MISSOULA--

Henrietta V. Whiteman, assistant professor and director of Native American Studies at the University of Montana in Missoula, is featured in an article in the January 1976 edition of the magazine, "Indian Education Record of Oklahoma." The article, entitled "Henrietta Whiteman--Contemporary Indian Educator," praises her for her accomplishments and activities.

The article about Whiteman is the fourth in a series about Indian educators carried in the magazine.

Whiteman, a native of Clinton, Okla., graduated from Hammon High School, Hammon, Okla., in 1951. She received her bachelor of arts degree in education from Southwestern State College, Weatherford, Okla., in 1954. Whiteman was awarded the master of arts degree in English in 1970 from Oklahoma State University, Stillwater.

Whiteman was a lecturer-coordinator for Native American Studies at the University of California at Berkeley from 1970 to 1972. She was a part-time lecturer in anthropology at California State College in Hayward during the winter and spring quarters of 1971.

She directed the Indian Studies Training Program at the Oklahoma College of Liberal Arts, Chickasha, in the summers of 1972 and 1973. Whiteman came to the University of Montana in August of 1972 to assume the post of director of Native American Studies on the Missoula campus.

Whiteman is recognized nationally for her interest and involvement in several Indian programs.
