UM ANNOUNCES MASTER OF SOCIAL WORK DEGREE

MISSOULA--

The University of Montana is accepting applications for its Master of Social Work degree program, which will debut fall semester 2002.

The new program is offered by UM's Department of Social Work in response to Montana's increasing need for highly trained social work professionals. The two-year graduate program will prepare students for counseling, advocacy and leadership positions in social work, one of the country's fastest-growing professions.

Students will pay about $8,000 a year for UM's MSW program, making it an affordable alternative to private and out-of-state programs, the only options previously available to Montana residents. UM's program offers an intensive, two-day-a-week schedule geared toward working professionals.

Detailed information is available on the MSW program Web site at www.cas.umt.edu/sw/msw.htm. Questions also may be directed to the Department of Social Work at mwgrad@selway.umt.edu or (406) 243-4228.
