FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Robert J. Funk of Helena will speak on "Charitable Giving" at the Tax Institute to be held in Missoula December 2, 3 and 4, according to the institute's director, Lester R. Rusoff, professor of law at the University of Montana.

Funk's acceptance will bring the number of speakers for the institute to 18. Before Funk joined the certified public accountant firm of Funk and Rivers, he was involved in tax work in Spokane. He was admitted to the Montana Bar in 1959.

The institute is usually held at the U of M Law School which sponsors it, but this year it will be held in Missoula's Florence Hotel, Prof. Rusoff points out. The change has been made because of increased numbers of interested and professional persons attending. Along with the change in locale, the cost of the institute has dropped to 17 dollars, but no meals are included.

Prof. Rusoff said that the Law School staff was presently in the process of mailing out programs of the institute to professional persons involved in trust, accounting, law or insurance businesses across the state. Of course, any interested person may write to him at the Law School for a program, or stop in at his bank and ask to see a copy. Pre-registrations are urged, but not required, Prof. Rusoff said.

This year's program was developed by a group of Montanans who compose the advisory committee of the institute. This will be the 13th such consecutive institute sponsored by the Law School and the ninth which Prof. Rusoff has directed.
