Four Dreams of the Old House

Shane Seely

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.
Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss58/20

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
FOUR DREAMS OF THE OLD HOUSE

1
The cracked ground marks
where the sewer line has frozen and burst.
My father spends all night out there,
his pick axe ringing on the stones.
There is a horse, and she lives beneath the ground.
My Dad is slowly going blind. The ground breaks open and exhales spring.

2
I am telling secrets to a mouse.
I whisper down the basement stairs, murmur in the darkness of the cabinets where grains have spilled.
The mouse takes cereal the way my grandfather takes his daily bread, and then becomes my grandfather. I am telling secrets to my grandfather in the dark cupboards where the grains have spilled.

3
The house is a broken tooth and the barn twitches to burn.

4
We are there again together. Years are recovered like polished stones. The long night moon seeps between the branches of the willow tree.
The river is an old man with a whittling knife humming softly to himself as he notches the passing of time.