MISSOULA, Mont.--

Dr. J. Francis Rummel, dean of the School of Education at the University of Montana in Missoula, recently was elected chairman of the newly-organized National Cooperative for Career Education (NCCE) at the organization's first annual meeting in Chicago, Ill. Rummel was elected to the NCCE post Monday, Feb. 23.

The NCCE, established at UM under a $210,256 grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, is designed to serve as a resource center for the collection and distribution of career education materials and to teach educators throughout the U.S. how they may develop career education programs in their respective areas.

The corporate headquarters and one of 10 regional NCCE branches are located on the UM campus in Missoula.

The other nine regional centers are located on the following campuses:

The University of Arizona, Tucson; University of Oregon, Eugene; University of Georgia, Athens; University of Missouri, Columbia; Ohio State University, Columbus; Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.Y.; University of Southern California, Los Angeles; University of Virginia, Charlottesville, and Gonzaga University, Spokane, Wash.

Dr. Vincent D. Barry, Missoula, director of the NCCE, was elected NCCE president and vice chairman of the NCCE Board of Directors at the Chicago meeting. Dr. Lyle L. Berg, Missoula, associate professor of education at UM and director of the UM Division of Educational Research and Services, was elected NCCE secretary.

Elected to the NCCE Executive Committee were Barbara E. Banister, Casper, Wyo., a member of the Wyoming State Planning Council, and Robert D. Gilberts, dean of the College of Education at the University of Oregon, Eugene.

Members of the NCCE Board of Directors represent institutions of higher education, business, industry, labor and elementary and secondary schools.

Besides Rummel, Barry, Berg, Banister and Gilberts, others who were elected to the NCCE Board of Directors are:

Richard Arnold, manager of educational relations for the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., New York, N.Y.; Willard D. Cheek, manager of General Motors Corporation's educational relations, Detroit, Mich.; Frederick R. Cyphert, dean of the College of Education at Ohio State University, Columbus; Ann Gregory, director of elementary community education for Flint Public Schools, Flint, Mich.; James F. Hall, superintendent of instructional services for Kenai Borough School District, Soldotna, Alaska.

And, David L. Jesser, director of the Career Education Project of the Council of Chief State School Officers, Washington, D.C.; James W. Murry, executive secretary of the Montana AFL-CIO, Helena; Richard E. Twohy, lecturer at the School of Law and the School of Business at the University of San Francisco, San Francisco, Calif.; Ted Wahler, director of Career Education for the Northern Colorado Educational Board of Cooperative Services, Longmont, and Bob G. Woods, dean of the College of Education at the University of Missouri, Columbia.
