The Last Zamboni

Emma C. Neslund

University of Montana

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/etd

Part of the Poetry Commons

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation

https://scholarworks.umt.edu/etd/11508

This Thesis is brought to you for free and open access by the Graduate School at ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in Graduate Student Theses, Dissertations, & Professional Papers by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
Contents:

THAT’S FOR SURE THE BEST I’VE EVER DONE YOU
Ripple Blue.................................................................2 Metastable..............................................................4 Waitstation..............................................................7
no sludge in my ducts.................................................10 bolt..........................................................12
Zone Defense.........................................................13 Popquiz..............................................................16 sparknote riverfloat...............................................17

SAY IT ISN’T SO
The Last Zamboni.....................................................24
propofol..............................................................27 release the moon.....................................................29 INFJ Jesus Christ.....................................................31
Codas on hold.........................................................35
Cap Cloud Down.....................................................36

EXEMPT
layover..............................................................41
cold streak..........................................................43 arrow pushing........................................................44 Ticks.................................................................50 second that..........................................................51
nothing by mouth....................................................52
THAT’S FOR SURE THE BEST I’VE EVER DONE YOU
Ripple Blue

Is density good or bad? asks the doe-eyed girl of the woman screaming answers back whispering sideways to me Sometimes it’s best not to recognize yourself.

Tensed against the swell I wait for rocking to silence or body to tip under hugged in a child-sized ball.

Imagine the spent, drunk, and spit words in one basin then imagine a time ocean imagine me then imagine more.

This ocean has no kraken but no map is flat enough;
not deep or concealing just a color.

Hear electricity in the water.
See lightning behind the clouds switching the sky on and off in the distance.

The child and woman fear different: beast or bankrupt in between is fear static, the muffled clinking of a non-person bobbing against floor and saltwater crust.

Is this the bad season?
Feel the water.
Is this...?
Listen to the water.

There are no bad seasons at sea...
...or they last September to May or like gusts of wind...
...or bad seasons come in surges, in phases like people we meet, or once a life endured...
...or bad seasons are predictable but mysterious as the rains and five-year apricot rot because density is inescapable not good or bad as watching a child grow.
But force my answer I dis buoyancy though it keeps me alive.

Writhe like an ant in open water,
“I want out.”
Sing and meditate,
“I want out.”
Tantrum beat,
“I want out.”
Holler sick.

Be an otter and dive five minutes down kick toward what you believe is surface and when bursting at last you breach... ripple blue in all directions.
Surgeon’s Comments: Active inflammation in all regions, incipient lesions lower left abdominal quadrant, random biopsies confirm active disease.
Note: 23 yr old patient remained atypically conscious and interactive, refusing warm blankets, detailing knowledge of dental Root Canal protocol and other…

METASTABLE

Loath to walk blades upon the slip I left toddler skates on the Alaskan bank and crawled an hour peering through lake-rooted branches, junk twigs, suspended leaves, cracks, where only the entranced eye feels shadow of fish tail twelve inches down, air bubbles from the unknowable breathing.

“But I’m cold!”
“Ten minutes, direct sunlight.”
“Can’t I eat vita-gummies?” “No.”
“It’s six degrees out here!”
“Nine minutes.”

Enamel is the second strongest substance on earth after diamonds, undisturbed, but only a coat.
Once lesion reaches pulp—blood, nerve, living tissue—the tooth’s only salvation is death.
Snagging the nerve is painful, but worst is infection, abscess, plea for blood to flood a place it cannot go.

Mom explained epigenetics to me at eleven:
“The interplay of genome and environment.
The Journal of Autoimmune Disease advises, you are your cure; you can turn it on, so turn it off, try meditation, eat yogurt, visualize.
Inflammation is inner fire. Put it out.” I followed guilt back to her finding the stack of Tooth Fairy silver dollars in the highest cupboard, and behind, a jar of baby teeth submerged in water.

Same blood type,
my cells half her code, wrenching, scarring fierry since her dental residency when we left home.

Blame floats frozen nameless but I have been a girl alone with blood halved and I watch the elements drift too far below.

Mom grasps my chin swiveling softly to profile: “Your teeth are perfect.”

I’ve never had a cavity.

On a synthetic rink, Coach says, “Don’t fear ice.
Don’t skate on. Be with.
Fall, girl, fall!
When you commit, you fall, if ice is self,
into your own arms.”

Once the nerve is gone and acid bacteria scraped, inundate remaining tooth with clorox and fill with stabilizer the body will not reject.

The mouth channels killing frost to the core in one shot of soothing shivers subsumed.
In a white room refrigerated so bacteria dies and heart slows to life.
Not thumbs, tools, thought, or language but spinning, dancing, jumping on ice.

Trip myself into ice, jump higher to topple colder, spin through blur and wager tucked position, even numb, risk speed with decorative flick.
If only I could make myself the ice… swaddle my screaming baby and lay it in snow.

When the tooth has been violated this is what redemption looks like.
Waitstation

Songbird
in the restaurant behind curtains or the bar they coo me fondly hushing as I pass.

Mimosa-drinking young hangovers brunch and garden party dressed baby showers pack undaunted by lines when coffee refills are free.
Could I actually get drip in my latte cup
could I actually get
side of bacon crumpled cash din child babies waddle, scream, draw, and dribble indiscriminate ramekins swing syrup, syrup no butter, butter, honey, jam, compote, peanut butter pancakes garnished with fresh cream and blueberries—when they shrivel overnight Kitchen-Expo Jake sides a bowl for me in the waitstation and pops a fresh pack.

Back on Kodiak Island three cups of blueberries came freely rain-washed in the woods behind my house along the waterfall stream bushes high as me giving and quick to fill.

I deal honey out the goopy bucket into an espresso station bottle dripping stick scouring sides with vapor burning my hand into mini metal pitchers onto the table the tea woman receives telling her friend it contains everything needed to sustain life.

Lipsticked chardonnay split-plate lunch women descend command Tuna Salad down to truffle-dressed greens then build it back with chicken and havarti bread double-toasted, carcinogenic, you know gluten-free taste of faux upper-class spite afforded twice monthly in leeringly polite could I bother you divide five cards even boxing a quarter burger for Jimbo the pet dog sweating, soup samples garnished up grubbing under table nudging feet with wet rag to clean their spill.

Exploitation began with honey and pollen anti-aging seed-sized brains repurposed for dementia venom against HIV hive glue to human sores honeycomb structure labeled and snatched most efficient in the natural world.

Then remembered I left the bee hanging stinger above my lace anklet church sock knowing once brushed it would crawl on to die battle lost us both when it fell off with shoes and socks dropped foot to my snowmelt stream quiet, sad.

Dinner stealth to ease blushing postures candlelit removed from crumbs nibbling women made-up well in tailored dresses above dry red wine and risotto or polenta Pardon, what did you say? across from combed men in jackets handling sleek weighted cards and local butchered slabs of beef.

Bees hum in the key of C not to be extracted just heard.

Hazelnut hemp cappuccinos two sides of ketchup sampling of spiced aiolis yes the ice cube water is filtered tray of rosé flutes bussing an untouched honey pitcher I return to vapor and swish to the dump bucket shaking my scalded hand.
An ounce of honey fuels a bee once around the globe.
No sludge in my ducts

what a whole lot of wasted time goes into staying alive I’d rather hunt and gather a hollow needle in my vein flows out the tube unpulled I’m sitting slipping blood for nothing till power up

breathe in hold your breath
click click click guga guga jjjj JJJJJJ JJJJ click click relax

click click click jjjj jjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjjj jjjjj

Doing great in there, Emma don’t fall asleep on me.

first time I had one I left my bra on slid me in packed corpse tight till power off hold on do you have underwire woulda lit up burnt my band magnetic fry

JJJJJJJJJJJJJJJ jjj jjjjjj JJJJJ

breathe in
hold your breath
click click click
relax

the last tech said I breathe slow cycle an hour and a half patients backed up this time I hear the point of capture lungs empty trick the tech and my diaphragm band CLICK CLICK CLICK fasted and hungry for a muffin I rush the pattern, flipbook through says I breathe like an athlete does that mean I’ve got a golden ticker you can know a whole lot and have no idea I’m feeling superior cause I breathe slowly that’s where I am it’s 7:30am my blood pressure is 102/60

breathe in
hold your breath
jjjj JJeejuju jjjjj chka chka jjjjj
relax

Alright, kiddo, two sequences left.
Hang in there here comes the contrast. cold in my arm gripping the heart on my back if I throw up there’s nowhere to go three inches up it’ll hit the machine slop back down onto me who’s gonna disinfect all those cracks the whole operation good as busted then what do we do get a new machine one time I sneezed in here an orderly coulda cleaned with lysol but maybe some sweet woman in a gown and gripper socks got my germs her post scan V8 not enough to boost her immune

I’ve got a 20 page paper to write a quiz back with a dirty red C I can recite my 8 page study guide feeling like a C and…
last night I played out how the machine would sound today the tech calling me kiddo he does every time I must be the only MRI impersonator in all of Montana

breathe in
hold your breath
click jujjajujjja iiijjj click click relax
bolt

blood clots my underwear twisted outside rushing from myself streaking from nose red and dropping mouth open in the mirror to rope sliding stool marbled with iron leaking off dye dripping flush pink water flowers taste away from leaves go to seed shedding everywhere lodged to the sidewalk and wrinkled green for legs higher-jumping legs gift wish me transplanted in a potted world lifted and left loose to a windowsill, no upkeep, swarming nested, clouds spied and spent kissing downhill crickets and honeysuckle carry cool already hugging air jumpy I want more flare me up back to blood seasons

chase me down across soil root out white cells from the base newborn grass cleaved a blade clutching or leaving what was never prime Intimate in the hub head waitress Kate counsels “Emma Lou, with that work ethic you’ll be a SERVER like, snap.”

Josh flaunts comment cards guts his books of cash and receipts, “A proper server is subtle with tones not traces registered of what we see every sip the date-night argument adult children reverting petty across from parents.”

Stacks of triangle napkin folds insulate, the hour before closing in the waitstation bussing I shine and roll silverware.

Koral calls a clear on table fifteen, drops leftover steak to box, rests with iPhone complaining, fourteen percent!
“Goddamn Mother’s Day kids can’t tip, it’s my goddamn birthday it’s not their fault no one ever taught them I’m from Chicago” then stuffs bill to book quiet-yells “corner” me squinting unsure at the curtain.

Kitchen-Expo Jake never sounds bell after 8 texts me “BS” brussel sprouts up so between rolls
I run my favorite dish.

But tonight Expo raised Grill-Side no messages only dings that could be cheese planks I stay my station.

Clink, swoosh
I turn to hand retreating and almond joy ice cream one and a half remnant scoops not cleanly taken but well-formed still cold and sweet plated and garnished smugly better than bought, slivered, toasted almonds chocolate sauce know-how experimental citrus zest for me pressing lips against newly-polished soup spoon.

“Corner”, Koral.

“Just think of the floor as a field, or a court” he advises brotherly.

“I’d like to be a wing one day.”

“Guard,” Koral corrects, “guard or point guard, I’m from Chicago.”

Silverware tray and ice cream bowl I kick the swinging door smeared sauce and fingerprints, Dishpit Isak agrees, “Wing. Totally.”

I smirk—the lowly heist we don’t know fine wines but we have played basketball lifting glassware from front washer onto bartop watching the restaurant empty behind yellow polishing towel.

Kate idles beside,
“A busser passes unseen reading only glasses, plates, silverware.
The waitress must gaze into faces that rule her for a meal warm or tart.”

Closing
rosé to mouth her eyes shift nodding sideways at the door to a jacketed gentleman holding lilies and an invitation for me.
Self-conscious, yet to finish I fold the rag, reluctant, hoping Kate will immerse in pint glasses undone I go to him.

Button down black over my right shoulder Amy clears table nine and close behind the maître d’ podium Isak and Jake emerge, comb the drawer for Friday payday envelopes hushed, debating zone breaks.

I stare down the stems sniff indulgently treading words, “A good waitress knows to troubleshoot display the menu read aloud until they hear the right answer.”

“Emma, hey Emma” over the left Jake hands my unshelled check sum flopping naked between us three.
“Thanks”
I don’t remember his name “Just give this to the doorman.” extending the card before he’s gone a call from the kitchen “Family dinner’s up, y’all.”

Later I drop my empty plate in back eyes grabbing mine but not meeting Isak puts out his hands quietly “I’ll take care of that for you.”
Popquiz

Poised in the upper right row copying the multicolored drawings on the board hitherto lost I’ve got to research the word phosphatidylcholine which you keep saying like I should know it I look around and no one seems to know it except you of course this lecture you’ve said it twelve times which must be fun if you get what it does when I go home I’ll look it up in the index I’ll memorize glucosamine and galactosamine my favorite amino acid is Glycine the C sounds smooth and easy to fit unlike other acids it clocks in and gets the job done no one expects you to speak upper level science not like politics, sex jokes, pop music, celebrities it’s not nature and nurture it’s start at zero that’s science a chance to win something back I was crying with my coffee and study guide silly because biochemistry doesn’t matter to me allostery, amylose, terpene, isologous, inositol couldn’t hold them all in my head or meant to and ran out of time unfair all this on a quiz what’s more the exam doesn’t ask how I feel it says draw all 20 structures and I know them or I don’t that’s why I’m here what does phospholipase do which fatty acid is released what consequently happens in a human when hail catches up across the misted surface I’m alone in the water nose up this time twelve miles from it out of gas, broke,
I can’t call home

Betty where are you?
a bus-load pulls up from windows that won’t close children taunt me hey meatball head

there’s a woman too the sex doctor she says no degree just results the kids listen fixed she wears black and bright lipstick I say looks pretty, pretty for pink this is bold she jaws me lighted pillar candles on the bus it’s a game and I’m losing she seduces my hat with an extra toothbrush and towel never the sharpest I regret it now how she’ll mistreat that hat trick-or-treating she for sure takes home the candy what I would look like in her costume people on the side holy heck what is going on point my way in swift current pulled along can’t take me even in a tackle shop got to be a phoney look where she’s brought you I yell unplanned remember my hat still kids flood free consultations but most will pay for a chance to win something back eatchur brussels sprouts remember I bought them as a favor take notes Betty I wish you were here she says not giving people what they want that’s the fastest way people want you from sticky lips I don’t trust share a drink with her no way no thanks a sex doctor’s saliva or Betty’s but she’s taken my hat so it’s not a question of germs her push-up in my face virus hijacks the host cell hardly alive but replicating braless there is no natural beauty if you were counting on natural reconsider take out a wad of 100s cash and count though she flashes white teeth and says chemistry’s a force beyond control she calls me honey plum calm down already I’m writing a book about it 16.00 USD but for you 14.00 don’t mention it create a weakness and walk away slit the blubber let pressure do the work your hands are manicured or they should be is that … a callous oh god where are you sleeping? no but which hotel?

not any hotel I know watch me she says watch how I do this watch the tide turn to you men are like dogs and dogs like to steal men are like dogs and dogs like to chase as soon as attention’s got disappear if you’re not sellin’ it, sugar, you’re not hot as fuck kiss-a-death put the book down oh Betty I’m not fooling anyone wrinkled cold in the water so long not that they’re ugly my eyes are swollen though I was looking and everyone’s got bags under their eyes anyway he’s got the setup innertube lodged a man with a mustache spinning in the eddies iced tea two lemon wedges coffee Sweet N’ Low a known carcinogen the Sunday crossword Puzzle Master

here’s the hack it’s not about knowing anything assume degree it’s not about answers use status quo
S - ING - TH - SH - CH - ED play the pattern each blackened grid play the board remain in power over yourself it might turn into a different story BOB DOLE ELECTED

no that’s, c’mon you know that’s not how you spell it FIVE letters not six a country...oh, the Allies’ foe not THAT one she’s...got to know this, right?

ok but does Hillary fit it’s not that you’re wrong but your answer is wrong want a clue?
oh I’ve got it now CLINTON

once you get in, Betty I swear it’s so cold on a boogie board but colder above a tube is shelter if you’re swimming belly in under 95 soak to extract flavor don’t know how much further don’t know if I can walk back clear as 25 down it’s ending in OVER have it your way I only ever see OVER why are you stuck on it maybe two words could be any word but it’s got to end in ER in on the joke without me I’ll let it hit you maybe falling asleep won’t you tell me a joke, Betty? how do you confuse a blonde?

STEEP! paint yourself green and throw forks at her but it’s not such a zinger one thing I know intent doesn’t matter it’s still manslaughter oh, of course that’s the POINT no one wants to the Puzzle Master hints here’s the trick Jodie Foster inspired assasination of c’mon now it’s not like the hint is fair to me the story is lost and all that’s left is SPIRAL STAIRCASE

on the banks a muppet scientist in khakis a tight pink sweater what’s with those goggles a thermometer testing temp and pH poke the mud with a stick release bubbles from the decomposed weak forces hold everything together if living it’s weak if equilibrium it’s dead below biological 95 proteins denature it’s not manipulation just what happens strip my clothes wet to the washer double comb falling hair for leeches Betty not ticks it’s almost 10 o’clock it’s not even 8 o’clock here I wish I were there listen here I’ve memorized F and D fructose and their derivatives we can synthesize any polypeptide take out your wallet lick your finger, cash and count, baby sometimes a cause is never found but once the kissing goes pancreatic problems it doesn’t matter how many syllables it doesn’t matter what clothes you’re wearing how slow and low your voice is magnesium water, turmeric, and thread count are gimmicks weak forces hold us together, Betty, and that’s good none of us have any idea really but we keep breathing and reading our cells keep moving because they know structure encodes function and there it is my face held in two hands what a relief they’re not my own if you do not know amino acids by heart what can you hope you know nothing about humans if you understand every element if you know the simplest units you can grow when first transcribed it’s just a string but structure encodes function to fold into form do you really think it’s all random one average protein flitting through choices 4 billion years that’s right, 4 billion years that’s how many I don’t think so! your skin doesn’t think so you must be more elegant there’s nothing to get, is there, Betty? ta ta and a jug jug jug what’s to get?

it’s all there in the cytoplasm floating memorize lipids, R groups, substitutions, saturations you’ll know the properties you’ll have the tools really it’s a shame at a cocktail party when you look around twice check your company before saying endoplasmic reticulum this is for everyone lipids and proteins make the cell membrane impermeable it holds on to what it needs it shuttles through secret pathways it’s flexible it reads signals and adapts it takes material but if a toxin would pillage what’s been built the membrane will not give exit under the bridge a huddled crowd clapping and laughing they don’t know me and they won’t try lift my hat because I’ve earned it knock knock on some door don’t expect an answer if it’s not locked there’s a towel inside it’s not an accident there is no holdup it’s time to dry off

SAY IT ISN’T SO
The Last Zamboni

Sunk to slutty pedestrian I mouth my excuse lacing up skates I glide innocent, vowing I didn’t know ice only layers without interruption.

Cut and run or takeover I don’t know.

But if that’s how you’re going to be this is how it’s going to be I’m not taking the bullet.

Listen, it’s like this:
I’m mad as hell and I can’t do this anymore.

No I’m

I’M MAD AS HELL AND I’M NOT GONNA TAKE IT ANYMORE.

ON THE FLOOR MOTHERFUCKERS.

I said hands UP on the FLOOR.

Gimme the Benjamins—ONLY the Benjamins—and no one gets hurt.

Hey YOU! Yeaaaah You. With the bug eyes and that dorky hat. Geeezuus You think you’re cute. STOP crunchin’ the hell out of that apple--You think it’s snack time? That preschool-look expired on you thirty years ago.

You! With the Shirley Temple hair Get me your best scotch one from the gold vaults. Make it a double, neat.

And You. Ya little frumpy lookin’ punk with the raised hand. Always sit in the front row, doncha? You want those fingers taken off, do ya?

You don’t get to ask questions and no you may not go potty for God’s sake. Who you think is calling the shots here?
You’re face down on this god-forsaken carpet hasn’t been vacuumed in probably six months cause You skip out on your closing duties, doncha? and you seriously think YOU’RE calling the shots? Yeah, right.

I’m taking the 50’s, too, give me the 50’s...and 20’s...and those Yeah. Your leather boots That’s right I saw you hiding them under your sad yoga ass.

No. I don’t think you understand. This is a robbery. I’m robbing your bank And you’re asking me—not even too politely—for a blow job?

UN-believable.

IN-credible.

Hold on a second. Freeze. Do you think I give a flying little fuck about your frostbitten toes? Hand over the boots, bozo.

You think I’ll wait here tappin’ my happy feet while you sort through that wreck-of-a-purse I mean GOD WOMAN PULL YOURSELF TOGETHER Are you handing me bargaining material?

You push back your cuticles Straighten your nauseating homeschooler tie Think you’ll just unlace those boots with the nonchalance of a goddamn hero? You think I’m gonna sit here and watch?

BEEP BEEEERP WRONG WRONG I DON’T WAIT.

Not for pedestrian signals not for mumbling wannabe show-offs.

I don’t wait.

Good. That’s more like it.

Against the wall, dickheads, and stay there.

Here’s the deal. I walk wearing your boots. No one follows. If you follow BOOM I blow your sniveling ass up.
Yeah?! SO?  So I gave the order to whack your—here.  That’s enough from you.

Yeah yeah, you got me I lost the rulebook and can’t play the game so, sure I’d rather be caught greedy with a sack of gold than startled tame with someone else’s finger up my nose.

The closed rink past midnight fat-wheeled rolling boxcar thug mops a wake of ice freshly wet.

Edges dig to the shadowed slip phony hockey lines and blemishes drop off mirror to a lake wrapped wide with turns of snow-patterned rules my own.

Like a professional
I don’t worry over shoulder constant arrival of shared rink time I outrun the sirens whip the surface sculpt no faces urge me from a fall no faces
I roll, curl, give heat off then up crossover backward the feel I’ve always wanted.

But a coated man signals me behind the latched door slab, The rink’s closed, ok?
ice only layers without interruption, ok?

Cut and run when degree rises there’s no blushing explanation they just handcuff you, That’s enough, alright?
The stunt’s up, ENOUGH!
Enough of you. Enough from you.
Enough.
propofol

everyone wants my birth date, last name spell it, do you smoke?

and this is the scary part life organic made of three molecules that’s pretty much it and a double bond turns vanilla toxic and two hydrogens flammable agents corrosive I am smart but these moves are not fair sometimes I just act rightly dosed on an empty still eyes closed the short half life I want to play

let me play

it’s hard to know how could I grapefruit juice will ruin you complete push pocket changes chemical properties new boil points always gamble

Emma, baby, sweets, you’re fine, sweetums, sleep, I have you, I am holding you, sleep but I like being here to hear the things I shouldn’t these strangers kind in sync pamper me sick chatter protocol and my drip I’m a brat but they think I am great, pressure 110/68 my veins stretching blue beyond the table she’s burning this unit deluxe metabolism oh sweets, her hands so cold who could stay warm today

release the moon

to wake neath a favorite face worried, ice chips spooned attentive to dry mouth warming now, coaxed from 63/33 a slip near death grounded

but no, just the moon whispers back, stay release me soothing return to zero and a future frozen calm where shimmer mist healing dew dusts once earthly hair blue wave, point, reach through darkness curling into myself on the far side of the nightlight to eyeshadow skies and space silence lullabies collided, crashed, and sent reeling from earth’s gravity alone and fractured whimpering as wounded asteroid knocked feeble and shell-shocked timid exposed…

trembling lip cradled in moon’s serenade

yes, dearest tides on earth will cease 24 hours turn weeks the last eclipse lighten day and this guiding orb shrink a cherished point we’re orbiting away three or four centimeters in what they call year delaying reception of letters unwritten and dehydrated strawberries tenderly unsent before the sun explodes relief or the book snaps merciful shut to a pin this gradual drift off cross armed shoulder turn a sheltered, rounded, reassured departure the monitor tracks a heart beating for no one.

INFJ Jesus Christ

AARON DUBIE,
Move forward. [and the man accepted his sister’s suicide and bought shoelaces so he could walk to work]

LEAH,
Climb this mountain. [and she uncovered a peace she had not before known]

JORDAN,
Try. [and the despairing man saw a heartening light shining onward]

JACQUELINE,
Open. [and the hostile widow welcomed warmth and homeless children into her empty house]

Body of Christ.

INFJs tend to internalize conflict and experience health problems under stress. (personalitypage.com)

Mom dreamt I was the immaculate conceiver, I birthed myself, Christ the Savior flipped inside-out, a living body born crucified.

Only lepers mention Jesus’ second life the potential of a hijacked corpse.

Fourteen inches of split ends cut, too severe, fibers degraded past donation to cancerous girls.

When Jesus saw this rejected, isolated, abused, and very sick man, he was immediately moved from somewhere deep inside to care about him. (FaithGateway.com)

They put a heart on my driver’s license without proof of organ health.
Grinning intoxication buried guilt.
Splitting me open, they would find nothing salvageable.

INFJs see helping others as their purpose in life. Their real passion is to get to the heart of the issue so people need not be rescued at all. (16personalities.com)
PHILIPPE,
Appreciate. [and the anxious man forgot his spoiled tomatoes]

NANCY KING,
Feed the birds. [and the grey-haired woman believed they would return]

CATHERINE,
Start from the beginning. [and the stifled woman escaped with her daughter and cooked with spices again]

Blood of Christ.

Immune deficient type O I commune on Baby Blood.

Universal.
Clean, rare, from the purest, to the weakest.
Baby savior.

There is no greater satisfaction than knowing I am able to help an infant survive. It is more rewarding than anything I have ever done in my life. (RedCrossBlood.com)

Red Cross phoned Jesus twice a month.

Congratulatory warmth of cookie and apple juice box: spread the good news of noble hematomas and gallons of blood sucked circulating to save the destitute masses.

Some stories want for telling.

JB,
Live. [and the man sobered and picked up a life left alone thirty years]

Jesus not only interacted with these rejected ones. He reached out and touched them. (FaithGateway.com)

REFUGEE CHILDREN,
Speak. [and they told their stories and listened in many learned tongues]

SOLEIL,
Feel loved. [and the little girl reached] That closeness was... a strong God... giving dignity back to the despised. (FaithGateway.com)

Jesus turned smiling from the cleansed leper, juice box in hand.

ALBANIAN FAMILY OF FIVE, Look. [and they wondered at French identity papers and 7,000€ in their purses]

ROWAN,
Do good. [and at last the young man found purpose]

Downcast eyes call me back to the taker’s yearning.

Some stories hurt for telling.

[he was stuttering at 3AM in a homeless shelter lobby]

[she stood behind the glass door, locked]

[his eyes and voice remained hopeless]

[a letter each week detailing fears and suspicions]

[it has fallen apart]

[food so bland, the daughter winced when he entered]

[her husband died in a home two hours away]

[he stopped eating]

[their families left for Germany to be rejected again]

[cynical and bitter]

[it was a dream: they were denied and deported]

[he never answered]

Lambs, watch me die.
I have not delivered.
I am not coming back. For lepers there is no pardoning cloud of ascension.

I thirst forsaken, jealous of Jesus, his moistened vinegar lips suffering from a righteous, clear mind.

Flood me with drugged wine.
The scalpel never cuts but the gospel’s score does bleed.
Codas on hold

90 minutes so no, it’s not going emergency I lie to automaton press 9, 9 again for rep: 9 Barricaded Betty snaps alkaline phosphatase but not how enzymes rank or ghosted x-rays break.
CPT code won’t shortcut my “thank you” recorded for quality purposes.
Mouthing receiver
Look, Betty, it’s not like I wanted you to call me cunt but now you’ve done it.
Bitten Betty starts—Yeah now you’ve done it nodding true the knife will surely carve me to gulp wrinkles but half-cup pudding dinners compression socks toe open I get it that’s too far I didn’t sign up never signed anything blessed Betty wants to like me I’m beginning to think her freezer’s full of sliced bread we all have our problems we’re both sorry and neither writes a script.
Cap Cloud Down

No runs in my stockings, no airplane, I turn to a cornfield, alone, slo-mo mute in time.

We’ve fed masses finely dining confettied sky around pulled miracles together somersaulting crash landed the only casualties, us.

***

Drowsy in my seat an engine explodes they throw me to matro, call me to cockpit
I laser the floor.

Busted hydraulics, overbooked spreadsheet two hour increments two two-top bartops free too late for alarm will carry-ons fit?
there is no steering.

I pull panic from Servers aflame one Busser sloshing to and from forty tables, forty rows nibbling pretzel mix arm grabbed as I speed walk by, We’re ready for the bill, balancing plates square, round, deep, tipping broth from pocket the phone rings a final message.

If engines can blow, is that a crack in the window, a hole? stagnant food in the kitchen window 32’s plated, sell it, tickets printed, hanging, holding, crossed, stabbed, we’re popping off.

Expo slaps salad cooler doors with knees flying, I have one fucking runner need oxygen Sauté-Side drops fresh pasta They’re all firing at the same fucking time.
Breathe, pressing intercom, Good evening, professional, calm, subdue feet at disaster’s stench and nod, There used to be a place in town, what was it called? fried brussel sprouts with balsamic and…
pardon, those onions are burning, antsy, backing, swivel into dash Please remain seated, belts fastened we’re trying, touch table corner, cooling, Your server will be a few minutes.

Owner in the dishpit catching smashing towers on a treadmill too fast I drop and turn Grill-Side blocking with burnt pan, Hot, it’s hot.
I stand my ground Clear the aisle.

Broken glass, Servers gasp, No more Owner welcomes, We’ll find space radio blabbing possibilities, You’re not gonna make it,
Our 50th anniversary,
Clear highway for emergency landing, We’re easy, please,
We came all the way from—

Podium gripped with thrusters back and forth seesaw on the fly mark an eighteen-top downdraft must turn in twelve minutes rearrange, wipe, prep quivering waters on tray fourteen-top res arrives in twelve, Don’t seat anyone at seventeen it’s,
Why are people at seventeen? their crisps, tortes, brûlées and espressos walking in the doorway, faces waiting.

If I had never boarded.

Unchecked the plane descends cruising speed, no way to abandon cabin, hide, hum last words in the lavatory, Love you, Ma, Pete, I’m sorry, I was trying to help, That’s all guys, fuck, That’s it, I’m dead Goodnight, Goodbye.

Every simulation fails it comes to luck and flat land.
Fourteen becomes seven we cap table three all reservations in only sixteen open menus, Sous-Chef Jason bobs head We’ll make it to the runway.

Asking eyes from the kitchen Grill-Side Jon hands me a Ribeye Finishing table four position two Hey, Emma,
I turn,
You did well.

4th-On Backup Reed house comp an ice cream spec, I’m starving I need something, scoops half to a coffee saucer points and winks, It’s too much for me.
New Busser Amy,
What do I do now?

Crew chow at midnight, empty house, Pastry Jade in the Kitchen brings plates, seatbelts click Tyler impersonating Rocky eating lentil salad, Julie squinting mental algebra tip-out, a twenty-two pound meatloaf wrapped in bacon, debris lining the bar we slump.

Senior Server Caitlin pours beers into glass hotly clean, What the fuck was that oh my god Where’s the nearest exit, Did you caramelize this bacon?
He said he was allergic to garlic, garlic!
Look at the checkouts I swear to god All within one passenger.

Rumors run the pipes, people in movement the Owner says our family thrives on decay and rebirth their precious names appear some day as accidents when trainees fumble server codes or pull old cards clocking in.
The flight number holds but at landing we disperse.

***
I turn to cold, empty air an open cornfield, no airplane, no restaurant, alone and walking hooded but my hands are scrubbed, extended, trembling for the solace of white ceramic, not mine.
EXEMPT
layover

Careless and ignorant hair trimmings and ash freshly cling

It’s too late from my forest fire town once POP reaches ear it’s down wrecking foliage
I won’t forgive

On my back on my bed two doubles served sun-brown, blood in feet not head legs lifted draining words swelling dropped asleep

Preserved in someone else’s picture I see only facial hair scratching our grocery store memory —new beside me in the conserves your voice fluttered, let’s start from the end—

One suitcase, a bike in a box simplified brooding buoyancy not take-off did you know this was the end?

Two years later I learn health care and power bills a beard is scraggly, patchy a closeted gay man’s woman

And you in front of me still bearded, flowered sleeves, pant legs rolled, hair gelled, or fluffed dimly curious, not surprised I am not surprised

You say gorgeous, subversive I type sub caesar os dressing you drink rosé from flutes in hot tubs I present wine with creased cloth napkin wait for lip smack, “unexpected” I’m deleting numbers and corrupting smile-triggers the weighted silverware we foresaw

Start from the end I only want to know airports free wifi distant thunder

I google the names of your bald queens grant them gorgeous but won’t call to say

layover

so early there are no insects just birds flying off in silent plumes cold streak

“With you I know what to expect.”

I sleep in a slaughtered wolf’s fur

“Do you even have a bad bone...?”

broken pottery, glass, sharp bits grown in a stone fence immune to blushing repelling anything that moves

I taught myself in the mirror fashioned natural infectious clues trained yawning response so when I leave the door ajar… you gravitate

“Tennis, rye bread, is there anything you can’t do?”

serial killers block off buffer zones hive to hunting ground swept clean and buzzing safeguard or staging ground

“I’d rather you react, get mad.”

splash a box elder around the sink legs grasp, writhe funny wriggle as if “I really like you.”

bleat my featherlight composure when you slice yourself on my downy cheek get lighter, fly off - up, up, oh Empathy.

“I dig myself into a hole and you go out to lunch.”

I imagine you sprawled sniffle sniffle you will see my tight ass not these dead shark eyes yawning forward
arrow pushing

hey, hello fancy meeting you bored under the bridge twice can’t be always caught in bad weather but we’re 100 percent highly unstable still present never been so reactive sometimes I select dipole sprung to regroup in reaction but they keep coming back here looking really at me dirty they hold caliber from you though stable our triple bond that’s why that’s how I become their belly girl

ey they flag me vacant reactant no properties to speak in this polarizing solvent too big this world they think for me being acted on in pity not disgusted but they could be car owners who know something windows tinted I only hear air pushed aside as they pass counterfeit but travelling fast it’s pretty much all counterfeit at this point passing en route in vitro they don’t care about highways or metabolic process what really happened here

I am not hip class crafty snared in what don’t know most doesn’t matter me but oh boy LOOK OUT ask for a bathroom and they say no belly girl ask for a restroom and I could blend might they just worship me stripping for the wrong cause or person they seem to think me blameless in situ not without fault I could be one of them at the eyewash station ask are you choking? ask twice is this a good time? if choking make a fist pinch the nose 15 minutes naked in the shower before class that’ll do the rinse listen here I’m not lost I am belly girl as it were the real deal unmatched conformations not lost at all

I anted up up front I paid the cover expecting flowers with a message gamble on a set in the dark I’m not sending you back not now they slur mercury toxic but I want to know how efficient in solution it could be you are when I hear you out hand over the smell of my hair the sound of your voice from a story I wanted to see for myself and I trust my mass to hold rearrange reducing agent they circle back always you lose you’re out lady (quit calling me lady!) there’re rules and exceptions and so there are tricks and you’ve struck clear on out this time you lose you’re out none of this listen here none of this you got it wrong that’s beside the point I could say that’s not how it went that’s not how it goes I am not their belly girl or yours I’m just her my belly girl

no one’s gonna stop me no one’s gonna know better my own hands take matters glad to be here thank you belly girl in rare form every night but when they come rearrange

some crook put this together just tell me was it you? before making boycott the business have a talk before parachuting troops maybe it never mattered but moreso it’s no one’s business and moreover maybe the joke’s on them until the joke’s on me in my gut it doesn’t that doesn’t feel so good pushing toward the product acting on me when I’m not even sure what happens when you break it?

pay for chicken get pork not nothing just whut zah fuck what happened here?

ante up approximation hold -78 C for CRASH OUT I ask how cold what does that feel like I could and I do but where’d it get me?

capturing resonant structure cloud distribution from a diagram withdrawing is a form of sharing you say no visual but hold to it when you dissolve turnings slap a letter on mine what kind of errands how do you spend your money did yours include mine on a limb I’m not even sure I trust your errands all your feral informal non-bonding contact to substrates not me please don’t go on anymore trusted the impulse I’m not sure I trust you balance the charges I don’t always want to two positively rich atoms unstable pushing toward something somewhere when you call me almost bun another biproduct handing out pH paper off my chart not tailored to an active site so maybe it’s something like god when we push past the product drop by drop careful as if titration and it’s topical smelling dental numb gooped amalgamation you’re gonna go without me? that doesn’t seem correct that can’t be right I can’t tell if we’ve made anything at all there is no distillate to see the stakes just rose if instinct was wrong you are what they say am I what they say what do they say how belly girl fooled again? read the manual for once what’s left next step do I restore can I cut losses is there any starting material left all I want is my fair share all I want is what I deserve all I want is what I have coming it’s not like I didn’t give it my all when the dipole breaks where falling will I be?

workup the final wash my feet blackened ice cold protecting group isolate what it comes down to is crude powder vacuumed dry

I don’t like it and I won’t have it and I’m not gonna do it don’t like this won’t have them cheapskate you still blow a bill on blue ribbon leather that’ll last me longer than you maybe if you use me everyone does liable symbiosis we both want one equivalent

if we had each other on filter paper found yes that’s it that’s the precipitate I’ve been stirring for all along if we carry through charged particles infrared fractured out the right off-beat if pure we test desired product if we make what we hoped for if we have each other aside car wreck aneurysm no dairy diet cancels fitness bonus they will come around still more or less die 31 early I won’t dial you lonely no letters I won’t altogether gone burnt dropped from a bridge lost test product true this was just an exercise dump it rinsed down gone so gone past gone that’s the problem I’d...think we could all tee off on lemon curd cake to toothless jaw and unfair if that were it would be

city ordinance
Ticks

When I stayed with Grandmother as a little girl she was firm about the way we spent time, scheduling hours for schoolwork and never indulging outings or TV or games. I waited for her face to thaw, “Surprise! mini golf and ice cream. Would you like mint, cookie dough, vanilla, or chocolate?”

It never happened. We toiled through spelling exercises and math problems. When we finished we sewed blankets for the homeless and baked bread for poor families. I searched her movements, the way she looked over my shoulder when sewing pillowcases, how she leaned toward me when she prayed. I was uncertain every day until—once, her face softened as I finished math drills. Eyes twinkling, flouting self-imposed rules, she beamed, “We’ve worked hard. How about a nice walk in the woods?” I would have preferred handwriting. I nodded.

We strapped on boots and pulled over sweaters we had knit earlier that year. Grandma ignored my pout. She would not appear wounded. We set out, silent unless she saw a bird or plant she thought I should know. It was dark when we returned.

Inside we took off boots and sweaters, heating water for tea. Our faces pulsed red, our cheeks stung from the stove, our noses ran. As we diced vegetables and boiled water, Grandma stared at me suddenly, seriously, and I put down my knife from the vegetables and wondered if we understood each other at all. She reached out and plucked a tiny black spot from my arm. She took it to the sink, picking up a knife, and cut it three times across and three times over, like brownies, then washed it down the drain. She turned off the stove and led me to the living room where she sat me between her legs in front of the rocking chair. Her weathered hands sifted my hair. Each time she found one we stood, walked to the sink, and raised the knife to cut.

I wanted to roll in leaves, to shimmy through the bushes and the trees. Anything to feel those loving fingers loving me. I would buy buckets of ticks with my allowance, buy buckets and watch her cut every one to bits.
second that

that’s the problem with saying anything then you lose your turn competing with Sweden Paris pretty much kicked my ass and what’s kicking mine we will try to be everything to each other sometimes so when sweet talk dries up puss is kiss in Swedish below the belt pouting rotten someone’s got to clean or catch in the children’s section I’d choose this one last

I’m not wrong but when you hand out another’s scratch paper and it is moreover wrong climb the upper west side send help please tucked in a trunk outside the suburbs of some place where r u I might say I can barely hear you so I won’t neither nor how come just don’t call me anything nothing by mouth

to rewire breath through my nose pack cords of gauze down throat-full catching splinters and shards on override shutdown

I wanted to turn wrong then be righted

latex fingers mold my records paste my measures ferry numbers cold from fleshy palms to sudden silicon exchange behind contact lost context stolen

till you press print trust 3D awaken digits out of body grasp the scalpel and it’s not virtual and you tape my eyes protective shut mallet to chisel hollow-split

will you guard the crack when my bone breaks slide lower jaw forward counterclockwise rotate all dimensions twisted figures concealed by numbers embodied tangible to acrylic reference point, the intermediary splint, foreseeing anchor in-between position drill and fixate with truest titanium plates sever and unhinge the upper and trip alarm when the jaws misalign anew two faces above and below, masked and bolted contort resect retract reflect no threat till the cut is incorrect reflect

retract
resect

the cut is incorrect floating jaws lost in space gaping before the faulty notion

when my face distorts will you draw back from the table clumsy, hacking, or pull closer, loupes refocused, set me righter, blind without those calculations, daring on feeling the human way could you even know me to reconstruct my features hold my yaw in your hands eyeing lips sizing forehead tilting every nearest millimeter to micro-adjust my elements for fourteen hours while each slice swells consequence could you even remember to see me forward past detached jaw flesh sculpting repair by manual mercy of handpiece, saw, screws and will you paintbrush my cheekbone as sutures release, the only reference point, me tomorrow or the next point and say, look at her smile