Texts: Thomas Greene, Comparative Revolutionary Movements 3rd ed

Jonathan White, Terrorism: An Introduction 2nd ed

Requirements:

This course involves a survey of various forms of civil violence and an exploration of the different theories, interpretations and perspectives that have been offered to explain them. Completing this review should result in the development of a model describing where and under what conditions politically relevant violence is likely to occur and who is likely to participate.

There will be two one-hour exams: the first will be on October 1 and the second on November 5. Each exam counts for 20% of the final grade. A two-hour comprehensive final exam counts for 40% of the final grade. The final exam is scheduled for December 13, 08:00-10:00. NO EARLY FINALS WILL BE GIVEN. Exams will consist of combinations of identification, short answer and essay questions.

Additional work includes a short paper (5 to 10 pages) and a presentation which address some event of civil violence. The presentation should be approximately 10 minutes long and is a summary of the material contained in the paper. For this assignment, the theoretical material developed in the course should be employed to explain some aspect of an actual incident of civil violence. Each student will select an event to be studied and the most appropriate theory will be assigned. The presentation/paper consists of four parts: a description of the theory being employed, a description of the incident of civil violence, an assessment of the utility of the theory, and a bibliography. Notes and bibliography style of the paper must follow the Turabian manual of style. The presentations will take place during the last two weeks of the semester. All papers are due December 6. This combined assignment counts for 20% of the final grade. LATE PAPERS WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED FOR ANY REASON INCLUDING PROBLEMS ASSOCIATED WITH COMPUTERS AND WORD PROCESSORS. THEREFORE IT IS A GOOD IDEA TO COMPLETE THIS ASSIGNMENT BEFORE THE DEADLINE. EARLY PAPERS ARE WELCOME!

In order to make the experience of this course as congenial as possible for all concerned, you are asked to observe the following rules. Do not come to class late or depart early. Do not use class time to read, write letters, chat with your neighbors or engage in other activities not related to the course.
