--CORRECTION--
FLATHEAD LAKERS ASSOCIATION
IS NOT SYMPOSIUM SPONSOR

MISSOULA--

The Flathead Lakers Association will not be one of the sponsors of a symposium at the University of Montana dealing with Indian water rights and the legal aspects of those rights. The symposium will be Wednesday, March 3, at UM.

Dr. Richard L. Konizeski, professor of watershed management in the UM School of Forestry, who is the symposium coordinator, said the Flathead Lakers Association had no part in the symposium preparation and will not participate in the symposium. He said any Flathead Lakers who attend Wednesday's symposium would do so only as interested individuals.

Konizeski also said F. Lloyd Ingraham, Ronan, who will participate in Wednesday's symposium, does not represent the Flathead Lakers Association. Ingraham is counsel for the Montanans Opposing Discrimination.

A news release from UM Information Services previously indicated that the Flathead Lakers Association would be one of the sponsors of Wednesday's symposium and that Ingraham is counsel for the Flathead Lakers Association.

The UM School of Forestry is sponsoring Wednesday's symposium in cooperation with various Montana Indian reservations; the National Congress of American Indians; the UM Department of Native American Studies; Montanans Opposing Discrimination; the Montana State Natural Resources Agency, and the Office of Solicitor for Indian Affairs, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C.
