

Fall 1981

And Now the Milkcow

William Kloefkorn

Follow this and additional works at: <http://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank>

 Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Kloefkorn, William (1981) "And Now the Milkcow," CutBank: Vol. 1: Iss. 17, Article 5.
Available at: <http://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss17/5>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mail.lib.umt.edu.

AND NOW THE MILKCOW

And now the milkcow
at the end of her tether has gone crazy, heelflies in swarm after swarm over and under and into every soft spot on her body, her eyes the eyes of an idiot, now flat, now crossed, now rolling, her tail switched down to a stub, each nostril a flaring of thick mucus flecked with foam.

An omen, Anna calls it, the end of her wet dishtowel like a bullwhip popping.

Yet in spite of the towel, in spite of the soapweed pot I set to smoking, the flies keep coming on,
until untying the rope from the tether pin I lead the mad-eyed Guernsey to the deepest hole in the pond.
Blood from a hundred pinholes clouds the water, and the cow threshes blindly, bawling, lunging, at last falling on her side, her udder on its way to sinking leaking a pink to purple milk, her large head following under,
as if content to drown.

Anna there to see it all.
This is an omen, Jacob, she says, and like a marked man looking to be clean I throw the end of the rope to the center of the spot where the beast went down.