3 UM LAW GRADUATES TO BE CLERKS
FOR MONTANA SUPREME COURT

MISSOULA--

Three 1976 graduates of the University of Montana Law School have been chosen for one-year appointments as law clerks to the Montana Supreme Court. Robert E. Sullivan, dean of the UM School of Law, announced that Charles R. Anderson, James Carlson Jr. and Larry D. Epstein will begin their clerkships in June.

Anderson, Butte, received his bachelor of arts degree in psychology from UM. He was a legal intern in the Consumer Counsel's Office in Butte during the summer of 1975.

Carlson, Miles City, has a bachelor of arts degree in government from St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., and was a legal intern in the Legal Service's Office in Miles City.

Epstein, who is from Cut Bank, received his bachelor of science degree in business administration at UM. He served as an intern in the Lewis and Clark County Attorney's office in Helena and with the Montana Defender Project at UM.

Commenting on the appointments, Sullivan said, "The opportunity to work as a clerk with a state court is a continuation of the process of learning about the law and the practicality of translating law / ^{into} action. It is a form of graduate study beyond the first professional degree in law."
