MISSOULA---Charley Moore, a three-year football letterman and spring graduate of Montana State University, will return to MSU this fall as an assistant freshman coach, head coach Ray Jenkins has announced.

Moore, who also will work for an advanced degree at the University, will assist in developing freshman linemen and will be a dormitory supervisor for freshman athletes.

The Deer Lodge native played two years at center and one as a tackle for the Grizzlies. He also won three letters on the Montana baseball squad as a pitcher.

MISSOULA---The Montana Century Club's renewal campaign reached the 100 mark this week, and president Kermit Schwanke said in Missoula that memberships "will have to come in at a faster rate if we expect to reach our goal of 500 by the first of September."

"I'm sure we will have no trouble retaining our core of 300 members, but hope we can sign up an additional 200 before the football season opens," the president commented.

He stressed the necessity of sending checks as soon as possible to the MSU Endowment Foundation. "If Century Club season tickets are to be distributed in time for the first football game of the season Sept. 12, it is imperative that checks reach the University by Sept. 1," he said.

C-Club members receive preferred seating at all Grizzly athletic contests, as well as special parking privileges and other benefits. In addition, $80 of each membership can be claimed as a tax-free charitable contribution to the University.
