$1,000 IN MATERIALS DONATED
TO UM SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

MISSOULA--

The University of Montana School of Education has received educational materials valued at about $1,000 from Teaching Resources Inc., a New York Times subsidiary.

Included in the gift are materials designed primarily for those in early childhood and youngsters in special education. The items include manipulative devices to improve eye-hand coordination; spatial relationship kits; phonics puzzles and games, and materials dealing with quantity and number relationships.

The materials were obtained through Madgie M. Hunt, research assistant for the National Cooperative for Career Education, an organization based at UM. Hunt formerly was assistant regional representative in the Pacific Northwest for Teaching Resources Inc.
