Paul Bunyans Return From Annual Jaunt

Good Weather Favors Foresters Studying Southwest Flora

A bus laden with 32 senior foresters and three professors rolled into Missoula yesterday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock, completing a 3,196-mile field trip covering five southwestern states and 16 national forests. En route they visited nine colleges, Zion, Grand Canyon, Bryce, Boulder dam, Painted Desert, Bonneville Salt Flats, Great Salt Lake, the Mormon tabernacle and Craters-of-the-Moon.

"The trip was fine," Dr. J. W. Severy reported. "We were right on schedule all the way and ran into very little hot weather. The northern end of the desert was blooming beautifully but farther south they had had very little rain."

John Loucks, Froid, who kept a detailed journal of the expedition, said, "We were royally welcomed all along the way. The forestry stations we visited had excursions planned and preparations already made. We had the most fun the three days we spent on the desert, where we cooked our own grub and spent the nights in sleeping bags. The rest of the time we stayed in tourist cabins."

The climax of the trip was somewhere in Nevada. According to Dr. Severy, "The boys really cut loose in Las Vegas." John Loucks said, "Deacon" Mueller is still blushing from that Las Vegas excursion."

Theta Chi's Beat SAE's

Theta Chi narrowly defeated the SAE baseball nine by a score of 4 to 3 yesterday afternoon at the South Higgins ball park. The SAE's made two runs in the first inning and one in the first of the third. A three-bagger by Frost drove in Livengood for Theta Chi's first score.

Clark Has Article On "Iliad" Published

W. P. Clark, professor of classical languages, has a highly technical, critical article on one line of Homer's play, "Iliad," published in Classical Philology, critical literary magazine.

The particular line of the play has been criticized by scholars in Europe, particularly in England, France and Greece, but it has never been clearly interpreted, according to Clark. The article that was published gives Clark's interpretation of the meaning in regard to the punctuation used in the play.

Registrar's Office Says Enrollment Has Increased

Registration of full-time resident students for the year stands at 2,139, 22 higher than the same figure for 1938-39, according to figures released this week by the registrar's office. Increases were noted in the registrations of the college of arts and sciences and the schools of business administration, journalism and music.

Total number of students, including unclassified students, shorthand and music special students is 2,196 as compared with 2,198 for last year. Including summer session, correspondence and extension students, 3,962 persons enrolled at the university and received instruction, an increase of more than 200 over last year.

In keeping with the trend established in last fall's freshman class, the registration of women students at the school showed a considerable increase this year, with a corresponding slight decrease in men students. Eight hundred fifty-nine women and 1,337 men were included in the total registration for the academic year.

Rowe Says Meet Is Huge Success

"From every point of view the thirty-seventh annual Interscholastic track and field meet was the biggest and best ever held," was the sentiment of Dr. J. P. Rowe, chairman of the Interscholastic committee yesterday. With over 10 per cent more schools and contestants entered than ever before and with ideal weather conditions, it was no wonder the meet was a success, he added. Receipts will at least total and probably be in excess of expenditures.

Rowe attributed a large part of the success to Greg Rice.

Forestry Club Will Present Third Talker

What Is One To Believe of the News?

Accusations and denials seem to be the main job of the propaganda agencies in Europe these days. Our newspapers are full of them. Scanning the front page of one of the dailies, one can find the accusations of the day, complete with the denials of the previous day.

From London comes the report of a British air raid on a German air base, completely demolishing it without the loss of any British planes. Berlin retaliates with a denial of any damage being done, but a number of British planes were shot down. So the war news goes.

The British accuse the Germans of bombing undefended towns of no military importance, while at the same time the Germans are making the same charge, both ending in quick and emphatic denials.

If the reports on the number of ships being sunk on both sides can be relied upon, the losses of this war are going to be far in excess of the tonnage lost in the last war.

To the discriminating reader, the war news presents a problem. If he favors the allies, he can find much material to substantiate his views, but he must disregard many of the conflicting stories. If he should be a German sympathizer, however, his lot is still harder. He has to scan a maze of allied reports to find favorable ones on which to base his support. England seems to be getting the best of the space and breaks by the American papers.

To be able to sift the material for the truth is an arduous task. The majority would rather just read the papers hurriedly and wait for something to really break that can be relied upon.

The chief reason for dictators is too many sheep in people's clothing.

With "waropean" news shrieking from every banner and sub-head, even a Republican nominee for president is likely to find it difficult to make page one.

Think of the repercussions in the Prudential Life Insurance company's main office if the Italians blast the rock of Gibraltar.

On the Open Shelf

For What Do We Fight? by Sir Norman Angell—This new volume by the Nobel prize winner (1933) in the field of peace discusses the causes of the present war. Repeating many of the arguments stated in his "The Great Illusion," he examines what France and Britain are avowedly fighting for and against and what should be the underlying principles for a new peace. A permanent "federation for defense" among the democracies is the solution he offers.

Ideas Are Weapons; the History and Uses of Ideas, by Max Lerner—Max Lerner, formerly editor of Nation and now a professor of government at Williams college, has gathered together some 60 essays and reviews written during the last nine years. His interests have led him to range freely over many fields—law, literature, politics, economics, history, education, sociology, social psychology, as he tells in the foreword. Stimulating is a hackneyed but true description for this collection.

Swift Flows the River, by Nard Jones—This is a lively adventure story of the Columbia river country, written by a Northwest writer. Beginning in the era of gold discovery in the '60's, it follows the history of western settlement in the days when the Columbia river was the main artery of transportation. Its main theme is the establishment of steamboat traffic, but it utilizes almost every aspect of frontier life—the coming of the miners, the cattlemen, the gambler and the missionary. With no pretense to being more than a colorful story, this novel well succeeds in that aim.

The Day Will Come, by Elizabeth Marion—This novel of the Palouse country of Washington is the first work of a young woman who grew up on a wheat farm in this section of the country. The theme is the tragedy of the domination of a too fond mother over her three children. The story is sensitively told and deeply felt.

"Hospitality Committee Fills Need"—Johnson

Despite some student assurances that they knew their way around, were "doing all right," or they didn't want to dance, the track meet hospitality committee was a comparative success, said Grace Johnson, Student Union manager, yesterday.

Elizabeth Grimm, Whitefish; Art Sanderson, Phillipsburg; Avis Schmitz, Brockton; Irma Lu Heaton, Julia Lukas, Aileen and Ruth McCullough, Missoula, committee members, attended the high school mixers Thursday and Friday nights to introduce bashful visitors and see that everyone danced.

Each morning the committee in charge of the information desk in the Student Union foyer showed students around the building, pointing out various exhibits, pictures and pamphlets, and referring them to the curriculum information desk in the Bitter Root room.

"Jiggs" Calls Hoop Drill

Coach George "Jiggs" Dahlberg called 20 hoopsters out for spring drill yesterday to experiment with an offense to fit his personnel of next year.

Dahlberg said he is interested in seeing how the freshmen will work with the varsity. He plans to keep the squad working for two weeks but will not drill on fundamentals.

Lettermen expected to answer the call include Co-Captains "Biff" Hall and Rae Greene, "Butch" Hudecek, Bill DeGroot and "Dutch" Dahmer. Bill Jones' football "charley-horse" will keep him from practice and Gene Clawson is still busy with track.

"Red" Bryan, Jack Swarthout, Russ Edwards, and "String" Miller, Alan McKenzie, Joe Taylor, Harry Hesser and Otto Reiffen from the Cubs have turned out. Bud Gillette, a junior college transfer from Spearfish, South Dakota and Wally Buettner, numeral winner of two years ago complete the squad.

SPORTALES...

By BOB PRICE

With football dead but not forgotten for the school year and track on its final lap here, the major sports picture swings to the court where "Jiggs" Dahlberg started working on his 1940-41 cage squad yesterday afternoon, with a likely looking layout of about three teams reporting.

Because we were "scooped" by one of our brother reporters on the spring practice story, we started pumping Jiggs on this new-fangled basketball idea . . . the "40-point game," which is being considered around and about. Not being one to make a snap judgment on things, Jiggs could only say that "the thing sounded like a pretty fair idea on a moment's thought."

The idea of this game is that the team that reaches 40 points first in the game wins. There is no time element in the game . . . scoring being the main point. The game has undergone experimentation under two conditions—when one team was far superior to the other, and when the two teams were evenly matched. In the first game between the unevenly matched outfits 13 minutes were cut off of what would have been a lop-sided, rather drab affair, something like we've witnessed out here when the Grizzlies were either 30 or 40 points better or worse. When the winning team corralled 40 points they called it a game.

In the second experiment between the two evenly matched squads the game was a dinger. The winning team edged out the other 41-36. Quoting the mag where we got this dope, it said: "The game was so close that the spectators forgot all about the time element. They were probably unaware of the fact that the game was actually several minutes shorter than usual. When both teams approached the 40-point desideratum, they really opened up with everything they had, probably figuring that a good offense in this particular situation was the best defense."

The game presumably eliminates stalling. "Obviously," said the magazine, "with only a few points to go, the thing to do was to go out and make 'em at once." The game kept the players on their toes and as a result the fans got more enjoyment out of the tussle.

Frankly we could use some closer games on the court. There would be none of these 75-19 slam-bang affairs where the fans die from boredom about the first half. The team on the short side would always have a chance to overcome the top team. It would cut down on a lot of these 20-point-per-game hot-shots. My guess is that the sport would be a right lively affair with 40 points as the limit, instead of 40 minutes, or whatever time they use. At least the losing side could say, "Look, they only beat us 40-19, which isn't bad, considering the fact that last year they walloped us 63-19." It's an idea.

We were out clocking Greg Rice Monday during his daily practice stint (a 14:42 three-mile followed shortly by a 55 second quarter) and the boy wasn't puffing as hard as most of us after rushing across campus to a class. The small fry of the town evidently got word he would work out, because they were out there along the track marvelling at the world's champ. After Greg worked out the midgets started running around the track, probably thinking someday they would be like Greg. All it takes is plenty of everything. Greg has shaken more hands, autographed more programs, scraps of papers, and posed for more pictures than any fellow we've ever seen.

Track Men Will Compete With Wash. U.

Montana's trackmen leave Thursday morning to seek points in the annual Pacific Coast Northern division track and field meet Friday and Saturday at Seattle.

Coach Harry Adams' cinder dusters should garner from 15 to 20 points, with Captain Jack Emigh, Jim Seyler, Al Hileman, Gene Clawson and Phil Yovetich playing leading roles.

If Lee Orr, Washington State's star sprinter and hurdler, fails to run the 220, Emigh will stand a good chance to win. Emigh's 21.5 last Saturday is two-tenths of a second faster than any other runner's time in the Northern division this spring discounting Orr's 20.9. Orr will undoubtedly content himself with the low hurdles and quarter. He can win without being pressed too closely if he is fresh at the start. Emigh should also place in the century and quarter. Only Quale of Washington has bettered the 9.8 hundred Emigh stepped against Idaho Southern branch.

Jim Seyler will be the only broad jumper in the meet who has leaped 23 feet so far this year, while Phil Yovetich's 22 feet 6 inch jump should place high. Two men who are capable of beating Al Hileman in the low hurdles are Orr and Jim Buck of Oregon. Hileman should give Buck a good run for second and place in the high hurdles.

Big Gene Clawson is Montana's question mark. If he unleashes, he will be high in the money. Earle Stone of Washington State got the discus out 147 feet 6½ inches in competition. He will be the boy Clawson will have to beat for honors.

Grizzlies who can get points if their sore arms and legs heal are Roy Gustafson and Ole Ueland. Gustafson and Ueland have been handicapped by injuries.

Your MAGIC CARPET

to Missoula's Greatest Values!

YOU probably never considered the Kaimin as being a magic carpet, it doesn't whisk you around the town in the physical sense of the word. However, the Kaimin does give you a mental jaunt daily to all parts of the campus . . . and better yet, it transports you into every good store in town — and graphically describes the merchandise or services these stores are offering.
