Summer 1992

The Wonder of Silver

Patrick Todd

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss38/5

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
At midnight lights from a stalled car flash under the viaduct
A heavy rusted chain by the tracks . . . a box of flares, hammer, wrench and spud bar in the basement of an old house

Once a friend worked night-shift as a janitor in a hospital
When she opened the garbage chute, a bushel of paper dropped with plastic cups, a blue apron spattered with blood, bed pads, clumps of hair, a brand new roll of gauze, and like a spark out of nowhere, a girl’s silver bracelet One Way, the street sign reads Stiff night stick, black boots . . . the shotgun in a squad car can shred a telephone pole, or lift a man off the street as if he were weightless What woman feels safe when a cop pulls her over . . . asks her to step out of her car . . . demands that she open her trunk?