Campus Congress Conducts Cancer Control Confab

Sounding the hopeful note that cancer in its early stages is curable, Campus Congress conducted a forum last night in the Bitter Root room of the Student Union building in conjunction with Cancer Control week, a nation-wide movement to educate people in the prevention and control of cancer.

Walter Niemi, Butte, acted as chairman of the forum, which was broadcast. Niemi opened the program saying, "The dread disease cancer each year takes toll of human lives and it is our purpose to see how Montana university students can aid in cancer control." He then introduced Martha Jenkins, Hysham, who presented statistics concerning the dangers of cancer.

Diet Won't Cure

"Cancer is not primarily caused by drinking milk or eating meat and it is not cured by any known diet," Miss Jenkins said. She explained that prolonged exposure to sunlight may cause cancer in thin-skinned persons. Symptoms of the disease are sudden changes in the growth of moles, lumps, non-healing sores and the discharge of blood from body cavities.

"There is no pain in the early stages of cancer," Miss Jenkins warned. "Time is a most important factor in cancer control and waiting to see what happens may turn a curable cancer into an incurable disease."

Warns Against Quacks

Miss Jenkins further warned against "quacks," saying that "today we know that no paste, liquid or salve will penetrate the tissues to cure cancer. So beware of quacks."

Bruce Armstrong, Saco, the next speaker, explained what university students can do in cancer control. "University students are generally in a hurry and too indifferent to find out what a symptom means," Armstrong declared. "Beginning symptoms are disregarded and early stages are ignored."

He pointed out that X-ray, radium treatments and surgery are the only legitimate methods of treatment. Armstrong reiterated the previous speaker's statements that cancer in its early stages is curable and urged students to take annual physical examinations and to see a doctor for every symptom of the disease suspected. He particularly pointed out the value of alertness in this matter.

Ruth McCullough, Missoula, spoke on what students can accomplish in controlling cancer. "Montana's place is part of a nation-wide program for the prevention of cancer," Miss McCullough stated, stressing the importance of the program of education. "Montana students can aid in this program by intelligently examining the factors on cancer."

Face Calmly

"College students should be able to calmly face cancer," she added, and stressed the fact that students can spread the gospel that cancer is curable. They can also refuse to patronize quacks. "We do not know any preventative measures for cancer," she said.

The discussion brought out that mechanical irritation is one of the suspected causes of cancer, although the medical profession does not know definitely the causes of the many different types of this disease. It also brought out that cancer respects neither age nor economic status.

Press Club Plans Trip To Savanac

Press club members will go to the Savanac nursery, the United States Department of Agriculture's forestry nursery near St. Regis, for their annual field trip Sunday, Bill Nash, club president, announced today.

Journalists will meet at 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning at the back of the journalism building. Transportation will be provided.

All reservations must be made with Charline Johnson, journalism secretary, by 11 o'clock today. Paid-up Press club members will be admitted on their club tickets while the cost of the trip to others will be $1.

The program will begin immediately after the fire-fighter's lunch with demonstrations of seeding, lifting, packing and transportation of trees and the seed extractory.

Eight To Give Recital Today

Students in the School of Music will present their first recital of the quarter at 5 o'clock this afternoon in Main hall auditorium.

The program includes a clarinet solo, "Bless This House," by Brahe, played by Dale Sanderson, Fairview; vocal solo, "Hear Ye, Israel," Mendelssohn, by Dorothy Borchering, Moore; trombone solo, "The Volunteer," Simons, by Dean Vinal, Missoula.

Laurence Larson, Saco, will play as a piano solo, "To A Water Lily," by MacDowell; Mary Templeton, Helena, and Mary Alice West, Kalispell, piano duet, "Romance and Valse," Arensky; Robert Enevoldsen, Billings, piano solo, "Melody," Schumann, and Judith Hurley, Lewistown, piano solo, "Spanish Dance Number 5," by Moszkowski.

Forestry Seniors to Leave On Annual Trek Saturday

Sixty-three forestry seniors and forestry school staff members will leave at 6:30 o'clock Saturday morning to be gone 17 days on the annual forestry trip. Because of the large number of seniors, and the increased educational value, the trip this year will be in two sections. One bus will go south and the other will go west.

"Besides the valuable technical information gained by the students on these trips, they also have an opportunity to establish worthwhile contacts in other parts of the country," Dean T. C. Spaulding said.

Students of forest utilization will travel 2,783 miles west. Included in the itinerary are Idaho and Washington experiment stations and lumber mills, the U. S. Conservation Service, the redwoods of California, Crater lake, colleges in Oregon, and Klamath Falls.

The seniors enrolled in range

Missoula Ski club will climb Sinyaleamin peak in the Mission mountains Sunday, according to plans announced yesterday by Dr. Edward Little. The climb will be about five miles each way with an ascent of 5,500 feet.

"There are no trails but the ski terrain is mountainous and extends for miles over glaciated slopes," Little said.

The party will meet in front of the Missoula county high school at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning in order that the climb may be started at daybreak. Dark glasses, sunburn preventative and ski sleeves or climbers should be taken, according to Dr. Little.

Members and non-members wishing to make the trip should call Dr. Little before Saturday night.

LARSEN VISITS

Bill Larsen, Anaconda, 1939 graduate of the School of Business Administration, is a guest at the Sigma Nu house.

Gordon Miller, '39 journalism graduate, is working on a newspaper in his home town, Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin.

Allen Erickson, '39 graduate of the School of Forestry, is working for a lumber company in Nemo, South Dakota.

The 90 people who have singing, speaking and directing roles consist of 28 principles, 19 in the women's chorus, 17 in the men's chorus, 20 orchestra members, 3 directors and 6 stand-ins.

"The Student Prince," with the story and lyrics by Dorothy Donnelly and music by Sigmund Romberg, was first presented in 1924 in New York City.

Prince Karl (Eugene Phelan), heir of the reigning monarch comes to Heidelberg and takes his place as one of the regular students. He falls in love with Kathie (Helen Faulkner), daughter of the proprietor of a college inn, but the romance is shattered when his grandfather dies. He is obliged not only to assume the duties of king, but to marry a lady of the court.

He comes back to the inn determined to marry Kathie. She, however, having been warned of the unhappy results of such a union pretends that she has forgotten him and is about to marry a waiter. Disillusioned and unhappy, Karl realizes that he must assume the responsibilities which accompany royal birth.

Romberg Is Composer

Sigmund Romberg, composer of the score for the operetta, is a contemporary Hungarian - American composer. He has written more than 70 operettas and musical comedies of which the most successful have been "Blossom Time," "The Desert Song," the last operetta produced by students on this campus; "May Time," "My Maryland," "New Moon," and "The Student Prince." He has also written scores for films and radio broadcasts.

Some of the more familiar melodies which the audience will probably go away from the theater whistling Thursday and Friday nights are "To The Inn We're Marching," "The Drinking Song," "Golden Days," "Serenade," and "Come Boys, Let's Be Gay, Boys."

Keep a Night Open For "The Student Prince"

For the first time in four years Montana State university students will have the opportunity to attend an all-school musical when Sigmund Romberg's "The Student Prince" is presented next week-end. Not since the campus heard "The Desert Song" in 1936 has the school attempted to produce a musical show.

Authorization for the musical was given by Central board November 7. Tryouts began November 13 and by December 11 "The Student Prince" had been selected as the musical comedy to be given.

Since January 4 members of the cast, which includes 28 principals, a 19-voice women's chorus and a men's choral group of 17, have been rehearsing constantly. Larrae Haydon, director of dramatics; John Crowder, acting dean of the music school, and John Lester, voice instructor, have devoted many hours to planning the show and to directing rehearsals. Grace Johnson, Student Union manager, who is business manager of the production, has had many a headache trying to keep within the $1100 budget.

The university's outside entertainment has been curtailed this quarter. Students should welcome a musical show, produced by university students. The cost will be small, the enjoyment great. Our music and dramatics departments can boast an impressive array of student talent which, under competent leadership and direction, can give a performance not only worthwhile, but highly entertaining. Keep next Friday or Saturday night open for "The Student Prince." You won't be disappointed.

A small but determined Grizzly Cub track squad is working out daily in preparation for the Missoula high school dual meet in conjunction with the Montana-Idaho University varsity meet on May 4. Tommy Huff, last year's Intercollegiate high jump champion, has been clearing the bar at approximately six feet in practice. With Harry Hesser the frosh should pick up some points in that event.

Bill Dreidlein will handle the 100- and 220-yard dashes as well as the broad jump. Allen Mc-

Kenzie has been showing his heels to the rest of the hurdlers in trial runs and is expected to cop a first or second against Missoula.

Arvid Carlson, a former Missoula runner, will have a chance to compete against his teammates of last year in the quarter-mile and half-mile runs. Distance runners are Rollin Baggenstoss and Paul Zuelke, who are showing much promise and may develop winning strides when the meet rolls along. Warren Bradeen, Leo Rasmussen, Charles Barnwell, and Don Young are Cubs who are as yet untried.

This meet will enable the freshmen to strive for numerals. Huff and Hesser have already made theirs in the high jump while Dreidlein has qualified in the broad-jump.

SPORTALES...

By BOB PRICE

Minor sports are things seldom heard about or discussed in this column simply because I don't know anything about golf, tennis, boxing, wrestling, fencing, swimming, hockey or other such activities. I played tennis once and broke a racquet. I played golf once and broke a record. It took me three balls, one club and 19 strokes to get to the first hole and then I found somebody else's ball in the cup. I played hockey once and almost broke my back. So it's small wonder I'm apathetic towards minor sports.

However minor sports are relatively as important in the collegiate picture as football, basketball, track or baseball. They are a very necessary part of the school curriculum. Many who are neither physically fit nor mentally inclined toward major sports activity find a good medium in sports of lesser notoriety and public interest, such as tennis, golf, et cetera.

It is a geographic misfortune that the university is not located closer to colleges who are active in minor sports. There are undoubtedly plenty of golfers, boxers, swimmers and other minor athletes who could give the school active teams in the various sports. The majority of institutions in the country are in a position to elevate the alleged minor sports to a higher calibre than is possible here. Schools more ideally located than the university have regular leagues in the smaller sports parade, and participation is on a level comparable with that of the major athletic activities.

About the only lesser sports here in which the activity is not limited to secrecy, are tennis and swimming. Guy Fox, able instructor, arranges meets each year with outside schools, putting tennis on a higher rung than that of campus golf, boxing and wrestling.

Minor sports chief Harry Adams' swimmers tour around a bit more than the rest of the groups, and his teams have a reputable record in tank affairs.

But the chief gripe is that boxing is so unimportant here. Collegiate boxing is a rare sport, and one in which Montana could participate just as well as other schools, if those concerned would take it more seriously. More than a few good button-busters have passed through the school, and all they ever got to battle was a Bobcat or their own shadow.

Idaho is probably better known by its boxing team than by any other athletic team it produces. Gonzaga has made ice hockey a popular activity at that institution. Other schools produce fencers, swimmers, wrestlers who outshine all the halfbacks and basketball shots on the campus. When you get inside the idea you find that minor sports are sadly misnamed. They are minor only in that they are never allowed to gain major reputations on some campuses. Here, for instance.

If you mention golf around the campus, you don't get much of a response, yet the university can lay claim to Lloyd Skedd, state amateur golf champ. Tennis is thought of as a relaxation, but Guy Fox holds a state singles title, even if he isn't eligible for collegiate participation. There are other champs, but they skip our mind now because they are unimportant in the student eye, including ours. They're Guglielmetti, Bob Thornally and "Jiggs" Marcus took their turns on the mound for Sigma Nu. Sigma Chi had a clean slate as far as errors were concerned while Sigma Nu committed four scattered errors.
