L.S./M.F.T.-Lucky Strike Means Fine Tobacco

COPR., THE AMERICAN TOBACCO COMPANY
DIRECTOR OF THE DIVISION . . . .

With the realignment of University of New Mexico athletics that took place last spring, the intercollegiate athletic department of the school again came under the direction of George "Blanco" White, a veteran in the field of physical education, and a long-time member of the UNM faculty.

Mr. White's duties include the supervision of everything and anything that has to do with the University's fine division of physical education, from class work on through to intramural participation by students and faculty.

And, his is the final say when there is a decision to be made concerning intercollegiate participation by any Lobo squads.

To George White goes much of the credit for building the University's athletic plant and facilities. It was he, along with Roy Johnson, who pioneered in the early days of UNM athletics for the all-around athletic growth of the school. And, with a new field house somewhere in the future, along with even greater athletic facilities for the students, it looks as though "Blanco" is still making fine contributions to the University of New Mexico.

GEORGE "BLANCO" WHITE MAN BEHIND THE SCENES . . .

Behind every operation in intercollegiate athletics, there is a man who has to take care of the details—details concerning travel, housing, equipment, game management, and the myriad other things that go with fielding an athletic squad.

To big, amiable Reaves "Ribs" Baysinger go the duties of this job for the University of New Mexico. More than 20 years experience in athletics qualify him, and an intense interest in UNM athletics makes him love his work.

In addition to his job of management, "Ribs" also coaches the Lobo freshman grid squad, and, along with the charming Mrs. Baysinger, acts as head resident of Mesa Vista hall, UNM's mammoth men's dormitory.

"RIBS" BAYSINGER
THE 1952 UNM FOOTBALL COACHING STAFF—This year marks the third season that the University of New Mexico gridiron fortunes come under the direction of Dr. Dudley S. DeGroot, second from left above, one of the most respected men in the field of football coaching. Ably assisting him in his efforts to give New Mexico a successful season in 1952 are two veteran Lobo leaders, Line Coach George Petrol, left, and Backfield Coach Willis Barnes, third from left. Fourth man in UNM's football picture is Student Manager Jack Davis, a capable man in an important position.

The University of New Mexico's 1952 football co-captains could almost be called "playing coaches" because to them, with their combined years of grid experience, goes the responsibility of guiding a young, eager squad in its split-second decisions on the field.

And, several times already this season, they have been called upon to take over a section of the Wolfpack's practice in the absence of a member of the regular coaching staff.

The mantle of responsibility, especially on the football field, falls over either of these boys easily, however, for they are both veteran football players who know as much about the workings of the game as any man is able to learn from high school and college participation.

Glenn Campbell, tabbed by his mates and members of the press and radio fraternity the "Farmington Flyer," has long been a mainstay of the Lobo backfield from his position at right halfback. Though not as flashy and spectacular as some, Campbell is a steady, capable runner and passer, and, last season, ranked among the Skyline conference's leading pass receivers.

A chemical engineering student, Glenn is one boy the coaches never have to push to make him keep up his grades. He's regularly among the first division of his classmates, is a campus leader, and one of the most popular boys on the squad.

Glenn's a senior this year and his final season in Lobo livery should be his best.

Up in front in the line is Campbell's co-captain, big, rough and likable Jack Barger, an All-Conference defensive selection at tackle in his first year of varsity participation in 1951.

Barger, a 203-pound junior, is the wheelhorse of the UNM forward wall and will work this season as number one left tackle in both the offensive and defensive units.

Like Campbell, Barger is "football smart." He seems to know just what to do in every situation and he can guide his teammates safely through some mighty rough moments.

There were those who marveled at Barger's All-Conference selection last year, but the people who know felt that it was more than deserved. The big man didn't make spectacular, or even very many tackles, but it was his vicious ripping down of the blockers in front that made many a defenseless ball carrier an easy target for the linebackers.

Last spring, when the vote for 1952 co-captains was taken, their teammates selected both Campbell and Barger unanimously — much to the gratification of the coaching staff, whose vote, at this stage of the game, is also unanimous.
TODAY'S BALL GAME...

There'll be quite a combination of motives behind the desires of the two teams facing each other on the turf of Zimmerman Field today in what promises to be a rip-roarin' football battle.

For the home standing New Mexico Lobos, today's ballgame will be a battle for revenge as well as another important step toward clinching second place in the Skyline conference and keeping the slim championship hopes alive.

Last season, the freshman-sophomore Lobo charges of Coach Dud DeGroot opened their first Skyline campaign against the Grizzlies in the Silvertips' home field at Missoula, Montana.

Coach Ted Shipkey's 1951 Grizzlies humbled the ambitious Wolfpack, 25-7, in that curtain raiser, but, there were those who said they couldn't have done it later in the season. There were also those who said they wouldn't come close to doing it this year. Those boys are out on the field today.

Second big victory motive for the Lobos is, of course, their surprise drive into the first division of the Skyline league, and their still existent chance for the title this season. They must win their two remaining games—and count on the Utah Aggies to dump undefeated, conference-wise, Utah.

A loss by Utah would give them a four-one record in the league. If the Lobos win their remaining contests, they will boast a five-one record—and the championship.

On the other hand, Montana, playing this year under new coach Eddie Chinske, will be out to gain their second victory in the conference this season and upset the dope which says they are to lose.

Considered upset capable, the Grizzlies are famous for their straight, hard football, as taught by the able Chinske. Though they've lost more than they've won, none of Montana's league opponents have mauled them badly. They've bounced back each week with a strong display of defensive strength and an offensive potential that has to be watched every minute.

They'll be out for the upset, and there is some fear in the Lobo camp that the Wolfpack may be primed for just that.

The Lobos figure to be in good physical shape. They suffered no major casualties in their great 3-0 win over Colorado A & M last week, and coach DeGroot should be able to field a regular in every position today.

Of course, there will always be reliable Mike Prokopiak to pick up a few points, but DeGroot and staff feel that they may not have to rely on "Golden Toe" this week, after five days of thorough talent screening.

Though they haven't said who or where, the coaching staff members have left the impression that the long-awaited Lobo offensive thrust may at last materialize this week.

In any case, the Wolfpack defense, best ever in UNM history, will be the unit the folks will watch. Their play so far this season has put the Lobos in the unique position of being a team on which the linemen garner more publicity than do the backfield performers.

Eddie Chinske, the Grizzlies' amiable head football coach, is currently in his first year as top mentor of a collegiate football team. Eddie was elevated from assistant coach to the top position last spring when Ted Shipkey, a name familiar to Lobo fans, resigned to enter private business.

Chinske joined the Grizzly athletic staff in 1946 as assistant football, basketball and head baseball coach. He's a graduate of Montana, where he played halfback and quarterback for three seasons of Silvertip football, and was elected captain of the 1928 eleven. Eddie also lettered thrice in basketball and was awarded two letters in baseball and one in golf while at the Missoula school.

Smilin' Eddie's first assignment after joining the MSU staff was master minding the Grizzly grid Cubs through the 1929 season. He did well and the Cubs came through with only one loss in a six-game slate.

In 1930, Mile City's high school beckoned the young mentor and he moved there as head coach of all sports. Following five years of success at Miles City, Eddie inked a contract with Missoula County High School, where he was top man in athletics until rejoining the Grizzlies in 1946.

In the 16 years that Eddie coached high school ball he chalked up more state championships in football and basketball than any other coach in Montana history. He closed his last high school grid season with a record of 22 straight victories.

"THE OFFICIAL WATCH FOR TIMING THIS GAME IS LONGINES—THE WORLD'S MOST HONORED WATCH" THEY PLAY THE MUSIC...

The UNM Marching Band, under the direction of Robert Dahnert, is always one of the high points in any halftime show in Zimmerman Field. Considerably larger than the 1951 organization, this year's band promises good, rousing music and sparkling marching maneuvers—both as much a part of a good football game as the teams themselves.

Bandmaster Robert Dahnert begins his third year as director of the UNM band with a reputation for getting the most and best from his musicians. Formerly at Michigan and Northwestern, Dahnert is considered one of the finest in the field.

THEY LEAD THE CHEERS . . .

LUSTY AND LOUD are the seven leather-lunged lads and lassies in the picture, at left, but — why shouldn’t they be — that’s their job. Sagging spirits, either on the field or in the stands, are a challenge to this group and they’ll be urging you to give everything you have, vocally, anyway, to give the Lobos on the field a boost. Cooperate with them — you’ll enjoy the game a lot more if you’re a part of it. The 1952 University of New Mexico cheerleaders are: Front row, left to right—Phyllis Caponera, Judy Hubbard, June Stratton, and Helen Cox. Second row—Larry Tretbar, Mary Thelma Bryant and Ron Durckel.

New RCA Victor television as low as $199.95

with the exclusive "Magic Monitor" circuit system

It's features like the exclusive new "Magic Monitor" circuit system that make—and keep—RCA Victor the world's most wanted television! Here's how it constantly guards picture quality:

- It screens out static—automatically.
- It amplifies weak signals, holds pictures bright and steady—automatically.
- It tunes in best sound with clearest picture—automatically. It monitors picture quality as engineers do in television studios.
- Finest listening, too. The perfectly balanced tone of the famous "Golden Throat."
- Easy adaptation to UHF. These sets are by the same company that pioneered UHF television.
- Fine cabinetry. Quality styling and careful craftsmanship mean lasting beauty.
- Dependable service. No other manufacturer offers service on a national basis by its own electronic experts. Ask for details of RCA Victor Factory-Service Contracts at your dealer's.

When you can't be at the game, see it on RCA Victor Television!
