws of the Territory and such election shall be conducted and held and the votes canvassed in the same manner as provided by law for territorial officers, and all State, county and township officers shall qualify and enter upon the discharge of their duties as such on the first Monday of January following such election."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move to strike out the word "county" in the first line of Section 7, and also in the fifth line of Section 7.

The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: There is a motion on the table from the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, which will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Section 7 by striking out the words 'county and township' in lines 4 and 5". Offered by Luce.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I will state my reasons for this, and that is to make it consistent with Section 6 that has just been passed and amended. There is no provision in that section as now amended for the election of any county or township officers, as I understand it, and Section 6 provides what officers shall be elected. It just simply makes it consistent with what has been done. I shall consider that the Clerk of a district court is a county officer. That seems to be a State institution rather than a county institution, and I think that to make the two sections consistent those words ought to be stricken out.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, and a division being called for the same was declared lost by a vote of 31 in the affirmative to 32 in the negative.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I move that after the word "county" in line 5 there be inserted the words "except County Treasurers."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Clark of Silver Bow: I think the views of my colleague are quite correct on that proposition. Now, during the month of December is the time in which the taxes are paid, all through the month of December. The duties of the County Treasurer are very onerous, hence I think it right to postpone that until March.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would suggest to the gentleman from Silver Bow that the section would read better if the amendment were placed after the word "officer" in line 5. It would then read "for territorial officers and all State, county and township officers, except County Treasurers shall qualify," etc.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I accept the amendment of the gentleman.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Knowles, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke offers the following amendment: Strike out the word "such" and insert the word "the" on line 1 of Section 7, and after the word "officers" insert the words "whose election is provided for by the preceding section."

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I offer that as an amendment to remove any ambiguity. That is the simple object of the amendment, to remove the ambiguity.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 7, the Clerk read Section 8 as follows: "Eighth, That perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of the State of Montana shall ever be molested in person or property, on account of his or her mode of religious worship."

Mr. Joy of Park: In view of the fact that the idea of this paragraph is fully provided for in Section 4, General File No. 4 of the Bill of Rights, which reads that "the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination shall forever hereafter be guaranteed," I move that the section be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: Before any action is taken by this Committee of the Whole on that proposition, I desire to call attention to the fact that that section, and Sections 9, 10, 11 and 12 are taken verbatim from the Enabling Act, and that when we proceed here to interfere with the language that is contained in one of those sections, we interfere with that which is required by the Enabling Act, and I pretend to say that all such interference as that would imperil our chances of becoming a State, and I hope that not one single word will be disturbed in one of those sections. It is drawn in accordance with the Enabling Act, and we will make a mistake if we disturb it.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: There may be that language used in the Enabling Act, but I think the people of Montana are unanimous in one respect, and also the courts of the United States are unanimous in the same respect, that is, in regard to the prohibition of this Mormon sentiment or religion. Now, for some time, for some time past, we all know that prosecution has been laid against people in Salt Lake City who practice this Mormon religion, for unlawful co-habitation. Now, if we pass this section in the words here, the question will arise hereafter whether or not any person practicing polygamy in Montana would be liable for prosecution, and by referring to Section 4 of the Enabling Act you will see that it has guaranteed the free exercise of religious profession and worship. Now, that is all that is required of us by the Enabling Act. We go on further and say "without discrimination, shall be forever hereafter guaranteed."

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I want to call attention to this fact, that the language of Section 4 reads "and State conventions shall provide by ordinance, irrevocably without the consent of the United States and the people of said State." This is done by an ordinance.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: If the convention shall provide, then I say move to amend that section in the ordinance by inserting what we have in the Bill of Rights. This question was not discussed very fully in convention, but it was discussed in the committee which framed this Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights says "But the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be construed to dispense with oaths or affirmations, excuse acts of licentiousness, by bigamous or polygamous marriage." Now, in order to make this consistent it must be in the ordinance. Then, I say it ought to be amended to conform to Section 4, which we have already adopted, by inserting in there that it will not excuse acts of licentiousness by bigamous or polygamous marriage. If we pass this section as it is now here, it will be in direct conflict with Section 4 of the Bill of Rights which we have already adopted; and that is the objection I make to it, that it does not exclude these polygamous contracts of the Mormon; and I think under the Edmunds Bill the government of the United States is in perfect harmony, that is, in that respect, and we do not propose to encourage polygamy here, and allow the Mormons to come here and practice their religion as they do in Utah. If this is adopted I don't see anything to prevent the adoption of that system of religion or practice here.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I want to ask if the general expression, the words "religious sentiment" can be construed to permit polygamous marriages. Is that a sentiment?

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I think it would.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I think it is already provided for in the Bill of Rights that this religious toleration shall not excuse polygamous rites. The Enabling Act requires us to have this.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the gentlemen in their statements have omitted to read carefully the different sections which provide for religious liberty in the Bill of Rights, and those in Proposition 38. One is in the protection of the religious rights, and the other is in the protection of their property—"the perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured." There is an omission there which does not exist as an omission in the Bill of Rights. The other is merely a protection of religious rights. I think the section ought to remain.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: As to perfect toleration of religious sentiment, I don't suppose that gentlemen wish to make a provision in the constitution that we are going to prohibit a person from coming here and by preaching advocate polygamy so long as they do not practice polygamy. If it is just a sentiment advocated, when any sentiment is advocated here as a religion we are perfectly willing to hear them. Now, I don't think the practice of polygamy is a mode of worship at all. It is a barbarism. I don't think it is a mode of religious worship. Now, there has been something said by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke here that they should not be molested in personal property on account of their mode of religious worship. I think that is proper, and we ought to conform to the Enabling Act in this particular. I think the gentleman from Deer Lodge is mistaken as to what is the scope of this provision.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I move that this committee now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Meagher, Mr. Parberry, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Joy, to strike out Section 8, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 9 as follows: "Ninth, That the people inhabiting said State of Montana do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within the boundaries thereof and to all lands lying within said limits owned or held by any Indian or Indian Tribes, and that until the title thereto shall have been extinguished by the United States, the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition of the United States, and said Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States, that the lands belonging to the citizens of the United States residing within the said State of Montana shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands belonging to residents thereof; that no taxes shall be imposed by the said State of Montana on lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States or reserved for its use. But nothing herein contained shall preclude the said State of Montana from taxing as other lands are taxed any lands owned or held by any Indian who has severed his tribal relations and has obtained from the United States or from any person a title thereto by patent or grant, save and except such lands as have been or may be granted to any Indian or Indians under any Act of Congress containing a provision exempting the lands thus granted from taxation, but said last named lands shall be exempt from taxation by said State of Montana so long and to such extent as such Act of Congress may prescribe."

There being no amendment to Section 9, the Clerk read Section 10, as follows: "Tenth, That the debts and liabilities of said Territory of Montana shall be assumed and paid by said State of Montana."

There being no amendment to Section 10, the Clerk read Section 11, as follows: "Eleventh, That provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of systems of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of said State of Montana, and free from sectarian control."

There being no amendment to Section 11, the Clerk read Section 12, as follows: "Twelfth, That this ordinance shall be irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of said State of Montana."

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I desire to offer an additional section to be numbered Section 13.

The Chairman: The Chairman on the Committee on Ordinances offers a new section to be numbered Section 13, as follows: "Section 13. There shall be elected at the first general election to be held on the first Tuesday of October, 1889, by the qualified electors of each county in this State the following county and township officers: Three County Commissioners, one County Clerk, one Sheriff, one County Treasurer, one County Superintendent of Public Schools, one County Surveyor, one County Assessor, one Coroner, one Public Administrator, one County Attorney, two Justices of the Peace for each township, two Constables for each township, who shall enter upon the discharge of their duties on the first Monday of January succeeding such election, and shall hold their respective offices for the term of three years, and until their successors are elected and qualify, and all such officers thereafter elected shall hold their offices for the term provided in this constitution."

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I submit to the Chair and the committee that the section is out of order, for the reason that the matter has been provided for in the amendment to Section 6. This could not be construed as an amendment in any sense of the word, and if so it conflicts with that, and is therefore out of order.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I move that this committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Hershfield, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 33, have considered same, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that the committee have had under consideration Proposition No. 33, report progress and ask leave to sit again. If there be no objection the request will be granted.

Mr. Joy of Park: I move that the convention now take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Joy, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Tuesday, August 13th, 1889. Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by the President at 2 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I move the convention to go into Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of the General File.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Yellowstone, Mr. Myers, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Collins of Cascade to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Collins of Cascade in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The committee had under consideration a new section to be numbered Section 13 of Proposition No. 33, on Ordinances, offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson.

The Clerk read the section as offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, for the information of the members.

The Chairman: The question is upon the adoption of the section.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 33 in the affirmative to 27 in the negative.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I move that the committee do now rise and report Proposition No. 33 back to the convention, with the recommendation that it be adopted.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I withdraw the motion.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, offers to amend Proposition No. 33, by inserting after the eleventh section the following, and number the succeeding sections to correspond. Twelfth. That on behalf of the people of Montana we in convention assembled do adopt the constitution of the United States.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I merely desire to say in reference to that that it is required by the Enabling Act that the convention do adopt the constitution. It was adopted by resolution in convention, but it in no way appears in the constitution, and I think that it ought to be in its proper place here. This is the reason why I offer the section.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Choteau, Mr. Conrad, on the adoption of the section, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I now renew my motion that the committee rise and report back Proposition No. 33 to the convention, with the recommendation that it be adopted.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole made the following report, which was read by the Clerk as follows:

"Mr. President: Your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 33, General File No. 29, and beg leave to report the same back to the convention with the recommendations as amended it do pass.

"Your committee would further state that references herein made to sections and lines are such as are found in the printed bill.

"Amend Section 1 by striking out the word 'State' on line 1 and insert in lieu thereof the word 'Territory', and after the word 'October' on line 1 insert the words '1889'.

"Amend Section 2 by striking out the word 'State' on line 2 and insert in lieu thereof the word 'Territory'.

"Amend Section 4 by striking out on lines 3 and 4 the words 'or other equivalent words'.

"Amend Section 5 by striking out the word 'and' after the word 'Territory' on line 5 and insert the words 'who with'; also by striking out the words 'The Secretary, Auditor and Attorney General' on lines 5 and 6 and inserting in lieu thereof the words 'and the Chief Justice'; also by inserting after the word 'on' on line 8 the words 'or before'; also by striking out on line 6 the words 'and the President of this convention'.

"Amend Section 6 by inserting after the word 'October' on line 1 the words '1889'; also by inserting before the word 'Superintendent' on line 3 the word 'State'; also by striking out all of said section after the words 'District Court' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'in and for each county of the State'.

"Add to Section 6 the following: All County and Precinct officers except Probate Judges who may be in office at the time of the adoption of this constitution shall hold their respective offices for the full time for which they may have been elected, and until such time as their successors may be elected and qualified, in accordance with the provisions of this constitution, and the laws now in force, and the official bonds of all such officers shall continue in full force and effect as though this constitution had not been adopted.

"Amend Section 7 by inserting after the word 'officers' on line 5 the words 'except County Treasurer'.

"Amend by adding as Section (13) thirteen as follows: Sec. 13. There shall be elected at the first general election to be held on the first Tuesday of October, 1889, by the qualified electors of each county Three (3) County Commissioners; one (1) County Clerk; one (1) Sheriff; one (1) County Treasurer; one (1) County Superintendent of Public Schools; one (1) County Surveyor; one (1) County Assessor; one (1) Coroner; one (1) Public Administrator; one (1) County Attorney; two (2) Justices of the Peace for each township; two (2) Constables for each township, who shall enter upon the discharge of their duties upon the first Monday of January succeeding such election, and shall hold their respective offices for the term of three years and until their successors are elected and qualified and all such officers thereafter elected shall hold their offices for the term provided in this constitution.

"Amend Proposition No. 33 by inserting after (11) eleventh section the following and numbering succeeding sections to correspond: Twelfth. That on behalf of the people of Montana, we, in convention assembled, do adopt the constitution of the United States.

"(Signed)

T. E. COLLINS, Chairman."

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: My attention was called by the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee to a little discrepancy here in the 12th section of the printed copy, and I have prepared an amendment here for the purpose of covering the case.

HIRAM KNOWLES	EDWARD CARDWELL	C. P. CONNOLLY, Stenographer
CHARLES M. WEBSTER	AARON C. WITTER	WILLIAM MUTH
	RICHARD O. HICKMAN

The President: The Chair would suggest that the matter is now before the convention.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move that we consider Proposition No. 33.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I move to amend by asking unanimous consent, if that be necessary, for the consideration of Proposition No. 33.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the rules be suspended or that unanimous consent be obtained to consider Proposition No. 33.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The convention will act first upon the amendments offered by the Committee of the Whole. The Clerk will read the amendments.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Section 1 by striking out the word 'Territory', and after the word 'October' on line 2 insert the words 'eight hundred and eighty-nine'."

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Section 2 by striking out the word 'State' on line 2 and insert in lieu thereof the word 'Territory'."

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, Mr. Witter, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Section 4 by striking out on lines 3 and 4 the words 'or other equivalent words'."

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, Mr. Witter, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Section 5 by striking out the word 'and' after the word 'Territory' on line 5 and insert the words 'who will'; also by striking out the words 'The Secretary, Auditor and Attorney General' on lines 5 and 6, and inserting in lieu thereof the words 'and the Chief Justice'; also by inserting after the word 'on' on line 8 the words 'or before'; also by striking out on line 6 the words 'and the President of this convention'."

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I think there is a conflict in that. In the first part of the fifth paragraph it states not later than fifteen days after said election, and then later on it says thirty days.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that that is the difference between the county and the territorial canvass.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I stand corrected.

The Chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Chessman, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Section 6 by inserting after the word 'October' on line 1 the words 'eighteen hundred and eighty-nine'; also by inserting before the word 'Superintendent' on line 3 the word 'State'; also by striking out all of said section after the words 'District Court' and inserting in lieu thereof the words 'in and for each county of the State'."

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move the adoption of these amendments.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Add to Section 6 the following: All county and precinct officers except Probate Judges who may be in office at the time of the adoption of this constitution shall hold their respective offices for the full time for which they may have been elected, and until such time as their successors may be elected and qualified, in accordance with the provisions of this constitution, and the laws now in force, and the official bonds of all such officers shall continue in full force and effect as though this constitution had not been adopted."

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move the adoption of the amendment. The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I call for the ayes and nays.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: Before the ayes and nays are called I would like to have a ruling by the Chair on Rule 17 of the Rules of the Convention. (Reading) "Every member shall be present before the vote is declared from the Chair, and no other person shall vote for or against the same unless the convention shall excuse him, or unless he is immediately interested in the question, in which case he shall not vote." Now, as to the last part of that rule, I claim there are parties here who are directly interested in this question, such as county attorneys and county clerks.

The President: If there are any members of the convention that are pecuniarily interested in the question directly, it would seem that this rule would exclude them from voting.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I would state to the convention that my object for raising this is that there are some county attorneys here who are delegates, and I claim that they are directly interested in the question, and according to the rule 17 they have no right to vote upon the proposition. I call for a ruling on that question.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would state that I happen to be one of the distinguished gentlemen who were elected by the suffrage of the people as County Attorney, and also that I was elected by democratic votes. If it had not been for democratic votes I would not have been elected, for I was scratched by my party about 65 votes, and I received three democratic votes to one republican vote. Now, we had a vote up a few days ago upon the mining proposition, and there were mining men who, like my illustrious friend, got up and voted, and there was no question raised as to their right to vote by me, or any other member of the convention. I would scorn anything of that kind. Suppose there was a gentleman who happened to be interested in a lead mine, or a silver mine, or any other mine, it would simply preclude him from voting. This matter seems to be beneath the dignity of a statesman, beneath the dignity of a gentleman. If it is necessary for me to resign my position in order to vote, I am ready to do so; it has been nothing but a detriment to me. I raise the question, not because it is a matter of interest, but because it is a right of the people.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I have no interest in the matter at all, except I know the convention has adopted this rule. Now, I would say further that I think it is below the dignity of a gentleman to trespass upon this rule as it is for the gentleman to raise this point.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment. If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. Any pairs will be announced before the roll call begins.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I would like to state that I am paired with Mr. Haskell.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to say inasmuch as an allusion was made to county attorneys that I happened to be elected the County Attorney in Custer County at the last election, and I am about the only Republican who was elected. I do not claim it was on account of my transcendent merit as a Republican, but simply because I stood there before the people, I suppose. I showed the people of the county that I was with them in their feelings. The Sheriff of the county, Mr. Irwin, was elected there for the full term. The County Clerk, Mr. Deer, was elected, and he is a full fledged Democrat from Virginia. Mr. Thompson of Illinois was elected Treasurer. I believe that when those men went into that election and put up the quid pro quo to pay the necessary expenses of the campaign, that they were entitled to the consideration of their party. I do not stand here to claim any superior advantages for the Republican party, but I claim that these men who were elected are entitled to serve out their terms. There may be others who will stand under their party lash, but I never bite on any such bait. When I come in good faith here and pledge myself to stand by the friends who stood by me, I will do it or die in the attempt. Mr. Irwin went in there as Sheriff and he fought the battle manfully. As you all know in this county he is one of the best officers that are—(Interrupted).

The President: The gentleman understands he is speaking by indulgence.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Yes sir; I understand that. If any man wants to object I will sit down; I do not ask any privileges—Mr. Deer is one of the best officers we have in this western country, and I told him I believed it was right, and I believe it is right now, that no one who has ever gone out and got his nomination or his election by the indulgences of those people has a right to go back upon them and take an opposite position. I do not say that any man has done it, but if I had ever done it, it is the last thing I would have done. I believe those men are entitled to serve out their full term of office.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Does the gentleman's remark have reference to the delegate to Congress, Thomas H. Carter.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I don't care about Mr. Carter; he is a man of your own choice; you can keep him. Now, these men that went into the fight, they did it manfully, not on account of their party, but their transcendent honesty and their integrity, and their sense of duty, and I will oppose any election in our county this Fall. I want to put myself upon record and stand upon my record.

The Clerk called the roll on the adoption of the amendment.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Carpenter, Canby, Chessman, Craven, Eaton, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Hobson, Hershfield, Hickman, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marshall, Mitchell, Reek, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—30.

Nays: Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Cardwell, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Fields, Gibson, Hatch, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Maginnis, Marrion, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Winston, Mr. President—33.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylord, Rickards, Webster—4.

Paired: Aiken and Sargent, Dyer and Graves, Haskell and Parberry, Jos. K. Toole and Warren—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to amend lost.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move to reconsider the vote by which that motion to amend was lost; and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the call of the House.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The motion to reconsider is a privileged question; unless there is evidence of an absence of a quorum.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I rise to a point of order, that the roll call shows a quorum present.

The President: The question is to reconsider the motion by which the Goddard resolution was lost, and the motion to lay it upon the table. The first question is upon the motion to lay on the table.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Cardwell, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Fields, Gibson, Hatch, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Maginnis, Marrion, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Winston, Mr. President—33.

Nays: Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Carpenter, Canby, Chessman, Craven, Eaton, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marshall, Mitchell, Ramsdell, Reek, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—30.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylord, Rickards, Webster—4.

Paired: Aiken and Sargent, Dyer and Graves, Haskell and Parberry, Jos. K. Toole and Warren—8.

The Chair announced the vote, and declared the motion to lay on the table and the motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was lost, carried.

The President: The Clerk will read the other amendments.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Section 7 by inserting after the word "officers" on line 5 the words "except County Treasurers."

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers an amendment as follows: "Except County Treasurer who shall enter upon the duties of his office on the first Monday in March after his election."

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Knowles, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Chair then put the question on the amendment reported by the committee to Section 7, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend by adding as Section 143: Thirteen as follows: Sec. 13. There shall be elected at the first general election to be held on the first Tuesday of October, 1889, by the qualified electors of each county in this State the following county and township officers: Three (3) County Commissioners; one (1) County Clerk; one (1) Sheriff; one (1) County Treasurer; one (1) County Superintendent of Public Schools; one (1) County Surveyor; one (1) County Assessor; one (1) Coroner; one (1) Public Administrator; one (1) County Attorney; two (2) Justices of the Peace for each township; two (2) Constables for each township, who shall enter upon the discharge of their duties on the first Monday of January succeeding such election, and shall hold their respective offices for the term of three years and until their successors are elected and qualified, and all such officers thereafter elected shall hold their offices for the time provided in this constitution."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, if I understand aright, it provides for the election of one coroner.

The President: Yes sir.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I will move an amendment that two coroners be elected, for it will take at least two to hold an inquest over the bodies of their friends before they get through with this.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: If I understand it, it makes no provision for the County Treasurer taking his office on the first of March. If there is no amendment, I would like to offer one.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I understood from Judge Knowles that the general law provided for that.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I offer the following.

The President: The gentleman from Missoula, Mr. Bickford, offers to amend by adding, "except as herein otherwise provided."

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Mr. President, I have placed the word "and" at the commencement of that. It should be inserted in the substitute or additional section offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

The President: It would come in probably as the Chair understands after these words "who shall enter upon the discharge of his duties on the first Monday of January except as herein otherwise provided."

The motion of the amendment of the gentleman from Missoula was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Is an amendment in order?

The President: Not until this is disposed of, unless by consent.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I propose to strike out that provision relating to the time when they shall take their office, to be then covered by Section 7 above, or the Seventh Ordinance. It need not be repeated. I understand the section is offered by Mr. Robinson to leave out this section entirely.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Bickford of Missoula.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move the adoption of the section as amended.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I should like to offer a substitute here to meet the objections that were raised by Mr. Dixon. It is the 12th section of the printed copy.

The President: That will not be entertained at present until we have disposed of this question.

The Clerk read the section as amended for the information of the convention.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move to amend by striking out the word "three" and insert "one" in lieu thereof.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I call for the ayes and nays. I see that there is a conflict in this section with other parts of the constitution that have been adopted, and I think it would be better that the officers only hold for one year, because it would be satisfactory and in accordance with the other part. Other sections should not conflict with this.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Beaverhead. If there be no objections, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Before the roll is called, I would like to call attention to the fact that pairs would not count on this proposition. It is entirely outside of the main question, and has no reference to it whatever.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I don't think pairs should count on any proposition here. We went into this election a year ago, and agreed to elect these men for two years, and they went in and made their stake, and they were elected; and the idea of coming up in this convention and ruling them out, and saying that because we have got into convention they shall not hold office any longer, I think it is one of the lowest things that was ever known among honorable men. I think that as we have the right by ordinance to come in here and provide that these men shall hold over through their full term of office, that it should go in there, and it is no detriment to the state that these men should be entitled to hold their office in good faith. Now, as I said before, in Custer County, I believe I am the only Republican elected there, and I was elected not on account of the peculiar partiality of my party to me, for I don't think they ever had any more partiality towards me than the balance of the people; I was elected there for this purpose, and I never made any pledges either. But I do think it is one of the greatest breaches of implied faith in the world. These men went in and defrayed their expenses; they are honorable men; they are our best men; and I think those men should be entitled to hold out their terms of office in bringing it around to the regular election next year, when the wheels of government will roll around without any friction at all, and I think they should be allowed to hold their offices for the full terms. It will injure nobody; it will do the public a great deal of good; we want to try them (through the full term of their probation, and if they make good officers re-elect them. Now, I am one of these men who happen to be a little peculiar in this thing, I don't think because a mass of men have put a Democratic brand on him that he is to be ostracised by the Republican party. I believe in taking him on his merit. Whether he has been a Democrat raised in Kentucky or Virginia, if he is a good faithful man, I believe in electing him, and I will never come in here to ostracise these men, and to chop off short the chicken's head here simply because it runs over the chopping block at this time when we have a chance to do it, and reorganize either the Republican or Democratic party.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: To prevent any further discussion I will withdraw my motion.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I move the previous question.

The President: The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I want to call the attention of the convention to Proposition No. 24, Section 11, as printed and as amended it pass. It was passed on the sixth day of August and as it was passed it reads as follows: "There shall be elected in each county the following officers: One County Clerk, who shall be Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners, and ex-officio recorder of deeds; one Sheriff; one Treasurer, who shall be collector of taxes; one County Superintendent of Schools; one County Surveyor; one Assessor; one Coroner; one Public Administrator. Persons elected to the different offices named in this section shall hold their respective offices for the term of two years; except that the county officers elected at the first general election provided for by this constitution shall hold their offices until the general election in 1892, and until their successors are elected and qualified." Now, that is all I care to read of it. The balance of this section refers to vacancies in office. This proposition now before the convention is in the very teeth of this that has been passed. There seems to me there is no way out of this, except extending the county officers already in office one year. Then the terms will commence regularly as already provided in this constitution. We have without exception said that the terms of these officers shall be for two years. Now, then, we say in another part of the constitution that the first shall be for three years or one year. I don't understand that this section here that is already passed can be amended in this manner by an ordinance, and I think the section proposed by the gentleman from Deer Lodge certainly is out of order and ought not to be considered.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: We have listened to a considerable degree of buncombe here. It is undoubtedly apparent to the convention what is the source and the purpose and all I desire to say in reply to that is that the people of some of these counties have discovered that last Fall in making their selections they made a mistake and they are desirous now of rectifying that mistake, and so far as I am concerned I have no fear to go home and face my people and abide by any action of mine in this convention. I move the previous question on the amendment of the proposition.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The question now before the convention is, shall the main question be now put. There are no amendments. The main question is the adoption of the proposition as offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I have an amendment that I desire to offer at the proper time to one of the paragraphs of this proposition, and I hope that so far as the main proposition is concerned, the amendment will simply not prevail.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I mean simply on this subdivision of it.

The President: The previous question when ordered can only operate on any question that is pending before the convention; and if there has been any motion to adopt the proposition it would not affect it.

Mr. Loud of Custer called for the ayes and nays.

Mr. Fields of Park objected.

The Chair put the question on the motion for the call of the ayes and nays, and there being a sufficient number, the Clerk was instructed to call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Cardwell, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Fields, Gibson, Hatch, Hogan, Kanouse, Maginnis, Marrión, Mayger, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Mr. President—30.

Nays: Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Craven, Eaton, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Joy, Luce, Marshall, McAdow, Mitchell, Reek, Rotwitt, Watson, Witter—29.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylord, Rickards, Webster—4.

Paired: Aiken and Sargent; Bullard and Joyes; Dyer and Graves; Haskell and Parberry, Jos. K. Toole and Warren, Whitehill and Winston—42.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion of the previous question carried.

The President: The question now is on the adoption of the amendment; the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Cardwell, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Fields, Gibson, Hatch, Hogan, Kanouse, Maginnis, Marrión, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Mr. President—31.

Nays: Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Craven, Eaton, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marshall, Mitchell, Reek, Rotwitt, Watson, Witter—28.

Absent: Burns, E.; Gaylord, Rickards, Webster—4.

Paired: Aiken and Sargent, Bullard and Joyes, Graves and Dyer, Haskell and Parberry, Jos. K. Toole and Warren, Whitehill and Winston—12.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to adopt the section offered by the gentleman from Deer Lodge carried.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin sent up an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, offered an amendment which has not been acted upon. The Clerk will read the same.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Proposition No. 33 by inserting after the eleventh section the following, and number the succeeding paragraphs to correspond. Section 12. That on behalf of the people of Montana, we, in convention assembled, do adopt the constitution of the United States."

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Courtney, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend the Twelfth ordinance in printed copy to read as follows: "Thirteenth. That Ordinances No. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 herein shall be irrevocable with the consent of the United States and the said people of the State of Montana." Renumber subsequent sections to correspond.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis and Clarke: I would suggest to the gentleman from Gallatin that all that portion of the article which forms a contract with the United States should go by itself, and that this section which we have now adopted should go in "State Affairs".

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I will just simply state what the purpose of this was. We only want to make such portions of these ordinances as are of a contract with the United States government, compelled to be inserted here by the Enabling Act, irrevocable. Portions of them we don't want to make irrevocable. This is to read that the 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th sections shall be irrevocable, and the section 12th is numbered 13. With reference to the renumbering of them, as suggested by Mr. Maginnis, I believe the Committee on Phraseology and Revision should have the right to renumber or rearrange. Major Maginnis has suggested that the last section just adopted should follow Section 7, but I think the committee would have authority to insert it in that order and renumber accordingly. I hope it will pass, for then it makes those irrevocable that are provided for by the Enabling Act, and none others.

The Chair put the question on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Hartman, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher sent up an amendment.

The Clerk read the said amendment as follows: Paragraph 11: Insert in lieu of the word "systems" the words "a uniform system".

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair stated the amendment.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: A reference to Proposition to No. 17 will reveal the fact that we have already adopted almost a duplicate of the eleventh paragraph in the proposition now under consideration. I believe that it is desirable that the constitution should be complete as to all of the ideas that it is desired to incorporate, and I believe further with the ideas of the gentleman from Gallatin when attention was called to the fact that some portion of Paragraph 8 here had perhaps been adopted, that it would be the best and safest course for this convention to assume to follow as nearly as might be the positive requirements of the Enabling Act, and I therefor voted in favor of the motion to retain intact all of the language in the paragraphs of this proposition. But I find, however, that Section 1, on the Article on Education, goes perhaps a little further than the paragraph in this instance, and if it is in the power of the committee appointed the other day, where duplicate provisions are found, to either strike one out or recommend to the convention that it be done, I think that for the purpose of making this ordinance as complete as possible, and with the other provision which will be a duplicate of it stricken out, I think this amendment ought to be made. I don't think it is proper, or perhaps the sense of this convention, that there should be more than one system of common schools, or of public schools, and the error, if error it be, has crept in from following too closely the exact language of the Enabling Act of Congress in this respect. I think it was not the intention that the different sects should all be provided for by different systems but that the word "systems" there used referred to the different States, but that in the State the system should be uniform and complete, and should not be "systems", but should be one and uniform throughout the State.

The Chair put the question on the amendment of the gentleman from Meagher, Mr. Kanouse, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 26 in the affirmative to 21 in the negative.

Mr. Dixon of Silver Bow: I move to reconsider the vote by which that amendment was adopted. I desire to state that it seems to be very important to adhere closely to what Congress says. We have in here just exactly what Congress requires, and I am decidedly in favor of this matter of following the language and the exact words of the Act of Congress.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Dixon, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I hope that the amendment will carry. This section in the Enabling Act certainly had reference to the Territory of Washington, the two Territories of Dakota, and the Territory of Montana, and the language of the Congressional Act takes the plural, according to my notion of it. Now, I don't believe there is a man in this convention that wants to have more than one system of public schools in the State of Montana, and I believe the amendment of the gentleman from Meagher is correct, and in the line of the Enabling Act of Congress. It seems to me that if we do anything else we will be stultifying ourselves. There is not a member on the floor of this convention who is in favor of more than one system of public schools.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I believe, sir, that no gentleman here who will carefully compare Section 1 of Proposition No. 17 with paragraph 11 of this proposition under consideration, and then will take into consideration the language used in the Enabling Act, but who will say that the position which I take upon this matter is correct. I think, sir that the gentleman from Silver Bow, who moved the reconsideration of this matter, will hardly say that the establishment of a uniform system of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of the State of Montana, and free from sectarian control, would not be a full and complete compliance with the Act of Congress, where they say that provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of systems of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of the State. It seems superfluous to say anything more on the subject. All has been said that it is necessary to say. It is only a play of words.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to be that the interpretation given to this section by the gentleman from Meagher is correct. This is a case where if you follow the law you disregard the meaning entirely. The "system" covers everything—covers "systems"—everything that can be done in reference to schools. All Congress asks is that each State shall establish a system, and when they use the language in reference to the four States they say "systems", but it really only refers to one system.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Meagher, Mr. Kanouse, and a division being called for the same was declared carried by a vote of 33 in the affirmative to 19 in the negative.

The President: There is an amendment offered by Mr. Loud of Custer, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: "Amend Ordinance No. 7 by striking out the words "law for territorial officers" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Ordinance No. 5."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I rise to a point of order. It cannot be reached. It is the ordinance upon which the vote was taken, and the reconsideration of it was laid on the table.

The President: It does not apply, as the Chair understands, to the section stated by Major Maginnis.

Mr. Loud of Custer: If Ordinance No. 7 remains as it now is we will have two canvassing boards. We will have one composed of the Secretary of the Territory and the Governor and Chief Justice, and in Ordinance No. 7, we have the original territorial canvassing board; and it would be necessary for the County Clerks in different counties to transmit two copies of all the returns in the different counties, one to the board which we have agreed to today and one to the original territorial board.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: For the same reasons offered by the gentleman, I withdraw the amendment to Section 7, in order to straighten that matter out, so as to avoid having two canvassing boards.

Mr. Loud of Custer: I will accept that amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment as follows: "Amend Section 7 by inserting after the word "votes" in line 4 the words "for State officers, canvassed in the same manner as provided in Section 5 herein; and the votes for county and township officers shall be canvassed in the same manner as by law provided for county and township officers"; and the words "canvassed in the same manner as provided by law for territorial officers" stricken out.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I will state to the convention that that will make the section provide for the canvassing of all the State officers in the same manner as canvassing for the ratification of the constitution, and that it will leave all county and township officers just the same as the law leaves it—the same canvassing board, as the law now leaves it.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I would call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the canvassing board as it now stands consists of gentlemen of both political parties, and if the amendment is carried it will be all of one party, which is not the way to constitute a canvassing board.

Mr. Loud of Custer: I had no intention of making political question of these things, but I look at it in this light, that as long as all of these different officers will all be on the same ticket, it seems to me to be necessary that they should be canvassed by the same board.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I agree with the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, that they ought not to be of the one party. I know we felt like objecting very forcibly when the apportionment of this Territory was made by one board.

The Clerk read the amendment for the information of the convention.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

The Clerk will read the section as it will be, if amended.

The Clerk read as follows: "7th. That notice of such election for State, county and township officers shall be given by the several counties or county commissioners in the same manner as notices of general elections for delegates to Congress and county officers under the now existing laws of the Territory, and such election shall be conducted and held, and the votes for said officers canvassed in the same manner as provided in Section 5 herein, and the votes for county and township officers shall be canvassed in the same manner as by law provided for county and township officers, and all State, county and township officers, except county treasurers, shall qualify and enter upon the discharge of their duties as such on the first Monday of January following such election, except county treasurer, who shall enter upon the duties of his office on the first Monday in March after such election."

The President: That is the way the section will read as amended in Committee of the Whole and in convention, if the amendment is carried.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: For information I would ask the Clerk to read Section 5.

The Clerk read Section 5 as follows: "Fifth, The votes cast at said election for the adoption or rejection of said constitution shall be canvassed not later than fifteen days after said election, or sooner, if the returns from all of the precincts shall have been received, and in the manner prescribed by the laws of the Territory for Montana for canvassing the votes at general elections in said Territory; and the returns of said election shall be made to the Secretary of the Territory, who, with the Governor and the Chief Justice of the Territory, or a majority of them, shall constitute a Board of Canvassers, who shall meet at the office of the Secretary of the Territory on or before the thirtieth day after the election and canvass the votes so cast and declare the result.

The section as read by the Clerk is with the amendments in Committee of the Whole which have been adopted.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: The amendment here refers to Section 5. I suppose it should be "Ordinance 5".

The President: Yes sir.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment as read by the Clerk, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move the adoption of the proposition as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the proposition as amended be adopted and placed upon its final passage.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: There are several matters on which I would like to ask information in reference to this proposition. Is there any place provided in this ordinance as amended which states when these State officers are to take their offices?

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: That is in the Executive department.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Does that provide when?

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: The first Monday in January after the election. (Reading) "Except that the term of office of those who are elected at the first election shall begin when the State shall be admitted into the Union," &c.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Then, the district officers. Now, these judges are all district judges. If they take office only on the first of January, we may be admitted into the Union on the first of December, and then we would be without courts for a month. There ought to be some provision made. Really, I feel as though this whole thing ought to be committed to a committee and remodeled, and still I think we can cure it.

The President: The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal on the adoption of the proposition.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. E.; Callaway, Cardwell, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Dixon, Durfee, Fields, Gibson, Hatch, Hogan, Kanouse, Kennedy, Maginnis, Marrion, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Muth, Myers, Ramsdell, Robinson, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Warren, Winston, Mr. President—34.

Nays: Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Carpenter, Canby, Chessman, Craven, Eaton, Gillette, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marshall, Mitchell, Reek, Robinson, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—27.

Absent: E. Burns, Gaylord, Rickards, Webster—4.

Paired: Aiken and Sargent, Bullard and Joyes, Graves and Dyer, Baskell and Parberry, Jos. K. Toole and Warren—10.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion to adopt Proposition No. 33 carried.

The President: The proposition will be engrossed and enrolled and referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move to reconsider the vote by which Proposition No. 33 was carried, and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Robinson of Deer Lodge: I desire to be excused from the convention for the day. I feel indisposed.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a division being called, the same was declared carried by a vote of 31 in the affirmative to 26 in the negative.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that we take a recess until eight o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the general file.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Middleton of Custer to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Middleton of Custer in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I move that the committee proceed to the consideration of Proposition No. 36, Article on Public Indebtedness.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read Section 1 of Proposition No. 36.

The Clerk read as follows: "Section 1. Neither the State or any county, city, town, municipality nor other subdivision of the State shall ever give or loan its credit in aid of, or may any donation or grant, by subsidy or otherwise, to any individual association or corporation, or become a subscriber to, or a shareholder in, any company or corporation, or a joint owner with any person, company or corporation, except as to such ownership as may accrue to the State by operation or provision of law."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move to strike out the word "or" in line 1. There is a little mixture of the disjunctive conjunction.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I wish the gentleman from Gallatin would state the reason for striking that out.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: It strikes me it is not grammatical.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 1 the Clerk read Section 2 as follows: "Sec. 2. The Legislative Assembly shall not in any manner create any debt, except by a law which shall be irrevocable until the indebtedness therein provided for shall have been fully paid or discharged; such law shall specify the purpose to which the funds so raised shall be applied and provide for the levy of a tax sufficient to pay the interest on and extinguish the principal of such debt within the time limited by such law for the payment thereof; but no debt or liability shall be created which shall singly or in the aggregate with any existing debt or liability exceed the sum of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), except in case of war, to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, unless the law authorizing the same shall have been submitted to the people at a general election and shall have received a majority of the votes cast for and against it at such election."

There being no amendment to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3 as follows: "Sec. 3. All moneys borrowed by or on behalf of the State shall be used only for the purpose specified in the law authorizing the loan."

There being no amendment to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4 as follows: "Sec. 4. The State shall not assume the debt, or any part thereof, of any county, city, town or municipal corporation."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that in connection with Section 4, the proposition of the gentleman from Custer, Mr. Burleigh, be read and disposed of.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I would state that the matter was reported upon adversely and not put upon the general file at all.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Very well, I withdraw my motion.

There being no amendment to Section 4, the Clerk read Section 5 as follows: "Sec. 5. No county shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner, or for any purpose, to an amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding five (5) per centum of the value of the taxable property therein, to be ascertained by the last assessment for State and county taxes previous to the incurring of such indebtedness, and all bonds or obligations in excess of such amount given by or on behalf of such county shall be void. No county shall incur any indebtedness or liability for any single purpose to an amount exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000), without the approval of a majority of the electors thereof, voting at an election to be held for that purpose."

Mr. Browne of Choteau: I move to strike out all after the word "void" on line 5 of Section 5.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: This matter was discussed fully in committee, and they have thoroughly investigated the propriety of this proposition, and they have unanimously reported the same to the convention. It is a matter which is worth considerable attention on the part of the committee, and it seems to me that some limitation ought to exist in the constitution whereby it would prevent counties from incurring burdensome indebtedness. Now, I think it is right and proper that this should remain—a limitation of this kind—and I trust the committee will so concur.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I don't see how you are going to provide for the ordinary running expenses of a county if you cannot run in debt. Suppose you have a criminal to prosecute.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: This is for one solitary and single appropriation.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: You say that "no county shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose to an amount, including the existing indebtedness in the aggregate exceeding five per centum of the value of the taxable property therein." Now, if you have got up to five per cent and here comes on a term of court and a dozen criminal cases to be prosecuted, they could not incur an expense for that purpose.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I am sorry I have to disagree with the gentleman on this proposition. The last clause provides that it limits the county on any single indebtedness to $10,000. They cannot incur any one single indebtedness at the time for any single purpose in excess of $10,000. Now, if you go on and incur indebtedness for courts, it comes under the head of numerous items—jurors, witnesses and other expenses. They cannot incur any indebtedness for fuel exceeding $10,000, or they cannot buy illuminating oil to amount to more than $10,000.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: If you make that interpretation of it, why, you make a pretty good indebtedness when divided up in that way.

Mr. Kennedy of Missoula: My reason for seconding the amendment of the gentleman from Choteau to strike out all words in the section after the word "void" is just this. We have in the county of Missoula very many places to bridge, and we will in the future probably have to build bridges that will cost $15,000 to $20,000. It is the proposition of the present Board of County Commissioners that if they should ever have to build any bridges across main streams in the future that they will put in stone abutments and iron bridges, which will cost about double what ordinary wooden bridges or combination bridges cost; and we have today in the county of Missoula two bridges that have cost over this amount, one of which cost over this amount—$10,500; one cost $8,178; and when these bridges have to be renewed, which they will probably eight or ten or twelve years from now, with this provision in the constitution such a thing will not be possible without submitting it to the people; and if accidentally one of those bridges should be taken out by a high stretch of water, such as we had two years ago, it would not be possible for a Board of County Commissioners to go on and replace those bridges without submitting the question at a general election to a vote of the people and it would leave it in a very bad condition. Hence, if there is any limitation, it ought to be at least from $20,000 to $25,000.

But I would be in favor of striking this out. We have now a provision with regard to building jails and such improvements as that, when such a thing is necessary. If an Enabling Act cannot be gotten through the Legislature, then the question must be submitted to a vote of the people; but matters of this kind, as I said before, often have to be done in a hurry, particularly after freshets, which we have had in years gone by and are likely to have again; and I think this amendment should prevail and this portion of the section stricken out. Hence, I will vote in favor of it.

Mr. Ramsdell of Missoula: I acknowledge that there is a little inconvenience occasioned by the calamity that the gentleman has just depicted, but at the same time, it seems to me an important matter to allow any County Commissioners to levy a sum exceeding $10,000. The inconvenience may be great, but at the same time the responsibility is far greater, and I believe that it is wise to limit the power of the County Commissioners to this sum. The distribution of money is an important matter with the people, and it will in time give rise to a great deal of jobbery. I know an instance in my own mind where men have been elected as County Commissioners for the sole purpose of furthering some scheme.

The Chairman: If the gentleman will pardon me for a moment, there is an amendment sent up here which would take precedence of the motion to strike out. The gentleman from Yellowstone moves to strike out the words "in figures $10,000" and insert "$15,000" at the end of line 6.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: It seems to me that $10,000 is quite large enough and that we ought to be very careful in this matter. We are limiting their power to create debts to five per cent of the taxable value, and there is danger of this thing running astray. I think this limitation that is placed upon it is quite large enough. It is a simple matter to be submitted to the people, and I hope that the amendment will not prevail.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: That was just the proposition which I wanted to state, that if there was any larger amounts required by the counties for the public affairs, and if the people are desirous of contracting the additional indebtedness, there will be no difficulty at all in obtaining the consent of the people to an increased indebtedness or liability. Now, $10,000 for any County Commissioners to expend upon any single item is ample and sufficient, and they ought to be limited to that amount. My own idea is that I should reduce it.

The Chairman: The amendment to strike out the words "in figures $10,000" and insert "$15,000" is now before the committee.

The Chair put the question on the said motion to strike out $10,000 and insert $15,000, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Chairman: The question now recurs upon the amendment of the gentleman from Choteau, to strike out all of the section after the word "void" in line 5.

The Chair put the question on the motion to strike out, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to Section 5, the Clerk read Section 6 as follows: "Sec. 6. No city, town, township or school district shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner, or for any purpose, to an amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding three (3) per centum of the value of the taxable property therein, to be ascertained by the last assessment for State and county taxes previous to the incurring of such indebtedness, and all bonds or obligations in excess of such amount shall be void, provided, however, that the Legislative Assembly may authorize municipal corporations to incur such indebtedness as may be necessary to procure an ample supply of water for such municipality which shall own and control said water supply and devote the revenues derived therefrom to the payment of the debt."

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move that when the committee rise they report back the proposition with the recommendation on that it do pass.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Beaverhead, Mr. Witter, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

• Mr. Eaton of Park: I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Eaton, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 36 and report the same back with but one amendment in line 1 of Section 1, striking out the word "or"; and with that amendment recommend that it do pass.

The President: Gentlemen of the convention, you have heard the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, with the amendment reported. If there be no objection, the rules will be suspended, and considered and placed upon its final passage.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 38.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: Let us get through with this proposition first.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I withdraw the motion.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move that Proposition No. 36 be placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Gallatin, Mr. Luce, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section one by striking out the word "or" on line one.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend by striking out the word "or" where it occurs in line one and inserting "nor", and strike out "nor" where it occurs in line one and insert "or".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Carpenter, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The gentleman from Choteau moves to amend by adding to Section 6 the words "or system of sewerage".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

The Clerk read the latter part of the section six as proposed to be amended: "Provided, however, that the Legislative Assembly may authorize municipal corporations to incur such indebtedness as may be necessary to procure an ample supply or system of sewerage for such municipality which shall own and control said water supply and devote the revenues derived therefrom to the payment of the debt."

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Choteau, Mr. Conrad, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The motion to place the proposition No. 36 upon its final passage has been carried. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll on the adoption of Proposition No. 36.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes, Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Browne, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Cardwell, Cauby, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Eaton, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joy, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rotwitt, Schmidt, Stapleton, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—55.

Nays: Knowles and Warren—2.

Absent: Buillard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Burns, E.; Callaway, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Joyes, Maginnis, Muth, Reck, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Jos. K. Toole, J. R. Toole, Webster--18.

The Chair announced the vote and declared Proposition No. 36 adopted as a part of the Constitution of the State of Montana.

The proposition was sent to the Enrolling Committee to be enrolled.

Mr. Joy of Park: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of proposition No. 26.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Park, Mr. Joy, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Joy of Park to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Mr. Joy of Park in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read section one of Proposition No. 26.

The Clerk read as follows: "Section 1. The water of every natural stream not heretofore appropriated within the State of Montana is hereby declared to be the property of the public; and the same is dedicated to the use of the people of the State, subject to appropriation as hereinafter provided."

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Meagher, Mr. Kanouse, offers the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: "Substitute for section 1: All unappropriated waters within the State are declared to be public property and subject to appropriation pursuant to law."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the substitute.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the question.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: The amendment there is in accordance with the ideas expressed in section one of the proposition as printed; but the language used in the original section, it seems to me, does not comprehend all that should be included in the provision there. For instance, the language "the waters of every natural stream," would not include the waters of lakes or springs. I understand that in connection with the proposition of supplying Helena with water somebody had suggested the bringing of a stream from some lake that has been discovered up in the mountains. Now, under the provision of section 1, the waters of such lake could not be appropriated; it could not be public use such as would be the case with every natural stream; and in the latter part of the section it declares that such waters are "subject to appropriation as hereinafter provided." Now, I undertake to say that this is a mistake; that it is not hereinafter provided as to the manner in which streams may be appropriated. That is provided for on page 995 of the Statutes of Montana, which provides for the posting of notice and for the construction of works. Now, this does not propose to do anything of that kind, and in that respect the language used there is not proper. I don't think that anything of that kind was intended. It seems to me that the language of the amendment is concise, and covers perhaps all that was intended to be covered by the Committee having this proposition in charge, and it not only covers it all but it goes further in the matter of including all waters within the State which may be devoted or appropriated to beneficial uses.

The Chair put the question on the Substitute offered by the gentleman from Meagher, Mr. Kanouse, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move to amend the substitute by striking out the word "unappropriated" on the first line and after the first sentence; so that it will read "All waters within the State are declared to be public property."

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: It appears to me that we are making a mistake in the wording of that; it appears to me that the wording should be "unappropriated waters". It appears to me that we are excluding from this section unappropriated waters. Now, we are declaring that all waters within the State should be public property, and we all know that a considerable portion of the waters of Montana has been appropriated as private property, and therefore this Convention has no right to change the ownership of that. Therefore, I would suggest that an amendment of that kind be made to say "that all unappropriated waters of Montana Territory" &c.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I think that is all right, except that there should be another proviso, and it should be this—interrupted.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I would suggest to the gentleman that that is the language of the substitute which has been adopted, so that it will include not only unappropriated, but also waters, which might heretofore have been appropriated, and it seems to me that that is the only question to consider in connection with the amendment that is offered to the substitute of the gentleman from Cascade, is whether or not the striking out of that word would not interfere with vested rights, by making subject to appropriation to be made hereafter, waters which are already appropriated. It seems to me we should proceed very cautiously in that matter. Inasmuch as I am not clear upon it, I am rather opposed to the amendment.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would ask the gentleman who offered the amendment, if his amendment prevailed, if it would not make springs upon private lands subject to appropriation, if not in use by the owners thereof. I believe that the general doctrine of law has been that springs belonging to the land were not subject to appropriation. If the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade should prevail, I am afraid that the springs themselves would become subject to appropriation under the section as it would then stand.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade will not prevail, because we would not own the water in our own wells. I undertake to say that a water right, or a right to use water is just as much property as is a horse for instance, and it would be just about as consistent for us to declare in this Constitution that every horse in the State should be the property of the State. This is a very sweeping amendment. It includes the right—the private right of parties to use water, and that property is declared, if this is carried, to be the property of the State. Certainly we do not mean anything of that kind, and I trust that this amendment will not prevail.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: If this amendment had emanated from that distinguished person, Henry George, or Dennis Kearney, I would not have been surprised, but to emanate from a gentleman, a citizen of Montana, identified with her interests, who proposes here by a dozen words to annihilate one-sixth or one-seventh of the property interest in this Territory, I am certainly very much astonished. It would be just as consistent to offer an amendment taking from him his bank stock, his bank account, and the cash behind his counter. Why, as I said before, one-sixth or one-seventh of the property of this Territory is in water ditches &c., and these rights are vested rights, and I hope his amendment will not, and I don't think it will, prevail.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I believe that all waters within the State have heretofore been declared to be public property. Now, I may be mistaken about that; but something was said about it in the Article on Preamble and Bill of Rights, and I think Mr. Toole introduced a proposition, which was copied from the California constitution, declaring that all waters in the State shall be of public use. Now, in a country like this, I hold that the State or the county or the public should have the control of the water for manufacturing and irrigating and mining purposes; that no one man or body of men should have the power to appropriate water, whether it is done before or after this time, and not use it for beneficial purposes when his neighbors want it. Certainly water that has heretofore been appropriated, under the laws of Montana cannot be taken away. You cannot take away one single, solitary, vested right of any individual in Montana, who has heretofore appropriated its waters by law. But I do say that if any other man who has heretofore appropriated the waters of Montana or any corporation, should be subject to the public right, that the law should control that right so far as it can, and that man should not be allowed the exclusive use of that water for a purpose that is not beneficial, or for wasteful purposes or for any other purpose that is detrimental, or that he should not be allowed to use it at all. We can as well declare that the waters heretofore appropriated are public property, as to declare that the waters to be hereafter appropriated are public property. There is not a single bit of difference in the two propositions. The water of Montana and of all arid countries should be public property, and if you so declare it you don't take away a single interest that a man may have in the water heretofore appropriated; but you to provide that if he has a great amount of water that he must use it; that the public has control of it and must legislate upon it. That is the main idea and I believe it is a good one. Section 15 of the Preamble and Bill of Rights provides as follows: "The use of all water now appropriated or that may hereafter be appropriated for sale, rental, or distribution or other beneficial use, and the right of way over the lands of others for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals and aqueducts necessary to use in connection therewith, as well as sites for reservoirs necessary for collecting, and storing the same shall be held to be public use." Now, there was no one that lifted up their hands in holy horror when that law passed, and that is almost the proposition that I submit to the Convention now, and I believe it is right. It is right from this foundation. It cannot be long under existing circumstances in this country, and I believe that the gentleman from Custer will coincide with me, as he has heretofore, and I believe he will now on this proposition. The intent of my amendment is already incorporated in this Constitution.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I submit to every lawyer that the intent of the gentleman's resolution is not incorporated in the Constitution at any place. The proposition incorporated in the Constitution arose upon the question as to whether the State has the right to say that private property can be taken for private use, and upon that proposition the amendment of Mr. Toole was introduced making all ditches a public use instead of a private use—simply declaring the distinction between a public and private use. It does not declare that all water taken by private individuals shall be public; it only declares that it shall be of public use, in order that a private individual may take out a private ditch and a right of way. That is the distinction. There is no where in the Constitution, so far as I know any provision which says that all of the waters of the territory shall be public waters, but all ditches whether public or private shall be considered in that respect as ditches for public use only.

The Chairman: The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I move to amend by moving that when this Committee rise they report Proposition No. 26 back with the recommendation that it be laid on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I see no reason why this Constitutional Convention should deal with this matter now. It is a grave and conflicted question. I can foresee that it is a matter that involves some of the permanent interests in the coming State of Montana, and I don't think it ought to be disposed of in this short bill such as this is here, that would make any iron clad provision for the future disposition of the waters of the coming State of Montana. It occurs to me that the Legislature of the coming State should be amply qualified to deal with this matter and to deal with it at length and in detail, and why we should occupy our time here now in incorporating any provision relating to it in the Constitution I don't understand. It occurs to me the proper thing to do is to relegate the whole matter to the future legislatures of the State, and as the wants of the people change, that we have better and more definite ideas of what is necessary in this matter, the legislature can unquestionably, it seems to me attend to it better than we can now. For that reason I make the motion.

Mr. Eaton of Park: In support of the motion of the gentleman from Deer Lodge, I would say that the committee on mining, water and water rights had this general subject under consideration, and if there was any report to be made, they should have made it, especially in view of the fact that that was before the committee on irrigation was appointed. But in considering the subject in all its phases it was decided that it was entirely a matter of legislation, and they were guided by experience which perhaps does not pertain to our deliberation. But as a matter of fact in the convention of 1884 this subject was made the matter of a rather exhaustive report from that same committee. They incorporated this and much more similar matter, and that convention, after much deliberation—I think it took two or three days—finally erased the whole matter and considered it to be the proper subject of legislation. And with that idea then expressed and as has been expressed on this floor, I heartily concur and I am in favor of the motion that when this committee rise it report back the matter with the recommendation that it be laid on the table.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Mr. Chairman, there is a great deal in this proposition 26 that should receive our consideration. Now, the proposition to declare all the waters of the State public property is a very important one. Why, so far as the appropriations that have already been made, it would hardly be a proper constitutional provision. The rights that men have to water that they have already appropriated are really guaranteed to them by an act of Congress. It is a grant to them of this right of water—"All water rights that are recognized by the laws and customs and decisions of the courts", I believe is the language of a provision of the law of the United States—"shall be recognized." And it is under the provisions of that statute that we have appropriated waters and that that right has been recognized as valid as against the sale of land over which the waters were accustomed to flow. But the declaration that all the appropriated waters shall belong to the public is a very important matter. Now, it will be remembered that I requested that this memorial that the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Major Maginnis, had referred to a committee to make a report upon, should not prevail, and that it should be re-committed. In the conversation that I had with this Congressional Irrigation Committee, I pointed out then the trouble that existed in relation to our controlling in the State the unappropriated waters in the State; that these waters had their sources in the mountains; that these mountains were unsurveyed; that the government of the United States had the title to that property; that we in our constitution here had disclaimed all right or title to the lands belonging to the United States or to any Indian or Indian tribes, and the term "land" as defined by the laws of the land included the water flowing over those lands; and when lands were sold over which water was accustomed to flow, and that water had not been diverted by appropriation in accordance with this act of Congress, that they probably would obtain title to it—that is, the government of the United States, by virtue of the term "lands," entitled to this water, that they would convey it to the parties to whom they gave a patent to the land. Senator Stewart took issue and claimed that the courts should ignore the old rule and that the courts themselves should decide that these waters were public property and that the decision that was made in California against Mr. Haggin should not prevail. Now, that requires a court to go to work to make laws, and the other gentlemen thought that the best thing that could be done about that was for this constitutional convention upon that subject to memorialize Congress and have Congress either grant to the States these waters or declare that the appropriation and use of those waters should be subject to legislative control; that the manner of the use, and the very proposition that Senator Stewart was contending for, that the large appropriation of water by one individual or a company of individuals, should not prevail; that there could be made provisions of law by which the owners of land could take up this water and divert it. But here were the laws of the United States upon this subject, and here was the fact that these waters being in the mountains—having their source in the mountains—that we could not control them. And Major Powell, who has this irrigation matter very much at heart saw the force of that and afterwards spoke to me about it; and they all thought that there should be some move in the new States that were being formed where irrigation prevailed, to get possession of these waters, or control of them in some way, so that by legislation we could control the use. And that is the reason that I believe that so far as saying that these waters are public, to be used only as provided by law, is a proper provision, provided we can get some action of Congress on this subject, to really facilitate that matter, to turn over the control and appropriation and use of these waters entirely to the State. There is in the grant of appropriation of waters at this time it must be in accordance with the—may be it is local rule or custom—decisions of the courts. Now, if we can establish here a different rule as to appropriation and use, we may be able to control it to some extent, being under the statute of Congress; and I believe that we had better leave that matter in there. The same provision, in almost the same terms, is in the Colorado constitution. I think that the proposition that was made by the gentleman from Meagher that this use of the water should be in accordance with law, is a very proper one, and then strike out the next section—"The right to divert and appropriate the waters to any use shall never be denied. Priority of appropriation will give the better right to those using the water." Now, the statutes of the Territory provide for that anyhow, but if we put this provision in here we put that beyond legislation; we cannot control it by legislation. And strike that out saying that these waters shall be public waters and subject to law. Then the legislature may provide for the use of these waters and how they shall be used, and may establish means of dividing up the water for irrigation and so that one party shall not have an excess of water and allow water to run to waste, and all such matters as that. That is as to future appropriation. Past appropriations cannot be affected by this Constitution. They have their grant from the government of the United States and except for a public use where they are condemned and damages paid, the State ought not to have the right to take those waters. And in relation to section 3, that is very much the same thing that we have put in our bill of rights. But still that in the bill of rights was a sort of limitation upon the power of the State rather than granting the power to the legislative authority of the State, while this section 3 is a grant of legislative authority to the State and is positive in its terms. Generally a bill of rights is a limitation upon powers rather than a grant of powers. Here this is a grant of powers, and I believe that ought to stand. This public use referred to by the gentleman from Cascade does not apply to water; that is across the land of others to irrigate—for irrigation ditches—and we declare that to be a public use; and I may say that Senator Stewart fully coincided with that. He thought that was just the thing to do, (to decide that it was a public use. In relation to this last section he said that they had that in the California constitution. I did not remember of seeing it in the California constitution; it may be there. They have it in the Colorado constitution; and he said they had had trouble in California upon this subject; that the courts had held that this was not an unlimited power so much so that they could make regulations that would confiscate a man's property, but that those regulations would be determined to be reasonable regulations such as would not confiscate a man's property. Now, if that regulation is put upon it, I am inclined to think that is proper. Some time ago in this convention there were gentlemen who were very urgent about this matter, and that the county commissioners should regulate these matters and prevent capitalists from appropriating large amounts of water and making the men on the line of their ditches serfs; and a good many of them talked a good deal about that subject. Now, I believe if you say that these county commissioners can make reasonable regulations on that subject, it is what we want; and then let the courts say what are reasonable regulations. But if you allow men with these large ditches, and digging out these large quantities of water, which they are doing all the time, and taking it out upon this arable land, then just as the gentlemen say, they make these men serfs. What the gentlemen that were standing with me wanted to do was to try to facilitate this irrigation by putting a small amount of tax upon these ditch men and saying that it should only be upon the income, upon what was the reasonable income, and then going right, to the county commissioners to regulate the use of this water, so that these parties would not be serfs. I am not sure that the gentleman from Park voted against that proposition. We wanted to put it on the ground that we were trying to make nabobs out of the men who constructed irrigating ditches and make the men that owned the land serfs. Now, I am in favor of putting that in here, that the county commissioners shall regulate the sale of water, and I believe that that is the way it ought to be. Just as the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Major Maginnis, said about that matter, it was a tribunal that was near the people; it was not away from the people. And you will remember, Major Powell spoke here about having water courts to determine about the use of the water. Well, now, the county commissioners having the power to determine what was reasonable on this matter is a sort of special tribunal, a special court, to determine that matter; and I believe that it is a good place to have that power deposited—with the county commissioners—men that are elected by the people. And I do hope that the gentlemen who were so much afraid of exempting ditches from taxation—gentlemen here who are trying to build up the country and wanting it so that there could not be a monopoly of water, when these matters can be regulated by the county commissioners, will certainly vote to put this matter in.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I would like to see the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Deer Lodge, Mr. Robinson, on water rights—in regard to priority of rights—considered in connection with this.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: Judge Knowles fully covered the ground I intended to make, and that is that Colorado is cited as authority on irrigation. The laws are considered in advance of any other State or Territory. We carefully considered the constitution of Colorado, Nevada and other States that have both systems of irrigation, and decided that it was wise to introduce this in our constitution. It is almost identical with the constitution of Colorado, and I think we would make a great mistake and take one step backward if we fail to adopt this about as it came from the committee.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: If the remarks of my friend from Silver Bow county relate to Silver Bow county, whatever he said I endorse; but I fail to appreciate the application of his logical remarks. It reminded me of a story I heard down in Pennsylvania. When Carter and Governor Somebody were down there speaking in the campaign of 1856 after they had been speaking a long while a fellow drove up with a keg of whiskey; finally the crowd commenced getting up and walking off, and there was one man left sitting on a pine stump opposite Carter, and another one with his head between his legs; and finally the fellow with his head between his legs pulled himself up and he said "I wonder what the H—— that man is talking about; he seems to be an honest man." And that's the way it is with my friend from Silver Bow. How, if I can get into my head the essence of what the gentleman said I think I can endorse it. It seems to me he ought to come to the point and let us know what we are voting on.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I am in something of the same condition as my friend from Custer. I listened to the remarks of my friend from Silver Bow very attentively, as I usually do, but I certainly could not see the point the gentleman was trying to make, and it seems to me it simmers down to this proposition: If the title to that land is in the United States Government, any action we take now does not invalidate that title or give us any better title. If it is not in the government of the United States, then I believe it should be in the hands of the legislature.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Suppose we memorialize Congress and ask for this water.

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: It seems to me that the single, plain proposition is: Is this title in the United States? If it is, any action we may take here is void; if it is not, then I say it is safe to leave it in the hands of the legislature. If it requires a memorial to Congress, I say, let us memorialize Congress; if we don't do it now, let the legislature memorialize Congress. But I certainly don't see if we have any right to these waters at all that we should go ahead and make any provision in this constitution that we may be sorry for, and for that reason I make the motion I do, notwithstanding the fact that this may all be in the constitution of Colorado, or any other State. It seems to me a plain proposition. If the State of Montana is entitled to this water, we can deal with it; if we have not the title to it and it is in the government of the United States, then let us memorialize Congress or petition Congress for further time. It occurs to me now, that any steps we may take here are simply a waste of time and a useless encumbrance of the constitution.

The Chairman: The Chair will state to the gentleman from Meagher County that the proposition he referred to was placed on file with the main report of the committee on water rights. The question is now on the amendment to the amendment, that when the committee rise it report back Proposition No. 26 with the recommendation that it be laid on the table.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I hope that the motion will carry. We have already provided in Section 15 of our article on preamble and Bill of Rights all that is necessary to provide or to say in the matter of water or water rights, and this section if anything is solely legislation. Now, Section 2 of this article the gentleman from Silver Bow himself says should be stricken out. Section 3 is identical with Section 15 of the Preamble and Bill of Rights, which says that the use and right of way over the land of others for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals, etc., shall be a public use," and that covers particularly and fully Section 3. And it being a public use the Legislature has full power and authority to legislate in any manner it may see fit in the matter. Now, Section 4 is entirely legislation. Now, according to my notion, if the Legislature hereafter should provide some law, according to the suggestion of Major Powell or Senator Stewart, and provide special officers for the purpose of making regulations and distributing this water, then this Section 4 would forever be a bar to that. I believe that the Board of County Commissioners of our great counties—counties extending over many valleys, over many rivers, over many streams, with diversified interests—should not be the persons who are to be selected to make rules and regulations for the distribution of all the waters of their large counties. I think the Legislature should have the power at least to provide for particular officers to regulate particular irrigation districts. If you adopt this legislation in Section 4 you forever bind the hands of the Legislature. I believe that the motion to defer this whole matter should carry, simply because we have adopted all the fundamental law on the matter that we can adopt, in our Bill of Rights. All the rest is simply surplusage. If you don't add anything, the Legislature has full power and authority to do anything it pleases.

The Chair put the question on the amendment to the amendment, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I now move that the committee rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Joy of Park: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 26, General File No. 25, Article on Irrigation, and beg leave to report back the same to the convention with the recommendation that it be laid on the table.

The President: You have heard the report of the committee. What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge: I move the adoption of the report of the committee.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead called for the ayes and nays.

The President: If there be no objection, the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Dixon, Durfee, Eaton, Gibson, Goddard, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hogan, Joy, Joyes, Knippenberg, Loud, Mayger, Middleton, Ramsdell, Rotwill, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Winston, Mr. President—32.

Nays: Buford, Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Gillette, Graves, Hershfield, Hobson, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knowles, Kohrs, Luce, Marrion, Marshall, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Schmidt, Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—28.

Absent: Brazleton, Bullard, Burns, E.; Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Maginnis, McAdow, Muth, Reek, Robinson, Rickards, Sargent, Toole, J. K.; Webster—15.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that the convention do now adjourn. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I wish to give notice that on tomorrow or some subsequent day I will move to reconsider the vote by which the report of the Committee of the Whole was adopted.

The Chair put the question on the motion to adjourn, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Adjourned until Wednesday, August 14th, 1889, at 10 A. M.

THIRTY-FOURTH DAY.

Wednesday, August 14th, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Stapleton of Silver Bow: Mr. Dixon has returned home on account of the sickness of one of his children. I ask that he be excused until such time as he returns.

The President: The gentleman will be excused until he returns, if there be no objection.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow asked that the Chair might rule on the question as to whether a minority of the convention could pass any ordinances whatever. Mr. Warren said that it was his understanding that it required a majority of the convention to pass any ordinance.

The President: To which resolution does the gentleman refer?

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: More particularly to the one unseating the county officers.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I would ask for the reading of the rule of the convention which requires a majority.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: The reason that we would like to get a ruling of the Chair on this matter is that we notice in the reports from the other conventions in the other territories that unless a majority of the convention voted for a proposition to be inserted in the constitution, they held that such propositions were not carried and could not be inserted in the constitution; and if their rules are similar to ours, we want to know.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I would ask the gentleman if their rules are similar to ours?

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: We have a right to presume that they are.

The President: The Chair will take the matter under advisement and render a decision in due time.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: It would perhaps be a matter of wisdom to decide the matter today. If the Chair rules that it requires a majority of the convention to pass an ordinance, we would want to move to reconsider.

The President: The Chair will endeavor to look into the matter very soon. There being no Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, the Chair will appoint Mr. Kerr to fill that position until he is required as a Clerk. His services are not particularly needed in that direction at present. The Chair has a communication from the librarian which will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Helena, Mont., August 13, 1889.

"Hon. W. A. Clark, President Constitutional Convention, Helena, Mont.

"Dear Sir: This society would like to keep and preserve the photographs of the members of the historic convention over which you preside. The artist says he will furnish, duly mounted and framed, cabinet-sized pictures of the members of the convention for $15, and the officers of the convention in proportion. This would cost 20 cents each. If the gentlemen of the convention will furnish their likenesses as above described, I will arrange in pamphlet form the biographical sketch of each as published in the Helena papers for reference and preserve them with the photographs.

"Very respectfully,

" Signed

WILLIAM F. WHEELER, Librarian."

The President: The Chair wishes to call attention to this matter and no doubt the members will gratify the librarian, as it is a matter of historical interest, as the librarian suggests, and it is hoped the members will so consider it and act accordingly.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: Mr. President, the Committee on Apportionment and Representation is ready to report, and all but two of the committee have signed the report, and one or two are absent. We will present the report before the forenoon session is ended.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: It is about time this committee made its report and these copies were printed, instead of waiting till the end of this convention. I would like to have the report printed, and I make that motion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I would ask if there is any report before the convention.

The President: There is no report before the convention yet.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: We will be prepared to make a report during the forenoon.

Mr. Hershfield: As I understand it, the request of the gentleman from Silver Bow was to instruct this committee to send it to the printing committee.

The President: The Chair did not so understand the motion.

Mr. Eaton of Park: For information, I would like to ask what report, if any, the Chairman of the Committee on Apportionment did make this morning. Yesterday he asked time or said in substance that that committee would be able to report this morning. I think he was on his feet this morning, but I did not hear what he said.

The President: The Chairman of the committee stated that the report was signed by all but two members, and that he would report during the morning session.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke sent up a resolution which the Clerk read as follows: Proposition relating to the constitution. Upon all questions submitted to the vote of the taxpayers of the State or any political division thereof, women who are taxpayers and possessed of the qualifications for the right of suffrage required of men by this constitution, shall, equally with men, have the right to vote.

The President: This will be received and referred to the Committee on Suffrage, if there be no objection.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I would like to ask the Chairman of the special committee appointed to consider and report on the memorial presented here the other day, about what time we may expect a report.

The President: Will the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, the Chairman of that committee, give the gentleman the information requested?

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I do not think that is in order now.

The President: The point of order is well taken. The order of select committees has been passed.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that that memorial be taken up from that committee and another special committee appointed who will report.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It has been moved and seconded that the special or select committee to which was referred the Warren memorial in relation to the taxation or duties upon imported lead ores, be taken from the committee which was appointed to consider it and another committee appointed.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: Governor Carpenter, at divers and sundry times, has requested the committee to meet. This matter can be voted on in five minutes as soon as the committee can be got together.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I have an amendment to offer. I move that the committee be instructed by this convention to report their action on the memorial at the morning session tomorrow morning.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I accept the amendment.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I trust no such action is intended as a reflection on that committee. Governor Carpenter, who is one of the most diligent, able and earnest members of the convention, is at the head of that committee and undoubtedly will prepare that report and offer it in due time. Mr. Stapleton also is on that committee, and I know that the committee will act as soon as it is possible for them to do so.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move that the motion just made be laid on the table.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: If I may be allowed to suggest, I would suggest that in order to prevent the interruption of the work of the convention, a dose of soothing syrup be administered to the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I wish simply to say that we intended to have met yesterday, but some of the members of the committee got out of the house before the committee got together. We intended to have met after the morning session today, and hope to report this afternoon, unless somebody should object to a report being made on account of its not being in order.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I had no thought whatsoever of reflecting on the action of the committee in not reporting, but you are aware, sir, that the days are drawing very near when we will adjourn, and I for one want to see some action taken upon this memorial. I therefore want it brought before the convention at a time when it can be considered; but after the explanation of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, with the consent of my second, I will withdraw my motion.

The President: The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I would like to inquire whether the article on schedule has been considered.

The President: The Chair would inform the gentlemen that it has not.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move then, sir, that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of general orders.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke in the Chair.

The Committee was called to order.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move we take up Proposition No. 38. The motion was seconded.

The Chairman: If there be no objection, the committee will take up Proposition No. 38.

The Clerk read Section 1 as follows:

Section 1. All laws enacted by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Montana and in force at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union and not inconsistent with this constitution or the constitution or laws of the United States of America shall be and remain in full force as the laws of the State until altered or repealed or until they expire by their own limitation; Provided, That wherever in said laws the words "Territory" or "Territory of Montana" occur, the words "State" or "State of Montana" shall be appropriately substituted and read therefor. And provided further that the duties which now by law devolve upon Probate Judges as Jury Commissioners and in relation to issuing marriage licenses and filing and recording marriage certificates and the duties as ex-officio clerks of their own courts shall, until otherwise provided by law, devolve upon and be performed by the Clerks of District Courts in their respective counties. And provided, further, That the duties of Probate Judges now imposed by law relative to townsites and to the approval of bonds of other county officers shall, until otherwise provided by law, be performed by the District Judges in the several counties in their respective districts.

There being no amendment to Section 1, the Clerk read Section 2, as follows: Sec. 2. All lawful orders, judgments and decrees in civil causes, all contracts and claims and all lawful convictions, judgments and sentences in criminal actions, made and entered, or pronounced by the courts within the Territory of Montana, and in force at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union, shall continue and be and remain in full force in the State unaffected in any respect by the change from a Territorial to a State form of government, and may be enforced and executed under the laws of the State.

There being no amendment to Section 2, the Clerk read Section 3, as follows:

Section 3. No crime or criminal offense committed against the laws of the Territory of Montana shall abate or be in any wise affected by reason of the change from a Territorial to a State form of government, but the same shall be deemed and taken to be an offense against the laws of the State, and the appropriate courts of the State shall have jurisdiction over and to hear and determine the same. Provided, That this section shall not in any wise be construed to change the laws of the statute of limitations or the due effect or application of the same.

There being no amendments to Section 3, the Clerk read Section 4, as follows:

Section 4. Except as herein otherwise provided the word "District" shall be substituted and read in lieu of the word "Probate" in the terms "Probate Court" or "Probate Judge" wherever the same occur in the laws of the Territory of Montana and all said laws which by their terms apply to Probate Courts or Probate Judges shall upon a change from Territorial to State Government be deemed and taken to apply to District Courts and District Judges. Provided, That all laws allowing fees to Probate Judges are hereby repealed.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would suggest that at the end of Section 4 there should be inserted a clause providing that the terms of the Probate Court, or the terms of the District Court, shall be as provided in this constitution, because this section as it appears to be here would make the terms of the District Courts conform to the terms of the Probate Court as now established by law.

The Chairman: Will the gentleman please send up his amendment in writing?

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: As soon as Section 2 was passed, I noticed something here omitted, and that is in relation to processes issued in the courts. It reads: "All lawful orders, judgments and decrees in civil causes," etc. I think the word "processes" should be inserted after the word "decrees" in the first line.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Section 9 covers it.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I think there is something in the suggestion of the gentleman from Yellowstone.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: (Reading proposed amendment) "And provided further that the terms of the District Court shall be as in this constitution provided."

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: There is no provision in this constitution.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Yes sir; if you will refer to the report of the Judiciary Committee, the courts have a right to fix the terms, and it is provided that they shall not hold less than four terms of court.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: The district court shall be always open.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: And in other counties it shall not be less than four terms per year, in each county.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Missoula offers the following amendment: Insert after the word "shall" in line four, Section four, the words, "except as in this constitution otherwise provided".

Mr. J. R. Toole of Deer Lodge moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: The first five words of Section 4 I think cover it—"Except as otherwise provided," etc. Then follows the language of the section. We have otherwise provided in the Judicial Article, Section 17. "The district court in each county, which is a judicial district by itself, shall be always open for the transaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days. In districts where two or more counties are united, until otherwise provided by law, the district judges shall fix the terms of court, provided that there shall be at least four terms a year held in each county." And where it is otherwise provided, the laws of the State, or the laws that now exist which were adopted by the State, will have to conform to the provisions of this constitution. My opinion is that this is a matter which is sought to be interjected here as simply surplusage.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would say that my amendment was offered for the purpose of making the section certain and providing against that provision of the probate law which provides that the terms of the Probate Court shall be held at certain times. The constitution, according to the report of the Judiciary Committee, which has been adopted, provides that the Probate Court is to be done away with, and in order that there may be no uncertainty in regard to this matter, I think it would be essential that we should put these words in where I have offered them, after the first word "shall" in line four of Section four. The words "except as herein otherwise provided" would possibly limit the whole section; but if there should be any question or any doubt about that matter, the inserting of those words after the word "shall" in line four will make it beyond any controversy that the Probate law as it now stands will not be held to apply to district courts as established by the Judiciary Committee, and we will then have the terms of court as established by the Judiciary Committee. Otherwise it might be construed that the District Court could be compelled to hold sessions in all these counties where there is more than one county in a district; that they shall be compelled to hold their sessions at certain times. That would make it utterly impossible for the District Judge to be present in each of the counties at the commencement of the term of court, and would result in a great deal of inconvenience.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I think that this will have a tendency to put this matter beyond question, and it ought to be in here. There might be somebody else that would raise the same question about this matter that the gentleman from Missoula has, and I think it ought to be put in here, so as to put it beyond doubt.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section four, the Clerk read Section five, as follows:

Section 5. Clerks of District Courts until otherwise provided by law shall each perform the duties and be entitled to the same fees as now provided by law for Clerk of the District Court of the Territory, and until otherwise provided by law, shall also perform the services and be entitled to fees therefor that are now provided for Clerks of Probate Courts.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield) proposes to strike out in third line after the word "services" up to the word "that" in line four. Also to strike out the words "provided for" in line four, and insert the words "applicable to".

Mr. Collins of Cascade moved the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: How would the section read when amended?

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: It will read as follows: Clerks of District Courts until otherwise provided by law shall each perform the duties and be entitled to the same fees as now provided by law for Clerk of the District Court of the Territory, and until otherwise provided by law, shall also perform the services that are now applicable to the Clerks of Probate Courts.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: You strike out the word "fees".

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: That is just the object. So that the Clerk of the District Courts shall not receive the fees of the Probate Courts.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: But he doesn't receive the fees. The Clerk of the District Court will receive say five dollars for bringing a suit; then he would receive $2.50 for a judgment. But in the Probate Court there are fees for filing an application to be appointed administrator, and for posting notices for applications for administrator, and a great many services of that kind, in minutia—small fees, some of them only 15 cents. Now, if you strike out all of those fees you require a Clerk of the District Court to do all of those things that are to be done by the Clerk of the Probate Court for nothing. He gets only fees for bringing suits in the District Court. That is all the fees he would get, and yet he is required to perform all of the services that are now performed by the Clerk of the Probate Court, which are very many—ninetenths of the business of the District Court. It would be a great hardship, and really a great outrage, to require a Clerk to perform all those duties without any compensation whatever.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Don't you think that the Legislature will provide for the necessary fees—the first Legislature that will meet—and I don't think it is right that Clerks of the court shall be receiving double fees. Our District Judges don't receive the additional fees that the Probate Court Judges receive, and I don't see why we should make any distinction in reference to these Clerks. The salaries and fees of the Clerks of the District Court are sufficient for any person that is capable of performing the duties, and add to that the fees which he would derive from the services of the Probate Clerk and it would be entirely beyond the merits of the Clerk.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I agree fully with the gentleman from Silver Bow County in regard to this question of fees for the Clerk of the Court. The Clerk has a salary and certain fees now for transacting business in the District Court. The Probate Court is abolished and the duties are all shifted over upon the Clerk of the District Court; and while this strikes out the salary provided by law—such salary as there may be for the Clerk of the Probate Court—it is no more than right that the fees which attend that part of the administration of probate matters should be continued. Our Clerks are poorly enough paid now for the services they have to perform, and to saddle upon them all the duties of probate matters in addition, it seems to me would be a great act of injustice to them, and I for one cannot consent to it.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I wish to call the attention of the gentleman to this fact, and that is, that there is a Clerk for each county, and yet he speaks about exorbitant fees. Now, in this county, why, of course the fees for the Clerk of the Court, being Clerk of the Probate Court as well, will be pretty large. But then I would like to have the gentleman understand the situation of affairs outside of this county and consider a county like Dawson or Fergus or Cascade or Choteau. Why, taking all of these fees that will be provided by law, the Clerk will get a very small compensation. The amount of business is not very large. Now, the gentleman speaks about the Judges. Why, we had three Judges to perform all of the duties of the District Courts of the Territory; they had Clerks that were appointed for their districts; but now we have eight District Judges, and we give them $3500, while the other Judges only got $3,000 and their traveling expenses, as provided by the Legislature; and these Judges will perform no Supreme Court duties at all; so that it is not fair to make a comparison of this matter; and yet in two or three of the counties under the present fees the Clerks' fees will be pretty good, but except in about three counties of the Territories the fees of the Clerks of the District Courts will not be very good fees. The office is now a small office, and heretofore the Deputy Clerks of the District Courts have frequently had to get somebody to perform the duties because they had other business; they didn't stay in their offices all the time. I know in one or two counties that is the case, that the Clerk of the District Court was a person who had other duties to perform than those of Clerk of the District Court. Well, now, it is quite essential to have a man who will attend exclusively to the duties of the office of Clerk: that he will be in his office, so that when any person has any business to transact with the Clerk of the Court—the Clerk of the Probate Court, and so on—they will find him there in his office that will be provided by law for him to hold, and I trust we will not strike out the clause allowing him fees for probate business.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I am certainly opposed to striking out the fees of the Probate Court in this section, for the reasons that have been mentioned by the gentlemen, and some other reasons. In the first place, as the judicial districts are now arranged, there is a Chief Clerk of the district, and each county has a deputy who is appointed by the Judge of the district; and most of these counties—in the small counties at least—the fees of the Clerk and the Deputy Clerk of the District Court are very small, and I might say that the fees of the Clerk of the Probate Court are very small. This will be an elective office under the constitution, and my understanding is that these fees provided for here only continue until they are changed by law, and I am satisfied that in order to get a good man for the office of Clerk of the District Court—and it certainly requires one of the best posted and the best skilled men that you can get in a county—in order to get such a man we will necessarily have to pay him fees which will justify him in giving his entire time to the office; otherwise someone will be elected who has other business to attend to and consequently will be out of his office half the time. Again, under the provisions of this constitution, the Clerk of the District Court will be Clerk of the Probate Court as well, and it will necessitate his being in his office all the time, the same as any other county officer, inasmuch as all the probate business will be transacted by the Clerk—all of the clerical part—the issuing of all orders and everything of that kind, posting of notices, granting of letters of administration and guardianship, and all of that kind of thing will be done in vacation by the Clerk, so that most of the work will devolve on the Clerk, and certainly he should have compensation to justify him in giving his entire attention to the duties of the office; and, as I said before, I am satisfied that the combined fees of the two officers will not be any more than the Clerk will be entitled to. I am not in favor of paying more salaries than will properly compensate good officials, but I am in favor of paying good officials salaries commensurate with the services performed.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hersfield) will pass. I believe that each Clerk of the District Court receives sufficient salary without adding thereto the fees of Probate Clerks. The Deputy Clerk of the District Court in each county in this Territory having an assessed valuation of three million dollars receives $1,000. That is not the District Clerks, but the Deputy Clerks; and in addition to that they have fees. That is in accordance with the law passed at the last session of the Legislature. Now, before the session of the last Legislature the Clerks were all satisfied with only fees alone, and the Clerks of the District Court, so far as I know, were perfectly satisfied and they all attended to the duties of their offices as competently and faithfully as they do now with the additional salary of One Thousand Dollars. Now, sir, we provide for a Clerk for each county—a Clerk of the District Court; in all of these counties he receives a salary of One Thousand Dollars, and then he receives his $5 for filing a case and $2.50 for filing an answer, in all amounting to $7.50. And in addition to that he receives his fees for naturalization, his fees for acknowledging, his fees for swearing to papers, and his fees for every particular thing he does; and it seems to me that is plenty for the Clerk of the District Court. If he swears a person to a claim against an estate, if an order is made in the case, or if there is a final adjudication of that case, he gets a fee for it; and I believe it is making a princely salary to allow these Clerks this increased compensation that they have been allowed since the last session of the Legislature, and also allow them the princely fees charged by Clerks of the District Courts. Now, we all know that the fees of the Probate Clerks are extortionate, and whenever there is any business to speak of, too much money is received from the people for those services. Take the large counties of Missoula and Silver Bow and Deer Lodge and Lewis & Clarke, I will venture to say right here—and no lawyer can contradict it—that if the Clerk of the District Court receives also solely the fees provided by law for Clerks of the Probate Court, he will receive a princely salary—a good salary. Leave out entirely the amount of money received as Clerk of the Court as salary, and give him alone the fees prescribed by law for the Probate Court, and he will receive a good salary. Now, I say that openly and above board, and the lawyers here are all conversant with it, and I ask them if that is not the fact? You give them a good salary and you give them good compensation for the services they perform besides.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I think if the gentleman from Cascade would take into consideration the entire situation and the small amount of compensation that is provided for in the way of fees for Clerks of Probate Courts—the small amount of work that these new Clerks will have to do in the way of probate matters, he would not be so sanguine of the Clerks receiving a good remuneration for probate fees. It is true that at the present time the Clerk of the Probate Court gets fees in all criminal misdemeanors that are tried in that court and gets fees in all civil actions that are commenced in the court—a civil action can be commenced in the Probate Court for any amount less than $500—but the only fees that the Clerk of the District Court will get by reason of this additional charge or duty is simply the fees in matters of the probate of an estate, or guardianship, and such things as that—simply in probate matters strictly. Well, now, the fact is that for the amount of work that has been done by a Clerk of the Probate Court—the clerical work—the compensation is practically nominal. I do not know of any other officer that is paid as little for the amount of work that he is required to do in a clerical way as the Clerk of the Probate Court in matters of probate. Now, all of these other matters the Clerk of the District Court will have nothing to do with unless a civil action should be commenced there. So far as criminal misdemeanors are concerned, and the examination of offenders, those matters will not go into the District Court at all; and in view of the fact that the statute provides for these fees—that the amount of work to be done is such that the fees for its performance are small—it seems to me that it would be wrong to insist that the Clerk of the District Court should perform those duties without any compensation. My observation has been that when you place an officer in a position where there are certain duties that he is required to perform for which he receives no remuneration, that those matters are either not attended to promptly or are not half performed, I believe he should receive just exactly the same compensation as is now provided by law for Clerks of Probate Courts; and if the Legislature finds, even at its first session, that in some of the larger counties it is working a hardship and that the Clerks are getting more than they should get for their salaries, a different arrangement can be made—a graduation can be made as to the amount of business to be transacted in each county or in each district. But until that is done I think it will be a mistake to provide that the District Clerks should have to perform these duties without the compensation now provided by law for Probate Clerks.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I heartily concur in all that has been said by my colleague in regard to the compensation that our Clerks, both of the Probate and District Courts, are entitled to. I know that until the last session of the legislature the clerk of our District Court and the Clerk of our Probate Court in Custer County were not making a livelihood; they were running in debt every day; and had not the legislature increased the compensation they would both have been compelled to resign their positions. Now, we have in Custer county a gentleman as District Clerk who has been there for several years, and he is one of the most faithful and efficient clerks I have ever seen. He is as true as steel to every duty that has ever been entrusted to him. The duty under the circumstances of discharging the functions of the clerk of the district court and also of probate matters would fall upon him. It will be discovered here that the salary provided for the probate court by the last Legislature in our county was $800 a year, and had not those provisions been made our probate judge, who is acting as ex officio clerk, would have been compelled to abandon his office, and but for the earnest solicitation of his friends and the hope of an increase in compensation that had been held out to him, he would have resigned. Now, when my friend gets up and speaks about the princely salaries that these men receive, the compensation is all in his eye; there is nothing in it. It may exist in Lewis & Clarke County; it may possibly exist in Silver Bow County, and it may possibly exist in Missoula county. I am very sure it does not exist in Cascade County, and I am sure it does not exist in Custer county; and I am opposed to reducing the salary of any officer of this State soon to be to the miserable condition of being compelled to do his duty day after day and week after week in the most responsible position, and realize that he has made scarcely enough at the end of the week to carry himself and his wife and children over Sunday. I think if my friend from Cascade would look the whole Territory over and not let the vision of Lewis & Clarke and Silver Bow and Missoula county shine with such effulgence in his eyes, that he would look at it in a different light. I hope it will remain as it is and that the clerk of the District Court will receive the fees which he now receives as clerk of the District Court and also the fees less the salary which now goes to the probate court.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I just want to add one word to what has been said, and that is this: I am willing to admit that if it were in the power of any one man to perform the duties of clerk of the District Court with the added probate duties to it, then in Lewis & Clarke County he would have a princely compensation; but it is not within the power of any two men to perform the services of that office when the probate business is added to it. If the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke had any conception of the duties that devolve upon the clerk of a probate court he would not have introduced this amendment here.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: How does the gentleman know he has not?

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I know you have not, because no gentleman who was familiar with it would possibly have introduced it. Nineteenths of the duties of the probate court at the present time are performed by the clerk of that court. Every petition, every account, every order, every letter of administration, every bond of every officer, administrators and guardians, have to be spread at length upon the records. So I pretend to say that there is no man—no one man—can perform the duties in Lewis & Clarke county relating to probate papers which enter into the settlement of probate estates; and I say that the gentleman is not familiar with it because the duties have not made him familiar with it; a man in business is not supposed to be familiar with it. I never had anything to do with the banking business, and he has never had anything to do with the settlement of estates and I don't know anything about it; and I say that those gentlemen who are familiar with that office know that no one man can perform the duties—no one man can perform the duties in half of the counties. In our own county, where there is not one-third of the business there is in this, it will take two men to perform the duties of this office; and so I say it will be an imposition, and no competent man will take it unless these fees are allowed to remain attached to the office.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I suppose if the people of Montana were paying for the time of the gentleman that perhaps they would be compelled to pay more for the time we have been discussing this question, than they will have to pay in the additional cost of fees. Now, let us see. Section 5, (Reading) "Clerks of District Courts until otherwise provided by law shall each perform the duties and be entitled to the same fees as now provided by law for clerk of the District Court of the Territory, and until otherwise provided by law, shall also perform the services and be entitled to fees therefor that are now provided for clerks and be entitled to fees therefor that are now provided for clerks of Probate Courts." How many days after this State shall have been admitted into the Union will it be before we will have a legislature that, if these fees are burdensome to the people, may otherwise provide by law. I think we are wasting too much time over small game. There is pretty large game ahead of us. I think we ought to get this constitution out in shape and get it before the people so that they can cast their votes in favor or against it as they see fit. But this is a very small matter, and I am of the opinion that there will have to be extra clerks provided in many of the large counties—in most of the counties, to perform the duties of probate court.

The Chair put the question on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Hershfield) and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

There being no further amendments to section 5, the clerk read section 6, as follows:

Section 6. Upon a change from Territorial to State government the seals in use by the Supreme Court and the Territorial District Courts in and for the several counties respectively, shall pass to and become, until otherwise provided by law, the seals respectively of the Supreme Court and of the District Courts of the State in such counties.

There being no amendments to Section 6, the clerk read Section 7, as follows:

Section 7. Prosecutions for criminal offenses against the laws of the Territory of Montana, pending at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union, shall not abate; but the same shall continue and be prosecuted in the name of the State of Montana, and the title of every action shall be changed to conform to this provision.

There being no amendments to Section 7, the clerk read Section 8, as follows:

Section 8. Parties who, at the time of the admission of the State into the Union, may be confined under lawful commitments or otherwise lawfully held to answer for alleged violations of any of the criminal laws of the Territory of Montana, shall continue to be so confined and held until discharged therefrom by the proper courts of the State.

There being no amendments to Sec. 8, the Clerk read Sec. 9, as follows:

Section 9. All writs, processes, prosecutions, causes of action, claims and rights of individuals, associations and bodies corporate existing at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union shall continue and be respectively executed, proceeded with, determined, enforced and protected under the laws of the State.

There being no amendments to Section 9, the Clerk read Section 10, as follows:

Section 10. All undertakings, bonds, obligations and recognizances in force at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union which were executed to the Territory of Montana or any officer thereof in his official capacity or to any official board for the benefit of the Territory of Montana, are hereby respectively assigned and transferred to the State of Montana, to the State officer successor to said Territorial officer, or to the official board successor to the aforesaid official board for the use of the State, as the case may be, and shall be as valid and binding as if executed under State law to the State or State officer in his official capacity or official board for the benefit of the State; and all fines, taxes, penalties and forfeitures due or owing to the Territory of Montana, or to any county, school district or municipality therein at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union, are hereby respectively assigned and transferred and the same shall be payable to the State, county, school district or municipality, as the case may be, and payment thereof may be enforced under the laws of the State.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move to go back to Section 9 and on the first line, after the words "all writs, processes, prosecutions, actions and causes of action", etc.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no amendments to Section 10, the Clerk read Section 11, as follows:

Section 11. All property, real and personal, and all moneys, credits, claims, demands and choses in action of every kind, belonging to the Territory of Montana at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union, are hereby assigned and transferred to and shall be vested in and become the property of the State.

There being no amendments to Section 11, the Clerk read Section 12, as follows:

Section 12. All obligations of the Territory of Montana, existing, in force and unpaid at the time of the admission of the State into the Union, are hereby assumed by the State which shall and will well and truly pay the same.

There being no amendments to Section 12, the Clerk read Section 13, as follows:

Section 13. All matters, cases and proceedings pending in any Probate Court of the Territory of Montana, at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union, and all official records, files and other property of or pertaining to such court, are hereby transferred to the District Court in and for the same county, and such District Court shall have full power and jurisdiction to hear, determine and dispose of all such matters, cases and proceedings.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke sent up an amendment.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke proposes the following amendment: After the word "files" in line two, insert the word "moneys".

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: It is covered by the words "and other property of or pertaining to such court." There cannot be any question about that.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

There being no further amendments to Section 13, the Clerk read Section 14, as follows:

Section 14. All actions, cases and proceedings and matters which shall be pending in the Supreme and District Courts of Montana Territory at the time of the admission of the State into the Union whereof the United States Circuit or District Court might have had jurisdiction had such court existed at the commencement of such actions, cases, proceedings and matters, respectively, shall be transferred to said United States Circuit and District Courts, respectively; and all the files, records, indictments and proceedings relating to such actions, cases, proceedings and matters shall also be transferred to said United States Courts: Provided, That no civil action, cause or proceeding to which the United States is not a party shall be transferred to either of said United States Courts except upon written request of one of the parties thereof, and in the absence of such request such cases shall be proceeded with in the proper State Courts.

There being no amendments to Section 14, the Clerk read Section 15, as follows:

Section 15. All actions, cases, proceedings and matters pending in the Supreme and District Courts of the Territory of Montana at the time the State shall be admitted into the Union and all files, records and indictments relating thereto, except as otherwise provided herein, shall be appropriately transferred, as may be proper, to the Supreme and District Courts of the State, respectively, and all such actions, cases and matters shall be proceeded with in the proper State courts.

There being no amendment to Section 15, the Clerk read Section 16, as follows:

Section 16. Upon a change from Territorial to State government, and until otherwise provided by law, the great seal of the Territory shall be deemed and taken to be the great seal of the State of Montana.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move that the committee go back to Section 11 and at the end of the section insert the words "of Montana", so that it shall read "of the State of Montana".

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: So far we have proceeded with other propositions to be placed in the constitution, there are some matters that we thought should not pertain to our committee, and they have not been provided for, and perhaps now it would be well to add the following section, to be numbered Section 17, which I will read myself. (Reading "Members of the First Legislative Assembly provided for by this constitution shall be elected at the same time as is provided herein by ordinance for State and County officers, and shall qualify and enter upon the duties of their office at the date upon which they shall be convened in Legislative Assembly by proclamation of the Governor of the State.")

Mr. Buford of Madison: I move the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I would suggest, Mr. Chairman, that the latter part of that is in the nature of a repetition of this article on legislative departments, which provides, "That the First Legislative Assembly shall meet upon the proclamation of the Governor, after the admission of the State into the Union, upon a day to be named in said proclamation, and which shall not be more than fifteen nor less than ten days after the admission of the State into the Union."

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Now, there is no provision in there for electing them at the same time as these other officers, and there is no provision for them to qualify.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I think the Committee on Schedule have drawn a provision which will apply to that, although it is in the nature of a repetition of what is here. I think it is a matter for the Committee on Revision to determine which particular portion ought to be omitted.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: There are two particular propositions in this, and that is the date providing the time they shall be elected, and the time they shall qualify. Now, as you read that article, there is nothing there as to the time they shall be elected, or the time they shall qualify; but the time they shall convene you have provided for in that article.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: The time they shall convene and their duties are all covered by this provision.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of said Section 17, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I have an additional section, to be numbered Section 18. "The District Judges and Clerks of the District Court shall qualify and enter upon the duties of their respective offices within ten days from the date that the State shall be admitted into the Union." I move the adoption of that section. It was thought by the committee at the time we were together that it should provide how long the term of office should be for those first elected.

The motion was seconded.

Before the above motion was put to the committee and after some aimless rambling and desultory discussion, Mr. Callaway moved that the Committee of the Whole rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was seconded, put to the house, and declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 38, have made some progress and ask leave to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that the committee have had under consideration Proposition No. 38, report progress and ask leave to sit again. If there be no objection, leave will be so granted.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the convention take a recess until two o'clock.

The President: Before that motion goes before the house, I desire to state that the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee was called home by the illness of one of his children. He was appointed with two other members to assist the Committee on Revision and Phraseology. It is probable he will be absent several days. The Chair will appoint Governor Carpenter from Lewis & Clarke to take his place.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: The Committee on Apportionment are now ready to make their report.

The President: Will the gentleman withdraw his motion for the purpose of receiving the report?

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: Yes sir.

The President: The Clerk will read the report of the Chairman of the Committee on Apportionment and Representation.

The Clerk read as follows:

PROPOSITION NO. 40.

Article on Apportionment and Representation. Introduced by Committee on Apportionment and Representation. Walter Cooper, Chairman.

(General File No. 337.)

Congressional Representation.

Section 1. One Representative in the Congress of the United States shall be elected from the State at large the first Tuesday in October in 1889, and thereafter at such times and places, and in such manner as may be prescribed by law. When a new apportionment shall be made by Congress the Legislative Assembly shall divide the State into congressional districts accordingly.

Section 2. The Legislative Assembly shall provide by law for an enumeration of the inhabitants of the State in 1895, and every tenth year thereafter; and at the session next following such enumeration, and also at the session next following an enumeration made by the authority of the United States, shall revise and adjust the apportionment for representatives on the basis of such enumeration according to ratios to be fixed by law.

Section 3. Representative districts may be altered from time to time as public convenience may require. When a representative district shall be composed of two or more counties they shall be contiguous, and the district as compact as may be. No county shall be divided in the formation of representative districts.

Section 4. Whenever new counties are created, each of said counties shall be entitled to one Senator, but in no case shall a senatorial district consist of more than one county.

Section 5. The senatorial districts of the State shall be constituted and numbered as follows: The county of Beaverhead shall constitute the first district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Madison shall constitute the second district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Gallatin shall constitute the third district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Jefferson shall constitute the fourth district, and shall be entitled to one Senator. The county of Deer Lodge shall constitute the fifth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Missoula shall constitute the sixth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Lewis and Clarke shall constitute the seventh district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Choteau shall constitute the eighth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Meagher shall constitute the ninth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Silver Bow shall constitute the tenth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Custer shall constitute the eleventh district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Yellowstone shall constitute the twelfth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Dawson shall constitute the thirteenth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Fergus shall constitute the fourteenth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Park shall constitute the fifteenth district, and be entitled to one Senator. The county of Cascade shall constitute the sixteenth district, and be entitled to one Senator.

Section 6. Until an apportionment of representatives be made in accordance with the provisions of this article they shall be divided among the several counties of the State in the following manner: The county of Beaverhead shall have two (2). The county of Madison shall have two (2). The county of Gallatin shall have two (2). The county of Jefferson shall have three (3). The county of Deer Lodge shall have seven (7). The county of Missoula shall have five (5). The county of Lewis & Clarke shall have eight (8). The county of Choteau shall have two (2). The county of Meagher shall have two (2). The county of Silver Bow shall have ten (10). The county of Custer shall have two (2). The county of Yellowstone shall have one (1). The county of Fergus shall have two (2). The county of Park shall have two (2). The county of Cascade shall have two (2). The counties of Dawson and Cascade shall have one (1) jointly. The counties of Deer Lodge and Beaverhead shall have one (1) jointly. The counties of Jefferson and Gallatin shall have one (1) jointly.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I move to refer the report to the printing committee with instructions to print.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: The motion now is to take a recess until two o'clock.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Before that motion is put, I would like to ask if it is the sense of the convention that these matters, after coming from the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, shall be again printed before they are finally acted upon by the convention. It has been suggested that that be done, although it seems to me useless and a great expense, and certainly a delay.

The President: The Chair would suggest that it might be printed in the form in which it is finally printed for distribution.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I make a motion to that effect that the constitution as passed upon by the Revision Committee be printed.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to make a suggestion. I believe the Revision Committee can do their work much more satisfactorily otherwise, but inasmuch as there will be many copies of this constitution printed for distribution, it might be well to suggest to the printer to keep his form standing, so that it may be altered or modified in such way as to save resetting it again. I move that be done.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I hope that the convention will not take any steps that will tend to delay. We have been here now over forty days, and we want to get home; and if it is going to detain the members from the outside, I would object to it.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I hope the consideration of this matter will go over until after dinner, so that we may ascertain how much time it is going to take to get the printed copies before the convention.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I will withdraw the motion until after the recess.

The Chair put the question on the motion to take a recess until 2 P. M., and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

RECESS.

Wednesday, August 14, 1889. 2 P. M. Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Kennedy asked to be excused until Saturday at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Mr. Ramsdell wished to be excused for the day.

The President: If there be no objection, these gentlemen will be excused.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke sent up a report of the Special Committee on Memorial No. 2.

The President: The report of the Special Committee will be received and read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: To the President of the Convention: The Select Committee to whom was referred Memorial No. 2 hereto annexed, respectfully reports that it has considered the same and recommends that said memorial be amended so as to read as follows: "This convention respectfully calls the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury to the fact that a ruling of the Treasury Department, under which imported ore, more valuable on account of the silver than the lead which it contains, is admitted free of duty, operates very injuriously to the mining interests of Montana, through the annual importation, duty free, of lead in the ore of the value of several millions of dollars to compete with the American product. This convention respectfully suggests that it was not intended by Congress to permit the importation of an immense quantity of lead free of duty, and that said ruling, even if complying with the law, does not express the true spirit of the act of Congress imposing a duty upon lead ore; and this convention respectfully asks that said ruling, if the principle of legal construction will permit, be so modified as to follow the true spirit of the law, and require a duty of one and one-half cents per pound to be paid upon all imported ore containing such a percentage of lead as would, if admitted free of duty, tend materially to interfere with the mining interest of our own country." And that, so amended, it be adopted by this convention.

(Signed)

B. P. CARPENTER, Chairman.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the report of the committee, and also of the memorial.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I will now move that the President of this convention transmit a certified copy of the memorial to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: There is a report by the Chairman of the Committee on Suffrage. If there be no objection, it will be received and read.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President: Your Committee on Rights of Suffrage, to whom was submitted Proposition No. 39, introduced by Carpenter, beg leave to report that they have considered the same and report it back with the recommendation that it do pass.

(Signed)

L. ROTWITT, Chairman.

The Clerk read the resolution of Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke, referred to in the above report, as follows: Proposition relating to the constitution. Section Upon all questions submitted to the vote of the taxpayers of the State or any political division thereof, women who are taxpayers and possessed of the qualifications for the right of suffrage required of men by this constitution, shall, equally with men, have the right to vote.

Mr. Collins of Cascade moved the adoption of the report of the committee on said resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The ayes and nays were called for on the motion.

The Chair announced that, there being no objection, the ayes and nays would be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Breen, Browne, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Cooper, Fields, Gillette, Goddard, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joy, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Knowles, Loud, Luce, McAdow, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Toole, J. K.; Warren, Watson, Witter, Mr. President—34.

Nays: Aiken, Buford, Burns, A. F.; Cardwell, Courtney, Craven, Duffee, Dyer, Eaton, Gaylord, Gibson, Craven, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hershfield, Hogan, Marriion, Marshall, Mayger, Middleton, Mitchell, Reek, Schmidt, Whitehill, Winston—26.

Absent: Bickford, Brazleton, Burns, Ed; Conrad, Dixon, Joyes, Kennedy, Kohrs, Maginnis, Muth, Ramsdell, Robinson, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Webster—15.

The Chair announced the motion carried.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move you now, that the vote by which that resolution carried be reconsidered, and that that motion be laid upon the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Chair announced that the resolution offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Carpenter, had been adopted as a part of the constitution of the State of Montana.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: The Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment desire to make the following report:

The Clerk read the said report, as follows:

Mr. President: Your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom were referred Propositions Nos. 18, 33 and 36, beg leave to report that they have compared the engrossed copies with the originals and find each of said propositions correctly engrossed.

(Signed

MIDDLETON, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection, the report of the committee will be received.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: In connection with the printing of the different articles just passed by the convention and which are now in the hands of the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, I will state that it is very doubtful if they could have printed what we would require in less than a week.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I would say, in that connection, Mr. President, that the Chairman of the Committee on Printing being absent this morning, it devolved upon myself to ascertain how quick this could possibly be done. The "Independent" office told me they could not get it out in less than a week and perhaps ten days. The "Journal" office state they could possibly get it up in six days, and it would probably be eight or ten days before it could be put in the hands of the convention. In view of that fact, it seems to me that it would be a great delay for this convention to pretend to have this matter reprinted before it is finally adopted by the convention.

The President: I believe the convention had under discussion the reports of the Committee on Revision and Phraseology, and the question of printing was considered and postponed. It is now stated by the Chairman of that committee that it would be impossible to get this done in time.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I would like to inquire if the Committee on Revision and Phraseology have kept their work up as far as it has been engrossed.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I would say that there has been no formal meeting of the Committee on Revision and Phraseology as yet. The different subjects so far printed have been referred to the Chairman of the committee who went through and corrected it, and there were different members of the Revision Committee who went over it afterwards, and I would say that everything up to now has been gone over not less than three times by some member of the committee or the Chairman of the committee in which it originated; and about the only thing to be considered in connection with it is the conflict of articles, which could be read over in the full committee and wherever a conflict appears it should be reported. I think we can do the work in one day anyhow.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I ask unanimous consent of the convention to recur to Proposition No. 13, article on boundaries. Section one reads "The boundaries and jurisdiction of the State of Montana shall be as follows, to-wit". The legal proposition has arisen as to whether we ought not to exclude the words "and jurisdiction", and after consulting with a number of lawyers and judges on this question, I am satisfied that the words "and jurisdiction" should be stricken out, for the reason that we have Indian reservations in Montana and the United States government has exclusive jurisdiction over the reservations. Therefore, I move to pass the article by unanimous consent, omitting the words "and jurisdiction". I talked with the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee and other gentlemen, and I am of the opinion that those words are wrongfully in this proposition.

The President: Are there any objections to the gentleman recurring to this subject?

Mr. Eaton of Park: I only rise to say that this seems to be a legal proposition, but as a matter of fact that amendment was offered originally and identically for the reason that the gentleman now offers it. Of course, if legal rights have brought their knowledge to bear and are now of a different opinion, I suppose it is all right; but it seems very strange that when the same thing was offered at the time, it has taken all this time to arrive at this conclusion.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I would state that at the time this was taken up, this communication from the War Department in relation to the Military Reservations, and after that was presented it modified the opinion of the lawyers. The constitution, or the article, as it now reads, provides for a jurisdiction that we have conceded and relinquished, and we had better, as far as we can, keep any conflict out. If we leave that in it will raise the question that there is a conflict in the constitution.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move that the words in the first line of Proposition No. 13, "and jurisdiction", be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask, inasmuch as this amendment has now been adopted, whether it will be necessary to adopt the original proposition as amended.

The President: I think the ayes and nays ought to be taken on this, inasmuch as it is a part of the constitution. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Hogan, Joyes, Jay, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Knowles, Kohrs, Loud, Luce, Marrión, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Myers, Parberry, Reek, Rolwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Toole, J. K.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Mr. President—61.

Nays: None.

Absent: Brazleton, Brown, Burns, E.; Dixon, Kennedy, Maginnis, Mitchell, Muhl, Ramsdell, Robinson, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Webster, Witter—14.

The President: The motion prevails and the proposition as amended becomes a part of the constitution of the State of Montana.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move you that the Committee on Revision, etc., be instructed to make the amendment in the enrolled copy.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: There appears to be nothing before the House, and I ask now whether we could not relieve the Committee on Schedule and let us out of our difficulty about the district offices, etc.

The President: The Chair would state to the gentleman that this can only be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I would say this: I do not see exactly how we are to get out of the trouble except by unanimous consent. Here the first bill that was passed was the executive, and that provided that all executive officers should go into office immediately after the admission of the State into the Union. Now, that is perfectly proper that that should be. There is going to be a Legislature convened, and they will adopt the laws of the State, and the Governor that is elected by the people ought to be the Governor of the State and not a Governor that is appointed by the President; and this last one that was passed yesterday provides that all State and county and township officers shall go in on the first Monday in January. Well, now, the Governor is a State officer. And then, they do not say anything about District Judge there. We could probably rectify that. The Clerk of the District Court is a county officer and if he does not go in until the first of January, why, you cannot provide for the District Judge going in any sooner than that, because he would have no Clerk of his court; and we had better get together here two or three committees and then get unanimous consent to straighten it out. There is no provision made for a canvassing committee—who shall canvass the votes—who shall issue their certificates of election. There is nothing of the kind provided. Then if the Territorial officers continue and perform all the duties until the first of January there ought to be some provision in the constitution for paying them something, and the Clerks of the District Courts, and so on. I think that the Executive Committee took the right view of this thing, that all of these officers ought to go in just immediately within a week or ten days, after the proclamation of the President—the whole ticket except the County Treasurer; that is the only one that ought to be excepted; that is my judgment about it. Here are two statutes, conflicting, and if we try in the schedule to rectify them, we have got to provide for canvassing them, and then we have to provide that they cannot take their seats until the first of January, and provide a salary in payment. I think if the committee could get together they might harmonize it.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I will offer this, Mr. President, as an independent section, to go into the schedule.

The President: By unanimous consent, the Chair will entertain the motion of the gentleman.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I ask to be excused for the day.

The President: The gentleman will be excused.

The Clerk read the section offered by Mr. Toole of Lewis & Clarke as follows: "All officers elected at the first election under this constitution shall qualify and take office immediately upon the admission of the State into the Union, except County Treasurers, who shall qualify and take office on the first Tuesday of March next ensuing their election. All officers elected at such first election shall hold their offices as prescribed in this constitution, and until said officers shall qualify and enter upon the discharge of the duties of their respective offices, the officers now performing the duties imposed upon the officers created by this constitution shall continue in office and perform the duties thereof and receive the same compensation allowed such officers so elected."

The President: The gentleman offers this as an amendment to the article on schedule.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: That was to be added as a section. The effect of that is that all officers provided for by this constitution shall take their offices as soon as the State is admitted into the Union, except County Treasurers. Judge Knowles, who is Chairman of that committee, thinks the canvassing ought to be provided for in a different section. This continues the Territorial officers in office until their successors are qualified.

The President: The Chair understands that this is to be offered as an amendment to the article on Ordinance or Schedule.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I think it ought to go into the schedule.

The President: The Chair understands that the article on Schedule is now in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move it be referred and considered in connection with the Proposition on Schedules.

The President: The convention had under consideration the Proposition in Schedule in Committee of the Whole. It is now in order, if the convention so desire, to resolve itself into Committee of the Whole again.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I move the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of General Orders.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke to the Chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: When the committee rose, we had under consideration a proposed new section, to be numbered Section 18. What is the pleasure of the committee? The proposed section is in the hands of the gentleman from Silver Bow, Judge Knowles.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: It has been impossible for the committee to get together. We have a section which reads: "That the District Judges and Clerk of the District Courts shall qualify and enter upon the duties of their respective offices within ten days from the date when the State shall be admitted into the Union." Now, probably that had better be immediately after the State is admitted into the Union, instead of ten days. I am not prepared to state. There are a great many things in relation to this article which are in doubt. I am not sure that there is any provision yet made about canvassing the votes for electing members of the Legislature. As far as the schedule has gone, that was gone through, and these are additional sections to be added; and my opinion in relation to these matters is that the committee should arise and commit them. They could go to the Schedule Committee, and they can call in other members and try to get this matter fixed up so that it can be reconciled. I make a motion to that effect.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole: Mr. President, your Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 38, have made progress and desire permission to sit again.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that they have had under consideration Proposition No. 38, have made progress, and desire leave to sit again. If there be no objection, leave will be granted.

Mr. Buford of Madison: I move that Proposition No. 38 be referred to the Committee on Schedule.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move that the convention take a recess until four o'clock in order to give the committee time to give this matter attention.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried, and the convention took a recess until four o'clock P. M. of the same day.

RECESS.

The convention was called to order at four o'clock P. M.

The President in the Chair.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke: I see that the Committee on Schedule have not finished their work, and there is very little on the President's desk. I move we adjourn.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: Why not move a recess until eight o'clock this evening. There are many members not living here who are anxious to get through and get home. I move that as an amendment.

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair stated the amendment.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: If the gentleman will withdraw his motion a moment, I desire to say that I have been consulted by some of the members of the Committee on Schedule and I think there are a great many of these matters that ought to go into the article on Ordinance; and I will ask unanimous consent that the vote by which Article No. 33 on Ordinance was passed be reconsidered, and that a select committee of three be appointed to draft and present to the convention such amendments as will cover matters that ought to be embodied in that article, and with the understanding that it shall not be in order to present anything which would change the expressed views of the convention on any section in the ordinance, but simply to add to it such matters as ought to be in it and correct any inconsistencies in any of the sections.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: With that understanding, that there is not to be any attempt at changing any material feature in any respect whatever, I shall not object.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I would suggest to the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke who was last on the floor that the Committee on Revision—with this last resolution that authorized the appointment of four additional members to that committee, has full authority, if I recollect that resolution, to do exactly what he wants a special committee of three to do.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I suggest that there might be a joint meeting of the Ordinance and Schedule committees for this purpose.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I would like to inquire of these gentlemen, if this matter is concurred in, if it will bring up this question of senatorial representation again.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: No, sir.

The President: The motion made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is to move to reconsider the vote by which the article on Ordinance was adopted, for the express purpose only of making additions thereto, and not to change any of the propositions therein contained.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The President: It is understood by the chair that a committee of three was to be appointed for this purpose.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: My idea was that of a joint committee, consisting of the Committee on Schedule and Committee on Ordinance.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I would ask that the chairman of the Executive Committee be added to those committees.

The President: If there be no objection, the chairman of the Executive Committee will be added to the joint committee consisting of the Committees on Schedule and Ordinance, for the purpose of revision. The question now before the convention is to take a recess until eight o'clock.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: My opinion is, that this committee will not be able to report at eight o'clock.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Then I move the convention adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion of the gentleman from Cascade, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The convention stood adjourned until Thursday, August 15th, 1889 at 10 A. M.

THIRTY-FIFTH DAY

Thursday, August 15th, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The clerk called the roll.

The President: Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge desires to be excused this morning. If there be no objection he will be excused. Mr. Robinson desires to be excused on account of illness. Mr. Con Kohrs of Deer Lodge is absent and desired to be excused for a few days. These gentlemen will be excused if there be no objection.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the previous day.

The Clerk read the following communication:

"Helena, Montana, August 15th, 1889.

"Hon. Wm. A. Clark, President, and members of the Constitutional Convention:

"You are cordially invited to attend a lawn festival given by the ladies Relief Corps at the residence of Mrs. R. E. Fisk, 319 North Rodney St., Friday evening, August 16th.

(Signed) "Mrs. R. E. Fisk, President.

"Women's Relief Corps."

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I would like to have a ruling of the chair as to the point made yesterday morning, whether or not a minority of this convention can pass an ordinance.

The President: The chair would state to the gentleman from Silver Bow that there is a provision of the constitution of the United States which provides that a majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to do business. This a rule that is followed in both houses of Congress. In the absence of any rule having a different meaning adopted by this convention, the rule will prevail in the constitutional convention, that a majority of a quorum is sufficient to pass upon any bill. We have the sense of this convention upon that subject. There was introduced a resolution by Mr. Winston of Deer Lodge county in discussing the article on Legislative Departments. I believe he introduced an amendment to the report of the committee to the effect that a majority of all the members elected to either house should constitute a requisite number to pass any bill. This received so small a vote in Committee of the Whole, and was voted down by so large a majority, that the gentleman did not renew the amendment when the matter was brought up for the consideration of the convention. Hence, the chair would rule, that it being an established law governing both houses of Congress, provided for by the constitution of the United States, and the sense of this convention having been unmistakably in favor of the adoption of that principle, the chair would rule that a majority of a quorum is sufficient to pass any proposition that is before this convention for consideration.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I ask unanimous consent to take up and consider the following resolution.

The clerk read as follows: "Resolved, That the time in which the chief stenographer shall file his transcript of the proceedings of this convention in the office of the secretary of the State or Territory, as prescribed in resolution No. 7 of this convention, be, and the same is, hereby extended to the period of one hundred and ten days from and after the adjournment of this convention.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I object to the consideration of this proposition.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I would ask the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke what is the object of this resolution?

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: It is simply this, that the stenographer informs me that the debates have been extended very much longer than was expected, and that the labor will be so much greater than anticipated that he might not be able to transcribe into long-hand the records of the convention within the time prescribed by the first resolution. That it is his purpose to do it just as rapidly as it can be done and to place it with the Secretary of the Territory at the earliest moment practicable; but in the event he should not be able to do so, he simply desires the resolution passed in order that he may be protected, as time seems to be of the essence of the arrangement. That is all. He is not asking for any delay except as a matter of protection in the event it becomes necessary. I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin seconded the motion.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: The reason of my objection is, that there is one hundred and ten days in addition to the time of the session of the convention, at the salary which the convention assigned to the young man—$15 a day—which would be $1650.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: The $15 a day only applies to the time the convention is in session.

The chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried, and the resolution adopted.

The President: The chair is informed that the Hon. L. H. Hole from South Dakota, a member of the South Dakota Constitutional Convention, is present; and if there be no objection the privileges of the floor will be extended to the gentleman.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment desire to make the following report.

The President: The clerk will read the report of the chairman of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment.

The clerk read as follows: Mr. President, Your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom was referred Proposition No. 39, Article on Woman Suffrage, beg leave to report the same back correctly enrolled.

(Signed MIDDLETON, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection, this will be received and referred to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President: On the part of the Special Committee, I am intrusted by the gentlemen of the committee, composed of the members of the Committees on Schedule and Ordinance, to make the following reports: We have not changed in any manner any matter passed upon by the convention, but we have divided the ordinance into two articles: One, the article or ordinance on election, that being temporary in its character and referring only to the next election; and second, the article on federal elections, which being permanent in its character, we have embodied in a separate article. We beg leave to present our report.

The Clerk read the said report as follows:

ARTICLE.....

Ordinance on Federal Relations

BE IT ORDAINED, First: That perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured and that no inhabitant of the State of Montana shall ever be molested in person or property, on account of his or her mode of religious worship.

Second: That the people inhabiting said State of Montana do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within the boundaries thereof and to all lands lying within said limits owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes, and that until the title thereto shall have been extinguished by the United States, the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition of the United States, and said Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States. That the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State of Montana shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands belonging to residents thereof. That no tax as shall be imposed by the said State of Montana or lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States or reserved for its use. But nothing herein contained shall preclude the said State of Montana from taxing as other lands are taxed any lands owned or held by any Indian who has severed his tribal relations and has obtained from the United States or from any person a title thereto by patent or other grant, save and except such lands as have been or may be granted to any Indian or Indians under any act of Congress containing a provision exempting the lands thus granted from taxation: but said last named lands shall be exempt from taxation by the said State of Montana so long and to such extent as such act of Congress may prescribe.

Third: That the debts and liabilities of said Territory of Montana shall be assumed and paid by said State of Montana.

Fourth: That provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a uniform system of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of said State of Montana and free from sectarian control.

Fifth: That on behalf of the people of Montana we, in convention assembled, do adopt the constitution of the United States.

Sixth: That the ordinance in this article shall be irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of said State of Montana.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I suggest that the following be an additional ordinance to go into the article next to the last section.

The clerk read as follows: The State hereby accept the several grants of land from the United States to the State of Montana mentioned in an act of Congress entitled "An Act to provide for the division of Dakota into two States and to enable the people of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Washington to form constitutions and State governments and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States and to make donations of public lands to such States", approved February 22nd, 1889, upon the terms and conditions therein provided.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move the adoption of that as an additional section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I ask the gentleman, why not let it go in in its regular place?

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Simply because this makes it irrevocable without the consent of the government and we thought it ought to be the last paragraph.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: There is no requirement in the Enabling Act that this ordinance should be irrevocable. It might save some time engrossing this. I understand these are all engrossed.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Well, I have no objection.

The President: Then, if there be no objection, this will be numbered No. 7.

The Chair then put the question on the adoption of the Ordinance, to be incorporated in the constitution.

The clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows: Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Chessman, Collins, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Knowles, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrión, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Reck, Rotwill, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. K.; Warren, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President.—63.

Nays: None.

Absent: Brazleton, Cauby, Conrad, Dixon, Joy, Kennedy, Kohrs, Muth, Ramsdell, Robinson, Toole, J. R.; Webster.—12.

The clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 33, Ordinance on Elections. BE IT ORDAINED by the convention assembled to form a constitution for the State of Montana: First: That an election shall be held throughout the Territory of Montana on the first Tuesday of October, 1889, for the ratification or rejection of the constitution framed and adopted by this convention. Second: At said election the constitution framed and adopted by this convention shall be submitted to the people of the Territory for their ratification or rejection, and all persons who are then qualified electors under the laws of this Territory shall be qualified to vote for the ratification or rejection thereof. Third: Said election shall be held at the several places in the several wards and precincts throughout the Territory appointed for the holding of elections under the laws of this Territory, and shall be conducted in the manner prescribed by the laws of this Territory regulating elections. The boards of county commissioners of the said counties of this Territory shall appoint judges and clerks of such election in each of said wards and precincts in the same manner as is now required by law for the appointment of judges and clerks of general elections in this Territory. Fourth: Each elector voting at said election shall have written or printed on the ticket he may deposit in the ballot box, the words "For the Constitution" or "Against the Constitution". Fifth: The votes cast at said election for the adoption or rejection of said constitution shall be canvassed not later than fifteen days after said election, or sooner, if the returns from all the precincts shall have been received, and in the manner prescribed by the laws of the Territory of Montana for the canvassing of votes at general elections in said Territory, and the returns of said election shall be made to the Secretary of the Territory, who, with the Governor and The Chief Justice of the Territory, or a majority of them, shall constitute a board of canvassers who shall meet at the office of the secretary of the Territory on or before the 30th day after the election and canvass the votes so cast and declare the result. Sixth: That on the first Tuesday in October 1889 there shall be elected by the qualified electors of Montana a Governor, a Lieutenant-Governor, a Secretary of State, an Attorney General, a State Treasurer, a State Auditor, a State Superintendent of Public Instruction, one Chief Justice and two associate Justices of the Supreme Court, a Judge for each of the Judicial Districts established by this constitution, a clerk of the Supreme Court, and a clerk of the District Court in and for each county of the State, and the members of the Legislative Assembly provided for in this constitution. The terms of officers so elected shall begin when the State shall be admitted into the Union and shall end on the first Monday in January 1893, except as otherwise provided. Seventh: There shall be elected, at the same time one Representative in the fifty-first congress of the United States. Eighth: The votes for all the above officers shall be returned and canvassed as is provided by law, and returns shall be made to the Secretary of the Territory and canvassed in the same manner and by the same board as is the vote upon the constitution, except as to the clerk of the District Court. Ninth: There shall also be elected at the same time the following county and township officers: Three county commissioners, one clerk of the Board of County Commissioners and ex-officio Recorder, one Sheriff, one County Treasurer, one County Superintendent of common schools, one County Surveyor, one County Assessor, one Coroner, one Public Administrator, one County Attorney, two Justices of the Peace, and two Constables for each township. The terms of office for the above named officers shall begin upon the admission of the State and end upon the first Monday of January A. D. 1893, except as to County Treasurer whose term shall begin on the first Monday in March succeeding his election and end on the first Monday of March A. D. 1893, and also, as to county commissioners whose terms are otherwise provided for in this constitution. Tenth: The votes for the above county and township officers and for clerk of the District Court shall be returned and canvassed and certificates of election to said officers issued as is now provided by law. Eleventh: Notice of the election for the adoption or rejection of this constitution, and for State, District, County and Township Officers shall be given by the several boards of county commissioners in the same manner as notice of general elections for delegate to congress and county officers is required to be given by the existing laws of the Territory. Twelfth: That the provisions of this ordinance shall apply only to the officers elected on the first Tuesday of October, 1889.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the rules be suspended, the amendments made by the Committee concurred in, and the bill placed on its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin moved to insert the words "polling places" for the word "ward" in section three.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The chair then put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Maginnis) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I desire to ask unanimous consent to offer the following as an addition to Section No. 2.

The President: The gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) asks unanimous consent to offer a proviso for Ordinance No. 2. The Clerk will read the same.

The clerk read as follows: Proviso for Ordinance 2 on Federal Relations: Provided, That this ordinance shall not be construed to deprive the State of the right to levy a tax upon all personal property owned by any private citizen, person, or corporations which may have been driven or carried upon said reservations for any purpose whatsoever.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer moved the adoption of the said proviso.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Now, I desire to state that I have been requested by several gentlemen, taxpayers of Custer County, and of some other counties, to try and make some provision by which personal property that is carried and driven from the counties of this Territory upon these Indian and Military Reservations, may be subject to taxation. It is a notorious fact that property is driven from without the jurisdiction of these counties and they claim that the property is exempt from taxation; and while it is barely possible that there may be some act of Congress requiring that it shall be taxed, yet I do not want any inhibition in our constitution which would prevent our taxing these people. For that reason I offer this proviso, and I think it is a just one. I don't think any man can object to it.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: We considered that question, if the gentleman will remember, in the conceding of jurisdiction over these Indian reservations and Military reservations, and that proviso would clearly allow the taxation of the personal property of Indians, which we have no right to do under the very provisions of the ordinance that we have already established. And then, in relation to military reservations and such places as that, the property that is held by men engaged in the army and by Indians on these different reservations is not to be taxed, and as that provision is there, it would subject them to taxation and it would come in conflict with the Statutes of the United States. As a general rule Indians are not taxed and hence they are not allowed to vote; and the constitution provides that they shall not be represented; and I hardly think that we can go on to these Indian reservations and tax property there under the provisions that we have here in some article already adopted. It would be right in conflict with that—right in conflict with what we have declared, that we have no jurisdiction over these matters as a condition of our State government and relinquish it entirely. It is one of the provisions of this enabling act that we should relinquish this jurisdiction and the jurisdiction over the property of Indians upon Indian reservations, and I do not know how you can separate them and provide that we can have no jurisdiction over these Indian reservations for one purpose and then provide for the purpose of taxation.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I do not claim that we can tax the property of the United States; it is only property that is driven from within our organized counties here to these Indian reservations on a pretended lease from these Indians; and just before assessment day comes you will find three-fourths of all the stock of Montana rounded upon these Indian reservations. It may require some legislation—(Interrupted).

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: Do you wish to include any property except movable property.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: No; only movable property that is brought over there for the purpose of defrauding the State.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: Now, let me say further: The legislature shall provide for the taxation of property of certain individuals. The general rule of law is that personal property follows the residence of the owner of that personal property, and unless otherwise provided by statute, that would be the case. A man residing in Montana Territory who has money deposited in New York can be taxed on that money in Montana Territory. The situs of that money is Montana Territory where the residence of the owner of it is, and we have a provision in our tax law that personal property shall be taxed where it is found in the Territory. But it is so very easy for the legislature to provide that in relation to all of this property where it is upon Indian reservations and military reservations and the parties are residents of Montana that it shall be taxed where his residence is. I think we will get into trouble if we attempt to go on to these Indian reservations and make assessments there, and I think we had better leave that to the legislature to provide for taxation of that property. My own opinion would be that if anybody attempted to run property temporarily out of any one county on to a military or Indian reservation, that it would be subject to taxation in that county, and its real status would be the residence of the owner. It has been frequently adjudicated in relation to the rolling stock of railroads, and that is, that the rolling stock of a railroad is subject to taxation at the home office; and I do not think it is necessary to go in and provide a different proviso in this ordinance in relation to that matter when the matter is subject to legislation.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I would like to call the attention of this convention once more to section four of the Enabling Act which provides among other things: "The constitution shall be republican in form and make no distinction in civil or political rights on account of race or color except as to Indians not taxed."

This second section which is sought to be amended here is exactly in the language of the Enabling Act, and we have no right here to evade that language or to undertake to construe it, to add anything to it or detract anything from it. The congress of the United States that has enabled us to come together here and frame a constitution has provided what we shall do in respect to that; and I say that any defection from that would be contrary to this Enabling Act and would justify the President of the United States in keeping us out of the Union. We do not want to go deliberately and sow the seeds of our own destruction. Whatever merits there may be in this proviso that ought to be tacked on to this I have nothing to say against it, but the suggestion of the gentleman from Silver Bow, I think, would cover it all. But if you attach it here you then violate the very Enabling Act under which we are framing this constitution. I say that that provision should be left intact as it was intended by Congress. Congress has given us the very words that we are to put in this ordinance. We have done so, and we ought to be satisfied with that. And then again, the other day we passed this article in relation to military reservations and I think that that ought to cover it. It has a proviso which reads as follows: "Provided, That there be and is hereby reserved to the State the right to serve all legal process of the State, both civil and criminal, upon persons and property found within any of said reservations in all cases where the United States has not exclusive jurisdiction". Now then, if the situs of the property follows the owner of the property and the property is taxed where you find the owner, then I say if the tax is not paid upon that property left within the Indian reservations a process will follow under this proviso to the article on Military Reservations, and I suppose that may include other reservations as well. But, however that may be, I say this proviso should not be adopted here unless you want to defeat this constitution.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I say equally it should be attached here. A large amount of property is smuggled out of the reach of the taxing power of the State, and will continue to be unless there is some provision to stop it. I do not want to interfere with the Enabling Act here in the slightest degree, nor do I want to tie the hands of our representatives in Congress. Now, our learned friend from Silver Bow is a gentleman of legal lore. He has been talking a little law to us; now I want to talk a little good common sense to him; and that is this, that I want to provide, and I don't want to exclude ourselves from the right hereafter while this constitution continues from making property here pay equally its portion of the expense of the government. Now, he has enunciated here a principle of law which is very old, that the personal property follows the home of the owner. Very Well; then where is this taxed? In Texas, Illinois, Massachusetts, Maine and Canada and all over the country? It does not follow under the laws of this Territory and should not under the laws of this coming State. It should be taxed where it is found and should be compelled to pay revenue into the county where it belongs. And you establish this principle here and let it go out to the people of the Territory that the property of a citizen living in Yellowstone county, or in Custer county, or in Silver Bow county, even, away up there amongst the mountains where gold flows down like a torrent, and you will find that that property will be stored away amongst the Flatheads or amongst the Crows or some other Indians here until after the time for levying the assessment is past, and then it belongs where it is. Mankind is the same the country over except in a very few localities. Now, if this would endanger the constitution, I would not ask for it, but it is merely providing putting a provision in here that will stand, and instead of meeting with the disapproval of the President, I think it will meet with his hearty approbation. He will say this is another indication of the fitness of this people for self-government. Now, my friend got up, as he usually does, always replete with good sound sense, and yet he didn't come up quite to the mark. They have had more trouble in Custer county by these people fording the Yellowstone River at low water to get out of the reach of the assessors there, than I have the time to enumerate; and I merely suggest this matter to the convention. If I am in error I will yield gracefully to the better judgment of this convention.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: So far as my information goes, I will say that I have investigated that matter to the full extent of my ability, and that I undertook at one time as the counsel for the Board of County Commissioners of our county to collect taxes by suit for Yellowstone county on the property on the Crow Reservation, and it was a signal failure. I advised the Commissioners before I went to argue the case that we could not succeed, for the reason that the Crow Indian Reservation is no part of Yellowstone county, of Gallatin county or Custer county, and the Territory of Montana is as powerless to legislate in relation to the jurisdiction of the Crow Reservation as they are on the Northwestern Territory in Canada, because the Territory has no jurisdiction over the Crow Indian Reservation. Now, so far as the gentleman's argument goes in relation to the retention of the stock, he is mistaken about that. It is simply unfounded, because they pay more for the privilege of grazing their stock over there than they would have to pay for taxes if they kept them in the county. Every man pays 50 cts. a head. Every man who has sheep on the Indian reservation pays 10 cts. a head which is more than a tax would be if they would remain in the county; and that is not the reason—for the purpose of evading the tax but for the purpose of getting the privilege of grazing over there which they do not have in the crowded districts down in that section of country. Now, the case I refer to was argued at some length before Judge McCleary, and he decided that stock on the reservation was not taxable in Yellowstone county but he hinted that it might be taxed in Custer County; but I believe that every lawyer in this convention would agree with me that the legislature of this Territory is powerless to legislate in regard to the jurisdiction on the reservation and especially the Crow Reservation, in as much as that treaty with that tribe is different from almost any other treaty I know anything about. So far as I am concerned, I would be very glad if some arrangement could be made, some legislation had, by which all the property of this Territory which is protected by the laws of the Territory should bear its burden of the taxation. But to undertake to do a thing of this kind when it is absolutely absurd and ridiculous, is simply acknowledging our ignorance of the law and we would become the laughing stock of everybody in the country.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I rise to a point of order. As I understand, it required unanimous consent to introduce this resolution.

The President: The consideration of the question was had by unanimous consent. There was nothing stated about the debate.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: That matter is debatable then. I move the previous question.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I suppose we all agree with the purpose of the gentleman from Custer in this resolution. As there is a divergence of opinion as to its effect upon the contract between the United States and the Territory, and as we all hope that when we get a delegation from the State that they will follow the lines of the Delegates—and I am sure I can say for myself and for my successor, Mr. Toole, and for the present delegate, Mr. Carter, that they have all asked to cut down these Military and Indian reservations. I believe that no military reservation should extend but one mile from the flag staff, and I believe the Indian reservations should be cut down to the actual needs of the Indians: and I hope that our delegation in Congress will have the force and power to effect that great boon for Montana. I ask my friend to withdraw the resolution.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I will withdraw the resolution.

The President: The ordinance is passed upon, and the next in the order of business is unfinished business.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I move that we go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition on Schedules.

The motion was seconded.

The chair stated the motion.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I understand the proposition on Schedules is in the hands of a Committee and not in the hands of the convention.

The President: The gentleman is correct. I would ask the gentleman what was done with the schedules?

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: The committee met, reported progress and asked leave to sit again. We have a lot of amendments that we are trying to put in order so that we may bridge over the difficulties.

The President: It was recommitted for the purpose of having those matters straightened out.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: It was only the ordinance.

The President: Both were recommitted. The minutes show that Proposition No. 38 was recommitted to the Committee on Schedules. The minutes further read that J. K. Toole asked unanimous consent that Proposition No. 33, Article on Ordinance, be reconsidered for the purpose of harmonizing it with the Ordinance on Schedule, with the understanding that the express views of the convention on the Article on Ordinance be not interfered with. On motion unanimous consent was granted for the reconsideration. The committee on Ordinance, the Committee on Schedule and the chairman of the Executive Committee were made such committee. Is the chairman of that committee ready to report the Article Back again? In order to conform to the minutes, it should show that it was returned back and then taken up by the committee of the whole.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move we resolve ourselves into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 40.

The President: There is a motion pending that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the consideration of another proposition.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I understand the chair rules that my motion is still pending. My own personal opinion is, Mr. President, that we had better clean this business up and save these odds and ends. The chairman is about ready to report.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I withdraw my motion.

The President: The question now pending before the convention is that we resolve ourselves into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 38.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Should we not first have the report of the Chairman of this committee?

The President: The gentleman is correct. The report should be entered on the minutes.

The Clerk read said report as follows: To the Honorable W. A. Clark, President of the Constitutional Convention, Your Committee on Schedule, to whom was recommitteed that proposition, would respectfully report that they have considered the matter and do hereby report back the said proposition with the recommendation that the additional sections added to such section in proceedings of Committee of the Whole and Sections 17 and 18 presented herewith be added to said proposition.

(Signed)

HIRAM KNOWLES, Chairman.

The President: If there be no objection, this report will be received and filed with the proposition to be considered in the Committee of the Whole. The question now before the convention is that the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 38.

The Chair put the said question, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke in the Chair.

The committee was called to order.

The Chairman: The committee had under consideration a proposed section to be numbered Section 18. The proposed section had already been adopted, and we now have Section 17.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: The recommendation is that those two adopted be stricken out. The recommendation of the Committee on Ordinance now covers what was sought to be remedied by these two sections, and so I hope that this will be stricken out, and that these two sections as reported will be adopted.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I ask that the sections as reported by the committee be read.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 17. All territorial, county and township officers now occupying their respective positions under the laws of the Territory of Montana or of the United States of America shall continue and remain in their respective official positions and perform the duties thereof as now provided by law after the State is admitted into the Union and shall be considered State officers until their successors in office shall be duly elected and qualified, notwithstanding any inconsistent provisions in this constitution, and shall be entitled to the same compensation for their services as is now established by law. Provided that the compensation for Justices of the Supreme Court, Governor and Secretary of the Territory shall be paid by the State of Montana.

The Chairman: What is your pleasure?

Mr. Burleigh of Custer moved the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: There are two sections which have not been stricken out yet. It seems to me a motion would now be in order to strike out Sections 17 and 18 as adopted for the purpose of allowing these to come in. I move therefore that Sections 17 and 18 as adopted by the Committee of the Whole on yesterday be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 18 as follows: Section 18. The Governor of Montana shall, as soon as the State of Montana is admitted into the Union, issue a proclamation requiring the Legislative Assembly to convene as such at such reasonable times as may be designated in his proclamation.

Mr. Buford of Madison moved the adoption of the section.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I move that the committee do now arise.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: There is a matter which, with the consent of the convention, I would like to bring to the attention of the committee. I think in Section one of the article providing that wherever the word "Territory" or "Territory of Montana" occurs in the statutes the words "State" or "State of Montana" shall be substituted therefor. This provision does not go far enough, for in certain sections of the revised statutes of our Territory we have the term "Montana Territory" as well as the term "Territory of Montana", and that phrase ought to be substituted.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I think the gentleman is correct.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I move you, Mr. Chairman, that in line two after the first word "Territory" the words "or Montana Territory" be substituted.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move that when the committee rise the Chairman be instructed to report the article back with the recommendation that it be passed as amended.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move the committee now rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, your Committee on Proposition No. 38 have had the matter under consideration, have amended it in several particulars, and as amended the committee recommend that it do pass.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move that the convention proceed to the consideration of the amendments.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read the amendments offered by the Committee of the Whole as follows: Amend Section one by inserting after the word "Territory" on line four the words "Montana Territory".

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 4 by inserting after the word "shall" on line four the words "except as in this constitution otherwise provided."

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 9 by inserting after the word "prosecutions" on line one the word "actions" and by striking out the word "actions" on the same line and inserting in lieu thereof the word "action."

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 11 by adding after the word "State" on the last line the words "of Montana".

Mr. Hickman of Madison moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 13 by inserting after the word "files" on line two the word "moneys".

Mr. Hickman of Madison moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend Section 15 by striking out the word "States" on line five and insert in lieu thereof the words "State courts."

Mr. Hickman of Madison moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend the proposition by adding thereto the following, to be numbered Section 17. Section 17. All Territorial, county and township officers now occupying their respective positions under the laws of the Territory of Montana or of the United States of America shall continue and remain in their respective official positions and perform the duties thereof as now provided by law after the State is admitted into the Union, and shall be considered State officers until their successors in office shall be duly elected and qualified, notwithstanding any inconsistent provisions in this constitution, and shall be entitled to the same compensation for their services as is now established by law. Provided, That the compensation for Justices of the Supreme Court, Governor and Secretary of the Territory shall be paid by the State of Montana.

Mr. Middleton of Custer. I have an amendment which I wish to offer.

The President: The gentleman from Custer offers the following amendment: Amend Section 17 by inserting after the word "qualified" the following, "as provided by ordinance".

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I accept the amendment.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I do not wish to appear captious about this matter but with all due respect to Judge Knowles, it does seem to me that the wording of this section, inasmuch as there is no exception made, is not altogether proper. How can we make the United States Marshal a State officer? It says "all United States Marshals".

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: You are correct about that. Add after "all Territorial officers" the words "the United States Marshal and United States Attorney". He is nothing but a United States Marshal. He might be considered a Territorial officer. But still it ought to go in there so that there will be no dispute about it.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I rise to a point of order. There is nothing before the convention. The amendment of the gentleman from Custer County—(interrupted).

The President: That has been accepted.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move we take a recess until two o'clock.

The President: The amendment offered by the gentleman from Custer County as read is an amendment to the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole, and of course that is now before the convention.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the section as amended.

The Chair put the question on the said section, and the same was declared carried.

The President: Section 18 will now be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend the proposition by adding the following to be numbered Section 18: Section 18. The Governor of Montana shall, as soon as the State of Montana is admitted into the Union, issue a proclamation requiring the Legislative Assembly to convene at such reasonable time as may be designated in his proclamation."

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: The article that we have adopted on the Legislative Department, Section 6, has a proviso that the first Legislative Assembly shall meet upon the proclamation of the Governor after the admission of the State into the Union upon a day to be named in such proclamation, and which shall not be more than fifteen nor less than ten days after the admission of the State into the Union. I suggest that is sufficient without this extra section. I think there is no necessity of adopting Section 18.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I move that we take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I call for the reading of the last section.

The Clerk read same.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I undertake to say that that relates wholly to the Territorial officers; that a United States Marshal is not a Territorial officer, nor is a United States District Attorney. I do not think any exception is necessary.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. President, under the Enabling Act, my understanding is that the United States Marshal will have to be reappointed when Montana comes in as a State, and we would have no authority to say what United States officers should hold office and what should not.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of Proposition No. 38.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Carpenter, Cady, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Courtney, Craven, Durfee, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Gillefte, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Halch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Knowles, Loud, Luce, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Rickards, Schmidt, Toole, Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter. Mr. President—60.

Nays: Warren.

Absent: Brazleton, Dixon, Joy, Kennedy, Kohrs, Mayger, Muth, Ramsdell, Reek, Robinson, Sargent, Stapleton, Toole, J. R.; Webster—14.

The Chair announced the vote and declared Proposition No. 38 carried, and the proposition was referred to the Engrossing Committee.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I would like to inquire what is the status of the Proposition on Ordinances.

The President: The proposition has been placed upon its final passage and adopted.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move we take a recess until two o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Convention took a recess until 2 p. m.

Afternoon Session, 2 P. M.

The convention was called to order by the President.

The clerk called the roll.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Mr. President, I would like unanimous consent to bring before the convention Proposition No. 27 from the Committee on Revision and call the attention of the convention to Section 17—section 16 of the printed bill and section 17, I think, of the bill as it is. It reads as follows at present: "All property except as in this section provided, shall be assessed in the county, city, town, township, or school district in which it is situated". The debate this morning on the proposition to include Indian reservations brought forth the fact that if we leave this as it is citizens can take across the river or across the line into an Indian reservation moneys and notes and stocks and bonds, and anything that is tangible and keep it from being taxed. So I would like permission to strike out the words "in the county, city, town, township or school district in which it is situated", and then the section would read as follows: "All property in this section provided can be assessed in the manner provided by law." I make that as a motion.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I have prepared an amendment to offer to that section, and would ask the gentleman if it is not his desire to leave the provision in regard to railroad stock in the same shape that it was left in.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: In the same shape.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I will offer this as a substitute for the section then.

The President: The gentleman asks unanimous consent to offer an amendment to Section 17 of Proposition No. 27. The clerk will read the same for information.

The clerk read as follows: "Proposition No. 27. Amend Section 17. The State Board of Equalization shall assess the franchise and rails and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in the State and the same shall be apportioned to the several counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts in which any such railroad is located in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid therein. All property except as in this constitution otherwise provided shall be assessed in the manner provided by law.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: It is the same motion as the one I made, but it can be got at a great deal easier by striking out the words "in the counties, township, towns and school districts".

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I would ask leave to amend that by saying "as otherwise provided by law, or as otherwise provided in the constitution."

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I will accept that.

The President: The question will be first put on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Meagher.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Although I am not particularly anxious that the section should stand exactly as it is, I do not see any good reason for a change unless it might be to place the legislature in a position where it would either provide for one system or the other of taxation. The legislature last winter, after having given this matter considerable attention and looking into not only the statute but the decisions of the Supreme Courts of other States, came to the conclusion that the proper place to assess property was the place where the property was situated; and the first part of Section three of the session laws of last winter provides: "All real and personal property in the Territory (or State) of Montana, except such as is in this section expressly exempt from taxation, shall be listed and assessed with reference to its value and location, on the first day of April preceeding the assessment." Now, the amendment to Section 6 of the old statute was to the effect that: "Personal property, except such as is required to be listed or assessed otherwise, shall be listed and assessed where the property is situated." That is practically the language of Section 17 as it now stands. In investigating that matter last winter we discovered that the State of Minnesota had attempted to get a law upon taxation that her Supreme Courts would sustain, that is, wherein they would confirm the title under sold for taxes, and for nearly fifteen years they were unsuccessful in the attempt. But the State of Wisconsin about eighteen years ago enacted a revenue law that her Supreme Court held to be good if it complied with any of its provisions. Minnesota afterwards practically enacted almost verbatim the Wisconsin statute. The Supreme Court of that State has since that enactment sustained the sales under that Statute, and so far as the question raised by Judge Knowles this morning is concerned as to it being a fundamental proposition of law that property is assessed where its owner is, I do not think that that as a proposition of law is true. I know that we had a case in the county from which I came in Minnesota, where a man by the name of Jefferson residing in New York City had been loaning money in Minnesota on real estate mortgages. He had indicated to the tax assessors in New York that he was paying taxes on the matter in Minnesota, but they decided that that did not release him from his obligation to the State of New York. An action was commenced in Minnesota to recover these several assessments, and a judgment was rendered against him for some $16,000 and that judgment sustained by the Supreme Court of Minnesota, upon the theory that the money being in the State of Minnesota, that was the proper place where it should be taxed. The opinion is quite an exhaustive one and settled that principle so far as that provision of the Statute is concerned; and in my judgment the proper place to tax property is not where the owner is but where the property may be found, except as otherwise provided in the Statute; and I do not see any good reason why this amendment should be made.

The chair stated the question.

The clerk read the proposed amendment.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: Now, I for one object to turning back to those propositions. I think if we adopt this mode of procedure we are liable to be here for a long time. Now, I am one that certainly objects to the consideration of this proposition.

Mr. Hickman of Madison made the point of order that the gentleman did not make his objection in time.

The President: The point of order is well taken. The objection to the consideration of a question must be made when the question is first introduced.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I would have objected to it at the time but I could not find the matter, and as a matter of course a man cannot find every proposition that has been acted upon here for a week. It is not the phraseology or the language in the sentence that he wants to change at all. It is the idea. He wants to make a different and a distinct proposition. Now, that is my understanding. I understood the gentleman to say there was something wrong with the phraseology or that the committee on revision and phraseology had made some objection to it.

The President: The chair understood that the gentleman from Cascade read the amendment that he proposed. The chair is of the opinion that the objection to that amendment would probably be a very difficult and delicate question to decide. The gentleman from Silver Bow Mr. Hogan certainly could not object after the gentleman from Cascade Mr. Collins had read distinctly what he proposed to change and amend; and as the question was under consideration, I suppose that would carry any other changes or amendments that the convention might wish to adopt.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: It seems to me that this is one of the most important matters that has come before this convention. If I understand the provisions of this proposition, and man—and I will state here that I assign the same reasons here and think they go to the same point which my remark went to this morning—that any man who possesses one or ten million dollars worth of bonds or any other property in this Territory—personal property which is movable—may on the 30th day of March go abroad upon these Indian reservations and spend the first day of April there, the time limited by law, and return there and escape taxation. Now, you may say that under the laws of the Territory a man who is guilty of fraud is conveying his property away—removing it from the county—is liable. How are you going to prove it? It seems to me that this is one of the most important measures that have come before this convention. If this provision stands it will allow any man who has movable property to go off and remain long enough to exempt him from assessment and taxation. I hope the committee will go back and amend this thing, and I hope the gentlemen who have any doubts upon the subject in consequence of its dubious character will consider it carefully and cautiously before they act upon it.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I am inclined to think that the amendment ought to prevail. There are a good many more things about this, when you consider it, that are in its favor, and I think it ought to be left to the legislature to provide how the property should be taxed.

The President: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Meagher.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: What is the motion? I can say, gentlemen, on this that on the motion made by the gentleman from Custer this morning my attention was called to this article. While I was not in favor of changing the ordinance on account of the danger of the constitution by any change in it, I still thought there was a great deal of reason in the suggestions made by some of the gentlemen. As to the law of this question, that the situs of property follows the residence of the owner, that is a fiction of law. It seems to me that this constitution changes that rule, which is an arbitrary rule—and equitable rule—it might be said, and that if these sections 16 and 17 of Proposition No. 27 are passed there will be great doubt as to the collection of any considerable tax of personal property in this Territory, because not only cattle, bonds, notes, credits and everything else that is movable in a county like Lewis & Clarke, for instance, could be moved over into Jefferson county at the time of assessment, but there would be no provision of law really for assessing it there, because the owner would not be required to make a return there. The assessors would not know of it or have reason to suspect it was there. It could not be assessed in Lewis & Clarke county, because the owner could truthfully make a return that had not any property here in excess of $500 or $2,000, and so these two sections in operation would defeat the collection of any considerable tax. It would place an iron-clad rule in the constitution which could not be broken over by any legislation. Therefore it seems to me that the amendment offered by the chairman of the committee striking out the limitation as to place of assessment, "county, city, town, township or school district", was a very proper one; and while the 17th section might not add much to it, it would be perfectly harmless in expressing the opinions of the convention that all property—anything capable of ownership—should be assessed. Therefore it struck me that the amendment offered by the chairman of the committee was a very proper one and would leave it in the position where all property liable to taxation would at least by action of the legislature be put in such a position that the property could be assessed and the taxes thereon collected.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I would like to ask for information. Does not the amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade cover the ground fully without the amendment of Mr. Kanouse?

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: It appeared to me so when I heard it.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: And if Mr. Kanouse's amendment was adopted, it would necessitate an entire change.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I didn't understand from the reading of the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Cascade that it fully covered the ground that he intended to cover, but if it does I am willing to withdraw my amendment. I only thought it was more complete. I would like to have the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Cascade read again.

The clerk read as follows: I move to amend Section 17 by striking out in lines one and two the words "in the county, city, town, township or school district in which it is situated", and add after "law" at end of line two the words "except as is otherwise provided in this constitution."

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: About all that I intended to say was that I would like to have the convention have before it both of these amendments because the amendment of the gentleman from Meagher county, as I understand it, comes first, and if the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade should prevail then I should think it would be necessary to strike out in the first line "except as in this section provided", because the exception he has added after "law" would cover all that. I would like to get this in shape while we are about it now. I must say I am in favor of this amendment in one way or the other; I am not particular which one prevails, although I think the amendment of the gentleman from Meagher county covers the ground completely, and it seems to me that the amendment of the gentleman from Cascade, if it strikes out the words "except as in this section provided" will cover the entire case.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I will accept that.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I withdraw my amendment.

The President: The amendment offered by the gentleman from Cascade would read "except as in this section provided".

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move its adoption.

Mr. Chessman of Lewis & Clarke: I would like to hear it read as amended.

The clerk read as follows: Section 17. All property shall be assessed in the manner prescribed by law, except as is otherwise provided in this constitution. The franchise, road-way, road-bed, rails and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in this State shall be assessed by the State Board of Equalization, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts in which such railroads are located in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, towns, townships and school districts".

The chair put the question on the motion of the gentleman from Custer (Mr. Burleigh) and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I was going to ask the same question that I asked yesterday. Having amended a proposition that was already passed, will it not be necessary to place the proposition upon its final passage as amended?

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I move to put the proposition as now amended on its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: In order to avoid the roll call, I move to suspend the rules and put the proposition on its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move the convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of Proposition No. 40, the article on Apportionment and Representation.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone to the chair.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone in the chair.

The committee was called to order.

The clerk read Section 1 of Proposition No. 30, as follows:

Section 1. One Representative in the Congress of the United States shall be elected from the State at large, the first Tuesday in October, in 1889, and thereafter at such times and places, and in such manner as may be prescribed by law. When a new apportionment shall be made by Congress the legislative Assembly shall divide the State into Congressional districts accordingly.

There being no amendment to Section 1, the clerk read Section 2, as follows:

Section 2. The legislative assembly shall provide by law for an enumeration of the inhabitants of the State in 1895 and every tenth year thereafter; and at the session next following such enumeration, and also at the session next following an enumeration made by the authority of the United States, shall revise and adjust the apportionment for representatives on the basis of such enumeration according to ratios to be fixed by law.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow sent up an amendment to Section 2.

The clerk read said amendment as follows: Add to Section 2: "And that each senatorial district shall contain as nearly as may be an equal number of inhabitants, excluding aliens, and shall remain unaltered until the return of another enumeration or census, and shall at all times consist of contiguous territory; and no county shall be divided in the formation of a senatorial district except such county shall be equitably entitled to two or more senators".

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I rise to the point of order that that matter has been disposed of and it can only be introduced here for the purpose of contention and delay.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: While I am a member of this apportionment committee, I certainly agree with that amendment proposed by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I rise to a point of order. My point of order is that a previous point of order has been made and a decision from the chair has not been rendered.

The Chairman: I think the gentleman from Silver Bow is out of order, but I will indulge him.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Section 4 of Proposition No. 19 was passed August 5th, 1889. Upon its passage a motion was made to reconsider the vote by which Section 4 was adopted. A motion was made to lay that motion upon the table, and that motion to table was carried. This thing has been forever and forever settled by this convention, and it cannot be amended in this way without unanimous consent, which probably this convention will never get. I think the gentleman's point of order is well taken.

The Chairman: I think, as the proposition offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow is in conflict with the proposition which has already been adopted by the convention, and which cannot be recurred to except by unanimous consent, that the amendment is out of order. The chair will so hold.

The clerk read Section 3 as follows:

Section 3. Representative districts may be altered from time to time as public convenience may require. When a representative district shall be composed of two or more counties they shall be contiguous, and the district as compact as may be. No county shall be divided in the formation of representative districts.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I wish to amend by adding the word "Senatorial", making it read "representative and senatorial districts".

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I rise to a point of order.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I would like to have a ruling of the chair. The chair can rule, and rule wrong, until we go home.

The chairman: The chair will rule according to his convictions, notwithstanding the opinions of the gentleman.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order. The question has been raised as to whether the convention should consider this matter without the unanimous consent of the convention. I do not think the chair or any one for that matter can raise the question whether a committee of the whole must give unanimous consent to consider an amendment.

The Chairman: Upon that proposition I will state that I do not think it requires the unanimous consent of the committee of the whole in this matter, but I do believe that the amendments offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow are in conflict with other provisions which have been heretofore adopted by the convention, and are therefore out of order.

The clerk read Section 4 as follows:

Section 4. Whenever new counties are created, each of said counties shall be entitled to one Senator, but in no case shall a Senatorial district consist of more than one county.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow moved to strike out Section 4.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared lost.

The clerk read Section 5, as follows:

Section 5. The Senatorial districts of the State shall be constituted and numbered as follows: The county of Beaverhead shall constitute the first district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Madison shall constitute the second district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Gallatin shall constitute the third district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Jefferson shall constitute the fourth district, and shall be entitled to one senator. The county of Deer Lodge shall constitute the fifth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Missoula shall constitute the sixth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Lewis & Clarke shall constitute the seventh district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Choleau shall constitute the eighth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Meagher shall constitute the ninth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Silver Bow shall constitute the tenth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Custer shall constitute the eleventh district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Yellowstone shall constitute the twelfth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Dawson shall constitute the thirteenth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Fergus shall constitute the fourteenth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Park shall constitute the fifteenth district, and be entitled to one senator. The county of Cascade shall constitute the sixteenth district; and be entitled to one senator.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move to amend Section 5 by inserting "The county of Lewis & Clarke shall constitute the seventh district and be entitled to three senators".

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I rise to the point of order that this matter has been passed, and it is only for the purpose of dissension and discord that the matter is brought up.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I submit that in every Legislative Assembly in the world points of order are entirely at the discretion of the Chairman, it being with him arbitrary in determining it. I would ask the Charman if he would like to hear the other side of this point of order?

The Chairman: I will indulge the gentleman, but I will not allow the Convention to go into any extended discussion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: If the Chairman is ready to decide there is no necessity for my going on. [Laughter].

The Chairman: The chair will decide the matter out of order.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that the section be stricken out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 6 as follows:

"Sec. 6 Until an apportionment of representatives be made in accordance with the provisions of this article they shall be divided among the several counties of the State in the following manner.

The County of Beaverhead shall have two (2).

The County of Madison shall have two (2).

The County of Gallatin shall have two (2).

The County of Jefferson shall have three (3).

The County of Deer Lodge shall have seven (7).

The County of Missoula shall have five (5).

The County of Lewis and Clarke shall have eight (8).

The County of Choteau shall have two (2).

The County of Meagher shall have two (2).

The County of Silver Bow shall have ten (10).

The County of Custer shall have two (2).

The County of Yellowstone shall have one (1).

The County of Fergus shall have two (2).

The County of Park shall have two (2).

The County of Cascade shall have two (2).

The Counties of Dawson and Cascade shall have (1) jointly.

The Counties of Deer Lodge and Beaverhead shall have (1) jointly.

The Counties of Jefferson and Gallatin shall have one (1) jointly.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I have an amendment.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I have an amendment—To strike out line nineteen, and insert that which I have sent to the desk.

The Chairman: I believe the amendment of the gentleman from Yellowstone is prior to this. It will take precedence. The gentleman from Yellowstone offers the following amendment to the section: "In line nineteen strike out Counties and Substitute county", "And after the word Dawson in same line strike out the words "and Cascade". "Also after the word "one" strike out the word "jointly".

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: I have a substitute for that that will make it shorter.

The Chairman: The amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is next in order.

The Clerk read said amendment as follows: "Strike out line nineteen and insert the following: "The Counties of Yellowstone and Dawson shall have one jointly."

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone I would say that my amendment covers the points.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: I offer a substitute for both amendments.

The Chairman: The amendment of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke is first in order—"Strike out line 19 and substitute therefor the following: "The Counties of Dawson and Yellowstone shall have one jointly."

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: Now, Mr. Chairman, in connection with that matter I wish to simply say the Committee on Apportionment have given this matter its most earnest consideration, and that the report of that Committee is practically a unanimous report, or in other words, it is signed by all but one gentleman, one of the Committee being absent. That gentleman, while he objected to signing the report it was not because of any objection to the report as a report, but simply because of an objection that he urged in the matter of his own County, and I do not think if the gentleman was here today he would oppose this report. He might make an effort to get his County considered, but he would not oppose the report. The Committee have looked the matter over very carefully as I have said, and we concluded that if we made any change it would disarrange the whole report and would have to be refused entirely. Dawson County lacks quite a number of votes of having enough to guarantee her one representative. The Committee based their apportionment on 727, and allowed every County a representative for every fraction of 2-3 or more of that number, and we considered that this would be just and equitable to all the Counties. While there are a few fractions left that cannot be utilized because there are no Counties near them that they can be added to make up the requisite 2-3 or 727 votes. We concluded that the report was the best that could possibly be arrived at. I hope the report of the Committee will be adopted.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I want to say just a few words. The Committee on Apportionment could do nothing else, so far as the Senatorial Districting is concerned, but abide by the action of the Convention, and apportion according to Counties. Then the facts stared us in the face that Dawson County had the biggest minority and Cascade County had the next, Cascade's fraction over two is 391, Dawson's fraction is 442, Cascade's is 389, and Deer Lodge next is 368, Jefferson next with 328, I think, and Park next, and Gallatin next. Now, if you would make this apportionment— Interrupted).

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: What is the ratio of representation?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: 727. If we would make this apportionment at this ratio to each County without combining Counties there would be two representatives to be made up; and if we gave Dawson one representative then the county with the next highest fraction would be entitled to one which is Cascade, and the County of the next highest fraction, Deer Lodge would be entitled to another one, and we could not dispose of as many complications as by that method. By this method we dispose of the matter in a more equitable way, Cascade and Dawson Counties make a voting population of over 800—over 100 more than the ratio. The county of Deer Lodge and the county of Beaverhead make a voting population nearly up to the ratio—over 500—not quite up to the ratio; and the county of Gallatin and Jefferson make a voting population of over 600, nearly up to the ratio. Now, there is no way that I can see that this report can be fixed up any better. If you do away with representation according to votes and give the county of Dawson one member, that is not in accordance with the settled policy of the convention, which is to apportion senatorial districts according to counties, and representative districts according to population. So that Dawson is unfortunately situated in a position that it has not got votes enough, and it must be added to another county. There is not a contiguous county that you can add it to, and if you add it to Yellowstone, it would have enough to vote; and you have got to skip the great county of Custer. As much of Dawson County is on the north side of the Missouri River almost as on the south side, and the population is almost equal.

Mr. Joy of Park: How do you know?

Mr. Collins of Cascade: That is my opinion. And the community of interests is about the same. So that it is as well in all respects to add the county of Dawson, if it has to be added, to the county of Cascade, as any other county in the Territory. Now, if this amendment passes, or any other amendment, then the county of Cascade has got to be provided for, because it has the largest fraction of all.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Put that with Deer Lodge.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: You cannot very well join Deer Lodge and Cascade, for the very reason that they are divided by an unsurmountable barrier. There is no connection between them, except by a circuitous roundabout way, and that is practically impossible. It seems to me that the report of the committee if adopted will settle things about as well as they can be settled. You cannot make an apportionment so that it will suit all of us. If you leave it the way it is, it is about right.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: It is most peculiar that no longer ago than last week a member on the floor said distinctly that on one side of the Missouri River in Dawson County there were less than 50 votes, and that the people would number, I think, less than 150. Now, it is a fact, that if Dawson County is to be attached to the county of Cascade with the distance to be traveled to get there, that county from ours is 575 miles. Now, I desire on the part of Dawson County that the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke will withdraw his amendment for this purpose, that this convention may vote first on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yellowstone County. So far as I am concerned, I do not stand on this floor for the purpose of proclaiming that which does not belong to us, but in my humble judgment Dawson County as it stands now is entitled to one representative. However, this convention does not agree with me in that respect. Why not then select as the county which we desire to be connected with, the county of Yellowstone? Now, take the votes of these two counties added together and they make 1367. Hence, with the county of Yellowstone and Dawson together there would be 87 votes short of making two representatives. Now, that would not be an injustice on the part of this convention to grant us that, provided you will not give Dawson County one representative. This committee has reported to this convention that the county of Choteau is 212 votes less than the full number, and the county of Custer is 179 short. So that by uniting Dawson and Yellowstone Counties we would be 87 short, and the distance of travel from the county seat of Yellowstone to Dawson County is but 225 miles. If you carry us up to Cascade County out of the world, it would be too expensive for men to travel back and forth. We have a few men in Dawson County that ought to have the privilege of the floor of the House of Representatives of this great State of Montana, and we do not desire this convention to practice what we term injustice in this case. First, if this convention will not give us the representative, then we ask that the motion offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke shall prevail, and attach us to Yellowstone County, provided that the gentleman from Yellowstone has no objection. We have always been associated, or have for the last six years, with that county, and our interests are identical. Cascade is so remote that we have not discovered it so far as to know whether our interests are identical with theirs or not, and I will ask my friend from Cascade to let go of us for this once. (Laughter)

Mr. Hersfield of Lewis & Clarke: On the suggestion of my friend from Dawson I will withdraw for the present my substitute.

The Chairman: The gentleman withdraws his substitute. The question now is on the amendment of the gentleman from Yellowstone to amend line 19 to read as follows: "In line 19 strike out "counties" and substitute "county", and after the word "Dawson" in the said line strike out the words "and Cascade"; and also after the word "one" strike out the word "jointly". The line would then read "The county of Dawson shall have one representative".

The Chair put the amendment on the said question, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I will now renew my motion to strike out line 19 and substitute that which is on the desk.

The Chairman: You have heard the motion of the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, to strike out line 19 and insert the following "Counties of Dawson and Yellowstone shall have one jointly."

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I offer an amendment to Section 6.

The Chairman: The gentleman from Madison offers an amendment to Section 6, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend by striking out line 21 and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The counties of Jefferson, Gallatin and Park shall have one jointly."

There was no second to the motion.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move you that when the committee rise they report the proposition back with a recommendation that it do pass.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: The motion of the gentleman from Madison County had a second and is entitled to be put.

The Chairman: The motion before the House is, that when the committee rise they report the article back. There is a second to the motion of the gentleman from Madison.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I will withdraw my motion.

Mr. Whitehill of Deer Lodge: I rise to a point of order, that under our rules the motion does not need to be seconded.

The Chairman: The motion is withdrawn. The question is that when the committee rise it report the article back with the recommendation that it do pass.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the committee rise.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

IN CONVENTION.

President Clark in the Chair.

The convention was called to order.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: Mr. President, the Committee of the Whole have had under consideration Proposition No. 40 and report it back with the recommendation that it do pass with the amendments adopted by the committee.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports that they have had under consideration Proposition No. 40 and report it back with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move you that Proposition No. 40 be now taken up and considered section by section, and placed upon its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that the rules be suspended and the reading of the proposition dispensed with, and the proposition be placed on its final passage.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Upon that motion I demand the previous question.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the rules be suspended and Proposition No. 40 be placed upon its final passage. Upon this the previous question had been demanded. The question before the convention is, shall the main question be now put.

The Chair then put the said question, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the Proposition No. 40, and the ayes and nays will be entered on the journal. That requires a two-thirds vote.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I call for a division of the question.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: It seems to me this comes too late. The previous question has been demanded, after this motion to suspend the rules, and it is seconded and ordered.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: The motion to suspend the rules is entirely one proposition, Mr. President.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Well, I will withdraw the motion for the previous question until the former is decided.

The President: The motion then is to suspend the rules for the purpose of taking a vote upon this proposition, with the understanding that it will not require a 2-3 vote upon the proposition, but simply upon the suspension of the rules.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I object.

The President: The gentleman objects to that. Will the gentleman state his motion?

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: My motion was that the rules be suspended and the reading of the proposition dispensed with, and the proposition placed upon its final passage.

The President: The question now is upon the dispensing of the rules and the adoption of the proposition. This will require a two-thirds vote.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move that the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow be indefinitely postponed.

The President: The motion of the gentleman from Gallatin is not in order.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I ask for a division of the proposition.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I withdraw my motion.

The President: The question now before the convention is upon the adoption of the original motion made by the gentleman from Custer that the proposition be considered section by section.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read Section 1.

There being no amendments to Section 1 the Clerk read Section 2.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I offer an amendment to Section 2.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow offers to amend by adding to Section 2.

The Clerk read as follows: Add to Section 2, Proposition No. 40. That each senate district shall contain as nearly as may be an equal number of inhabitants, excluding aliens, and shall remain unaltered until the return of another enumeration, and shall at all times consist of contiguous territory, and no county shall be divided in the formation of a senatorial district, unless such county is equitably entitled to two or more Senators.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I rise to a point of order.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Before the point of order is taken, I move to strike out the words "aliens" and insert "Indians not taxed."

Mr. Middleton of Custer: My point of order is that this relates entirely and substantially to matter that has been passed upon by this convention and can only be reconsidered by unanimous consent. It has been provided for in Section 4 of Proposition No. 19 on Legislative Departments.

The President: Touching the question of order raised by the gentleman from Custer, the Chair is of the opinion that question of order relating to the admissibility of motions, to their adaptability to the question, to their procedure, that is, with regard to questions under consideration, and points of order, may be raised to matters of privilege. That is not involved in this question, and the Chair is of the opinion that the matter which is sought to be adopted is not within his province to decide. That he has no prerogative whatever. So far as the character of the matter may be concerned, which is introduced in a resolution or a motion, I desire to call the attention of the members of the convention on this question to Jefferson's Manual. We have no rules upon the subject. On page 157, under the article "Amendments", it reads as follows: "If an amendment be proposed inconsistent with one already agreed to, it is a fit ground for its rejection by the House, but not within the competence of the Speaker to suppress as if it were against order; for were he permitted to draw questions of consistence within the vortex of order he might usurp a negative on important movements, and suppress, instead of subserving, the legislative will." It is the opinion of the Chair that so far as the matter concerned in any motion which is presented to this convention, he has no prerogative, no power to decide.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Do I understand, then, that the Chair has no power to prevent a matter being brought in by indirection that could not be reached directly—something that has been acted upon, and determined conclusively, and that the same identical matter can be reached by indirection, and that the Chair is powerless to prevent?

The President: According to the authority which the Chair has just read, it is within the province of the convention, if they see fit, to reject this proposition or to determine whether or not it is inconsistent with matters that have already been passed upon.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: If the Chair will allow me, I would say that, as the Chair has well stated, all that his jurisdiction goes to is as to whether the matter has a parliamentary standing. This convention has power in case it chose, to make every article of the constitution conflict with each other, and it is not within the province of the Chair to go into that. The only thing is whether it is germane to the question under consideration and properly a part of it, and there is no question as to either of these.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to read, with the permission of the gentleman, Barclay's Digest as to the rules of the House of Representatives: (Reading) "A motion to reconsider a vote laying a motion to reconsider on the table is in order. If entertained it would lead to inextricable confusion by piling up motion on motion to reconsider."

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: That is very true, but the only question to consider is whether this proposition is germane to the section, and the question whether it conflicts with any or all of the articles cannot be considered by the Chairman.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I then move to indefinitely postpone the motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow County.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke called for the ayes and nays.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I will withdraw my motion.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: Can the motion be withdrawn after the ayes and nays are demanded?

The President: It cannot.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: It is an amendment to an amendment, and an amendment to postpone is certainly an inferior motion.

The President: The question now is upon indefinite postponement of the amendment. I believe the gentleman is correct, that a motion to indefinitely postpone the main proposition is in order, but not the amendment. The Chair sustains the gentleman from Cascade, that the motion to indefinitely postpone is not in order.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair stated the motion.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow called for the ayes and nays.

The Clerk called the roll.

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Aiken, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Carpenter, Chessman, Courtney, Durfee, Gillette, Hershfield, Hogan, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. K.; Warren. Mr. President—21.

Nays: Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Callaway, Cardwell, Caulby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Marrior, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—40.

Paired: Bickford and Craven, Joy and Muth, Ramsdell and Winston.

Absent: Brazleton, Dixon, Kennedy, Kohrs, Reek, Robinson, Toole, J. R.; Webster—8.

The motion was declared lost.

The Clerk read Section 3.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have an amendment to Section 3.

The President: The gentleman from Silver Bow, Mr. Warren, moves to amend Section 3 by inserting after the word "representative" the words "and senatorial". It would then read as follows: "Representative and senatorial districts may be altered from time to time."

The amendment was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read Sections 4 and 5.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow: I move to strike out Section 5.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, I move that the section be amended so as to read as follows: Lewis & Clarke, three Senators; Missoula, two Senators; Deer Lodge, three Senators; Jefferson, two Senators; Silver Bow, four Senators.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow seconded the motion.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I think, Mr. President, it would be quite as just as the present arrangement.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: Mr. President, the gentleman is just joking, and I think when he comes to straighten up here and look his fellow citizens in the face, I think he will say that it is a joke.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Does the gentleman from Custer open up a debate here? The gentlemen who represent their constituents here do not care to force a debate.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I want to tell one little anecdote and then I will quit.

(Several voices) No. No. No.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I rise to a point of order. The motion has been made by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, and the Chair is in possession of the motion.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Maginnis, offers to amend Section 5 as follows: "Lewis & Clarke, 3 Senators; Deer Lodge, 3 Senators; Missoula, 2 Senators; Jefferson, 2 Senators; Silver Bow, 4 Senators." A division of this question has been called for. The question will now be put upon the first proposition. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment—or by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke to line 5 of Section 5, which contemplates striking out "one" and inserting in lieu thereof "two".

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read as follows: "Silver Bow County, 4 Senators."

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read as follows: "Lewis & Clarke, 3 Senators."

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and a vote being taken the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read as follows: "Missoula County, 2 Senators."

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

The Clerk read as follows: "Deer Lodge, 3 Senators."

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, and a vote being taken, the same was declared lost.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: In order to make a record of this, I move to strike out the section, and on that I call for the ayes and nays.

The President: The motion to strike out this question was lost a few moments ago.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move to adopt the section.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I rise to a point of order, long since established by this convention, that where a proposition is under consideration, such amendments as are desired are offered and considered, and since amendments have been offered the consideration of the next section is in order without any motion to adopt whatever.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that with regard to several sections we have adopted single sections, and the Chair sees no reason to vary from that rule now. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Breen, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Cauby, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Marriion, Marshall, MeAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Rotwitt, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—43.

Nays: Aiken, Burns, A. F.; Carpenter, Chessman, Courtney, Craven, Durfee, Gillette, Hershfield, Hogan, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, J. K. Toole, Warren, Mr. President—20.

Paired: Joy and Muth; Ramsdell and Winston.

Absent: Brazleton, Dixon, Kennedy, Kohrs, Reek, Robinson, Toole, J. R.; Webster—8.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I move that the rules be suspended and that further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the proposition.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I ask leave to change my vote upon this proposition. This is perhaps the last time that I shall trouble the convention, and the matter is of such importance with my immediate constituency that I desire to place on record an explanation of my vote. Mr. President, I am not much given to kicking against the pricks, and generally accept the inevitable as gracefully as I can. I cannot, however, permit this last opportunity to pass without again condemning the senatorial apportionment as unfair to the elections and spirit of our institutions. With due deference to the opinion of others, I affirm that it is at variance with the principles on which State governments are builded and upon which they have been maintained for a century. I will not reiterate or recapitulate the arguments against the injustice of this apportionment. It is taxation without representation in its most flagrant form. It gives a county with 400 voters the same representation as a county of 7000 voters, thereby disfranchising 6600 votes in the latter county. Every elector in this State is entitled to vote and to have his vote counted. If this method of representation is to prevail, the right of suffrage of more than 1-3 of the electors of this State will be destroyed. It will operate as a transfer of political power in the Senate from a majority of a minority. While this power might not be abused, it is such a radical departure from the theory and practice of government of the people and by the people and for the people that I fear it will be constant menace to the rapid settlement and increase of property in the State. I cannot but record this as a pernicious and deplorable violation of fundamental principles which will invite serious opposition to our work. The right to representation according to population—the right of the majority to govern is the keystone to our future greatness. We are a progressive people. Let us not go backward, but hold fast to the doctrine that in the administration of government the majority shall control. Let us press forward in the race for supremacy among the States until standing upon the summit of our ambitions we can see behind us our 41 sister States. I shall vote against this proposition, but shall vote for the constitution because I abhor Territorial government. It is a government conducted and controlled at Washington. It is a government where the interests of our people are not consulted, and where our officers are not responsible directly to the people. In another place I once feebly told the story of our wrongs as a Territory and recounted the maltreatment of Congress as best I could. With this catalogue of grievances so long and so constantly standing before me, I say there is but one alternative, I shall vote for this constitution here and at the polls. If you have determinedly set your faces against the justice of our demands, as I know you have, yielding to the power of superior numbers and nothing else, I will vote for it and trust to the fairness and ability of the first Legislative Assembly to provide for a speedy correction of what I regard as a palpable inequality of representation. (Applause)

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I move that the communication of the gentleman be referred to the Committee on Printing, and that it be circulated as campaign literature.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I second that motion, Mr. President. I think it is meet and proper that the people of this country should understand this thing exactly. I say this much, Mr. President, with all due respect to these gentlemen here, that I would much rather be a slave to the United States than a slave to a rule of this kind. I do not know that I will go so far as my friend, Mr. Toole, but I will certainly vote against the proposition now. I was here during all the debate and I did not hear one single reasonable argument advanced to sustain his system, and I do believe our people in Silver Bow County are just as deserving of representation as the people over here on the Missouri River. I do not think they are any better, but I have this to say, that I think it is better to have a minority petition than a majority. I think that is the genius of our government, and with my understanding of Democracy and Republicanism, I certainly shall not vote to fasten upon our people the system that is proposed here. I shall vote against it. The gentleman from Custer—(interrupted).

Mr. Eaton of Park: I rise to a point of order. I would like to know what business is before the House.

The President: If a gentleman desires to explain his vote he has a perfect right to do so.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I ought not perhaps to have the audacity—a man from Silver Bow—to get up and speak in the presence of some of these gentlemen, when, according to their mathematical rule one man down here in Dawson County—(interrupted).

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: Oh, let Dawson County alone.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: —is worth about twenty in Silver Bow County. But I am opposed to it, Mr. President, without wishing to go into any argument or harangue about the matter. All my feelings protest against it, and I shall certainly vote against it.

The President: The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: I have an amendment.

The President: The gentleman from Dawson offers to amend. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows: Amend line 19, Section 6, so as to read "The County of Dawson shall have one."

Mr. Haskell of Dawson: I move the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of Proposition No. 40. The ayes and nays will be entered on the journal.

The Clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows:

Ayes: Bickford, Browne, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Callaway, Cardwell, Cauby, Chessman, Collins, Conrad, Cooper, Dyer, Eaton, Fields, Gaylord, Gibson, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Hatch, Hickman, Hobson, Joyes, Kanouse, Knippenberg, Loud, Luce, Marriion, Marshall, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Myers, Parberry, Watson, Whitehill, Witter—43.

Nays: Aiken, Carpenter, Courtney, Durfee, Gillette, Haskell, Hershfield, Hogan, Knowles, Maginnis, Mayger, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargent, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. K.; Warren, Mr. President—20.

Paired: Joy and Muth; Ramsdell and Winston.

Absent: Brazleton, Dixon, Kennedy, Kohrs, Reek, Robinson, Toole, J. R.; Webster—8.

The Chair announced the vote and declared the motion carried.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move the vote by which Article No. 40 was passed be reconsidered, and that that motion be laid upon the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and a vote being taken, the same was declared carried.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move you that when this convention adjourn it adjourn to meet next Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Buford of Madison: I hope that motion will not prevail. I have business at home that needs my attention, and if we can possibly get through I would like to do so. These other gentlemen who live along the line of the railroad have the advantage of us, and I hope the motion will not prevail.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I consulted with the Committee on Revision, and it appears that that is as early a time as they can guarantee the work to be finished; and if they could not finish it so as to get away on Saturday—so as to finish the work on Saturday, which I think is impossible according to their idea of it, it is useless for us to remain here and find we cannot complete the work.

Mr. Field of Park: I move to amend by making the time 4 o'clock instead of 2 o'clock Tuesday.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead. I will accept the amendment.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: On next Tuesday, unfortunately, the Republicans will meet in convention at Anaconda, laughter, and to prolong this convention until next Tuesday would be very inconvenient. There are very many of the members of this convention who will want to go to Anaconda, and that will take up the entire week. I think an adjournment until Monday would be ample time. I move the amendment if it is in order that when we adjourn we adjourn till Monday at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: Now, I understand from members of this Committee on Revision that they will be able to report Saturday; and why we should wait until Monday for that report when the business of members of this convention is pressing at home I cannot understand, and I therefore move to amend that when this convention adjourn it adjourn to 4 o'clock Saturday.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I will withdraw my amendment to adjourn to Monday.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I would like an authoritative or definite statement from the Chair of the Committee on Revision, Phraseology and Adjustment. It seems to me there are a great many different opinions here, and it appears to be all second hand; and in order to arrive at any idea I think we had better hear from the Chairman of the committee.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: If we take simply the engrossed copies of the bills and articles that come from the committee, those can be corrected and a report made very easily Saturday; but if we go to have the entire constitution typewritten and get it up with some care, it would be impossible to have that done before Monday or Tuesday. If we just take these things as they come to us and simply correct them and interline them and fix the sections, that can be done in one day; but to have the entire constitution typewritten and get it up in some shape, I do not think it can be done before that time.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I cannot understand what advantage a typewritten constitution will be to this convention any more than the engrossed articles here.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: As I understand it there is practically no other business to be done by this convention except to finally pass upon this work when it gets back from the Committee on Revision. As to the suggestion that it should be typewritten, that seems to me entirely unnecessary. The whole matter as it stands at the present time is exactly as matters of legislation go into the hands of the Secretary, and it would seem from what the Chairman of the Committee on Revision and Phraseology said yesterday that those matters had been submitted to the Chairmen of the different committees, and had been passed upon so far as the phraseology was concerned, and that really nothing remains to be done but putting them together and numbering the articles and sections; and so far as I am personally concerned, it will be absolutely impossible for me to remain. I believe this committee can report this whole matter back Saturday morning and that we can get through Saturday night.

The President: The Chair would suggest to the convention that a committee composed of several members of the Judiciary Committee was added to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology for the purpose of examining as to possible conflicting statements in the proposition, and Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke is now the principle member of that committee, and he will probably give us some opinion in regard to what the views of that committee will be.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: I can only say, Mr. President, that I have been connected with the committee a short time; I think it is impossible for the committee to finish their labors by Saturday morning or Saturday afternoon. Of course the longer time they have the more time they will have to consider it; but I have felt myself in a position of delicacy in taking up this matter because I have been told that there were several members of this convention who desired that the work should be finished Friday or else that the convention should adjourn until Monday or Tuesday. So far as many of the members of the committee are concerned they can stay here and work all the time. So far as I am personally concerned it is a matter of perfect indifference. The longer time we have the more consideration we can give, but I think for the convenience of the convention that that committee should report Saturday at 10 o'clock or 2 o'clock or 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I want to ask the gentleman one question: If the addition of any more members to the committee would enable them to get along more rapidly with the business, or have all the force they want.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: It might be a great assistance, but there is this danger, that discussion in the committee would retard rather than advance the work.

Mr. Eaton of Park: It seems to me to be a pretty well settled fact from the information I have that this Committee on Revision will not be able to report until some time during the day on Saturday—that they cannot be ready to report at 10 o'clock in the morning of that day. Now, then, if it be afternoon, or at 4 o'clock or anything like that, it is impossible for this convention to finish up its work then, for the reason that the simple reading of that document from beginning to end will take—I hardly know how long, but it is something of a task—an hour and a half or two hours; the signing of the individual names of the members of the convention thereto will certainly take an hour and a half, and there is all that time taken up, and therefore I think that if this convention adjourns to meet on Saturday next it will simply meet at that time and adjourn over Sunday; and therefore I am opposed to the Saturday adjournment at all; and since some of us do live a little further away, I hope that when we adjourn we will adjourn to meet some time on Tuesday.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to ask what objection there is to meeting here on Saturday, say at 2 o'clock, and if necessary to work until 12 o'clock that night to get this matter through. The committee, I understand, will be ready to report at 4 o'clock, and these gentlemen here who have pressing business and want to leave and cannot stay here, it seems to me that they will be willing to work here until late into the night in order to get the work finished.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: We are evidently seeking information. Now, why is it not possible for us to act on some of the propositions already in the hands of this committee, which they are undoubtedly ready to report upon. Why is it necessary for us to wait for all of these propositions to come in a lump? May we not take up some of the propositions? Supposing they have suggested or will suggest an amendment to the proposition on education or the proposition on military affairs, or any other proposition; may not that committee report that proposition back to this body and let us go as far as they have already gone? It seems to me that we might facilitate matters in that way.

Mr. McAdow of Fergus: I hope the convention will conclude to meet Saturday next. I am compelled to go away either Monday night or Tuesday night, and I have got to go out of the Territory. I have been here now for forty-odd days, and I think we can certainly get through, and I do hope that we will not adjourn longer than Saturday anyway.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I think if you expect a quorum of this convention present when this convention does adjourn you had better set the time for adjournment some time on Saturday. Now, I have been here and answered to roll call every time, except when I was on a sick bed, and I have not seen my office or my town since I have been here. I have some business of importance and I would like to get away. I would like to sign this constitution and have it done and ended, and I do not understand why they want to throw away the time on Saturday. I do not understand why we cannot work on during Saturday into the night. I do not understand why this convention does not want to finish up this work. We have been here, God knows, long enough, and we have a perfect constitution, and let us finish it up and adopt it.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I hope this motion will be withdrawn, and that we will adjourn until tomorrow morning and finish up the balance of the committee work and then adjourn until 4 o'clock. Now, the Judiciary Committee have got the matter of paying the extra officers in their hands, and they have not met on it yet. There is the matter of the printing also.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move we do now adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: Before we adjourn I would like to offer a resolution on printing.

The President: There are two propositions here that are asked to be read, if the gentleman will withhold his motion to adjourn for a moment.

The Clerk read as follows: Mining. The Legislature may pass laws providing for escapement shafts in all mines in which steam hoists are used, and for safeties and bonnets on all cages and skips used for hoisting and lowering men into the mines; and may pass laws for the proper ventilation of mines.

The President: This resolution is introduced by Mr. A. J. Burns of Lewis & Clarke.

Mr. A. J. Burns of Lewis & Clarke: I do not desire to have that resolution referred to any committee. I should like to have it brought before the convention without being referred to a committee. There are about 15,000 men or fully 1-3 of the Territory engaged in mining, and they desire some legislation of this kind. I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I simply want to say that the Legislature may pass such laws without our passing this proposition, and it is entirely unnecessary. I hope the miners will get all the protection in the world from every danger, but I say it is within the power of the Legislature without adopting this to give them that protection and I do not think it ought to be adopted.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I do not understand this can be done without a suspension of the rules.

The President: Only by unanimous consent or a suspension of the rules.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I object for the very reason as stated by the gentleman from Gallatin. It is a matter that will have no effect.

Mr. A. J. Burns of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the rules be suspended and the motion be adopted.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Parberry of Meagher: I desire leave of absence.

The President: The gentleman will be excused. The gentleman from Cascade, Mr. Collins, offers the following resolution in regard to printing.

The Clerk read as follows: "Be it ordained: That 20,000 copies of the constitution of the State of Montana be printed for distribution; that a committee of 5 be appointed to prepare an address to the electors of the Territory of Montana to accompany the same, and that said constitution and address be printed together in pamphlet form under the direction of the Committee on Address. Provided that the costs of printing the same shall not exceed the rates now paid for Territorial printing, and the cost is hereby declared to be a charge against the State of Montana."

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I second the motion, and I desire to say that in entrusting the committee with the publication of this constitution, I hope they will see that no such miserably executed thing as the printed pamphlet of the old constitution shall be sent out to disgrace the State of Montana or to disgrace this convention. I have been somewhat familiar with printing matters and I have never seen a pamphlet, a published document, or anything of the kind so miserably executed and sent out upon such miserable paper as this. Of course I think economy is a good thing, but it is certainly necessary to have good printing and to have good paper although it may cost a little more.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I will state that I have been informed that the Secretary of the Territory is in correspondence with the authorities at Washington with reference to the printing of the constitution when it is completed, and I think it is well to determine before this resolution is passed the status of that correspondence, and if it will be borne by the United States the State will be relieved of the large expense.

Mr. Watson of Fergus: I hope the convention will pause a little before it adopts this resolution. I think it would be far better to obtain through the printing committee perhaps or some other way an estimate of what this would cost. It seems to be contemplated that we shall get the State or somebody else in an indebtedness of some fifteen or twenty thousand dollars.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I think, cost what it will, the people ought to know what we have done here, and there is no other way for them to get that information.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: The resolution provides that it shall not exceed the amount as now provided under the Territorial law for printing.

Mr. Watson of Fergus: I understand that very well, Mr. President, but I also understand there is quite a difference between printing a pamphlet in large pica type on book paper, or printing it in newspaper. It will make a difference of several thousand dollars—a good many thousand dollars. I can assure the convention of that.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I discovered this, that the bill reported by the publishers who have done the printing for the convention is surprisingly small in my judgment—$234 for the entire printing done by the committee.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: That included the printing of the rolls and all the printing.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I move to reconsider the vote, and to lay that motion on the table.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I would ask what the object is in meeting here tomorrow morning.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: To finish up the business.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: The Judiciary Committee have a report to make, and we have some other business. I will state that if they have a quorum here they can adopt the report of the Judiciary Committee on the extra pay of the clerks, and then adjourn until Saturday at 4 o'clock.

Mr. Eaton of Park: I wish to make a preliminary inquiry as to what became of several motions in regard to our adjournment to a day certain.

The President: They were superseded by a motion to adjourn and that was withheld for the purpose of considering resolutions.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: Before the motion is put I would like to suggest that the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee is absent, and that we had better meet here and consider the matter of this extra expense of the Convention.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to be excused until Saturday.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: I would like to be excused until 4 o'clock Saturday.

The President: The understanding is that possibly the labors of the Convention may be finished on Saturday, and Chair does not like to take the responsibility of allowing excuses. The question now is upon adjournment. With reference to the request of the gentleman from Yellowstone who desires to be excused until Monday, and Chair would like to have the sense of the Convention upon that subject.

Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone: I do not insist upon that, if the Convention will adjourn until Saturday, but I have no idea it will.

The President: The question is upon the adjournment.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Convention stood adjourned until Friday, August 16, 1889, at 10 A. M.

THIRTY-SIXTH DAY

Friday, August 16, 1889

The Convention was called to order by the President at 10 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Goddard of Yellowstone wished leave of absence for the day.

Mr. Durfee of Deer Lodge: Mr. Reek desired leave of absence for the day.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer asked leave of absence for Mr. Loud.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

Mr. Gibson of Cascade begged to be excused until tomorrow.

Mr. Browne of Choteau likewise asked to be excused until tomorrow.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow sent up report of the Chairman of the Committee on Adjournment, Revision and Phraseology, which the Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, Your special Committee on Revision with a view of expediting the work of the Convention respectfully report that they have partially performed the work assigned them and recommend as follows; to-wit: That the different propositions contained in the Constitution be arranged in the following order:

First. Preamble.

Second. Article one. Boundaries.

Third. Article Two. Military Reservations.

Fourth. Article Three. Declaration of Rights.

Fifth. Article Four. Legislative Departments.

Sixth. Article Five. Executive Department.

Seventh. Article Six. Judiciary Department.

Eighth. Article Seven. Rights of Suffrage and Qualifications to hold office.

Ninth. Article Eight. State Institutions and Public Buildings.

Tenth. Article Nine. Education.

Eleventh. Article Ten. Revenue and Taxation.

Twelfth. Article Eleven. Public Indebtedness.

Thirteenth. Article Twelve. Military affairs.

Fourteenth. Article Thirteen. Corporations other than Municipal.

Fifteenth. Article Fourteen. Municipal Corporations and Officers.

Sixteenth. Article Fifteen. Public Lands.

Seventeenth. Article Sixteen. Labor.

Eighteenth. Article Seventeen. Miscellaneous Subjects and Future amendments.

Nineteenth. Article Eighteen. Schedule.

Twentieth. Article Nineteen. Signatures.

Twenty-first. Article Twenty. Ordinances on Federal Relations.

Twenty-second. Article Twenty-one. Ordinance on Elections.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) WARREN, Chairman.

Mr. Buford of Madison: I move the adoption of the report.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I think early in the season Mr. Callaway made the motion that that be inserted right after the Preamble and before the Bill of Rights—The Article on Boundaries be inserted immediately after the Preamble and in advance of the Bill of Rights—The Bill of Rights follows the boundaries.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I will state for the information of the gentleman it does follow the preamble, but it was deemed best by the Committee that the Military Reservations should be included right in the word boundaries, but it does follow the Preamble. First comes the Preamble and then the boundaries.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: In connection with the Revision Committee the Secretary of the Committee has a number of amendments which he desires to submit whenever the House is ready to take them up, and I will move these amendments be considered by the whole Convention and be considered in the Committee of the Whole.

The President: That will come up under the order of unfinished business.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: The Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment desires to make a report.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, Your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom were referred Propositions No. 38 and 40, Memorial No. 2 for Enrollment, beg leave to report that the enrolled copies thereof have been carefully compared with the originals as amended, and are correctly enrolled.

(Signed) MIDDLETON, Chairman.

The President: The Chairman of the Committee on Revision and Phraseology reports that they have a number of articles now ready with the slight amendments and changes to be made, and it has been moved and seconded that these matters be taken up in Convention instead of Committee of the Whole.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The President: If the Chairman of the Committee will present those articles they will be now considered.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I move you that the Committee on Revision, Phraseology and Adjustment be granted permission to set during the further sessions of the Convention and have leave of absence for that purpose.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Eaton of Park asked leave of absence, which was granted.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, Your Committee have considered proposition No. 1 on Preamble and Bill of Rights and recommend to strike out heading of Section one and insert in lieu thereof the words "Declaration of Rights. Strike out the word "That" wherever it occurs at the beginning of a section.

Mr. Hogan of Silver Bow moved the adoption of the said amendment. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 1 line 3 strike out word "that".

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 3 line 6 strike out the word "that".

Mr. Collins of Cascade moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 4 line 6 strike out the words "or capacity" and insert before the word "privilege" the word "or".

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 4 line 18, 19 and 20 strike out the words "or support any ministry or place of worship, religious sect or denomination" and insert "any place of worship or support any ministry, religious sect or denomination".

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 6 line 5 strike out the word "that".

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 8 line 4 after the word "shall" insert "in all Courts inferior to the District Court."

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 8 strike out after the word "complaint" in line 5 section 8 to and including the word "Court" in line 12 and insert "All criminal actions in the District Court, except those on appeal, shall be prosecuted by information after examination and commitment by magistrate, or after leave granted by the Court, or shall be prosecuted by indictment without such examination or commitment, or without such leave of the Court."

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 9 line 5 strike out the word "that".

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow moved the adoption of the amendment.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 10 line 11 insert the word "facts" in lieu of "fact".

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead moved the adoption of the amendment.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 12 line 2 strike out the word "such" and insert the word "the"; and in line 3 strike out the words "as may be".

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow moved the adoption of the amendment. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 17 line 3 strike out the word "case" and insert "criminal proceeding".

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead moved the adoption of the amendment. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move you that these several amendments as read be considered as adopted unless there is objection.

The President: If there be no objection these amendments will be considered adopted as read unless objection is raised.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 18 line 3 strike out the word "case" and insert the word "proceeding". Section 20 line 2 strike out the word "nor" and insert "or". Also in line 3 strike out "nor" and insert "or". Section 22 line 3 strike out "that". Section 23 line 13, in lieu of "shall not consist of more" insert "shall consist of not more". Section 25 line 10, the Committee recommend that after the word "infringe" the word "upon" be inserted.

The Chairman: There being no objection all these amendments will be considered adopted.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would suggest that in Section 25 that perhaps the sense of the Section might be improved by inserting the word "denizen" after the word "alien". Under the law as defined the class of citizens are divided into three. There are the alien, denizen and citizen, and denizens are defined to be those who are living temporarily in a country; they are not full citizens; and I think perhaps it would be well to unanimously consent that the word "denizens" should go in.

The President: If there be no objection the word "denizen" will be inserted after the word "alien".

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I would like to inquire if the word "that" is stricken out in every section.

The President: Yes, sir.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that this article No. 1 be referred to the enrollment and engrossment committee.

The President: If there be no objection this article No. 1 will be referred to the engrossment and enrollment committee. We will now proceed to the amendments offered to the next article.

The Clerk read as follows: Your Committee have considered Proposition No. 9, article on Military Affairs and recommend as follows: In Section 2 insert the words "Legislative Assembly" in lieu of "Legislature." In Sections 3 and 4 change the word "Legislature" to read "Legislative Assembly".

The President: These amendments will also be considered adopted if there be no objection.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 11 article on labor, insert in lieu of Section 1 as follows: Section 1. "The Legislative Assembly may provide for a bureau of Agriculture, Labor and Industry" to be located at the Capitol, and be under the control of a Commissioner appointed by the Governor subject to the confirmation of the Senate. The Commissioner shall hold his office for four years and until his successor is appointed and qualified. His compensation shall be as provided by law."

Insert in lieu of Section 2 the following: Section 2. It shall be unlawful for the warden or other officer of any State Penitentiary or Reformatory Institution in the State of Montana, or for any State Officer to let by contract to any person or persons or corporations the labor of any convict confined within said institutions.

The President: If there be no objection these amendments will be adopted and Propositions No. 9 and 11 will be referred to the Enrollment Committee to be enrolled.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I was going to ask simply for information, in a proposition where one section or two sections, as in this case, are stricken out and other sections are substituted in lieu thereof, whether it is not necessary for a vote of this Convention?

The President: By unanimous consent these amendments may be adopted, and of course the Constitution will be voted upon as a whole at the end. The changes that are made are simply in the arrangements and phraseology, and by unanimous consent this may be done. The gentleman from Cascade asks unanimous consent to introduce the following resolution, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows: Resolved, That members who are absent when the Constitution is signed in Convention be and they are hereby authorized to sign the same on the blank space left for that purpose, at the office of the Secretary of the Territory, at any time during office hours, within 30 days from the adjournment of the Convention.

Mr. Conrad of Choteau moved the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: That is too long a time. It will delay the Constitution going into the hands of the printers if we make that 30 days, and there is no necessity for granting that length of time. The gentlemen who are absent can present themselves and sign the Constitution. Fifteen days would be abundant, because it would delay the printing of the Constitution, if you make it longer.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I will accept the amendment.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the proposition. The Chair would suggest that this Constitution will probably be printed before that time, and inasmuch as it is to be submitted to the people early in October, it should be printed and sent out as early as possible.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I do not think from what I hear from the publishers in town that it can be printed in much less than two weeks.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the said resolution and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Browne of Choteau: I would like to be excused for the remainder of the term. I do not think that I will be able to get back tomorrow.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: It seems to me that there have been so many excuses now that there is scarcely a quorum here, and the result will be that it will block the adoption of the Constitution entirely.

The President: The Chair doubted the propriety of passing the resolution because it extends too much encouragement for members to leave, and certainly all the members should be here when the Constitution is signed. The Clerk states there are about 50 members present now. If there are many excuses for indefinite absence the probability is that we will not have a quorum.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was passed.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I hope the motion will not carry. My colleague is absent and has been detained on account of very severe sickness and he cannot possibly be here within 10 or 12 days.

The Chair put the question on the motion to reconsider and the same was declared carried.

The President: The motion stands before the Convention as it did when first offered.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I move the resolution be laid upon the table.

Mr. Collins of Cascade: I will withdraw it for the time being.

The Clerk read as follows: Your Committee have considered Proposition No. 13 article on boundaries, and recommends as follows: Section 1 line 5 insert "27th" in lieu of "22nd". Section 1 line 19 in lieu of word "till" insert "to". Section 1 line 23 insert "from" in lieu of second word "of".

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I ask the unanimous consent to strike out the word "commencing" and insert "beginning".

The President: If there be no objection the amendments as reported by the Committee will be adopted and Proposition No. 13 will be referred to the Enrollment and Engrossment Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Your Committee have considered Proposition No. 18 article on State Institutions and Public Buildings, and recommend as follows: In Section 2 strike out first and second lines up to word "at", and in ninth line after Section 2 write "in" with capital "I". Section 5 line 5 strike out the word "other".

The President: If there be no objection these amendments will be adopted and the Proposition referred to Committee on Enrollment and Engrossment.

The Committee on Revision report back Proposition No. 32 without amendment. By unanimous consent before referred to the Committee on Enrollment to be enrolled.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that when we take a recess it be until 4 o'clock when the Committee will be ready to report.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The President: What is the pleasure of the Convention.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: The Chairman of the Judiciary Committee directs me to make the following report for him.

The President: If there be no objection this report will be considered now.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President: Your Judiciary Committee to whom was referred Resolution No. 31 and also resolution introduced by Hickman, both relating to pay of extra clerks and employees etc. have directed me to report the same back to the Convention with the accompanying ordinance and resolution relating to the matter and providing for payment of employees, printing expenses, etc.

Dated August 16, 1889.

(Signed) DIXON, Chairman.

WHEREAS, the Act of Congress approved February 22, 1889, under which this Convention has been called, has failed to provide sufficient funds to defray the expenses of the same, and

WHEREAS, it has been found necessary to employ additional officers and incur extra expenditures for a systematic and expeditious transaction of the business of this Convention; therefore be it

ORDAINED, that Three Thousand Three Hundred $3300 Dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby declared to be a charge against the State of Montana for this express purpose of paying the following named officers necessarily incurred in the transaction of the business of this Convention:

*And 20 cents per folio for each and every folio transcribed by him of the proceedings of the Convention to be ascertained upon the filing of the same pursuant to the resolution authorizing the same.

RESOLVED, that the Chief Clerk is hereby authorized and required to issue a certificate to each of the employees, and for the expenditures, mentioned in Ordinance No. 34 stating the service rendered and amount due, which certificate shall be duly certified to by the President and Chief Clerk of this Convention and shall be a valid claim against the State of Montana.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I would state, Mr. President, in connection with that report that it embraces all the expenses of the Convention up to and including tomorrow, with the exception of the amount that will be found to be due the stenographer in addition to his per diem, which will be at the rate of 20 cents per folio for each and every folio of the proceedings of the Convention transcribed in pursuance of the resolution authorizing him to perform that service. The exact amount of course cannot be ascertained until this report is made and filed as provided in the resolution. So that in addition to the per diem of $695 there is added this additional amount as computed and ascertained when the report is filed; that whatever it amounts to may be made a charge against the State. I move the adoption of the Ordinance and Resolution.

The President: The Chair would ask the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke if he has considered the expense of printing the Constitution?

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: That amount was provided for in the resolution which was offered and passed yesterday as a separate item. That resolution provided for the printing of the Constitution under the direction of the Committee to be appointed by the President, which made it a charge against the State.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the Ordinance and Resolution. If there be no objection the report will be received and adopted; and question now before the Convention is upon the adoption of the Ordinance.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I notice Mr. President, in the reading of this report that this claim, or these claims, in the aggregate, constitute a claim against the State of Montana. It has been given out by some that it is in the range of possibility that our Constitution may be defeated. In that event what becomes of these claims? Who are the claims against?

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I will state to the Convention that I have prepared a memorial, which I intend to present. I was just about to state that I was going to offer, as soon as this report was adopted a memorial to Congress asking that an appropriation be made to cover all these expenses, which we shall ask anyhow whether the Constitution is adopted or not.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the Ordinance and the same was declared carried.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I offer the following memorial.

The President: The memorial to Congress offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Toole, will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows: "To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress Assembled,

Your memorialist the Constitutional Convention of Montana convened and sitting pursuant to an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to Provide for the Division of Dakota into Two States and to enable the people of North Dakota, Montana and Washington to form Constitutions and State Governments, and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States, and to make donations of public lands to such State." Approved February 22, A. D. 1889, respectfully represents that it has been in session since the 4th day of July, A. D. 1889.

That the orderly and expeditious transaction of its business has required an additional clerical and other force not provided for under said Act as construed by the Attorney General of the United States, and the incurring of other necessary expenses in excess of the amount appropriated in said Enabling Act, approximated in the aggregate about seven thousand dollars.

That your memorialists are advised and believe that Congress intended that the whole amount of necessary expenses incurred in holding said Convention should be borne by the United States.

Your memorialist therefore, prays that the sum of seven thousand dollars or so much thereof may be appropriated by Congress to pay such extraordinary and necessary expenses, and your memorialist will ever pray.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I move the adoption of the memorial.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

The President: This should be in the custody of some one to present to a delegate in Congress.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: If it is necessary I move that the Clerk of the Convention be directed to furnish the delegate in Congress an authentic copy of the memorial.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: There is a great international exhibition to come off in this country, and two states are seeking the honor. Chicago being a western City and closest to us, and our sister Conventions having adopted some similar resolutions I offer the following:

The Clerk read as follows: Resolved, that this Convention favors the City of Chicago as the place for holding the proposed worlds fair.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move to strike out Chicago and insert Helena.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I was about to amend by inserting Anaconda.

The Chair put the question on the adoption of the resolution and the same was declared carried.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Maginnis, will be appointed to see that this resolution reaches the proper sources.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I move we take recess.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: The special Committee on Revision have directed me to report Proposition No. 32 on Military Reservations back to the Convention without change.

The President: If there be no objection this report will be received and adopted and the article will be referred to the Engrossing and Enrollment Committee. The convention recently fixed the hour to which we should take a recess at 4 o'clock.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Just a moment. I simply desire for information to ask if it is the sense of the convention that these propositions in which no change is made should be again brought up.

The President: It is not necessary to bring them up at all.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I would suggest in that connection that they be rewritten.

The President: They should be rewritten unquestionably and it might be well for the Revision Committee to turn them over to the Engrossment Committee at once.

The Chair put the question on the motion to take a recess and a vote being taken the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 4 P. M.

• 4 P. M.

The convention was called to order by the President.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention? The Chair will suggest that if the minutes of the morning session were read they could be copied in the journal.

The Clerk read the minutes of the morning session.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher sent up a report of committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President: Your special Committee on Revision beg leave to report that having considered Proposition No. 49 on Legislative Departments they recommend amendments herewith as follows:

The President: The amendments will be read and if there be no objection will be considered adopted.

The Clerk read as follows: 1st, Section 4, line 15, insert words "odd numbered" after the word "from", and after the word "district": same line, strike out words "numbered odd numbers". Section 4, line 18, insert words "even numbered" after the word "from". After word "districts" line 18, strike out words "numbered the even numbers". Section 2, line 4, strike out the word "is". Section 8, insert word "shall" at end of line. Section 7, strike out words "attorney at law". Section 13, line 4 insert "sessions" in lieu of "session." Section 14, strike out "the" at end of line 4. Section 15, line 4, strike out the words "or surety". Section 15, line 4, strike out the words "or surely". Section 15, line 6, insert "sessions" in lieu of "session". Section 17, line 9, strike out words "in the" before word "State" and insert "under the laws of". Section 16, strike out first 8 lines and insert the following: "Section 16. The sole power of impeachment shall vest in the House of Representatives, the concurrence of a majority of all the members being necessary to the exercise. Impeachments shall be tried by the Senate sitting for that purpose and the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation to do justice according to law and evidence." Section 24, line 6, strike out the word "to". Section 38, line 4, insert "the" in lieu of "this". Section 46, lines 4, 11 and 15, insert "Legislative Assembly" in lieu of "Legislature". Leave out Section 46 and include it in Proposition on Executive as Section 8. Section 20, line 4, insert the word "every" before the word "law". Section 34, strike out last line of section, being the words "except interest on the public debt".

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I have an indistinct recollection that when that amendment was up there were strong arguments offered here why that amendment should prevail. I have a recollection, yet it is somewhat indistinct. Possibly someone may be present who offered that amendment.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I offered that amendment, from the simple fact that it is often the case that the interest on the public debt has to be paid in New York, the bonds being held there. You do not know exactly how much money you need in New York for the purpose of meeting those coupons when they become due, and if you depend on writing on there and ascertaining how much money you have to pay for a certain number of coupons, why, it is going to hamper matters.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Besides that, I would add, Mr. President, securities could never be very well disposed of except some provision was made for the permanent appropriations.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: It was the idea of some of the committee that the interest on the public debt was always paid in accordance with some law on the subject, and to that extent that it would not need to be an exception to the rule with regard to payments made from the Treasury, because it is always in accordance with some provision of law.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I am very sure, if the gentleman will read the funding acts of the United States he will see that the interest is made payable by annual appropriations, and if he will look over the appropriation bills he will never see any appropriation for it.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: That was the view the committee took of it.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: If I understand, the convention did not give this committee authority to change any propositions adopted by the convention. I made objection at the time that it was unnecessary and that general appropriations are usually made by the Legislature on any accruing indebtedness.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: Mr. President, in accord with the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, Mr. Hershfield, I rise to an inquiry as to whether the Committee on Revision and Phraseology are revising and amending our work. I do not know the exact extent of their authority: I do not care; but after this convention has gone through Committee of the Whole upon all these propositions and they have been adopted by the convention and referred to this committee for that single purpose, I suggest that while there are some things in this constitution that I do not like, and while there are some things that are not in there that I would like to have seen incorporated, I am satisfied as a whole with it as a compromise; but after that amendment has been made, then for that committee to come here and to strike out an amendment and submit it to the convention, I simply ask of this convention if that is their province? I don't know; I ask for information.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: I speak as an individual member of that committee, and I will say for myself and for the committee that we do not understand it is within our power to strike out amendments which have been offered, or in any way other than to express the opinion of the convention. Now, with reference to this particular suggestion, I think if you will leave it the way the convention has left it, that exception would allow the interest on the public debt paid without warrant, and since the interest on the public debt will be provided for by law anyway, we saw no use of the amendment, and therefore made the suggestion.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I think the gentleman is quite right. The amendment is unnecessary, and I so expressed myself at the time.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: It seems to me that this section contains two provisions. Now, interest on the public debt might have to be paid without laws. I think the section had better stand just as it is.

The President: The Chair is of the opinion that except by unanimous consent nothing in the way of an amendment which embraces striking out or adding thereto can be entertained, and if there should be any objection to the change proposed, it will have to remain as it stands in the original engrossed copy.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: I hope that the convention will unanimously agree to this amendment. I think it is important. Now, is not that section liable to this construction, that even the interest on the public debt may be paid without appropriation?

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I think it was the intention of the convention to say the interest on the public debt should be paid by appropriations made by law, but that warrants should not be necessary.

Mr. Marshall of Missoula: There ought to be something to show what it is drawn for, and a warrant on the treasury ought to be drawn for money to pay the debt by some officer, and certainly no money ought to be taken out of the public treasury except by an appropriation made by law. I say this section is liable to the construction that money to pay the public debt may be taken out of the treasury even without any appropriation, and it seems to me it ought to be stricken out by unanimous consent.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I did not think I would provoke any discussion on this matter when I called the attention of this body to it. I, however, take this view of the situation. This amendment was adopted by this convention. Fully one-third of the membership of this body are absent, and the question arises in my mind as to whether we have the right to suspend the rules without the unanimous consent of this body on this matter.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: As a member of the committee on revision, in the absence of the Chair, I desire to draw the attention of this convention to the way in which the additional members were appointed—that where the intention of the convention seems incompletely expressed the committee should amend such and report it to the convention. It was the idea that it was not the intention of the convention that payments should be made on interest any more than for any other purpose in the absence of an appropriation made for that purpose or in the absence of some warrant drawn by a proper officer. It seems to me that the language used in the proposition might be construed to allow the payment of interest on the public debt, or the public debt itself, in the absence of any appropriation whatever. I submit that it is susceptible of such a construction, and it seems to me that it would be perfectly proper and would perhaps be carrying out the ideas which would prevail with a majority of this convention, that no interest should be paid except by an appropriation made by law—whether a permanent law upon the subject or one made for the particular purpose of payment of some particular claim—and also that the proper officer should draw his warrant. Interest has never been paid except upon appropriation and upon warrant drawn for the purpose.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I beg leave to differ with the gentleman. It is a well known fact that when a State or Territory or any municipality or county wish to float bonds that they have got to expressly state that the bill authorizing the same has set aside a sinking fund for the purpose of paying the interest and also paying the bonded debt when it becomes due. You cannot sell a bond of the State or Territory unless this thing is provided for—for the payment of the interest and the payment of the debt when matured, by a sinking fund; and suppose you sell your bonds outside the Territory, in New York, for instance, it generally provides that the interest when due, payable semi-annually, shall be paid in New York or at the capital of the State at the option of the holders. Well, suppose they are held largely in New York or in Europe and they say they want the interest paid in New York; you are compelled to keep a fund on hand, an account in New York, to pay those coupons when due. Now, must you wait until the auditor draws these warrants for every little amount you want to draw, or will the Treasurer be authorized to keep that account there instead of drawing on the auditor? That is the point.

The President: Objection having been raised to the adoption of this amendment, it will be passed.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I withdraw my objection, Mr. President.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I object upon principle—not upon this proposition.

The President: Mr. Callaway of Madison makes objection to the striking out of this as provided by the amendment of the Revision Committee. The Revision Committee, as the Chair understands, has no authority to change the substance but simply to remove conflicting propositions and to improve the verbiage and phraseology. The amendment will not be adopted.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: If we can get unanimous consent to strike that out, I think it would be a wise thing to do.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I rise to a point of order. I understand objection has been made and probably will not be withdrawn. What is the use of laying this matter over?

The President: The point of order is well taken.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 40, last line on page of engrossed copy. Insert "in" in lieu of "into". Section 46, insert after the word "and" the words "he shall perform".

The President: This is all of the amendments to Proposition No. 19. The proposition as now amended will be referred to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 28 on Miscellaneous Subjects and Future Amendments. Section 1, line 6, strike out the word "to". Section 8, line 4, strike out the word "recommend" and insert "submit". In line five, strike out the words "to vote". In line six, after the word "election" insert "the question whether there shall be", and strike out the words in said line "for or against". Section 9, line 1, strike out the word "any".

The President: These are all the corrections in Proposition No. 29. The proposition will now be referred to the Enrollment and Engrossment Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 17 on Education. The committee propose that Proposition No. 17 on Education be amended as follows: Section 1 is a duplicate provision of one contained in the Proposition on Ordinance, and the question of striking out is referred to the convention.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow asked for information in relation to same.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke (on behalf of the committee) I would state that the reasons were given in the report. This is substantially the same provision that appears in the Ordinance No. 11. I am told, Section No. 11 of Proposition No. 33 on Ordinance is as follows: That provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of systems of public schools which shall be open to all the children of the State of Montana and free from sectarian control.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: The point I want to bring out is that I understand it is necessary from the Enabling Act that this shall be in the ordinance.

Mr. Craven of Lewis & Clarke: Yes sir.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I move the adoption of the report of the committee on that section.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I was going to simply observe that while it is almost an exact duplicate of the other provision, yet it does seem to me that inasmuch as Section one of this Proposition 17 is so short and is so appropriate, that there is no harm done by allowing them to remain, both of them, just as they are.

The President: The gentleman from Madison (Mr. Callaway) moves the adoption of the report of the committee.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I will object. It seems to be so appropriate that I believe it ought to stand.

Mr. Callaway of Madison: I withdraw the motion.

The President: The motion is withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 5, line 8, after the word "years" insert the words "residing therein respectively". Section 7, line 3, change "age" to "ages". Section 10, line 1, change "Legislature" to "Legislative Assembly". Section 12, line 2, strike out "the".

The President: These are all the amendments to Proposition No. 17. The proposition will be referred to the Enrollment Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: The following amendments to Proposition No. 14 on Rights of Suffrage and Qualifications to hold office are recommended: Section 2, line 1, after first word "all" insert the word "the". Section 2, line 4, after words "at all general elections" insert "and for all officers that now are or hereafter may be elected by the people and upon all questions which may be submitted to the vote of the people". Section 5, line 3, insert the word "time" in lieu of "times". Add to Section 9 the words "and to declare who shall be deemed taxpayers when a question shall be submitted to the vote of the taxpayers as a class".

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I object to that amendment.

Mr. Kanouse of Meagher: I rise to a point of order, sir. This committee were duly appointed under and by virtue of a resolution to do certain work and to report their action to this convention. If the action which the committee recommends is clearly within the province or authority that was given them, it becomes a question with a majority of this convention to determine, upon their report being sent to this convention, whether they shall adopt the action of the committee as the action of the convention or not, and it is not within the province of a single man by an objection, where the committee has acted under the rules that have been provided for their action, to say what is the will of the convention with regard to the work that has been performed. That is my point of order.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I have understood the Chair ruled that these matters could not be changed without unanimous consent, and as this proposition of the qualification of voters has been talked about a little more than any subject before this convention, I think it is radically wrong to hoist in an amendment at this late day in the absence of so many members.

The President: It was expressly stated when the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke made the motion that it was the intention that no matter should be changed, but that the committee was appointed simply for the purpose of removing any conflicting statements or inconsistencies that might exist and for improving the phraseology. All these matters have to be placed upon their final passage, and certainly it would not be right to have any new matter interpolated or any new matter stricken out. The clear intent, as the Chair understands, is simply to improve on the words, phrases and sentences of these various articles. These articles have all been placed upon their final passage and the ayes and nays have been called on every one of them.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke. I would simply state that the object was not to change anything, but to make the matter clear. It is simply amending the provision so as to make clear what might be doubtful. I will say further, Mr. President, that there was no intention to change any express idea of the convention in any way except to make it more definite.

Mr. Myers of Yellowstone: I do not wish to reflect in any manner whatever upon this committee. I believe they have acted in the very best of faith, and I give them credit for trying to put this instrument into the very best possible form; but as I understand the reading of the matter proposed, it transfers to the Legislature authority which has been exercised and passed upon by this convention—that it would leave it to the Legislature to declare a man a taxpayer and entitled to vote who might simply pay a license to retail any commodity, whiskey, tobacco, etc., in the community for a short period—that that would entitle him to be classed as a taxpayer. I think the convention has discussed this matter and have deliberately and naturally passed upon all the provisions and everything pertaining to the qualifications of a voter. Hence, I think anything pertaining to a change in the character of the provisions would be radically wrong.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I want to say, since it has been my misfortune to have precipitated twice today an argument of this character—I simply want to say this, that in my judgment were we to allow at this time, or any time, this committee to recommend or offer an amendment that might change the meaning of these propositions, we would be establishing a precedent that might before this convention adjourns launch us into two or three days debate; and therefore I think we had better draw the lines, and I accordingly renew my objection. I want to be consistent. I raised my objection a moment ago because I felt we would be establishing a wrong precedent, and thinking over it again the last few minutes I see no reason why I should withdraw my objection.

The President: The Clerk will proceed.

Mr. Carpenter of Lewis & Clarke: Can this matter be disposed of by a single objection?

The President: It has been ruled that unanimous consent is necessary.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 11, line 2, after word "elections" insert "and for State officers". Insert Proposition No. 39 as Section 12 of this proposition (No. 14) and make Section 12 Section 13. We recommend that the following be inserted as separate articles before the article on legislative departments, and that subsequent articles be renumbered to accord. Article..... Distribution of Powers. The powers of the government of this State are divided into three distinct departments, the legislative, executive and judicial, and no person or collection of persons charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any powers properly belonging to either of the others, except as in this constitution expressly directed or permitted.

The President: If there be no objection to this recommendation, it will be adopted.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: Before that is adopted, I would like to inquire if the Chairman of the Committee on Legislative Departments (Mr. Toole) if he has any objection to this.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I do not think there is any objection to it.

The President: The amendments will be considered adopted and the proposition referred to the Enrollment and Engrossment Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 10, Article on Executive Departments. In line four of Section 3 of the engrossed copy the words "until otherwise provided by law" are stricken out. Section 3, line 20, should not the word "three" be "two".

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move that the word stand as "two".

The President: If there be no objection, it will stand as two years instead of three.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 4, line 35. Strike out "one of them" and insert "officer".

The President: If there be no objection this will be changed.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 7 on line 23, strike out all of the section after the word "qualified".

The President: If there be no objection this will be amended as reported.

The Clerk read as follows: After Section 7 insert as Section 8 Section 46 of the Article on Legislative Department and renumber all subsequent sections to accord.

The President: If there be no objection, this amendment will be adopted.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I move the convention do now adjourn.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move we take a recess until eight o'clock.

Mr. Knowles of Silver Bow: I will withdraw my motion then.

The motion of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 8 o'clock P. M.

The convention was called to order by the President at 8 P. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The President: The convention will now resume consideration of Proposition No. 10.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 8, line 17, strike out "a" and insert "the". Strike out line 20 and the first three words of line 21. On line 22, strike out "thereon" and insert "thereof". Line 27, strike out the final "s" of the word "proof", and after "roof" insert the word "that"; and in line 28 before the word "time" insert "the"; and on line 30 strike out "shall have" and insert "has". On line 29 after the word "and" insert the word "of" and strike out the words "applied for" and insert the word "sought".

Mr. Luce, of Gallatin: I object to striking out the words "shall have been" and inserting "has". It is certainly ungrammatical.

The President: The gentleman from Gallatin objects to the amendment on the ground that it is not grammatical, and that the words as they are are more appropriate.

Mr. Watson of Fergus: I move that the amendment read as follows: "Until notice of the time and place of such hearing and of the relief sought shall have been given by publication", etc.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read as follows: Section 9, strike out the word "commencement" on line 28 and insert the word "beginning". Section 10, strike out "he has" on line 4 and insert "it is", and after the word "convened" on said line, strike out "it". Section 11, line 28, strike out "Legislature" and insert "Legislative Assembly". Line 31, strike out "Legislature" and insert "Legislative Assembly". Line 39, strike out "Legislature" and insert "Legislative Assembly". Section 14, line 25, insert the words "pro tempore" after "president" in line 21, and strike out "pro tem", and after the word "president" insert "pro tempore". Section 16, line 2, strike out "this" and insert "the". Section 19, line 19, strike out "Legislative" and insert "Legislative Assembly". On third from last line of section add "s" to the word "deem".

The President: Proposition No. 10 on Executive Departments will be referred to the Engrossment Committee, the amendments read by the Clerk being adopted if there be no objection.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 21, article on Judiciary Departments. Section 2, line 13, strike out "superintending" and insert "supervisory". Section 17, line 5, insert after the word "in" the word "each". In line 6, omit the final letter "s" in the word "districts". In line 8, strike out the words "District Judge" and insert "Judges of such district". Section 30, strike out line one and insert the following: "No Justice of the Supreme Court nor Judge of the District". Section 31, strike out lines one and two and insert the following: "No Justice or Clerk of the Supreme Court, nor Judge or Clerk of any District Court shall act". Section 33, line 2, strike out "Judges" and insert "Justices". Section 34, strike out lines one, two and three, and insert as follows: "Vacancies in the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, or Judge of the District Court or Clerk of the Supreme Court shall be filled by".

The President: These being all the amendments to Proposition No. 21, they will be considered adopted, if there be no objection, and the proposition will be referred to the Engrossing Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Mr. President, your special Committee on Revision beg leave to report that they have considered proposition returned herewith and recommend the adoption of amendments as follows: Proposition No. 36, Public Indebtedness. Section 6. On line 15, strike out the word "provide" and on line 16 strike out the words "for an increase in" and insert the word "extend".

The President: These being the only amendments to Proposition No. 36, they will be considered adopted and the proposition referred to the Engrossing Committee. Proposition No. 24 and 35 are returned without correction. They will likewise be sent to the Engrossment Committee.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. President, Proposition No. 27 is reported back without correction. Also Proposition No. 38 on Schedules. Neither of them needs correction.

The President: The propositions will be referred to the Engrossing Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 40, Apportionment and Representation. On line 4 of Section 2, after the word "in" insert the words "the year".

The President: This being the only correction to Proposition No. 40, it will be considered adopted and the proposition referred to the Engrossing Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 31. Section 3, on line 6, strike out the word "for" after the word "proxy". Section 20, line 14, strike out "Legislature" and insert "Legislative Assembly".

The President: These being all the amendments to Proposition No. 31, they will be considered adopted and the proposition referred to the Engrossing Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Proposition No. 33 on Ordinance. At end of line one of Ordinance 2, insert the word "proposed". Ordinance 7, on line 10, insert after the word "of" the word "public".

The President: These being all of the amendments to Proposition No. 33, they will be considered adopted and the proposition referred to the Engrossing Committee.

The Clerk read as follows: Election Ordinance. Mr. President: Your Committee on Revision report Proposition 33 with amendments herewith, which they recommend be adopted. Election Ordinance. Proposition No. 33. Ordinance 3. Strike out on line 2 the words "places in the several". Strike out on line 5 of Ordinance 3 the word "this" and insert "the". On line 8, strike out the word "this" and insert "the". On line 10 strike out the word "this" and insert "the". On line 16, strike out the word "this" and insert "the".

Ordinance 5. On line 3, after the word "canvassed" insert "by the canvassing boards of the respective counties". On line 14 strike out the words "a majority" and insert "any two of them".

Ordinance 11. On line 4, after the word "the" insert the words "Clerks of the" and on line 3 insert before the word "for" the word "and".

The President: These being all of the amendments to Proposition No. 33, they will be considered adopted and the proposition will be referred to the Engrossing Committee.

Mr. Mayger of Lewis & Clarke: If in order, I would like to turn back to Proposition No. 31. In Section 20 of the printed copy, I think the word "that" ought to be stricken out, and on line six "that the Legislature shall pass laws". It ought to be "the Legislature shall pass laws".

The President: If there be no objection to the amendments proposed by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke, they will be considered adopted. This completes all the amendments reported back by the Revision Committee. It has been suggested by the Clerk that if the journal of the afternoon session could be read and written out it will facilitate business. If there be no objection the journal will be read.

The Clerk read the journal of the afternoon session of this day.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that when we adjourn we adjourn to meet at nine o'clock tomorrow morning.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move to amend that motion by making it 11 o'clock. It will be absolutely impossible for the Clerks to enroll the work that is now on hand before 11 o'clock, and nothing can be accomplished except we keep those Clerks at work.

The amendment was seconded.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I know it is hardly in order, but yesterday we had a little latitude in discussing this matter, and I would like to state my reason for making this motion. Yesterday we discussed the hour of adjournment and we brought out several facts that I think have helped us today in expediting matters. My reason for making the motion to adjourn until nine o'clock, or rather fixing the hour of adjournment at nine o'clock, was that the enrolling Clerks now at work have doubtless already some of this work accomplished or completed, or they will have a greater part of it completed when they stop work tonight, and if so we can certainly meet tomorrow morning at nine o'clock and read what has been done, as we have been doing today. As the committee have completed their work we have met here and taken up their work. Now, we have heard the Chairman of this committee say it would take about four or five hours tomorrow to read this entire constitution. Now, I feel like putting in a plea at this time for several of the members who have been here ever since this convention convened on the 4th of last month, and if it is in the range of possibility for us to complete our labors so that they can take the train tomorrow at four o'clock, they can reach their homes a few hours later; whereas a delay of a few hours will keep them twenty-four hours longer. Now, if it is possible for us to meet at nine o'clock and have the Clerk read what has already been accomplished, it will expedite matters very much.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I was going to suggest that we pay these Clerks extra and let them work tonight. I would be very glad to pay one myself, and let them do this enrolling tonight and we will be ready to go to work at nine o'clock tomorrow morning. I would be very glad to do that.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, there is nobody here any more anxious to get home than I am, but this matter of pushing this work, which is very particular work, and expecting the work to be carefully done, is out of the question. It is that character of work that a man cannot work at day and night continuously, and the Chairman of the Committee on Revision informs me that they have reported everything to the convention, so that the entire matter is now in the hands of the Enrolling Committee. It seems to me impossible to get through so as to let anybody get away at four o'clock.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: Would not it be better to meet at 11 o'clock and take no recess?

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I think so. We can have the matter then all arranged and we can take it up and have it read. It takes a long while after some of these articles are enrolled, to compare them. I do not believe there will be anything gained by meeting earlier than 11 o'clock tomorrow.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I wish to remind this convention that yesterday when the suggestion was made by myself that we take up a few of the propositions that the committee had already completed, it was thought impracticable, and yet upon second sober thought this convention came back this morning for the purpose of taking up these matters as the Committee on Revision and Phraseology completed them; and I believe it is not impracticable for us to meet here tomorrow morning at nine o'clock and read what the Committee on Enrollment have already completed. As for these Clerks, they have had a very easy time. Many of us have worked all night, and if it is necessary I am willing to take off my coat and work all night; and if these clerks cannot do it, I am willing to pay my share of the expense necessary to employ additional Clerks. I feel like making an earnest plea for not hurrying matters but certainly being as expeditious as possible. I do not think it is impracticable.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: There seems to be a growing sentiment in favor of completing this work very soon, and if it be found practicable to pay these Clerks a little extra tonight, I think it will aid the Committee on Revision to get through. I think we can finish our work by one or two o'clock tomorrow, and I am strongly in favor of meeting as early as nine o'clock.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I move we adjourn. That will make it ten o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared lost.

Mr. Witter of Beaverhead: I move you that when we adjourn, we adjourn to meet at nine o'clock tomorrow morning.

The President: There was an amendment offered to that that it be made 11 o'clock. The question is now on the amendment.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I insist upon that motion. I will not be able to report any considerable portion of the constitution back here at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The President: The Chair would suggest that there is no one more anxious to get away from here than the Chair, but he would admonish the gentlemen that by the exercise of any undue haste they might overlook some vital matters pertaining to this constitution, and while I know it is important and desirable to get away from here as quickly as possible, I insist that due attention be given to everything now at the latter end, so that we may make no mistakes.

The Chair put the question on the said amendment, to adjourn to 11 o'clock, and the same was declared lost.

The President: The question now is upon the motion that when the convention adjourn it adjourn to meet at nine o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: Before the convention adjourns, in order that we may not have any imperfectly printed constitution, I move that a committee be appointed by the Chair from the Lewis & Clarke County delegation to read the printed proof of the constitution before it is sent out.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The Chair will announce the committee with the other committee that has been appointed in the morning.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I move we adjourn.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The convention stood adjourned until Saturday, August 17th, 1889, at nine A. M.

THIRTY-SEVENTH DAY.

Saturday, August 17th, 1889.

The convention was called to order by the President at 9 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

The Chaplain offered prayer.

The Clerk read the journal of the evening session of the previous day.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have two or three resolutions here which I would like to have read.

The President: Does the gentleman from Silver Bow desire to have these resolutions read or withheld until later on?

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: They may be withheld for the present. I would suggest that when the constitution is read, Mr. Kanouse or Mr. Hartman take the engrossed copies which were corrected and when the constitution is read by the Clerk that they notice whether the corrections have been made as recommended by the committee. I just make that as a suggestion.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. President, the cashier of the Merchants National Bank requested me to make a statement this morning that will be good news to the pages and the clerks of this convention—those that are not provided for by the government—that upon properly certified accounts they can take them down to the bank and he would pay them at par.

The President: The gentleman from Lewis & Clarke Mr. Hershfield desires to make the statement to those interested that the cashier of the Merchants National Bank requested him to state that upon properly certified accounts or statements of their accounts, the vouchers would be cashed at the Merchants National Bank without any discount.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I move that if the Constitution is to be read, that we proceed with the reading.

The President: The Chair has inquired if there is any part of it ready. Will the Chairman of the Engrossing Committee state whether or not the constitution is ready?

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to ask whether it is necessary, after having read this in Committee of the Whole and amended it, to have it read again in convention and amended, and have it referred to one or two committees where it has been revised, if it is necessary still to have it read again here. I want the sense of the convention. I have no feeling in regard to it myself, but it seems to me it has been read so much that it has got to be a little monotonous.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: It seems to me, Mr. President, this will only be the third reading and it will be necessary.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I would suggest, Mr. President, that it has not been read at all since the engrossment of it and it will be necessary to read it over and have a comparison in some way by some member of the Engrossing Committee between the constitution as it is now written and the part of the corrected bills from which it was transcribed.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I would like to ask if the committee have not read it over?

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: That may be, but in order that we may be doubly safe I think it would be well to pursue the reading of it.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: I have no objection to it myself.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I do not know, Mr. President, what is customary in a body like this. If my memory serves me correctly in a legislative body when a bill is reported back as correctly enrolled it is certainly not necessary to read it again to that body. The committee is supposed to correct any typographical errors.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, the several propositions were at times amended and fearfully mutilated in the Committee of the Whole; they went into the convention and were placed upon their final passage without being engrossed; then were referred to the engrossing committee for the purpose of engrossing the bills with those amendments; then these propositions went to the Committee on Revision and Phraseology. They have been again corrected and have gone through the hands of another committee, and I do not believe there is any member of this convention would feel that he was doing himself or the people that sent him here justice if he would sign a garbled report of this kind without hearing it read for himself. I was anxious to get away from here three weeks ago. Within the last 12 or 20 hours there seems to be undue haste manifested on the part of a few, and I submit that in an hour and a half or two hours the committee will be able to present the whole matter intact, all as one document, and that it should be read section by section and every word of it, and I believe that it can be done today. So far as I am personally concerned, I would not hesitate to sign the constitution, because it has passed under my eyes, nearly all of it; but that is not true as to most of the members of the convention, and it certainly is at this time too important a matter to jumble over with haste. So far as I am personally concerned, I do not want to assume the responsibility as Chairman of the committee and have any member sign it without having read it over word for word.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: If that be the case, and I have no doubt that the views of my colleague are correct, why not go on? It is not necessary to have it all pinned and starched. Why not take it up in the order in which it is sent in to us by the committee? It is not necessary to wait two or three hours to commence it. It seems to me it is a waste of time.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: We have been here about six weeks trying to get this constitution in shape, and I feel we ought not to jump over six weeks work in three hours. So far as I am concerned I would rather stay here another week. We have been here six weeks, and I believe in having the matter right.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: In order to get the sense of this body, I move that we take up the enrolled propositions in the order in which they are to be printed in the constitution.

The motion was seconded.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I hope that motion will not prevail, and for the very reasons that I have stated. This matter should not be settled by piecemeal and afterwards entrusted to Clerks or other persons to fix up. If it is a constitution at all it is as a whole. The different propositions as ordered to be arranged by the Committee on Revision are not in the hands of the Committee on Enrollment in that shape. The bill on judiciary has not yet been copied; there are two or three others that are not quite completed. So far as I am concerned, as Chairman of that committee, I am not ready to report back a single proposition at this moment, and refuse to do it unless the convention orders me. I think I can report the whole matter back in an hour and a half, but not sooner.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: With all due respect, I think he impeaches the intelligence of that committee and this body when he says we cannot take up these propositions and arrange them in the order in which they shall be arranged. Now, those propositions stand out each for itself in their own order, and it seems to me we can take up all these and dispose of them before we take up the executive or the judiciary departments, and I hope the motion will prevail.

Mr. Luce of Gallatin: It is an old and true saying that that which is worth doing at all is worth doing well. We have spent six weeks here now and a little over and I would like to see the business finished up in order, and if it takes a day longer, all well and good, I am willing to stay here and see it properly finished up. Now, when the Chairman of this committee says he is not ready to report and cannot reasonably report any of these propositions at this time, I think it is worthy the consideration of this convention and that that should have some weight here. Gentlemen seem to get in a hurry all at once, and I have thought sometimes that the convention has been unnecessarily delayed by motions to adjourn, by leaves of absence, by going away Thursday and getting leave until Tuesday or Wednesday. Now, in completing this instrument, I say, in the name of justice and in the name of the people, let us do it considerately and in order. Let us take the word of the Chairman of the Committee on Enrollment and go ahead with this business orderly and deliberately and not have any mistakes at the end. Notwithstanding we have been here six weeks we found that when we came to put this constitution together there were grievous mistakes.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I move we take a recess until 11 o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until 11 o'clock A. M.

The convention was called to order by the President at 11 A. M.

The Clerk called the roll.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: Mr. President, I notice that the Committee on Revision and Phraseology have overlooked one article, the article on Apportionment and Representation. I therefore make the motion that that article be placed between the article on Legislative Departments and Executive Departments and be numbered six. The proposition is No. 40.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: There are some resolutions here offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole). They may be considered now.

The Clerk read as follows: "Resolved, That immediately upon the adjournment of this convention it shall be the duty of the President to deliver the original enrolled constitution of the State as adopted and passed by this convention to the Secretary of the Territory of Montana, who shall deposit and preserve the same among the archives of the Territory."

Mr. Conrad of Choteau: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The Clerk read the following resolution also offered by the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke (Mr. Toole): "Resolved, That when the constitution and address shall have been printed as provided by an ordinance of this convention, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Territory, to whom the same shall be delivered, to mail fifty copies of the same to each member of this convention and to send the remainder thereof to the several County Clerks of this Territory for distribution."

Mr. Conrad of Choteau moved the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, the committee is ready to report except upon the article on judiciary, and that will probably take 20 minutes before it is ready, and it has not yet been compared. All the rest of the propositions have been compared and are arranged, with the exception of that. There is about one page, or a trifle over a page, yet to be copied. I suppose it might be inserted and read without being compared by the committee on enrollment. It can be compared at the time it is being read by the clerk.

The President: If there be no objection, the reading of the constitution will be begun.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: We cannot very well fasten the work together. There is about a page yet to be finished. It will take about 15 minutes yet to do it.

The President: Is there any other business that the convention desires to consider while we are waiting for this?

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: If it be in order, I believe there has been some discussion among the members as to whether or not it would not be proper to add two more members to the committee on address. I therefore move that the committee be increased to seven members.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that when we take a recess, it shall be until the hour of one o'clock.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I have a resolution I would like to offer.

The President: The clerk will read the resolution offered by the gentleman from Silver Bow.

The clerk read as follows: "RESOLVED, That a committee consisting of Martin Maginnis, B. Platt Carpenter, Joseph K. Toole, Arthur J. Craven and William Muth be and are hereby appointed a committee to superintend the publication of the constitution, and that Henry Bernard be appointed a clerk of said committee."

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The President: There is a motion to appoint a committee of three, which ought to be withdrawn before this is put.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that the motion by which the committee of three was to be appointed to superintend the printing of the constitution be reconsidered.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: In support of this resolution I would say that it is but just that this committee be appointed from Lewis & Clarke county. I have added there as a clerk of that committee Mr. Bernard, who has been a clerk of the committee on taxation and revenue. Mr. Bernard is perhaps one of the very best proof readers in Montana, and that is the reason I offer the resolution as it is.

The chair put the question on the adoption of the said resolution, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move we take a recess.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The convention took a recess until one o'clock P. M.

RECESS

The convention was called to order by the President at one P. M.
The clerk called the roll.

There being no quorum present, a call of the house was ordered.

A quorum having arrived, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow offered the following ordinance.

ORDINANCE NO.....

BE IT ORDAINED: That the estimate provided for in Ordinance No. 34 for the payment of the extra employes, etc., of this convention, be and is hereby increased in the sum of one hundred dollars ($100) for the purpose of paying Henry Bernard, a secretary and proof-reader to the committee on supervising the printing of the constitution, and to defray the cost of type-writing, etc.

RESOLVED, That a certificate to cover the expenditure mentioned in this ordinance be issued to Henry Bernard for the payment of the same, and in the manner provided for in Ordinance and Resolution No. 34.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow moved the adoption of the ordinance.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: There is a resolution offered by Mr. Knippenberg of Beaverhead County on the clerk's desk. The clerk will read the same.

The clerk read as follows: RESOLVED, That the President of this convention is hereby requested to appoint a committee of seven (7) (the president himself to be the chairman of such committee) which shall prepare plans and by-laws by which all the members and employes of this convention shall form a permanent organization and may meet socially at least once each year, so that the happy and agreeable relationships here formed may endure and even strengthen in the years to come. This committee shall be known as the "Executive Committee" and shall have full power to elect the proper officers for the first year, or until the first annual meeting of the proposed organization".

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was carried.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The chair will appoint on that committee Messrs. Knippenberg, Maginnis, Stapleton, Marshall, Gibson, Rickards, and Myers. The committee on address will be as follows: J. K. Toole, Callaway, Dixon, Carpenter, Collins, Bickford and Warren.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, your committee on engrossment and enrollment are ready to report.

The President: The clerk suggests that the minutes be allowed to be read, and that they can be copied now and be ready to be signed when the convention adjourns.

The clerk read the minutes of the morning session.

The President: The report of the Committee on Enrollment will now be read.

The clerk read as follows: Mr. President: Your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom were referred all of the propositions and articles together with ordinances and memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States for the purpose of being enrolled and arranged, with the several articles properly numbered, beg leave to report that your said committee have performed that duty, and herewith submit an enrolled copy of the whole of said matter.

(Signed) MIDDLETON, Chairman.

Mr. Middleton of Custer stated that there was a memorial on lead ore, and asked whether it should be enrolled.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: In connection with that memorial, as I understand, it does not go into the constitution. The Chief clerk enrolled the memorial.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: It is true, it does not go into the constitution, but it is customary that ordinances, which are no part of a constitution, and memorials, are as a rule printed with them, and for that reason I believe it should be a part of this report.

The President: The clerk has an enrolled copy of this memorial that might be sent to the Enrolling Committee and be referred.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move, Mr. President, that that be done.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the Warren memorial be enrolled and published as a part of the ordinance.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I call for a division on the question, and before the motion is put I desire the attention of the members called as to what is the motion.

The President: The question is upon the adoption of the motion to have the memorial which has been sent to Congress touching the question of lead ores engrossed and published in a proper place in the constitution.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I think the chair is misinformed as to the motion. As I understand the motion, it is to have the memorial engrossed and a copy forwarded to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The President: The chair has already forwarded a copy to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: There certainly is some impropriety in embodying in our constitution a simple memorial expressing the opinions and the wishes of our convention, and it certainly should not be printed and become a part of our constitution.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I do not think the gentleman from Lewis & Clarke understands the purpose of the motion. It is not that it become a part of the constitution. The ordinances are no part of the constitution, but the ordinances of the convention are almost invariably printed with the constitution, and so are the memorials to Congress. I have no interest in the question, but I submit in my judgment it was one of the memorials that was passed by this convention, and if any memorial is published with the constitution it certainly should be with the rest. There is only one memorial, I believe—one to Congress and the other to the Secretary of the Interior; and I know of no reason why it should not go before the people as the expression of this convention upon that question.

The President: The question is to engross the memorial and publish it in connection with the constitution.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared lost on division.

The President: The chair would state that he has already forwarded a copy of the memorial to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: As I understand, that is all that is required in the matter.

Mr. Cooper of Gallatin: I move we proceed to the reading of the constitution.

The motion was seconded.

The President: If there be no objection, the clerk will now begin the reading of the constitution.

The clerk read at some length.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer: (Interrupting the clerk, Mr. President, there are some men who distrust their friends without purpose or reason. Now, I am willing to trust our committees. For that reason, I hope the reading will be dispensed with.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I hope the request will certainly be withdrawn for the purpose of reading the article on Judiciary. That has not been compared by any committee. So far as I am concerned, I shall insist upon reading and comparing that article. If it is the sense of the convention that the rest of the reading be dispensed with, I am agreeable.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move that after the reading of the article on Judiciary, the further reading of the constitution be dispensed with.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The clerk will now proceed with the reading of the article on Judiciary.

The clerk read said article.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I move that the clerk proceed to call the roll and that the constitution be placed on its final passage.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: I move that an attesting clause be added to the Constitution.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The chair did not understand the full intent of the gentleman's motion; whether it comprehends calling the ayes and nays upon the adoption of the Constitution first.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I will make the motion as well.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the Constitution of the State of Montana. Those who are in favor of the adoption will when their names are called say aye, and those opposed no. The clerk will withhold the calling of the roll until the attesting clause is added.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula sent up a resolution to the clerk's desk.

The President: If the gentleman from Gallatin will withhold his motion on the adoption of the Constitution until the resolution of the gentleman from Missoula can be considered, it will be received and read by the clerk.

Mr. Hartman of Gallatin: I withhold the motion for the present.

The clerk read the resolution of the gentleman from Missoula (Mr. Bickford) as follows: WHEREAS, The Helena Independent, the Helena Journal, the Helena Herald, the Butte Daily Miner, and the Great Falls Leader have been laid upon the tables of the members of this convention during its entire session; and WHEREAS, the reasonable value thereof is two hundred and fifty dollars. THEREFORE, Be it ordained: That the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars is hereby made a charge against the State for the express purpose of paying said publications respectively, as follows:

The Helena Daily Independent, Fifty Dollars.

The Helena Journal, Fifty Dollars.

The Helena Herald, Fifty Dollars.

The Daily Miner, Fifty Dollars.

The Great Falls Leader, Fifty Dollars."

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I wish to state that the resolution is introduced because the respective newspapers mentioned have materially aided the members of this convention in keeping track of the work. It has been just as much a part of our regular business to read the newspapers as it has been to read the journal; and by reading the newspapers we have been able to correct some of the errors that have crept into it.

The President: Before this motion is put, the chair desires to ask that the Butte Miner be eliminated from the provisions of the resolution.

Mr. Aiken of Silver Bow: I move that the Boulder Age be inserted.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I will accept that.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I hope that if this resolution is carried the Butte Miner will not be eliminated. I think if any paper merits kind treatment from this convention it is the Butte Miner. I am opposed to the resolution in toto, but if it is going to pass I would like to see the Butte Miner included.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula: I will ask permission to withdraw the resolution until after action on the constitution.

The President: The question now is upon the adoption of the Constitution. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. Maginnis of Lewis & Clarke: I ask unanimous consent that such of the members as desire to record their vote on the adoption of the Constitution, and who are now absent, may have that privilege later.

The President: If there be no objection, the members who are now absent may have the privilege of coming in and recording their vote for or against the constitution and signing the instrument. It should be arranged to be signed alphabetically.

The clerk called the roll. The vote stood as follows: Ayes: Aiken, Bickford, Brazleton, Breen, Buford, Bullard, Burleigh, Burns, A. F.; Burns, A. J.; Burns, Edward; Cardwell, Carpenter, Cauby, Chessman, Conrad, Cooper, Craven, Dixon, Durfee, Dyer, Fields, Gaylord, Gillette, Goddard, Graves, Hammond, Hartman, Haskell, Hatch, Hershfield, Hickman, Hobson, Hogan, Joyes, Kanouse, Kennedy, Knippenberg, Knowles, Loud, Maginnis, Marrion, Marshall, Mayger, McAdow, Middleton, Mitchell, Muth, Myers, Parberry, Ramsdell, Rotwitt, Rickards, Sargeant, Schmidt, Stapleton, Toole, J. K.; Watson, Whitehill, Winston, Witter, Mr. President—61.

Nays: Courtney and Warren.

Absent: Browne, Callaway, Eaton, Joy, Kohrs, Reek, Robinson, Toole, J. R.; Webster—9.

Mr. Marrion of Missoula: I move that the delegation that desire to go home on the three o'clock train be allowed to sign the Constitution now. The motion was seconded.

The Chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I would like to inquire if the Chair has announced the vote on the Constitution.

The president: There are nine absent, 61 voting in the affirmative, and two in the negative. There is a sufficient number to adopt the Constitution, and it is hereby declared adopted. (Applause.)

Mr. Hickman of Madison: I move that the members of the convention be allowed ten days in which to append their names to the Constitution. The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President called Mr. Marshall of Missoula to the chair.

The chairman (Mr. Marshall of Missoula in the chair): Gentlemen of the convention: The following resolution has been offered by Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke.

The clerk read as follows: RESOLVED, That the thanks of this convention be, and they are hereby tendered to the Hon. Wm. A. Clark for the able, faithful and efficient manner in which he has discharged the duties of presiding officer of this convention, and for his uniform courtesy and impartiality, we extend to him our warmest gratitude.

RESOLVED, That this convention, in its appreciation of the high character and worth of its President, hereby expresses its sincere wishes for his future health, happiness and prosperity, and that upon the dissolution of this convention, he will be accompanied by the earnest trust that his highest aspirations may be fulfilled, and his every aim realized.

Mr. Rickards of Silver Bow: I move the adoption of the resolution by a rising vote.

The motion was seconded, and unanimously carried.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: Mr. Chairman and Mr. President: We have been here 45 days. I am certain that each member will carry away with him nothing but pleasant recollections of his associations here and a consciousness of having discharged his duties faithfully, each according to his own conscience. I know that I express the views of all the members of this convention when I say that you, Mr. President, will carry with you not only the respect but the best wishes of the members of your future happiness and prosperity. (Applause).

The President: Mr. Chairman and gentleman of this convention: For the generous and very complimentary resolutions which have been adopted and which have been so eloquently supplemented by the remarks of the honorable gentleman from Lewis & Clarke county, I cannot summon words to fitly express my appreciation and gratitude, and I desire to avail myself of this opportunity to reciprocate the sentiment and to thank the gentlemen of this convention collectively, and each one of you personally, as well as the officers and attaches of the convention, for the indulgence, the forbearance, the courteous attention and the kindness which have uniformly and constantly characterized all of your actions and relations towards me. After forty-five days of arduous, and may I say with justice, conscientious labors on your part, during which time there have been discussed the most important and vital questions affecting the interests of this State and which necessarily involved many heated, yet manfully-conducted contests, requiring frequent and prompt decisions from the presiding officer, I can point with pleasure and pride to the fact that all these opinions have been received and accepted without appeal. This probably unparalleled experience in the history of legislative assemblies in this Territory implies a confidence in the judgment and fairness of the presiding officer, as well as a dignified and respectful consideration, which I heartily appreciate and shall ever remember with grateful pleasure. (Applause). We have now finished our labors and are about to append our names to the Constitution of the State of Montana. It is not a perfect instrument. In it are incorporated ideas and principles upon which we are not all agreed; but yielding gracefully to that recognized republican principle that the sense of the majority should always prevail, we have almost unanimously adopted it, and it will now soon be submitted to a critical and intelligent people for their approval. I believe that, notwithstanding some imperfection, the people of Montana will adopt it. If there be defects the wisdom of future legislators may be confidently relied upon to apply the remedy. Montana has an opportunity now presented her which she should not neglect to avail herself of. She cannot afford to pause or falter on the very eve and on the very threshold of admission while her three fair neighboring sisters are pressing forward to distinction and renown. (Applause). It is time to break the shackles that have for so long a time embraced the development of the resources of this country. It is time that this people, so richly endowed with all the qualities that go to noble manhood, should be entitled to enjoy the full privileges of American citizenship. Statehood will claim all of our energies and stimulate our ambition. It will encourage a faith in the stability and permanency of this country and will induce large investments in our properties. It will strengthen and enhance the credit not only of individuals but of the State; it will encourage the building of new lines of railways within our borders, and people our fertile valleys; it will establish new manufactures over this country; it will build up new cities and increase the population of the old ones, and it will facilitate the opening of the countless mines of this Territory.

In conclusion, I trust that each one of you may live to enjoy a reasonable fruition of the labors you have performed here and until the envied yet deserved fame of this magnificent State, our beloved Montana, whose fundamental law you have helped to frame, shall be extended to all the ends of the earth. (Applause).

President Clark resumed the chair.

The clerk read the resolution of Mr. Bickford of Missoula relating to pay of newspapers.

Mr. Buford of Madison moved its adoption.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and a division being called for, the same was declared lost by a vote of 13 in the affirmative to 17 in the negative.

Mr. Fields of Park moved to reconsider the motion.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the motion, and the same was declared carried.

The President: The question is now before the convention again.

Mr. Fields of Park moved the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The chair stated the question.

The clerk read the resolution for the information of the convention.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and a division being called for, the same was declared carried by a vote of 24 in the affirmative to 20 in the negative.

The President: The following resolution has been offered by Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: RESOLVED, That William H. Todd, Chief Clerk, Jennie M. Merriman, Assistant Chief Clerk, John M. Kay, Ed. Kerr, E. C. Garrett, Lee Swords, John M. Trumbull, Henry Barnard, Clerks, and G. H. Stanton, engrossing and enrollment clerk, for their fidelity in the faithful discharge of their arduous and laborious duties, and the thanks of this body are hereby tendered them.

Mr. Burleigh of Custer moved the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded, and the resolution declared carried.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow also offered the following resolution: RESOLVED, That the thanks of this convention are hereby extended to Samuel Alexander, Sergeant at Arms, and William I. Green, Assistant Sergeant at Arms of this House, for the thorough and satisfactory manner in which they have discharged their duties.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The following resolution was also, offered by Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: RESOLVED, That Eugene Dickerson, Maurice Langhorne, Cornelius Hedges, Jr. and William Alexander, Pages of this House, have earned the gratitude of the members of this convention for their faithful discharge of duty as Pages, and the thanks of this body are hereby tendered them.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow also offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted.

RESOLVED, That the prayers of Rev. H. E. Clowes, Chaplain of this Convention, have largely contributed to the good feeling and comfort of the members thereof, and that the thanks of this convention be and the same are hereby extended to him, with the best wishes of the members.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: Mr. President, I move you that the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Warren) be tendered a vote of thanks by this convention for his efficiency and versatility in preparing resolutions.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Bickford of Missoula offered the following resolution:

RESOLVED, That Lee Swords be and he is hereby appointed clerk of the Committee on Address, and the chief clerk of this convention is authorized and directed to add an additional sum of twenty-five dollars in the warrant heretofore provided for to pay him for said services.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Middleton of Custer: I move you that the President of this convention be instructed to send appropriate messages to the other conventions that are still in session, indicating our adjournment today.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I just wish to observe here that since the Constitution has been so nearly unanimously adopted, I wish to change my vote and vote aye.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I object.

Mr. Courtney of Silver Bow: I wish to say further, Mr. President, that I was not actuated by any antipathy to the instrument, but I did so for this reason, that in as much as I voted against certain propositions which the instrument contained, I wished to be consistent, but it occurred to me that a wrong interpretation of the vote might be put upon it, and so I desire to change.

Mr. Hershfield of Lewis & Clarke: I will withdraw my objection, Mr. President.

The President: By unanimous consent, the vote of the gentleman from Silver Bow (Mr. Courtney) will be changed to aye.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: While there are very many things in this constitution which I have voted against, and while there are some things in it that I do not believe in, I do not desire to stand here as the only man opposing that Constitution, and I ask the unanimous consent of this house to withdraw my vote of No and vote Aye.

The President: If there be no objection, the gentleman will be allowed to change his vote.

Mr. J. K. Toole of Lewis & Clarke: I think it would be entirely fitting to close the proceedings of this convention with "The Star Spangled Banner", and I know the President of this convention can sing that song admirably, and I move that he be requested to sing it and the convention join in the chorus.

The motion was seconded.

The chair put the question on the said motion, and the same was declared carried.

The convention then sang the "Star Spangled Banner", the members rising to their feet.

Mr. Warren of Silver Bow: Mr. President, if all the members have signed the constitution and there is no further business before the convention, I move the convention adjourn sine die.

The motion was seconded.

The President: It is moved and seconded that the Constitutional Convention of the State of Montana do now adjourn sine die. Those in favor of the motion will say Aye, those opposed No.

The motion was declared carried.

The President: The Chair will present the gavel and the pen used by the members in signing the constitution, to the Historical Society of Montana.

At three o'clock and thirty five minutes in the afternoon of Saturday, August 17th, 1889, the Constitutional Convention of the State of Montana stood adjourned sine die.
