President's Report

Central Board Appointments:

Ron Stief
Pat Duffy
Darla Garbe
Phil Whitehair
Ron Fifield

JACOBSON announced his appointments for Central Board, however, no vote was taken due to a boycott by the Students For Justice.

Each candidate gave a summation of why they should be appointed to Central Board.

DUFFY: Felt that students should be chosen on merits, not just because they had "SFJ" behind their name.

FIFIELD: Felt he could do a good job because he had an open mind, felt he could work hard, and he didn't criticize people he didn't know. Felt SFJ as a group was fine, but he couldn't agree with all of their ideals. He disagreed with their boycott. Felt some groups were overfunded during budgeting, and some groups were underfunded.

STIEF: Felt that there was a crisis in student government, felt he could be of help to Central Board.

WHITEHAIR: Felt because he was an incoming Freshman, he was open minded and could work effectively with anyone. Has had a lot of experience with this type of thing and felt he could do a good job. Felt he wanted to get students more involved, stating that he thought students didn't really care or were ignorant about Central Board. Felt as an elected body, it was Central Board's responsibility to buy space in the Kaimin to advertise about Central Board.

GARBE: Felt she could do a good job, and that she resented being categorized (in regards to an article in the Kaimin).

In response to a question asked by the audience, Jacobson replied that the purpose of the candidates giving a speech was strictly for the benefit of the members of the board that did show up, and that it was just an informal meeting.

All candidates answered questions from the audience and from Central Board members who were present.

GRAY suggested that some people might fear outside input, and in a liberal arts college they shouldn't be so provincial.

NEWMAN suggested meeting with all of the members of the Board and airing out all problems.

JACOBSON addressed the audience and the members of Central Board by saying, first, that no one should take politics personally, and that politics should be left at the meeting. Also, he felt that the Students for Justice had become very politicized within their own group and has alienated a lot of people. Felt that in order to get people interested in Central Board you had to bring in new people, not just people from your own political party. If you're going to belong to Central Board, the top priority should be to Central Board. Felt that those people who wish to be on Central Board should be active on Central Board. Felt that the people he nominated would do a good job for Central Board.
