FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

She hasn't been elected by the students yet, but here are some facts about the next Homecoming Queen at the University of Montana: she has better than average grades, she enjoys a variety of outdoor sports, she has an outgoing personality, likes people and takes active part in university activities.

These facts emerged today as judges completed their task of selecting seven finalists for the annual Homecoming Queen contest at the University. Chosen for the final selection by students were Jill McIntosh, a physical education major from Great Falls; Gray Mannakee, from Cascade, who is majoring in liberal arts and journalism; Carolyn Dusek, Stanford, majoring in home economics; Charlene Howe, of the Glasgow Air Force Base, majoring in elementary education; Sue Jensen, Redstone, speech pathology major; Patty O'Loughlin, physical therapy major, Great Falls, and Bea Johnson, Billings, a music major.

One other characteristic was almost universal among the finalists; they plan to teach school after graduating from the University. The one who is chosen queen will not be publicly named until coronation ceremonies are held in the traditional manner on the steps of Main Hall the night of October 29.
