

University of Montana

ScholarWorks at University of Montana

Communique, 1953-2020

Journalism

1983

Communique, 1983

University of Montana (Missoula, Mont. : 1965-1994). School of Journalism

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.umt.edu/communique>

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation

University of Montana (Missoula, Mont. : 1965-1994). School of Journalism, "Communique, 1983" (1983). Communique, 1953-2020. 56.

<https://scholarworks.umt.edu/communique/56>

This Newsletter is brought to you for free and open access by the Journalism at ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in Communique, 1953-2020 by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.

Bob Cushman Photo

Perking a CBS ear

Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS News, listens carefully to a student's question during a televised news conference in the Journalism Library last spring. Sauter was on campus to visit his son, Jeremy, a junior in radio-television, and to get a look at the J-School. Another picture is on Page 11.

Hood chosen for dean's job

Charles E. Hood '61, M.A. '69 has been named dean of the School of Journalism. He is the first graduate of the school to be named to the post.

Hood was chosen from a group of five finalists after a national search produced 100 applicants. He had served the past year as acting dean, having been appointed by President Neil Bucklew after an earlier search failed to produce enough suitable candidates.

Hood replaces Warren Brier, who resigned to return to teaching in September of last year after serving 14 years as dean.

Other finalists included Kenneth Rystrom, director of the journalism program at University of Redlands and a former visiting

(Continued on Page 3)

Building project signals new day in broadcasting

When the imposing new performing arts/radio-television building opens in the fall of 1984, the UM journalism and broadcast programs will enter a new era.

For the first time since the radio-TV curriculum was established here in 1960, broadcast students will be getting their training in facilities designed "from the bottom up" for broadcasting, Phil Hess, chairman of the radio-TV department, said.

The present facilities on the third floor of the Journalism Building were designed to be used as a museum and classrooms.

Besides the broadcasting facilities, the new building will have theaters, dance performance areas, an art gallery and offices for the dean of fine arts and the Department of Drama. The brick structure will be situated along Eddy Avenue between the Law School and the Field House.

The project is several months ahead of schedule, thanks to a mild winter in Missoula. The $8.6 million budget includes $600,000 for new radio and television equipment.

Legislative approval of $7.5 million of state funds was contingent upon UM raising the additional $1.1 million — a task many thought impossible. The successful fundraising program, directed by the UM Foundation, invited contributions at a variety of levels, from $1 (in the ASUM-sponsored "Buy a Brick" campaign) to $450 (in the Foundation's "Buy a Theater Seat" campaign) to larger corporate contributions.

The building was designed by CTA Architects, Billings, in cooperation with faculty and staff from both radio-TV and fine arts. "Our chief engineer, Charles Lubrecht, was by far the most valuable member of the building committee," Hess said. "Without his major contributions to the planning, none of us would have the kind of facility our students need."

The new facility will have individual videotape editing booths for student use as well as radio and television production spaces and KUFM control room and studio space. The department will have a television production studio and shared use of the proscenium stage area for TV production.

"All drama and dance performance areas in the building will be wired for camera

(Continued on Page 3)

Dean's report

Challenge and response: the J-School's agenda for the '80s

If you've had a chance to leaf through this issue, you already know that the UM School of Journalism continues to have much to be proud of.

We have alumni who year after year do us honor; students who quarter after quarter seem to get brighter and more enthusiastic (though they still come to us without knowing how to write or spell); and a faculty that, day after day, demonstrates that it is among the finest in the country.

The opportunities offered by the splendid new performing arts/radio-television building are stunning. If adequate resources and personnel are forthcoming, our radio-television students may soon be enhancing their professional skills by helping the university meet its broadcasting needs in the areas of news and public affairs, continuing education, cultural outreach and athletics. An exciting and productive new relationship with the dramatic arts waits in the wings.

Yet precipices lie ahead, too. We must make sure we do not commit ourselves to goals we do not have the people or money to achieve. And we must make sure that any new directions we may take do not alter the focus of a program that has achieved excellence because it has been dedicated to teaching young people to understand their society and to explain what they see coherently and economically.

We face other challenges, too — problems that we must solve, areas where we simply must do better. The journalism school should:

- be more visible to the public as a force for good journalism, through seminars and workshops.

- have better communication with the press and the broadcasting industry, and should consult them regularly about the proper directions of journalism education.

- more aggressively seek out the best high school journalism students in the state and encourage them to attend the University of Montana.

- seek new funding sources for important projects that are beyond our regular budget:

- strengthen offerings in broadcasting, where recent growth has been responsible for what may be the highest student-faculty ratio of any accredited radio-television department in the United States; in advertising, photography, graphics, public relations and community journalism.

- re-evaluate and — if necessary — revise our undergraduate and graduate curricula to make sure they reflect our objectives, are efficiently organized and are appropriate to professional needs that are changing because of the revolution in technology.

- resume publication of the Montana Journalism Review, the oldest journalism review in the nation.

We believe we already are one of the best journalism programs in the United States. We aren't satisfied. We believe we have the potential to become the best, and we're working toward that end.

—Charles E. Hood

Bob Cushman Photo

Model students

Theresa Walla, a senior in journalism from Lewistown, and Sverre Kjetil Rød, a 1983 UM graduate in radio-television from Norway, model the T-shirts we'll send you if you contribute to the Dean Stone Night Lecture Series fund. Details on Page 8.

Building construction

(Continued From Page 1)

placement," Hess said. "That will mean cooperative productions with drama and dance will become common, offering realistic training to majors in both broadcasting and performance."

President Neil Bucklew created a Broadcasting Task Force last year, and assigned it the task of exploring the broadcasting opportunities offered by the new facility. The committee is looking into the possibility of enhancing UM's broadcast capabilities in the areas of continuing education, promotion, public service, entertainment, athletics and public affairs.

The task force's members include Mike Stocklin, vice president of Eagle Communications, which has TV stations in Missoula, Butte and Kalispell, and Shag Miller, general manager of KBOW radio in Butte. Ex-officio members include Hess, Charles Hood, dean of the UM journalism school, and Kathryn Martin, dean of the School of Fine Arts. John Pulliam, dean of the UM School of Education, is the chairman.

No date has been set for a grand opening of the building, but Hess predicted that "we'll cut the ribbon and give tours through the completely equipped building at Homecoming 1984."

Hood . . .

(Continued from Page 1)

lecturer at UM; Lyle Harris '62 M.A. '67, associate professor of journalism at Western Washington State University and former director of the business journalism program at the University of Missouri; Vernon L. Stone, director of journalism at the University of Southern Illinois, and David Dary, professor of journalism at the University of Kansas.

Hood, a Montana native who grew up in Miles City, has worked as a newsman for the Great Falls Tribune, the Missoulian, the Lewistown Daily News and United Press International. He has a Ph.D. in American Studies from Washington State University and has taught journalism at UM since 1967.

Hood

The search committee, headed by Richard A. Solberg, associate academic vice president, included Bob McGiffert, Jerry Holloron and Greg MacDonald of the journalism faculty.

J-Students required to complete minor

Entering journalism and radio-television students must now complete a minor in another field as part of their graduation requirement.

The requirement, which went into effect in Fall Quarter 1982, was instituted to ensure that J-students develop an area of specialization in addition to acquiring a broad liberal arts education.

Off the drawing board

With each passing week, the structure that will become the new performing arts/radio-television building begins to look less like the photo above, taken in early summer, and more like the architect's drawing below. Montana Kaimin cartoonist Ed Jenne sketched a fanciful interpretation, bottom, of the eight-story tower that will house the loft for the building's proscenium stage.

Faculty & staff updates

Professor Emeritus Edward B. Dugan, a member of the journalism faculty from 1937 to 1974, attended a couple of meetings at the request of the journalism faculty, who sought his advice on matters relating to curriculum and faculty advisers. He attended the reception of the class of '57 reunion at Homecoming.

Andrew C. Cogswell, UM journalism professor and dean of students emeritus, continues to be active in campus and community affairs. He is a director of the University of Montana Friends of the Library, and last spring shared with the Dean Stone Night crowd his recollections of A.L. Stone, first dean of the School of Journalism.

Susanne Lagoni '76 taught two broadcast news courses at UM during Fall Quarter 1982. She resigned her job as news director at KPAX-TV in Missoula in 1982 and moved to Yakima, Wash., where she is news director at KNDO-TV.

Nathaniel Blumberg, dean of the journalism school from 1956 to 1968 and now an emeritus professor, continues to teach one quarter a year at the J-School. Last spring he taught Specialized Reporting and Social Role of the Mass Media. He's completing a novel—"a different kind of Roman a clef"—at his home on Flathead Lake, near Bigfork.

Dominic Crolla, director of public relations and community affairs at St. Patrick Hospital, taught a junior-level course titled "Perspectives in Public Relations" during Winter Quarter 1982. Dominic, a native of Scotland who was an award-winning science reporter for newspapers in Tucson and Denver, has been director of public information for the Duke University and Temple University schools of medicine, has run his own public relations firm in Denver and has operated a newspaper in Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Jerry Holloran, associate professor of journalism, was a member of a panel last spring that discussed "Covering the Montana Media: When Are You the News?" at a Bozeman conference sponsored by the Society of Professional Journalists and the Montana Press Women. He worked during the summer of 1983 as an editorial writer and desk editor for the Missoulian.

Sally Mauk is KUFM's acting news director, replacing Jyl Hoyt, who is on leave to produce the radio series, "Reflections in Montana." Sally previously had worked for KUFM in both news and production. Susan Back, a senior in R-TV from Kinderhook, N.Y., was hired half-time to fill Sally's news duties, and Jace Laakso took over as Sally's replacement on the production side. Jace worked for KUFM several years before moving to Billings to become program director at KEMC. Besides working in programming and production, Jace is assisting with the production of "Reflections in Montana," and has applied for a grant to produce a pilot for a weekly arts program, tentatively titled, "Montana Gallery."

Warren Brier enjoyed his first year of full-time teaching after 14 years as dean of the journalism school. He taught a freshman writing class, trade and technical journalism, magazine article writing, Kaimin reporting, handled senior papers and acted as graduate school adviser. He addressed the Journalism Educators Convention in Seattle last spring, and critiqued the work of the Missoulian's regional correspondents. During the summer, he has been working as a desk editor for the Anchorage (Alaska) Times.

Charles Lubrecht, chief engineer for KUFM and the radio-television department, has been busy overseeing the construction of the broadcasting facilities in the new performing arts/radio-TV building. He attended an MCI tape recorder maintenance seminar in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., last winter. His punishment for escaping Missoula in the dead of winter was having to accompany 11 students in a van to the National Association of Broadcasters meeting and exhibition in Las Vegas later in the year.

Greg MacDonald, associate professor of radio-television and KUFM station manager, organized student trips to the National Association of Broadcasters meeting and exhibition in Las Vegas, and to the Edward R. Murrow symposium in Pullman, Wash. Every president of CBS News since Murrow was at the Pullman meeting, held on the campus of Washington State University.

Terry Conrad, KUFM's director of programming, attended a radio production "creativity" conference in San Francisco and a programmers' conference in Chicago. He'll return to the Windy City in October, to attend the conference of the Association of Music Personnel in Public Radio. Terry teaches radio production courses in the School of Journalism.

William Marcus, KUFM's development, promotion and production director, organized the spring Public Radio Week fund-raiser and is working on the presentation of a KUFM Program Fund to solicit support from businesses and foundations. He developed a new format for the station's quarterly program guide, which is now more informative and useful.

Phil Hess, chairman of the Radio-TV Department, is planning the impending move to the new broadcast facility, and continuing in his off-hours his labor of love: compiling the definitive discography of the recorded works of Gilbert and Sullivan. He says it will probably be a life-long effort; every time he enters a newly found recording on the list, someone issues a new recording. The 500-item list is on Phil's microcomputer for ease in updating. He and wife Mary Lou attended the college graduation of their youngest son Todd in the spring, and they're happy to report that their Yalie is gainfully employed.

Sharon Barrett, assistant professor, did a lot of judging this year. She helped judge the annual Merriam-Frontier awards, a student writing contest established in the name of the late H.G. Merriam, longtime professor of English at UM. With the rest of the J-faculty, she judged entries in the National Federation of Press Women's communications contest and critiqued magazines for the Association of Conservation Information workshop. In her spare time, she wrote book reviews for the Chicago Sun-Times, attended a week-long conference on business and economics reporting in Asheville, N.C., and was the J-School's representative at a summer Institute of the Rockies conference called "Future of Democracy: Rendezvous with Clarence Streit."

Bob McGiffert, professor of journalism, worked once again this summer as a desk editor at the Washington Post. He drafted the School of Journalism's response to the press-bar guidelines proposed by a committee of lawyers and journalists, and was a member of a panel entitled "Fair Trial vs. Free Press," which discussed the guidelines at the SDX-Montaña Press Women conference in Bozeman last spring. He and wife Jackie visited China during the summer of '82, and will jet to Peru this summer.

Carol Van Valkenburg will return to the J-School as a teaching assistant during 1983-84 and continue her work on a master's degree in interdisciplinary studies. Carol supervised the evaluation team that judged high school newspapers as part of the Montana Interscholastic Editorial Association's editorial excellence contest.

Wes Granberg-Michaelson, visiting lecturer in magazine journalism, served as scholar-in-residence at the Western Theological Seminary in Holland, Mich., from September 1982 to March 1983. While there, he taught courses in Christianity and Environmental Ethics, and completed a book manuscript on that subject, to be published by Harper and Row in early 1984. His article on the morality of genetic engineering was the cover story in the June 1983 issue of Sojourners magazine. He returned to Missoula in time to teach Magazine Layout and Editing during Spring Quarter 1983.

Michael Langthorne, visiting lecturer in radio-television during Winter Quarter 1982, is the author of "Birth of the 'Picture Play,'" which appeared in a recent issue of Audio-Visual Communications magazine. Mike, who has television news experience in Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio, resides in Bozeman, where his wife is a professor at MSU. He's a broadcasting graduate of Ohio State.

Bob Cushman, visiting lecturer in photojournalism, works as a freelance photographer. He critiqued the graphics and photography of 13 outdoor magazines last fall at the convention of the Association for Conservation Information.

Dorothy M. Johnson, who taught at the School of Journalism from 1958-66, continues to demonstrate why she is Montana's first lady of literature. Her latest book, "When You and I Were Young, Whitefish," was published by Mountain Press in 1982, and received enthusiastic reviews. The book is a humorous, nostalgic look back at the raw young community Dorothy grew up in.

KUFM fund drive nets nearly $100,000

Despite a damaged antenna and the recent financial embarrassment of National Public Radio, it has been a great year for KUFM, the university's public radio station.

For starters, the week-long fund-raising drive in May raised $93,075 in phoned-in pledges, and that figure seemed certain to reach $100,000 with the arrival of corporate donations.

Reksten named teaching assistant

Patty Reksten, a University of Missouri journalism graduate who has experience as a newspaper photojournalist and in public relations, will be a teaching assistant at the School of Journalism during the 1983-84 academic year.

Reksten will teach classes in Elementary Photography during fall and winter quarters while she begins work on a master's degree in journalism.

She has worked as a photojournalist for the Columbia, Mo., Tribune, as a reporter-photographer for the Missoulian in its former Flathead bureau, and has taught photography at Flathead Valley Community College and as a teaching assistant at the University of Missouri.

She had been employed in St. Patrick Hospital's public affairs office before resigning to begin work on her master's degree. She grew up in Kalispell.

Jyl Hoyt producing Montana 'Reflections'

Jyl Hoyt, director of news and public affairs at KUFM, has taken a leave of absence to produce a syndicated radio series funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Montana was one of only five states to win this "Competitive Award for Excellence."

Hoyt, a graduate of Ithaca College, N.Y., moved into a special office on the Journalism Building's third floor to produce "Reflections in Montana," which will feature interviews with authors such as A. B. Guthrie Jr.,

Native American educators who will discuss the stereotypes about Indians, Montana laborers who will tell about mining, logging and ranching in Montana, and Montana historians and political scientists.

Thirty-six Montana stations have subscribed to the free programs. The project offers stations a monthly half-hour program or weekly 4-minute-long segments.

More good news had come earlier in the year when the Great Falls Public Radio Association raised $41,000 and pledged the money to match a federal grant to purchase equipment to receive KUFM's signal in Great Falls for rebroadcast in a 40-mile radius around Great Falls.

That means that KUFM, once it gets that troublesome antenna replaced, will soon be reaching more than half the listening audience in Montana, including residents of Helena, Butte, Great Falls and all of western Montana.

Greg MacDonald, station manager, said the amount raised in KUFM's May fund-raiser makes KUFM the top public radio station in the nation in per capita support, with about 50 cents donated for every individual the signal reaches.

MacDonald says much of the credit for this year's success, and that of recent years, must go to William Marcus, KUFM's director of development, promotion and production. Marcus devoted months to planning the intensive solicitation effort, which required installation of a bank of telephones manned by volunteers around the clock, production of an array of clever promotional spots, designing and ordering hundreds of T-shirts for premiums, processing of the cash and checks from thousands of contributors, and the coordination of a complicated but very effective premium system. The system permitted individuals to donate goods and services which could be used as premiums for cash donations to KUFM.

Marcus

Marcus said the week was exhausting, yet exhilarating.

"It was really a labor of love," added Terry Conrad, the director of programming. "There were so many poignant moments—when a group of kids would walk in and donate a handful of pennies, or when an elderly couple, obviously on a very limited income, would bring up a modest check, and thank us.

"It made you feel like you were doing something worthwhile."

Among the volunteers who manned the telephones for an evening was Neil Bucklew, president of the University of Montana.

The successful fund-raiser couldn't have come at a better time. The station was facing possible budget and programming cutbacks, and badly needed a new antenna to put KUFM back at full broadcast power again. The new antenna is expected to be installed soon.

School first nationally in Sears interns

J-students win major internships

Two University of Montana journalism students have won major congressional internships in Washington, D.C.

Bethany Ruth Redlin, a senior from Sidney, won a 1983 Sears Congressional Internship, and Patricia Tucker, a senior from Huron, S.D., will work in Congressman Pat Williams' office during the summer of 1983 as a Lee Metcalf Congressional Intern.

Redlin

A Helena turnout

Prof. Jerry Holloron took his public affairs class to visit the state Legislature in Helena last winter, and came upon no less than 25 UM journalism graduates or students wandering the halls of the capitol. They represented eight Montana newspapers, the Associated Press, United Press International, the Northern Plains Resource Council, a senior citizens' newspaper, a state mining association, the Montana Education Association, the Montana Chamber of Commerce, the governor's office, the lieutenant governor's office, the Democratic Party and the Montana Legislative Council.

Redlin was one of 20 students selected in national competition from a field of candidates nominated by accredited journalism schools. She is the only student selected this year from the Northwest. The internships, sponsored by Sears, Roebuck and Co., give outstanding junior and senior journalism students the opportunity to spend three months on the staff of a U.S. senator or representative. Redlin's internship will begin Feb. 1.

The UM School of Journalism continues to rank first among all journalism schools in the nation in the number of students selected for the Sears program. Redlin will be the 18th UM J-student to take part in the program.

Tucker was selected for the Metcalf Internship from a field of candidates nominated by each of the colleges and universities in the state. She will become news editor of the Montana Kaimin when she returns to Missoula this fall.

Nola Gerth, a junior from Butte, was the third UM J-student to be selected for an internship with an elected official. She has been serving this summer in the press office of Gov. Ted Schwinden in Helena.

Tucker

Belly laugh

Leslie Vining, a senior in journalism and political science from Missoula, learned a lot as a legislative intern in Helena, including how to make a senator blush. Leslie, whose countenance is unveiled in the inset photo, surprised Sen. B. F. Christiaens, D-Great Falls, on the Senate floor by doing a belly dance for him in honor of his 43rd birthday. The Helena Independent Record photo was picked up by the Associated Press and appeared in several Montana dailies. One of the J-School's top students scholastically, Leslie was a Harry S. Truman Scholar in 1981-82.

$10,175 awarded to R-TV, J-students on Dean Stone Night

Awards totaling $10,175 were presented to journalism and radio-television students at the 24th annual Dean Stone Night banquet May 6.

The awards and their recipients:
Olaf Bue Award, $100, Sam Richards, Missoula.

Art Jette Award, $50, JoAnne DePue, Whitefish.

Dean Stone Awards, $300 each, Scott Gratton, Missoula, and Kathy Barrett, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

Grace Crane Newman Award, $200, Georell Copps, Helena.

Melvin and Myrtle Lord Awards, $100 each, Karol Bossler, Helena; Hugh Kilbourne, Billings; Kjetil Rød, Aukra, Norway; Maureen Lennon, Owensville, Mo.; Lisa Coats, Bigfork.

Guy Mooney Award, $250, B. Leslie Vining, Missoula.

Steve Forbis Merit Award, $250, Larry Howell, Fort Collins, Colo.

Great Falls Newspaper Guild Award, $200, Lance Lovell, Great Falls.

Montana Stockgrowers Association Award, $300, Richard Parker, Terry.

Sadie Erickson Award, $150, Richard Roesgen, Helena.

Ronald E. Miller Award, $100 each, Chris Johnson, Billings; Ira Foster, Whitefish; Ray Murray, Levittown, Pa.; Ron Selden, Eureka, Calif.; Melanie Williamson, Great Falls; Ann Hennessey, Helena; Marlee Miller, Eugene, Ore.; Eric Williams, Hobson.

David Rorvik Award, $300, Barbara Tucker, Missoula.

Durgin Memorial Award, $200, Ray Ekness, Crosby, N.D.

Last Chance Press Club Award, $100, Theresa Walla, Lewistown.

Scripps-Howard Awards for radio-television majors, $500 each, Steve Dodrill, Omaha, Neb., and Gus Chambers, Ellaville, Ga.

Outstanding Senior Woman Award, $100, Bonnie Yahvah, Libby.

Richard Shirley Award, $100, Bill Miller, Placentia, Calif.

Mary Decker Award, $100, Yvonne Lucero, Missoula.

Butte Press Club Award, $350, Dan Carter, Belgrade.

Connie Craney Award, $900, Susan Back, Kinderhook, N.Y.

Don Anderson Award, $1,000, Patricia Tucker, Missoula.

Great Falls Tribune Awards, $1,000 to Laurie Williams, Billings; $500 each to Bethany Redlin, Sidney, and Mark Grove, LaGrange, Ky.

Lee Newspapers Award, $500, JoAnne DePue, Whitefish.

Sam and Nellie McClay Book Award, $75, Brian Rygg, Great Falls.

Sigma Delta Chi Professional Journalism Society Special Award, $50, Laurie Williams, Billings.

Kaimin Service Award, name on plaque, Pamela Newbern, Florence, Ore.

Internship program growing

Some 40 UM journalism and radio-television students received professional experience in 15 cities during the past year.

Dean Charles E. Hood believes that number may be the highest in the school's history for a similar period, but he's still looking for more internship opportunities.

"Our goal is to have every journalism and radio-TV student get professional experience before graduation," he said.

Twenty-two students received summer internships, either paid or for academic credit, and at least four got summer jobs on their own. They include:

—Kelly Buechler, Glasgow, with KXGN AM-TV, Glendive.

—Laurie Carlisle, Kalispell, with KCFW-TV, Kalispell.

—Georell Copps, Helena, with Mountain Bell public affairs office, Helena.

—Steve Dodrill, Omaha, Neb., with KXLY-TV, Spokane.

—Bart Freeze, Miles City, with KYUS-TV, Miles City.

—Nola Gerth, Butte, with Gov. Ted Schwinden's press office, Helena.

—Scott Gratton, Missoula, with the Missoulian.

—Wendy Guerin, Miles City, with the Miles City Star and KATL Radio.

—Ann Hennessey, Helena, with the Montana Standard, Butte.

—Tim Huneck, Columbus, Ohio, with the Tobacco Valley News, Eureka.

—Ann Joyce, Butte, with the Helena Independent Record.

—David Keyes, Forsyth, with the Forsyth Independent and the Rosebud County Press.

—Hugh Kilbourne, Billings, with KPAX-TV, Missoula.

—Jenifer Krebsbach, Finley Point, with Nordbye Advertising, Missoula.

—Joel Lundstad, Bigfork, with KRTV, Great Falls.

—Yvonne Lucero, Great Falls, with the Hardin Herald.

—Jeff Mackey, Noxon, with KECI-TV, Missoula.

—Jamie McCann, Wolf Point, with KVCK (AM), Wolf Point.

—Melissa Morin, Butte, with KXLF-TV, Butte.

—Ray Murray, Levittown, Pa., with the Missoulian.

—Gordy Pace, Helena, with the Helena Independent Record.

—Tim Pilgrim, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, with the Lolo National Forest public affairs office, Missoula.

—Richard Roesgen, Helena, with the Helena Independent Record.

—Brian Rygg, Great Falls, with the Terry Tribune.

—Jeremy Sauter, New York City, with KTVQ, Billings.

—Patricia Tucker, Missoula, with Congressman Pat Williams' office, Washington, D.C.

—Theresa Walla, Lewistown, with the Missoulian.

Twenty more students completed quarter-long internships for credit during the 1982-83 academic year. They worked as reporters and photographers for the Missoulian, for KYSS AM-FM in Missoula, for the St. Patrick Hospital public affairs office, for the UM sports information director and on media-related projects of the Montana Public Interest Research Group.

Hard-hitting editor

Scott Gratton, senior in journalism from Missoula, rumbles to a touchdown after intercepting a pass during the UM Grizzlies' Homecoming humiliation of the Idaho Vandals in Missoula. This fall the hard-hitting linebacker will be managing editor of the Montana Kaimin.

Missoulian Photo

J-School Grizzlies shine

J-students are contributing significantly to UM athletic programs.

Scott Gratton, a senior from Missoula, was an outstanding linebacker for the Big Sky Champion football Grizzlies. Among his distinctions: twice chosen by his teammates for the Golden Helmet Award, given to the team's hardest hitter; honorable mention, All-Big Sky conference; named to the Big Sky's All-Academic team and to the Council of Sports Information Directors' Academic All-American Team.

Scott has completed his athletic eligibility, and this fall will take over as managing editor of the Montana Kaimin. He has worked as an intern at the Missoulian and for the UM Sports Information Office.

Deirdre Hathhorn, a sophomore J-major from Anchorage, Alaska, is an All-American cross-country runner who also has turned in impressive times in distance events in both outdoor and indoor track competition. Harley Lewis, director of athletics at UM, calls Dee Dee "perhaps the most talented athlete we've had in the women's track program at the University of Montana in recent history." She has the potential, he says, to compete internationally both as a runner and as a cross-country skier.

Radio-television majors strengthening

Rochon scholarship winners

Jill Sager and Paul Tuss, 1983 graduates of Anaconda High School, are the recipients of $250 Rochon journalism scholarships to the University of Montana. The awards are made by Dorothy Rochon Powers, '43, in honor of her father, C.G. Rochon.

Harvey

Burns

Washington

Grizzly athletic programs are Tony Harvey, a sophomore from Oakland, Calif., who was a solid performer in the football Grizzlies' defensive backfield; Bruce Burns, a sophomore from Pittsburg, Calif., who has been a strong rebounder and defensive player for the basketball team; and LeRoy Washington, a sophomore from Long Beach, Calif., who is regarded as one of the quickest guards in Big Sky basketball.

One indirect journalism contribution to Grizzly athletics has been Barb Kavanagh, a junior guard on the Lady Griz's championship basketball team. Barb is the daughter of John Kavanagh, '61, publisher of the Shelby Promoter and other Montana weeklies, and Georgianna Taylor '68, who now resides in Fort Collins, Colo.

J-Advocates make team

Eleven journalism or radio-TV majors served this year as members of the UM Advocates, the energetic student group that does promotional and service work for the university.

Though journalism is one of the smallest academic programs on campus, J-students in the Advocates are the second-largest group by major.

They include:

Georell Copps, senior from Helena; Susan Forman, junior from Seattle; Gordy Pace, junior from Helena; Carlos Pedraza, senior from Arvada, Colo.; Lance Lovell, senior from Great Falls; Tracy Reich, junior from Turner; Lauren Stack, junior from Atlanta, Ga.; Glenn Thane, Jr., sophomore from Missoula; Theresa Walla, senior from Lewistown; Brenda Galts, junior from Lethbridge, Alta., and Leslie Vining, senior from Missoula.

Deirdre Hathhorn:
World class potential

Faculty conducts magazine seminar

The journalism faculty presented a magazine critique and editing seminar for the Association of Conservation Information at the group's national convention in Missoula Feb. 25.

The association comprises editors and staff members of publications produced by state conservation, resource or wildlife agencies. Journalists from 14 states participated in the seminar.

Dean Charles Hood moderated the seminar, and professors Bob McGiffert, Warren Brier, Jerry Holloron, Sharon Barrett and Bob Cushman presented critiques of conservation and wildlife magazines from Tennessee, Alaska, Montana, Idaho, Michigan, Wyoming, Oregon, Illinois and Saskatchewan. Teaching assistant Carol Van Valkenburg also evaluated the magazines.

Kay Ellerhoff '67, associate editor of Montana Outdoors magazine, was a principal organizer of the conference, which was held in conjunction with the International Wildlife Film Festival on the UM campus.

The journalism faculty also judged broadcast, newswriting and feature entries in the journalism excellence competition sponsored by the National Federation of Press Women.

Faculty, J-students do TV productions

Despite a lack of production funds and staff personnel, the School of Journalism's radio-TV faculty and students managed to produce a significant number of television programs for the university and the public last year.

For the second year, Prof. Greg MacDonald produced "Grizzly Replay," a weekly highlight show of UM football games. MacDonald and his students also produced several "Grizzly Replay" basketball shows.

The department produced "The American Dream: Endangered Species" and "The Business of Dying," public service programs that were distributed to public television stations in the Northwest. Also produced were several programs for educational use, including "How a Bill Becomes Law," done for the Montana Legislative Council, and "Art in My World, My World of Art," a series of programs on art education for elementary and high school teachers in cooperation with School District 1 in Missoula.

Radio-TV students have continued to produce public service announcements for local nonprofit agencies. PSA's have been produced for more than 20 community groups and agencies during the past two years.

Almost inundated

Carol Hayes, KUFM office manager and radio-tv department secretary, has been desperately trying to keep up with the flood of paperwork created by KUFM's successful spring fund drive. Now that she has entered all donation information into the computer she will have to worry about "VDT blindness."

Dorothy M. Johnson won't wear our T-shirts!

Back row, from left: Greg MacDonald, Jerry Holloron, Carol Van Valkenburg, Bob McGiffert, Karen Kaley, Ed Dugan, Phil Hess, Bob Cushman. Seated, from left, Nathaniel Blumberg, Dorothy M. Johnson, Warren Brier, Charlie Hood. Front, from left, William Marcus, Sally Mauk, Jyl Hoyt, Terry Conrad.

"I've never worn a T-shirt in my life and I'm not about to start now," said Dorothy, one of the J-School's most distinguished former faculty members. But the author of "A Man Called Horse" knows how tight university budgets are getting, and joins the rest of the J-School faculty and staff in inviting alumni and friends to contribute to the Dean Stone Night Lectures fund. As state money gets tighter, it's becoming more difficult to attract high-caliber speakers to our awards banquet each year. We are aiming at an endowment whose interest will provide enough money each year to bring in a major speaker. If you alumni get us started, we'll seek matching funds from a corporate group.

A gift of $25 will get you a T-shirt emblazoned with a handsome Joe Boddy sketch of Dean Stone, the J-School's first dean, at his rickety Royal. If you're the traditional type, the message will say "Dean Stone Night Lectures." If you're a little racier, order one that says "Stone Ground." If, like Dorothy M. Johnson, you hate T-shirts, you may order the Boddy drawing, suitable for framing as a 13x13 poster.

Please help us out. Use the order envelopes inserted elsewhere in the Communique.

Thanks,

CHARLIE

Charles E. Hood, dean

'Scotty' and 'Doc' retire as editors

Two of Montana's most respected newsmen — William D. "Scotty" James '41 and Duane "Doc" Bowler '39 — have retired.

James stepped down July 30 as editor of the Great Falls Tribune and Bowler, former editor of the Billings Gazette, retired from his post as opinion editor of that paper on Nov. 30, 1982. Both men capped newspaper careers that spanned four decades.

James

Bowler was on hand to express his admiration for James at a retirement banquet for the Tribune editor in Great Falls. "We enjoyed beating you on stories over the years, Scotty," he said before an audience that included Gov. Ted Schwinden and several Montana Supreme Court justices. "And we didn't feel too bad when you beat us."

James had been with the Tribune since 1947, joining the paper as a reporter. He later served as Sunday editor, city editor and editorial writer-editor before being named executive editor in 1968. Since 1974 he has served as the Tribune's editor and vice president.

Bowler

A native of Sand Coulee, James graduated in journalism from UM in 1941. Before joining the Tribune, he worked as a newsman in Minot, N.D., Salt Lake City, Lewistown and Helena. At Great Falls, he was credited with playing a major role in making the Tribune one of the state's most respected and authoritative journals of news and opinion.

His responsibilities will be assumed by managing editor Terry Dwyer on the news side, and by Bob Gilluly '57 on the opinion side.

Bowler, whose nickname "Doc" comes from helping Grizzly football players with their studies when he was a journalism student, started his newspaper career in 1941, working as a reporter with the Montana Record-Herald in Helena. He became managing editor of the Billings Gazette in 1960, was named editor in 1970 and became opinion page editor in 1975.

Bowler is a member of one of state's best-known newspaper families. His father, Burley, operated pioneer newspapers in northeastern Montana, and his brother, Larry, owns the Daniels County Leader in Scobey. Doc's son, Mike, is an editorial writer for the Baltimore Evening Sun.

Gary Svec '65 has succeeded Bowler as opinion page editor of the Gazette.

Class of '57 reunites, re-enjoys

Five members of the journalism Class of '57 reunited during Homecoming Oct. 15 and 16.

Organizers of the reunion were Norma Beatty Ashby, Great Falls, whose "Today in Montana" television show is seen throughout the state on the Montana Television Network, and Bob Gilluly, editorial writer for the Great Falls Tribune.

Others who attended were John Bansch, assistant sports editor of the Indianapolis Star; Jim Graff, president of Sage Advertising in Billings, and Joan Hoff Wilson, executive secretary of the Organization of American Historians and a professor of history at Indiana University. Kim Forman '59, public information specialist for Burlington Northern in Seattle, happened to be at Homecoming, and joined the reunion group.

After watching the Grizzlies defeat the Idaho Vandals, the alums gathered in their old classroom, Journalism 211, where they visited with the journalism faculty, including Dean Charlie Hood, former deans Nathaniel Blumberg and Warren Brier and Professor Emeritus Edward Dugan.

The group vowed to come back in a few years, and perhaps come a day or two earlier, to honor a J-faculty request that they visit journalism classes.

Not able to attend, but sending their best wishes, were George Miller, who manufactures the Conetrol rifle scope mount in Seguin, Texas; Dick Warden, legislative director of the United Automobile Aerospace Agricultural Implement Workers of America, in Washington, D.C.; Col. Gary Sorenson, public affairs officer for the First U.S. Army in Fort Meade, Md.; and Van R. Olsen, director of public affairs, United States Beet Sugar Association, in Washington, D.C.

Hal Stearns gets honorary doctorate

Harold G. (Hal) Stearns '36 was awarded an honorary doctor of letters degree June 12 at commencement ceremonies at the University of Montana.

Stearns, an Anaconda native, was editor and publisher of the Harlowton Times and Ryegate Clarion from 1940 to 1972, with the exception of his years of service as a naval officer during World War II. He was a respected commentator on politics and the Montana scene, and his column, "The Editor's Uneasy Chair," was widely quoted.

He is a past president of the Montana Historical Society and of the Montana Press Association and has written extensively about Montana history. A longtime advocate of education and the arts, he has lobbied without pay for support of the Montana University System during several legislative sessions.

Stearns, who is heritage director of the USA Canada Foundation, resides with his wife Jean Kountz Stearns, English '37, in Helena.

Romney named to Hall of Fame

Miles Romney Jr. '22, a tough, honest and outspoken Hamilton newspaperman for more than four decades before he died in 1976, is one of two recent inductees to the Montana Newspaper Hall of Fame.

Romney, editor of the Western News, became the 24th member last year, and the late T. J. Hocking, longtime editor and publisher of the Glasgow Courier, was selected as the 25th inductee last June.

Both men's photos and biographies will join those of other members in the Hall of Fame display at the UM School of Journalism.

Known as "Ravalli county's most respected resident," Romney seemed to follow in the footsteps of his equally prominent father, Miles Sr., who published the Western News from 1893 to 1937 and also was inducted into the Montana Newspaper Hall of Fame.

Miles Romney Jr. was born Dec. 6, 1900, in Hamilton. He attended the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, and later George Washington University, but returned to Montana to complete a degree in journalism at UM in 1922.

He took over management of the Western News from his father in 1925, then left the paper four years later. During the early 1930s he worked as a clerk for the public lands committee of the U.S. House of Representatives, as deputy collector in Montana for the Internal Revenue Service and as editor of the Western Progressive, a newspaper supporting his father's bid for governor.

He returned to the Western News in 1937 and acquired a reputation as an independent editorial voice in a state dominated by the Anaconda Company's newspapers. He served in the Montana House of Representatives and Senate, and was a delegate to the 1972 Constitutional Convention.

The Western News was merged with the daily Ravalli Republic in 1977, the year after his death.

His wife is the former Ruth Gray of Hamilton.

WELCOME DUO

Beryl Seljak and Millie Dunn of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program were two of the most welcome individuals in the journalism school during the 1982-83 year. They helped out a couple of times a week in the Journalism Library. They'll be back in the fall.

Visiting professionals, politicians include Sauter, Hersh, Muskie

CBS News president Van Gordon Sauter, reporter Seymour Hersh and former Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie were among 35 news media professionals and public figures who visited the School of Journalism during the 1982-83 academic year.

Sauter was lured to Missoula by the presence of his son Jeremy, a radio-television major at UM. Hersh's visit was jointly sponsored by the School of Journalism and the Associated Students' Programming Council. Muskie was the 1982-83 Mansfield Lecturer in International Relations. All three visited classes and took part in student news conferences.

Other J-School visitors included Elmer Lower, former president of ABC News and dean of the University of Missouri journalism school; Montana Sen. John Melcher; Michael Frome, a noted environmental writer; Edward Giradet, a prize-winning Christian Science Monitor correspondent who sneaked into Afghanistan to cover the guerrillas' fight against Russian military occupation, and Arnaldo Ramos, a representative of the rebels in El Salvador.

Here's a list, in alphabetical order, of other individuals who visited journalism classes or answered questions of J-students during news conferences in the Journalism Library:

Dick Blom, systems technician for the Lee Newspapers of Montana.

Bill Brown, director of University Publications, UM.

McCarthy Coyle, representative of Montanans for Quality Television, a citizens' advocacy group.

Bill Cregg, the mayor of Missoula.

Dominic Crolla, director of public affairs and development, St. Patrick Hospital.

Ann Mary Dussault, Missoula County commissioner.

Ray and Mary Fenton, public relations and graphics specialists, Helena.

Rick Foote, reporter, Montana Standard, Butte.

Judy Hensel, public information officer, School District 1, Missoula.

Harley Hettick, freelance photographer, the Jocko Valley.

Mark Holston, anchorman, KCFW-TV, Kalispell.

Brad Hurd, editor, the Missoulian.

Charles S. Johnson, reporter, Great Falls Tribune Capitol Bureau, Helena.

Bob Kelly, director of public and community relations, Champion International, Missoula.

Sol Levy, assistant producer for ABC TV news, New York.

Bert Lindler, environmental reporter for the Great Falls Tribune and representative of the Great Falls Newspaper Guild.

Ian Marquand, news director, KPAX-TV, Missoula.

Laurie Mason, regional editor, the Missoulian.

Clarence McConnell, editor, the Ravalli Republic, Hamilton.

Mike McNally, reporter and film reviewer, The Missoulian.

Dan McIntyre, former Borrowed Times editor and freelance specialist in promotional publications, Missoula.

Verna Green Smith, director of CEMREL, an educational consulting firm in St. Louis.

Virginia Tribe, information officer, Lolo National Forest, Missoula.

Harold Van Dye, Missoulian newsroom attorney.

Bill Vaughn, free lance writer and co-owner of Arrow Graphics, Missoula.

Jane Watrel, reporter, KECI-TV, Missoula.

Dick Wesnick, editor, the Billings Gazette.

Larry Williams, Republican nominee, U.S. Senate.

Joan Hoff Wilson, professor of history at Indiana University and executive secretary of the National Association of Historians.

Van Gorr

Seymour Hersh

Edmund

ter

with J-student Lance Lovell

Elmer Lower

Photos by Bob Cushman and UM Publications
Layout by Patty Reksten

Institute honors Streit

Clarence Streit '19 was honored Aug. 6 at a "rendezvous" sponsored by the Institute of the Rockies. Participants in the event, which took place at a guest ranch near Missoula, came from Europe, Asia, Africa and Latin America as well as the United States, according to John Badgley, the institute's director. Besides honoring Streit, the group discussed "the future of democracy," Badgley said.

Sharon Barrett, assistant professor of journalism, represented the J-School at the event.

Streit, Montana's first Rhodes Scholar, is the editor of Freedom and Union magazine and the author of Union Now, a book that details his longtime advocacy of a federation of democracies. He has been nominated four times for the Nobel peace prize.

20s - 30s

Anne Cromwell Needham '24 moved from Anaconda to Spokane to live with her daughter.

Dorothy Elliott Hopkins '29 retired as an editor and teacher and lives in Ventura, Calif. She works as a volunteer for the Ventura County Historical Museum and the League of Women Voters.

Edward F. Becker '30, a retired lawyer and consultant, writes: "On returning home from a speaking engagement on the West Coast, I flew over Montana. It's a great state. I wish I could have landed." Edward and wife Eleanor live in Killingworth, Conn.

J-School leads in Distinguished Alums

Smith, Wilson honored

Joan Hoff Wilson '57 and Verna Green Smith '40 were among six UM graduates to receive Distinguished Alumnus Awards during Homecoming.

Wilson

They were the 19th and 20th journalism alums to receive that award since it was established in 1960. The journalism school ranks first among all academic units in the number of alums receiving that honor.

Wilson, a double-major in history and journalism at UM, is executive director of the Organization of American Historians and a history professor at Indiana University. She is a specialist in 20th century U.S. foreign policy and politics, and has written extensively in these areas. Her books include a

Smith

Margaret Raitt Gilfeather '33 is retired and lives in Great Falls with husband Pat (UM School of Law '33). She was named Cascade County Democratic Woman of the Year in 1982. Margaret and Pat have three sons—Grant, who works in the personnel department, City of Dallas; Frank, a mathematics professor at the University of Nebraska; and Glen, an electrical engineer in Dallas.

Leland B. Taylor '36 reports that he has retired three times, once as a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force. He is the publisher of Biological Farming News. Leland and wife Martha reside in Albuquerque.

Loraine Coy Harmon '38 and Don celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary last October. They have eight grandchildren. The Harmons live in Springfield, Ore.

Nicholas M. Mariana Sr. '38 served as general chairman of a successful fund drive to build a $925,000 St. Therese Church in Parkrose, a Portland, Ore., suburb.

Philip W. Payne '39 retired June 1, 1982, after 31 years with Time Inc. He most recently was editor of Time-Life Records, a division of Time-Life Books. Philip and wife Alison Merriam Payne live in Alexandria, Va.

40s

Herbert C. Watts '40, a staff member and editor at the Havre Daily News for 40 years, was named executive editor by publisher W. Les Hill.

Duncan R. (Scotty) Campbell Jr. '41, retired publisher of the Butte Montana Standard, and wife Barbara Dobbin Campbell moved to Bigfork last August. Their son, Duncan, a 1979 UM honors graduate in economics and political science, lives in Los Angeles and works in Beverly Hills as a municipal bond broker.

biography of Herbert Hoover, and she is working on a book about Richard Nixon. Wilson, who grew up in Butte, has a Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley.

Smith, who grew up in Glasgow, has pursued a career in both her major fields of interest — journalism and education — and has become an expert in the field of educational materials and communication. Since 1966 she has been director of Communication Services in CEMREL Inc., one of eight congressionally mandated educational laboratories chartered in 1965 to improve learning for children. She has been based in St. Louis.

Previous journalism school distinguished alumni include Dorothy Rochon Powers, '43; Ronald S. Kain, '22; Vern Haugland, '31; Frank Brutto, '29; Ann Wilson Haynes, '22; Aline Mosby, '43; Robert C. Hendon, '34; William Forbis, '39; Norma Beatty Ashby, '57; Vernon F. Spencer, '42; William A. Barbour, '48; Hal Stearns, '36; Andrew Cogswell, '27; Martha Dunlap-Moore, '28; Ossian MacKenzie, '28; D. J. Shultz, '33. Young Distinguished Alumni awards have gone to David Rorvik, '66 and Janet Trask Cox, '63.

Robert L. Jordan

Robert L. Jordan '51, a public relations specialist for the forest industry in California, New Mexico and Arizona, died of natural causes Dec. 5, 1982, in Whitefish. He was a resident of Columbia Falls.

Mr. Jordan was 59. He served with the Marine Corps in the Pacific in World War II.

His wife, Mercedes Mayrand, died in 1970. Survivors include a daughter, Suzanne Harkness of Sacramento, Calif., and a son, Richard, Utica.

Esther Gilluly

Esther Hart Gilluly '30, former editor of the Montana State Republican Bulletin and the State Supreme Court's Montana Reports, died Dec. 4, 1982, in Helena. She was 74.

Mrs. Gilluly also had been a reporter for the Glasgow Courier and a writer for the Montana Bank monthly magazine.

She was the wife of Sam Gilluly '30, former editor of the Glasgow Courier, director of the Montana Historical Society, and secretary-manager of the Montana Press Association. Her sons include Jack Gilluly '62, a public relations officer for the Montana Power Co., Robert '57, editorial writer for the Great Falls Tribune, and Richard, an editorial writer for the Baltimore Sun.

Mrs. Gilluly was born in Charles City, Iowa, and moved to Montana with her family in 1919. She married Sam in 1930 in Missoula.

She was active in volunteer work.

Mrs. Gilluly is survived by her husband, her three sons, 11 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Arthur L. Petersen

Arthur L. Petersen, former circulation manager of the Great Falls Leader and owner of insurance agencies in Denver and Sun City, Ariz., died Feb. 2 following an illness.

Mr. Petersen, 66, was reared in Whitefish. He played football at UM with the "Golden Grizzlies" team of 1937.

Mr. Petersen served as a captain in the Army Signal Corps in World War II and was stationed for three years in the South Pacific.

He had worked as an advertising clerk at the Great Falls Tribune and as manager of Farmers Union Insurance Co. of Montana.

Survivors include his wife, Virginia Hill Petersen, Sun City, and a daughter, Sandra Davis, Fairfax, Va.

Daniel R. Zenk

Daniel R. Zenk '55, who retired in May, 1982, as an Army lieutenant colonel, died Nov. 1, 1982, in Missoula. He was 50.

Mr. Zenk had served in the Army since his graduation from UM. His last assignment was as a public-affairs officer for the Department of Defense at the Pentagon.

He earned a master's degree in journalism at the University of Minnesota in 1967.

Mr. Zenk was stationed twice in Germany, once in Korea and twice in Vietnam. He received the Meritorious Service Medal, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, and the Bronze Star with three oak-leaf clusters.

Survivors include his widow, Sonia Smith Zenk, and two sons, Brian and Paul, both of Bozeman.

Stan Healy '41 returned to his post as senior alderman on the Missoula City Council after suffering a heart attack. He also has been working on a manuscript, "Via Rusty Nails," about Missoula-area railroading in the 1920s.

Kay Kester Karlsgodt '41 retired after 27 years with the Montana Power Co. She started working in the Missoula office in 1976 as a bookkeeper and later was promoted to data controller.

R. D. Peterson '41, a retired Marine Corps colonel, is president of the Mission Valley Backcountry Horsemen. He lives on the East Shore of Flathead Lake.

Robert H. Fisher ex '43, retired from the Army and from private industry, lives with his wife Elaine in Anacortes, Wash. In the Army, he edited the Military Police Journal. The Fishers, who visited the J-School in July, have seven children.

Mary Bukvich Fenton '43 and Ray Fenton '43 worked with Great Falls Tribune editors to redesign the newspaper. They also conducted seminars on newspaper design and public relations at the J-school. The Fentons work out of their studio home on Canyon Ferry Lake near Helena.

Richard H. Kern '43, who is retired, lives in Reston, Va., during the winters and in Livingston, Mont., during the summers.

Shirley Scott Gianelli '45 writes that husband William is assistant secretary of the Army for civil works, chairman of the Panama Canal Commission and is in charge of the Arlington, Va., Cemetery. The Gianellis live in Arlington.

Tom Bogardus '46 is retired and lives in Friday Harbor, Wash. He is a former business manager of the Palo Alto (Calif.) Times.

Mary Schmit Garrity '47 completed her 17th year as an elementary school teacher in New Hyde Park, N.Y. She also is editor of the teacher association's newsletter.

Richard J. Wright '48 is publicity director for the Portland Rose Festival Association in Oregon. Richard and wife Bernice Enevoldsen's two sons live in Portland. The Wrights have four grandchildren.

Rhodes record set straight

Dean Charles E. Hood set the record straight when the February issue of Presstime magazine suggested that an Indiana University student may be the first U.S. journalism major to receive a Rhodes Scholarship.

In a letter to the editor published in the April issue, Hood wrote:

"Three of our students at the University of Montana School of Journalism have received Rhodes Scholarships. They are Clarence Streit (1920), Ralph Kirby Davidson (1948) and Sterling Soderlind (1950). Streit is editor and publisher of Freedom & Union magazine and continues to promote his proposal for an Atlantic Union. Davidson is deputy director for social services at the Rockefeller Foundation, and Soderlind is vice president for planning at the Wall Street Journal.

"Nathaniel Blumberg, dean of the Montana School of Journalism from 1956 to 1968 and now an emeritus professor, won a Rhodes in 1948 as a journalism major at the University of Colorado."

Paul Carter Photo

Telehistory

UM's J-School played a role last June in what may have been a Montana television first — a Missoula station's expansion of its local news broadcast to one hour. KECI-TV newscaster Jane Watrel, a part-time graduate student in journalism, delivered the news while cameraman Gus Chambers, a senior in radio-television from Ellaville, Ga., kept her in focus.

J-School grads win journalism awards

University of Montana alums earned their share of awards for journalistic excellence during the past year.

Here's an undoubtedly incomplete list, picked up here and there, of the alums or former J-students who received recognition in Montana and the Northwest:

Montana Broadcaster of the Year Competition, sponsored by the Greater Montana Foundation and the Montana Broadcasters Association:

Norma Beatty Ashby, Great Falls, "Today in Montana" show, on the Montana Television Network — runnerup.

Society of Professional Journalists 1983 Excellence in Journalism Contest for Northwest region:

Jeff Cole, Missoulian — 3rd place, science and medical reporting.
Evelyn King, Missoulian — 3rd, modes of living reporting; 3rd, lifestyle reporting.

Cathy Kradoller, Gary Moseman, Mike McNally, Jeff Cole, Doug O'Harra, Paul Vandevelder and Don Schwennesen, all of the Missoulian — 1st, spot news reporting.

Nils Rosdahl, Coeur d'Alene Press — 1st, business reporting; honorable mention, science and health.

Carl Gidlund, Anchorage Times — 2nd, business news features and column.

Susanne Bradley, Idaho Falls Post-Register — 1st, headlines.
John Owen, Seattle Post Intelligencer — 2nd, sports columns.

John Kalentzis, Spokane Spokesman-Review — 2nd, headlines.
Randy L. Rasmussen, Portland Oregonian — 2nd, portrait photography

Montana Press Association 1983 Better Newspaper Contest
Dan Hollow, Glendive Ranger-Review — 2nd, editorial writing; honorable mention, feature story.

Scott Hagel, Hardin Herald — 1st, column writing.
Jo Ann Speelman, Kalispell Weekly News — 3rd, scenic pictures; honorable mention, feature story.

Lynette Nickel, Western News, Libby — 1st, feature picture.
Lynn Gross, Bigfork Eagle — honorable mention, sports picture; honorable mention, feature story.

Dick Crockford, Shelby Promoter — 2nd, column writing; 3rd, feature writing

John Kavanagh, Shelby Promoter — 3rd, sports picture.

National Press Photographer Association's Region 11 Photographer of the Year competition.

Kurt Wilson, Longview, Wash., Daily News — 3rd place

Montana Sportswriter of the year, sponsored by the National Sportscasters and Sportswriters Association:

Dave Trimmer, Billings Gazette, winner

Cours of Montana Rodden Press Contest
Dave Trimmer, Billings Gazette — 1st, news writing; runnerup, feature writing.

Montana Associated Press contest:
Mike McNally, the Missoulian — 1st and 2nd place, spot news.

Karen McGrath, Havre Daily News — 2nd and 3rd, features.
Steve Smith, Missoulian — 1st, column writing

Peggy Kuhr, Great Falls Tribune — 1st, editorial writing.
Rob Dean, Bozeman Chronicle — 2nd, editorial writing

Dave Trimmer, Billings Gazette — 3rd (tie), sports features.
Daryl Cadbow, Missoulian — 2nd, sports columns.

SDX establishes Alumni library

The University of Montana student chapter of the Society for Professional Journalists has established an alumni paperback library.

The chapter will invite graduating seniors each year to contribute a favorite paperback to the collection, which will be housed in a special location in the Journalism Library. A bookplate will identify each contributor.

Laurie Williams, SDX president for the past year, said contributions from the 1983 class included "Giants in the Earth," Rolvaag; "Prisoner Without a Name, Cell without a Number," Timerman; "The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test," Wolfe; "1984," Orwell; "The Feminine Mystique," Friedan; "The Boys on the Bus," Crouse; "The Prince," Machiavelli; "Dispatches," Herr; and "The Elements of Style," Strunk and White.

Alums wishing to contribute to the library should send their books to the SDX Alumni Library in care of the School of Journalism.

Frank Cocco '50 is a copywriter for Xerox Education Publications and resides with wife Mary in Hamden, Conn. They have four children. Frank also owns an ice cream drive-in in New Haven. He says he plays a lot of golf and looks forward to retiring in three to five years.

Bill Farden '50 continues as president, publisher and owner of the Fishing and Hunting News with offices in Seattle.

George Remington '50, publisher of the Billings Gazette, was elected vice president of Allied Daily Newspapers. The trade association has member newspapers in Montana, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Alaska.

Joe A. Renders '50 is the information officer for the Montana Department of Health and Environmental Sciences. Joe and wife Shirley Alling Renders ex-'51 live in Helena.

Robert Crennen '51 is vice president and general manager, central division, United Press International. He's based at UPI's administrative offices in Chicago.

Len Derby '51 works for Century 21 Realty in Kalispell. He writes that his J-school training and newspaper experience provide a "great background" for work in real estate.

Henry J. Pratt '52 and wife Beverly live in Lakewood, Colo. Henry is chief of the Branch of Program Evaluation and Employee Relations, National Park Service, in Denver and continues as a colonel in the Medical Service Corps of the Army Reserve. Son Dale is a finalist in the National Merit Scholarship competition.

Del Mulkey '54 provided the photographs for an article, "Off Trail in the Olympics," in the November, 1982, Backpacker magazine. The article describes Del's return after 30 years to a high-mountain site in the Olympics in Western Washington. Del, a free-lance ski photographer based in France, visited Missoula and the J-school in July.

Beverly Praetz Pietryga '54 reports that she is a homemaker in Milford, Mich. She is a volunteer member of two parent councils, secretary for a community education advisory board and a member of school board committees. Beverly and husband Leonard's son Michael is a fourth-class cadet at the Air Force Academy.

Ray Moholt '55 is manager of product publicity for Western Wood Products

Richards top Melcher aide

Ronald P. Richards '59 is Sen. John Melcher's new administrative assistant in Washington, D.C. He previously had been co-owner of KMTX Radio in Helena, a partner in Nordbye Advertising and Marketing in Missoula, chairman of the Montana Democratic Party and a director of the Montana Broadcasters Association. Ron and Annabelle have three children, the youngest of whom is a student at Montana State University. "I'm enjoying the work and the life in Washington," Ron writes.

Association, Portland, Ore. He has been with WWPA since 1970 and is co-author of "Patios and Decks: How to Plan, Build and Enjoy," recently released by HP Books. His wife, the former Lorinda Smith, a '60 UM graduate in home ec, is home economist with the Oregon Dairy Council. Son Kendrick will be a junior this fall at Oregon State; Melissa will be a freshman at Pomona College in California.

Jean Herbert Winthers '56 is editor of the weekly Selah Valley Optimist in Yakima, Wash. Husband John is director of the White Pass Ski School. Son Kris, 21, is a ski instructor, and son Eric, 19, is a ski racer.

Bob Gilluly '57 is an editorial writer for the Great Falls Tribune.

Hidde Van Duym '57 is executive secretary of the Montana Board of Public Education.

60s

Brinton Markle '60 heads the Montana Consumer Affairs Division. In a recent newspaper interview, he said his agency has recovered $277,497 for Montana consumers who have been victims of shady business practices over the past two years.

Morgan column popular

Judith Blakely Morgan '60 writes a weekly column for the Los Angeles Times, Chicago Sun-Times and the San Diego Union. She reports that her byline appears occasionally in the Dallas Times Herald, Denver Post, National Geographic, Travel & Leisure, Harper's Bazaar, and Town & Country. Husband Neil is editor of the San Diego Tribune.

Judith writes that she is facing newspaper and magazine deadlines on subjects from "Charles Lindbergh to California Gold Rush towns, from the road to Hana on Maui to preparations for the 40th anniversary of D-Day."

The Morgans live in La Jolla.

Brites

- Seen in the classified personals of the Montana Kaimin last year: "Harder to join than MENSA — the Jerry Holloron 'A' Club."

- Bob Gibson, of the Western Wyoming bureau of the Billings Gazette, writes that "I thought I had seen every way possible to shorten the names of our governmental bodies for headlines," but a Wyoming newspaper's headline for a U.S. Supreme Court story made him change his mind. The head: "Supco declares gravel mineral." "Now," writes Bob, "I believe I have seen everything."

- Asked in a journalism survey course exam to identify the term "inverted pyramid," an ignorant but inventive freshman gamely penned this answer last spring: "The Eighth Wonder of the World — constructed at great human cost in the fifth century B.C. by the near-sighted pharaoh Hoola-Hoop-Hotep."

- When a student in Dean Charlie Hood's

Guthrie novel published

A. B. Guthrie Jr. '23 completed "Fair Land, Fair Land," the fifth of a series of historical novels that began with "The Big Sky." His latest work, set in Montana during the 19th century, continues to explore the unhappy consequences of civilization's encroachment on the unspoiled wilderness. "Bud" won the Pulitzer Prize for "The Way West" in 1950. He and his wife Carol live near Choteau, in a house they call "the Barn."

James L. Kolstad '60 was named senior director of communications and public affairs for Frontier Airlines at its Denver headquarters.

Jim Dullenty '61 is editor of True West and Old West magazines published by Krans Publications of Iola, Wis.

John F. Kavanagh '61 bought the Kalispell Weekly News, Montana's largest weekly, in August, 1982. John continues as publisher of the Shelby Promoter, Cut Bank Pioneer Press and the Browning Glacier Reporter.

Zena Beth McGlashan '61 is the author of an article in the February 1983 issue of Press Woman. An associate professor of journalism at the University of North Dakota, she wrote about her semester as "acting chair" of the department.

Marie Stephenson Attmore '62 left Food & Drug Packaging magazine after nine years to become managing editor of Plastics Technology magazine in New York City. In 1980 she won the Jesse H. Neal Editorial Achievement Award from the American Business Press for a series of editorials. Marie and husband John live in Westfield, N.J.

Jerry L. Colness '62 has been named vice president for public affairs of the National Jewish Hospital and Research Center and the National Asthma Center in Denver.

senior seminar class finished an oral report on Charles Lindbergh last fall, Professor Bob McGiffert appeared in class attired in goggles, flying helmet, scarf, and foul-weather coat to sing from memory all five verses of "Lindbergh: The Eagle of the U.S.A." for a stunned but appreciative class. The applause was the loudest in J-211 since an exotic dancer made a surprise visit to Professor Jerry Holloron during a seminar class a year or two ago.

- When Steve and Gayle Shirley's new baby, Colin, arrived 23 days later than expected, the parents — both newspaper professionals — pointed out that, despite his lineage, the boy didn't appear to be cut out for newspaper work. "After all," his mother said, "he missed his first deadline by more than three weeks." Steve heads the Lee Newspapers State Bureau in Helena, and Gayle is on leave from the editorship of the Montana Elder, a newspaper for senior citizens. Both are UM J-grads.

Al Madison '62 and his wife Agatha and daughter Linda spent June 1982 visiting in Luxembourg and Germany. In Luxembourg they visited their daughter Jane, an AFS student, and her host family. In Germany they visited Al's relatives near Aachen. One of the highlights was a tour of the Keller Brauerei, which has been in Al's grandfather's family since the 1400s. They also visited East and West Berlin and viewed the "wall." Al, director of the UM Printing Services, also spent several days at DRUPA 82, an international printing equipment show at Dusseldorf, Germany.

Crane named publisher

James D. Crane '65 was promoted from operations manager to publisher of the Ottumwa (Iowa) Courier. A native of Choteau, Jim was farm editor, Sunday editor and city editor of the Missoulian before moving to Ottumwa as editor in 1975. He wrote recently that in spite of worries about declining circulation and young people who don't read newspapers, "newspapering still beats working for a living."

John Bennett '63, director of special projects for the Associated Press Broadcast Services in New York, is being transferred from New York to Washington D.C., which will be the new headquarters for AP broadcasting. John, a former Montana Kaimin editor, has been director of special projects since 1976. He and his wife Dolores and son Chris say they're looking forward to their move to the nation's capital.

Janet Trask Cox '63, president of Exclamation Point Advertising in Billings, served as president of the UM Alumni Association during the 1981-82 academic year.

Scott Sorensen '63 resigned as manager of the Missoula Southgate Mall and moved to Des Moines, Iowa, where he is marketing vice president for General Growth. The firm owns and operates 25 regional malls. Scott conducted the first of a series of retail sales seminars on July 6. Wife Joanie is a physician's assistant, specializing in orthopedic surgery at the Iowa Methodist Medical Center in Des Moines.

Don Kinney '64 moderates public affairs panel shows on the Denver public TV station.

Pat Rose Hillis '65 is head of corporate communications at SAFECO Insurance Companies in Seattle.

Joe Hoppel '65 left the Kansas City Star to become a copy editor in the books and periodicals department of The Sporting News in St. Louis. Joe was a copy editor at the Denver Post from 1967 to 1979. He and wife Nancy live in St. Louis.

Michael Ross '65 is business and advertising manager of the Forsyth Independent.

Emily Melton '65 a former employee in Gov. Ted Schwinden's office, has been named office manager for Sen. John Melcher's staff. She will also serve as a liaison for his Montana field staff.

Steve Smith B.A. '65, M.A. '69 is a reporter, columnist and feature writer for the Missoulian. His second book, "The Ox: Profile of a Legendary Montana Saloon," was published in July and deals with Missoula's Oxford bar and cafe. Steve rejoined the U.S. Naval Reserve as a journalist in January and will spend two weeks aboard the USS Reasoner, a San Diego-based frigate, in mid-August. His daughters, Erin and Megan, are 9 and 7, respectively, and his son Conor is 5.

Norma Sandberg Hober '66 works in the sports information office at the UM Athletic department. She worked for three years as an administrative aide for the UM Alumni Association.

David Rorvik '66 is the author of the novel, "The Sharing," published last December by Bantam under the pseudonym M. M. Faraday. The novel is partially set in Missoula. David says three more books are forthcoming and that he has acquired properties in Portland, Ore., and Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. He continues as contributing editor of Penthouse Magazine. He has moved from San Francisco to Canby, Ore.

Loretta Lynde Breslin '67, M.A. '79 was promoted to vice president/account manager at Sage Advertising in Billings. She also became the 10th Montanan accepted for membership in the Public Relations Society of America.

Fred Caruso '67 and Ellen Broadus Caruso '71 report that they grew "milk fed" pumpkins weighing up to 71 pounds last summer at their home in Englewood, Colo.

Schulz rises in VOA

John J. Schulz '63 has been named deputy director of the Voice of America News Division. He is based in Washington, D.C.

The news division provides a wire service in various languages to 43 clients and operates a radio station broadcasting worldwide. The division also has 30 foreign and domestic correspondents and a network of stringers around the world.

John, who grew up in Missoula and quarterbacked the Montana Grizzlies during his years at the J-School, was an Air Force jet fighter pilot before joining the VOA, for which he served as a correspondent in Tokyo and Hong Kong. He earned his master's and doctoral degrees from Oxford University, England.

He is married and has two children, 14 and 16. His wife, Linda, is vice president of the National Office on Disabilities.

Kay Morton Ellerhoff '67 continues as associate editor of Montana Outdoors, published by the Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks. In July, 1982, she was elected secretary of the Association for Conservation Information, an organization of outdoor writers and public information specialists from state, federal and Canadian resource agencies. She served as chairwoman of ACL's Awards Committee for three years and was on the board of directors for two years. Kay and husband Tom reside in Helena.

Carl Gidlund '67, M.A. '67 is a reporter for the Anchorage (Alaska) Times. He specializes in coverage of oil and gas news.

Frank Greco '67 is assistant vice president—operations for Southeast Economic Development Inc., a non-profit redevelopment corporation owned by the City of San Diego. Frank and wife Jane announced the birth of their second son, Matthew, on March 25, 1983.

Jane Stahl MacCarter '67 is a data base unit editor for Control Data Corp. Jane, husband Donald, daughter Mindy and son Kent live in Lakeville, Minn., and spend summers at Flathead Lake.

Nils Rosdahl '67 continues as family editor of the Coeur d'Alene (Idaho) Press. Nils and wife Mary announced the birth of their second child, Mariah Andrea, on Oct. 18, 1982, and the adoption of a 3-year-old Filipino, Julio, on Nov. 19, 1982. They changed Julio's name to Paul.

Gary Svee '67, former reporter for the Billings Gazette, became its opinion page editor in December 1982. Gary also has worked for the Missoulian.

Bill Schwanke '67, known for 12 years as the "Voice of the Grizzlies" for his sports broadcasts on KYLT Radio, resigned to become program director of news and sports at XT-93 FM Radio in Missoula. Bill is a former sports editor of the Missoulian and is married to Lynn Stetler Schwanke '68, former reporter for the Missoulian.

Jo Ann Speelman '67 is assistant editor of the Kalispell Weekly News.

Ben Hansen '68 left after three years at the Daily Herald in Provo, Utah, to become editor of the daily Enterprise in Beaumont, Texas. He had been with Scripps League Newspapers for 10 years.

Lesley Maynard '69 lives in Van Nuys, Calif.

Howard Schwartz '69 is editor of the gambling magazines Systems & Methods and Casino & Sports and marketing director of Gambler's Book Club Press. Howard earned an M.S. in journalism at Kansas State University and an M.S. in secondary education at the University of Northern Colorado. He lives in Las Vegas.

Powers promoted

Dorothy Rochon Powers '43 was promoted from editorial-page editor of the Spokesman-Review to associate editor of both the Spokesman-Review and the Spokane Chronicle. She is writing an editorial-page column three times a week. Dorothy continues to sponsor the C.G. Rochon scholarship award in memory of her father. The scholarship is given to Anaconda High School graduates with professional promise in journalism who intend to enroll at the UM J-school.

70s

Nedra Bayne '70 is a farm-policy columnist in Washington, D.C.

T.J. Gilles ex '71 is managing editor of the Record Stockman in Denver.

Jack Lincke '71 reports that he has operated his own firm, Public Relations, Inc., for 20 years in Pasadena and Los Angeles. In October, 1982, he had five book manuscripts being considered by New York publishers. Jack entered the J-school in 1926 but left before graduation to go to work.

Marcia Eidel '72 (law school '81) is a staff attorney and investigator for the Human Rights Commission in Helena.

Jack Tanner '72 has joined the Ravalli Republic news staff. He is also working on an M.A. in journalism at UM.

Ronnene Anderson '73 has resigned her job as a Missoulian correspondent in Hamilton, and has moved with her husband Mark Pepler to Edmonton, Alta., where he will take a university research professorship. Mark resigned his position at the Rocky Mountain Laboratory in Hamilton.

Vivian Todhunter '73 designs instructional programs for computer companies in San Jose, Calif., and is writing a novel. She visited the journalism school in July.

Rich Bangs '73 was promoted from copy editor to assistant news editor at the Rocky Mountain News in Denver. Susan Van Koten Bangs '71 works part time as an office manager in Littleton.

Berry heads press group

Ken Berry '70, publisher of the Sun Press newspapers in Kaneohe, Hawaii, has been elected president of the Hawaii Publishers Association. The group has some 70 members. Ken, who grew up in Missoula, was employed as a part-time sports writer for the Missoulian before moving to Hawaii in 1970. He managed newspapers in Virginia and was advertising manager for West Hawaii Today before joining his present firm, RFD Publications, Inc., in 1976. The company produces Sun Press newspapers, serving the island of Oahu, and operates one of Hawaii's major commercial printing firms.

Peggy Kuhr '73 left the Great Falls Tribune to join the news staff of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant. She is assistant to the political editor and the specialties editor.

Steve Fullerton '74 has joined the news staff of the Ravalli Republic in Hamilton. He previously had been employed by KLYQ Radio in Hamilton.

Dan McIntyre '74 is finishing a master's degree in philosophy at the University of Montana. He designs, writes and packages promotional publications for businesses in Montana and the Northwest.

Michael Moon '74 has moved from Missoula to Greenough, where he continues his work as a freelance writer and novelist. His second novel—whose principal character is a Missoula-based forest fire retardant pilot—is just finished.

Bob Cushman photo

Uplifting development

Construction work on an elevator on the east side of the Journalism Building was completed early this year. The project brought the building into compliance with federal requirements regarding handicapped access to public buildings.

Bill Vaughn ex '74 is the editor of the Montana Review of Books, the first issue of which was published in Missoula during summer 1983. In a letter from the editor, he charges that his publication is necessary because finding a book review in Montana newspapers "is harder than finding a Montana Power executive who hates generating plants."

Margaret MacDonald '74 and John D. Smillie were married July 31, 1982. Both work for the Northern Plains Resource Council, where she is a researcher and he is an organizer. The newlyweds live in Billings.

Thomas Valentine '74 operates a check-cashing service in Reno. Thomas and wife Vickie announced the birth of Nathan on Nov. 1, 1979.

Robert Anez '75 is an AP newsman in Helena. He worked for the Great Falls Tribune for more than three years, then lived in Billings briefly before joining the Helena bureau in April, 1981.

Dick Crockford '75 and wife Deborah live in Shelby, where Dick is editor of the Promoter. In the 1982 Montana Press Association Better Newspaper Contest, Dick placed second for editorial writing for weeklies with circulations from 1,500 to 2,900.

Carol Janson R-TV '75 is a reporter for KXLY-TV in Spokane.

John Kafentzis '75, Spokesman-Review weekend news editor, won second place in headline writing in both the Pacific Northwest and Inland Empire Excellence in Journalism contests sponsored by the Society of Professional Journalists. John also teaches journalism part time at Eastern Washington University. John and wife Teresa have a 2-year-old daughter, Kathryn Anne.

Mike Roney '75 is a microcomputer courseware editor for Sunburst Communications, an educational publisher situated in Westchester County, 25 miles north of New York City.

Rich Landers '75, outdoor editor for the Spokesman-Review, was married Sept. 25, 1982, to Meredith Heick of Moscow, Idaho. They reside in Veradale, Wash.

Bob Gibson '75 continues to work at the Billings Gazette's western Wyoming bureau in Cody. He's been there since early 1979.

Conrad Yunker, ex '75 had "reasonable cause" for alleging that he was fired by United Press International because of religion, age and marital status, according to the Montana Human Rights Division in Helena. Yunker, who was fired from UPI's Helena bureau in June 1982 after a long series of disputes, is asking for his job back and $86,000 in pay and penalties in a separate lawsuit.

Vicki Johnson Hyatt '76 is a writer for the MontWyo Agri-News. Vicki lives in Columbus with husband Richard and their son, Cole.

Lynn Hollenbeck Ingham '76 left San Francisco Magazine after three years to become director of advertising and circulation for Resort Management Magazine, with offices in San Diego. Lynn, who lives in La Jolla, is engaged to Robert Maue, a Ph.D. candidate in physiology and pharmacology.

Rich Kaudy '76 was graduated in June, 1982, from the University of Denver School of Law.

Wally Parker '76 covers higher education for the St. Paul (Minn.) Dispatch and is a part-time assistant city editor. Wally writes: "Lived in St. Paul since 1978. Big challenge is keeping only p.m. of three dailies healthy and competitive—fun place to work." Wally and wife Peggy reside in St. Paul.

Jeannie Young '76 worked two years as a law clerk for Judge Russell Smith in Missoula, then joined the Great Falls law firm of Church, Harris, Johnson and Williams. She earned her law degree at UM in 1980. Jeannie and husband Gary Moseman '83, former news editor of the Missoulian, moved to Great Falls last fall.

Jackie Galt Rice '76 is special sections editor of the Great Falls Tribune. Her husband, Dan, is a 1976 graduate of the UM School of Law.

Cal Crowe R-TV '76 is news director, KELO Radio, Sioux Falls, S.D. He accepted that position in 1981 after working in radio news reporter and editor positions at stations in Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Kathy Mensing-Rehbein '76 has been named director of Missoula Hospice. She and her husband have a home in the Rattlesnake. Her office is situated in St. Patrick Hospital.

Rick Crone '77 is a sports reporter for the Kalispell Daily Inter Lake.

Steve L. Harris R-TV '77 is associate producer at KECI-TV in Missoula. Previously he had been at KNDO-TV in Yakima, Wash., and at KEPR-TV in Pasco, Wash., where he had been a reporter and a contributor to a half-hour magazine show.

Jonathan Krim '77 left his job as assistant metro editor at the Washington (D.C.) Times and became national projects editor for the San Jose (Calif.) Mercury News.

Bob Simonson '77 is the editor of the Independent Observer in Conrad. He and his wife moved there from Denver, where he had a public relations job. They have a new baby.

Gordon Dillow '77 resigned from the Washington Times and joined the news staff of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

Anthony Hadley '77 is press secretary for Montana's Western District congressman, Pat Williams.

Jamie Phair Hurly '77 and Tom Hurly '77 moved to Las Vegas, Nev., where Jamie is a reporter for the Las Vegas Sun and Tom works at the Flamingo Hilton. Jamie's beats are labor, the Taxicab Authority and the city of North Las Vegas. Tom plans to attend the University of Nevada in Las Vegas.

Shelley Lee Immel '77 is a field representative for Congressman Pat Williams. She also is editor of the monthly Montana Democrat, published by the Montana Democratic Women's Club. Shelley lives in Missoula.

Ron Wilcox '77 is a student at the University of Denver School of Law.

Dale Willits R-TV '77 anchors a news program prepared by SAFECO Insurance Companies with offices in Seattle.

Larry Elkin '78 was mentioned in the January 24 AP Log for his story about money dispensed legally by a New York congressman from contributions left over from his campaign. Larry is assigned to the AP's Washington, D.C., bureau.

Nicole Flemming '78 was promoted to assistant editor of Montana Business Quarterly.

Wm. David Little '78 moved from Butte to Missoula when he was laid off by the Montana Power Co. He had worked in the public-relations department.

Randy Mills ex '78 resigned as a field representative in Missoula for Congressman Pat Williams. Randy previously had been Williams' press secretary. He intends to finish his journalism degree at UM, then perhaps pursue an M.A.

Bruce Moats '78 continues to work in the newsroom of the Lovell (Wyo.) Chronicle.

Gayle Corbett Shirley '78 and Steve Shirley '75 are the parents of a 7-pound, 8-ounce boy, Colin, born July 8 in Helena. Gayle is on leave from the editorship of the senior citizens' newspaper, the Montana Elder. Steve is with the Lee Newspapers State Bureau.

Dennis J. Unsworth R-TV '78 married Rita Lynn Pickering.

Bob Black '79 resigned as editor of the Libby Western News to become the county and school reporter for the Idaho Falls (Idaho) Post-Register.

Vernyce Dannels R-TV '79 is a corporate publications associate with the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J.

Jenifer Blumberg Loeb '79 and husband Charles announced the birth of their second child, Ariel Jeanette, on July 16, 1982. Jenifer is editing an in-house newsletter for the Loeb Electric Co. in Columbus, Ohio.

Jeff McDowell '79 left the Eureka Tobacco Valley News to become a reporter for the Lewistown News-Argus.

Frank Boyett ex '79 joined the reporting staff at the Cody, Wyo., weekly.

Ian Marquand '79, news director at KPAX-TV in Missoula, married Susan MacDonald, a 1979 UM graduate.

Bill McKeown ex '79 has left his position as managing editor of the Vail (Colo.) Trail, a weekly, and is moving to Japan, where he intends to teach English in the Kobe and Kyoto area.

Lorna Milne '79 married Michael Price.

Zanon edits magazine

LeeAnn Cumley Zanon '81 has been promoted to editor of Virtue Magazine: The Magazine for Christian Women, published in Sisters, Ore. She reports that the magazine has a circulation of 90,000 and is growing. She has a small staff and relies on freelancers for most of the magazine's material. LeeAnn was guest editor at the Christian Writers Conference in March at Warner Pacific College, Portland, Ore. She was married to Michael Zanon of Bend, Ore., on Sept. 18, 1982.

80s

Diane Hadella '80 and Michael McNally '83 were married Sept. 11, 1982, in Missoula. Michael is a reporter for the Missoulian. Diane works for the Missoula law firm of Petersen and Berndt.

Ed Kemmick '80, a reporter for the Butte Montana Standard, moved from the Anaconda bureau to the central office.

Margaret Loos '80 has resigned as a reporter for the Hamilton Ravalli Republic.

John McNay '80 is a reporter and photographer in Anaconda for the Butte Montana Standard. He has worked for the Livingston Enterprise, Anaconda Leader, and the Idaho Falls (Idaho) Post-Register.

Jim Bruggers '81 has joined the news staff of the Hungry Horse News in Columbia Falls.

Wire service merger

Sue O'Connell and Mike Dennison, '81 journalism grads, had a busy May.

On the 1st, Mike began working a night shift at the United Press International bureau in Seattle; on the 31st, Sue began working at the Associated Press bureau in the same city: in between, on May 21, the two were married.

This will not be the first time they have been journalistic competitors—they were staffers for the AP and UPI Helena bureaus earlier this year. The newlyweds were editors together at the Montana Kaimin, and did a stint as reporters at the Great Falls Tribune. Their Seattle jobs are temporary, but there is promise of permanent work.

Though they were reluctant to send this photo, Mike acknowledged that this might be the only time we'll ever see him in a tux.

Steve Van Dyke '80, editor of the Baker Fallon Times, wrote in his column that he was vexed by two expressions—the subscriber who wants to “renew my prescription” and “a good time was had by all.”

Scott Hagel '81 resigned his reporting and columnist's job at the Hardin Herald and is now wrangling horses at a dude ranch in Yellowstone Park. He'll continue to write.

Daniel J. O'Boyle '81 is a St. Louis-based U.S. Army journalist in a rotational training theme — command information, media relations and community relations. He is writing for the Gateway Reporter, a newspaper for the U.S. Army Troop Support and Aviation Materiel Command and the Aviation and Research Development Command.

Bob Phillips '81 left the Libby Western News and joined the news staff of the Kalispell Daily Inter Lake.

Alan Rosenberg '81 left the Kennebec (Maine) Journal to join the news staff at the Boston Herald.

Steve Stuebner '81 is a reporter and outdoor editor for the La Grande (Ore.) Observer. He placed second in minority affairs reporting for newspapers under 6,000 circulation in a contest sponsored by the William O. Douglas Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Patrick J. Sullivan '81 reports that he is "news editor, photographer, columnist and darkroom technician—when I'm not the sports editor, ad salesman or obituary writer" for the Ritzville (Wash.) Adams County Journal.

Toni Volk '81 attended the Writers' Workshop at the University of Iowa in Iowa City.

Kurt Wilson ex '81, on the news staff of the Longview, Wash., Daily News, placed third this year in the Region 11 contest of the National Press Photographers Association.

Edwin Bender '82 is a reporter for the Havre Daily News.

Clark Fair '82 is a staff writer and photographer for the Peninsula Clarion in Kenai, Alaska. He is also a reporter for the City News in Soldotna, where he lives.

Greg Gadberry '82 is a reporter for the Anchorage Daily News.

Larry Gilbert '82 and Doug O'Harra '82 wrote in October that they were in Anchorage "gathering firewood and gazing at the mountains."

Karen McGrath '82 is a reporter for the Havre Daily News.

Tim Rogers '82 is the Butte bureau chief for the Montana Maverick published at Clancy.

Rich Stripp ex-'82 is a reporter for the Wheatland (Wyo.) Record Times.

David Lee M.A. '82 spent the summer in Missoula picking up his teaching credentials at the University of Montana. He and his wife Tara are moving to Maine in September. They spent last year in Helena, where Dave worked as a freelance reporter and photographer, and then as a staff writer for the Helena Independent Record.

John Pearson M.A. '82 continues as a business and general-assignment reporter at the Bismarck (N.D.) Tribune. He had a hand in covering the stories about Gordon Kahl, the fugitive tax protester.

Michael Spradlin-Crater '82 is on the news staff at the Helena Independent Record. He had worked as an intern for the Independent Record during the summer of 1981 and the following summer worked for the Associated Press in Helena.

Paul Van Develder '82 worked as a photographer for the Bismarck (N.D.) Tribune, then joined the news staff of the Arizona Daily Star in Tucson. He has been on special assignment in Mexico. He placed third in the National Press Photographers Association contest, for spot news.

Renata Birkenbuel '83 has joined the Anaconda Leader as a sports writer and editor.

Mary Kelly M.A. '83 is employed with Y-93 Radio in Billings.

Gary Moseman '83 has joined the Great Falls Tribune as a desk editor. Former news editor at the Missoulian, he took time off in 1982-83 to finish at UM the journalism degree he began working on years ago at the University of Nebraska.

Melcher makes a point

U.S. Senator John Melcher of Montana fielded student questions during a visit to Prof. Jerry Holloron's public affairs reporting class last winter. That's Jerry seated in front.

Short takes

- Six journalism professors received votes from graduating seniors last spring for the award of UM's Most Inspirational Teacher. They included Nathaniel Blumberg, Warren Brier, Phil Hess, Jerry Holloron, Greg MacDonald and Bob McGiffert.

- Six journalism students and one faculty member — Bob McGiffert — ran in the 4th Annual Library Run. Their entry fees will be used to buy books for the Journalism Library.

- The journalism faculty served as judges last spring in the National Federation of Press Women's Communication Contest. Judges included Phil Hess, Jerry Holloron, Bob McGiffert, Warren Brier and Sharon Barrett. Categories included newspaper reporting, editorials and features, and broadcast news. Entries were from throughout the nation.

- John McNamer, a former UM journalism student, was among a group of ranchers who visited the Soviet Union in December 1982 to try to promote an end to the nuclear arms race. He toured major U.S. cities last May to generate opposition to the placement of MX missiles in Wyoming, and announced this summer he is selling his ranch near Charlo to devote full time to opposing the nuclear arms race.

- The Journalism Library, Journalism 211 and the typing room next door all will receive new fluorescent lighting this summer, the first new lighting since the building was constructed in 1936. The library also will be equipped with ceiling outlets and lighting grids that will permit press conferences there to be televised more conveniently.

- A videotape, a 16 mm film and two slide programs have been added to the Journalism School's audio-visual library as a result of successful application for the main library's incentive funds. The videotape, produced by the Columbia Graduate School of Journalism, is entitled, "Eyeball to Eyeball: Dilemma in the Newsroom," and focuses on ethical problems. The film is "I.F.'s Stone's Weekly," a noted biography. The slide programs include classic photos of tenant farm life taken by the Farm Security Administration during the 1930s and "Inroads and Outroads: How Donald McCullin Photographs Combat and the Struggle to Survive." The school has also purchased "Farewell Etain Shrdlu," a new movie about how the New York Times switched from hot metal to cold type.

- KUFM has ordered a new antenna, which will be installed atop TV Mountain southwest of Missoula during the summer. Severe winter storms damaged the old antenna beyond repair, reducing the station's coverage area in western Montana. The new antenna will set things right.

- Fire doors were installed during the summer on the south end of the Journalism Building. Partitions will separate the stairways from main interior hallways. The renovation was needed to get the building in compliance with fire codes.

Students sell articles, win awards

Several UM J-students received national and regional recognition in journalism contests last year and others sold their articles to magazines. One had a book published.

Gary Turbak, graduate student from Missoula, sold articles to Reader's Digest, National Wildlife, Field and Stream, Outdoor Life and Writer's Digest. His book, "Traveler's Guide to Montana," was published this year by Falcon Press. Kathleen Crump, senior from St. Ignatius, had her profile of Dorothy M. Johnson published in Writer's Digest. Barbara Tucker, senior from Missoula, wrote articles that appeared in Montana magazine and the Portland Oregonian's Sunday magazine.

Mark Grove, a senior from LaGrange, Ky., finished eighth nationally in the Hearst competition for feature writing. Recipients of writing awards in the Society of Professional Journalists' regional competition were Brian Rygg, senior from Great Falls, Tim Benson, junior from Bozeman, Crump and Turbak.

Kappa Tau Alpha inducts members

Seven journalism students were initiated last spring into Kappa Tau Alpha, the national society honoring scholarship in journalism.

They are Bethany R. Redlin, Sidney; Barbara K. McElwain, Missoula; John A. Gary Jr., Missoula; Melanie Williamson, Great Falls; B. Leslie Vining, Missoula; Laurie J. Williams, Billings; and Gary L. Green, Missoula.

Journalism students who have demonstrated superior performance in their academic studies are invited to join the national society.

Elmer Lower gives Dean Stone address

Elmer W. Lower, former president of ABC News and dean of the University of Missouri's School of Journalism, was the principal speaker at the 24th annual Dean Stone Night banquet May 6.

A specialist in the coverage of elections and political conventions, Lower spoke on "The Role of the Mass Media in the U.S. Presidential Election Process, 1984." He also showed an ABC News "bloopers" film that delighted the audience.

Lower, who agreed to serve as dean at Missouri only until the school could find a permanent person for the post, stepped down early this summer after the selection of the new dean, James Atwater. His professional and academic careers span five decades and include service as president of ABC News, general manager of NBC News and elections specialist for CBS News. He has more than 20 years' experience with newspapers and with United Press International.

9 R-TV, 23 journalism majors graduate

Twenty-three journalism majors and nine radio-television majors were graduated from the School of Journalism during the 1982-83 academic year.

One graduate student, Mary Kelly of Butte, received a journalism master's degree. Her thesis was entitled, "The Images of Women in the Advertising of Six Magazines from 1940 through 1980."

Bachelor's degree recipients in journalism were: Michael Spradlin-Crater, Helena; Daniel DeWeese, Missoula; C. L. Gilbert, Anchorage, Alaska; Karen McGrath, Billings; Gregory Ammondson, Missoula; Kathleen Crump, St. Ignatius; Donald Lewis, Cedarburg, Wis.; Mark T. Smith, Bozeman; Patricia Stuart, Ephrata, Wash.; Gary Green, Mis-

Miller selected as Kaimin editor

Bill Miller, a senior in journalism and English from Placencia, Calif., is the new editor of the Montana Kaimin. Named last spring, he will serve through Winter Quarter of 1984.

Miller, who succeeds Brian Rygg of Great Falls, served as an intern with the Tobacco Valley News in Eureka during the summer of 1982. He will head a 20-member student staff, who will include:

Scott Gratton, Missoula, managing editor; Ray Murray, Levittown, Pa., and Patricia Tucker, Huron, S.D., news editors; Ann Joyce, Butte, and Gary Jahrig, Calgary, Alta., senior editors.

Alexis Miller, Juneau, Alaska, and Jim Fairchild, Washington, D.C., associate editors; Martin Horejsi, Missoula, photo editor; Deb Scherer, Missoula, fine arts editor.

Scott Turner, Billings, sports editor; Janelle Patterson, Missoula, and Theresa Walla, Lewistown, night editors; Barbara Tucker, Missoula, staff reporter; Ed Jenne, Huntsville, Ala., Matt Thiel, Helena, and Sara McClain, Missoula, cartoonists.

Kaimin columnists will include Joanne DePue, Whitefish; Ross Best, Missoula, Mark Grove, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Larry Howell, Fort Collins, Colo.

Seminar enjoys variety of academic lecturers

History professors Paul Lauren and Harry Fritz, political science professor Ron Perrin and campus minister Lynne Fitch were guest speakers last year in the journalism Senior Seminar, which focuses on 20th-century American society.

Nine other faculty members were introducers for "American Profiles," a film series shown in conjunction with the class. They included Gerry Brenner, Jesse Bier and Rick DeMarinis, English; Ulysses Doss, the humanities; Bill Evans, history; Toby Weist, anthropology; Keith Yale, mathematics; Mark Jacobson, physics, and Bob McGiffert, journalism.

Faculty & staff

Dean Charles Hood was one of 26 Americans, mostly academic administrators, to attend a three-week information program in Bonn and Berlin in June and July. The program, called "Germany Today," was sponsored by the German Academic Exchange Program and the University of Bonn. The participants met with West German political leaders, diplomats, professors, cultural experts, planners and journalists. The program is funded by the German government.

Electra Lockridge, who served as journalism secretary from 1966 until 1974, is enjoying her retirement in Missoula, continuing to develop her talent in oil painting, and enjoying the companionship of her husband John, retired from the county sheriff's office.

Karen Kaley, the journalism school's secretary during the 1982-83 year, is the mother of a 7-pound, 13-ounce boy, Samuel Hayes, born July 4. Karen, Sammy and husband Chris are doing fine. While the new mother is on maternity leave, Jan Liane, her predecessor, has been filling in for the summer. Jan resigned her J-School job in September 1982 to work full time toward a degree in nursing.

Kaimin renting J-school VDTs

The Montana Kaimin early this year began using the School of Journalism's electronic editing system.

The paper rents five terminals, which are situated across the hall from the Kaimin offices. The system is linked electronically to the Missoulian, which has been printing the Kaimin since January. The paper previously had been printed by the UM Printing Services.

soula; Raimund Jenkins, Missoula; Charles Mason, Arlington, Va.; Pam Newbern, Florence, Ore.; Bonnie Yahvah, Libby; Perry Backus, Missoula; Michael Kellogg, Missoula; William Lundgren, West Glacier; Jan McCormick, Bozeman; Barbara McElwain, Missoula; Gary Moseman, Great Falls; Rita Munzenrider, Helena; James Peterson Jr., Missoula; Samuel Richards, Missoula.

Bachelor's degree recipients in radio-television were: Pamela Hippe, Great Falls; Teresa MacPheat, Somers; Lisa Coats, Missoula; Debra Danelson, Scobey; Raymond Ekness, Crosby, N.D.; Janette Hensleigh, Miles City; Sverre Kjetil Rod, Aukra, Norway; Margaret Schaefer, Livingston; David Watson, South Sioux City, Neb.

Bob Cushman Photo

Senior Seminar's looking up

The 1982-83 Senior Seminar class in journalism seems relieved the year is over. By the numbers, the students are: 1, Barbara McElwain, Missoula; 2, Pam Newburn, Florence, Ore.; 3, Laurie Williams, Billings; 4, Yvonne Lucero, Great Falls; 5, Charles Mason, Arlington, Va.; 6, Bonnie Yahvah, Libby; 7, Jan McCormick, Bozeman; 8, Dave Ramel, Libby; 9, Gary Jahrig, Calgary, Alta.; 10, Dan Carter, Belgrade; 11, Ray Murray, Levittown, Pa.; 12, John Bulger, Helena; 13, Jan Brenny, Richfield, Minn.; 14, Scott Gratton, Missoula; 15, Sam Richards, Missoula; 16, Karen Schiweck, Missoula; 17, Bill Lundgren, West Glacier; 18, Perry Backus, Missoula; 19, Jim Peterson, Missoula; 20, Dean Charlie Hood, Leslie Vining, Missoula, and Lance Lovell, Great Falls, were interning at the state legislature in Helena when this photo was taken. They are pictured on pages 6 and 11.

A. L. Stone

School of Journalism
University of Montana
Missoula, Montana 59812

Non-profit Organization
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 100
Missoula, Montana 59812