SHARKEY NAMED TO NATIONAL BOARD

Brian Sharkey, professor of health and physical education at the University of Montana and director of the UM Human Performance Laboratory, has been appointed to the board of directors of the National Institute for Fitness and Sport.

The newly formed institute, located in Indianapolis, Ind., advocates an active lifestyle and promotes programs in education, research and service to meet the fitness and health needs of the nation.

The board of directors is made up of fitness experts and leaders in politics, athletics, business and other fields.
