GERMAN MATH PROFESSOR PLANS THREE UNIVERSITY APPEARANCES

Professor Alexander Dinghes of the Free University of Berlin will be on the University campus for three speeches next week, according to Dr. Howard E. Reinhardt, associate professor of mathematics.

Dr. Dinghes will speak Tuesday at 11 a.m. in Math-Physics 312 on the merits of peano curves in schoolteaching, and at 4 p.m. in Math-Physics 109 to Pi Mu Epsilon on inequalities and identities of elementary analysis. On Wednesday he will speak at 4 p.m. in Math-Physics 311 on the Weierstrauss Theorem and the beginning of the modern theory of meromorphic functions.

Dr. Dinghes, a German, was born in Turkey and was graduated from the University of Athens and the University of Berlin. He is a member of Akademie Heidelberg in Germany, American Mathematical Society, London Mathematical Society, Societe Mathematique de France in Paris and has been President of the Berliner Mathematische Gesellschaft since 1962.

His appearance here is sponsored by the Academic Year Institute in Mathematics of which Dr. Reinhardt is a director.
