

CutBank

Volume 1
Issue 44 CutBank 44

Article 25

Summer 1995

The Laws

Russell Edson

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation

Edson, Russell (1995) "The Laws," CutBank: Vol. 1 : Iss. 44 , Article 25.

Available at: <https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss44/25>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.

Russell Edson

The Laws

If the rooster thinks he brings up the sun, and if the cow thinks she sets it with her lowing, what harm?

Of course the cow is somewhat smarter than the rooster, but his convictions are stronger. The cow tends to be intellectually lazy. This makes the rooster appear to be quicker, but it's probably only his nerves.

Roosters are born nervous wrecks. And still, no laws are broken.

Should the rooster and the cow get married it has no legal force in human law. Nor has it sanction in biological law.

So it is generally better for roosters to marry hens, and cows to marry bulls. Though neither has any legal force in human law, the law of nature does not discount it...