Resolution Opposing the Inclusion of Sections 6201-6207 (Miscellaneous Amendments Relating to Mining) of H.R. 4241 in the final version of the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005

Whereas, the U.S. House of Representatives passed H.R. 4241, the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005, on November 17th;

Whereas, Sections 6201-6207 of H.R. 4241 lift a 1994 moratorium on the sale of public lands to individuals or corporations that stake a mining claim on that land under the 1872 General Mining Law;

Whereas, although proponents argue that selling any lands in National Parks and other protected wilderness areas is specifically prohibited in the bill, Section 6207 qualifies the ban as being "subject to valid existing rights," leaving open the possibility of development on 903 unpatented mining claims on National Park land and other claims in protected wilderness areas;

Whereas, proponents admit they arrived at their claim that only 360,000 acres could be affected by consulting with only the U.S. Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Department of the Interior, despite the fact that most federal land, including more than ten million acres in Montana, is managed by the U.S. Forest Service under the U.S. Department of Agriculture;

Whereas, officials in the Department of Interior and the Bureau of Land Management estimate that as much as 20 million acres of public land could be put up for sale under the new rules;

Whereas, states could lose revenue they currently receive from the state share of royalties gained on resource extraction on public lands if those lands are privatized;

Whereas, a study by the U.S. General Accounting Office found that nearly 80% of lands claimed by mining claims were never used for mining-related activities, and many were resold and used for other types of development, including residential and commercial;

Whereas, students at The University of Montana routinely take advantage of the recreational opportunities provided by nearby public lands;

Whereas, the abundance of public lands in Montana and the recreational opportunities and aesthetic benefits they provide is the primary incentive emphasized by The University of Montana to market the university to nonresidents;

Whereas, the version of the Deficit Reduction Act passed by the U.S. Senate did not include the mining amendments, and this and other differences will be negotiated on in a House/Senate joint conference committee that will begin convening on December 6th;
Whereas, action by the Associated Students of The University of Montana (ASUM) Senate on this issue will encourage student participation in the political process by drawing attention to direct connections between public policy-making and the quality of life students enjoy;

Therefore, Let it be Resolved that ASUM opposes Sections 6201-6207 of H.R. 4241;

Therefore, Let it be Further Resolved that the ASUM Senate directs the ASUM Student Political Action (SPA) Director and SPA Committee to take action urging the members of Congress on the House/Senate joint conference committee to exclude Sections 6201-6207 of H.R. 4241 from the final version of the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005.
