An introduction to the Western Humanities through an investigation of selected texts from the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament, classical Greek civilization, the New Testament and early Christian literature. Topics to be considered include: conceptions of self, family, community, cosmos and the gods; ideas of virtue, wisdom, piety, justice, law, and the state; the nature of the good life, good and evil, and the meaning of suffering; the role of myth, symbol and ritual; conceptions of creation, time, and temporality; varieties of visionary experience and the poetics of change, conversion and metamorphosis; the language of love and desire; imagery of journey and pilgrimage; genres of classical and biblical literatures; idealism, realism, humanism and naturalism.

"A classic is a book that has never finished saying what it has to say. A classic is something that tends to relegate the concerns of the moment to the status of background noise, but at the same time this background noise is something we cannot do without. (Conversely) A classic is something that persists as a background noise even when the most incompatible momentary concerns are in control of the situation."

Course Requirements

1. Class meetings will be supplemented by weekly plenary lectures (attendance required). Written responses (1-2 pages) to selected lectures due Friday following lecture. (No late responses)
2. Essay (4-6 pages) responding to biblical materials due Sept. 19 on "What does it mean to be human in ancient Israel? How are understandings of the self (virtue, wisdom, piety) related to understandings of the family, the community, and the gods (justice, covenant, law)? A revised and enlarged version of your essay (6-8 pages) incorporating materials from classical Greek civilization will be due Oct. 31. The final version of the essay including material from the New Testament and St. Augustine will be due Dec. 8 (8-10 pages). The final essay will thus compare and contrast the various answers to these questions from Genesis to the Confessions. No extensions on written assignments.
3. Prompt completion of assigned reading. Quizzes on readings as needed. Evidence of plagiarism results in failure of course.
4. Grades will be based on papers and exams; however, attendance and participation will be considered in the final grade.
5. Midterm Exam (Friday, October 10) and Final Exam (Thursday, December 11).

"Classics are certain texts, events, images, rituals, symbols and persons (in which we acknowledge) a disclosure of a reality we cannot but name truth...some disclosure of reality in a moment of 'recognition' which surprises, provokes, challenges, shocks, and eventually transforms us; an experience that upsets conventional opinions and expands the sense of the possible; indeed a realized experience of that which is essential, that which endures - the presence of classics in every culture is undeniable. Their memory haunts us. Their actual effects in our lives endure and await ever new appropriations, constantly new interpretations."
