Melby Tells of University Needs

Education Survey Shows Finances Not Adequate, Fund Increase Imperative

Post-War Demands Require Best Educational Facilities if American Youth Are to Assist In Reconstruction, Speaker Says

By MARY ANN LUEBBEN

"Montana State University approaches its responsibilities in the war and post-war periods with a full realization of the difficulties involved; it is handicapped by the fact that in the past 20 years it has received a level of support which has failed to equip it effectively for the tasks that are to come," declared President Melby, speaking over a statewide hook-up last Tuesday. Dr. Melby addressed students and faculty members at a weekly convocation program in the Student Union Theater.

Compared with those of her six neighbor states, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, Montana's per capita appropriations for higher institutions, $1.53, together with Idaho's $2.29, is at the bottom of the list. Although Montana trails in appropriations, Dr. Melby pointed out, she ranks second in economic wealth and in student interest. North Dakota, the state with the least economic wealth, leads the seven states surveyed while Montana, second only to Wyoming in economic wealth, is once more the tail-end.

Dr. Melby emphasized that these conditions put on the shoulders of University students a double load; for it is the students of America that will rebuild the post-war world. He feels that after the war the United States will be the only country with sufficient manpower to reconstruct the world. The peacetime United States will be able to provide all the necessities for everyday living as well as produce all types of gadgets and labor-savers. Unemployment will virtually be a thing of the past, he said. To the United States will fall the tasks of making democracy work in Europe and of rebuilding the world economically, spiritually and politically, as well as physically.

Dr. Melby spoke of the uncertainty of the college students of America as to their responsibilities in respect to the war. Although working on Red Cross projects, scrap and salvage drives, most of them felt that they were not doing their part.

Sadie Stalks Slippery Sidewalks

Daisy Mae is getting more excited by the hour as Sadie Hawkins' Day approaches. Slippery sidewalks have been an additional hazard for the determined co-ed but, nevertheless, the man-hunt continues in all its fury.

With prizes in view for the best Dogpatch costume, the campus is buzzing with plans for the hill-billy fashion show Saturday night. The Spurs will present the best Daisy Mae and Li'l Abner with their due honors as one of the highlights of the evening.

Voting for the eight candidates will take place all day Saturday in the Student Union Fountain and the one elected will be publicly acclaimed the reigning Li'l Abner for the dance. Take yo pick, gals, 'cause this opportunity is the only one of a lifetime. Yo dream man is one of these here candidates so choose wisely.

Enthusiastic Audience Sees Premiere Showing Of All-School Musical

By BOB SIAS

A warm and enthusiastic audience greeted the premiere of "Confidentially, Mr. Hitler" last night in the Student Union Theater. The spectacular musical, staged by Larrae Haydon, director of dramatics, was produced by the University as a benefit for the Missoula Mobile Blood Donor unit and will be presented again tonight at 8:15 o'clock.

Students may still obtain tickets to the musical by presenting their activity cards at the business office of the Student Union.

The show, built around a series of letters written by a rookie from MSU, includes everything from music, shapely gals and corny comedy to serious drama and has an ending which left last night's audience moved and shaken.

Mellow-voiced Joe Gans deserves special credit for his performance as the narrating letter writer. Sitting at the side of the stage, he carried the audience from Fort Knox to India, Hawaii, the Caribbean, Russia, and even West Africa. These various settings served to bring on the inevitable chorus girls, a number of exciting costumes, and some fine singing by Herb Jillson, Brinton Jackson, Mabel Ringling, Dorothy Borchering, and Erwin Overby.

Mike O'Connell again proved himself one of the most capable entertainers on the campus with

America Preserves Ballet As European Support Ends

That America has played a historical role in the preservation of the art we have come to know as the Russian ballet, will be evidenced Dec. 16 to University students when the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo performs on the Student Union stage as the second program in the Community Concert series.

European centers, which formerly provided both stimulus and developing grounds for the Russian ballet, have been cut off because of the war. During World War I, support from London and Spain kept the ballet going.

But with all Europe a battlefield today the ballet turns to America to receive its livelihood. America is playing an ever increasing part in the supply of both dancers and new works to the company. American dancers, choreographers, and composers are being added to the company constantly.

The Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo is busily engaged the year round. During the past summer the company gave three engagements with the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra at the Stadium Concerts; later broke the season's attendance records at the Hollywood Bowl, and toured the Pacific Northwest.

A Bit of Comment

From The Un-"Reliable Source"

Although still chuckling reminiscently over Dean Jesse's little witticism on Kaimin accuracy (or, to be more exact, our lack of accuracy) in carrying final examination schedules there are several points which, because of the distortion that evidently had to be employed to drive home the joke, now need clarification before they become even more garbled via "grapevine elaboration" and are accepted as factual.

But first, a word of explanation to the students who didn't attend last Tuesday's convocation. In concluding an announcement of the new procedure methods to be used in this year's finals, Dr. Jesse said that he'd like to take a crack at Dean Ford of the journalism school in that, quote, never, to my knowledge, has the Kaimin carried an examination schedule right the first time, end of quote; and heartily recommended that students who really wanted to know when their examinations were scheduled consult "a reliable source."

It was a passable joke. We all laughed. But there were several too broad generalizations and insinuations and at least one definite misconception which, coming from a faculty member, might have a tendency to be accepted too readily on no more than the statement's superficial aspect.

First: Taking "a crack at Dean Ford." It should be definitely understood that our dean is in no way responsible for what is carried in the Kaimin and our inaccuracies consequently shouldn't be considered as a reflection on him. The same applies to any other journalism school faculty member. As an ASMSU publication, we assume the sole responsibility for what is run in the Kaimin.

Second: "Never . . . has the Kaimin carried an examination schedule right the first time." That we have on occasion misprinted stories (and examination schedules) is readily acknowledged, but it's almost a surety that Dr. Jesse would be among the first to admit that "never" is an exceedingly long time and the word, when used indiscriminately, often gets out of control. For instance, using the same kind of reasoning, we of the Kaimin could say that, "never to our knowledge has the Kaimin received an examination schedule from the registrar's office that was correct the first time" and be technically correct. But that is because we are in possession of one pertinent fact that most people in reading or hearing the generalization wouldn't stop to consider; namely, that as a new staff this quarter, this is the first time we've had to worry about publishing exam schedules and the one we received for this quarter was not only far from complete but what we did have was, in part, incorrect. That an occasional error must slip by the registrar's office in preparing such a schedule is perfectly understandable, to err is but human.

Third: The insinuation that the Kaimin is not "a reliable source." In its defined duty of reflecting public opinion no newspaper is more reliable than its source. That the very human quality of error often enters is deplorable, but surely it doesn't fall within the realm of journalistic endeavor to change human nature.

This incident seems to illustrate, as a particular instance, a condition that we could live without. The remark, although probably not maliciously made, would have been better unsaid. It wasn't a constructive criticism, wasn't particularly true and had a sharp flick that, in some instances, took away all of its humor.

THIS WEEK

on other campuses

- Lorraine Griffith

Some of this, a little of that, a serious discourse here, a little fun there—all make up a normal college day. Accordingly, here are sundry gleanings from school presses around and about:

"On Monday, December 7, the anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Saint Mary's students and faculty will be given an opportunity to show their patriotism in a concrete fashion, when representatives of the American Red Cross will visit the campus to set up a blood bank. Every sanitary precaution will be taken to safeguard the health of the donors."—Saint Mary's Collegian, Saint Mary's College, California.

Oregon State College has given its victory bell to aid the war effort: "In these times of strife and striving, why should we, as patriotic college students, hoard such vast quantity of strategic metal as this bell contains . . . the bell either has or will be presented to the proper authorities for use in defeating our real enemies, and not our friendly rivals (on the football field)."—Oregon State Barometer, Oregon State College, Corvallis.

"One hundred and thirty-five dollars will be presented to the United Service Organizations by the Women's Athletic Association. This was 75 per cent of the proceeds from their carnival. The WAA is the first campus organization to present anything to the USO."—Bee Gee News, Bowling Green State University, Ohio.

"Sororities will vie with each other this week in a contest to determine which group can supply the most gifts to Bruin alumni in the armed forces."—California Daily Bruin.

Five Named On Committee

In an effort to arouse interest in war activities on the campus and with an idea to promote worthwhile club activities in war work fields, Central Board designated a five-person commission to coordinate activities and suggest projects for campus groups.

Jack Buzzetti, Hardin, was appointed chairman. Other members of the group, identified as the Student War Activities Commission, are Dick Pedersen, Havre; Jane Mee, Anaconda; Bob Dow, Sheridan, Wyo., and Jean Marshall, Missoula.

The Moslem university of Al Azhar in Cairo, Egypt, was founded in 970.

Communications

It is with no little compunction that I noted the exclusion of the name of Stephen Stockdale '37 from the list read in the show, "Confidentially, Mr. Hitler," of those from Montana State University who have been killed thus far in this war. I wish to point out that Ensign Stockdale was the first University alumnus to be killed in this war. He died at Pearl Harbor.

Yours for a better informed University public,

Makin' the Rounds

By PAT CAMPBELL

Here we are ladies and gentlemen about to go into the last of the seven-round fight. The Grizzlies have taken the count six times but have still come up from the canvas fighting. The opponent can't seem to serve the knockout blow nor can he dim the spirits of this light and wily opponent; so the last round finds us staring at a USC Trojan about to make a Grizzly kill, but evidently the sly old bear has something up his sleeve.

Even though Jiggs Dahlberg and Harry Adams threw in the towel about mid-season, not because of a defeat but because Uncle Sam called, the Silvertip still didn't draw any punches. When Clyde Carpenter took over mentor duties, Grizzlies changed their style of play—but for the better.

Regardless, it's a good thing that football season is over, for we hear that "Carp" has also received his orders. Yes "It's a hell of a situation at the U." If "Carp" should report for service, who will coach basketball and track? Should we venture to say that if another coach takes over, he will also be given a 60-day notice and so on 'till a coach will be a thing of the past?

Let's get around to this last round.

Last Saturday, as most of you remember, the Trojans took a 13-0 defeat at the hands of the Irish from Notre Dame. The Trojan prestige was so seriously injured by the humiliating defeat that the cops had to stop a rough'n tumble after the final gun. Why?—Because a S.C. victory would increase their hopes when Rose Bowl bids rolled around.

Oh, well, when UCLA takes them into camp Dec. 12, they will be able to claim later that the smell of the roses was a sequel to the story about "Ferdinand, the Bull," when said bull got a drift of the sweet essence.

Again the Grizzlies will have to capitalize on aerial larceny. If they play the same style of game against USC as California witnessed two weeks ago; then watch out! True, the Trojans have two veteran ends, Ralph Heywood and Joe Davis, who are noted for snagging bullet passes from halfbacks Mickey McArdle, Hal Finney and Leo Riggs. But regardless of their sturdiness, they will have to be in supreme form to make yardage in Saturday's game, predictions indicate.

Saturday's clash is run off in 12 minute quarters as a result of a double header. Though the Carpenters have been lax in practice this week because of a foot of snow on the gridiron, the shortened quarters should prove beneficial when a second wind is called for Saturday, nevertheless.

PDT Aquamen Defeat SN; TX Forfeits

As a result of their impressive 29-12 win over the Sigma Nu outfit yesterday afternoon, the Phi Delta Theta swimmers earned the right to splash against the Sigma Chi aquamen for the interfraternity swimming championship next Monday afternoon. Sigma Chi advanced to the finals as a result of the Theta Chi forfeit.

Phi Delt men won every event yesterday except the 80-yard free style contest, which Dick Bottomley won in 51.5 seconds. PDT's Bell was second and Jack Burgess of SN was third.

In the 40-yard free style event, Bell again outswam his opponents, Bottomley and Burgess, while Kennard of the Phi Delt won the back stroke race. Dick Pederson, member of the winners, was second and Bottomley followed.

In the last event of the meet,

Women's M Club To Tap Members At Christmas Party

New members of the women's M Club will be tapped at the WAA Christmas Fireside from 7:30 to 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the Student Union Lounge, Mary Jane Deegan, Big Timber, WAA president, announced yesterday. All University women are invited, she said.

Peggy Landreth, Muskogee, Okla., general chairman, has appointed committees as follows: decorations, Peggy Kerr, Bozeman; entertainment, Vicki Carkulis, Butte; guests, Pat Petterson, Great Falls; food, Betty Garman, Ventura, Calif.; invitations, Ethel Regan, Helena.

WAA fall quarter activities will end with the fireside.

PDT Dick Voorhees won with strokes to spare over his teammate Kennard and Sigma Nu Braden.

The 100-yard free style relay was forfeited to the Phi Delt's.

Bowman Wins Grid Honors

Dick Bowman, Montana's fleet-footed halfback, won a berth in the Grizzly football hall of fame yesterday as a result of his All-Pacific Coast honorable mention given him by coast sports experts. The brilliant sophomore, whose excellent passing arm gave many a headache to Grizzly opponents throughout the season, was the only Montanan listed.

The rating, the first given to a Grizzly player since Eso Naranche's heyday two years ago, was based upon a player's past season record, both offensive and defensive.

Thusfar, the "Blond Bomber" is the leading tri-color score-collector with 21 points, having crossed the goal line for three touchdowns and three points after touchdown.

Kratt Inspects Music School In Annual Visit

Dean Theodore Kratt, of the School of Music at the University of Oregon, examiner for the National Association of Schools of Music, inspected the School of Music at the University Dec. 2 and 3. Dean Kratt was making his annual inspection of the music school which became an associate of the national association in 1939.

Dean Kratt said that he was very favorably impressed with the campus and especially with the work which the School of Music, headed by Prof. John B. Crowder, is doing.

Dean Kratt's only criticism was that there are not enough students who are not music majors enrolled in the music classes. He believes, that every student should have at least one quarter of music, particularly Music Appreciation. The dean pointed out that, "no student's education is well rounded out without some contact with music."

The purpose of the Dean's inspection was to look over the music school, generally; interview the faculty and students majoring in music and offer constructive criticism by which the School of Music can be made more complete and effective.

Melby Cites Youth's Part After War

This uncertainty was prominent among the faculty as well as the students. Many still are uncertain.

The duty of these students and faculty members is, Dr. Melby says, to build the changing system of Dr. Melby's speech was broadcast over station KGVO and released on a state-wide hook-up. Copies of the speech are being printed by the University press for Christmas distribution to parents of University students. Copies are available to students at their fraternities, sororities, co-ops or dorms as well as at the School of Journalism.
