Course Description:

This course is an introduction to the genre of epic poetry. Students read poetry in translation spanning from the middle of the 8th century BCE to the 2nd century CE. Through the examination of these poems, students will explore the socio-historical contexts that produced them. The poems will be used as documents of social history shedding light on a variety of historical periods (the Greek Bronze, Archaic, and Hellenistic Ages, the end of the Republican period of Rome, and the beginning of its Imperial period). These poems provide insight into their various cultural milieux (e.g. the vestiges of oral composition found in the Homeric poems vs. the highly literate, scholarly, and allusive styles of Apollonius, Virgil and Lucan). As students look at these epics within the socio-historical contexts that produced them, they have the opportunity to consider epic poetry's impact within its own culture and its literary influence on literature in the Classical era as well as the western canon more generally.

Required Texts:

Apollonius of Rhodes. Jason and the Golden Fleece. Trans. R. Hunter. Oxford: Oxford UP, 2009. Print. (ISBN: 9780199538720)

Homer. The Iliad. Trans. R. Fagles. New York: Penguin, 1991. Print. (ISBN: 9780140445923)

Lucan. Civil War. Trans. S. Braund. Oxford: Oxford UP, 2008. Print. (ISBN: 9780199540686)

Virgil. The Aeneid. Trans. R. Fagles. New York: Penguin, 2010. Print. (ISBN: 9780143106296)

Outcomes

When you complete this course, the successful student will:

- Be familiar with the characters and plots of the epics of Homer, Apollonius, Virgil, and Lucan.
- Be able to discuss the influence of these classical epics on one another.
- Be able to appreciate the influence of these classical epics on later art and literature.
- Be able to discuss how these epics functioned within ancient society.

Writing Outcomes:

Throughout the semester, students will develop their writing skills and practice using writing as a vehicle for critical thinking. This course is an approved writing course, and therefore upon completion of the course students should be able to:

- Use writing to learn and synthesize new concepts
- Formulate and express opinions and ideas in writing
- Compose written documents that are appropriate for a given audience or purpose
- Revise written work based on constructive feedback
- Find, evaluate, and use information effectively
- Begin to use discipline-specific writing conventions
- Demonstrate appropriate English language usage %

Assessment

Your grade will be determined by the following breakdown:

Participation	15%
Examinations	30%
Perseus Project Assignment	15%
Research Paper	20%
Reaction Papers	20%

Course Requirements

Perseus Project Assignment:

The use of epithets is vital to understanding the oral formulae on which oidoi oral poets depend. The use of epithets continues to be a mark of epic genre even once the poetry ceases to be composed orally. Students will choose a particular character from the Iliad and explore the epithets and oral formulae associated with that figure. Students will use the Perseus Project web-site (www.perseus.tufts.edu) to search the Iliad for the occurrences of their particular character. A short (2-page) paper will be submitted discussing your observations. The First Draft of the paper will be workshopped in class on Monday, February 4. Final draft of assignment is due Monday, February 11.

Reaction Papers:

Writing is frequently a very effective tool in learning about a new subject. Reaction papers will serve as a tool to both facilitate discussion and begin to think about and learn about the various themes, topics, and meanings of epic poetry. Students will be required to write six 2-page (double-spaced) papers on assigned topics. These papers should include a clear thesis statement, argue a specific perspective responding to the assigned prompt and employ the text for evidence supporting the argument. Refer to the Reaction Paper handout for a full schedule of topics and due dates, basic information on proper source citation, and a rubric for grading. If discussion seems particularly sluggish, I may ask for several volunteers to read their responses to the reading as a starting point for our discussion. Reaction papers will be submitted via Moodle and will be due at 11:45 pm of the day listed on the syllabus. Lowest score will be dropped.

Research Paper:

Students will be required to write a 6-page, thesis-driven paper on one of several suggested topics (e.g. the changing nature of the Hero, Homeric 'ethics,' epic as history). Students are encouraged to discuss with me ideas about (or problems with) their papers and even submit preliminary drafts. Students are required to submit paper topics to me on Monday, March 4. An outline of the paper is due Friday, March 22. The outline should reflect a significant step towards writing the paper, including a clear thesis statement, the ideas supporting the argument AND evidence establishing those ideas. A full draft of the paper is due Monday, April 15. This draft will be workshopped in peer revision groups, and submitted to the instructor for feedback. All preliminary steps are mandatory. The preliminary paper topic, outline, and all drafts, peer review worksheets, proofreading checklists must be submitted along with the final draft. Papers that fail to complete the preliminary stages will not be accepted. The final paper is Friday, April 26.

Quizzes and Tests:

Periodic reading quizzes, brief in-class writing assignments, and/or responses to discussion questions prepared in advance of class discussion.

Two essay examinations.

Expectations:

In addition to these written assignments, students are expected not only to attend but also to participate actively in class discussion. Repeated absences or tardiness will affect your grade. I expect you to make every effort to attend class. If you are unable to do so, please contact me; you are responsible for making any necessary arrangements for what you missed in class. Late papers will be penalized by one grade per day, unless prior arrangements have been made.

There will be a Moodle Course Supplement for this class. I will use this to make periodic announcements, to post copies of handouts and assignments, and to make various electronic resources available. Please note that I will also use Moodle to send email. The Moodle system requires the use of your university student email account; if you prefer to use a different account, you must set the university account to forward. Even if you do not login to the Moodle Supplement, you are expected to check your email regularly.

Although classical poets were not concerned about plagiarism, you are expected to use contemporary standards for citing sources. Whenever you refer to any idea that is not considered common knowledge – whether in a direct quotation or paraphrase – you must cite your source according to the MLA style sheet. If you have any questions or concerns regarding plagiarism, please ask.

Tentative Schedule of Readings and Assignments: All effort will be made to follow this schedule. I reserve the right to revise the schedule as necessary.
