UM GOLF COURSE AUDIT FINDINGS INCONCLUSIVE

MISSOULA --

A University of Montana audit of the University Golf Course confirms that $140 is missing from the course's deposits, but the internal audit staff's findings are inconclusive regarding the person responsible for the missing funds.

Howard Johnson, suspended as golf course manager after the auditors discovered the missing funds, has been reinstated by UM with pay and benefits. However, he has been reassigned to the University Center Recreation Center as a recreational specialist.

Effective Nov. 1, 1988, UM has reassigned the financial and operational management responsibility for the golf course from the director of the UC to the director of auxiliary services.

Kay Cotton, who recently became auxiliary services director, will make recommendations to acting Vice President for Administration and Finance Sylvia Weisenburger regarding future management of the golf course.
