The Formerly Loved

Nance Van Winckel
From a small prop plane
he dove into the smoke.
He had a shovel. Green boots.
Went down. The white sail of him. Toward what?
Who could know, who could see? He said the river was a sound beyond the trees.

I was a woman on the road by a water truck. Watching him step from the smoke. Dragging the shovel. A tree crashed across the river. Halfway up Halfmoon Ridge, the smoke of him turned to me. I loved even the green of those boots.

How to unmake a fire before it unmakes a mountain.
How to unblacken the grasses after his burn. Trenches of detour.
Wild-eyed, the moose comes tearing out. Confusing the river sounds with the crackling trees. Who can see? From the road, more smoke over the moose face.

I watch for a green. A man’s kiss in a freefall. The char on my lips.
An unmade time around the space. A country in flames.
And then its smolder. A wind of him blowing. Sounds. He said sounds were rivers in the trees.
