AUSTRIAN POET SPEAKS FRIDAY AT UM

WERNER HANDKE, a famous Austrian poet, will be a featured speaker during the annual Montana Foreign Language Association Conference Friday and Saturday (May 7-8) at the University of Montana, Missoula. Handke will read excerpts from his recent book "Die Innenwelt der Ausserwelt" ("The Inner World of the Outer World of the Inner World") at the University Center, Montana Room 360, at 8:30 p.m. Friday (May 7). The poetry reading is open to the public without charge. Handke, who is on a U.S. lecture tour sponsored by the American government and the Austrian Institute of New York, was invited by the UM Department of Foreign Languages to speak at the conference. Dr. Anton Kolleritsch, editor of "Manuskripte," a leading Austrian literary magazine, will introduce Handke and give a brief overview of contemporary Austrian literature. Originally a working-class boy from the Austrian provincial capital of Graz, Handke was raised by the Jesuits and studied law. He has lived mostly in West Germany and recently in Paris. In the March 22, 1971, issue of the New York Times, Francois Bondy wrote, "... Handke is preoccupied, even obsessed, with the phenomenon of language, with the way in which it becomes its vehicle instead of being its master.... All Handke's writing is polarized between a logical urge and a musical sense of modern rhythm.... His work is coherent and at the same time in full evolution through his testing of the valid means of expression."

FORMER U.S. SENATOR SPEAKS THURSDAY

CHARLES GOODELL, controversial former U.S. senator from New York, will discuss "The Price of Dissent" at UM Thursday (May 6). The number one target of Vice President Agnew and the Nixon Administration, Goodell introduced Bill S-3000, the "Vietnam Disengagement Act of 1969," on Oct. 7, 1969. It was the first legislation introduced in either the House of Representatives or the Senate that demanded an end to appropriations which would support U.S. military forces in Vietnam. Eventually, it became the basis for the Cooper-Church Amendment. Goodell's lecture, scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in the U Center Ballroom, is open to the public without charge under the sponsorship of the Program Council of the Associated Students of UM. With a speech in the Senate asking his colleagues to enact his Anti-War Amendment, Goodell in January 1971 ended two years in the Senate, filling the unexpired term of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. Conservation, consumer protection, defense, foreign affairs, education, manpower, health, poverty, race relations and transportation are among the bills that have been sponsored or co-sponsored by Goodell.

CUTBACKS IN UM PHYSICAL PLANT, INFORMATION SERVICES ANNOUNCED

TWO UM administrative operations have announced plans for cutbacks in services due to expected budget limitations in the coming biennium. Physical Plant and Information Services are taking economy measures designed to be least detrimental to the support of academic programs, reported George L. Mitchell, administration vice president. J.A. Parker, physical plant director, said there "will be substantial reductions in new furniture, minor renovation work, grounds maintenance and possibly housekeeping. "This will undoubtedly create some problems," said Parker. "We will be asking the faculty or staff member to make-do with the antiquated desk, and many of us will have to put up with such irritations as dust and snow conditions on the parking lots along with the possible inconveniences of less janitorial service in the classrooms." Information Services reductions will be primarily in publications and news activities. Plans call for the use of lower cost materials and reduced frequency of news releases and house organ periodicals such as UM Profiles and The Establishment. "We regret that we may be in a position of denying some services to campus personnel," said Larry Stuart, assistant to the president and director of information. "We will have to be especially selective of priorities in our new program due to less funding for supplies, postage and part-time writing personnel." Most of the other UM administrative departments are undergoing similar cutbacks, according to Mitchell. "We are asking the campus community for its usual cooperation in meeting necessary changes with patience and understanding."

DR. MCDUFFIE SAYS MOTIVATION IS KEY TO TEACHING OF FOREIGN LANGUAGES

MOTIVATION of students by teachers may reduce or eliminate the boredom responsible for the declining national interest in the study of foreign languages, said Dr. Keith A. McDuffie, chairman of the UM Department of Foreign Languages. The UM professor and administrator made the remarks Friday during his keynote address to about 125 members of the Montana Foreign Language Teachers Association attending the annual MFLTA conference banquet at UM. Title of the talk was "The Teaching of Foreign Languages--The Beginning or the End?" Dr. McDuffie said that foreign languages such as Latin, Russian, French, Greek and others have shown "a nearly 8 per cent loss in enrollment in the past two years," based on figures from a sampling of 829 colleges. "Teachers do not teach, no matter how much they may like to think they do," he emphasized. "They motivate students to learn, if they are good teachers, and ultimately the students teach themselves. This has always been the case...." Dr. McDuffie said the individual teacher's "solid preparation, skill, energy and enthusiasm...is what will save foreign language study in this country, and nothing else." He made several recommendations to teachers during his remarks to improve foreign language instruction:

11:30 a.m., Monday, May 10, 1971

(1) Go abroad and speak the language you teach in a natural setting or return for a refresher course at an institute or summer session.

(2) Get involved with at least one, but preferably two or three professional organizations such as the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages.

(3) Stimulate interest in staging short plays in school foreign language programs.

(4) Plan reasonable progression in the language program sequences to avoid duplication or repetition and unrealistic leaps in levels of difficulty.

(5) Offer sound, two-year high school programs in foreign languages and possibly eliminate grade school and junior high school language programs to avoid fragmentation of learning.

(6) Attune our grading and testing systems to the real capabilities of our students.

(7) Choose textbooks in a national, organized way to satisfy teaching capabilities and goals and supplement the books with other learning materials.

STUDENTS ARE advised that today (May 10) is the last day for dropping classes with a grade of "W."

JOHN WIGHT of Billings, a pioneer oil and gas industry promoter in Montana and Wyoming for four decades, has contributed historically valuable research material to the University of Montana's library archives. Brian Cockhill, acting archivist at the UM Library, termed Wight's donation "a very important" addition to the University's collection of historically valuable material. "Little research material is available to historians interested in the development of the oil and gas industry in the west," Cockhill said. "Mr. Wight's files should prove invaluable in detailing the history of much of the oil and gas industry, particularly from the small independent operator's viewpoint." Cockhill said Wight was one of the pioneer developers of many major oil and gas fields in Montana and Wyoming from 1919-1965. Cockhill said Wight's records show that his promotional efforts resulted in millions of dollars in taxes to the State of Montana from oil and gas royalties. Wight lives at 2217 Fairview Place, Billings.

REYNOLDS COMMENDS YOUTH, CITES VALUE OF 'COMMUNICATIONS' IN SIGMA XI ADDRESS WEDNESDAY

SAI REYNOLDS commended youth and emphasized the value of "communications" Wednesday in overcoming the effects of issues dividing the nation and community today.

In his keynote address entitled "Town and Gown Relations" (Perspectives on Campus-Community Relationships) at the annual banquet of the UM chapter of Sigma Xi science honorary in the U Center, Reynolds, who is editorial page editor of The Missoulian and a visiting journalism lecturer at UM, said, "Communications must be kept open because they are the best hope for effectively handling problems and overcoming hatred, suspicion, unrest and even revolution."

Commending today's youth for being "probably the best generation of Americans ever raised," Reynolds said society's ills--including the war in Vietnam and "racism, hunger, poverty, dead bureaucracy"--are things which the young "work to correct" by voting, demonstrating peacefully and helping adult Americans concentrate on the nation's internal problems."

He said "the rebellious young are providing an invaluable service: They are making an excellent diagnosis of what is wrong with America." Reynolds noted, however, that it is a mistake for adults to see "the Truth and Light in this unsettled younger generation."

"The young are as strident, inexperienced, naive, divided, and generally immature as all previous younger generations have been," he said. "But they are acting as a kind of X-ray plate of the bone and marrow of national problems. In that they provide excellent guidance."

Reynolds said one of the main factors separating the University from the Missoula community is the "concentration of unrest among the student youth," so he tries "to editorially influence the actions of those most agitated...the young." He said he is willing to risk the irritation of older people "if it helps me ameliorate a condition which is irritating...and potentially dangerous to public order."

"I try to warn the community against the dangers of polarization, of suspicion," Reynolds explained. "I try to bring the community into a sense that, if Americans can unite on anything at all, the main points worth uniting on are the beliefs in justice, equal opportunity and hope which generations of Americans have proclaimed to be national ideals, and that these values and beliefs are not worth sacrificing due to panic and hos-

Reynolds said he has endorsed editorially U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam and has pushed for pollution controls. He said "the editorial page's central purpose...is to get things done," while avoiding polarization of various segments of the community.

PIERPOINT CITES NEED FOR CRITICAL, FREE PRESS

ROBERT PIERPOINT, CBS News correspondent, emphasized the value of objective reporting and criticism by the press, and stressed the need for a free press in a democracy Thursday in his keynote address at the 15th annual Dean Stone Night journalism awards dinner at UM.

In his speech, entitled "We Must Be Doing Something Right," Pierpoint, who has seven years experience as a foreign correspondent and 13 covering White House events, said "the needle" of criticism used by some in the journalism profession may be responsible for the negative attitudes against news media in recent years.

"There are reporters, and good ones, who cannot ask a question without causing irritation," Pierpoint said. "Some reporters use the needle as a professional instrument even more than the pencil. For them the needle may work, but it has not helped the image of the profession."

Pierpoint said he has concluded "that some of this bad image is due to the fact that we are doing a good job."

"In this increasingly complex world, the basic facts of a story are seldom enough to do the vital job of keeping the public informed," he emphasized.

Quoting the late broadcaster Edward R. Murrow, whose goal was to "make 'em itch," Pierpoint said, "Murrow meant to report and analyze and criticize in such a way that the audience was made uncomfortable, stirred up, forced to think."

Pierpoint said "opposition news organizations" were closed and reporters jailed by the Soviet Union when "the outburst of freedom in Czechoslovakia" was crushed in 1968.

"A free press cannot exist outside a free democratic society," Pierpoint emphasized. "But more important, freedom and democracy cannot exist without a curious, critical, energetic, unintimidated, fair but free press. So far we are still here. We must be doing something right."
