Russia and the West: From Peter the Great to Putin

The final years of the Cold War appeared to usher in an era of cooperation and joint ventures between Russia and the USA and major Western European powers. Many in the West seemed optimistic about Russia's ability to develop democratic and market-based institutions to facilitate Russia's eventual integration into the so-called family of Western European nation-states. Few share such optimism today. Russia's relations with the United States and the West broadly conceived are among the most tense and confrontational in recent history. Many prominent Western commentators on Russia even go so far as to characterize the current period as a New Cold War. This course will attempt to place present-day relations between Russia and the West in a broader historical, cultural and political perspective.

PAPER GUIDELINES:
All written work for this class should be typed or done on a computer. Use a standard 12 point font and double-space. Proofread each assignment for typos, poor wording, mechanics, etc. Late work will be penalized one letter grade per class day. Plagiarism will not be tolerated in any form. Please ask if you have a question about what constitutes plagiarism, but on the whole, if you consult another work for ideas, copy or paraphrase from another source, etc., then you need to acknowledge the source (including the work you consulted, the publication information, and the page number/s) in your paper with a footnote.

GROUP PRESENTATIONS:
Each of you needs to sign up for a group presentation on one of the topics listed on the syllabus. I will pass around a sign-up sheet, and you should sign up for a slot that will work with your individual schedule. Some are presentations on a book that you will have to read on your own outside of class. You do not have to read the entire book, but at least enough so that you can do a solid group presentation on what the book is about. Pretend that your classmates do not know anything about the book at all and it will make the task easier. Your presentations will occur in groups of three students (or in a few cases, two or four students). You will need to meet at least once outside of class to go over your presentation and to prepare for who will do what once you get into the classroom. I recommend you use PowerPoint or prepare slides and/or visual aids, but you are not required to do so. Each in-class presentation should last a minimum five minutes and a maximum of fifteen minutes, and each group member should take an active part (but it is fine if one member speaks more than the others—just be sure each person in a group says something and that each person in the group participates in the preparation for the presentation). Respect your classmates (and yourself!) and relate to these presentations seriously and maturely. If people take these presentations seriously, the class will be much more beneficial and enlightening for all of us!
