Soldier's Life May Depend On Ability to Speak French

By LORRAINE GRIFFITH

Someday a knowledge of French might save a Montana student's life. Take it from someone who knows. First Lieutenant Walter H. Martin stationed at a Flying Fortress base somewhere in England recently gave Prof. R. O. Hoffman, instructor in French, an inside picture of how it might work.

Carrying on daylight, high-altitude raids on Continental Europe as a member of the Second Heavy Bomber group in England from America, Martin has had plenty of opportunity to know exactly what is going on.

In a letter to Professor Hoffman the young flyer cited the story of how he lost his roommate and best friend in an air raid over Occupied France. Knocked out of the plane formation by a Focke-Wulf, German pursuit ship, his friend was downed over Albert. Martin believes, however, that he is alive. For if the French treat his friend as they do so many Allied flyers, they have hidden him and will pass him out of the occupied territory. So a knowledge of French often proves mighty handy. Now Martin is brushing up on the language.

University Graduate

In February, 1941, Martin applied and was accepted as a flying cadet in the U.S. Army Air Corps. Two weeks after his graduation in June, 1941, from Montana State University with a major in economics, he and nine other Montana boys were sent to a California flying school. Eight months later two received second lieutenant commissions; the others were "washed out."

After this basic training he went to Louisiana and was taught to fly Liberators, heavy bombers. His

Miss Johnson, a Spanish major, obtained her position through a Civil Service examination taken last fall. She is completing her credits for graduation by correspondence.

In a letter to Dr. Bart Thomas, professor of Spanish, Miss Johnson states that she enjoys her work very much and believes that the reading of Spanish novels in the vernacular has been a great help in understanding letters she must read.

Navy Needs Radio Experts

Students with two years or more of college physics, higher mathematics or a knowledge of ultra-high frequency radio are needed by the Navy as technicians, Lt. W. H. Duniway, public relations officer who visited the campus yesterday, said.

Lt. Herbert E. Wigle will be at the Navy recruiting station until tomorrow afternoon to explain radio work to applicants between the ages of 19 and 50. WAVE, SPAR Officers Here To Recruit Enlistees

University women were invited yesterday to enlist in the WAVES or SPARS, the women's reserves of the Navy and Coast Guard, respectively, by advance public relations officers of the two groups.

AWVS Sponsors Recital As Practiced In World War I

Carrying on a similar practice from the World War 1, the American Women's Volunteer Service is sponsoring a series of six three-quarter hour recitals and seven quarter-hour radio programs on consecutive Sunday afternoons throughout the winter quarter. Faculty members of the University music school under John B. Crowder, dean and professor of music, are presenting the talent on these programs.

For the general public, these programs are given from the Mayfair room of the Hotel Florence at 4 o'clock each Sunday. During World War 1 the recitals were given at the Liberty Theater.

Next in the present series of faculty recitals is the cornet performance of Clarence Bell, assistant professor of music and director of bands, accompanied by Rudolph Wendt, instructor in music, scheduled for 4 o'clock Sunday. The quarter-hour radio program and the three-quarter hour public recital will constitute the afternoon program. No admission is charged.

ADEQUATE FINANCIAL SUPPORT FOR HIGHER EDUCATION IN MONTANA

THIS WEEK Montana's legislators will seek to determine just what constitutes the "adequate" support that Governor Ford requested in his biennial message to the Legislature. The six heads of Montana's Greater University will be called to Helena to discuss the financial problems of higher education in the state with the hope that suitable appropriations may be made.

Budget requests of the six units of the Greater University of Montana—to cover the fiscal years ending June 30, 1944, and June 30, 1945—are higher in all instances than were appropriations made by the 1941 session of the Legislature. Appropriations for fiscal year 1942 and 1943 totaled $2,193,750 for the six units; requests for the next biennium total $2,998,549. Of that sum the University is requesting $530,275 for fiscal 1944 and $535,275 for fiscal 1945.

That the increased appropriations are needed at the University goes almost without saying, but the fact that WE realize the need isn't sufficient. Many of our legislators aren't convinced that appropriations should be boosted during this period of national emergency when it seems that all funds possible should be turned into channels where they will more obviously be an aid in the war effort.

Which is where we, the student body, should come in. While it may seem a little like locking the stable after the horse has been stolen to think about the matter after the Legislature convened, still there is time to act on the question that each of us should ask ourselves as men and women interested in the future of the University: Have we made it perfectly clear to our representatives in Helena where we, as students, stand on the matter of appropriations for higher education in our State?

If not, what are we going to do about it? Nothing? Well, some will ask, just what can we do about it? What concrete knowledge have we that entitles us to voice an honest opinion?

It was in an attempt to acquaint us with some of the more pertinent figures on this matter that Dr. Roy J. W. Ely of the department of economics and Dr. Bert Sappenfield, psychology instructor, prepared the statistical background for a pamphlet on education in Montana as compared to the six neighboring states of Idaho, Washington, Minnesota, Oregon, North Dakota and Wyoming. Distributed during test week of last quarter it presented in concise, easily understood graph-form the appalling situation of finances for higher education in the state.

Colleges all over the country are cooperating with the government's share-the-meat campaign calling on adult civilians to cut their individual meat consumption to 2½ pounds weekly until rationing is organized. In most colleges students who eat their three meals in college dining rooms are staying within their voluntary 2½-pound allowance. The WPB Foods Requirements Committee stresses that meat eaten in restaurants must also be counted as part of the student's weekly share. College dieticians are experimenting with meatless days and meat alternates.

Lieut. Robert Price '40 was graduated as a bombardier from Williams Army Advanced Flying School at Chandler, Ariz., Nov. 21, receiving his commission as a second lieutenant in the Army Air Corps. While attending school, Price was Kaimin sports editor and member of the University track team.

Lieut. Emerson P. Jones, former University student, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in the Army Air Forces, according to word received recently. Lieutenant Jones won his wings this year at Mather Field, Calif. He is now on duty at AAF Navigation School in Hondo, Texas, the world's largest navigation school.

Sweater Party, Fireside, Dinners Only Activities On Week-End Calendar

Campus week-end activities were at a standstill as students ended their first week of the new quarter. The Sigma Chi "sweater party" was the leading social event Friday night. Sigma Nus had a fireside Saturday night, and other doings were confined to entertaining dinner guests.

Max Wilcomb and son Max Jr. of Missoula were Sunday dinner guests at the SAE house.

Irma Lu Heaton of Missoula was a Sunday dinner guest of Alpha Delta Pi.

Sigma Nu's Initiate

Sigma Nu held active initiation recently for Don Johnson, Helena; Aaron Smith, Missoula, and Ray Rieder, Valier. Curtis Stimson of the U.S. Navy was a dinner guest at the house last week.

Virginia Swanson, Fort Benton, and Joyce Phillips, Kalispell, were dinner guests at the Alpha Phi house Sunday.

Sunday dinner guests of Phi Sigma Kappa were Betty Ann and Jeanette Sias, Chinook; Margie Harrison, Bridger; Dale Burnett, Missoula; Ray Ryan, who recently returned from Alaska, and a former fraternity brother, Andrew Giacobuzzi, who is now with the E. R. Squibb Co.

KAT Has Guests

Virginia Morrison and Adele Kraabel, Missoula, were Thursday dinner guests of Kappa Alpha Theta. Dorothy Mulroney, Missoula, was a Friday guest, and Sunday guests were Barbara Shearer and Dorothy Angstman, both of Helena. Mrs. Chet Lenhoff, the former Nancy Landreth, of Muskogee, Okla., was a guest of the house last week.

Kappa Kappa Gamma Sunday dinner guests were Virginia Maynard, Billings, and Adele Kraebel, Missoula.

Kathleen Hubbard, Polson, went home for the week-end.

Eleanor Ivankovich and Edith Keig went to Anaconda, and Virginia Benson went to Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. McHale and Ted McHale of Shelby visited Pat McHale at the Sigma Kappa house Sunday.

Quentin Reynolds — Only the Stars Are Neutral. An American reporter's account of his experience during the winter of 1941-42. He was in London part of the time; spent three months in Moscow and Kuibyshev; flew to Cairo in the same plane with the Litvinovs and Steinhardt; and came back to America via freighter.

Mr. Reynolds' new book is at the same time exciting, extremely vivid, humorous all through. At times it becomes dramatic and moving, as in the chapters describing the terrific bombings of London and of the little desert post in Libya. One does not get tired of it, although it deals with phases of the war we have heard much about.

Ignacio Silone—The Seed Beneath the Snow. Mussolini the dictator does not like Ignacio Silone the novelist. This is understandable. Silone does not like Mussolini. In his novels he makes that masterpiece of bombast seem utterly ridiculous. More than that he shows that the mass of Italians themselves, including many of those who, for expediency's sake wear fascist clothing, are as aware as he is of how palpably absurd

War Information Reading Material

New books just added to the "Reading for Wartime" Shelf in the Library give up-to-date information on our far-flung war fronts. From Alaska to the South Pacific, correspondents and diplomats contribute their first-hand accounts of the war in its various aspects.

From the Chinese front we have The Flying Tigers by Russell Whelan, an account of the achievements of the American volunteer group who fought for China from December, 1941 to July, 1942.

With Japan's Leaders, by Frederick Moore. This book has the virtue of being an eye-witness of Japanese-American relations for the last two decades. Ramparts of the Pacific, by Hallett Abend. Just three months before Pearl Harbor, the author took a 40,000-mile air trip from Washington, D. C., to Batavia and back. Abend has another timely book: Japan Unmasked, the story behind Japan's war strategy and plans.

Alaska Under Arms, by Jean Potter. Jean Potter, who has been on the research staff of "Fortune" since 1936, gives here the facts we need to know in a breezy and arresting account of this fabulous land.

War in the Desert, by Raoul Aghion. Here is background material for the war in the Middle East. Another book dealing with the African campaign is Miracle on the Congo, by Ben Lucien Burman.

Hitler's chief yes-man is. He also tells us that Mussolini's days are numbered, even as are the days of the snows beneath which lives the seed of truth, ready to burst into flower at the appointed time. Hence, the title, "The Seed Beneath the Snow."

Howard K. Smith—Last Train from Berlin. Here is a remarkable eye-witness account of the startling metamorphosis of Nazi Germany after June 22, 1941. "Last Train from Berlin" pictures in exciting detail the havoc that the Russian campaign has wrought on the Fuehrer's home front. Mr. Smith tells the story with indignation, disgust, and cynical humor. His sense of social change gives vital significance to his chronicle of the proletarianization of the German middle class. Some of the most disquieting pages are given over to the Hitler Youth. The author insists that the German people carry on with distrust of Nazis solely through fear of the Gestapo and of what may befall them if Germany is defeated.

High School Game Rates Explained

Missoula County High school and State University athletic officials have agreed on a policy which will enable students to attend each other's basketball games at reduced prices, Kirk Badgley, University athletic manager, announced at Central Board meeting early this week. Because of the increased seating capacity, University games will be played in the new high school gym.

On nights of a double-header, with the high-school game first, students attending the first game will be charged 15 cents. However, if University students wish to attend only the University game they will be admitted at the end of the high school game on presentation of activity cards, Badgley explained. High school students may attend both games the night of a double-billing for the same 15-cent charge.

Students in the War

Walter F. Shaffner '41 was commissioned a second lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps at Quantico, Va., recently after completing a 10-week indoctrination period. He is now enrolled in Reserve Officers' Class at Quantico where he will be instructed in the duties of platoon commandship and the techniques of modern warfare for the next three months.

Virgil G. Bowen, former University student, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps at Quantico, Va., and is now enrolled in Reserve Officers' Class for three months training in the principles of command. Lieut. Bowen held the recruit rifle range marksmanship record at San Diego for nearly two years.

Wilson Releases Intramural Calendar

Basketball, Bowling Lists Given; Kegler's Season Will End on February 13

Both intramural basketball and bowling will get underway next week with the first bowling matches rolled the afternoon of Saturday, Jan. 16, and basketball tilts scheduled for the afternoon of Jan. 19, Vince Wilson, intramural director, announced yesterday. At a meeting of bowling managers it was decided to have this year's league in only one session instead of the previously used two half program. Under this new system there will be no handicaps placed on any team because of the shortened season. Before, the handicaps had been decided from the team averages of the first half.

New Restrictions

Rulings which last fall allowed last year's numeral winners to play in intramural touchball was voted out at the basketball managers meeting. Under the new ruling those men which earned a numeral in freshmen basketball last year will not be eligible for interfraternity participation this year. Also men who played with the varsity last year will not be allowed to enter the interfraternity sport whether they earned their letter or not.

This year another team will be added to the basketball league as the men's Co-op will enter a team in the schedule. Because they will not be here to complete the season the naval cadets will be unable to enter a team in the league.

Two games will be played each day beginning at four p.m. The usual plan of having the ball played at night is impossible this year because the varsity will be using the gym floor nights to practice.

The play will get underway next Tuesday when Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Phi Sigma Kappa line up against each other at 4 o'clock.

Push-Shot Artist

CHUCK BURGESS—FORWARD

After looping in 63 points for high scoring honors, "Chuck" Burgess, Grizzly hoop captain and hard-working forward, proved himself to be invaluable to the Grizzly squad as it emerged on top in the recent quadrangular tourney in which teams from Utah State, Idaho, Montana State, and Montana University participated.

Although the forward slot is new to Chuck, the one handed side-shot specialist from Dillon has had little difficulty in slipping around the opposing guards for his numerous two-pointers. Perhaps his fine co-ordination on the hardwood accounts for this.

But offense is not the only word in Chuck's vocabulary for the burly captain is "ready and rarin'" to mix it up with anyone under the basket as well as in midcourt. Thus, his guarding ability is another asset which may be added to the Grizzly account.

The '42-'43 season marks the third consecutive year that Chuck has worn a Grizzly uniform. He won his first letter in his sophomore year and last year started most of the Silvertip games at the guard post. He ranked near the top in the scoring column last season.

O' mighty mentor, Eddie Chinske,
Full six tilts your Grizzlie winski,
An ambidexterous man are you,
To guide both Spartan and Grizzly too,
With manner soft and sweet—beguiling,
Yet building champions all the whiling.
In serious vein and heart sincere,
We offer this toast to our man of the year.

The above sonnet, though not on a part with some poetry we have read, is an humble gesture on our part to thank Coach Chinske for his able assistance as basketball coach in our hour of need. It takes a lot of time Ed, and we are grateful to you.

Big Talk at Pacific Coast Conference

There was big talk at the recent meeting of the Pacific Coast Conference delegates of dividing the group into two separate units next year to make long trips by the member teams a thing of the past. If this idea were accepted, Washington U, Washington State, Oregon State, Oregon U, Montana and Idaho would be in one clique and the four California schools, UCLA, California, Stanford and Southern Cal would be in the other. The southern division would pad their schedules with such independent teams as St. Mary's Santa Clara and some service teams.

If once inaugurated, this system would be long lasting and would finally wind up with the adoption of St. Mary's and Santa Clara into the southern group as full-fledged members. Such action would be the answer to Montana's prayers in a financial way and would permanently solve the question of how to do away with the friction that exists between California and the other half of the conference even in peacetime. The northern and southern halves of the conference annually put on a squabble at their meetings that makes all the goings on in this country when Lincoln was president pale into insignificance.

Strictly From Hunger Department

From time to time—especially when there is a lull in activity on the athletic front—this column will devote space to certain bits of verse or prose which is deemed especially noteworthy. Qualifications for publication of the mentioned copy are simple. Sheer beauty of expression of the offering shall determine whether it shall receive the everlasting fame of being printed in this column. Our secretary, Miss Etain Shrdlu, submits this first gem. After reading it, it is easy to guess just what type of thing we are after for publishing.

Birds in their little nests agree,
That it is a shameful sight,
When children of one family,
Fall out, and hide, and fight.

For this poem, Miss Shrdlu receives the Foul Shot award of the week. The prize is an engraved card which entitles her to drink from any city water fountain all the water she wants absolutely free of charge. Address all contributions to this column and they will receive every consideration.
