Gold-Vermillion Fruits

Adelle Graham
Adelle Graham

Gold-Vermillion Fruits

A season. Dogs and pigs trained to differentiate between chanterelles, princes and God's death cap. But, it is the truffle the men from Corsica want for their mistresses. I know women with throaty, swelling laughs. Lying, overlapping like organs gutted from a deer, the truffle steams. They are so close, beside the blue spruce where the horse grazes. Look on the side of the tree moss grows on. Alee.

Subterranean. As a child I found a padded bra near the stone circle where Indians danced. I visited it every day. Garlic, virgin oil, Mouton Cadet, a cast iron skillet, la viande de veau, la truffe. Some will leave the room when the smell gets overwhelming.

Nut, musk, ozone. I find some old photos. That is me at the picnic table.
My hair is short. I remember now.

I'd been cooking earlier. We ate together. My hands still smell like sweet basil leaf. Spreading my fingers out, I wipe dirt and moisture from the curve of the truffle. I let him sleep.